thing I will engage to do, notwithstanding there are a great many more Republicans here than Democrats. I will take my stand and let them form on me, and for every Republican on that side of the House that you will get to march up and take his stand beside me to go in that company I will furnish a Democrat from over here. [Applause.] And I tell you when they see us coming, and when they see the gentleman from Ohio heading this band of gallant Congressmen who helped to bring on this war, then the war will soon be over and we will not have much more use for cheese. [Laughter.]

That proposition is made in perfect good faith. I am ready to go, and I am ready to go from here; and, so far as I am concerned, I do not want any commission. I want to occupy the same high and distinguished position in the next war that I occupied in the last one, and I want to show "Old Glory" that I can do just as good fighting under her as I did when I fought against her as a private soldier. [Applause.]

Mr. BAIRD. Do you think the Spanish could stand cheese and Congressmen both?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not know how the Spanish are on cheese. I wanted to discuss this matter of patriotism. I was not much in favor of war. I was not so anxious for a fight. I was one of the people over here who thought that, with the idea of liberty that had been instilled into us from our earliest youth and of which we had talked so much and prized so highly, we had taught the Cubans to aspire to it and try for it—that in their attempts to throw off the yoke of a very bad Government and be free it was a shame that our Government should be spending millions in helping Spain and keeping people who wanted to help the struggling Cubans in their effort to obtain independence from doing so. [Applause.]

I wanted a long time ago to acknowledge their belligerency. I wanted to acknowledge their independence. I was not anxious for war, but if the war is properly conducted it may not be a bad thing to put a war in which we are all together between us and the terrible war in which we were against each other. But this war has been a godsend to the Republican party. It has let you out of the trouble you were in over the failure of the Dingley bill to produce sufficient revenue, and has made the people for the present forget many of your other shortcomings.

Mr. Speaker, I am a member of that great committee of this House that reports the bills that appropriates the money for the conduct of this war, and I appeal to the chairman to know if any Democrat on that committee has ever shown any disposition to withhold from this Administration anything that was asked for in aid of the successful prosecution of this war. [Applause.] Then when that committee has discharged its duty and its bills have been brought into the House, I say, for the members of the Democratic party, that if the Administration conducting this war had been their own, they could not have shown more disposition to intrust that Administration with unlimited sums of money to be expended in the discretion of the Administration than we have done here.

I do not want to criticise anybody now. There are many things being done that do not meet my approval, and I have felt like criticising them; but, just as I said a while ago, while we are doing up Spain let us not be trying to do up each other. I do not want to make any capital off of anybody, but I do appeal to this Administration, while we are exhibiting this confidence, while we are placing in its hands unlimited amounts of money—I do appeal to the Administration and appeal to the Committee on Military Affairs in charge of bills here affecting this war to see that our confidence is not abused; to see that all parts of this country have a fair showing; to see that nothing is done as a matter of favoritism, but that all that is done is done in the interest of the whole people of our common country.

If they will do that for us, I want to say to you, my friends, that as an American citizen no man on your side of the House will applaud President McKinley and his Administration more heartily than I when he conducts this war to a successful termination with just as little stealing as is absolutely necessary. [Laughter.] We expect some, of course. We do not expect to get through without some. What I want is, gentlemen, that it shall be done with absolutely as little as possible. I want the stealing and jobs kept out of it, if it can be done; we want to be loyal supporters of the Administration that does it. We may differ about methods of raising revenue to do it, but we will not differ about any method when it becomes necessary, and it is shown that that method is necessary to a successful prosecution of this war.

I have felt, Mr. Speaker, that it was not improper for some Democrat to say this much in behalf of our party. I am right with you, shoulder to shoulder, in this struggle. We may differ about whether cheese is necessary or not. That is a mere matter of detail. You know in these matters of detail the greatest latitude is permitted when you agree on the general proposition.

Now the question of cheese or no cheese, with that sort of bill of fare already in existence, is a mere matter of detail, and not a test of patriotism one way or the other. If it is necessary to the soldiers, give it to them. If it is necessary to raise the price of cheese and give a good market to the cheese interests, why, let us postpone taking care of the cheese makers until we take care of Spain and not mix it with war measures.

But I want to be understood about my proposition to make up this company of Congressmen to go to Cuba. I will tell you what is the truth. The American people would spare a company of Congressmen as readily as any company that has ever gone to the front. [Great laughter.] There has been some complaint that there was too much talking and not enough disposition to fight up here. Now, I say I do not doubt that the people will look with much complacency after the battle on the list of dead Congressmen, especially those who want our places.

But I make that proposition in good faith, and I will join a company of Congressmen. We will not ask any pay, we will not even ask cheese; we will just ask the Government to give us this ration, and will stand on our Congressional salaries. [Great laughter.] That is better than the other boys down there get. [Renewed laughter.] We will not ask any increase—just the Congressional salary. The Government gives us this ration, and we will go down there, and I tell you what is the fact—I know if they can get a full company of such men as I am, it will not take us long to bring this thing to a termination. [Great laughter.]

Just think about a company of such men as I am being led by the gentleman from Ohio, charging the enemy. Why, gentlemen, the flag would soon float over Morro Castle. I want to say one more word about that ration. I went into the Confederate army weighing about 100 pounds. I was a sickly boy. You never would have thought I would have come to be what I am if you had seen me then. [Great laughter.]

You never would have expected it. When I went into the army and got to eating rations from a commissary that was very poorly supplied, I fattened on it; I grew on it. With a very much inferior ration to this, I came out an able-bodied man without any necessity, even if I had been on the successful side, for a pension.

I want to test my patriotism by the side of some of you patriots, and I want to do it in the usual way, by fighting. I am not a great fighter. I have fought some. I never went in without fear; always scared; but still I went, feeling like the fellow that addressed the rabbit when he was running from the battlefield, when he said that if he did not have any more reputation at stake than the rabbit, he would have been going, too. [Laughter.]

I never got over this fear. After the war, for thirty years I used to be punished in my dreams by the Yankees being after me. I would see the bluecoats all around me and not much chance to get away. But now I see people who were with me then. I see Butler and Wheeler and Fitzhugh Lee and Oates and Rosser and a great many others who were there fighting the bluecoats and who are now wearing them. [Applause.]

I have not the same fear that one old Confederate expressed to a gentleman when writing a letter not long ago. He wrote to know if he was going to the war. The Confederate said no; he did not believe he would go. He had been thinking of it right smart, and he would not mind to go, but he did not believe he would go. He said he wouldn't mind to go, and he thought he could make it all right with the boys who were living, but the thing that troubled him was that if he were to wake up at the day of judgment with a blue uniform on, what the boys who were dead and didn't know anything about this war would say. [Laughter.] He said they would look up and see him with a blue uniform on, and they would say, "Deserted, damn him." [Laughter.]

Now, I am not afraid of that; I am not afraid of not being able to make it all right with the boys already dead; I am not afraid of the blue uniform; but I tell you what I want is to stop all this business about what political party is going to fight this war. I say that all the troops you want from Mississippi you are going to get, and you are going to get them just as good as ever shot a gun. [Applause.] And you are going to get them from every other State represented here by Democrats, Republicans, and Populists.

Now, let us make a little armistice here to-day, and let us clean up Spain, and then I will give you all you want of Democratic and Republican politics. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. GRIFFIN. How much time have I, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. Forty minutes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR].

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to break into the hilarity of this occasion by any serious discussion. If I had had my way in the drafting of this bill, I should not have forced an amendment or addition to the army rations, except as the elective choice of the soldier. I make that suggestion for what it is worth.

Mr. CHICKERING. I make the assertion that the soldiers in the field are the ones most interested in this bill, knowing as I do the value of this great food product in connection with army life.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes; I think they are suffering for it, crying for it; and I wanted to suggest to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] that he did not comprehend the full force and value of the suggestion about cheese when he was talking about the difficulty of transportation. If you have cheese on hand long enough, it might facilitate transportation. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not recognize the right or the propriety of any man to undertake to make a question on the floor of this House in regard to a political campaign speech. During the last thirty days there was more personal abuse of the President of the United States made by members of this House at four or five conventions that I can name, the proof of which I have, than was ever before poured out upon the head of any President of the United States in any war. I can bring at the proper time the statement of members of Congress charging the President with corruption in the execution of his office. I have not questioned the right of gentlemen to go on the stump and say what they please, and I do not recognize the right of any man to make it a question on this floor; but I do desire to intimate calmly to gentlemen that there is going to be a political campaign in this country shortly.

I have noticed that some gentlemen have been nominated as Democrats, others as Populists, others as Republicans; and I have not any doubt that some time during the early days of the fall there will be a political campaign opened in the United States of America, notwithstanding the patriotic speech of the gentleman from Mississippi. And if you could follow him when he leaves here, and, instead of going to Cuba, goes to Tupelo (if that is the name of the town), if you could hear the reception speech he will deliver there, I imagine you would find some politics in the atmosphere of Mississippi about that time. And I can tell gentlemen that there will be politics on both sides during the coming fall.

Now, I am not going to be drawn out of my intrenchments until my artillery is in place. Any time that the House will give me the opportunity, after to-morrow, I shall be ready to try to vindicate every word that I have been criticised for, in the spirit in which it was uttered, if not in the utmost detail.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I propose to close the exercises of the present occasion so far as I am concerned by pointing out that it is very strange that I should be singled out for criticism when I am not charged with saying one-half as bitter things as have been said by distinguished Democrats upon the same question right here in the city of Washington.

I hold in my hand an editorial published in a leading Democratic newspaper of the city of Washington, the Times, dated the 22d day of June. That was a remarkable day for men to speak out. That was the day of the Republican convention in Ohio; and while a Republican was saying a very few very modest and mild things, there was a Democrat in the city of Washington hurling bitter epithets upon the unprotected head of the Democratic party on this floor. I hold that article in my hand, and I am authorized to say that it was written by a Democratic Congressman now sitting on this floor.

A MEMBER (on the Democratic side). Give us his name.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Further than that—

Mr. COX. I insist on knowing who that man is.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It was not the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox]. [Laughter.] I clear him of any such charge. It is an editorial in a responsible newspaper. The owner of it, as I understand, is Mr. Stilson Hutchins, a leader of the Democratic party—

A MEMBER. Where?

Mr. GROSVENOR. To-day one of the strongest supporters of Mr. Bryan for the Presidency in the election of 1900.

Mr. SULZER. Let us hear what the article is. Read it.

Mr. COX. Not until the gentleman from Ohio states who wrote the article.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to know by what authority the gentleman from Tennessee demands the name of anybody from me?

Mr. COX. The gentleman has no right to accuse a Democrat of writing an offensive article without giving his name.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. The gentleman from Ohio should understand that in a matter of this kind his own reputation is at stake.

Mr. GROSVENOR. There is a gentleman sitting within four feet of me who heard a Democratic Congressman say to both of us that he was the author of this paper.

Several MEMBERS. Name him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will have the paper read at the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I object to that article being read unless the man's name is given.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I can have it read as part of my speech.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Mississippi rise?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is this article to be read by unanimous consent or is it to be read as a matter of right?

Mr. GROSVENOR. If there is any point about it, I will read the article myself. I am a pretty good reader.

Several MEMBERS (to Mr. GROSVENOR). Read it yourself.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Is the article to be read by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. If objection is made, the Clerk will not read.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I shall object unless the gentleman will give the name of the man who he says wrote the article.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will read it myself as part of my remarks. Mr. HANDY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The rule of this House in regard to debate being germane to the pending bill has at times been enforced pretty rigidly against myself.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman make the point that the article is not germane?

Mr. HANDY. Unless the gentleman from Ohio will furnish us the name—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman either makes the point or he does not. If he does, the Chair will have to rule upon it.

Mr. HANDY. I do not make any point upon the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio, then, will proceed.

Mr. GROSVENOR. "Wednesday, June 23," I read the following editorial cut from the paper at that time. This is headed "Democratic folly:"

We do not think it will profit the Democrats of the House to hold any more caucuses. It will be much better for the minority to go at once into voluntary liquidation and apply for a leader who has the ability to lead and whom they, with self-respect, can follow. Nothing short of a complete reorganization within the next thirty days will avert the popular wrath to come.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I point out—

Mr. BAILEY. I hope the gentleman from Ohio will read the entire article.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I am reading this article in my own time, and will take my own way to do so.

Mr. BAILEY. I make the point, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman has no right to select such parts of an editorial as he may choose and submit them to the House.

I want to say that, as this is an attack upon me, I want every word of it read, so that the House may understand the animus of it. I deny the right of the gentleman from Ohio to garble it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I hope this does not come out of my time.

Mr. BAILEY. The gentleman from Ohio can have all the time he wants.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have the right to read any part of this editorial, and comment upon it as I go along, just to suit my own convenience.

Mr. BAILEY. Only by permission of the House.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have not asked consent of the gentleman from Texas. He will observe that I am reading this in my own time and in my own way.

Mr. BAILEY. Then the gentleman should read the whole editorial.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I am not inclined to take my rule of action in reference to such matters from the gentleman from Texas. I want no favors from him, and I shall not submit to any effort on his part if he undertakes to strangle facts.

Mr. BAILEY. And I would not offer a favor to a man who was not decent enough to be at least civil in his treatment of other members.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Have I not been civil in all respects to the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BAILEY. You certainly have not been.

Mr. GROSVENOR. In what respect does the gentleman complain?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. By refusing to tell the whole truth.

Mr. BAILEY. Let us have the entire article.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It is my business, and I defy the gentleman from Texas to show wherein I have been lacking in proper courtesy to him or to other members on this floor.

Mr. BAILEY. I stated, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Ohio was reading this article by permission of the House. It was manifest, the Chair having intimated that it was ready to so hold, that it could not be read without the consent of the House, and the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY], at my request, withdrew the point of order to allow the reading.

Now, I insist, in view of that fact, the whole matter should be read as a matter of justice.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will read it in my own time and in my own way and comment as I proceed—

Mr. BAILEY. But the gentleman from Ohio knows that he could not have read this or any part of it if the objection had been insisted upon.

Now, I object to the reading of any part of this unless all is read.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I intend to read the whole of it.

Mr. BAILEY. If the gentleman had made that statement in the first instance, there would have been no complaint on my part.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Oh, well, Mr. Speaker, I am not a school-boy, to be called to order for my delinquencies by the gentleman from Texas or anybody else.

Mr. BAILEY. Perhaps it would be well for the gentleman from Ohio to go to school again and learn a good many things of which he seems to be ignorant at this time.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, I could not learn anything from the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BAILEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio be permitted to conclude his remarks.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will take my time from the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I yield five minutes' additional time to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, Mr. Speaker, I make the point that it is not in order for the gentleman from Ohio himself to read that article.

The SPEAKER. On what ground does the gentleman make the point?

Mr. BAILEY. On the ground that it is not germane to the debate.

The SPEAKER. That it is not germane to the subject before the House?

Mr. BAILEY. Yes.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman makes the point, the Chair has to sustain it.

Mr. BAILEY. I want to say another thing—

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I insist I have the floor, if the gentleman from Ohio has consumed his time. Now I would ask the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] if he will consume his seven minutes?

Mr. HANDY. What is the gentleman's question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Will the gentleman from Delaware consume his seven minutes?

Mr. HANDY. I shall desire to use the seven minutes. If he proposes to use all the time remaining to him in one block, of course I shall be forced to use my seven minutes now.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I do not know how I may use it or how it may be used.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, having used more of my time than the gentleman from Wisconsin has used of his—

Mr. PITNEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. One moment. The House must be in order, because gentlemen can not be heard. The gentleman from Delaware—

Mr. BAILEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I will relieve the whole situation. The Chair has decided that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] can not read that editorial if the point of order is made. I made the point of order to obtain the decision. I now withdraw it, and I am willing for the gentleman to read it, but it must be understood that he reads it by the permission of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I desire that it shall appear in the RECORD that the attempt that I made to discuss this question followed the use of an hour, or nearly an hour, on the other side, in which a very able political speech was made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. ALLEN], and that upon my attempt to answer the very criticism that he had made, immediately this point of order was put forward.

Mr. BAILEY. And withdrawn.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes, withdrawn. Now, what I was trying to say as a matter of comment was that it was peculiarly curious to me that a distinguished editor, on the very same day that the very mild remarks that I made were uttered, or rather on the day that they were published, should have written just what I am now going to read:

Since the outbreak of the Spanish war they have committed—

That is, the Democrats in the House—

about every error possible. Giving a grudging support to the various imperative measures which followed the original appropriation of $50,000,000 for the national defense, they lined themselves up almost solidly against the war revenue bill, and capped the climax last Wednesday by casting the bulk of their vote in opposition to the annexation of Hawaii, a consummation devoutly desired by a two-thirds majority in both Houses of Congress and four-fifths of the American people without regard to party.

The result is plain. What was intended to be, and what was originally, a purely American war has degenerated in the eyes of the country into a Republican war with all that that implies.

The Republican President stands before the world to-day as one pursuing a patriotic policy in the teeth of unreasoning Democratic opposition. When victory comes to him and Spain is humbled in the dust; when America's possessions are enriched by the addition of Hawaii, the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and perhaps the Canaries, Mr. McKinley can rise and truthfully say:

"This is my work—mine and the Republican party's. As we saved the Union in 1861, so now do we glorify it with victory. Ours the triumph, ours the spoils, including a majority in the new House of Representatives!"

And the people, on the 8th day of November, will cry "Amen."

In the same paper on this evening, under the head of "Party coffin makers," referring to the manufacture of political coffins going on on the other side, substantially the same language is used. I have not had time to read it and I do not propose to reproduce it now, but will reserve it for some future occasion. Now, that is all I was trying to do. I was trying to show that two minds, one a humble Republican mind and the other a great leading Democratic mind, happened on the same day to run along the same channel, the Republican mind running very quietly and without much demonstration, and the Democratic mind putting you in mind very much of an eruption of a volcanic formation.

Mr. BAILEY. Now, will the gentleman from Ohio give the name of the Democratic member of the House who wrote that editorial?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I can not do it, unless the gentleman will give his consent—and the gentleman from Texas knows it would be a breach of confidence if I did.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. May I ask the gentleman from Ohio a question?

Mr. GROSVENOR. One moment; I am responding to the gentleman from Texas. The editor of this paper doubtless knows whether my statement is correct.

A brother member of the House near me did hear the statement made. I am willing to give his name, but I am not willing to give the name of the member who claimed the authorship of this article. I can not give it honorably without his consent and will not give it under coercion.

Mr. BAILEY. I am inclined to think that the gentleman ought not to divulge the name without permission of the Democrat who is rushing to criticize his Democratic colleagues.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Anonymously.

Mr. GROSVENOR. This is an editorial article.

Mr. BAILEY. There have been many similar ones in this paper; but I did not suppose it had a Congressional editor.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The paper is better off than the gentleman from Texas understood.

Mr. BAILEY. Not with this kind of Congressional editor.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Will the gentleman from Delaware consume his seven minutes?

Mr. HANDY. I desire to yield to the gentleman from Virginia for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "corn," in line 6, insert "and weekly 2 ounces of smoking and 2 ounces of chewing tobacco."

Mr. OTEY. Mr. Speaker, am I recognized?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. OTEY. I do not care to say anything about the amendment, but there was so much disorder in the House at the time, I ask to have it read again.

The amendment was again reported.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. PITNEY. I move to strike out the word "tobacco" and insert the word "gum."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey moves to strike out the word "tobacco" and insert the word "gum." [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HANDY. I want to understand whether the "gum" is supposed to be both chewing gum and smoking gum?

Mr. PITNEY. Certainly; that is the common sense of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair can not state the effect of amendments.

Mr. HANDY. Is it in one or both places?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that it is in both.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. A parliamentary inquiry.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. OTEY. Division!

The House divided; and there were—ayes 29, noes 65.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. OTEY. Division!

The House divided; and there were—ayes 50, yeas 68.

Mr. OTEY. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The question was taken on ordering the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER (after counting). Twenty-eight gentlemen have arisen. Twenty-four is one-fifth of the last vote. Accordingly the yeas and nays are ordered.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I call for the other side.

Mr. STEELE. Pending that, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was put; and pending the announcement, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. SPARKMAN, for ten days, on account of important business.

To Mr. ERMENTROUT, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota, indefinitely, on account of important business.

The motion to adjourn was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4741) to authorize the construction of a bridge over Tombigbee River, in the State of Mississippi, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1633); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4710) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River, between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 29, 1898, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1634); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HULL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1635); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HILBORN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4808) authorizing the President to appoint additional cadets at large at the United States Naval Academy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1636); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 290) tendering the thanks of Congress to Assistant Naval Constructor Richmond Pearson Hobson and to the volunteer crew of the Merrimac, and authorizing the transfer of Assistant Naval Constructor Hobson from the Construction Corps to the line of the United States Navy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1637); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 274) for the improvement of the harbor at Racine, Wis., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1638); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 275) for improvement of the harbor at Kenosha, Wis., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1639); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MAHON, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3426) for the relief of Edward H. Murrell, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1631); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3171) to refer certain claims for Indian depredations to the Court of Claims, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1632); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4028) for the relief of Emogene C. Crawford—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (H. R. 10616) to place on the pension roll the name of E. Laurence Herriott—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 8697) granting a pension to William Conover—Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MORRIS: A bill (H. R. 10845) to authorize the improvement of the water power in the Mississippi River at Sauk Rapids, Minn.—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McDONALD: A bill (H. R. 10846) authorizing the President of the United States and the Secretary of War to accept and muster into the volunteer service the regiment of sons of Union and Confederate veterans known as the "William McKinley Regiment of Sons of Veterans"—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CATCHINGS: A bill (H. R. 10847) for the relief of Louis A. Yorke—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 10848) granting an increase of pension to O. C. Hill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10849) granting a pension to Anna Lenk—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LLOYD: A bill (H. R. 10850) granting a pension to Joseph Welsh—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MADDOX (by request): A bill (H. R. 10851) for the relief of George W. Demoney, of Floyd County, Ga.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request): A bill (H. R. 10852) for the relief of G. Moss, of Gordon County, Ga.—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MIERS of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 10853) granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Brown—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORRIS: A bill (H. R. 10854) to remove the charge of desertion against William Harrison—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PUGH: A bill (H. R. 10855) granting an increase of pension to Jane M. Jacobs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10856) granting a pension to Joseph H. Hamrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10857) granting a pension to Ella G. Hamrick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAY of New York: A bill (H. R. 10858) granting an increase of pension to Amanda Willmarth—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10859) granting an increase of pension to Philip Kresge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10860) granting a pension to Mianda A. Sanford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REEVES: A bill (H. R. 10861) for the relief of Visa C. Morrill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 10862) granting an increase of pension to Hollis O. Dudley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10863) granting a pension to Helen M. Putnam—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BARHAM: Affidavit to accompany House bill No. 8697, to grant a pension to William Conover, of Veterans Home, Napa County, Cal.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of J. B. Corey, of Allegheny County, Pa., in favor of the repeal of the salary act of 1873—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Resolutions of brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen, Railroad Trainmen, orders of Railway Conductors and Railway Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HURLEY: Resolutions of a union meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Firemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Railway Trainmen, and Telegraphers, held in Philadelphia, Pa., June 5, 1898, favoring the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the American Federation of Musicians, Cincinnati, Ohio, for legislation restraining the Marine Band from competing with musical organizations outside of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, indorsing the measure enacted to provide a liberal revenue to carry on the war—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Anti-British Alliance Association of New York, in opposition to a treaty of alliance with Great Britain—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MCLELLAN: Resolutions adopted by the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Firemen, and Trainmen, and Orders of Railway Conductors and Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. TODD: Memorial of the American Federation of Musicians, relative to the employment of the Marine Band outside of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. VEHSLE: Resolutions of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Order of Railway Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of the Irish National Club of New York City, Edward O'Flaherty, president, in opposition to the so-called "Anglo-Saxon alliance"—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolution of the American Federation of Musicians, protesting against the practice of allowing the United States Marine Band to compete with civilian musicians outside of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, resolution of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, pledging the loyalty and earnest assistance of its members to the Government in all proper ways to conduct the present war to a successful termination—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WARNER: Resolution adopted by the Illinois State Dairymen's Association, protesting against Government seed distribution—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of business men of the Thirteenth Congressional district of Illinois, protesting against the imposition of a duty of 25 cents per bunch on bananas—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of the Epworth League, Baptist Young People's Union, and Woman's Christian Temperance Union, all of Clinton, Ill., for the bill which forbids the sale of alcoholic liquors in Government buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petitions of the Christian Church, First Baptist Church, First Methodist Episcopal Church, and Woman's Christian Temperance Union, all of Urbana, Ill., and 77 citizens of Tuscola, Ill., in favor of legislation to protect State anti-cigarette laws by providing that cigarettes imported in original packages on entering any State shall become subject to its laws—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petitions of 5 citizens of Bloomington, 52 citizens of Tuscola, 40 citizens of Tolono, 15 citizens of Paxton, and 4 citizens of Farmer City, State of Illinois, favoring the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, June 30, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. JACOB VOORSANGER, D. D., of San Francisco, Cal., professor of Semitic languages and literature, University of California.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. DAVIS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. SPOONER presented sundry petitions of the Lemonnier Congregational Convention, of Wisconsin, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the interstate transmission of lottery messages and other gambling matter by telegraph, to protect the first day of the week in the District of Columbia, to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in all Government buildings, for the appointment of a commission to investigate the labor problem, to substitute voluntary arbitration for railway strikes, to prohibit the transmission by mail or interstate commerce of newspaper descriptions of prize fights, to prohibit the kinetoscope reproductions of pugilistic encounters in the District of Columbia and the Territories and the interstate transportation of materials for the same, and to raise the age of protection for girls to 18 years in the District of Columbia and the Territories; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LODGE presented the petition of August Bolten, residing temporarily in Sweden, praying that he be granted relief for injuries received whilst in prison in the Island of Cuba; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. TURPIE presented a petition of Local Union No. 23, American Federation of Labor, of Muncie, Ind., praying for the enactment of an eight-hour law; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of Department of Indiana, Grand Army of the Republic, praying for the purchase of ground at Vicksburg, Miss., for a military park; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the American Federation of Musicians, remonstrating against the practice of allowing the United States Marine Band to compete with civilian musicians outside the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

Mr. WILSON. I present a communication from the editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, in reply to the letter of Mr. Charles A. Towne, of March 17, 1898, relative to the currency question, published in Document 227. I move that the communication be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10550) to enable volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections, to report it without amendment.

I should like to put the bill on its passage now, if there be no objection, but I suppose it is quite likely that some members of the Senate may wish to examine it. I will give notice, therefore, that I shall take an early opportunity to call up the bill. It is a matter which, as the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations will see, will require to have some little time devoted to it, but it should be acted upon without delay.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. KYLE. I am directed by the Committee on Education and Labor, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7389) limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of, or work done for, the United States, or any Territory, or the District of Columbia, to report it with two or three amendments, but without recommendation as regards the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. SEWELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10424) to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department of the Army, reported it without amendment.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. FRYE. I ask that the action of the Senate by which the bill (H. R. 4629) for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles was referred to the Committee on Claims be reconsidered, and that the bill be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the change will be made.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Finance, reported the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, by subcommittee or otherwise, to make an investigation of internal-revenue and customs matters, and to report from time to time to the Senate the result thereof; and for this purpose they are authorized to sit, by subcommittee or otherwise, during the recess or sessions of the Senate, at such times and places as they may deem advisable, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer and such clerical and other assistance as may be necessary, the expense of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

PAY OF STENOGRAPHERS.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. KYLE on the 20th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the stenographer employed to report the hearing before the Committee on Education and Labor June 16, 1898, on the bill H. R. 7389, "An act limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of, or work done for, the United States, or any Territory, or the District of Columbia," be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. PETTIGREW on the 1st instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the stenographer employed by the Committee on Indian Affairs to report testimony in relation to the condition of Indian reservations in Oklahoma Territory, and other matters, be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. SHoup on the 6th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the stenographer employed by the Committee on Territories to report testimony in relation to the necessity of a better government for Alaska be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. SPOONER introduced a bill (S. 4829) granting an increase of pension to Robert Voigt; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 4830) for the relief of Alonzo E. Miltimore; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SEWELL introduced a bill (S. 4831) fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TURPIE (by request) submitted an amendment relative to the claim of Thomas M. Steep against the District of Columbia, amounting to $879.78, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY.

Mr. CARTER. My engagements for to-day are such that I can not well serve as one of the conferees upon the bill (S. 4809) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army. I therefore ask to be relieved.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to relieving the Senator from Montana from service upon the committee of conference on the Quartermaster's bill. The Chair hears no objection, and he is excused. The Chair will appoint in his stead the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL].

THE FREEDMEN'S HOSPITAL.

Mr. FAULKNER. I submit a formal resolution and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. It is very important that we should get the information in order to publish it with the next report of the Joint Select Committee on the Charities of the District of Columbia.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit to the Senate any information he may have in regard to the management of the Freedmen's Hospital, together with the rules and regulations governing the said institution, and any suggestions in regard to legislation for the more effective management of the hospital.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3277) to authorize the appointment of a military storekeeper in the Army.

The message also announced that the House had passed with amendments the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 6149) to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. 10051) to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 10693) directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer armies of the United States; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders.

The message also announced that the House further insists upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 13, 14, 186, 221, 222, and 233, to the bill (H. R. 8428) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CANNON, Mr. NORTHWAY, and Mr. SAYERS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 1035) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States;

A bill (S. 3144) for the relief of Finetta Nalle;

A bill (S. 4713) relative to the Corps of Engineers of the Army;

A bill (S. 4756) for the relief of Michael McNulty;

A bill (H. R. 369) for the relief of Benjamin S. Barnes;

A bill (H. R. 1004) for the relief of Theodore F. Swayze, administrator de bonis non of the estate of John S. P. Wheeler, deceased;

A bill (H. R. 3697) for the relief of Martha E. Fleschert;

A bill (H. R. 6897) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 10585) designating Titusville, Crawford County, Pa., a port of delivery in the customs collection district of Erie, Pa.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution 259.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, it is my purpose this morning to present to the Senate views I entertain in regard to the pending question. I think we have had no question before the Senate since I have had the honor of being a member of this body that approaches this one in far-reaching results. I think it is fraught with more evil to this country than any other measure we have had under discussion in the present Congress, and it is one in many respects entirely new. It is novel in the fact that we are discussing here in open session, under a resolution which comes from the House, that which, I think, properly belongs to an executive session of the Senate.

What is the present status of this question? There was a treaty presented involving precisely the same matter, in the last few years, by one President and withdrawn by another. Succeeding that, it was presented again, and we have it now as a treaty pending before the Senate, and the extraordinary fact presents itself that, while a treaty embracing the same identical matter is pending before the Senate, there is a resolution embodying the same parties, the same interests, the same principles of that treaty, now before the Senate for discussion.

A treaty, Mr. President, has more of dignity about it than an ordinary act of Congress. It is generally supposed to be of a more weighty character and to involve delicate international questions and relations. Hence it has a greater degree of dignity attached to it, and we proceed in the discussion of it ordinarily in executive session, with closed doors, because it involves the rights of two governments.

Yet at the present time we find the anomalous proceeding under resolutions that have been introduced in the popular branch of Congress and passed, and have, under rules governing the two Houses, been sent here for the consideration of the Senate, as I said, involving precisely the same questions that are in the treaty which is still pending.

I grant that there might be some show of excuse for this course provided the treaty had been disposed of and had been defeated here in the Senate, but while it is still pending I assert, without fear of contradiction, that it is an innovation upon all precedents known in the history of this country and its legislation that we should have a resolution from the House of Representatives before the Senate involving the precise question that is still pending in the nature of a treaty.

The Constitution recognizes in the Executive and the Senate the power to make treaties, and the House of Representatives has nothing to do with it. This Hawaiian treaty was sent to the Senate by the President, bringing to bear the powers of the Executive and the powers granted to the Senate to perfect it, and in order that action by this body might be had for or against it.

Not only has the treaty-making power been granted by the Constitution to the Executive and to the Senate, but additional guards have likewise been thrown around it. It has to be done in a solemn way, generally in executive or secret session. In addition thereto, so much dignity is attached to legislating upon a treaty that the Constitution throws around it the additional guard of saying that it shall be ratified by a two-thirds vote before it can be approved.

This treaty, then, has not received any two-thirds vote; and, sir, without being too critical, I find that those who are in favor of it do not desire to have a test upon that question even in executive session for fear that it would not pass with the necessary two-thirds vote. I believe it would not.

If the political machinery resorted to and set in motion at the other end of the Capitol for the purpose of overriding that opinion of the Senate, which is adverse to the approval of the treaty, and in seeking to override those constitutional measures which are given unto us in treaty relations, then I assert that this is a novel and unprecedented proceeding, and that we are now here seeking to legislate as in ordinary session on a subject which belongs properly to a secret session and requiring a two-thirds majority, and which belongs exclusively to the treaty-making power.

I wish to present to the Senate in connection with what I have just said some proof as to the precedents. I know it has been said here time and again in the discussion and in previous debate and in the newspapers of the country that the admission of Texas is the precedent upon which those who favor this resolution rely. I am quite content to state what I think is the correct history of it, and that instead of being favorable as a precedent it is decidedly the reverse, for there were certain guarantees thrown around it by the expressions of the President (Tyler) when he asked Congress for its action in regard to the admission of Texas that show it is not and was not intended as a precedent.

These resolutions are confessedly predicated on those which annexed Texas. But it is a well-accepted principle that "analogous facts" must sustain the application of a precedent. Between the annexation of Texas and the proposed annexation of Hawaii there are no analogous facts. Texas was contiguous territory, settled by Americans, with government and institutions almost identical with American States. There was not only the assent of the existing government, but the "consent of the governed," by a popular vote of 4,174 to 812. These facts brought the case of Texas clearly within section 3, Article IV, of the Federal Constitution, authorizing the admission of a State.

Notwithstanding the total absence of every analogous fact, the report of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate for the annexation of Hawaii refers to the joint resolution of March 1, 1845, for "annexing Texas to the United States," as "clearly establishing the precedent that Congress has the power to annex a foreign state to the territory of the United States, either by assenting to a treaty of annexation or by agreeing to articles of annexation or by act of Congress based upon the consent of such foreign government obtained in any authentic way."

That is a perversion of both the principle and the language of the fundamental principle of the American Government, which requires the consent of the governed, and not the "consent of the Government," and which emphasizes the wide difference between action by the people and trading with an oligarchy. In this case of Hawaii there is not a pretense that the consent of the governed has been given to this annexation. Every existing precedent in our history by which territory has been obtained establishes the fact that the treaty-making power—the President and the Senate—is the only constitutional mode of acquiring foreign territory.

Louisiana was purchased by treaty with France April 30, 1803.

Florida by treaty with Spain February 22, 1819.

New Mexico by treaty with Mexico February 2, 1848.

Alaska by treaty with Russia March 30, 1867.

Arizona had its boundaries extended by the Gadsden treaty with Mexico December 3, 1853—June 30, 1854.

The unsuccessful treaty with Santo Domingo, 1869-70, contained a clause requiring the consent of the governed, which was given with almost unanimity, the vote being 1,006 for to 9 against; and yet that treaty for obtaining foreign territory and people was unsuccessful.

When, in 1867, the United States attempted to obtain St. Thomas and St. John from Denmark it was by treaty which contained the condition precedent of the assent of the governed.

All these well-established examples of obtaining foreign territory by treaty, two of which embodied the great principle of the consent of the governed, barred the way of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and it was compelled to fall back on the Texas example, admitting a State, not acquiring mere territory, which has no application in either principle or practice to the case of Hawaii, which comes to the Senate destitute of all those indicia of popular government upon which our whole system rests.

It is a fact that while the title of the Texas resolutions reads, "Joint resolutions for annexing Texas to the United States," the word "annex" or "annexing" does not appear in the resolutions from first to last. But instead thereof the resolutions read, "may be erected into a State," "admitted as one of the States of this Union," always recognizing the admission of a State and not the acquisition of territory. The proper title to the Texas resolutions is shown by the Congressional Globe to have been, "Joint resolutions declaring the terms on which Congress will admit Texas into the Union as a State." That is certainly no precedent for acquiring Hawaii as a Territory, and which no Senator at present contemplates ever becoming a State.

By passing these resolutions Congress is not only disregarding all the precedents in our history for the acquisition of territory, but it is violating the great underlying principle of our system of government, and ratifying and confirming the robbery of a whole people of every right and privilege, of their country, their government, and their happiness.

By the passing of these resolutions the Monroe doctrine passes out of existence, the United States departs from its position as an American state, guarding every other American state from the aggressive policy of any European power, and assumes the rôle of an Asiatic power, with a "sphere of influence," zone of tariff, and a voice in the partitioning of China. These must follow the establishment of our Pacific outpost, naval and military, in Hawaii.

Then we must assert our power and influence in the middle of the Pacific, and take a step in a direction which no Senator can point out or fix its limit; a "leap into the angry flood" with which Europe threatens China; the beginning of a new departure; the initiation of a policy unknown to all our previous history, inconsistent with all the precepts of the fathers, and totally at variance with all that has "made and preserved us a nation." Such departure from principle finds no warrant in the annexation of Texas, and no justification in any present emergency, but is an outrage alike on the American and Hawaiian people for which there is neither reason nor excuse in any existing condition of public affairs.

In point of fact, what did President Tyler say and do touching the admission of Texas into this Union that will authorize the advocates of this bill to claim it as a precedent for these resolutions seeking the annexing of the Hawaiian Government to this country?

John Tyler in 1844 was in the Executive chair of the United States. The reasons for the annexation of Texas are set forth in the message of President Tyler, dated June 16, 1844 (see Congressional Globe, first session Twenty-eighth Congress, at page 709, June 11, first column). What does he say?

A republic coterminous in territory with our own, of immense resources, which require only to be brought under the influence of our confederate and free system in order to be fully developed, etc.

A territory settled mostly by emigrants from the United States, who will bring back with them, in the act of reciprocation, an unconquerable love of freedom and an ardent attachment to our free institutions.

Mr. President, it was the rejection of the treaty of annexation of Texas that induced President Tyler to invoke the "power of Congress" as "fully competent in some form of proceeding to accomplish everything that a formal ratification of the treaty could have accomplished."

But "while the treaty was pending before the Senate," he said, "I did not consider it compatible with the just rights of that body, or consistent with the respect entertained for it, to bring this important subject before you"—the House of Representatives.

By way of emphasis, as this treaty is still pending before this Senate, I repeat that, coming from the President of the United States, in regard to the only precedent that it is alleged has occurred touching this matter—

While the treaty was pending before the Senate I did not consider it compatible with the just rights of that body or consistent with the respect entertained for it to bring this important subject before you (the House of Representatives).

Here is the reason given, even then, after the treaty had been defeated:

It was because—

Instructions have already been given by the Texas Government to propose to the Government of Great Britain forthwith on the failure (of the treaty) to enter into a treaty of commerce, and an alliance, offensive and defensive.

That was the reason which caused him to present the resolution for the action of Congress after the treaty had been defeated.

Mr. Calhoun, Secretary of State, in a letter to Mr. Benjamin E. Green, minister to Mexico (Congressional Globe, first session Twenty-eighth Congress, Appendix, page 482), directs Mr. Green to say to Mexico that the step (treaty of annexation) was forced on the Government of the United States in self-defense in consequence of the policy adopted by Great Britain in reference to the abolition of slavery in Texas, etc.

Mr. Jefferson, in communicating to Congress the purchase of Louisiana, emphatically said:

The Constitution has made no provision for our holding foreign territory, still less for incorporating foreign nations in our Union. (See Senate Document, Twenty-eighth Congress, second session; quoted in report of Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs by Mr. Archer, of Texas, at page 4 of that report.)

Mr. Tyler, who was then President of the United States, did not approve of the taking of any action; neither did he think any action under a resolution of Congress was authorized until they had disposed of the treaty that was pending. There was a treaty pending then to admit Texas, and while it was pending he declined to send any resolution asking any other character of legislation leading to the admission of Texas. But after the treaty was defeated he asked Congress to act; and, mark you, it is history that the treaty was defeated by only two votes.

Why was there great necessity for the admission of Texas or the denial of it? England was standing ready to enter into commercial relations with Texas, and with a clause in that proposition that there should be freedom of the slaves it was brought home to all our Southern people. That was the cause of the immediate action and almost forcing the resolution in regard to the admission of Texas. And that is now called a precedent for the Congress of the United States while the treaty is pending in the Senate.

Now, Mr. President, in regard to the condition of things in Texas at that time, allow me to say it was different from what is presented in the proposition for the admission of Hawaii. Texas was built up of our kindred; she had then an organized government; she had her president and her cabinet and all the authorities and all the paraphernalia of a state and a government. She made application unto us to be annexed under certain conditions. She had a right to speak for herself. She had no doubtful government as the one we are now dealing with; for Hawaii, to say the least of it, is a doubtful government; and it is very questionable whether the Government of the United States ought to or can legally deal with a government which has a doubtful attitude among the nations of the earth, a government usurped by an oligarchy and formed and framed in the manner in which it has been done.

I think that I am borne out in the statement that there is not a single instance in all the history of this Government, in every treaty it has had, even with the Indian tribes, if you please, where there has been any doubtful authority to negotiate with. This Government has never negotiated with doubtful authority; and here, certainly, the Hawaiian is doubtful authority. I say we should not entertain a proposition from such a source.

But the case of Texas was different. She was blood of our blood. She was our kith and kin. Her population had emigrated from our part of the country, and had settled there for the purpose of establishing a government, and they did it. When the vote was cast in Texas there were some 8,000 in favor of annexation against 349 in opposition to it. That is another link as we go along showing the difference between the two cases. We propose to take in Hawaii without giving an opportunity even for them to have a say so, or to have a vote cast there so as to show whether they desire annexation or not. The case of Texas was entirely different. Everything which we may call a precedent is antagonistic to the conditions which exist in regard to Hawaii. The people of Texas were, as I said, our blood and our kin, and when they came into this country it was like taking our own people back. They held the same relations to us, so far as form of government and social condition were concerned, as did our own States.

All we had to do was to extend our arms and take them within our embrace, for they were our brothers. That was the situation in Texas.

Further, the men who fought for Texas, who gained her liberty, were men from our country. My own State had the honor of giving birth to and having as her governor the leader of the party in Texas that established her organization and framed their government. That man was Sam Houston. He was at the head of the Texas government. Furthermore, Mr. President, when they fought the battle of San Jacinto and won their liberty, the battle cry was, "Remember the Alamo!" And why remember the Alamo? It was the fatal place where the Mexicans had massacred the citizens of this country, among them that noted Tennessean, Davy Crockett, who had been a member of the United States Congress from Tennessee, and Travis and Bowie and their few but brave associates were all citizens of this country. The blood of our citizens had freely flowed for the freedom of Texas, as the genius of our sons had framed her constitution and laws after the form of our own. They were our kindred and neighbors; they were 2,000 miles away in the Pacific Ocean, strangers to us and of a different race of people.

The people of Hawaii are tied to us in no way. We have had friendly relations for years with the islands, it is true. I believe after Captain Cook discovered the islands, before our Revolutionary war, and from the existence of our Government, our relations have been generally of the kindest character with that Government. It has all the while been a small and feeble Government, always dependent, and could not assert its rights against any of the great powers of the world; but being our neighbor in one sense, although it was 2,000 miles in the open sea away from us, and with no connection or kindred whatever, with no similar laws existing between us—it being a feeble little kingdom—the Government of the United States has had friendly relations with it from the outset to the present. It seemed to have gotten on in its own quiet and modest way with some success as a little kingdom.

We find, Mr. President, during all that time no great character has risen in those islands to mold and govern her people. No grand character as a leader and no marked characteristics have been developed, as in other countries. Indeed, I might say that perhaps this would have been expected if we were to look at natural causes and study ethnological philosophy. It has been stated that no great characters possessing those high traits which govern races of men who have made their mark in the world has ever yet been produced in the Tropics. No one has come, as a fact of history, from the equatorial regions who has developed into a great man. There is one exception, I believe, that all history writes down, and that is Simon Bolivar, who lived near the equator in South America. He is the only man from the equator in modern times known to history who has sprung up and developed a great manhood and a great character and wielded an influence over the populace around him. There are none others that I know of.

Therefore, living as the Hawaiians do, where the climate is soft and gentle and where every influence invites lassitude and inertia, there is no development of mind or body as compared to ours. But, Mr. President, they were a gentle, docile race of people, hospitable and kind. These traits of character were shown when the navigator, Cook, first went among them, even in their barbarous condition. Although they were almost semi-cannibals, they showed these peculiarly docile and submissive traits of character. Cook afterwards died at the hands of one of them, it is true, yet it was his own fault; and they made a divine of him and almost worshiped his memory.

Then, Mr. President, they went on, as I said, in these kindly relations existing between our Government and that Kingdom, and in 1820 a new day dawned upon them when some of the best of the people in the Eastern part of this country immigrated there for the purpose not of developing the race of people so much as to bring about their religious conversion. They were given somewhat to idolatry. They were very pliable. They yielded at once to the influence of the missionaries, and the result was that they cast aside their idols and became a Christian people. Since that time they have been a Christian people, and so recognized in the Christian world.

The people who went there settled among them and became a part of that government, and some of them have been instruments, I am sorry to say, in the establishment of the present political condition and participants in the fraud that has been practiced upon the Hawaiian people. Mr. Dole himself, the now President of that so-called Republic, was a descendant of those who went there to Christianize those people. His ancestors had much to do with it, and he himself was educated and raised among them, and, indeed, it is said that their quondam Queen, Liliuokalani, and Dole were classmates and friends and grew up together under the same influences.

But recently a different order of things was brought about. How did this change occur? There had been some troubles theretofore, but very few and not serious. It is not necessary to go into minutia and detail those facts, but there were some political troubles, some little debt troubles also with other governments. Great Britain perhaps on one occasion put her red cross on shore there and collected at the customs some of the indebtedness due her citizen, and France, too, with her tricolor, also did the same thing, and I believe the United States Government once planted her colors there for a day or half a day to take care of the interest of some citizens of our country. They had no power to resist. They had no disposition to resist if they had had the power, for they are, as I have said, a docile, unresistive race. They were relying to some extent upon us. The United States, although distant from them more than 2,000 miles, yet really in point of fact are their nearest neighbors, and they looked upon us and regarded us as a kind of patron in a political sense of that little Kingdom.

In the meantime that island, which is semitropical, with its genial climate, its flowers, its fruit, and its fertile soil, with agricultural productions, became attractive, and it drew to it the efforts of enterprising men, who made investments, especially in sugar plantations and tropical fruit orchards, etc. Greed went along with it and the disposition to govern. Those men found what it was to their interest to do. It was all well and good when everything went quietly along; but whenever the existing order came in contact with their interests, then came the desire for change; and the political movements upon the board show that there was a master hand behind what was then and there done, and it was done secretly and privately. No other so-called revolution in any country has ever been known which was so subtle and accomplished without a drop of blood within two or three hours, and with so few men, only thirteen, in the conclave.

It was in Honolulu, in the back room of the office of William O. Smith, where it is said the thirteen met and where that junta had their conferences and where they hatched their schemes and plans. Like the witches' dance upon the heath, where around the cauldron they threw their element of discord. They then carried their policy further. They went on to lay a scheme for the purpose of having a semblance of a revolution in order to make sure of it. As was emphasized and exposed yesterday evening by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY], they proceeded to "make sure of their game." They were determined to have an interview with United States Minister Stevens or with the captain of the vessel, the Boston, which was there at that time, and to have the flag of the United States planted upon their soil. In order to accomplish that they had their private interviews and brought it about. The troops were landed. Allow me in brief, but with some particularity, to give the history of that affair as I see it from reading the official reports given by those who were sent there to ascertain the truth of the causes and manner of bringing about the so-called revolution.

The overthrow of the monarchy of Hawaii was the result of a conspiracy between the United States minister, John L. Stevens, and certain persons holding large sugar interests in Hawaii, who were desirous of securing the bounty paid on American-grown sugar, the benefits they had enjoyed under the treaty of reciprocity with the United States having been lost by reason of the McKinley tariff, which made sugar free of duty. Annexation of Hawaii to the United States was the means to the end to secure the sugar bounty. The complicity of the United States minister is made apparent by his correspondence with the State Department in Washington in 1892. One letter in particular asks instructions to shape his course in case a certain condition of affairs should arise in Hawaii, the conditions stated in this letter being almost a programme of the transactions leading up to the revolution of January 17, 1893.

On the 15th of January, 1893, J. O. Carter was called to meet the minister of Queen Liliuokalani to consider the request of the so-called committee of safety—established by whom or for what purpose nobody knows—appointed by the conspirators, for the landing of the forces from the United States ship of war Boston for the protection of life and property in Honolulu. Mr. Carter states that several other persons had been invited to the conference with the Queen's ministers, among whom was the Hon. Samuel M. Damon, who was later on the vice-president of the provisional government. The attorney-general of the Queen's government briefly stated the request for the landing of the United States forces, and asked the gentlemen present to state their views as to the landing of the forces. The attorney-general was asked whether the police force under his control was insufficient to preserve order, and replied that the police force was sufficient.

Mr. Damon, who was aware of the purpose of the committee of safety, said to the ministers of the Queen and the gentlemen present that the forces from the Boston would be landed whether the Government asked for them or not. That man is the present vice-president. The attorney-general was advised that it was not desirable to ask for the landing of the United States forces, upon which Mr. Damon again said that the forces would be landed in any event. The gentlemen present concurred in the opinion that the landing of the forces without the invitation of the Queen's Government would lead to grave complications. The Government decided not to invite the landing of the forces and sent a strong protest to the United States legation when the forces were landed.

On the 16th of January, the day following the above proceedings, the forces of the United States were landed, in full battle array, and marched up the street between the palace and the Government building, finally occupying premises within pistol range of the Government building and short musket range of the palace, the town being quiet and orderly at the time of the landing.

On the 17th of January, the day after the landing of the United States forces, the conspirators occupied in small force, unresisted, the Government building, and were soon after recognized as the provisional government of Hawaii by the United States minister. The forces of the Queen's Government, the police station, and the military barracks had not been surrendered at the time of said recognition.

Mr. Carter states that on the 17th of January, after the recognition of the provisional government by the United States minister and before the surrender of the station house and barracks, he was sent for to meet the provisional government, and was by its leaders requested to accompany the Hon. S. M. Damon to the palace, who was authorized to inform the Queen that she had been deposed and to invite any protest she might be pleased to make against such action. Mr. Damon, in the presence of the Queen's ministers and members of the privy council of state, informed the Queen that she had been deposed and suggested to her that her protest would be received by him and handed to the provisional government; that the action taken by the said government and her protest would be subject to review by the Government of the United States. The Queen was inclined to resist, as her forces were in possession of the police station and barracks and under arms awaiting orders.

The gentlemen in waiting upon the Queen advised her, on the strength of Mr. Damon's assurances that the action of the provisional government would be subject to review by the United States authorities, to surrender and await the action of the United States Government. The gentlemen said to the Queen that the United States Government might be depended upon to disavow the action of the United States minister and of Captain Wiltse in landing an armed force from the U. S. S. Boston. The Queen, after some hesitation, informed Mr. Damon that she would sign a protest and await the decision of the United States Government.

Now I desire to read the protest presented and signed there under the idea and with the belief, as the Queen had been made to believe, that the United States Government would review this action and would see that justice was done to her. She had a right to expect it and did expect it, and with that idea she signed the protest. That protest reads as follows:

I, Liliuokalani, by the grace of God and under the constitution of the Hawaiian Kingdom Queen, do hereby solemnly protest against any and all acts against myself and the constitutional Government of the Hawaiian Kingdom by certain persons claiming to have established a provisional government of and for this Kingdom. That I yield to the superior force of the United States of America, whose minister plenipotentiary, His Excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the said provisional government. Now, to avoid any collision of armed forces and perhaps the loss of life, I do, under this protest, and impelled by said force, yield my authority until such time as the Government of the United States shall, upon the facts being presented to it, undo the action of its representative and reinstate me in authority, which I claim as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.

That is the protest which arose out of this council of the ministers, her ministers and those of the newly established government. This protest was signed by the Queen and countersigned by the ministers. Mr. Damon accepted this protest and carried it to Mr. Dole, who read and indorsed the receipt and accepted the conditions of the protest.

Under this statement of facts how can the United States Government in good conscience accept the tender by Mr. Dole and his so-called Republic of the Hawaiian Islands for annexation?

I will ask the Secretary to read the parts I have marked on pages 1048 and 1049 of the volume which I send to the desk, and also on pages 1271 and 1395.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested. The Secretary read as follows:

No. 13.—Mr. Foster to Mr. Stevens.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, February 11, 1893.

SIR: Your cipher telegram, dated the 1st instant and transmitted through the Navy Department's good offices, was received here at 4.30 p. m. on the 9th instant.

You therein make the following important statement:

"To-day, at 9 a. m., in accordance with the request of the provisional government of Hawaii, I have placed government of Hawaii under the United States protection during negotiations, not interfering with the execution of public affairs."

The precise character and scope of the act thus announced by you do not appear from this brief recital. The press, however, prints full details of the occurrences of the 1st instant, as telegraphed from San Francisco on the arrival of the mail steamer Australia at that port on the morning of the 9th, and I therein find what purports, with appearance of general correctness, to be the text of a proclamation issued by you on the 1st instant, which reads as follows:

"By authority to the Hawaiian people:

"At the request of the provisional government of the Hawaiian Islands, I hereby, in the name of the United States of America, assume protection of the Hawaiian Islands for the protection of life and property, and occupation of the public buildings and Hawaiian soil, so far as may be necessary for the purposes specified, but not interfering with the administration of public affairs by the provisional government. This action is taken pending and subject to negotiations at Washington.

"JOHN L. STEVENS,

"Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States.

"UNITED STATES LEGATION, February 1, 1893.

"Approved and executed by C. C. Wiltse, captain, United States Navy, commanding U. S. S. Boston."

The manner and degree of the execution of your proclamation by the naval forces are not related with particularity in a brief telegraphic report just received from Captain Wiltse. He merely says:

"To-day at 9 a. m., in accordance with request of provisional government of Hawaii, the United States minister plenipotentiary placed the government of Hawaii under United States protection, during negotiations, not interfering with the execution of public affairs."

It appears from the press reports that the ceremonial for the execution of your orders consisted in the landing of a battalion from the Boston, its formation at the Government building in concert with three volunteer companies of the provisional government, the reading of your proclamation by Lieutenant Rush, and the hoisting of the United States flag over the Government building. The Hawaiian flag on other public buildings in Honolulu is stated not to have been disturbed.

The phraseology of your proclamation in announcing your action in assumption of protection of the Hawaiian Islands in the name of the United States would appear to be tantamount to the assumption of a protectorate over those islands in behalf of the United States, with all the rights and obligations which the term implies. To this extent it goes beyond the necessities of the situation and the instructions heretofore given you.

Your existing instructions, and those under which the commanders of naval vessels of the United States acted, were and are ample to provide all legitimate material protection in case of need, either in your discretion or at the request of the duly constituted authorities of the Hawaiian Islands, for the lives and property of American citizens endangered or menaced, or for the prevention of lawless and tumultuous acts of disturbance of the public peace and safety. The accordance of such measures of protection or the unsolicited taking of the needful precautions to those ends is, however, not to be confounded with the establishment of a protectorate, which is in fact the positive erection of a paramount authority over or in place of the duly constituted local government, and the assumption, by the protector, of the especial responsibilities attached to such formal protection.

It is not thought probable that the provisional government of the Hawaiian Islands, in soliciting protection, contemplated more than the cooperation of the moral and material forces of the United States to strengthen its own authority and power as a recognized sovereign government for the protection of life and property, as stated in your proclamation. Such a decree of protection you were, as I have said, already fully competent to accord, or to exercise in your discretion, in case of need.

Your proclamation expresses no reservation as to confirmation of your action by the Government of the United States. Its provisions are that the assumed function of protection is to be exercised so far as may be necessary for the specified purpose of protecting life and property, without interference with the administration of public affairs by the provisional government, and that the action in question "is taken pending and subject to negotiations at Washington." These qualifications are entirely in the line of my views of the scope and intent of the request made to you by the provisional government of the Hawaiian Islands. The omission of reference to the necessary sanction of the Government of the United States is immaterial, for its function of revision and confirmation or disavowal of the acts of its agents is inherent and exercisable at its discretion.

So far, therefore, as your action amounts to according, at the request of the de facto sovereign Government of the Hawaiian Islands, the cooperation of the moral and material forces of the United States for the protection of life and property from apprehended disorders, your action is commended. But so far as it may appear to overstep that limit by setting the authority and power of the United States above that of the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, in the capacity of protector, or to impair in any way the independent sovereignty of the Hawaiian Government by substituting the flag and power of the United States as the symbol and manifestation of paramount authority, it is disavowed.

Instructions will be sent to the commanding officers of the United States naval forces in the Hawaiian Islands confirming and renewing the instructions heretofore given them under which they are authorized and directed to cooperate with you for the preservation of American life and property and the maintenance of good order in case of need. Your own instructions in the same sense are continued.

You are accordingly authorized, upon the receipt of these instructions, to arrange with the commanding naval officer for the continued presence on shore of such marine force as may be practicable and requisite for the security of the lives and property interests of citizens of the United States, and the repression of lawlessness and public disturbance threatening them, whenever in your judgment it shall be necessary so to do, or when such cooperative measures may be sought for good cause by the Government of the Hawaiian Islands; being, however, always careful to make due discrimination between those functions of voluntary or accorded protection and the assumption of a protectorate over the Hawaiian Islands by the United States.

No step should be taken by you or will be sanctioned by this Government which might tend to derogate in any way from the independence of the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, which the United States have recognized as sovereign and with which they treat on terms of sovereign equality.

A telegraphic instruction briefly outlining the substance of this dispatch will be sent to you by way of San Francisco by the mail steamer sailing from that port on the 15th instant.

I am, sir, etc.,

JOHN W. FOSTER.

The provisional government was not established by the Hawaiian people, or with their consent or acquiescence, nor has it since existed with their consent. The Queen refused to surrender her powers to the provisional government until convinced that the minister of the United States had recognized it as the de facto authority and would support and defend it with the military force of the United States, and that resistance would precipitate a bloody conflict with that force. She was advised and assured by her ministers and by leaders of the movement for the overthrow of her government, that if she surrendered under protest her case would afterwards be fairly considered by the President of the United States. The Queen finally wisely yielded to the armed forces of the United States then quartered in Honolulu, relying upon the good faith and honor of the President, when informed of what had occurred, to undo the action of the minister and reinstate her and the authority which she claimed as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.

After a patient examination of Mr. Blount's reports the President is satisfied that the movement against the Queen, if not instigated, was encouraged and supported by the representative of this Government at Honolulu; that he promised in advance to aid her enemies in an effort to overthrow the Hawaiian Government and set up by force a new government in its place; and that he kept this promise by causing a detachment of troops to be landed from the Boston on the 10th of January, and by recognizing the provisional government the next day, when it was too feeble to defend itself and the constitutional government was able to successfully maintain its authority against any threatening force other than that of the United States already landed.

The President has therefore determined that he will not send back to the Senate for its action thereon the treaty which he withdrew from that body for further consideration on the 9th day of March last.

The request was made, too, by men avowedly intending to overthrow the existing government and substitute a provisional government therefor, and who, with such purpose in progress of being effected, could not proceed therewith, but fearing arrest and imprisonment and without any thought of abandoning that purpose, sought the aid of the American troops in this situation to prevent any harm to their persons and property. To consent to an application for such a purpose without any suggestion dissuading the applicants from it on the part of the American minister, with naval forces under his command, could not otherwise be construed than as complicity with their plans.

The committee, to use their own language, say: "We are unable to protect ourselves without aid, and, therefore, pray for the protection of the United States forces."

In less than thirty hours the petitioners have overturned the throne, established a new government, and obtained the recognition of foreign powers.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, the extracts which have been read are in corroboration of the point I have heretofore stated in regard to the manner of producing the so-called revolution in Hawaii, which resulted in the establishment of a government de facto, and which still, under that régime, holds its first strength, and which has been held, it seems, against the popular will. It is a fraud which has been practiced, a scheme resorted to by the men interested in the planting of sugar in those islands who would be benefited by the payment of a bounty if Hawaii became a part of the Government of the United States, as a bounty of 2 cents a pound was then being given on sugar grown in the United States. Their sugar would then be allowed to come in free and they would be the recipients of bounties such as the sugar planters at that time were getting in this country. So it is seen that greed was at the bottom of it.

The Hawaiians are a docile, unsuspecting, and honest race of people, and they were imposed upon by these political schemers. It is regrettable to say that some of those who are the posterity of the men who went there in 1820 for the purpose of showing to the natives the cross of Christ and teaching them religious duties participated in this scheme, although there were not many of them who did so.

Mr. President, that was a crime of which our country and all civilized countries ought to be ashamed. I do not want to see our country partake of the fruits of that crime; and if this question were thoroughly understood, I do not believe they would.

The history of the crime against the principle of American government—the consent of the governed—as well as against the sovereignty, the freedom, and the welfare of a people particularly friendly to and confiding in the Government of the United States, has been officially written, printed, and proclaimed by the Executive and Senate of the United States in the Executive Document No. 45, Fifty-second Congress, second session. It is now a part of the history of this country, and it is a record at which every friend of government by consent of the governed must blush with shame.

These resolutions are the consummation of that crime. Its publication in that executive document arrested this consummation during one Administration, but now that lapse of time has somewhat softened public indignation this scheme of annexation, with its initiation and conception in the crime of the provisional government, has been revived. But the Senate would not ratify the crime by ratifying the treaty. Two-thirds of this Senate could not be induced to connect the treaty-making power of the Senate with the usurpation of the provisional government in Hawaii, but that which two-thirds would not do a majority in an indirect way, disregarding the pending treaty, is expected to consummate. This joint-resolution plan of annexation is not in harmony with the so-called precedent in the case of Texas. In that case the treaty of annexation was submitted to and rejected by the Senate before the joint resolution was offered in the House.

But now, while the treaty is pending and unacted upon, the subject-matter is wrested from the treaty-making power of the Constitution and by the legerdemain of a parliamentary device, and under the hue and cry of war, of conquest, of military and naval exigency, all the consequences of this unwise action are to be entailed upon the country. I do not assert that this joint-resolution plan in itself is unconstitutional, but the coupling of an appropriation of money—in this instance $4,000,000—with this scheme of annexation, in order to bring the whole subject within the power of the House of Representatives, is irregular, but in harmony with the many other irregularities and worse that have marked this whole scheme of annexation.

Political partisanship has endeavored to decry and minimize the force of the report of Commissioner Blount, but the fact remains that since the printing and publishing of that report this Senate has not ratified and will not ratify the treaty of annexation; and that is the vindication of Commissioner Blount. Notwithstanding his unmerciful exposure of this crime against all government, this piracy of rights, privileges, peoples, and government, this annexation is to be justified only because of the war with Spain and its expected results.

Mr. President, we have what is known as a representative government, and we are the only power known in the civilized world where there is a truly representative government. Ours is a representative government, and springs from that fountain of intelligence and patriotism which thus far has buoyed up our ship of state until it has moved on successfully for more than a hundred years. I say our Government springs from the people, and unless the people are virtuous, intelligent, and patriotic, then, sir, our Government will be in a bad way. But, fortunately for us, thus far at least the virtue, the patriotism, the intelligence, and the vigilance of the American people have kept the ship of state on her pathway in a glorious career; but whenever we depart from that principle of representative government, whenever we say that we are not legislating for the good of the governed, whenever we put satraps at the head of our institutions or organizations in the distance, when colonization is entered upon as a part of the theory of this Government, then I say woe unto our ship of state, for she will go down in a political maelstrom.

Sir, how would we govern those islands if they were attached to this country under these resolutions? Would it be done by having representatives to come from that country to ours? Would we see the dusky man from Hawaii in this Senate as a representative of a State? It must be remembered that when Hawaii is once admitted to this country it would be under a Territorial form of government in some shape; but it would soon come into the Union in the form of a State, and would be entitled under our Constitution and laws to that representation which belongs to other States in this Union.

I do not, for one, desire to see here the character of representatives that would come from there; I do not desire to see such representatives as would come from Hawaii, as would come from the Philippines, or from any other country similarly situated, taking their seats either in the House of Representatives or in the Senate of the United States. Woe unto the day; and an evil day it will be, sir, when such as that comes upon this country.

Our Constitution and laws require representation and that that representation shall come from the people. When the reverse of that comes about, we will see that there will be grave troubles; but, Mr. President, preceding such representation, there will be a régime of carpetbagging; a kind of government which is known to our people in the Southland to their sorrow; which kept them in such a condition that they were without even a voice in the elections, without even the privilege for years of exercising the ballot—that species of carpetbagging which amounted to political dictation. The same scenes will be enacted, the same corruptions will transpire, and millions and billions of money will be expended, which will come out of the pockets of the taxpayers who are entitled to honest representation. Corruption will be the watchword, as it has ever been where carpetbag government prevails.

I say that will be the first step in this scheme. It will not only do that, Mr. President, but it will do violence to that doctrine which has become almost common law to the people of this country, known as the Monroe doctrine, the substance of which is that we intend to take care of the institutions of the Western Hemisphere so far as to see that they are all of republican form or that no monarchy shall be established herein. We shall have to depart from that doctrine whenever we go into this scheme of colonization. Colonization! Sir, it would be a forerunner of great evil to this country and, in my opinion, would result in a change of the form as well as the theory of our Government.

What is to become of the Monroe doctrine if these resolutions should be passed and if the islands of Hawaii should come in as a part of this country? In what form will we take them? Will it be in the form of a satrapy, or will it be said that they must have a representative form in order to conform to the institutions of our country? For otherwise they would not conform to the Constitution of the United States; and therefore it will be necessary to have a representative form.

But then suppose, Mr. President, that all may be so. I want to state how it would affect the grand and great doctrine which has guided us ever since 1823, to which I have incidentally adverted, known as the Monroe doctrine, and which, as I have said, has become common law unto us; a doctrine which is almost as strong and binding as the sections and articles of the Constitution of the United States, and the man who would do violence to that doctrine does violence to the history of our people and to the history of his country.

What, then, Mr. President, is to become of our most cherished principle, the Monroe doctrine, when once this country has adopted the policy of expansion to the isles of the Pacific Ocean? Under the Monroe doctrine the United States denies to European powers all colonial rights on the American continents. Can this country at the same time assert and exercise the right to extend its system to the archipelagoes of the Pacific?

No such glaring inconsistency can be traced or discovered in the writings of the statesmen contemporary with the announcement of that great American declaration. Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, and John Quincy Adams were the apostles of the new political dispensation—that the Americas should for all time be dedicated to republican government. To that end Mr. Jefferson expressed the conviction that—

The day is not distant when we may formally require a meridian of partition through the ocean which separates the two hemispheres, on the hither side of which no European gun shall ever be heard nor an American on the other.

That meridian of demarcation was to be as effectual and binding on the United States as upon European nations. Thus far and no farther, we said to Europe, impliedly pledging ourselves at the same time to a like respect to that meridian. We demanded that European nations should not bring their monarchical systems to the American continents, and we impliedly declared that we would not extend our republican system beyond those continents.

The American continents, North and South, is the habitat of popular government, and nowhere else will it find conditions of living and thriving. You may transplant it, you may water and fertilize it with the treasures and blood of American citizens, but it will dry up and wither in uncongenial soils and climates. The fathers and statesmen of our country and its republican principles knew and understood its peculiarities and the conditions necessary to its healthy growth and full fruition, and they were too wise and practical to experiment it upon half-civilized and savage peoples at the expense of the blood and treasures and the principles of Americans.

This country can not and will not abandon the Monroe doctrine, but this annexation of Hawaii, so inconsistent on our part with that doctrine, will embarrass every effort to have the Monroe doctrine accepted by other nations. Heretofore the United States has taken no seat in the congresses of nations. We have stood aloof, partly by our own choice, but mainly because the subjects and questions which were there for discussion related to European nations, from participation in which we have sedulously kept apart. But hereafter, when this country has forced itself into the isles of the Pacific and seized an archipelago on the shores of Asia, isolation from the congress of nations will no longer be possible.

The rumors which daily reach this country about European intervention in the war with Spain may have no tangible existence, but their persistency of repetition and variation point to some as yet undefined purpose on the part of European powers when this country is depleted in strength, if not exhausted by the war with Spain. When the lavish hand has scattered our funds and the markets are overflowing with our bonds, when hospitals are overburdened with patients, and cemeteries studded with the green mounds which cover the dead, then will be the opportunity of Europe's monarchs to clip the wings of a too aspiring republicanism. I would offer neither the reason nor the occasion; I would confine the United States to the limits of the continents, where, strong in numbers, overflowing in resources, and inspired by patriotism, we may safely defy the concentrated power of all the nations. That is the philosophy of the Monroe doctrine, but I hope it will not be entirely out of place to once again place it before the Senate in its naked simplicity. In his message of December 2, 1823, President Monroe laid down and called all Europe to observe and respect the following declaration:

We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.

Two months previous Mr. Jefferson had written to the President:

I could honestly, therefore, join in the declaration proposed that we aim not at the acquisition of any of those possessions, that we will not stand in the way of any amicable arrangement between them and the mother country, but that we will oppose, with all our means, the forcible interposition of any other power, or auxiliary, stipendiary, or under any other form or pretext, and most especially their transfer to any power by conquest, cession, or acquisition in any other way.

Those two great American statesmen—the one standing before his almost open grave, with all the glory and splendor of his life behind him, the other in the blazing light of the American Presidency—did not “palter in a double sense” with the nations of Europe. They meant that if European monarchy kept out of these continents republican democracy would confine itself within these continents. It was not a promise to the ear to be broken to the hope by our seizing all within sight. Hence the annexation of Hawaii neutralizes the Monroe doctrine; leaves this continent as open to European colonization as the Pacific Ocean is to American experimental exploration with republican government among Malays and Kanakas.

It is repeatedly insisted that other nations will seize these islands “if their annexation does not take place.” In reply I would call attention to interviews with President Dole, published in the New York Journal of January 24, 1898, and he certainly ought to be good authority in this regard.

In reference to the purpose of Japan to seize the island, he said:

There is absolutely no foundation for these stories of Hawaii being menaced by Japan. There is absolutely nothing in it. There is nothing in the relations between our country and Japan that hurried me to America.

And as to the future of these islands, in case they were not annexed, he said:

Well, the Republic is there. I don't know that anything would happen, except that things would go on as usual. I don't see any immediate danger from possession by any other country.

And there is no immediate danger threatening these islands, nor will there be any in the future if this country, letting that Government alone, shall notify the world to keep hands off.

This Congress reuttered the Monroe doctrine in all its essential integrity when, on the 20th of April, 1898, it declared—

That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island (Cuba) except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

That was known as the Teller resolution. That of itself is an acknowledgment of the very doctrine of which I have been speaking and reading—the Monroe doctrine.

Spain having offended against every principle of humanity, having blown up our battle ship and killed our sailors in her friendly waters, we reassert the Monroe doctrine to drive her away from the island, and reproclaim its essential integrity when we declare our purpose to leave the island to its people. We may seize Puerto Rico as "indemnity for the past and security for the future" under the laws of war recognized and practiced by all nations without infringing on the Monroe doctrine, but to annex Hawaii without war, with nothing to indemnify for and nothing to be secured against, is piracy in violation of the Monroe doctrine.

Mr. President, suppose we defy the Monroe doctrine, the doctrine which has existed in this country now for more than three-quarters of a century. Suppose we abandon that doctrine; suppose we abandon the doctrine of the treaty-making power vested in the Executive and in the Senate of the United States, and ruthlessly, I may say, take the matter in our own hands by the introduction of a resolution in another branch of Congress and bringing it here and passing it, thereby disregarding and overriding the Monroe doctrine. What will be the result? The tendency of that is, in my opinion, toward centralization. Whenever you accept these islands under a resolution of annexation as part of this country, you enter into the broad arena of colonization; and when you once enter into that field, where will you stop? Where will the line be drawn? This Government will be a government of expansion, a government of aggression. I repeat. Where will it stop? What islands in the sea will it not take? What country in Europe, Asia, or Africa will be free from our expansive and aggressive policy?

Then I say the simple republican spirit of this country, the liberty of our people in its simple purity, will be gone, and our Republic will not be what it is to-day and what it has been in the past. It will be gradually moving on toward centralization, and centralization means empire, and the time will not be far distant when Senators who are now present, if an expansive and aggressive policy of colonization is adopted, will see that degree of imperialism which is expressed by "the man on horseback." There is where we are going. That is the tendency of this colonization policy. I for one, Mr. President, with my voice and vote as a Senator, whatever that may be worth, expect to try to stop it at the beginning. I do not wish to see this entering wedge driven in by the trip hammer of war power and rife our hitherto gnarled and unwedgeable oak—the Monroe doctrine.

We would not override by a joint resolution the treaty-making power. It would still be left as the Constitution places it, in the hands of the President of the United States and the Senate, guarded by a two-thirds vote. It should still be there. And when war comes on, the reason is greater for the treaty-making power to remain where our fathers placed it.

War stirs a fever in the blood of age,
And makes the youthful sinews strong as steel.

It brings about an artificial condition in the body politic—an excited and excitable condition. Pass this resolution, and we override the doctrine that we have been living up to, the doctrine which we have proclaimed as ours, which we have implanted in the bosom and the hearts of our people—the Monroe doctrine—that we will not go beyond the Western Hemisphere, our own country; that we will not go out into the two oceans that bound it.

Have we not territory enough in this country? Have we not enough in the West? Have we not millions of acres of land, even on the Old Dominion side of the Alleghenies, that are practically unoccupied? Can we not give homes and occupations to two or three or five hundred millions of people upon this continent without having it densely settled? Why should we seek to expand and to aggress so as to destroy the rights of a weak, simple, plain, and an humble people like the Hawaiians? Why should we extend our wings so as to take that people under them as a shield? The Philippines are practically under our flag, and we must hold them anyhow until peace comes unto us. They are ours so far as they are now under the control of our war ships in their chief port, and I believe they will soon be in our possession.

Let them be held, then, as a hostage until the final day of reckoning comes between the two powers that are now at war, Spain and the United States, and, my word for it, a happy solution, under the guidance of Providence, will be found. Let us not run to meet evils. Let us cross the bridge when we come to it and not try to do so before we reach it. But for the existence of this war this excited, unnatural, artificial condition in our country would not exist, and we would look calmly and practically on the situation and would pass no legislation fraught with such consequences as to cause regret. But for the existing war I believe this proposition would not be here in its present form, and if it was thrust in for political or other purposes we would relegate it to where it properly belongs—where a two-thirds vote would be required. Yes, we would relegate it to the form known to the Constitution and leave the question of the annexation of Hawaii to the Senate and President of the United States.

Mr. President, we have territory enough. How did we get it? Did we get it properly, so far as other nations are concerned? It perhaps may not be uninteresting to scan for a moment how the territory between the two oceans came into the possession of the United States. Where was the first title deed given or the first grant of power or right to land in the United States? When the Revolutionary war closed and by the treaty of peace England ceded to us all east of the Alleghenies. Where was the second? There is some curious history connected with it.

The next piece of land given to the United States and which was owned by it afterwards was that known as the Northwestern Territory, ceded by Virginia, comprising four or five States—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and a part of Minnesota.

Where was the third attainment of territory by this country? It was Kentucky, which was placed in the lap of the United States by the hand of Virginia also. Where was the next? My own native State of Tennessee, first organized as the "State of Franklin," but which afterwards became Tennessee. It was turned over as the territory of North Carolina and generously placed in the lap of the Government of the United States.

Where was the next? The next, if I recollect, was the Louisiana purchase, which has figured so extensively in this debate. What is the history of that? Thomas Jefferson saw the necessity of owning the mouth of the Mississippi River, seeing that all the tributaries of that monarch stream of the universe extended over a vast country. He felt that its ownership was vital to the existence and prosperity of this country, and although he did have doubts as to its constitutionality, he relied upon the fact that the Congress would adopt the measure as a great necessity, and approve it and settle the matter amicably.

Thomas Jefferson saw the settlers over in my part of the country, who had gone there for the purpose of building up their fortunes, had gone with the Bible and the rifle and had in good faith built their cabins and owned their homes, should be protected, although living beyond the Alleghenies in the valley of the Mississippi. These brave and hardy settlers, when the Revolutionary war was flagrant and when Cornwallis had left Camden, going through the Carolinas, destroying as he went, came together on the Watanga, organized themselves as a band of patriots, although beyond the reach of danger, and the mountains between, organized under the leaderships of Sevier and Shelby, left their homes and their families, and at their own expense, through pure love of liberty in this country, threaded the mountain passes and came over Kings Mountain, where the British commander, Ferguson, was established and holding the country and as a protection to the left flank of Cornwallis, and there fought one of the greatest and most vital battles and won one of the most noted of victories in the history of our Revolutionary contest. That great battle, fought principally by those Mississippi Valley men, caused Cornwallis to change his course and to go to Yorktown, and Washington came swooping down from the Delaware like a night hawk, closed in upon him, and the result was the victory of Yorktown and liberty to this country.

That is one of the influences which operated in connection with the acquisition of Louisiana. Jefferson saw that flatboats and other water craft were coming down the Tennessee, the Ohio, and the Mississippi, and that a connection necessarily must exist all through that tributary country; and seeing the necessity, he was determined to have it. He got it. He could not have got it by direct communication and negotiation with the King of Spain, but he sent Monroe and another agent, Livingston perhaps, over to France to interview Napoleon in regard thereto, and made an arrangement with Napoleon, who was then all-powerful in Europe and who held the King of Spain at his bidding as he would a titular dignitary upon the chessboard.

They got Napoleon to take title to the Louisiana purchase, and then he made his negotiations with Napoleon. Napoleon was keen to do so. And why? Napoleon at that time was engaged in a war with England, England being virtually the mistress of the sea, and Napoleon wanted a navy to compete with her vessels at sea. He had nothing with which to do it, and he needed the fifteen millions of money offered for the purpose of purchasing a fleet. Jefferson made the bargain. He got the millions. I do not remember the exact amount, but he made the bargain, and finally he ceded to the United States, through the instrumentality of Thomas Jefferson, Monroe, and Livingston, his agents, that vast territory which is described as the Mississippi River Valley and all of the tributaries of that stream, now making fourteen of the grandest States that are known in this country, with 22,000,000 population. That territory came in, and the line of demarcation between the Mississippi Valley and the Pacific slope, as known now, is where the water divides upon the mountain tops, one stream flowing to the Pacific and the other into the Mississippi and thence into the Gulf of Mexico.

Thomas Jefferson was successful in his negotiations with Napoleon, although failing with Spain, to secure the Mississippi River and its tributaries and all the land connected therewith. The result, sir, you have seen. That is the next territory to that of Tennessee, as I have stated, which came into the Government of the United States. Where is the next? The next is Florida. Who brought it in? James Monroe brought it in, and it was paid for by the Government. When he made that arrangement—and it is not generally known—he claimed by that treaty all the possession that Spain had left in this North American continent; and Spain claimed a title to a certain portion of territory on the Pacific coast, which served Mr. Polk a valuable purpose in the settlement with Great Britain in our Oregon boundary dispute.

Texas was the next to come in. It belonged to Mexico, and you notice a fine demarcation of lines in Texas. You notice some of Arizona and New Mexico and a part of Kansas not in the Louisiana purchase. The other part of it is where the Sabine and other rivers flow directly to the Gulf. All those rivers that flowed to the Gulf and the land west of them belonged to Mexico, and hence there was Mexican resistance to our claim, which finally culminated in our troubles with Mexico. Our people emigrated thither on Mexican soil. Texas was a Mexican State, and set up for herself, and having set up for herself it became a struggle between Texas and Mexico. Texas won her liberty.

Now, this was in 1836, and Texas was not admitted into the Union until 1845, nine years. That is my point. Nine years she was an independency, a state set up for herself. She had a legislature, heads of departments, her governor or her president, and her congress, and a representative as minister to the United States. She had the right of a state to speak for her people, and she wanted to come into this country as a part of it. She had a right to have her voice and the voice of her people, when she spoke their will, carried out. Then under proper regulations she was brought in.

I have shown in the first part of my argument, however, how it comes that she was admitted by joint resolution. Tyler expressly—almost expressly, certainly by implication; and I want you to remember that, because it should be fastened upon the memories of Senators—Tyler virtually said that he would not have asked that a joint resolution be passed for the annexation of Texas, so much in violation of the spirit of the Constitution, but for the fact that England was then negotiating with Texas, the result of which might have been the freedom of all the slaves.

Tyler said that nothing was done until after that treaty had been defeated here. We have had no defeat of this treaty here. It still hangs on. It is before us now and walks like a ghost. It may be dying, but an affirmative vote upon this joint resolution will be, in my opinion, an unfortunate one to the perpetuity of our present form of government. But it will be done. War times will cause it to be done. The fever, as I said, in the blood of age will do it; the youthful sinews strong as steel will have it done, all growing out of war excitement. It will be done, and woe to the day when it is done. It will be perhaps, I hope not, to the perpetuity of this country the click if not the crack of doom.

Mr. President, I have been speaking of this country and how it was acquired. What is the next thing that was done in the way of territory? Sir, it was in the time of James K. Polk, a Southern man and a Democrat, too. James K. Polk was President, and Texas was admitted. Mr. Clay, the greatest, almost, I may say, of living orators and statesmen at that time, wrote his celebrated Raleigh letter against the annexation of Texas and was turned down by the popular voice. The admission—not annexation—of Texas became an element in the politics of this country and a successful element. Why? Because Texas was of our blood, bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh. Her people had our habits. They had our tastes. They had our ideas of government and they formed a government fashioned after ours, and they came in as our brothers. That was the reason of it, not because we would establish there a carpetbag government, not because they were Portuguese, Japanese, Chinese, or Hawaiians. No, sir; it was because they were our brothers, our kindred, and they came within our embraces. That was the reason of it.

Now, in regard to what came in from the war, we received a large amount of territory, rich, fertile, and valuable, extending 500 miles on the Pacific coast, which now has its immense cities and a dense population. The acquisition of that country was accomplished, and how did it come in? By conquest? Not exactly. That may be said to have been the case in one sense, as it came in as the result of the war; but it came in under treaty with Mexico.

But, Mr. President, it was negotiated by treaty, by the treaty-making power organized in proper form, with all the solemnities thrown around it, and by the representatives of this Government appointed duly and the representatives of Mexico appointed duly and meeting at Queretaro.

The result was that by giving a certain amount of money in addition we got the territory that I speak of, including 500 miles of the coast of California and Nevada, one coming in with her apples of gold and the other furnishing a waiter of silver upon which to place those apples of gold as they were transferred to the United States Treasury. That was not done by resolution, but by treaty, and our territory now extends from ocean to ocean and from lakes to gulf.

What was the next that came in? There was a little piece of territory known as the Gadsden purchase down on the Gila River, running into the Gulf of California, the lower part of California, and the northwestern part of New Mexico. That was gained by a purchase. But how was that done? It was done by treaty with Mexico negotiated by representatives appointed by this Government and likewise by the Government of Mexico. They met together and agreed upon that line, and we paid Mexico $10,000,000 for it. That was under the Administration, as I shall presently notice, of Franklin Pierce.

What was the next territorial acquisition? It was Alaska. How long have we had Alaska? For thirty years, I believe. Have we had any government over it yet? There is, I believe, a battalion of regulars there, but we have no government over it. We have sought to establish one at the present session, but it has not yet become a law.

Alaska was the last territorial acquisition of the United States.

Mr. President, what I say may be regarded by some as significant. It has been said in this debate that the Democratic party brought in all the territory of this country, and therefore the Democrats in this Chamber ought not to oppose the acquisition of the Hawaiian Islands. It is true that these acquisitions have been made under Democratic administration. Every one of them was made under the Administration of a Democrat. Further, let me say with a degree of pride that every one of them was under a Southern man as well as a Democrat except the Gadsden treaty, under President Pierce. But not in a single instance did they seek to take in a people not homogeneous or who were not used to our system of government or who were not our own kith and kin. I say all but one—Alaska.

But, Mr. President, I will state a fact as a very singular coincidence—whether it was providential or not I do not pretend to say—in connection with the admission of Alaska. It is known that Mr. William H. Seward, a very eminent statesman of his day, was the negotiator with Russia. The United States was always a favorite with Russia, and Russia with us. Singular as it may seem, it was a mixing of Cossack with Republican; yet it was so. Alaska was negotiated for by William H. Seward, under the Administration of Mr. Lincoln.

But what turned up? After negotiations were agreed upon, before there was a final settlement, before ever a signature was made to the treaty with Russia transferring to us Alaska, Mr. Lincoln was killed. The result was that Andrew Johnson, a Democrat and a Southern man, signed that treaty. So you are correct when you charge us with having taken in all the territory under Democratic administration. It is so. Wondrous are Thy ways, O Providence! It so happened that Mr. Lincoln died before his signature was given for the acquisition of Alaska, and Andrew Johnson, a Democrat, signed the treaty.

Mr. President, I may draw from this the conclusion that the Democrats were in favor of the extension of our territory within the limits of the two oceans; that they were for extension of territory where there was a homogeneity of races between us and the party who sought to be a part of our country. That is the point I make, and I say we were right; and when you go beyond that you are wrong. We should adhere to the treaty-making power and let the Government act by a two-thirds majority of the Senate and not have it left to the House of Representatives and the Senate under an impulse arising from the existence of war, creating an unnatural and artificial state of things. That is my philosophy, sir; that is my belief.

Mr. President, the reasons which would have influenced my judgment to oppose the ratification of the treaty for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands are equally potent against these joint resolutions, for those reasons apply more to the welfare of this country than to objections to Hawaii. They rest on the injury that must ensue upon the abandonment in the least of the great principle that "governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." That was a declaration of a "self-evident truth," not special and particular to the government of the colonies by Great Britain, but a general principle of the true foundation of all governments.

Upon that self-evident truth rests the whole system of our Governments, Federal and State, and upon the same "truth" rests the absolute rights of the people of Hawaii to alter their old and institute new government for their own welfare. That right belongs to the people, not to their rulers, and whether those rulers be in rightful or wrongful possession of power, that principle recognizes only the will of the people, the consent of the people, to a transfer of lands and allegiance to another nation. That which these resolutions propose to do with Hawaii and its people would light the fires of rebellion throughout this country if attempted by its legally constituted authorities. We "condemn the wrong and yet the wrong pursue."

Mr. President, there is no doubt in my mind as to the right of this country to acquire territory by conquest or cession, either of which is open as well to this as to any other country. But this scheme of annexation rests on neither conquest nor cession. We have made no war on Hawaii, and hence we take not by conquest; and we can not take by cession, for it is apparent that the governing oligarchy now in power in Hawaii have no sanction in law or morals to give away that country, with all its peoples, all their hopes and all their aspirations. What less crime is the Congress committing in taking all of Hawaii without the consent of its people than Russia, Austria, and Prussia committed on Poland?

Governments which rest on the "right divine of kings" are indifferent to the will and consent of the people; but a government whose fundamental principle is the consent of the governed can not share in the booty and escape from the crime of the robbery.

This country knows the wrongs perpetrated by the reigning oligarchy in Hawaii; we can not plead ignorance; we witnessed the filching of power from the people. We are cognizant of the utter failure of that oligarchy to discharge the function of governing; and by these resolutions we are to permit that oligarchy to dump the islands and their people, Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, and Kanakas—leprosy and all—into the United States, against the will of 90 per cent of the people.

Mr. President, this country can not afford to accept a gift of a whole people from donors without authority. We ought not to accept a transfer of all the dearest rights of a people—their government, their allegiance, their happiness, and their welfare—without ascertaining in the clearest possible manner the consent and sentiment of that people. We are asked by these Hawaiian authorities—if I may properly use that term—to accept a gift of an archipelago, with all its people, without stopping to inquire whether the people desire the transfer. By accepting this gift we are incorporating into this Union thousands of natives and foreigners from all countries of whom we have little knowledge, and that little does not commend them to our people. We are to take those people, willing or unwilling, natives, Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, South Sea Islanders, European, and Americans, some of whom, no doubt, "left their countries for their countries' good."

We are not to pause and ask their consent to our governing them, but we are to join with the Hawaiian oligarchy in compelling an unwilling people to become the unwilling subjects of a distant country. I use the term unwilling, because, first, we do not know their will; and second, it is a fair presumption that every people is unwilling to be transferred to another and unknown allegiance; and third, because the Hawaiian oligarchy has never attempted to consult the will of the people. I use the term "subjects," unknown heretofore to American political terminology, because these natives, Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, and South Sea Islanders can not become citizens. One experiment already made in creating citizens under the pressure of war has demonstrated the un wisdom of haste in the important matter of American citizenship.

To accept and hold these unwilling subjects will be naked despotism, and would be so characterized by the universal voice of our people if done by any other nation. American sympathy goes out to Ireland, because that people are the unwilling subjects of the Crown of England. This annexation of Hawaii may prove to be an Ireland on our hands. There is to be no more secession from this Union, and when once the dice in these resolutions are thrown the result will be irrevocable and these people, willing or unwilling, happy or miserable, must remain, not citizens, but subjects of a superior race. We would hold that in any other government to be reestablishing slavery.

Hence I regard this annexation as perpetrating a greater wrong on the principles and future character of our Government than upon these unfortunate people. The humanity of the American character may insist upon and secure that humane treatment which will mitigate the wrong done to them, but the blot upon the escutcheon of government by consent of the governed can never be removed.

'Twill be recorded as a precedent,
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the State.

As lawyers, we understand the value and force of precedents; as statesmen, we have encountered their advantages and disadvantages; as politicians, we rest our platforms upon them. A few lines in the ordinance for the government of the Northwest Territory became the antislavery precedent which seventy years after lit the fires of civil war and overwhelmed the country with bloodshed, ruin, and devastation. We may follow a principle with safety, but no man can cast the horoscope of a precedent.

This country, Mr. President, conquered vast country from Mexico; it acquired Louisiana, Florida, and Alaska by purchase and cession. In each case the territory and the people passed from the sovereignty of one nation to that of another without the consent of the people being asked or given. Whatever violence to the principle of the consent of the governed may have ensued in either case, it was soon and properly corrected by the establishment of governments founded on the popular will. But in Hawaii there can be no popular will, no people's consent. The Asiatics must be denied participation in consent, the natives are too ignorant of all governmental responsibility to give that intelligent consent which the principle necessarily implies. The consent, the popular will, upon which government in Hawaii must rest will be that of the American oligarchy, which by foul means and fouler force have foisted themselves upon that people.

Mr. President, in our history we have had but one experiment in governing a distant and disconnected possession. Alaska has been American territory for more than thirty years, and yet to-day the only symbol of governing power in that immense possession is two companies of infantry, while thousands of enterprising and energetic miners are pouring into that country, carrying with them the primitive principles of lynch law for the preservation of order and protection of life and property. Until Congress shall have illustrated by an actual example of its capacity to provide an American system of government for Alaska it would be an act of wisdom not to multiply our difficulty and embarrassment by acquiring an archipelago of people of all races and nations so ignorant of every principle of government that they could not administer any which Congress might devise.

Our system of government, State and Federal, presupposes a bicameral legislature, an executive, and judiciary. Does any Senator persuade himself that the Kanaka of Hawaii can understand that complex system, or that he can comprehend the parliamentary philosophy of the "Reed rules," or solve the problem of the previous question, or count a quorum, or fully realize a deliberative assembly where all deliberation is choked off by a Committee on Rules? Yet all these are indispensable parts of an American legislature. Would it not be more probable that the Kanaka would fall into, without ever having heard of, that liberum veto of the Polish Assembly, where differences of opinion were settled in a fight free to all comers?

That would not be an American government. We are told that these people are childlike and bland, easy of control, and can be governed without difficulty. That, again, would not be American government—with us the people must govern themselves. This country once tried the system of carpetbag government, but its failure, disgrace, and evil consequences left no desire on the part of the people to try that system again. Besides, Hawaii has had enough of carpetbaggers. They are there now in conspicuous isolation from the people, possessing power without right and exercising authority without warrant.

Mr. President, it can not be the purpose of Congress to establish in these islands, after annexation, a government not responsible for its acts to the people of these islands; to entirely abandon every principle of government by the governed and to set up, in our country, the European system of governor-generals, captain-generals, military or civil, answerable only to the distant head at Washington. It is to be taken for granted that the future government of these islands will rest on the suffrages of their people and be responsible to their people; that, like our Territories, while the President appoints the governor, the people will select the territorial legislature to make the law, subject to the review and approval of Congress.

These islands by their last census contained 110,000 inhabitants, of whom 43 per cent were Asiatics; that is, 23 per cent were Japanese, 20 per cent Chinese. Are these 46,000 Asiatics to be citizens of the United States in Hawaii, but not in any other part of our Union? Can this large population be aliens in the United States, but citizens in Hawaii, a double and doubtful character hitherto unknown to any country?

What disposition in the suffrage will be made of the 15,000 Portuguese? Will they also be citizens in Hawaii, subjects in Portugal, and aliens in the States?

Here, then, are 61,000 out of 110,000 people whose political status must be defined. If they are made citizens in Hawaii and intrusted with the right to vote, they will be able to control its legislation. If they are denied the right of suffrage, they must sink into peonage.

To prevent that possible fate to the negroes in the Southern States they were invested with the right of suffrage and that right bulwarked by the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution.

Will the fifteenth amendment guard these people of the yellow race by its provision as to "race, color, or previous condition of servitude?" After the yellow races have been provided for there remain native Hawaiians, 31,000; part Hawaiians, 8,400; Americans, 13,000; British, 2,200; Germans, 1,400; Norwegians, 479; South Sea Islanders, 1,055. A citizenship like Falstaff's ragged regiment of "tattered prodigals, lately come from swine keeping, from eating draff and husks" in their own countries, to fix themselves in Hawaii, as a sure way of getting into the United States.

These are to be the suffragists of our Pacific territorial archipelago—an embryonic State of the Federal Union. Eliminating the 61,000 Asiatics and discounting those Europeans whose patriotism will not permit their allegiance to another country, there will remain 31,000 natives, 3,000 Americans, and probably 1,500 Germans—a total of 35,500 to be represented in the suffrage. The proportion of these who are males, over 21 years of age, was stated in the debate in the House of Representatives to be—natives 8,000, Americans 1,000, and probably others above 21 years, a total of about 10,000 voters. Three thousand Americans among 110,000 people of every race, clime, and color; 1,000 American voters among 10,000 other voters!

"Oh, monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!" And for that unsavory mess of pottage this country is asked to give up its birthright to the very principle upon which all its institutions are founded!

It is apparent, as was asserted in that debate, that "if left to a vote of the people of Hawaii, after annexation, the Americans will have no voice whatever in the government of the islands, except that of an infinitesimal minority," and "that when it comes to taking the independent Government from the islands and merging it into our Government, every thought and sympathy of the great majority will be entirely anti-American in governmental policy." Like liberty-loving and unwilling Ireland under England, it will require a government by the bayonet, rather than the ballot, to make this heterogeneous people harmonize with our institutions; and we shall reenact the rôle of the reconstruction period at the very beginning of our Pacific colonial policy.

Facts and considerations such as these ought to cause Congress to pause and consider some other solution of the problem rather than rush to irrevocable annexation of distant islands, with different races of people, all without experience in self-government, the only kind of government possible under our system.

I am no opponent of territorial expansion within the limits of the continent to which our dual system of government is peculiarly adapted, but which is utterly unfit to be extended over islands in distant seas. I have always belonged to that great political party whose statesmen added every territory but Alaska, and who broke the "pent-up Utica" on the Atlantic and extended the empire of the flag until "the boundless continent was ours."

Mr. Jefferson held that New England townships "have proved themselves the wisest invention ever devised by the wit of man for the perfect exercise of self-government and for its preservation." In all the additions to our country made by Mr. Jefferson and other Democratic statesmen the township or some other scheme of local self-government was possible. But no man can imagine the people of Hawaii exercising and administering the duties of self-government in a township meeting. The fathers and promoters of territorial expansion always had an eye to local self-government in the State and to participation in the Federal Union—first as Territories and then as States. Can any Senator see even in the far-distant future the probability or possibility of a Kanaka Territory or State?

I do not forget, Mr. President, that Mr. Jefferson also said that he "had ever looked on Cuba as the most interesting addition which could be made to our system of States. The control which, with the Florida point, this island would give us over the Gulf of Mexico and the countries and the isthmus bordering on it, as well as those whose waters flow into it, would fill up the measure of our political well-being."

I fear that this Administration, now so ardently urging the annexation of distant Hawaii, has effectually interposed an insurmountable obstacle to the attainment of Mr. Jefferson's ardent hope. In 1823, when Mr. Jefferson's letter was written to Mr. Monroe, the British premier, Mr. Canning, was seeking that alliance with the country which a second time has been brought into expectation and hope by the conditions surrounding Cuba.

Then Mr. Jefferson was willing to "fill up the measure" by taking the Island of Cuba. He was not laying down a principle of expansion over the Pacific, nor establishing a precedent for absorbing whole archipelagoes of people just emerging from the bondage of barbarism, ignorant of self-control, and utterly unfit for the responsibilities of self-government. He was, on the contrary, willing to take in Cuba because that island would "fill the measure" of our Union, in which, after Cuba, there would be no place for island or archipelago, civilized or savage.

Mr. President, in the absence of all that knowledge and experience indispensable to self-government, these islands, after annexation, must be governed from Washington. I do not doubt that some scheme of centralization extending Executive power far beyond our present conception can be devised and set in force. But I fear that all the islands in all the seas would be dearly bought by extending the scope of Executive power. I am opposed to every increase of Executive power, Democratic or Republican, whether it is extended over distant isles or States nearer home. When custom and use have familiarized the people with instances of high-handed power over ignorant islanders, our people at home may find the increased Army at their doors to enforce Executive orders, and instead of the State governors being called on to preserve order the Federal authority will usurp the right of preserving domestic peace. Such things have been done in the past, and I am unwilling to increase the facility of repeating them in the future.

We are told that the annexation of these islands is demanded by the exigencies which confront our fleet in the Philippine Islands, but I recall that the treaty of annexation antedated the declaration of war, and I believe that the genius for command and the gallantry which won Manila without the help of the Hawaiian Islands can hold the Philippines whether Hawaii be taken in or left out of the Union.

The supposed military relation of Hawaii to Manila ought not to have any place in the discussion of this question of annexation. The Philippine Islands are at present no part of our system. Manila, held by our Navy, can hardly be accepted as transferring 10,000,000 of Malays to the United States. In sending an army to hold what the Navy had seized we discharge a military duty, but do not determine a political problem. What the United States will do with the Philippine Islands can only be determined after our title by conquest is confirmed by the treaty of peace. We jump to conclusions when we attempt to determine questions without considering the course which events may take in the future. I would not give color to the Philippine question by annexing Hawaii as a possible factor in that matter; but leave it uninfluenced by every consideration for the determination of the convention between the United States and Spain which must conclude the peace and fix the results of the war.

I hear it is said, Mr. President, that our Pacific commerce needs these islands for many and various reasons. But that Pacific commerce grew to its present condition without these islands. I can not subscribe to this alleged commercial necessity. This country demands for its commerce open ports all over the world—these it will have—and to obtain them it will be prepared to resort to the ultima ratio regum. Neither in Hawaii, nor along the shores of Asia, nor anywhere in the isles of the ocean, will this country permit its merchants to be excluded from access to the interchange of products. We have lately heard a great deal about "spheres of influence," "zones" set apart in Asia and Africa for particular European nations, and this annexation of Hawaii is an imitation of that robbery of all for the benefit of one nation. Our "sphere of influence" widens wherever ships may steam or a sail flutter carrying the peaceful products of commerce without let or hindrance from any nation on earth; asking no advantages, we will submit to no disadvantages.

Mr. President, I have not entered upon the discussion of the commercial aspects of annexation, and touched but briefly upon its alleged military and naval advantages. These may be of great value and importance. They may add to the military and naval prestige of the country, to the glamour of a splendid future, and captivate the imaginations with visions of the future grandeur of our country. But the higher and more important principle, the greater and grander policy of being faithful to the principles of our pure Government, are sufficient to impel me to oppose with voice and vote an act of violence to the sacred principle upon which the Government was founded and by which our people govern themselves.

I can not believe that any commercial or military or naval or strategic advantages to be derived from the annexation of these islands will compensate our people for the utter abandonment of the principle of their own Government, which is to be compromised by the passage of these resolutions. Shall it be said of us that we swapped the fundamental principle of our Government for the doubtful gains of trade; that as "the jingling of the guinea helps the hurt that Honor feels," so the earnings of commerce will salve over any harm to principle; that money, gold, trade, commerce are paramount to the untarnished principle upon which our Government rests, and that to gain these we are indifferent to the theories of government, to principles, however sacred, to wrong, however great?

Mr. President, this annexation threatens not only the principles of our Government, it endangers the system of our labor. Which of us on this floor can forecast the consequences of incorporating with our high-priced labor the low-priced Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiian, Portuguese, and South Sea Islanders? The most stringent customs regulations have not entirely closed this country to the Chinese. What system of espionage will prevent their filtering through when Hawaii is a part of our Union?

But even if the laborer can be kept out, what watchfulness under interstate and foreign commerce can exclude the interchange of the cheap products in competition with the higher-priced products of States? Protection for American labor against the pauper labor of Europe was a postulate by which manufacturers were enabled to increase the price of domestic products without increasing the wages of labor. The party of protection against Europe will by the passage of these resolutions open their country to an influx of the cheapest labor in the world and to a deluge of its cheapest products, and it will come from the west and not the east. Not only the principle of our Government is at stake, but the support of our laborers is in danger from the annexation and incorporation of a people corralled by adventurers and turned over to this country.

Mr. President, I contemplate the present power and future grandeur of my country in its continental solidarity with that jealous pride which advises against weakening a position now impregnable to all the nations of the world. I would not endanger this our stronghold on the continent by adding to it outlying islands which may be lopped off in future wars, where accident, bad management, or even tardiness in moving to battle may turn victory to defeat, bringing humiliation and loss to a proud and self-reliant nation.

Heretofore our country and its policies of government have existed only for the happiness, prosperity, and general welfare of its individual citizens. Hereafter the grandeur, the power, and the influence of the nation may absorb the labor and products of the people. Imperial taxes must sustain the imperial ends of a great standing army and a navy commensurate with a nation having possessions all over the world. Instead of being satisfied with the continent we possess but have not developed, I fear we are to become an oriental power, involved in oriental questions, having Malay subjects, Hawaiian subjects, Puerto Rican subjects, until we attain the climax of a power which has dotted over the surface of the whole globe with her possessions and military posts, "whose morning drumbeat, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England."

But England, Mr. President, is a monarchy with subjects; the United States is a republic with citizens only. Territorial expansion, colonies, and dependencies may become the ornaments and adornments of the throne of the British Queen and Empress, but they would be most singularly out of place around the chair of state of that servant of the people—the President of the United States. Yet this annexation of Hawaii is but the initial step in a new and untried colonial policy, unsuited to our institutions, not adapted to our system of government, unknown to our people, and impracticable in every respect.

I would not be understood as expressing any opposition to the most vigorous prosecution of the war for the purpose for which it was declared—the freedom and independence of Cuba—but I protest against turning "the red right hand"—rubente dextera—of war for Cuba to the conquest of an archipelago of Malays in the distant Pacific and then using that incomplete conquest as an argument for annexing Hawaii.

The friends of annexation look to a new epoch in American policy, a vast extension of territory as auxiliary to foreign commerce. The first necessary step is a vast enlargement of our Navy. It must be made equal to the most powerful fleets on the ocean. Our model will be the English navy.

Are we ready to abandon a safe and conservative policy and enter upon a reign of force and upon that carpet-baggery which must follow in some parts of the country—a policy which I know has been condemned by my friend who sits before me, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETERS], who has seen more of carpet-baggery or as much of it as any living man, certainly as much or more than any Senator upon this floor? He, I think, like those who have witnessed the scenes which resulted from the carpet-bag governments in the South, will never yield a willingness to have that system again put upon any part of our country.

Are we ready to abandon our safe conservative policy to enter upon the reign of force that has marked the history of all the great monarchies of the world? Our policy has been one of peace, by which we have built up the most powerful state in the world. We possess a vast extent of territory, a variety of climate and productions, vegetable, mineral, and animal, that furnishes us the elements for our skilled workers, that enables them to furnish the most extensive commerce, embracing foreign and domestic, in the world. Our Army and Navy has not exhausted the resources of the producers, and this has sent their surplus into the channels of production. Under this benign policy our domain has enlarged and our population has increased until the Republic is now the greatest power on the earth.

Our people are brave and intelligent. They will excel as soldiers and sailors, and have when tried. The time has come when the purpose is to convert the Republic into a great military and naval power. This means the subordination of our citizens to military and naval service. Nor is this all. It means the demoralization of our people. Instead of an intelligent, self-ruling, self-governing people, they are to be a governed, subordinate, subjected race. Instead of a simple, plain, brave, confident democracy, we must have a titled nobility living from the labors of a subjective, subordinate peasantry.

It is affirmed that we need the Nicaragua Canal. Then, it is said, we can easily protect this canal by the possession of these islands. We have the fine harbors on the Pacific coast, that are nearer the canal than any of the Sandwich Islands. Then they can readily be supplied with coal by rail from the interior, whilst there is no coal within 3,000 miles and more of the islands. Men and means of defense can be much more easily supplied from the continent than from the islands.

The commercial advantages are confined to a trade in which we must import more than we export to the islands. In 1891 our exports to the islands were $6,495,608 and our imports were $10,258,788. These were articles that come in competition with our own producers. The principal article is sugar, which, with their cheap labor, can be produced to a great advantage, and to so great an advantage that its free importation would ruin our young and promising production of beet sugar. They have provided themselves with cheap Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese labor. And with their fertile soil and fine climate they can destroy our California industry.

Our valuable oriental trade will be with India, China, and Japan, peoples who manufacture and produce articles that we do not and who take from us articles they do not produce, and who have great extent of territory and a numerous skilled population. These islands are in no respect auxiliary to our oriental trade. For all they have to sell they are dependent upon China and Japan for producers. Eliminate these workers, and the islands, with all their fine climate and fertile soil, would be barren of productivity.

There are grave questions, I think, which are not to be and can not be settled until the close of this existing war; and no man whose opinion would be worth anything would venture to say what should be done with these islands at this time, before we have concluded a peace with Spain.

Is the United States going to change its uniform policy?

What reason is there for a change?

Has the Spanish war extended our empire to the Orient?

Will colonies in the Philippine Islands be the result of their capture?

It is said the establishment of the United States in the Orient will secure the Philippine Islands.

First. The islands are to be secured.

Are they necessary to the defense of the Pacific coast?

Are they necessary to the defense of the Nicaragua Canal?

Are they demanded for commercial advantages, etc.?

Mr. President, these islands are 2,000 miles from our Pacific coast. At present there is no probability of a war with any nation on earth except Spain that would invade our Pacific coast. If a war with any other power should occur, of what use would these islands be to us? England is the only state capable of attempting an invasion, and there is not the most remote probability of any such action on her part. The moral, social, and commercial relations of these two peoples forbid the idea of war. It will be easier for us to adjust any difficulty by pacific means than by a resort to force. If a war other than that we have with Spain should occur, our defense would be in our own States, by their own people and their own means at home. The idea of looking off 2,000 miles for a defensive position is supremely ridiculous. We might as well contemplate a part of the moon as a point of defense as look to Hawaii.

If this country contemplates a new policy by the extension of our empire into the remote East, these islands might then become useful, provided they were in danger of falling into the hands of any hostile nation.

If we are to abandon the policy of our fathers, that has produced such noble results, a vast population of intelligent, brave, self-supporting freemen, it is not necessary to pursue this subject further. The experiment has been made and the results chronicled. The all-conquering Roman Republic finally, after subordinating the world and robbing it and degrading it, finally robbed, demoralized, and degraded her own citizens, till they fell easily before the tolls of ambitious chiefs, their government became the prey of a debased army.

The Pretorians put the imperial power to sale, and when they desired a change by violence disposed of their disagreeable bargain. In the meantime the people lost their manhood and became an easy prey to the hordes of barbarians that marched through the great empire with little opposition. Their arbitrary rule ruined all the peoples over whom their abrupt rule was established. One beautiful feature of this barbaric invasion ornaments history. When Brennus with his hordes, after capturing the city of Rome, invaded the Roman senate chamber, and the old senators remained in their seats and drew their robes around them ready for the vandal knife, their patriotic courage and stoic firmness appalled the barbarian and they escaped injury.

The Britons, a brave and warlike people, lost all power of self-defense and fell easy victims to the Pict and Scots, and were exterminated by the German hordes. The Gauls had a similar history. Our own system of relying on the valor of the citizen and on the inviolability of local State government is our only safety from the demoralizing tendency of the age.

I have here a table showing the population of the Hawaiian Islands by the census of 1896, which I ask permission to print as part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The table referred to is as follows:

Population of the Hawaiian Islands—Census of 1896.

Hawaiians	81,019	Portuguese	15,191
Part Hawaiians	8,485	Japanese	24,407
Americans	3,086	Chinese	21,618
British	2,250	South Sea Islanders	455
Germans	1,492	Other nationalities	900
French	101
Norwegians	378	Total	109,020

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, there are two important considerations in this question. The policy and the right of annexation.

It is the commencement of indefinite extension of our territory. It will introduce a foreign dissociable element, the most heterogeneous mass that has ever been incorporated and which can never unite with Americans. It will introduce into our system the Roman pro-consular service, an element foreign to American sympathies and habits. It will be commercially a disadvantage. They will purchase little and sell much. It is wholly in the interests of Hawaiian planters.

This step will demand a great increase of our Army and Navy; both results to be avoided if we adhere to our traditional policy. They will increase the expenditure and greatly augment taxation. They will greatly increase a class of men who will contribute nothing and must be paid and supported by the laboring element.

The movement is of doubtful constitutional authority. It has only the unauthorized authority of pressing and interested opportunity. It will increase the number of officers: with it will come paternalism, and with that, strength to the great center and weakness to the outlying States. This continued process will by degrees wear away the muscular power of our great Republic and dwindle it to a shadow and death.

One reason urged for it is the existence of the present war. But for that this resolution, in my opinion, would never have been introduced. The proposition of this treaty remained in the Senate undisturbed until the first cannon boomed in the war, and then came this resolution. But regardless of consequences, this war must be fought out. It should be fought with vigor and without letting up until an honorable peace is won.

In all cases the United States has annexed only territory ceded by governments having undoubted right to cede, and never from governments of doubtful ownership. They have never instigated revolution to get territory before this case.

The present oligarchy has no right to annex the islands. It is a government that has not the sanction of the people.

It is divesting a race of men of their right to country and government and putting them in a gradual process of extinction. The process has begun and will continue with accelerated speed.

The strength of the Government depends on the unity and harmony of thought and action of the people. This results from the unity of race. Discordant races can never harmonize in putting into action political and social institutions. They can never agree completely in devising the best means to effect desired results. They necessarily take different views of governing forces as their intelligence and habits differ. Thus a government composed of different races will demand despotic rule to keep order and force obedience to law. In a republican government it requires the voluntary assent of the people which must come from them, and this can only be where the mass is congenial and act from similar motives and a uniform intelligence.

A mass of such heterogeneous races as now inhabit the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands will always be a source of weakness in a government ruled by the highest and most advanced races in the world. The present Government of Hawaii is but an oligarchy of interested men placed in power and kept there by the power of this Republic. Our Government depends on the consent of the governed. The violation of this principle, whether by bribery and corruption or by force, will soon change the character of the mass and of the Government. The higher races will not tolerate the less advanced races with the Government. They will either purchase their action or force it. In Hawaii there is not one in ten, not more than 5 per cent of the population, that understands the principles on which our Government is based, and they are incapable of understanding or conforming to them. It might be better in case of annexation to establish for them a despotic proconsular government. It would be better than the irresponsible oligarchy now existing sustained by the power of this Government. The political evil of introducing a mass of semibarbarism is not any worse than the moral and social.

The annexation of Hawaii would be the entering wedge to a series of troubles in our country which could not be controlled by our people in after years. It may be the beginning of empire; it would be the initiatory of a new theory of government and give impetus to that rule of military power which will result in the control of this Government by militarism. Having these grave apprehensions, I shall give my vote against this resolution.

I know and appreciate the fact that an unfair partisanship can, and perhaps will, distort a vote against these resolutions into a vote against the Administration of this Government in time of war; into a vote against a vigorous prosecution of the war against Spain; into a vote against the possible policy which may confront the country at the settlement of peace; into a vote against the inevitable consequences of war as to the acquisition of territory; into a vote which encourages the enemy in the belief that there is a divided opinion in this country as to its future policy, which will encourage the enemy to persist in carrying on the war in the hope of better terms of peace. But notwithstanding all these possible and probable misrepresentations of my motive, and conscious of the rectitude of my purposes, I shall record my vote for the preservation of the great principle that all government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed, and that because these resolutions violate that principle I shall vote against their passage.

I shall vote against their adoption because they will incorporate with the American people races which know not and can not learn our complex system of government.

I shall vote against their adoption because the governing of these races will initiate a departure from the principles of republican government by requiring the establishment in these islands of a government responsible to Washington and not to the people governed.

I shall vote against these resolutions because their adoption will be an abandonment of the Monroe doctrine and the inauguration of an oriental policy, with all its consequences, and for which our Government was not designed or constructed and with which it can not be administered.

I shall vote against these resolutions with the same integrity of motive which led this Congress to assure the world that this war was not for the acquisition of territory. And I shall vote against these resolutions because they are a practical violation of the Constitution when they transfer from the treaty-making power to the Congress a subject-matter now before the Senate in a treaty form and undetermined, and with which the Congress should have no connection until the treaty-making power has definitely acted.

Mr. TILLMAN obtained the floor.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, I desire to suggest the want of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). The Senator from Kentucky suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Faulkner,	McBride,	Pritchard,
Bacon,	Foraker,	Mallory,	Sewell,
Baker,	Frye,	Mantle,	Shoup,
Bate,	Gear,	Mason,	Sullivan,
Berry,	Hale,	Mills,	Teller,
Burrows,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Thurston,
Cannon,	Hansbrough,	Money,	Tillman,
Carter,	Hawley,	Morgan,	Turley,
Chilton,	Heitfeld,	Morrill,	Warren,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Pasco,	Wetmore,
Cullom,	Jones, Ark.	Perkins,	Wilson.
Davis,	Kyle,	Pettus,
Elkins,	Lindsay,	Platt, Conn.
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Platt, N. Y.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is therefore present, and the Senator from South Carolina will proceed.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, it is very irksome to me to undertake to read a speech, and during my service in the Senate I have only on two occasions reduced anything I had to say to writing. My purpose in now deviating from that general line of conduct has been to condense my remarks, to confine them to some of the essential features of this question which have not been discussed, rather than to trust myself to the discursive and expanding seductions, you might say, of an extemporaneous talk.

The consideration of this Hawaiian resolution has occupied the attention of the Senate almost uninterruptedly for ten days. There has been only one side heard thus far, and it seems from the temper of those who are in favor of annexation that only one side will be heard. It is very natural, after a matter has been discussed, you might say, extensively and exhaustively in executive session, that Senators should feel disinclined to listen to a repetition of speeches which they have once heard; but I have noticed one thing about the Senate: When only one side cares to discuss a question, and a majority is desirous of forcing a vote, there is always devilment afoot; there is immoral and improper pressure from some source that can alone force the Senate to sit still and not talk.

Senators love too well to speak—they love to hear themselves, to see their names in the papers, to see their speeches in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and to send them home—to sit silently by and hear a question of this vast moment discussed without participating in it, unless there is something rotten in Denmark.

I shall be compelled, in order to make anything like a symmetrical argument, to travel over some of the ground which has already been traversed by others who have preceded me, because the side of the question on which I am enlisted in this debate, owing to the form of the discussion, has been exhaustively and ably presented in some of its phases. But I propose, if I can, to provoke debate, to coerce at least an announcement of policy, if I can not get a discussion in extenso of the vital phases of the question.

I shall not attempt to go into the legal aspect of the case because being only a layman, a farmer, and knowing little of law or its science I would be laughed at by the able lawyers on both sides here. Nevertheless, layman though I be, I claim to be able to interpret the English language and I believe I can determine the truth in regard to a legal proposition with perhaps more clearness than a hair-splitting attorney who has always been enlisted in court for some special side of a proposition.

Therefore I announce as my fixed belief that the proposition to annex a sovereignty by joint resolution as territory, not admit it as a State, is unconstitutional; and that must have been the view of the Committee on Foreign Relations, as is shown by the fact that the committee originally brought in this question in the shape of a treaty. The treaty met their approval, and they presented it to the Senate for action, and they only resort to the present form of action by resolution after they have failed to obtain the constitutional two-thirds vote and are determined to have majority rule here without regard to the Constitution.

That that must have been the view not only of the committee but of the Administration itself is shown by the memorandum which accompanied the treaty when sent by the President, from which I will read a brief extract. After rehearsing the various forms of alliances, commercial unions, reciprocity, and Zollverein systems for mutual benefit between nations, Mr. Sherman, who was then Secretary of State, declared in reporting the treaty to the President:

There remained, therefore, the annexation of the islands and their complete absorption into the political system of the United States as the only solution satisfying all the given conditions and promising permanency and mutual benefit. The present treaty has been framed on that basis, thus substantially reverting to the original proposal of 1893, and necessarily adopting many of the features of that arrangement. As to most of these the negotiators have been constrained and limited—constrained and limited by the constitutional powers of the Government of the United States.

Mark the words—

For the information of Senators who may have forgotten the language I quote the whole paragraph:

We have had with Hawaii since 1875 a treaty of commercial union, which practically assimilates the two territories with regard to many of their most important productions, and excludes other nations from enjoyment of its privileges, yet, although that treaty has outlined other less-favored reciprocity schemes, its permanency has at times been gravely imperiled. Under such circumstances, to enter upon the radical experiment of a complete commercial union between Hawaii and the United States as independently sovereign, without assurance of permanency and with perpetual subjection to the vicissitudes of public sentiment in the two countries, was not to be thought of.

Turning, then, to the various practical forms of political union the several phases of a protectorate an offensive and defensive alliance, and a national guaranty were passed in review. In all of these the independence of the subordinated state is the distinguishing feature, and with it the assumption by the paramount state of responsibility without domain. The disparity of the relative interests and the distance separating the two countries could not fail to render any form of protective association either unduly burdensome or illusory in its benefits, so far as the protecting state is concerned, while any attempt to counteract this by tributary dependence or a measure of suzerain control would be a retrograde movement toward a feudal or colonial establishment alike inexpedient and incompatible with our national policy.

There remained, therefore, the annexation of the islands and their complete absorption into the political system of the United States as the only solution satisfying all the given conditions and promising permanency and mutual benefit. The present treaty has been framed on that basis, thus substantially reverting to the original proposal of 1893, and necessarily adopting many of the features of that arrangement. As to most of these the negotiators have been constrained and limited by the constitutional powers of the Government of the United States. As in previous instances when the United States has acquired territory by treaty, it has been necessary to reserve all the organic provisions for the action of Congress.

If this was requisite in the case of the transfer to the United States of a part of the domain of a titular sovereign, as in the cession of Louisiana by France, of Florida by Spain, or of Alaska by Russia, it is the more requisite when the act is not cession, but union, involving the complete incorporation of an alien sovereignty into the body politic of the United States. For this the only precedent of our political history is found in the uncompleted treaty concluded during President Grant's Administration, November 29, 1890, for the annexation of the Dominican Republic to the United States. Following that example, the treaty now signed by the plenipotentiaries of the United States and the Republic of Hawaii reserves to the Congress of the United States the determination of all questions affecting the form of government of the annexed territory, the citizenship and elective franchise of its inhabitants, and the manner in which the laws of the United States are to be extended to the islands.

Here it is clearly set forth that there are constraints and constitutional limitations, and the conclusion is inevitable that the Cabinet, which must have considered and carefully weighed every word in that important document before it was submitted to us, held that view. I am aware that the then Secretary of State has been retired from the Cabinet for alleged reasons which I shall not mention, and therefore there may be an intimation on the part of some that they disclaim any responsibility for his utterances. But the Cabinet considered this matter—the Attorney-General, the able lawyers in the employ of the Government—there was consultation, and there never was any proposition, never any thought, of attempting annexation by resolution until the failure to ratify the treaty.

We will doubtless have here sophistical and hair-splitting arguments (I hope we will, at least) from the other side as to why they changed front and began a new line of action, but the fact remains that it is only a resort to unconstitutional methods which the majority will force upon this body and upon the country under the plea that the majority must rule in this country.

Mr. President, in every instance the United States has acquired territory it has been by purchase or conquest, for California was practically a conquered territory, and we only paid a certain amount of money as a matter of decency; and all of the territory which we have acquired, except Alaska, has been right at our doors and was virgin, occupied only by the aboriginal savages, except a few scattered Spaniards and Mexicans, not enough to make one to the square mile of the area which we acquired by treaty. The only exception is Texas. We admitted it as a sovereign State under the constitutional power of Congress to do so, and we admitted it after the people of that State had had the right given to them to pass upon it by ballot.

It is unfortunate that the question of motive has been brought in here and those who oppose this annexation scheme have been lectured and twitted by some of our colleagues on this floor and slandered and lied about by the newspapers friendly to the scheme on the outside. And while it is a delicate matter to discuss the question of motive, I feel at liberty to say something on that subject. Upon their face the motives of those urging annexation may be considered honorable and patriotic. Annexation is advocated "because Hawaii is the key to the Pacific;" "because it is necessary for the defense of our Pacific coast;" "because of its use as a naval and military base, and because it would command the Nicaraguan Canal, if built."

These are the principal reasons assigned. The opponents of the measure are taunted as lacking patriotism for failure to support the Administration in reinforcing Admiral Dewey; with being "in sympathy with the sugar trust," and some of the penny-antliners, who have been so industriously urging annexation, boldly charge that those who opposed it were traitors and corruptionists. Mr. President, what are the facts and with what degree of plausibility can such reasons be presented for the annexation of Hawaii?

For me to undertake to go into the four general propositions in favor of annexation would be to travel over ground already passed over and would consume much more time than I can give to it, for, fortunately for the Senate, if unfortunately for myself, I am speaking against time, having made engagements and arrangements to leave the city at 4.40. Therefore I have only limited time in which to present what I have to say; but I wish first to take up the question of the motive of the friends of annexation.

When I consider the mastery of the American sugar trust over the Senate and the House, as shown in the passage of the Dingley tariff law, I am forced into the belief that this trust is not opposed to annexation, and that its influence is at work among the ranks of those favoring annexation. If the American sugar trust could prevent an investigation into the charges against Senators who were under suspicion and were severely criticised by the newspapers all over the country, it would certainly be able to prevent annexation.

If it had sufficient influence to dictate the tariff law it wanted, is it not fair to suppose that it would have influence enough to defeat this resolution, if it were working to that end? What evidence can be produced to show that the trust is in any way endeavoring to defeat this resolution? If any such evidence exists, will those Senators who are ready to charge improper motives to this side produce it and stand out in the open and not skulk, as they are now doing? As far as the charge of obstructing the President and Admiral Dewey is concerned, that is equally as vague and untenable.

There is no man on this side who does not justify—at least I have heard of none, although I have not listened to all the speeches—who does not justify and is not ready to indorse the action of President McKinley in coaling our vessels at Honolulu and obtaining supplies for them going to Manila.

The Hawaiian Government has never declared neutrality, and it is at liberty to afford Spain the same accommodation if it should be in condition to require it. But as far as the military and naval exigencies are concerned the passage of this resolution is ex post facto. The die has been cast.

The islands have been raided, and in international law the obligation is already incurred. The President has used the islands for the purpose of war, and to-day we are practically in alliance, offensive and defensive, with the people of those islands; and what excuse can there be for saying we must annex them now?

There are two reasons apparent to the person acquainted with recent events for this clamor and pressure for annexation. The war with Spain has undoubtedly wrought a change in the minds of many in favor of annexation, but that influence alone will not explain nor is it responsible for all the pressure which is so apparent. The Army and Navy, of course, exert a powerful influence in behalf of annexation, but the Army and Navy alone would be powerless to effect the passage of this resolution at this time.

Now, as I claim to be actuated by pure motives and to have honesty of purpose as the only influences governing my own course, I dislike to cast imputations on the motives of others; but those who charge rottenness and corruption and lack of patriotism to our side must expect to be accused in turn if there is any evidence to warrant it. What are the facts? The sugar plantations upon the Hawaiian Islands are largely owned by capitalists and corporations in this country. How much of the stock in these concerns is owned by Senators and Congressmen or by those who employ Senators and Congressmen as attorneys I have no means of knowing, but I do know that in this morning's Post appeared a dispatch which I will read, as it throws a light like an electric flash light upon the true inwardness of the annexation scheme.

BIG RISE IN SUGAR STOCKS—EFFECT OF THE PASSAGE OF THE NEWLANDS RESOLUTION IN HAWAII—PLANTATION STOCK HELD AT $400 A SHARE, FOUR TIMES ITS PAR VALUE—EXTRA LEGISLATIVE SESSION NEEDED TO PERFECT ANNEXATION.

Those are the head lines. Here is the dispatch itself:

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.

The steamer Alameda this evening brought the following advices from Honolulu:

"HONOLULU, June 22.

"The annexation news has caused a tremendous rise in sugar stocks. Ewa plantation stock is held to-day at $400 a share, which is four times the par value. Other sugar stocks have risen in proportion.

"The Moano arrived at an early hour this morning with rigging dressed. She brought news for which these islands have watched and waited for months. She brought the news that annexation had triumphed in the House."

Sugar has always seemed to come into the Senate since I have been a member to debauch and disgrace it in the eyes of the American people. Here we have it again within less than a year after the passage of the infamous sugar schedule in the Dingley tariff act.

I have no hesitation in asserting the belief—I wish to God I had an opportunity to get a committee to prove it; I think I could prove it—that if this Hawaiian sugar trust were not interested in placing these plantations under the protection of the Stars and Stripes many a vote that has been or will be cast for this resolution would not have been obtained. The profits from the cultivation of sugar on the Hawaiian Islands are immense, and there has been a phenomenal development along this line since Hawaiian sugar was admitted free of duty under the reciprocity treaty. This combination of sugar planters dreads that a change of political parties or policies might bring about an abrogation of that treaty. They dread lest the small number of Americans, Germans, and English, who are less than 5 per cent of the population, might be unable to hold their grip upon power and be unable to protect their vast wealth, which has been absorbed or stolen from the natives. It is this dread that is at the bottom of this scheme.

I believe the President is honestly desirous of having the islands annexed solely to relieve him of the responsibility and criticism in connection with their use for our Army and Navy. I again put myself on record as believing in the honesty, the patriotism, the integrity, and the purity of William McKinley. But I believe that, honest and pure as he is, he has been duped by the conspirators who have taken advantage of the situation and who have urged him to force the Senate, as the House has been forced, into entering upon this dangerous experiment.

When I say the House has been "forced," I think I speak advisedly, because when THOMAS B. REED surrenders and puts himself on record as opposing a scheme, and when the vote comes the proposition is carried, it is evident that there has been a gigantic power exerted to control the House over his veto. The President's anxiety and a desire to signalize his Administration by a policy of colonial expansion, on the one hand, and the greed of the conspirators and their partners in this country who wish to safeguard their sugar plantations, acting and reacting upon each other, have produced the existing conditions; and an attempt is made to hurry the American people into a policy pregnant with dangers to the very life of this Republic.

Notwithstanding the American flag waves over but a very small part of the soil of the Philippine Islands and has only within the last week been planted on the soil of Cuba, already schemes of imperialism and of changing a righteous and holy war into one of conquest are rapidly assuming shape, and they have been given voice by the chosen mouthpiece and trusted lieutenant of the President.

In the Ohio State convention, which was held on the 21st of June, General GROSVENOR, who is recognized as the Administration leader in the House, used the following language:

It will be the policy of this Administration to plant the flag of the United States at Hawaii, to occupy it and fortify it and make it a part of the territory of the United States, and when the war is over we will then settle the question of what sort of a government we will have over there. [Enthusiastic cheering.]

Let us wait. It is not important to settle the status of the Philippine Islands now. It is not important to settle the character of the government, the stable government which we promise to Cuba. It is not proper just now to settle the status of Puerto Rico, for we have not got a soldier on the soil of Puerto Rico; but when the time comes, you know and I know and all the world knows that William McKinley, backed and supported by the Republicans of this country, backed and supported by the loyal and patriotic sentiments of the Democratic party of this country, will settle all these questions patriotically, wisely, and from the standpoint of American progress in the career that God has marked for us in the world. [Applause.]

I make no prognostication except this: I doubt very much whether you and I will live to see the day when, by order of a Republican Administration, and surely not by the order of McKinley's Administration, the starry banner of your country's glory shall be pulled down from any flagstaff where conquest of arms has placed it.

All of these utterances were greeted with prolonged and loud cheering. We know, of course, those of us who have been there, how the thing works; that the inspiration of conventions is largely a matter of a crank shaft; that the moving force which dictates the platform and announces the temporary chairmanship sets the machinery in motion. But, Mr. President, this plain and unmistakable declaration of a policy will mark a turning point in the destiny of this country. We are face to face with a crisis. But before I discuss this aspect of the question I wish to make myself clearly understood.

We are at war with Spain for a just cause. The provocation was great and the duty imperative. I voted for the war and am ready to sustain the Administration in every just way in prosecuting it to a speedy and glorious conclusion.

I do not object to the seizure of the Philippine Islands. I do not object to the seizure of Puerto Rico and all other Spanish islands. While the Spanish atrocities in Cuba and the treacherous assassination of the crew of the Maine were the causes of the war, I would have Spain not only driven from the Western Hemisphere, but, if possible, driven from every island in the ocean and confined to her own peninsula, and let her "stew there in her own grease." I would destroy her fleets and armies and plant the American flag wherever it is possible to carry it until Spain sues for peace. It is absurd to contend for any other policy.

It is idiotic and unpatriotic, for, being at war, it is our business as a nation to deal the most effective blows at our adversary that we can. But after the war is over and we have conquered and captured all these islands, what then? The wrongs committed by Spain in Cuba and the unfitness of Spain to administer government in colonial possessions, or even at home, would make it unwise and unjust that we should return any of the islands to that Government. Besides, the costs of the war will be enormous, comparatively speaking, and will fall upon the taxpayers of the United States, and it is natural and just to consider how we can best get the most compensation out of the war.

Notwithstanding the declaration of war solemnly pledges that this country will give liberty and independence to the Cubans, General GROSVENOR, before we have captured land enough to make a township, declares:

It is not important to settle the character of the government, the stable government, which we promise to Cuba.

When the declaration of war was being discussed in this Chamber the President's friends proclaimed that he was in favor of the independence of that island. But, Mr. President, the most remarkable exhibition of how this new fever which has seized upon our country has spread and has reached the brains and turned the heads of the most conservative and wisest of our statesmen is shown by the utterances of a Senator on this floor last week. He is a Senator for whom I have as great admiration as I have for any man, living or dead, for I believe his purity of purpose and his patriotism are not surpassed and never have been surpassed among our public men. I will read it:

Do the American people believe it?—

Believe what?—

If any people in the world are capable of maintaining colonies, it is a republic, or else a republic is a failure and monarchy or absolutism is better.

Then he went on to say:

No, Mr. President, they do not. I do not know what will be done when this war is over, but I will tell you what I believe, yet not wishing to take up and discuss mooted questions. I believe that wherever our flag flies by right of conquest or by the consent of the people who will let it be put up, there it will remain, and the party or the men who propose to take it down will reckon with the great body of the American people, who believe that it is the best flag and the best government, better calculated to bring peace and prosperity to men than any other flag and government under the sky.

The Senator who said that was very much enthused. He looked like a prophet of old looking down the vista of time. I watched his face. He was almost swept off his feet.

Five days later, when he had slept on it and thought it all over coolly and deliberately, he repeated it. Here is what he said:

Where the American soldier dies and is buried and the American flag is put up, I say there it will stay, and we will grapple with the great problem whether we are capable of managing colonies or not and try it; and if we fail, it will be the first time that the Anglo-Saxon race has failed when these great problems have been presented. It will be the first time that the American people have failed when great questions were presented to them to solve them properly and righteously and in the interest of their own people and the world.

Now, here is the last one of the four resolutions passed by Congress, which that Senator indited:

Fourth. That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

Mr. President, in view of this seeming contradiction or this direct and absolute contradiction of purpose, in view of the phase which the war has assumed before the war is well begun—

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes, sir; I will yield.

Mr. TELLER. There is absolutely no contradiction between what I have said and the fourth resolution. If the Senator understands that I meant that wherever our flag was put up over a dead soldier there it is to remain, that is not what I meant. I supposed the term "put up" had a greater force than that. It means where it becomes the symbol of the Government. That is what I mean. I have uttered no sentiment anywhere, properly understood, that is not entirely consistent with the fourth resolution, which, I want to say to the Senator, I still adhere to absolutely. If those people are capable of maintaining a government, that is what I want they shall do, and—

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator permit me right there? Why does he put in a condition that we know to be impossible?

Mr. TELLER. Does the Senator say that they are not capable of self-government?

Mr. TILLMAN. I say they are not, because I believe the race of Spaniards and negroes mixed that is capable of self-government does not exist to-day on the face of the earth.

Mr. TELLER. I do not want to intrude on the Senator, but in my judgment the people of Cuba who have been fighting Spain for three years are capable of maintaining a government. I have said that before in debate, and I say it now. If it shall be demonstrated that they are not, then I suppose the Senator will agree with me that in that case it will be our duty to maintain a government. But until that is done I shall adhere to the resolution I had the honor, in part at least, to draft and to present to the committee.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am glad to hear the Senator so far retrace his steps. I do not say that now in any offensive sense, because I believe the Senator is speaking with absolute loyalty to the truth and to his own conscience, and to what he said and thought and felt and feels, but the language he used on this floor has led the people of this country to think that he is in favor of letting the American flag, when it is once hoisted over Havana, stay there as the emblem of government. If the Senator disavows that feeling, and I believe now he has disavowed it conditionally—

Mr. TELLER. I want to say to the Senator that I have not disavowed it conditionally. I still adhere to it. I do not know whether those people are capable of self-government or not. If the Senator is right, then I think that we will put up our flag and keep it there. What I meant to say, and what I mean to say now, is that we are not going to abandon those people to the tender mercies of Spain, neither in the Philippine Islands, nor in Cuba, nor Puerto Rico, nor anywhere else.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator meant that, we should have no quarrel, because I join hands with him in the proposition that Spain is unfit to govern anything anywhere. The only question that concerns us is what we, as a great nation, will do when we have driven Spain from this continent. But the declaration which the Senator put in says:

That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

The history of the Spanish-American republics which have revolted from Spain and gained their independence has been that of continual insurrection and revolution against the established order of things. It takes those people almost a century to rise to the higher plane where men are capable of self-government. That is fully well understood and known as an historical fact. If there were a condition attached to our occupation of the islands after we have driven the Spaniards out other than to make them get out and stay out and then leave the island to its own fate and to the intelligence and honesty or dishonesty of its own people, we have acted in bad faith with the world.

No one can hesitate to believe that such utterances as the Senator has made and such utterances as the member from Ohio, General GROSVENOR, has made will excite distrust, and have already excited the distrust of European nations, who are standing and looking on at Manila. Germany, with her seven war ships, seems ready to say, "If you propose to belie your professions and intend to reach out and become land grabbers and conquerors, and seize territory and peoples under the pretense of humanitarianism, we expect to have something to say and to get a part of the booty." That is the inevitable consequence of any such utterance here or any such attitude on the part of the leaders of thought in this country. And if by such action we become embroiled with Germany, who will be responsible?

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to say who I think will be responsible?

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator will just let me get through with my sentence, I will give way to him in a minute. I for one am ready to serve notice on all the European nations combined that "this is our business; you keep your hands and mouths out of it." The Senator does not differ from me in that, because I know he said so on this floor and he meant it, and I say it and mean it.

Mr. TELLER. I agree to that.

Mr. TILLMAN. Now, if the Senator wants to interrupt me, I will yield to him.

Mr. TELLER. If everybody will say what the Senator has just said, there will be no trouble in Manila with Europeans. If we stick to that and give them and the world to understand that this is our business and we will settle it, and will brook no interference on the part of anybody, there will be no interference. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. But I want to say further in the discussion of this question that if it was the policy of this country to reach out and absorb what we might take in arms as a matter of conquest, and if those colonies are to become integral parts of the United States, we ought to have said it before the war commenced. There was a large party in the House and in this body who were in favor of ambiguous declarations and who kicked like mules at this fourth resolution. They were annexationists pure and simple. They were greedy land grabbers, ignoring the fact that sometimes men bite off more than they can chew, and a great many of us swallow more than we are able to digest.

I do not hesitate to say that if that specific declaration had been made, no declaration of war would have been had, for I, and I believe many others, would not have voted to embroil this country in war with any country to have brought under our flag the islands inhabited by the heterogeneous mass of ignorant and debased specimens of mankind who are now being absorbed and embraced in the imaginations of men as a future part of the American Republic.

Mr. President, my objection to the annexation of Hawaii at this time is that it is the entering wedge, as some have said, the beginning, the first step downward. We all know after we start downhill how hard it is to stop. It is like the first step in crime of any kind; it is the step that counts and that can not be retraced. We are to annex under this resolution one group of these islands with only 6,700 white men, women, and children on them and 103,000—well, I do not know what they are properly called; I will just simply say colored people. They are aliens in blood, aliens in language, aliens in thought and feeling. They have had the virus of Spanish misgovernment injected into their blood and bones, and we are to become the pacificators, the civilizers, to take in this kind of people and make good citizens of them.

Some Senators want to make that a stepping-stone to the annexation of the Philippines afterwards, the fulcrum by which they will move public opinion later on. Give a little morsel to the imagination of our people in the way of territorial expansion and then the appetite, like that of the opium eater, will never be satisfied.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator from South Carolina indulge me a moment?

Mr. TILLMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I am very much gratified by the statement made to-day by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], because we, in common with the Senator from South Carolina, had misunderstood him. I desire to read from the Senator's speech made in this Chamber on last Saturday the clause which misled me; and I desire to say that in reading it I simply do it for my justification, because I had understood the Senator to be in favor of appropriating as colonies territory which we might conquer in the course of the war. This is the paragraph to which I allude. It is on page 7109 of last Saturday's RECORD. I will read the sentence immediately preceding the part that struck me, because that particular sentence is to some extent a qualification of what follows, and it is due to the Senator that the entire paragraph should be read. It is as follows:

If some newspaper writer has suggested it, no statesman will; and if he did, the American people would declare we have not sacrificed our men in Manila for the purpose of returning the islands to Spain or trading them off to anybody else. Where the American soldier dies and is buried and the American flag is put up, I say there it will stay, and we will grapple with the great problem whether we are capable of managing colonies or not and try it; and if we fail, it will be the first time that the Anglo-Saxon race has failed when these great problems have been presented. It will be the first time that the American people have failed when great questions were presented to them to solve them properly and righteously and in the interest of their own people and the world.

Mr. President, let us meet it, etc.

Mr. TELLER. I hope the Senator does not now understand that I have taken that back.

Mr. BACON. I understood the Senator to say that—

Mr. TELLER. If we establish a government in the Philippine Islands we will not take down our flag.

Mr. BACON. I understand that to mean that the Senator believes—

Mr. TILLMAN. If Senators will allow me, it is the question of what sort of disposition is to be made of all the Spanish islands, and Hawaii does not differ from them one iota either in the principle underlying the question or in the conditions. That I object to. That is what I am trying to have the Senate consider. That is why I stand here pleading for delay, pleading that the American people shall not be committed by a party composed of both parties here, because this is no party issue in the common acceptance of the term.

I am pleading, I say, that no party or majority of the Senate composed of both parties shall force upon us this policy at this time, but let us take up the whole question of colonization and absorption of outside territory and consider it after the war has progressed further, when we shall have had sufficient data and sufficient time for people to consider and think about it. That is what I am after. The absorption of Hawaii could wait until the war has progressed further. There are only a few people interested in the sugar plantations. Consequently the benefits in dollars and cents will come to only a few hundred American citizens, while the evils, which, in my judgment, are untold, will have to be borne by the entire mass of the people.

I have already shown that annexation is not necessary as a war measure. We have used the islands for a coaling station. We can use them again. We can continue to use them. Nobody will dare to interfere with us or with Hawaii because we have thus used them. There is no excuse for this rush and hurry and pressure unless, as I say, it comes from the President, who allows his advisers to persuade him to assist by his great power and patronage in controlling legislation for the benefit of the sugar planters.

Mr. FAULKNER. Will the Senator from South Carolina permit me to suggest a fact with which I suppose he is thoroughly acquainted? The minister of foreign affairs of Hawaii, in reply to the representative of Spain, distinctly stated that the coaling of our ships and the use and enjoyment of the territory of Hawaii by the United States forces was with the full concurrence and consent of that island, and he intimated that the protest suggested by the representative of Spain would not then or hereafter affect the position of the government at all in reference to that subject. So we are apprised officially that we have, as the Senator well says, all the benefits we ever can have by annexation so far as the existing war is concerned.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I am making an explanation of my own feeling on this question. I am responsible to nobody for that except my conscience and my constituents, which embrace the people of the United States. I do not stand here as a representative of South Carolina alone, but as an American citizen, loving the flag and the country as much as any man and solicitous for the future of this Republic.

If, after we have conquered the Philippines, and after the American people have had time to be heard from and to have Congress hear from them, it shall be found desirable that we shall annex the Philippines or control them as colonies, as a matter of course I will vote for the annexation of Hawaii then as a stopping place on the road to this other colony.

But, Mr. President, I do not want to see this grand and great Government occupy the attitude of a robber of a weak power. I do not want to see our humanitarian professions given the lie by its actions. I do not want to see the American flag floating over a strange people who have to be held down by the bayonet. I do not want to see a policy inaugurated which would require a large standing army. I do not want to see the principles of the Declaration of Independence trampled under foot and spit upon by those who have been loudest in proclaiming those glorious principles as their guide.

After we have conquered the Philippines and the last Spaniard has surrendered, if we do not wisely consider and act judiciously, it may be that the historian of the future will declare that Dewey's victory on that fateful 1st of May was the first step in a series of misfortunes which led to the overthrow of the American Republic. Right here I would like to press home one thought. Are the American people in need of more land or do they want more room; is our present area inadequate? To be answered the question needs but to be asked, for the merest tyro knows that the territory embraced in the United States is very sparsely settled.

There is ample room in our broad domains for 200,000,000 more of happy and prosperous people, provided we shall hold fast to the ideals of our fathers and transmit to our children unchanged the glorious Government which we have inherited.

Why do you want more land? Why do you want to go across the ocean to occupy islands inhabited by colored races? This greed for land, this reaching out for more territory, is not necessary for the purpose of industrial expansion and growth. We are not crowding each other yet, and before entering on and incorporating into our territory permanently conquered islands, inhabited by aliens in race and language, we should calmly consider what conditions and results will follow. The increase in the aggregate of national wealth by the absorption of this territory will prove a curse rather than a blessing to the masses of the people, and only the few will be the beneficiaries. The Philippines are already densely populated with races for which we have no affinity or liking. It is the same with Puerto Rico and in some degree with Cuba.

The reason why I speak as I do and try to say to the Senate "Halt!" is because I come from a Commonwealth where there are 750,000 negroes and only 500,000 whites, and for thirty years every thoughtful man in that Commonwealth has been lying awake at night thinking as to what would be the future of his children and how that race problem would be settled so as to preserve the Anglo-Saxon race in its purity, and not have the Government become corrupt and rotten and after a while the people be ridden to death and to despotism through the medium of the ignorance of men unfit to vote, even though you may educate them, simply because God Almighty made them inferior and lacking in moral fiber.

We have the negro question right here among us. It has perplexed and bedeviled Congress and the country for twenty-five years. What do you want to bring in another Pandora's box for and open it? The wisest statesmanship is unable to foresee the final result of the presence in the same Commonwealth of two distinct races, each possessing the same rights under the law, but one of which is superior to the other. Ultimate amalgamation appears inevitable unless the wisest statesmanship shall control our destinies.

In my State of South Carolina we have by constitutional amendment, as far as the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the National Constitution would permit us, disfranchised this ignorant mass and rid ourselves for the time being of danger. But the question of race stands there like a Sphinx confronting us, together with the fact of the education and qualification of the people as voters, to which we are committed because education is the basis of suffrage. We have to increase the school facilities to protect our own race—the whites—from disfranchisement, and the negroes get the benefit of it along with the others.

I was mainly instrumental in framing the present clause in the State constitution, the constitution which makes the educational qualification the basis of suffrage. I was equally anxious, and used what influence I possessed, to increase the school tax from 2 mills to 3 in the constitution and not leave it to the legislature. In addition to that, we give to the free schools every dollar which we derive from the sale of whisky in the State. So we are not trying in any un-Christian spirit to solve this question. But it is there; it faces us. Our knowledge of the negro teaches us that he is inferior, and he stands there creeping forward as he may increase in intelligence, or rather as he may gain the necessary educational qualifications, to act as the balance of power, the arbiter between contending white factions, each bidding for his debased vote, which they can buy as you would buy a bullock in the market.

I do not mean to say that such is the condition of the people of South Carolina now. Negro domination prevailed from 1868 to 1876. The consequence has been that the whites of my State have stood shoulder to shoulder amid all temptations to split. But look at Georgia, right across the river; look at North Carolina; look at Alabama. I do not mention these States in any spirit of opprobrium or complaint or criticism. I sympathize with them from the bottom of my heart, because they are to-day in the same condition with my State, with only a temporary relief from the specter of negro domination in the future.

With 8,000,000 negroes already among us, the adding of more colored peoples presents to a student of sociological and political questions a grave problem, a solemn responsibility. Can we afford to enter upon a scheme of colonial expansion by conquest, with the inevitable result that we will incorporate another million and a half of negroes, 10,000,000 Malays, Negritos, Japanese, and Chinese, to say nothing of the hundreds of thousands of mongrels of Spanish blood, imbued with Spanish thought and action?

Can we afford to do it? If we start in that direction by annexing Hawaii, we may have to afford it. The conditions when we annex Hawaii may compel us to do something along this line, but do not let us cross the bridge until we get to it; do not let us take the first step in the direction of annexation until we are compelled to consider the question as a whole. Let us agree to a full and free debate; and after it has been heard, or, if you please, wait until a day fixed in January next to vote on this proposition—then if the sober second thought of Senators and others is that we shall run this risk, that we shall inject this poisoned blood into the body politic, I will content myself with opposing it, unless there are conditions and guaranties which can be attached to the proposition which will leave this country, these United States, free from the dangers which are inevitable if the Hawaiian Islands become an integral part of our empire.

The gentleman from Ohio—and I am sorry to say that no Senator has been bold enough to announce to the Senate the policy of the Administration, so that I may refer to Senator So-and-So, and I have to go to the other end of the Capitol for a spokesman of this policy: I do not speak in any discourtesy to that gentleman, because I have the highest respect and admiration for him—Mr. GROSVENOR, declared what I have already stated to be the policy, and the newspapers reported that the President approved it, and we know that Mr. GROSVENOR would not have made those utterances unless he had consulted the President.

Therefore we may say that this is to be and is now the Administration policy; and I say again it can not be made a party question, for while a majority of the men who are opposed to this annexation scheme at this time appear to be Democrats, we have upon the other side reinforcements composed of men who are brave enough and bold enough and pure enough and high enough to stand up and say to their own party, "You are wrong," and to the President, "You are wrong; we can not support this measure and we will not;" and there are many of you who in your hearts do not want to support this measure, but feel constrained to do it because of the imaginary benefits to your party, because you are under the lash of the powers that be.

When we entered upon this war the belief was well-nigh universal that one or two naval battles, the bombardment of Havana, Santiago, and a few other Cuban cities, and the landing of a few thousand American troops would end the war.

The fact that we were misled by our overweening confidence in ourselves and in our prestige as a nation, the scope of the war and the time it will take to end it, how long it will take, how many men will have to be sacrificed before we have conquered Spain, will be no excuse after the war is over for us entering with as little forethought and with as great degree of blindness upon the dangerous and far-reaching question of what we will do with the islands and the people we have conquered.

Mr. President, this brings me—I have already run ahead of my manuscript, because you can not teach an old dog new tricks, and I despise as much as any man living to have my mind tied up with a thing like this; but I want to press home to you one thought. The Government of the so-called Republic of Hawaii has as its only foundation what? The imperial manhood of the Anglo-Saxon and the Teutonic races. A small handful of white men, who went there first as missionaries, and those who have gone there since for other purposes, or 6,700 of them all told, are the owners and rulers of those islands simply because they are a superior race, possessing the superiority of manhood and intellect which distinguishes one people from another. God made the difference, and human laws can not change it.

The transfer of the sovereignty from the so-called Republic of Hawaii to the United States, if it shall be annexed without other conditions than those imposed, seeks to protect the wealth which has been absorbed or stolen by these few white men. There is no other excuse for it. No European nation dare come in there and undertake to annex those islands. We have warned all the world away time and again, and made them get out. We are not weaker now than when we drove out England and France a half century or so ago.

We were told in executive session—somehow or other the friends of annexation are tender footed; they are solicitous to conceal from the people all the secrets which we let out to each other in our brotherly conferences behind closed doors—but we were told in the most emphatic terms that if we do not go forward and annex the islands England, or Germany, or Japan, or some other power would step in—and Japan was held up as the bugaboo—and that the white people there would be sacrificed. But, Mr. President, the pity of it is—I had almost said the disgrace of it is—that the men who stand here as the sponsors and aggressive leaders in this proposition are the men who have rung all the changes for twenty-five years on the proposition that all men, including the negro, are free and equal, and have a right to a free ballot and a fair count, and should have it in spite of the determined purpose of Southern white men to the contrary.

The Republican party, the great party of liberty, as they term themselves, the men who first discovered "the man and brother" as an equal, stand here to-day contradicting all their theories and professions up to this time, and say that the colored races in Hawaii have no rights that they are bound to respect; they say that they will take Hawaii under the protection of the Stars and Stripes and maintain a stable government there, notwithstanding the fact that 50,000 able-bodied men of the 100,000 people of the islands are to-day in a condition of slavery. Do you take them in to emancipate them? Then you will have to vote for the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], by which all of these contract laborers will be free from the conditions under which they were imported. Why do you not put that in the terms of annexation?

Mr. President, right here it is well to recall to the minds of some men whose memories are short a period in our history to which every patriot must revert with pain and sorrow. Thirty-seven years ago this country was plunged into the most bloody and costly war of which history has any record, if we except the Napoleonic wars, to prevent the extension of slavery into the Territories. The Republican party never contended, and did not dare to proclaim, that its purpose was to emancipate the slaves. It only proposed to curtail the area into which slavery should be extended. Yet here we are, thirty-three years after that war ended, being pressed by leaders of that very party to annex territory in which slavery exists, without any condition or any sort of condition, unless we shall force you to insert it as to the status of those slaves after annexation is accomplished; and the trusted lieutenant of the President simply says "It will be time enough to settle the question of what sort of government we shall have over Hawaii after the war is over."

What has Hawaii got to do with the war except the pretense, the flimsy pretense, that we need it as a coaling station? It is apart and away from the general question of the Spanish war. It came here before the war was thought of. These islands have been knocking at our door trying to get in under the protection of our flag for years, and I will explain their motives and their reasons. It is and has always been a wonder that we bought Pearl Harbor and allowed the sugar producers of Hawaii to bring in their sugar free, to that extent reducing our revenue. We have presented to those planters $72,000,000 of remitted duties on sugar since the time the reciprocity treaty went into effect.

No wonder they want to get into the Union. They want to perpetuate the conditions under which they shall have the American market for their sugar free of any possible duty in the future. The battle cry of the fathers of the Republican party was: "The Republic can not exist one-half slave and one-half free." The great martyr, the grand and glorious Lincoln, a man who in my youth I abhorred as the quintessence of tyranny and despotism, but who I have come to recognize as the greatest American of this century—if he were living, what would he say to this proposition? He declared: "I do not believe that this Government can exist half free and half slave."

No doubt you will free these contract slaves. If you do not, we of the South will force you to; and we propose to make you vote on this issue before this resolution is passed. I do not say "we" especially, because the Senator from South Dakota has prepared an amendment which is pending. You will have to vote on it. I claim no credit for it, but I simply stand here and say, as a representative of the South, that we will either have contract slaves in Louisiana and South Carolina, or no part of the United States or any of the territory annexed shall have them.

This new doctrine, which only exemplifies the hypocrisy and shallow pretensions of the Republican party in regard to the colored races, will be fought against bitterly at the South. Even we do not want any contract laborers in the South other than those who have the right to make a new contract at the end of the year; and even if they break a contract in the middle of the year and leave us, the punishment is very light, and in most States there is no punishment at all.

Mr. MASON. May I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MALLORY in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. TILLMAN. I will be very glad to hear him.

Mr. MASON. Do you favor the continuance of that system of contract labor in Hawaii?

Mr. TILLMAN. I have just declared I did not, but I serve notice on those who are advocating the annexation of these islands without abrogating that system that we will fight you to the death, or we will have equality on the question of contract laborers. If you are going to have them when you annex the Hawaiian Islands, we will have them in our States too.

Mr. MASON. Is there any prospect of their having any freedom or liberty under the present situation if left as they are?

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not say so. It is not in the resolution.

Mr. MASON. You propose to leave them as they are by voting against annexation.

Mr. TILLMAN. I propose to vote for the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota. I will discuss that a little later if the Senator will just wait and possess his soul in patience.

Mr. MASON. All right.

Mr. TILLMAN. I said that the battle cry of the fathers of the Republican party was: "The Republic can not exist one-half slave and one-half free." The slave driver's whip and cruelty perpetrated upon the defenseless African by the white men of the South was the inspiration of the abolition orators. Toussaint L'Ouverture, the negro patriot who drove the French from Haiti, became the hero of Whittier's verse, and the "man and brother," although his skin was black, has had his wrongs told in song and story as an appeal for liberty, justice, and equality.

But, Mr. President, within a short time, the term of one man's life, we have seen the very men who witnessed the bloody drama of the civil war, in which over half a million white men of American blood lost their lives—one side contending for slavery and the other side fighting for the Union and against slavery, and of which war slavery was the cause—we hear the very men who participated in it, and who have since dwelt upon the wrongs inflicted upon the enfranchised blacks of the South, now telling us that it will be time enough to consider this question after the war is over. These very men are here to-day urging this great Government to assist white conspirators in Hawaii, who are robbing the natives of their wealth and rights, who drive men with slave whips, to get these islands incorporated into our territory under conditions which would have made Lincoln blush.

But, Mr. President, I am no hypocrite; and while I oppose, and will continue to oppose, any proposition which recognizes contract slavery anywhere, I want to say I sympathize with this handful of white men over there in the middle of the Pacific, for blood is thicker than water, and my blood is as pure Anglo-Saxon as any man's; and the cardinal faith of my life, which can not be whipped out of me, can not be driven out of me, and can not be coaxed out of me, is that the Anglo-Saxon is superior to the African or to any other colored people, and is alone capable of self-government.

I will vote for the annexation of Hawaii upon one condition, and that is that you incorporate in this resolution a statement in words that the government there shall be extended only to and participated in by those with white blood in their veins. You will be driven to that at last. If you intend to absorb all these islands you might just as well start there first, and get rid of your pretensions of love of man and universal equality.

Mr. MASON. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. MASON. What proportion of white blood do you insist on having—what percentage?

Mr. TILLMAN. I would like to have it mighty near all white. [Laughter.] I have noticed in my country that the more white blood in the colored race the meaner the men generally are. They inherit all the vices of both of their ancestors and none of their virtues.

Mr. ALLEN. Can that be done under our Constitution?

Mr. TILLMAN. I am just pointing out and asking these gentlemen to consider the condition to which they are bringing us.

Mr. ALLEN. We have a constitutional amendment prohibiting what the Senator suggests.

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes; I will come to that if the Senator will permit me. I want to call attention to the political aspect of this case. This new doctrine of white supremacy has come from such a strange source and had such a strange birth that I wish to welcome the author of the force bill and his colleagues, for there are a few of them here, who a few years ago were pressing with all their might, but in dumb silence, the same character of a proposition which you are now pressing.

You did not speak on it; you had a majority; but nothing but the patriotism and the wisdom of this man [pointing to Senator TELLER], who was then a Republican, but who has been compelled to quit his party because of its iniquities, saved us from that condition which would have reopened all the fires of sectional hate, race hate, and every other kind of iniquity which the Southern people have had to perpetrate upon the negroes to preserve white supremacy, which was essential to good government—I say I want to welcome those gentlemen of the very majority, which then pressed without speaking in defense of it, to this new doctrine of Republicanism, that all men are created free and equal provided they are away from home. [Laughter.]

You love the colored race according to the square of the distance. You do not give them any offices in your own States, but you have at last come, by reason of stress or distress in which this handful of Anglo-Saxons in Hawaii are placed, to say, "We have been wrong. We have been mistaken. The negro is not equal to the white man. The Kanakas are not equal to white men. The Japanese are not equal to white men. The Chinese are not equal to white men. The Portuguese are not equal to white men;" and

I want to welcome the gentlemen into the ranks of the new party which you must form if we annex any of these Spanish islands, and you will be forced to declare that the Constitution of the United States does not extend to conquered territory.

We can stand Hawaii, possibly, annexed as an integral part of the country, but God forbid that we should take the other ten or twelve millions of people of mixed blood, who are being prepared to be swallowed, or rather whom the land grabbers are preparing this nation to swallow. At any rate, you will be compelled, if you do annex those islands, to have one rule of conduct for people in the United States and another rule of conduct for people conquered by the United States, and you can not help it, or else you will have conditions confronting you of which you know nothing; yet I, as a native and inhabitant of the Southern States, where this race problem has been confronting us for a generation, of which I know a great deal, beg you to pause and consider calmly what you will do about it.

But here again is Mr. GROSVENOR, and this same gentleman said not more than two months ago in the House of Representatives, in a contested-election case from Virginia—now, listen. Oh, this is sweet; this is nice; this is the old-time Republican slogan:

Mr. GROSVENOR. Slavery was the crime of a nation, of the whole country—North and South responsible alike. Then came the great rebellion. Four long years of war, fighting for what? The principle that all men are created free and equal and that in America every man should have a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

This great conflict was carried on to preserve the nation, to liberate a people. Four millions of human beings in manacles, and you enabled a race to uphold its hands in the free air without a chain. The colored man was a slave; you made him a citizen.

The great victory for human rights, the greatest of all the years, was won. Liberty was national; slavery was dead.

Liberty means universal education, light for every mind, knowledge for every child. It means that the ballot box is the ark of the covenant, and that this source of authority must not be poisoned. It means that the citizen of the Second Congressional district of the State of Virginia, native or otherwise, must be protected in his right to cast his ballot and to have it counted by honest, unprejudiced, fair-minded men.

Mr. President, if that is good doctrine for the people of the South, who live where the colored race preponderate or even come nearly up in numbers to the white people, why is it not good doctrine all the way through? If it is good for the negro, why is it not good for the Hawaiian? Why do you deny the Kanakas and other colored people over there the right to say whether by a vote they want to be incorporated, as you did in the case of Texas?

Well, there is one scheme by which we can get out of this difficulty. We can govern Hawaii and govern all these islands in the way we govern Washington—by a commission, by a denial of the right of suffrage to the whites and blacks alike, by proconsuls or deputy presidents or governors, appointed "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

Everybody knows the reason why Washington was given the kind of government it has. It was because, when the negroes were allowed to vote here, such a condition was reached that you soon saw that you could not afford it. You can govern those islands by commission. Possibly the Supreme Court, which is very wise, may evolve from its inner consciousness some rule of law or constitutional interpretation—I think it would be permissible, poor a lawyer as I am—that conquered territory has not the right of a State or of the United States; but here are the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, and the question to be solved, which I want you gentlemen to think about, is as to the condition of the territory which you annex or conquer.

If the Supreme Court shall declare that the fifteenth amendment, which gives to all persons 21 years of age citizenship, and forbids their disfranchisement on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, does not apply to a conquered territory, the question is solved. We can then legislate in an intelligent way as to the future of these islands. We can provide a system of government. That will furnish lots of fat places for administrative officers; it will furnish lots of room for exploitation and absorption of wealth. It will furnish a chance for new carpetbaggers.

Perhaps some of my friends will get a few offices, even from a Republican President. I have had a few lately. I do not know whether I have been in great luck or not. I have been harassed and bedeviled for six weeks, more than I have been in all the rest of my official life, by men I know who have been begging me to go to the President or to the War Department or some other place and try to get them places. Everybody down there wants to be a general or a captain or a major or something else. We have some difficulty in getting enough privates, but there are always enough men seeking offices to form a regiment any time.

I say, Senators, this is not a light thing we are doing. The legal aspect of the case must be considered calmly by you gentlemen who are responsible and who take the responsibility and who press forward the measure. You can not deal with these colored people like you deal with the Southern colored people, where there are in all of the States enough white men to see that Anglo-Saxon supremacy is maintained in spite of any and all obstacles. You yourselves have receded, and I hear nothing—thank God, you have grown more liberal and wise—about an attempt to control elections by Federal election laws.

But the gentleman from Ohio says there must be a free vote and a fair count in Virginia. I say in that case give the Hawaiian colored people the same measure that you mete out to the negroes of the South, and do not give to the white men of Hawaii, your brethren, a different measure than you mete out to those of us in the South who are citizens, who are descendants of the Revolutionary sires who founded this country, and who love it as well as you do. It is not a light matter; it is not a question to be shoved aside and pressed through to a vote blindly. It needs to be considered calmly and in all its bearings, and in its legal aspect especially.

The advocates of annexation can not shirk the responsibilities which they are seeking to incur without seeming to realize what they are doing. They can not afford to ignore the race question. They can not refuse to discuss the future status of the colored races on these islands. Under the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution, the moment the islands are annexed their inhabitants become citizens of the United States.

Under the same fifteenth amendment, you can not deny them the right to vote unless you deny it to the white men in those islands, unless, as I said, the Supreme Court shall evolve some new interpretation of law, which I believe it is capable of doing, because it sees the necessities of the case. It reversed itself on the greenback decision. It will reverse itself on the income-tax proposition sooner or later. It has declared the South Carolina constitution constitutional, by which we limited the suffrage to 14,000 colored people in the State who are able to read and write and therefore to be voters.

But the question must be settled by that court or the Congress as to what will be the legal status and the condition of suffrage as soon as this annexation proposition goes through. There are limitations on it in the resolution. Here is an extract:

Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing Government in said islands shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct.

Then it goes on to say:

The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian Islands, not enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Therefore the present Hawaiian laws, except wherein they are opposed to or are repugnant to the Constitution, govern the franchise. These crudities, contradictions, and inconsistencies must provoke discussion outside of the Senate if not inside. You are doing what you do not know and have not thought of.

The majority now in Congress is acting as though the Constitution was never intended to hamper or restrict or control its action. But the Supreme Court has declared that the fifteenth amendment protects every man against discrimination on account of race or color. However, there is another aspect of this case. Our fundamental principle of government, that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, is ignored and is being ignored and will continue to be ignored.

I see that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] looks so often at the clock and I know he is so anxious for me to stop, although I have been speaking only an hour and a quarter, that I will briefly allude to one other phase of this question and then I will close.

It is as far-reaching, as important, as dangerous as the race question. It is the effect on the laboring classes in the United States of the annexation of this large colored population elsewhere, slaves in thought and feeling, with an inherited slavery of centuries, Malay, Chinese, Japanese. You will annex enough sugar lands not only to supply all the sugar we want or can use, but to supply all other countries as well, under the inspiration of Anglo-Saxon brains and capital, but Anglo-Saxon brains and capital can only be benefited to a limited degree by the exploitation of these colonies, if they are annexed, which are already occupied and in which there will be no room for white men, except to boss, and you will flood this country with the products of the labor of those colored people to the unending detriment and wrong of the white and black laborers of this country who are here, the first of whom it is our duty to protect and the last of whom we can not get rid.

The sugar industry wherever it exists or is trying to struggle into existence, the beet-sugar industry in the West, and the cane-sugar industry in the South will be absolutely annihilated because of the unfair conditions of the competition. You certainly can not expect or hope or intend to extend to those islands the Dingley tariff or any other protective tariff which will leave it as a market for the products of our factories and then exclude the products of factories that may go there or be established there from this country as competitors with ours with their cheap labor, the manufacture of everything which is now protected in this country being driven out and the mills and other factories of the North and South being closed up in consequence.

You are threatening a policy which will utterly destroy or very greatly injure not only the agricultural population of the South and West, but the manufacturing population of the North; and for whose benefit? Not the laborers' benefit; but for the benefit of a few thousand planters who will go there under the protection of a standing army and exploit and introduce their industries, using cheap labor, increasing the products that must come into competition with ours.

There is time, gentlemen, yet to pause. There is time to consider. This vote has not come. There are those of us here who never want to see it come, but I will agree, and I think others will agree, to a day being fixed next January when we will take a vote, giving you time to have a second thought of the matter, giving you time to investigate it further. As I said, I am willing to vote for annexation if you will provide for conditions which will insure us against the admission of Senators or Members of the House representing States like mine where the colored people are counted, but do not vote.

We have got enough perplexity from race problems in the United States without inducting any other additional problems of this kind into the body politic. Let us wait and think and see. We have not got the Philippines yet. We may not have to bother with them, although it looks very much like that. I confess I think we will pull the Spanish flag off the islands for fun, if for nothing else. But the question is what to do with them. The question is what to do with the Hawaiian Islands now, which is the beginning. Senators, stop and think. Agree to a postponement. Let us stop here and go home and come back next December. No harm can result to any American interest.

The sugar planters in Hawaii may and no doubt will cry, the owners of sugar stock will lament, the attorneys and lobbyists who are around here pressing and urging a vote will kick; but let us rise to the height of statesmanship, let us legislate for the whole country and not for the interests of a few. Let us not forget that when Bishop Berkeley a hundred and fifty years ago declared—

Westward the course of empire takes its way;
The four first acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day;
Time's noblest offspring is the last.

Mr. HOAR rose.

Mr. TILLMAN. I can see from the expression of the Senator from Massachusetts that I probably have not quoted the verse with absolute correctness. I will be glad if the Senator from Massachusetts will give me the exact words just as Bishop Berkeley wrote them.

Mr. HOAR. I merely wish to say that I think my honorable friend the Senator from South Carolina has got Bishop Berkeley's words as near right as he did the Constitution.

Mr. TILLMAN. Perhaps I have got the Constitution wrong, but the Senator from Massachusetts and his colleagues have got the Republican party very badly off its bearings, and I will be glad to see him help to bring it back to the doctrine that all men, including the Kanaka, are born free and equal and are entitled to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and not undertake to induct them into this Government or under its flag in a condition of semislavery or actual slavery.

The course of empire has reached the Pacific. Now, shall it go on and tread on the heel of the despotisms of Asia? Shall we attempt to enter upon lands already occupied and attempt the impossible, that is, to put side by side on equality the civilization of the American Republic and the effete and dead civilization of Asia? That is the problem. I beg pardon of the Senate for having so long trespassed upon its time.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from South Carolina if he has read the dispatch in this morning's Post in regard to the rise in Hawaiian sugar stock?

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, that shows the injury that is done by not having Senators in their seats listening to a speech. I have not only read it myself, but I have read it to the Senate.

Mr. ALLEN. I beg pardon.

I desire to have inserted in the RECORD a dispatch found in this morning's Post in regard to the rise in Hawaiian sugar stock.

Mr. TILLMAN. It has already been put into the RECORD.

Mr. ALLEN. I will put it in again.

Mr. TELLER. I suggest that the Senator from South Carolina has put it in his speech.

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes; I have already inserted it.

Mr. ALLEN. But it will not hurt to have it go in twice.

The dispatch referred to is as follows:

BIG RISE IN SUGAR STOCKS—EFFECT OF THE PASSAGE OF THE NEWLANDS RESOLUTION IN HAWAII—PLANTATION STOCK HELD AT $400 A SHARE, FOUR TIMES ITS PAR VALUE—EXTRA LEGISLATIVE SESSION NEEDED TO PERFECT ANNEXATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29, 1898.

The steamer Alameda this evening brought the following advices from Honolulu:

"HONOLULU, June 22, 1898.

"The annexation news has caused a tremendous rise in sugar stocks. Ewa plantation stock is held to-day at $400 a share, which is four times the par value. Other sugar stocks have risen in proportion.

"The Moana arrived at an early hour this morning with rigging dressed. She brought news for which these islands have watched and waited for months. She brought the news that annexation had triumphed in the House.

"The passage of the annexation resolution by Congress will not perfect annexation. It is a fact that the resolution will have to pass both houses of the Hawaiian Legislature before it can have effect. This will necessitate an extra session for the special purpose, as it will be impossible to get the official papers in hand from Washington before the present session expires by limitation. If telegraphic news arrives of the final passage of the resolution before the session closes, the members will simply wait in Honolulu for the proclamation calling the present session together.

"No; I do not think the Newlands resolution will be rejected by the Hawaiian Legislature," said President Dole this morning with a smile."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. H. L. OVERSTREET, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6896) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8428) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,
EUGENE HALE,
A. P. GORMAN,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,

JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, there were a great number of differences between the two Houses on this bill, and several conferences have been held respecting those differences. Some days ago the differences narrowed down to five amendments, one being a total depending upon the others. We have held two conferences on the disagreeing votes covering those amendments. The last one disclosed the fact that the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives were unwilling to recede from their disagreement or in any way to compromise or compose those differences. These amendments were all put on in the Senate. With the exception of the last one, No. 233, relating to the appointment of district attorneys, they were not legislative amendments, but were amendments affecting the public service and appropriations. The last one, No. 233, being one of legislation, the conferees on the part of the Senate were willing to surrender.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What is that amendment?

Mr. ALLISON. An amendment relating to the appointment of an attorney in the District of Columbia. We were ready to yield that amendment not only because it was legislation, but because at a very recent date the Senate passed a bill on the same subject in conflict with the amendment proposed by the Senate in the appropriation bill.

The first of the amendments in disagreement is amendment No. 13, which provided for a public building in the city of Annapolis, in the State of Maryland, that being, with one exception, the only capital city in any State of this Union without a public building. It was not and is not unusual to place appropriations of this character upon the sundry civil bill.

Mr. LINDSAY. What was the amount proposed to be appropriated?

Mr. ALLISON. One hundred and twenty thousand dollars. We proffered, however, to make a reduction of that amount.

Mr. LINDSAY. It is a very small amount.

Mr. ALLISON. Maryland is one of the oldest States, and is the only State in the Union practically without a public building at its capital city.

We also placed upon the bill a provision for a building in the city of Butte, Mont., a city lying upon the western slope of the Rocky Mountains, the largest city in the State of Montana, having a population of more than 50,000, and growing rapidly, a city in which the courts of the United States are regularly held, having a large postal revenue, and where we are paying large rents for the use of buildings for the United States. These two public buildings the House conferees and the House would not assent to.

The next amendment was No. 186, being an appropriation for Yaquina Bay, in the State of Oregon, on the Pacific coast, an improvement authorized by the river and harbor law of 1895, included within what is called the contract provisions of that statute, and one of the appropriations which were required to be made by that statute, being of a similar character to some twenty or twenty-five appropriations in the bill. It was authorized by law, as I have said, and was provided for especially in the manner I have stated. That appropriation was rejected by the House.

The next amendment was No. 231, being an amendment for a Soldier's Home at Hot Springs, in the State of South Dakota, a Home in the nature of a sanitarium for the old soldiers who could best find a home there, and a place where their ills might be mitigated if not cured. Like appropriations have frequently appeared on these appropriation bills, not put on by the Senate, but put on by the House itself. This the House refused to agree to.

These are the appropriations that remain to be disposed of before the sundry civil bill becomes a law, this being the last day of the fiscal year. The House having twice refused to consider favorably these amendments or to allow proposals of modification of either or any of them to be made, in the last conference practically refusing to consider any such modification, it becomes the duty of the Senate, in my belief, in order that the bill may be disposed of before the expiration of the fiscal year, which is to-night at midnight, to recede from those amendments put on by the Senate and which have for so long a time been adhered to.

Therefore I move that the Senate recede from its amendments Nos. 13, 14, 186, 231, 233, and 233, which, when receded from, will pass the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLAY in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Iowa, that the Senate recede from its amendments Nos. 13, 14, 186, 231, 233, and 233.

Mr. GORMAN. I do not believe that such a spectacle has ever before been witnessed in this Chamber or in the other. The rule, and the only rule, is that conference committees shall meet for the purpose of adjusting the differences between the two Houses; and the old rule and the better one, the one that I hope will be reinaugurated, is that no conference report upon a disagreement between the two Houses on one of its bills shall ever be considered until that report is complete.

But, following the custom of the last few years, with a view to expedite matters, we have had on this bill three or four different reports adjusting a part of the differences on each report until finally we reached the stage when there were only five items of disagreement open, whereupon the two Houses reappointed the conferees and we held a conference, that is to say, we met, on the last day but one of the fiscal year, in the consideration of an appropriation bill carrying $55,000,000 necessary for the orderly conduct of the business of the Government beginning with to-morrow, and the coordinate branch, represented by its agents upon the committee, blandly said to us, "You must recede from every amendment the Senate has made to the bill which is now pending or stop the wheels of the Government. We will not consider any one of the propositions which you have presented as a whole; we will not agree to modify any single amendment that the Senate has presented."

The result is the motion made here by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], that the Senate shall tamely submit to that demand. It is one that, in my judgment, the Senate ought not to agree to. Such a precedent ought not to be made. The power of the Senate to amend these bills is as perfect as that of the House to originate them, and no such demand that we shall surrender all our right or produce this interruption in the affairs of the Government and the complications in the accounts of the Treasury that would follow ought to be tolerated.

It is possible that, at this late hour, this outrage, as I think it is, upon the Senate may be perpetrated and we may submit to it. If it does, I trust the result will come from it hereafter that no bill in conference shall ever be acted upon finally in the Senate except when a final and full report is made, where we may stand upon an equality with the other House.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland whether all the amendments now in dispute disagreed to by the two Houses are new, distinct, and substantive matters of expenditure, or whether in any instance they are modifications or changes in the mode of getting at a result proposed by the House?

Mr. GORMAN. All the amendments of the Senate are perfect in themselves, and have no relation to any matter the House has suggested. They are all new propositions, and none of them unusual.

The objection, as is reported, to these propositions is that they are new legislation; that they are unusual; that, being new legislation, the Senate ought to recede, and that, under the rule applying to conference reports, the Senate is in honor bound to recede. Now, the House making that demand must, as a matter of course, come to us with perfectly clean hands themselves. If the amendments the Senate placed upon the bill related only to such matters as the House had incorporated in the original bill, as is usual in the course of legislation, that claim would not stand.

In the matter of the public buildings, I will take the one at Butte, in the State of Montana. Statements were made by the Senators representing that State and by the officials of the Post-Office Department showing an urgent necessity for the appropriation for a public building there, because of the great expansion of business and the impossibility of conducting the affairs of the office properly under the present conditions, and the Senate almost unanimously agreed that that was an extraordinary case and one that ought to be provided for.

When we turn to the bill itself we find in the State of Illinois, the State from which comes the gentleman who is charged with making up the bill, an emergency appropriation for the marine hospital building at Chicago. That was a proper appropriation. It was as just as the one at Butte. There was not the slightest hesitation in accepting the amendment and providing for the public building, although there is no law authorizing its construction. It was an emergency, as is the case of the public building at Butte. That amendment was accepted. It is incorporated in the bill as it stands now. It does not lie in the mouth of any men who happen to have temporary charge of this measure to discriminate against Butte when they accepted items relating to Chicago and Cleveland and half a dozen other places that stand exactly upon an equality.

It is an arbitrary movement at the end of the session, when we are threatened with the responsibility of delay and a complication of the accounts in the Treasury. If I had my way about it in the management of the bill, I would never submit to it. The House would be compelled by my vote, if I could have it so, to extend the appropriations of last year and frame a new bill, if such is to be the conduct toward this body as to these just and honest measures. I would myself have stricken out, if my vote could have accomplished it, appropriations contained in the body of the bill amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars for all the public buildings that are not authorized by law.

Two years ago we were establishing soldiers' homes, one to cost about a million dollars, toward the completion of which $300,000 is appropriated in this bill. That was inserted and agreed to by the Senate. A small one in South Dakota that was then considered and agreed to by the Senate was postponed only to this session so that both public buildings should not be incorporated in one bill. That is now rejected on the ground that it is new legislation, and yet there is $300,000 appropriated for one in Illinois.

Mr. ALLEN. At Danville?

Mr. GORMAN. Yes, sir; at Danville.

Mr. ALLEN. The home of Mr. CANNON.

Mr. GORMAN. That is provided for, and yet the public building for South Dakota is rejected as new legislation.

The appropriation for a post-office building at Annapolis, that ancient capital, is objected to because no public-building bills have been permitted to pass elsewhere. It is claimed that it is new legislation and unusual on an appropriation bill.

The rule adopted by the Senate and the rule adopted by the House of Representatives has been to make provision for public buildings at State capitals on this identical bill. Three years ago three other State capitals were provided for and Annapolis was included, but owing to certain peculiar conditions in relation to the then Executive, who had once failed to sign such a bill at the end of a Congress, I refused to permit that item for Annapolis to accompany the Dakotas and other States, and it went off, so that it might reach a President who would not be embarrassed by such an item upon an appropriation bill. And now the very House and the very men who agreed that that rule was the proper one for State capitals turn around blandly and say at the end of a fiscal year, "You must surrender this item; we believe it to be new legislation."

The item relating to district attorneys was a limitation placed by the Senate upon the appropriation. It provided that no district attorney appointed by the courts of the United States should continue in office longer than the expiration of the next session of the Senate. It was a wise and proper provision. It in effect required the President of the United States to appoint the district attorneys and permit the Senate to act upon their confirmation.

Congress has recently acted upon this matter. The Judiciary Committee of the Senate and of the House have since the consideration of this bill brought in a measure for an emergency, which in effect, if the President permits it to go on as has been and as is the case, gives a permanent appointment of district attorneys without confirmation by the Senate. That act having gone through the Judiciary Committee again on the 24th day of June just past, the conference committee on the part of the Senate felt that while it was a wise limitation of the appropriation proper upon an appropriation bill, owing to the recent action of the Senate, which the conferees were not aware of until the last few days, it should surrender that amendment in deference to the recent vote of the Senate, although we were utterly surprised, as I am, that the Senate should again have passed an act which would enable a district attorney to hold for life by appointment.

Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, the small expenditure of appropriation for a public building at the capital of my State amounts to very little, but I regret to see the temper that has been shown. I regret to see at this time they have marked five amendments advocated and supported by gentlemen who are not in accord with the Administration, who do not happen to agree with them politically. That is an extraordinary and I think an unjustifiable movement on their part.

The other appropriation, which is for a river and harbor improvement in the State of Oregon, they reject and refuse to consider at all as to amounts. It is an appropriation authorized by law, provided by the river and harbor act, directing and requiring the Secretary of War to make a contract for the improvement. We have provided in the bill an appropriation for every other like item that was contained in the river and harbor act. Although the Senator representing the State of Oregon and the Senate of the United States have said it was unfair to discriminate against that one improvement, we are met here on the last day of the fiscal year with the bland statement, "You must either recede from it or else the bill will fail." The Senate, Mr. President, in its wisdom may do what it pleases with the bill.

Mr. MANTLE. Mr. President, I have but a word to say. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] has so clearly and forcibly stated the facts relating to this matter that nothing practically remains to be said.

It is of course a matter of sincere regret upon my part that the Senate has been unable to maintain its position with respect to these amendments. Time and again it has placed itself upon record in favor of these propositions. Just as often the other branch of Congress has refused to accept the view of the Senate.

I am impressed by what has been said by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. I realize the critical condition which exists at this moment with respect to this great bill containing as it does millions of dollars of appropriations that are absolutely necessary for carrying on the Government. I realize that the other House is a coequal and coordinate branch of the Government and that its consent of necessity must be had to these measures. And yet, Mr. President, I am quite as fully impressed with the fact that this body is also a coequal and coordinate branch of the Government, and that it is equal in dignity and importance with the other branch of Congress.

I am impressed with the belief that the motives which have governed the action of the House conferees and the House itself upon these matters are narrow and selfish, and that they carry with them a great injustice in respect to these amendments. I have already said that the mere statement that this is not a public-building Congress carries no weight. These matters have been fully presented. There is, from every consideration of justice and of public necessity and the needs of the people concerned, absolutely no argument against them.

I do not like to ask the Senate further to insist, and yet were it an individual matter, were I standing here upon my individual rights, I never would yield in a question of this character. I know, as has been said by the Senator from Maryland, that there are appropriations in this bill which are no more justified, which have no more right to be there, than the amendments under discussion, some of them lacking by comparison in merit. I feel that action such as this simply serves to strengthen and to give countenance to a sentiment which exists in the far West, that there is actually and in fact a discrimination against those people when it comes to a matter of an appropriation of the public moneys.

Millions and millions of dollars are being appropriated annually, and yet in the growing young Commonwealth of Montana, for an area comprising more than half of that State—more than one-half of its population and its votes and its wealth—not a dollar of public money has been expended during my term of service in the Senate, and not a dollar has been asked except in this case, and it would not have been asked, as I said before, except that it was absolutely necessary. And yet we are met time and time again, session after session, Congress after Congress, with the same sort of treatment which has been accorded to us on this occasion.

Mr. President, I have no more to say. I want to thank the Senate, and especially I want to thank the conferees on the part of the Senate for having maintained the position of the Senate as long as they have done. I, of course, am disappointed, speaking for the people whom I represent and for the State of Montana. I have no more to say.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, I am very much gratified at the spirit being manifested to-day to maintain the dignity and equality of the Senate. It is undoubtedly true that the Senate has an equal right to propose amendments to appropriation bills as the House has to originate such bills, and it is unbecoming the dignity of the Senate to allow itself to be placed upon terms of inequality by conduct such as has characterized the proceedings of the House conferees in this particular case.

But there is another phase in which this matter is deserving of consideration. There is a provision of the Constitution which secures to the Senate not only equal rights with the House, but about matters of the gravest importance rights exclusive of those of the House. We have been told through the public prints that until the Senate shall consent to abdicate a power conferred upon it by an express provision of the Constitution the other end of the Capitol intends to prolong this session of Congress, and that there is to be no adjournment until the Senate shall consent to surrender one of the greatest powers conferred upon it by the Constitution. We are told every day that there is a majority on the floor of the Senate so anxious to submit to this indignity that it intends that this session shall not end until the Senate shall abdicate the great right of controlling in the exercise of the treaty-making power.

A paper which purports to be a treaty between the Republic of Hawaii and the Republic of the United States was submitted to the consideration of the Senate a year ago. The Senate thus far has failed to exercise its right to pass upon that treaty, to either approve or disapprove it, and we are to-day considering a joint resolution which, if adopted, will amount to a declaration upon our part that we are ready to surrender this great, this exclusive power conferred by the Constitution, in order that the will of the other House of Congress may be carried out.

I am willing to meet the issue on both these propositions. I am perfectly willing to vote to maintain the equality of the Senate in proposing or amending appropriation bills; and I am willing to join with my brother Senators in maintaining to the uttermost the exclusive power of deciding whether or not a proposed treaty shall become the supreme law of the land.

We had as well look both these questions in the face. I am well satisfied of the fact that a majority of this Senate is opposed to surrendering this power, and that if a vote could be taken, in which each Senator would cast his vote according to his convictions, we would successfully resist the great outrage sought to be put upon this body.

We are to have no adjournment until the Senate consents to concur in the action proposed by the House of Representatives, which will substitute for a treaty negotiated by the President and sent to us for our consideration a joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress adopted in this branch of the Congress by a vote less than is necessary to ratify a treaty. When it becomes a question of dignity, when it becomes a question of equality, I insist that we shall not forget the proposed wrong to the Constitution while we are protesting against an act which affects merely our sense of dignity and our claim to equality.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I concur in much that has been said by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], but I wish to call attention to one suggestion which is made upon this floor by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] in regard to amendment No. 233, which reads:

Provided, That no part of the appropriation authorized in the two preceding paragraphs shall be used to pay salary, fees, or expenses of a district attorney appointed under section 767 of Revised Statutes, or the act of February 27, 1897, for a time beyond the end of the session of the Senate next succeeding the date of said appointment.

It has been stated that that amendment has been affected by the action of the Senate in passing an act which provides:

That the attorneys and marshals of the United States, including the District of Columbia and the Territories, shall continue to discharge the duties of their respective offices, unless sooner removed by the President, until their successors shall be appointed and qualify in their stead.

That act was approved June 24, 1898. I was a member of the Judiciary Committee which reported this legislation to the Senate. It certainly was not the intention of that committee to influence in any way the policy which was outlined in this amendment to the sundry civil bill. The proposition which was reported by the Judiciary Committee, and which has since gone into our statutes, was intended to provide for contingencies such as have occurred time and again, where a district attorney or marshal appointed for four years, and the end of his term being reached, could not hold over temporarily until his successor could be appointed and qualified.

We have often heard upon the floor of this Senate the statement made that it was absolutely essential that there should be a speedy, yes, an instant, confirmation of a new appointee, because the old marshal or district attorney could not hold an hour beyond the four years fixed in his commission. The great mass of officials of the United States Government hold under the general rule until their successors come into office, but it has long been the peculiarity of the offices of marshal and district attorney that the incumbents of the offices lost their power to discharge the duties of their offices ipso facto when their four years' terms ran out.

This law proposed by the Judiciary Committee was intended to cover that difficulty in the administration of law in the United States and was not intended in any way whatever, directly or indirectly, to affect the larger question whether it was not desirable that there should be some check put upon the permanent incumbency of office by appointees of the President who had been rejected by the Senate upon full consideration, but who, nevertheless, had afterwards been designated by the courts to fill the same office.

The amendment to the sundry civil bill could stand, and the act which has already been passed could stand without any conflict between the two. Both construed together would mean that when the term of a marshal or district attorney expired he would not ipso facto lose his ability to discharge the duties of the office, but there would be an interval running from the time his term expired until the end of the next session of Congress in which he would be entitled to discharge the duties of the office, but that at the end of the next session of Congress his ability and jurisdiction to do so would cease.

I think the provision of the appropriation bill is eminently fair and judicious. I do not think it a question of party or a question of persons. If the President appoints a district attorney or a marshal and that appointment made in vacation comes before the next succeeding session of the Senate and the Senate acts upon the case, rejecting the appointment, I ask, sir, in reason, in due respect to the rights of the Senate as a body which must join in the confirmation of all the officers appointed by the President, why should that incumbent reappointed by the court be allowed to hold office after one session of the Senate and another session and a dozen sessions perchance may have come and gone?

It would be a highly eligible reform in our laws to put some limitation upon the tenure of an officer who has been appointed by the President and whose confirmation has been deliberately rejected by the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. I would be glad if the Senator would interpret section 2 of the act of June 24, 1898, which provides:

That in case of a vacancy in either of said offices, the district court of the United States for the district where such vacancy exists, the supreme court of the Territory, and the supreme court of the District of Columbia may appoint persons to exercise the duties of such offices within their respective jurisdictions, until such vacancy shall be filled.

I will take the case of the district attorney for the District of Columbia, where the court, I think, on the 4th of March, 1897, appointed a district attorney, and that district attorney still holds. Would he not hold under the latter clause of section 2 until the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the President?

Mr. CHILTON. Not if this clause of the appropriation bill shall be adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. I agree with the Senator; but it is in conflict—

Mr. CHILTON. Not at all.

Mr. ALLISON. It is in conflict in this sense: It is a different expression of the legislative will, because there is no limitation upon the time, whereas the amendment which we propose fixes the limit during which the duties shall be performed to the expiration of the session of Congress during which the district attorney serves.

Now, we find—I confess I find myself—this expression of the Senate and the House of Representatives, that our amendment here, which confines these appointments until the end of the session, is in conflict with this provision. I am perfectly willing to yield that point, but if the Senator will allow me just a moment more, if we should recede from this amendment and then this law shall prevail, the district attorney would continue to hold the office, although appointed on the 4th or 5th of March, 1897, until the end of this Congress and the end of the next and so on, unless the President appoints.

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. Leaving the Senate entirely out of consideration as respects its power of confirmation where appointments are held under the provisions of the second section of this law.

Mr. CHILTON. If the Senator from Iowa will excuse me, there is no particular difference—

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I sympathize very much with the view indicated by the Senator, but that is the exact condition of things in regard to a large portion of the public offices. Take postmasters, for instance. A postmaster's term expires at the end of four years. The only distinction is that in this case it is an appointment by a judge.

Mr. CHILTON. That is a very important distinction.

Mr. HOAR. I understand that; still the difficulty which the Senator from Iowa points out exists in the whole civil service of the Government.

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. That is the difficulty in all the cases except cases of life tenure, where the consent of the Senate is required by the Constitution or laws. If an officer so appointed reaches the end of his official term, the President may, under the existing law, allow him to hold over forever, without submitting the case of that officer again to the Senate. Therefore the only distinction between that case and this is that in this case, there being a vacancy before this law passed that was filled by the judge, the judge's appointee now holds on forever unless the President shall interfere. Therefore the real complaint is, if there be any complaint in the case—I am not speaking now of any particular case—that the President of the United States neglects to perform his official duty, which is to select and submit to the Senate.

There was a case of a most admirable postmaster, a friend of mine, in my own State, appointed on my recommendation by President Harrison. When President Cleveland came into power he found this man. His term of office would expire within a few months, and after President Cleveland came in he allowed this man to hold over during his entire term. The President did not want to take the responsibility of appointing a Republican, and he did not want to take the responsibility of displacing this excellent officer, who had been appointed, holding for four years or thereabouts under President Harrison, and he held four years or thereabouts under Mr. Cleveland. He held over and has been appointed again.

Mr. ALLISON. But that was where an officer had been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Here is a proposition that this officer may be appointed by the courts and hold indefinitely, unless the President exercises the power of initiating the appointment, and the Senate has agreed to confirm the appointee.

Mr. HOAR. I beg pardon of the Senator from Texas, but I will not interrupt him again.

Mr. CHILTON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HOAR. Does not that address itself simply to the constitutional duty of the President, unless we go so far as to pass a law that the office shall be vacant, that the duties shall not be performed?

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to say a word?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. CULLOM. Within my own knowledge, since I came to the Senate I know this kind of a case occurred under the last Administration, and the Senator will remember something about it. The nomination of a postmaster was made for a certain town in my State. He was not confirmed, but was not rejected. The Senate declined to act upon the appointment. He was again appointed in vacation, and held his office until Congress convened and until we went through another session without his being confirmed, when he was again appointed; and so he went on and held the office almost entirely through the late Administration, and never was confirmed by the Senate at all.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, the object of my suggestions on this occasion is not to specially advocate an adherence to the Senate amendments—that is a broader question—whether under all the circumstances it would be useful to make a direct issue with the House of Representatives. I want it understood that my remarks are not so much intended to express an opinion on that particular subject as to explain that the reason assigned by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for yielding amendment 238 seems to me altogether inadequate.

The case, in brief, is simply this: A certain gentleman was appointed United States district attorney. His case came before the Senate, the constitutional authority for acting on it. The Senate deliberately rejected his nomination. Then, under a statute which existed in regard to district attorneys, the supreme court of the District of Columbia appointed the same gentleman.

That power existed before this late act was passed, just as much as it existed since, and it can not be claimed that this late act, which was approved on the 24th of June, had any effect upon that proposition, because it is a practical reenactment of an old law upon that particular subject.

Mr. ALLISON. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. CHILTON. Yes.

Mr. ALLISON. I only cite that as showing a later expression of the Senate respecting what should be done than the expression originally found in the sundry civil bill, the amendment of which was placed there some months ago.

Mr. CHILTON. But, if the Senator will excuse me, I must return to my proposition, that there is no necessary conflict between the two propositions. My point is that they should be construed together. You will understand that under the old law the office of district attorney became vacant when his term of four years was out. That fact was inconvenient, and we so shaped the law that his term should not absolutely end at the expiration of four years, at all events, but that there should be a little latitude, so that he might hold until the qualification of his successor. There would frequently be a few days interim between the time when the old term of four years expired and a new incumbent qualified and took possession of the office. The intention of the Judiciary Committee was not to affect this clause in the appropriation bill at all, but to—

Mr. ALLEN. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly.

Mr. ALLEN. The court appointing this officer is a court of general criminal jurisdiction in which all criminal cases are prosecuted. Is it not an inherent power in all such courts, regardless of statute, to appoint a prosecuting officer when there is a vacancy?

Mr. CHILTON. That would raise another question. I am discussing rather the authority conferred by the statute.

Mr. ALLEN. Following the English precedents and following the practice in the United States, would not that be the case?

Mr. CHILTON. That may be true; but if so, it would be merely temporary. It is very doubtful whether there is any common-law power in the United States district courts; but if there is, I think the appointment would likely relate to each particular case on trial.

Mr. ALLEN. If that power does not exist, then the whole criminal jurisdiction of the court is paralyzed.

Mr. CHILTON. I will say to the Senator that probably in every case that would arise the court would have the power to make the appointment. Without written law pro tempore appointments would be authorized. However, that is not material, because there was a statute which authorized the judge to make the appointment.

I repeat, that under the law which was proposed by the Judiciary Committee, and which passed both Houses, when the four years' term of a district attorney expired, then the judge might make an appointment. Take this law, and read it with the amendment to the sundry civil bill now under consideration, and the two together would mean that when the four years of a district attorney's term expired, the judge could make an appointment, but that appointment would extend only until the end of the next succeeding session of the Senate.

For example, if on the 1st day of last February a vacancy had occurred in the office of the district attorney, then with this statute reported by the Judiciary Committee the judge would have the right to make the appointment, but under this subsequent clause of the appropriation bill the appointment would expire at the end of the next succeeding session of the Senate. So both would stand together, and both would serve a useful purpose. In other words, the first would enable the court to do business and provide for temporary contingencies and intervals between the end of one term and the beginning of another, and the second law would provide that these temporary appointments should not last beyond a certain time, to wit, the expiration of the next succeeding session of the Senate. As one member of the Judiciary Committee, I never would have given my consent to a law which would have provided for a permanent appointment by the judges of the courts of these district attorneys anywhere.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I do not know that I am particularly concerned in this discussion at this time, but the remarks of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], to the effect that the House of Representatives has a right to originate appropriation bills, is one that ought not to pass without notice. There is no exclusive power in the House of Representatives to originate appropriation bills.

Mr. LINDSAY. I did not say there was.

Mr. ALLEN. I understood the Senator to say the power in the House of Representatives was exclusive, subject to the right of the Senate to propose amendments.

Mr. LINDSAY. Oh, no.

Mr. ALLEN. I myself never could understand why the House of Representatives assumed exclusive power to originate appropriation bills. The power is expressly conferred upon Congress, which embraces both the Senate and the House of Representatives. There is not one word in the Constitution of the United States authorizing the House to originate such bills; and it is perfectly competent for the Senate to initiate an appropriation bill—as competent for the Senate to initiate an appropriation bill and present it to the House as it is for the House to initiate an appropriation bill and present it to the Senate; but for some reason the House of Representatives assumes the initiative jurisdiction over appropriations.

Mr. President, it is unfortunate that almost every amendment which has been rejected in conference has been an amendment favored by some Senator who has not been strictly in accord with the dominant party in this Chamber and in the House of Representatives. I do not say there is necessarily any logical connection between the two facts. It may be simply coincident. It is likewise true that the little town of Danville, Ill., which has a population of 11,491, the home of one of the members of the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives, and one of the chief conferees from that body, has received within the last few years about $900,000 on appropriation bills like this, and including those in this bill. It has been amply cared for. That little town has received more money for one institution—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. ALLEN. Very well.

Mr. PETTIGREW. What is the population of the town of Danville?

Mr. ALLEN. According to the census of 1890 it was 11,401, and in 1880 it was 7,773.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have the Senator inform the Senate what member of the Committee on Appropriations of the other House resides in Danville?

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, the world ought to take judicial notice of that fact. The recurrence of the seasons and the motions of the heavenly bodies and the membership of the Committee on Appropriations of both Houses and the conferees are things of which all persons should take notice.

Mr. President, I was about to say that this one little town—no doubt a delightful place to live, and no doubt the appropriation was proper, and I am not complaining of that—but this one little interior town in the State of Illinois, so ably represented by the Senators from that State, and so well cared for by them, has received more money within the last two or three years than, I presume, the entire State of Nebraska has received from public funds in ten years.

I was discussing at the lunch table to-day with a Senator in this body the fact that when I came to the Senate all my ideas of the greatness of the Congress of the United States had disappeared, and I was sorry for it, and I am sorry for it now. Why, Mr. President, there never was a spot, and there is no spot on all this Western Hemisphere—I speak seriously—where, in my judgment, there is more little petty favoritism exhibited in the course of a year—and there is more pettifogging here than there is in all the pettifogging courts of the land—than is indulged in in the course of twelve months in the Congress of the United States. Here is the State of Maryland. I never set my foot on its soil until within the last six years.

I have no more interest in it than any other citizen of the United States who was born almost a thousand miles west of it and who has lived all his life 1,500 miles west of it. Yet here is one of the greatest of the original thirteen States of the Union, which in all the history of this country has contributed her full share of men and money, brains and energy, to the Government of the United States, without one dollar being appropriated to build a public building in her capital city. One hundred and twenty-six years, almost one hundred and twenty-seven years since the establishment of this Government in its present form, that State comes to Congress and asks for a small appropriation for the construction of a public building, and it is denied. It seems to me, Mr. President, Senators could not find it in their hearts under such circumstances to deny an appropriation of that kind.

I say nothing about the other State, because it is a new State. I say nothing about the other appropriations, because they are comparatively new. But here is a State, one of the original thirteen colonies and one of the original thirteen States, possibly the last of the thirteen to enter the Union, entering some year and a half or two years after the others, that has gone all these years without a dollar being appropriated to construct a public building at its capital, when other States have received hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars for that purpose, and it is incontinently denied that right. Money that should go for the construction of a public building there and that should be appropriated to construct public buildings and carry on public works elsewhere is taken and expended for public buildings in some little interior towns like the one which has been named.

Mr. President, if I had anything to gain in the way of appropriations, I would not make these remarks, but I have nothing.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, one of the five items disagreed to in this bill is an appropriation of $50,000 to build a sanitarium as a branch of the National Soldiers' Homes at Hot Springs, S. Dak. This improvement was recommended by the Board of Governors of the Soldiers' Homes and by the inspector of Soldiers' Homes and came here on their recommendation. Long before I thought of asking for an appropriation for this purpose they had taken thirty soldiers from the Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, Kans., to the Hot Springs, S. Dak., for the purpose of treating them with the waters at that point. After keeping them there thirty days every soldier who had rheumatism was cured. The curative properties of the waters were so great that General Averell recommended the establishment of a home at this place, and said that the cures would produce a saving greater than the cost of the home. This was in 1894.

Since that time the Senate has passed a bill for that purpose, as a separate measure, twice at least, having been reported favorably by the Committee on Military Affairs unanimously. Last year it was placed upon the appropriation bill and passed the Senate. The House had placed upon the same bill a provision for locating a soldiers' home at Danville, Ill. No recommendation for Danville came from the governors of the Soldiers' Homes. It was indorsed by nobody. Yet it was placed upon the bill. It came to the Senate. The House refused to agree to the Senate amendment providing for this necessary sanitarium, where the lives of the soldiers could be preserved and they could be returned to the ranks of the productive people of this country, instead of suffering and ultimately dying of disease or becoming permanent patients. The House disagreed, but the Danville scheme went through.

It was practically understood that in the present year this amendment should be agreed to, but, having secured $975,000 for the Danville institution, the House again refuses. If I had the say about it, this bill would fail also before I could submit myself to the tyranny of their conduct. I know I can not prevent it, and the bill will go through, but it seems to me that if we have a right to any voice in the making up of the appropriation bills it is time we asserted it. Nine hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars for a home in Danville, unrecommended by anybody, for the purpose of promoting the interests of those 11,000 people, is more money than has been spent for public institutions in the six States which have been admitted into the Union during the last ten years. Yet when the Senate asks for a public building in the capital of a State, asks for those necessary improvements, absolutely essential, it is refused and denied, and we are told on the last days of the session that we must recede and surrender or the bill will fail. It ought to fail. We ought to reject the report and then provide other expedients.

Mr. ALLEN. What objection is there to letting it fail?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am in favor of its failing. We ought to reject the report. The same thing will occur again. The Senate can forever surrender. Is there any reason why these items should not be included? No one presents a reason. They say it is legislation. The provision for Danville was legislation. The House has become wonderfully virtuous since the Soldiers' Home for Danville was agreed to. I do not suppose there is anything I can say about it that will change the result.

Mr. GALLINGER. There are hundreds of cases of legislation on appropriation bills.

Mr. PETTIGREW. As the Senator from New Hampshire says, there is not an appropriation bill that comes from the House, scarcely, and there never has been one since I have been here, that does not contain items of legislation. It is a subterfuge, it is not in good faith, it is not honest to make that claim and discriminate against certain items for motives and reasons unknown to us. The conferees give no reason. Nothing is urged on the other side except simply that they will not do it. We can tolerate this procedure forever or we can resist and have it corrected; and I am in favor of resisting.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, the Senate in this whole matter has been extremely moderate. The conferees representing the body have sought to avoid antagonism with the House and have yielded many matters rather than prolong the controversy. The Senate is right about every one of these items. The appropriation for the public building at Annapolis, the old colonial and State capital of an original State in the American Union, under the general rule ought to be on this bill. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] is right in claiming and urging it. The Butte building ought to be on. I have not known in my experience on the Appropriations Committee a clearer case of emergency and actual need, on the part of a great Western community, for a building in which to transact the public business. The appropriation for Yaquina Bay ought to be on here, because it goes on all fours with numerous other propositions which have been embodied in the bill by the Senate and by the House.

The contention of the Senate with reference to the prolongation unduly of the district attorney's term is right. It is a kind of legal scandal that an appointment should be continued, tided over, after an officer appointed has been rejected by the Senate, and that he should continue in office year after year and the Senate be powerless. It is irksome. We all felt it, Mr. President, and felt it in the conference; and the reason why this matter is now before the Senate and was not settled long ago, and the bill out of the way and we freed from it, and the great things on the bill for the country's benefit generally passed, is that the Senate conferees, feeling these things, held out and determined to resist, and did resist. We found at last, and I call the attention of the Senate to this, that we did not meet in the conference only the will and the obstinacy and the obduracy of the three conferees, but that all of these matters had more than once been by the House conferees submitted to the vote of the House, and the House of Representatives had taken its attitude.

Motions were made in every one of these cases—in the Oregon case by the Representative from Oregon—that the House recede and accept the amendment; in the Annapolis case by the Representative, and so in the Montana case and in all the cases, so that at last when we met in conference we did not have to deal alone with the conferees on the part of the House, but with the deliberately taken attitude of the House of Representatives upon a year-and-a-half vote, repeatedly called, that these items should not be admitted. In the controversy there it was stated that, without in any way impugning the motives of the Representative who moved to recede on these public buildings, the House was in a condition where it had not been able to obtain public buildings at this session, and it would not make an exception and would not let these through, and therefore voted them down and all the rest, substantially, that had been voted on.

So the conferees on the part of the Senate found themselves face to face as against a solid wall, not of the conferees, but of the House of Representatives. The day was going and the year is going, and every one of the great things on this bill is at stake—all of the great appropriations. This is what is called the omnibus appropriation bill, which has in it provisions for the public buildings, the great question of quarantine which is pending and vital, all the light-houses, all the surveys of public lands; and if the bill fails, they fail. The Coast Survey, the Fish Commission, and all the provisions in relation to that service, all the provisions in relation to the Department of Justice and maintaining the courts, the Soldiers' Home, the public printing, the Nicaragua Canal Commission, the Paris Exposition, and the whole body of public improvements under the head of rivers and harbors are on this bill. I have just received a dispatch from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, which says:

Our people are exceedingly solicitous lest the sundry civil bill be delayed, thus preventing vital improvements, including San Pedro. May we depend upon your efforts to prevent delay?

That is true about every river and harbor improvement; and it is this reason and this alone which has actuated the motion made by the chairman. Under these conditions, under an almost intolerable sense of wrong, and abating in no degree our feeling and indignation that the Senate has been right and has not been recognized in this matter, still in a larger view it is not a wise and good thing that the Senate should let the bill fail.

It is easy to say, "Teach them a lesson and let it fail," but Senators who have lived the length of time that every Senator here has know that that feeling is not the one which ought to control us in dealing with grave matters. It is the result. I do not suppose we can gain anything by the bill failing. As I say, we confront the House put on record by repeated yea-and-nay votes, and a new proposition would be the same thing. That body is in condition where it has recorded itself and can not back down. It has recorded itself wrong, but it has recorded itself by yea-and-nay vote repeatedly; and if we reject the report and the bill fails now, we will have to try it some time, and we will confront the same House of Representatives and the same votes, and I can not see where there would be any improvement.

I dislike, after having been in conference as we have been, and after having talked very plainly, to have to say it is better and wiser not to let the bill fail than it is to make a point, even if we are right, for the sake of teaching the other body a lesson. But the Senate must settle that. The Senate must decide what is, not the natural thing, not the impulsive thing, not the passionate thing, not the resentful thing, but what is the wise thing with this great bill.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him? Is it not true that, under the pressure and condition of the country financially, the other body have refrained from making appropriations for public buildings in the districts of their own Representatives?

Mr. HALE. That is undoubtedly true.

Mr. CULLOM. Therefore they say naturally, "We are sorry that the provisions for these buildings are not agreed to;" but they are simply treating the Senate upon that question as they have been treating themselves, in view of the actual condition of the finances of the country, on the ground that we can not afford to go into the construction of additional public buildings at this time.

Mr. HALE. There is force in that suggestion.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to say a word further? A certain Representative from Illinois in the other body has been referred to pretty freely. He can take care of himself pretty well, and there is no necessity of defense from me, but I know of my own knowledge that there are not less than two cities in his district where they have been waiting and waiting and waiting for public buildings, and they have not got them yet, and the Representative has put them off because of the condition of the Treasury.

Again, the Senator from South Dakota refers to nine hundred and odd thousand dollars being appropriated for the Soldiers' Home in that Representative's city. That city is pretty nearly twice as large as it was when the census was taken. The impression is given out by the Senator from South Dakota, not intentionally, I know, that there was nine hundred and some odd thousand dollars appropriated this year for the Soldiers' Home there, while the truth is that something over $300,000 was appropriated.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Perhaps it would be well for me to give the exact figures here.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes.

Mr. HALE. I think I had better conclude my remarks.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. I am much obliged to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. President, I have only a word to say further. The Senate is, after all, a careful and conservative body, and it does not proceed rashly when it sees the whole situation. All my sympathies are with these amendments. They are right, just, and proper; but I do not think the cause which each of them represents, the building of the public structures at the places named and the sanitarium in South Dakota, which is on all fours with them, will be in any way helped or forwarded in the future by this bill failing.

These buildings will all be built at no distant day. The controversy which has been made, the contest which has ensued, the debate here to-day settle it that these buildings are to be built at no distant day and that they ought to be. Maryland will get her building—she ought to have had it long ago—and Montana and South Dakota and Oregon will get their appropriations; and I repeat that they will get them no sooner if we let this bill fail.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I can not forego the opportunity afforded by this debate to say a few words regarding the legislation heretofore attempted relative to public buildings for the State of Washington. I notice in the RECORD of June 7, if I may be permitted to refer to it, that a Representative of my State to some extent criticised the action of its Senators in not securing a public building at the capital of their State. In a debate that arose he said—I refer to the RECORD:

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I want to say that the State of Washington was denied one in 1890.

Mr. SAYERS. Has it not one now?

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. No.

Mr. SAYERS. Then probably the Senators from Washington have not asked for it.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. They have been derelict in their duty.

Regarding that statement I have to say that in the first session of the Fifty-first Congress I secured the insertion in the sundry civil bill making an appropriation for a public building at Olympia, Wash. That amendment was rejected in conference for the reason that no term of the United States court was held at Olympia.

When I first entered the Senate I secured the passage of bills providing for the erection of public buildings in the cities of Tacoma, Seattle, and Spokane, but they have not for some reason received consideration in the other House.

I do not understand whether or not the items of this bill are being rejected because there is no United States court at Annapolis and at Butte.

Mr. MANTLE. There is now.

Mr. WILSON. There is now, the Senator from Montana says. But we have in the State of Washington four places at which United States courts are located. The city of Seattle, the largest city in our State, with a population of about 65,000, with postal receipts this year of over $111,000, with a United States land office, a United States court, and some ten or twelve other Federal officers, is without any public building. There is a custom-house there in which there are seven employees. We have never been able to obtain a public building at the city of Tacoma, where the postal receipts are some $75,000, and a custom-house, where, I think, 65 per cent of all the tea that is imported into this country enters, with a large and growing commerce. We are absolutely without any public building there. We are paying in rent to-day in the city of Seattle $11,000 for places where the Federal officers may have habitation. I will read the report upon the city of Seattle:

Mr. TURNER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 346) to provide for the erection of a public building at the city of Seattle, in the State of Washington, submit the following report:

The city of Seattle is the largest city in the State of Washington, containing at the present time about 65,000 inhabitants. In it are located the United States court, the United States district attorney's office, a United States assay office, the office of a deputy collector of customs, the office of a deputy collector of internal revenue, the office of an officer of the United States engineers and quartermaster of the Army, the office of an inspector of hulls and boilers, and a United States post-office, the receipts of which for the last fiscal year were over $100,000.

In view of the many and extensive Government interests centered at Seattle, the committee is of the opinion that a building suitable for the proper conduct of the Government business should be erected, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

And yet for nine long years, in season and out of season, I have pleaded and labored and worked that a city of that size, with a number of Federal officers located there, might have some consideration in this respect, but without avail.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. There is a land office there.

Mr. WILSON. Yes; there is a United States land office at Seattle.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him a moment?

Mr. WILSON. With pleasure.

Mr. SPOONER. I had occasion two or three years ago to argue a cause in the United States court at Seattle. That is a very prosperous, a very beautiful, and a growing city. The accommodations for the Federal court in that city are a disgrace to the Government, and the accommodations afforded to the judge of that court are a disgrace to the Government.

Mr. WILSON. I will say to the Senator from Wisconsin that we have improved them some little, but they might be improved more. Rents are higher in our section of the country than in the East, and we can not get sufficient appropriations to secure proper quarters.

The city of Tacoma is a large and growing city in our State, beautifully located. I read the report on a public building in that city:

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, submitted the following report:
The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 347) to provide for the erection of a public building at the city of Tacoma, in the State of Washington, submit the following report:

The city of Tacoma is situated at the head of navigation on Puget Sound, at the western terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and is the great commercial entrepôt of the Orient, having direct communication with Japan and China. More tea is imported at Tacoma than at any other port in the United States, and in the amount of oriental merchandise distributed Tacoma is second only to New York. Her foreign trade in 1896 amounted to $11,730,293, and for the eleven months of 1897 it amounted to nearly $12,000,000. Tacoma is the great wheat and lumber exporting port of the Pacific Northwest. Her bank clearances for the current year will aggregate more than $30,000,000.

Tacoma has a population of 50,000, and, in view of the large Government interests centering there, the committee is of the opinion that a building should be erected there suitable for the proper conduct of its business. The committee therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying bill, with the following amendments:

In line 13 strike out the words "four hundred thousand" and insert the words "two hundred and fifty thousand," and in line 14 strike out the words "four hundred thousand" and insert the words "two hundred and fifty thousand."

The same condition that exists in Tacoma and Seattle exists at Spokane. We have at Spokane a United States court. There are the United States marshal, the United States land office, and several other officials and officers at Spokane.

In all these growing cities there are no public buildings, as there are public buildings elsewhere with the exception of Annapolis and Butte, and possibly Salt Lake. I think they have no building yet at Salt Lake. The State of Washington, with its four United States courts, has no public buildings. We ought to have them. They are scattered all over this country. I will venture the assertion without any criticism, but for the purpose of illustration, that there is not a Congressional district that I call to mind in the State of Maine that has not a public building located therein. I think they have over nine public buildings in that State.

Mr. HALE. They are very small buildings. They are old buildings, and it is an old State.

Mr. WILSON. The Senator says they are old buildings. We would be very glad to get old buildings, but we have not been able thus far to get any at all.

Now, something ought to be done to eliminate these things from continual discussion at every session. We ought to have some opportunity in these cities that are growing and have great commercial interests, where there are a large number of Federal employees and where there are United States courts, to have some building commensurate with those that their associates in the other States have. I very much regret that after almost ten years of continuous solicitation, pleading, talking, and running I have been unable to get one single solitary appropriation for a public building in my State.

It is but fair, however, to say that no public-building bill, with the single exception of that providing for a new building at Chicago, has become a law since the first session of the Fifty-first Congress.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, it seems to me that, however desirable these items may be, it is the duty of the Senate, rather than the bill should fail, to recede from the amendments.

In the first place, there is but one amendment in controversy which, in my opinion, properly belongs in the sundry civil appropriation bill, and that is the amendment in regard to the appropriation for Oregon. That amendment naturally belongs here by reason of the fact that that is a continuing contract, and the continuing contracts are provided for in the sundry civil appropriation bill. The other items, however worthy they may be, do not, properly speaking, belong on an appropriation bill.

There is one item in the number that I would have been very glad indeed if the House had agreed to, and that is the item in regard to the public building at Butte. The Senator from Montana [Mr. MANTLE] has worked so faithfully and earnestly for years here to secure that building, and has shown such a good case that I think the House of Representatives ought to have agreed to that amendment. I greatly regret that they did not agree to it, but they have refused to do it and the situation is that this appropriation bill must fail unless the Senate recedes.

Mr. President, I think the custom has been from the foundation of the Government that where it became certain that a general appropriation bill would fail, the House proposing the amendment upon which the difference arose has been forced almost invariably to yield. If it were otherwise it would be almost impossible to pass an appropriation bill at all. If we could originate amendments which do not pertain properly to the bill and insist that we can force the House to agree to them, otherwise the bill shall fail, they unquestionably will have the same right and the same privilege, and they might put upon us the most objectionable legislation, or the Senate might do the same with the House. Either House might say to the other, unless a particular provision goes into the bill, where it does not necessarily belong, you shall have no general appropriation bill and the wheels of Government will have to stop, or else Congress must provide a temporary remedy after the 1st day of July.

In view of these facts I believe it to be the duty of the Senate rather than see the bill fail, to recede from its amendments, deservicing as they may be. I think it would be unfortunate if we should have to prepare another bill and stay here for weeks, it may be, because the House is unwilling to give us a public building at Butte or at Annapolis, Md.

I want to say one other word, Mr. President. I have heard a good deal said this evening by Senators about the injustice of the House and how they have imposed their views on the Senate. I do not believe that those statements are warranted by the facts. My observation and experience here have taught me that the Senate has hardly ever failed to get all it was entitled to, if not a little more. I do not think that the statements made on that line are justified by the history of the two bodies. I state that, notwithstanding, as I said before, I greatly regret that the amendment especially providing for a public building at Butte, Mont., was not agreed to by the House of Representatives.

Mr. McBRIDE. Mr. President, I do not intend to detain the Senate by a discussion of the merits of the particular amendment to this bill relating to the State of Oregon. It is one of the five items in controversy between the Senate and the House. I desire, however, to thank the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] for his timely statement of the fact that the amendment refused by the House for the improvement of Yaquina Bay Harbor is one that is authorized by existing law. Therefore it follows that, by duress, the House is able to place upon the Senate in the closing days of the fiscal year action which is arbitrarily nullifying a law of the United States.

That this is so, and confessedly so, I shall show by reading from the remarks of the chairman of the committee of conference on the part of the House, found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 29, page 6490. In that debate appears the following from the remarks of Mr. CANNON. He says:

Now, I will take only a very short time touching these matters of disagreement. I want to state, however, a fact that is generally known to the House, that the body which proposes legislation, or a new provision involving legislation as well as appropriation, must recede if the other body does not agree to it. That is the practice between the two Houses.

With respect to the question whether this particular amendment proposes legislation as well as appropriation, I read again from the remarks of Mr. CANNON:

Now, as to Yaquina Bay, that is authorized by law. The Senate still insists. The House has time and again registered its opinion about it. That is the only matter upon the bill in difference between the House and Senate that is authorized by law. I will not speak further of it.

Mr. President, I have asked permission to place these remarks in the RECORD to show that by the admissions of the chairman of the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives, that House, in refusing this amendment, is deliberately nullifying the law, arbitrarily, without reason, and upon a pretense which can not be established either by official reports or by any other means of ascertaining the facts in the case.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I have here a record of the establishment of the Soldiers' Home at Danville, Ill. In view of the fact that this is the home of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the other House, I will put the figures in the RECORD. I am not going to do it because I desire to attack him. I do not blame him for getting all the appropriations he can if they are necessary and ought to be made, but I do blame and I do complain that the excuse shall be made, in view of these facts, that the Senate amendment will not be agreed to because it is legislation.

The Danville Home was established by an amendment on the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1898. It was put on in the House; it was established by this provision. An appropriation of $150,000 was made.

Mr. HALE. For the year 1898?

Mr. PETTIGREW. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898.

Mr. CULLOM. A year ago.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That Home was established. That was legislation on an appropriation bill. It is now said that an appropriation for a United States Home at Hot Springs, S. Dak., recommended by the inspectors of the Soldiers' Homes and repeatedly by this body as being necessary as a sanitarium to cure crippled soldiers, shall not be placed in the sundry civil appropriation bill because it is legislation. That is what I complain against.

I am not attacking the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. I am attacking the excuse he makes. It is not square.

In the urgent deficiency act of this session for the construction of barracks, etc., limited to $300,000, and for bakery and kitchen, boiler house, coal shed, officers' quarters, laundry, etc., including $10,000 for additional land, cost limited to $525,000, there was appropriated $100,000; and in the sundry civil appropriation bill now pending there is $301,250, making a total of $551,250, in one year, pretty nearly the total value of the whole town, there being 11,000 people in it. Two provisions were made so that it will be necessary to appropriate a balance of $423,750 to complete that which is started so adroitly from these appropriations, and therefore it will take $975,000 to complete this institution. It was established on an appropriation bill.

Yet these five items are rejected because it is new legislation on an appropriation bill. What I protest against is that plea. The plea of necessity is all right. These institutions ought not to be built if the appropriations are improvident and unjust and improper. That is argument enough. If that is shown I shall be willing to surrender, but when at Danville, where the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations resides, they, by legislation on an appropriation bill, do this thing, then I protest against that reason being urged against our amendment when everybody admits that they are proper, that they are right, and that they ought to be made, only it must not be done on an appropriation bill. I do not intend to attack the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in the other body, either.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, it seems to me that the suggestion made by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] ought to settle this whole matter and make it very clear. Contrary to the custom in Great Britain at the time when we established our Constitution, these appropriation bills are made up of a number of different items absolutely independent of one another. The House having originated the bill, if the Senate has a different opinion in regard to the amount or in regard to the method of accomplishing the purpose of any one item, the two Houses stand, and ought to stand, on an equality, and there is no more reason why we should yield our judgment to them than that they should yield their judgment to us. But when an entirely new, distinct subject of legislation, as is the case here, is inserted in one of these bills, either originally or by way of amendment, if either House do not assent to it the other ought, of course, to yield. Otherwise you have legislation by one House and not by two.

It makes no difference whether the opinion of the Senate be reasonable or unreasonable in regard to this matter of the appointment of a district attorney, whether the opinion of the Senate be reasonable or unreasonable in regard to a public building in the State of Washington or the State of Oregon. We have nothing to do with the reasonableness or the unreasonableness of the opinion of the House of Representatives. That is their affair. They are responsible only to themselves and their constituents. If they do not approve it, we have no business to press it by saying that the legislation which both Houses agree is necessary for the country shall fail. That is coercion; that is logrolling; that is utterly indefensible as a matter of principle.

So, after we have in conference brought again and again to the attention of the House of Representatives our reasons, if they fail to convince that body, we ought to yield the point; and in the same way with regard to items put in by the House of Representatives and sent here, if they fail to convince this body, they ought to yield the point, whether they originate them or whether we originate them.

The Constitution requires two bodies—not one body—selected in different ways and representing different constituencies, to assent to all legislation. That is for the protection of the people. So, whatever we may think of the wisdom or the unwisdom of the opinion of the House of Representatives, unless we can change that opinion, we have no right to put constraint upon that body by saying that the public interests shall suffer in some way if you do not yield your conscientious convictions.

Mr. MANTLE. It seems to me the contention of the Senator from Massachusetts amounts to this, then, that if the House of Representatives will not yield, we must; and if the Senate will not yield, the House must. That is all there is to it.

Mr. HOAR. On any distinctive and separate matter which the House or the Senate has proposed, if the House of Representatives proposes one of these items of appropriation which does not commend itself to the judgment of the majority of this body, then it is the duty of this body to stick to that judgment and not be bullied by the House and yield; otherwise there is legislation by one House and not by two.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, just a word. Next to an uninteresting debate under a system of rules that can not terminate it, the question as to whether or not we can put general legislation on appropriation bills is, to my mind, the greatest possible burlesque. We have a set of so-called rules, and we constantly violate them. The House of Representatives claims the right to originate appropriation bills, and they further claim that the Senate has not the right to originate such bills.

For myself, I am inclined to agree with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] that the Senate has quite as much right to originate such bills as the House; but laying aside that controversy, the fact is that the House originates those bills, placing in them general legislation, and the committee of this body called the Appropriations Committee constantly amends them by adding more items of general legislation, and we affirmatively act upon it; but after having done so it is always expected that some Senator will virtuously declaim against the practice and make the point of order against some trifling amendment just to show that the rules are still in full force and effect.

In addition to that, Mr. President, our rules permit us, if we get the consent of a standing or select committee of this body, to place general legislation on appropriation bills. So this talk about a matter being obnoxious to the rules, and that it ought to be swept aside because it is general legislation on an appropriation bill, is, as I said before, to my mind, a burlesque of the first order.

Mr. President, I am very well aware of the fact that either one or the other body has to recede if we pass a bill that is in as sharp controversy as is the bill which is now under consideration, and ordinarily I should say that in a matter that the Senate placed in the bill the Senate might properly recede, but in this case I feel that the Senate should not recede. For myself, I believe that the other body is placing itself in a position which ought not to be submitted to when it says that a State like Montana, with a great city like Butte, the necessities of the case being as urgent as they are, shall not have a public building because this is not a public-building Congress.

Mr. BERRY. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. BERRY. I want to reverse the proposition. There is an item, I think, in the original bill in favor of a public building at Danville, Ill. Now, suppose the Senate had said that it would not agree to have a public building at Danville, Ill.; that we are not going to consent to that under any circumstances whatever, and the House had said, "Unless you consent to this public building there will be no general appropriation to support this Government," who could stand on such a proposition? If the Senate had refused to assent to that, I should have been in favor of staying here until next year before I would consent to let the House of Representatives coerce us into voting for a proposition in which we did not believe.

There must be equality. If the House of Representatives propose such an item it would be compelled to yield, and if we propose a like measure, however meritorious, which the House do not believe in, rather than that the bill should fail we, as the body making such a proposition, must necessarily yield.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is just one practical difficulty about that, and the difficulty is that the House in originating an appropriation bill puts in their propositions and our committee consents to it and our body consents to it. We pass upon them affirmatively. We then take the liberty of amending the bill by putting in similar propositions, and the other body says, "This bill will fail unless you recede from the position you have taken." That is the precise situation as it exists, and to my way of thinking it is an intolerable situation.

Mr. President, I am not going to detain the Senate. I have very profound convictions on this question, and sometimes I have hoped that the Committee on Appropriations of this body and this body itself would plant themselves squarely and fairly upon the proposition to exclude general legislation from appropriation bills, and then nobody would have any reason to find fault. As it is, our appropriation bills are loaded down from top to bottom with general legislation, and yet when some specific matter comes up, it is ruled out or waved aside or refused consideration on the ground that it is general legislation on an appropriation bill.

To my mind, Mr. President, it is a great outrage that we should have voted almost $1,000,000 to construct in the little city of Danville, Ill., a soldiers' home that was not needed, and then that we should be denied the privilege of voting a modest appropriation to the metropolis of Montana for a much-needed public building in the great city of Butte. When the House of Representatives sent over the proposition for a soldiers' home at Danville, I confess I felt very much like antagonizing it, believing, as I then did and as I do now, that it was a wasteful expenditure of public money, but we, in our good nature and in the cordial relations that we all want to have constantly sustained between the two branches of this great National Legislature, allowed that expenditure to go on an appropriation bill, general legislation as it was, and it has become a finality or will become a finality in due time, when $1,000,000 or thereabouts is provided for the purpose.

I regret exceedingly that we are in the situation we are to-day; I regret exceedingly that the great State of Maryland can not have a public building at its capital, on the frivolous and nonsensical plea that this is not a public-building Congress.

Mr. President, it does not make any difference whether this is a public-building Congress or not. Every one of these items should be decided on its own merits, and we should stand firmly and unflinchingly in support of the proposition the Senate has made in regard to these questions. But, I take it, we are going to recede; and I am gratified to know from the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]—who, I think, as shrewdly and as accurately gauges the sentiment of the National Legislature as any member of this body—I say, I am glad to learn from him that the debate here to-day will in the near future secure justice to Montana, to South Dakota, and to Maryland, which I submit, Mr. President, is denied to those States under the existing order of things.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, it is obvious, I think, that the advice of the Committee on Appropriations must be followed; but I presume that no Senator who votes to sustain the committee will thereby intend to indicate that he has any question of the merits of the claims presented here to-day by the Senators from Maryland, Montana, Utah, and Washington, who have most urgently and ably advocated the interests of their respective sections, which have not, in my judgment, been properly treated. But this bill is thronged with important items; the legislation is essential; the hour approaches when the fiscal year must terminate; and there is no course for any of us to take, it seems to me, except to indorse the attitude of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Iowa, that the Senate recede from its amendments Nos. 13, 14, 186, 221, 223, and 233.

The motion was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unless there is objection, the Chair lays before the Senate the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6896) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope this matter will now be disposed of. It is important that the bill should be passed to-night.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The conference report is before the Senate, and will be read.

Mr. HOAR. I think that report has been read.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say that this report is in the exact words of the report which has been read at the Secretary's desk, with the exception of the item known as amendment No. 33, wherein the conference committee recommend to the two Houses that the Senate amendment inserted in italics shall be receded from, and that that portion of the bill as it came from the House which was stricken out by the Senate amendment shall also be stricken out; so that the legislation upon that subject shall remain precisely as it was before the bill was presented on the subject of the leasing of mineral lands belonging to the Indian tribes.

Mr. PETTIGREW. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Do I understand, then, that the Senate amendment is agreed to striking out the lines between line 3 and line 13, on page 63; that is, striking out the words:

Provided, That hereafter, whenever it shall be made to appear, and so forth?

Mr. ALLISON. The words inserted in italics by the Senate committee have been stricken out, as also the proviso inserted by the House of Representatives.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Then the Senate amendment, so far as striking out is concerned, is agreed to, and those words go out?

Mr. ALLISON. Those words go out.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And also the Senate amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. Also the words beginning with the word "Provided," on line 3, page 63, down to and including the word "Indians."

Mr. PETTIGREW. The rest of the paragraph?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes; the rest of the paragraph.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, as I understand it, this conference report also strikes out the Senate amendment on page 72, providing for free homes to settlers upon the public domain.

Mr. ALLISON. It provides for striking out the Senate amendment relating to Indian reservations, which is another way of stating the situation.

Mr. PETTIGREW. This provision practically restores the homestead law of 1862, which gave to every person who would go upon the public domain, remain five years, build a home, conquer the wilderness, carry civilization, and build churches and schools, which our frontier settlers do, a title to the 160 acres of land upon which he had lived during that time.

Since 1889 we have been gradually providing that lands purchased from the Indians shall be paid for by the settler, even though he has resided five years upon them. Previous to that time all the lands purchased from Indian tribes were thrown open to settlement under the homestead and other land laws of the United States. But in 1889 we began the practice of providing that these lands purchased from Indians should be paid for by the settler who occupied them. Against that practice we of the West did not complain so long as it related to all entries except those which required five years' residence. Where a settler goes upon these lands, goes into a country where there are neither roads nor schools nor churches nor any of the comforts of civilization, plants his home, remains five years, and builds roads, builds schools, and builds churches, we insist that he shall have the land without other compensation; that is compensation enough.

Yet we have since 1889 pursued the practice requiring such a man to pay from $200 to $400 for his entry. Thousands of those people have gone upon those lands and have found that they are in the arid belt, and if they undertook to produce the crops which they had produced in the regions whence they came, where there was sufficient rainfall, they were unsuccessful; that the method of farming had to be changed. So these five years have rolled around, and these men are barely able to exist. They have learned gradually that in that arid region methods of farming different from those pursued in Iowa and Illinois must be pursued.

They have learned that they must irrigate, that they must plant in the lowest places along the river valleys, where the soil is moist; and that they must graze the uplands. It is a slow process. The consequence is that these people are unable to pay for their homes. The Government, then, has a mortgage upon these homes for the purchase price. We have refused to foreclose these mortgages. Therefore each year we pass appropriation bills and we extend the time of payment. We have done that for the last four years. The House of Representatives this year extended the time again, and we amended the House provision in the Senate, which was entirely germane and proper and in order, by providing that these people, instead of having the time extended, might make their proof without payment.

A measure providing for these free homes passed the House of Representatives in 1896. It was provided that those homesteaders who had gone to Oklahoma and had taken 160 acres of land purchased from the Indians—for all Oklahoma was purchased from the Indians—might secure a home after five years' residence without paying the Government price for the land. The House of Representatives passed that bill to relieve those people. It came to the Senate and was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and that committee amended it by providing that all settlers, whether in Oklahoma or elsewhere, who had settled upon Indian reservations, lands purchased from Indians, if they resided on the land five years, built their homes, and maintained them, should have the land without payment.

In pursuance of this policy the Republican convention in St. Louis in 1896 adopted, and it went into the campaign and made the campaign on, this plank in their platform:

We believe in an immediate return to the free-homestead policy of the Republican party and urge the passage by Congress of a satisfactory free-homestead measure, such as has already passed the House and is now pending in the Senate.

They went into the campaign with that plank in their platform. They paraded the fact that they were the authors of free homesteads. This measure is word for word the bill pending at that time in the Senate, absolutely the same provision, word for word, with no change, and yet the Republicans in the House of Representatives, having won their election and won many a vote upon that plank in their platform, now repudiate its provisions. It is not strange that the party which repudiated its former plank with regard to trusts and which has become absolutely the tool, the implement, of the gold standard and all its infamies would also betray the people in regard to the homestead law which has been the proudest boast in all its history. Let us see. Here is the bill which was pending when the St. Louis convention met and adopted that plank, and I will put it in the RECORD:

*Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all settlers under the homestead laws of the United States upon the public lands acquired by treaty or agreement from the various Indian tribes, who have or who shall hereafter reside upon the tract entered in good faith for the period required by existing law, shall be entitled to a patent for the land so entered, upon the payment to the local land officers of the usual and customary fees, and no other or further charge of any kind whatsoever shall be required from such settler to entitle him to a patent for the land covered by his entry: Provided, That the right to commute any such entry and pay for said lands, in the option of any such settler and in the time and at the prices now fixed by existing laws, shall remain in full force and effect: Provided, however, That all sums of money so released, which if not released would belong to any Indian tribe, shall be paid to such Indian tribe by the United States.*

That bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs May 16, 1896, and placed upon the Calendar. The Republican platform, which was adopted one month later, June 18, 1896, says:

We believe in an immediate return to the free-homestead policy of the Republican party, and urge the passage by Congress of a satisfactory free-homestead measure, such as has already passed the House and is now pending in the Senate.

That was done in the convention on the 18th of June, 1896, and the bill which I have just read was on the Calendar, and therefore was pending in the Senate on the 16th day of May, 1896, more than a month before the convention convened. Therefore the convention indorsed this very measure word for word. Now let us see what is the provision in this bill; and I will put them side by side in the RECORD.

Mr. CANNON. From what page does the Senator propose to read?

Mr. PETTIGREW. From page 72.

Mr. SPOONER. Does the Senator know who drew the free-homestead resolution in the Republican platform?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do not know who drew it. I was not a member of the committee on resolutions.

Mr. HOAR. What year was that?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Eighteen ninety-six.

Mr. SPOONER. Had the bill passed the House?

Mr. PETTIGREW. It had passed the House and had been reported a month before in the Senate and was pending on the Calendar, and in words and terms specific the platform indorsed that very measure. That is the measure which the House now refuses to agree to, and here it is:

That all settlers under the homestead laws of the United States upon the public lands acquired prior to the passage of this act by treaty or agreement from the various Indian tribes, who have or who shall hereafter reside upon the tract entered in good faith for the period required by existing law, shall be entitled to a patent for the land so entered upon the payment to the local land officers of the usual and customary fees, and no other or further charge of any kind whatsoever shall be required from such settler to entitle him to a patent for the land covered by his entry: Provided, That the right to commute any such entry and pay for said lands, in the option of any such settler, and in the time and at the prices now fixed by existing laws, shall remain in full force and effect: Provided, however, That all sums of money so released, which if not released would belong to any Indian tribe, shall be paid to such Indian tribe by the United States.

That is the measure which the St. Louis convention specifically and in terms indorsed and said they were in favor of. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] says to me they did not do any such thing. Let us see whether or not they did. This bill was reported to the Senate on the 16th of May, 1896, and on the 18th of June, 1896, the St. Louis platform was adopted. Now, let us see what the platform says:

We believe in an immediate return to the free-homestead policy of the Republican party, and urge the passage by Congress of a satisfactory free-homestead measure, such as has already passed the House and is now pending in the Senate.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Did they indorse the bill which passed the House?

Mr. PETTIGREW. "And is now pending in the Senate." What bill was pending in the Senate? The bill reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs, the bill I have read here in terms and words.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What did they indorse? Did they indorse the bill which passed the House or the bill that was pending in the Senate?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Both; the bill "such as has already passed the House and is now pending in the Senate."

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Does the Senator think they knew what was pending in the Senate?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think they did.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Or that this bill was any different from the bill pending in the Senate?

Mr. PETTIGREW. They knew all about it. There is no question about it.

Here is the difference between the two bills. The House bill provided for free homesteads in Oklahoma, every bit of which had been bought from Indians, and the Senate bill provided that the same provisions should extend to the other States of the West. Now, the Republicans went into the campaign in South Dakota, and on every stump they told these people that they should have free homes if the Republican party won and that they could not get them if they did not, and you pointed to the record of the Republican party as being the party in favor of free homesteads, and you showed them that the Democratic party had voted against it way back in 1860. You gained thousands of votes by that pretense and by that plank in your platform; and now you go back on it.

It is not the only plank you have gone back on. You have gone back on your whole record as a party. You have left the side of the people of this country. You have abandoned the principles that made your party great and respectable and have become the champions of everything that is corrupt and bad in American politics. That is the trouble. You abandoned this.

What is more, we passed this bill as a separate measure at the last session of Congress and it went to the House of Representatives exactly in words and terms as in this bill, being the same measure. Has the House done a thing with it? It is referred to the Calendar—the graveyard of the House. They will not even amend it and pass the provision in regard to Oklahoma; and one of the prominent members of the House stood up the other day and stated that it was made for the purpose of getting votes. One of the most prominent members of the House said that the plank was put in the platform, but the election was over. I wish I had his speech here. I should like to put it in the RECORD along with my statement in regard to it.

Mr. GALLINGER. If my friend the Senator from South Dakota will permit me, we ought to be somewhat exact in these historical matters. Do I understand that that plank was in the platform of the Republican party in 1896?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. And the campaign was waged in South Dakota in behalf of that plank by the Republican party?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. And the Senator who is speaking fought the Republican party in that campaign?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I did.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Republican party had not gone back on that plank at that time. How does it happen that the Senator was with the opposition in that campaign?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Oh, Mr. President, that is a long story, but I am willing to answer it. I left the Republican party at the St. Louis convention, and I am proud of it. There has never been a day from that time to this that I have not been glad of it. I stated in that campaign that if McKinley was elected I never could return to the party, because the forces which would control his Administration would make it impossible, but there was a chance to return to the party if he was defeated. Repeatedly on the stump I made that statement.

I left the St. Louis convention, first, because it declared for the gold standard, which will ruin every producer in this country and every other country that adopts and adheres to it. I left the Republican party because the trusts had captured your party and had complete control of your convention, and you left out the plank against trusts, which you had theretofore adopted, because the trusts, owning you and your party and in possession of your convention, did not want to abuse each other. Reason enough, reason sufficient to justify my course before the people I represent, and enough, in my opinion, to consign the Republican party to eternal oblivion.

What has been your course since? It is known throughout this country that vast sums of money are collected and that you are in alliance with the accumulated and concentrated wealth of this country, and that you rely upon them not only to carry your campaigns and furnish money to corrupt the elections, but to elect your Senators; and after you have done it, after you have elected by corrupt means a man to this body, the great convention of the State where it occurs passes resolutions congratulating themselves upon the infamy and declaring that they are glad of it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me again? He seems to be somewhat specific now, and he says that a man has been corruptly elected to this body and that the party has not only condoned it, but applauded it.

Mr. BACON. We should like very much to hear what the Senator from New Hampshire is saying.

Mr. GALLINGER. I made the observation that the Senator from South Dakota, in his fervor, which I think is manufactured for the occasion, has made the somewhat specific charge that somebody was corruptly elected to this body by the Republican party and that the Republican party has not only condoned it, but applauded it. I wish to ask the Senator if there is any proof that any man occupying a seat on this floor as a Republican was corruptly elected?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Oh, yes; and the proof is with the Committee on Elections. The proof is before the people of the United States, and they all know it, and it is conclusive.

Mr. GALLINGER. That might be said of an accusation against somebody whose case was before a grand jury and where the grand jury has not reported. I do not understand that the Committee on Elections has made a report to this body giving it as their deliberate conviction, after proper inquiry and investigation, that any accusation against a Republican occupying a seat here has been proved; and until that is done I think the Senator ought to be a little more careful about his statements on that point, with all due deference to his rights as a Senator.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am willing that the statement I have made shall go to the country. The proof was sufficient to satisfy the Senate of Ohio, and they sent the case here weeks ago. An innocent man would demand that our committee act before we adjourn. Why does the case sleep in the Senate committee?

Mr. WILSON. May I interrupt the Senator from South Dakota, not on the matter of his last observation, but more particularly in regard to the history of the free-homestead business?

The Senator has been upon the Committee on Indian Affairs for many years. It so happened that in another branch I was on the Committee on Indian Affairs also, and it so happened that I in part had charge, so far as that branch was concerned, of the appropriation bill for Indian affairs. During that time, and I think the Senator will corroborate my statement, every treaty which was ratified for the cession of lands to the United States contained a clause that they should be sold for so much per acre and the United States thereby reimbursed. It was so, if my memory is correct, with the reservations in South Dakota, with the reservations in Montana, with the reservations in Idaho.

I recollect distinctly that all along the line, whenever a Senator or a Representative, contending for the throwing open of those reservations, presented himself to the Committee on Appropriations for the ratification of such a treaty he stated that the Government of the United States would be reimbursed. The claim was the same. I do not recollect whether it was in the Fifty-second or the Fifty-third Congress, but I recollect distinctly that they said, "Open these reservations and the Government of the United States will be reimbursed by those who settle upon the land."

Mr. PETTIGREW. There is some truth in the suggestion made by the Senator from Washington. However, it does not apply to any reservation in the State I represent. I do not care, however, to go into that question for one single moment. We imposed these conditions. We said to the homesteaders, "Go upon the public domain and build your homes, live there five years, and then pay us for the land."

We found the conditions were hard. We found that, although the country was fertile, instead of its being a country where there was sufficient rainfall, it was a dry country, and the conditions of agriculture were very different from what these people had been accustomed to in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. Therefore we placed in the political platforms of 1896 a provision for releasing the settlers from this onerous provision. The plea of the Senator from Washington has been heard before.

Because the representatives of the poor people who have gone upon the frontier have stated in this Hall or in the other Hall or before the committees that the settlers would pay for the land, are we still to insist upon payment, although it drives them from the land and leaves them homeless?

Are we still to insist upon their leaving their homes because they can not pay for the lands? The argument which he presents is the same argument which made another, in times gone by, say:

I gave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Shylock wanted the pound of flesh nearest the heart, but we would drive the homesteader from the home upon which he has struggled for five years. Which is the worse—the ancient or the modern Shylock?

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, a single word in reply to the Senator from South Dakota. I made no plea. I simply gave the history of the transaction, as I remember it, as it passed the other House. But there was one thing about it that in his very eloquent remarks the Senator from South Dakota forgets to mention. We deprived by that legislation many poor men from going upon the homesteads, men who would have gone if they had known that the land was not to be paid for.

Knowing that the land had to be paid for at $1.25 or $2.50 an acre, men who could not afford to pay did not enter upon these reservations and take up homesteads. They were by their poverty deprived of that privilege. The error was made, if made at all, when we first enacted this legislation. We then should have stated that they were free homesteads and thrown them open to all the people of the United States upon an exact equality.

But to permit certain men who could afford to pay to go on the lands, and by our declaration that the lands must be paid for to deprive others from going, and now to give the former all the lands, seems to me to be an error of judgment, to say the least. That is the difference in this matter. I made no plea. I helped enact the legislation. I helped to enact it at the solicitation of the Western Senators, because we thought it would be beneficial to the interests of our entire country.

That it has not been is no fault of Congress. The contract was known. The contract was made, and had it provided for free homesteads, as, in my judgment, I will say to the Senator, it ought to have been, then a vast difference might have been made in the settlement upon these public lands, and men who did not go there because the law said they should pay so much an acre, and who did not feel that they would be able to pay and did not go, would have had the right which we, having denied them, now give to others.

Mr. PETTIGREW. This relieves the people who live five years on the land. It does not relieve the speculator. The speculator proves up before that time. He never stays. The man who enters land fit for a town site, a particularly valuable property, is not relieved under the provisions of this law. We never propose to relieve him. But the man who lives five years and made a home and who has found in that dry country that he can not make a living and pay for the land, it is a question with him whether he will leave his home and improvements after five years of struggle and let Uncle Sam have the land back or whether we will let him have it and let him go on with his improvement and his home and his developments and keep a settler there.

Mr. President, in ten counties in the State which I represent 18,000 people left their homes and abandoned the lands within three years' time. Sixty thousand people left the western part of Kansas for the same reason. Some of them have hung on there, and each year we have extended the time for payment year by year for the last four or five years. We will not exact a pound of flesh nearest the heart; we will not stand upon the letter of the bond, we say to them. "You may remain there; you have learned how in a measure to conduct agriculture in that dry country; we wish you success," say the political parties, every one of them. I would arraign the other political party if they were guilty of such a thing in 1896. They said, "We will give those men who have lived there five years their homes; we will encourage them to go forth and conquer the wilderness," and now the party in power refuses to carry out their contract. That is what I protest against, and that is the record I propose to make.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, this subject has been frequently discussed in this presence. As to-morrow opens a new fiscal year and it seems to be important that this bill should pass to-day, it is not my purpose now to delay the Senate longer than to call attention to the fact that this subject will not be permitted to rest upon the presumption of a contract which bars those now in office from demanding justice for their people.

Mr. ALLISON. May I disturb the Senator from Montana just one moment?

Mr. CARTER. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to state that the time has been extended to July, 1900, in the conference report on this very bill, which gives time and opportunity.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The House extended it one year.

Mr. CARTER. I realize the importance of that as a partial measure of justice.

The American Indians have had to all the land between the oceans, from the beginning, merely a possessory title. The Indians have stood in the relation of wards of the Government. They are, as a rule, not an industrious people, nor have they been anywhere, save in a very few instances, a self-supporting people. It is the boast of our civilization, in so far as the aborigines of the continent are concerned, that we have dealt with them with a firm hand, it is true, in enforcing law and order, but with a humane heart in demanding their support and in seeking to give to them the blessings of the civilization we enjoy.

These wards of the Government from the beginning have been regarded, and properly regarded, as a public charge. Their title to the land has been the merest fiction of a title. It has been deemed proper in extinguishing the shadow called possessory right to make treaties with these people for the purpose of avoiding expensive wars. Those treaties have had a twofold purpose; first, to avoid conflict with the Indians in removing them from one section of the country to the other, and, secondly, in providing a fund which the Indians have considered their own, from which fund they have been supported and expenditures for schools and various appliances have been met.

Mr. ALLEN. Is the Senator from Montana quite right when he says the Indian title is a mere possessory title?

Mr. CARTER. I think it is a mere shadow of possession, according to our view of the rights of the Indians on this continent.

Mr. SPOONER. It is not a shadow of possession; it is a possessory right; that is, a right of possession as long as they live.

Mr. ALLEN. A right to the soil.

Mr. CARTER. We as a Government assume supreme control over the continent of North America in so far as the jurisdiction of the United States is concerned.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator will permit me, the Supreme Court of the United States very early in its history held that the title of the Indians was a fee title, not a mere possession; that we obtained that title by conquest; and therefore the title was transferred from the Indians to this Government.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator from Nebraska cite the case to which he refers?

Mr. ALLEN. I can not give the title of the case, but if the Senator will turn to Story on the Constitution, he will find it on the first pages of that work.

Mr. TELLER. I challenge that statement.

Mr. SPOONER. Has it ever been held by the Supreme Court that the Indians had a fee title to the land?

Mr. TELLER. Never. It has been distinctly held that they had no fee title.

Mr. ALLEN. Now I have gotten into trouble.

Mr. CARTER. Serious trouble and deep water.

Mr. ALLEN. I will satisfy the gentlemen before the Senate adjourns sine die that I am right and they are wrong.

Mr. SPOONER. That is very indefinite. Will you fix a day certain?

Mr. PASCO. I do not think the Senator from Nebraska will find it in the Supreme Court decisions.

Mr. ALLEN. It will be found in the Supreme Court decisions.

Mr. CARTER. The Indian tribes have been regarded as wards of the Government and not as independent sovereign powers. Much of their title has been extinguished by conquest. In some cases they have been driven back from place to place and their lands occupied without a shadow of treaty. In other cases their reservations have been reduced with their consent by and through a treaty arrangement.

But, Mr. President, not wishing to get into a legal discussion upon this subject or upon the character of the Indian title, the truth is that in the case of treaties for the reduction of reservations the money appropriated for the purchase of land has been set apart for the support of the Indians. That has occurred in nearly every instance.

If this money had not been appropriated for the purchase of lands, it would of necessity have been appropriated for the support of the Indians without the intervention of any such subterfuge as a treaty of cession by an Indian tribe. It was wise and is wise now to have the Indians feel that they are living off their own money, notwithstanding the money is placed to their credit by a fiction, by the beneficence of the Government.

Up to 1889, I believe, or thereabouts, the practice of leaving the lands ceded by Indians open to occupation and settlement by the citizens of the country under the homestead law obtained as the policy of the Government. The policy was changed when the land remaining was of the most difficult quality encountered upon the continent to settle and subdue. We insist that since the surface of the States of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Arkansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, of all these great Commonwealths, with their wonderful soil, was left open and free as the summer air to the homestead settler, it is a manifest and glaring injustice now, when our people, driven to the frontier, are contending with the conditions of an arid country, to insist that a part of the revenue of the General Government shall be obtained by oppressing the people and making it more difficult for them to live and establish a civilization.

This may not be settled here to-day, Mr. President. It will not be settled until it is settled according to principles of right and justice, and until the settlers of to-day on the frontier shall be permitted to enjoy without restraint or limitation the same class of privileges and to the same degree that the settler of the great prairies of Illinois and of the Mississippi Valley enjoyed in the days gone by.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not desire at this late hour to debate the whole Indian question. I think the indictment of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PERRIERE] is well laid against the Republican Administration, so far at least as the House of Representatives is concerned. The Senate by a very decided majority, in the spring of 1890, passed this provision word for word as it now is. The conditions that existed at the time of the contract these people had made with the Government to pay for this land had so materially changed that it was felt by the Senate that it was a righteous thing to do. Thereupon we passed the bill. What we complain of is that the Republican organization, after approving of that legislation, having gone to the country and professed great interest in the settler, shall to-day be found solidly in another place against this kind of legislation.

Mr. President, I do not say this for political effect. I say it in the interest of the settler. We have discovered and these settlers have discovered that they can not make good their contracts with the Government. The question is whether the Government is to be a hard landlord and exact from them the payment of that which they can not make, or whether the Government, with its great wealth and great strength, will simply remit to them, and as the Senator from Montana says, apply the principle which has been applied to other sections, and that is that the settler shall have a free home if he will stay there and make it.

As the Senator from Montana says, this question will not be settled until it is settled properly. These people can not pay unless conditions materially change. There is not one settler out of fifty who can make good his contract with the Government. He will not stay there upon the supposition that he has got to pay. He will abandon his effort to make a home there. He will go out and hunt for a piece of land somewhere, if he can find it, upon which he can plant himself and not pay for it.

Everybody ought to realize that the good land of this nation is practically gone now; that every quarter section which is attempted to be subdued is subdued under difficulties that the early settlers of the West did not meet. We shall be compelled to do either one of two things. I have said it before, and I want to repeat it. The American people may take their choice. We shall either be compelled to remit to these people what they have agreed to pay, or we will be compelled to put them off this land.

In many instances the settlers will do what the Senator from South Dakota says they have done in his State; they will leave. In many instances they are too poor to leave. They can eke out a miserable existence and hope for better times and better prices and better climatic conditions, that they pray may come. They may stay there, and they will stay there until such time as the Government of the United States will either be required to put them off or acknowledge that they have a right to stay there without payment.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from Colorado permit me? The Senator was one who disputed the proposition I made a moment ago. I quote from Johnson vs. McIntosh, 8 Wheaton, 543, as quoted literally in 1 Story on the Constitution.

Mr. TELLER. I will let the Senator read the syllabus. That will be the best way.

Mr. ALLEN. The syllabus is not here. It is simply the body of the opinion.

Mr. TELLER. Read the body of the opinion, then.

Mr. ALLEN. I have not had time to read the whole opinion over, but I will read one paragraph. To-morrow after I have looked it through I will read more of it. In speaking of how titles were treated in the United States during the colonial days the court says:

It has never been objected, to this, or to any other similar grant, that the title as well as possession was in the Indians when it was made, and that it passed nothing on that account.

Distinctly recognizing title to possession.

Mr. TELLER. I will let the Senator present himself to-morrow or some other day with this simple statement on my part, that the Supreme Court of the United States repeatedly declared that the fee was in the Government and the possession was with the Indians. The case of the Cherokee People vs. The State of Georgia, occurring many years ago, is the case to which I supposed the Senator from Nebraska alluded.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Worcester vs. The State of Georgia.

Mr. TELLER. That, I think, is the case, but it was a question of Cherokee title.

Mr. ALLEN. This is the case I had in my mind.

Mr. TELLER. No matter what that title was, I do not regard that as a precedent. This is a matter that I do not care about discussing now, because it does not enter into this question.

Mr. ALLEN. I understand that; but I think the Senator will, in view of the fact that the Senator and three or four others here immediately denied the proposition—

Mr. TELLER. I deny it now, but I do not intend to debate it. When the Senator takes up the authorities, he will be convinced. He will read them to-morrow. I do not want to keep the Senate here to discuss that question.

Mr. ALLEN. I read them twenty years ago. They have never changed in that time.

Mr. TELLER. They recognize that the Indians have a title, but it is not a title they can sell to anybody else. There is some Indian land that has a fee where we issue patents to them in the Indian Territory, but the Indians who roam and had nothing but a treaty never had a fee. However, they had a title of such a character that we ought to have bought it, a possessory title. But we did not buy it.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. In the tribe.

Mr. TELLER. In the tribe and not in the Indians.

Mr. ALLEN. Nobody ever claimed it to be a title in individuals. It was a property in common. But where the Indian tribes had a definite territory in their possession, they had a title to that property as complete as any white man has by deed.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, they had no fee. I do not speak unadvisedly on this subject.

Mr. ALLEN. Nor do I speak unadvisedly.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator certainly speaks improperly, if he does not speak unadvisedly—

Mr. ALLEN. I speak from what I have read.

Mr. TELLER. Because that is not the law touching this case. As I said, it has nothing to do with it. We bought these Indians out. We are dealing now not with the Indian, but with the settler, and it is a question whether we are to give to the settler the land or whether we will not, because that is what it amounts to. The settler will not pay for it; he ought not to pay for it. He can not pay for it and he ought not to be required. I think the Senator from Nebraska agrees with us on that proposition.

Mr. President, this is all I wish to say, except that I regret on the last day of the fiscal year we are compelled to yield this amendment. I am not going to bring any accusation against the committee. I understand from what the committee say it was deemed that the bill would fail before the House would yield on that simple proposition.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I am not going to consume the time of the Senate to-night because my proposition of law has been disputed. I long since learned not to take the word of an adversary upon a proposition of law, or to take his construction of it, but to take my own; and no lawyer can practice law successfully who does not do so.

The Supreme Court of the United States has held—and I say it is undisputed and indisputable—that the possession and the fee title of the North American Continent was in the possession of the Indians when captured or when discovered and first settled by the white man.

That title was extinguishable, and was extinguished, in one of two ways—by conquest or by cession through the instrumentality of a treaty. That much for that proposition of law, which I am willing to meet Senators upon any time it may become germane to the discussion. I admit that it was a little abstract when I injected it into the discussion in which we are now engaged, but the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] had said, and repeated it, I think, for the third time, when I interrupted him, that the Indians never had any title to land, that it was simply a possessory right, of a shadowy or nebulous character at that, and I did not think that a great question of real estate law should pass in the Senate with a representation or statement of that kind.

Mr. TELLER. Would not the Senator call a possessory right a title of some character?

Mr. ALLEN. A possessory right simply is not a fee right or title.

Mr. TELLER. Of course. That is what we mean.

Mr. ALLEN. It may be an easement; it may be a perpetual easement; it may be an easement which is determinable by some event.

Mr. SPOONER. A perpetual easement to a tract of land would be pretty near a title, would it not?

Mr. ALLEN. No, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. I mean to a whole tract?

Mr. ALLEN. No, sir. A man might have a perpetual easement for agricultural purposes, and yet the owner of the fee have a right, an indisputable right, for mining and other purposes, and the two titles be absolutely consistent and the two possessions consistent; and that the courts have held hundreds of times; and I have never heard it before disputed.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not want the Senator to think that I was disputing that.

Mr. ALLEN. I modify the remark, then.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator did not.

Mr. SPOONER. I only say that it is a considerable title which gives a man and his heirs forever a right of possession.

Mr. ALLEN. For instance, and to illustrate, I call to mind now a case which happened in the State so ably represented by the Senator in charge of this bill [Mr. ALLISON], a case happening in the city of Keokuk—and, as I begin to think about these matters, I can call them up by the hundred—but the city of Keokuk had a perpetual easement over certain land for street purposes, an indeterminate easement, and yet the court—and I think it was the Supreme Court of the United States—held that the owner of the fee retained the right to mine coal under that street and retained the reversionary interest.

If you come to examine the books, you will find cases by the hundred and almost by the thousand without dispute. So it is that any people in possession, in absolute, open, and exclusive possession, of the land, a tribe or nation of people, are always held to own the soil on which they live, for a fee title carries everything above and everything below the surface until some other nation or tribe acquires the title of that property by a transfer of some kind or by armed conquest and excludes the occupants from it. I say there is not a law book written in the English language that teaches a doctrine different from that, and there is not a court whose opinion is worth having that ever held the contrary doctrine.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. Senators all around me say "No," but the Senator from Nebraska says "Yes." Does the Senator contend that after the adoption of the Constitution of the United States the tribal title of the Indians throughout the country was a fee title?

Mr. ALLEN. I do, to every foot of territory they occupied as a tribe.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a question aside from the subject we are considering.

Mr. ALLEN. I have been trying to get away from it as rapidly as I could.

Mr. ALLISON. If I can help the Senator to do so, I shall be very glad.

Mr. SPOONER. I think the Senator will find it very difficult to get away from it.

Mr. ALLEN. I will say to the Senator, in all seriousness, that I will forfeit readily for any charitable purpose $100 if he will forfeit a like sum in case I do not demonstrate the truthfulness of my proposition.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not think I would get into a bet with the Senator about it.

Mr. ALLEN. Well, I would bet; I am not so good that I would not do that under some circumstances.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator would enlist, perhaps, if I would. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. Yes; I will do that.

Mr. President, I will pass from this somewhat abstract question, a question which is none the less interesting and worthy of the study of intellectual gentlemen, to the simple proposition of recession from this amendment.

I am interested in maintaining this amendment to this bill, and I can not understand why there should be any hesitancy to hold the free-homes amendment on the bill. It seems unfortunate that when we amend a bill we have got to constantly struggle to retain our amendments. All the hostility which comes to the amendments comes from the House of Representatives, and our committees have receded and receded and receded, session after session, until it seems to be taken as a part of the unwritten law of Congress that whenever the conferees of the House of Representatives protest vigorously, there is but one thing to do, and that is for the Senate committee to take to cover.

Mr. President, this free-homestead measure is right; and no man can dispute it. It was said here a moment ago that the title to these lands was procured from the Indians—and I might say parenthetically that it is rather singular that we procured title from the Indians if they did not have title to procure—and that the Government sold these lands for fixed prices, intending and expecting to reimburse itself for money expended. Let that be granted; that is true; there is no dispute about that.

Upon the strength of that it is said these lands were sold to the settlers who are now on them. That statement is true. But, Mr. President, conditions have changed. Are we to deal with the settlers on these public lands as one man would deal with another respecting a matter of private business or the transfer of private title? I certainly think not.

We are legislating, or presumably, at least, we are legislating, for the benefit of settlers on those lands as well as for the benefit of the settlers elsewhere; and when it is made to appear that 100,000 families of those settlers, who have been occupying Indian lands for five or six years, will, unless a provision of this kind is adopted, be driven from their homes and become charges upon the remainder of the nation in one form or another; when it is made to appear that these people for five or six years have given their best energies to the building up of those sections, constructing homes, opening farms, building schools and churches and towns; when it is made to appear that they will be driven from those lands, and that all their labor and all their money put into improvements will be lost, it seems to me there ought to be no hesitancy about adopting and adhering to a measure of this character.

It seems like pulling eyeteeth to get a little measure of justice of this kind for this class of people. Senators will stand here and contend as though this were a court of a justice of the peace, that these people entered into a contract and that they must be required to live up to that contract, whether they have the means or not.

Mr. President, we are making laws, not enforcing them; and presumably we make laws in consequence of equitable circumstances call for their adoption. Here is a vast body of our citizens who are unfortunate, 100,000 families at least who have faced the perils and the dangers of pioneer life, who have gone upon these bleak prairies and established homes, and because they have been unfortunate for lack of sufficient rainfall in the production of crops, in the obtaining of means to sustain themselves and to meet their obligations, they are to be turned out of their homes and lose the money and labor they have put upon their property without any compensation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference.

The report was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives in reference to the general deficiency appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and asking for a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments to the bill disagreed to by the House of Representatives and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 6149) to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. 10051) to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 10693) directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. MASON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, July 1, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, June 30, 1898.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6908) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 13, 18, 23, 24, 48, 50, 59, 63, 71, and 72.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 38, 40, 41, 43, 45, 47, 48, 51, 54, 56, 60, 61, 62, 65, 66, 67, 68, and 69, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment strike out the word "only;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add at the end of said amendment the following: "and one of whom may be located by the Secretary of the Interior in the Indian Territory, and under his direction and authority may perform any duties required by law of said Secretary relating to affairs in said Territory;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out, in line 4 of said amendment, the words "agent for said Indians" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Secretary of the Interior;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the word "Interior," in line 4 of said amendment, and insert in lieu of the matter stricken out the following: " $5,000, to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the word "Interior," in line 4 of said amendment, and insert in lieu of the matter stricken out the following: " $5,000, to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 27: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"For the erection at the Puyallup Indian Agency School, Washington, of a new boys' dormitory and a building for dining room, kitchen, and laundry, $10,000; and for water system, sewerage, and minor changes and improvements, $10,000; in all, $20,000."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is hereby directed to examine into and report to Congress, at its next session, upon the practicability and desirability and cost of establishing an Indian industrial school on the Fort Keogh Military Reservation, in the State of Montana."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 37: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Appeals shall be allowed from the United States courts in the Indian Territory direct to the Supreme Court of the United States to either party, in all citizenship cases, and in all cases between either of the Five Civilized Tribes and the United States involving the constitutionality or validity of any legislation affecting citizenship, or the allotment of lands, in the Indian Territory, under the rules and regulations governing appeals to said court in other cases: Provided, That appeals in cases decided prior to this act must be perfected in one hundred and twenty days from its passage; and in cases decided subsequent thereto, within sixty days from final judgment; but in no such case shall the work of the commission to the Five Civilized Tribes be enjoined or suspended by any proceeding in, or order of, any court, or of any judge, until after final judgment in the Supreme Court of the United States. In case of appeals, as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the Supreme Court to advance such cases on the docket and dispose of the same as early as possible;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out from said amendment, in lines 3 and 4, the words "Monday in December, 1898," and insert in lieu of the words so stricken out the following: "day of April, 1899;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add after the word "necessary," at the end of said amendment, the following: "any agreement made hereunder to be submitted to Congress for its approval;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 46: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$3,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 52: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 52, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The right is hereby granted to cut timber for mining and domestic purposes, at such prices and subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, from that portion of the Colville Indian Reservation in the State of Washington which was vacated and restored to the public domain by the act of July 1, 1892, entitled 'An act to provide for the opening of a part of the Colville Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes,' and the net proceeds arising from the disposition of said timber shall be set apart and disposed of according to the provisions of section 2 of said act of July 1, 1892, but primarily the expense incident to disposing of said timber, including compensation of such special agent as the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint, shall be paid out of any existing appropriation for the survey and allotment of said lands and shall be reimbursed and replaced from the proceeds arising from the disposition of the timber."

"The Indian allotments in severalty provided for in said act shall be selected and completed at the earliest practicable time, and not later than six months after the proclamation of the President opening the vacated portion of said reservation to settlement and entry, which proclamation may be issued without awaiting the survey of the unsurveyed lands therein. Said allotments shall be made from lands which shall at the time of the selection thereof be surveyed, excepting that any Indian entitled to allotment under said act who has improvements upon unsurveyed land may select the same for his allotment, whereupon the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the same to be surveyed and allotted to him. At the expiration of six months from the date of the proclamation by the President, and not before, the non-mineral lands within the vacated portion of said reservation which shall not have been allotted to Indians as aforesaid shall be subject to settlement, entry, and disposition under the act of July 1, 1892: Provided, That the land used and occupied for school purposes at what is known as Tonasket School, on Bonaparte Creek, and the site of the sawmill, gristmill, and other mill property on said reservation are hereby reserved from the operation of this act, unless other lands are selected in lieu thereof, as provided in section 6 of the aforesaid act of July 1, 1892."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 53: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 53, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out, in line 2 of said amendment, the word "availability" and insert in lieu thereof the word "practicability;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the words "and required" and in line 20 strike out the sum named and insert in lieu thereof "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following:

"For ascertaining the depth of the bed rock at a place on the Gila River, in Gila County, Ariz., known as the Buttes, and particularly described in Senate Document No. 27, Fifty-fourth Congress, second session, and for ascertaining the feasibility, and estimating in detail the cost, of the construction of a dam across the river at that point for purpose of irrigating the Sacaton Reservation, and for ascertaining the average daily flow of water in the river at that point, $30,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the same to be expended by the Director of the United States Geological Survey, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as in any way committing the United States to the construction of said dam. And said Director shall also ascertain and report upon the feasibility and cost of the Queen Creek project mentioned in said Senate document."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"That the settlers who purchased with the condition annexed of actual settlement on all ceded Indian reservations be, and they are hereby, granted an extension to July 1, 1900, in which to make payments as now provided by law."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add, after the word "provision," at the end of the section, the following: " Provided, That so much of the appropriations herein made as may be required to pay for goods and supplies, for expenses incident to their purchase, and for transportation of the same, for the year ending June 30, 1899, shall be immediately available; but no such goods or supplies shall be distributed or delivered to any of said Indians prior to July 1, 1899;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Insert before the matter inserted by said amendment the following: "Sec. 10;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 11. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to pay, out of the appropriation of the act of Congress of June 7, 1897, such of the Creek warrants as are proven to be held by innocent holders who acquired them in good faith for value and without knowledge, actual or constructive, of irregularity or fraud in the issuance thereof, and such warrants shall upon payment be canceled by the Secretary of the Interior; and all the warrants so issued by said Creek Nation shall be presented to the Secretary of the Interior within ninety days from the passage of this act, and all warrants not so presented are hereby declared null and void, and such warrants so presented which are not proven to have been issued or acquired in good faith for value and without knowledge, actual or constructive, of irregularity or fraud in the issuance thereof, shall be held by the Secretary and marked upon their face "fraudulent and void."

And the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference recommend to their respective Houses the following verbal amendments in the text of the bill, namely:

On page 16, in line 20, strike out the word "sixteenth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventeenth;" on page 17, line 1, strike out the word "twenty-ninth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "last;" on same page, line 17, strike out the word "ninth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "tenth;" on page 19, line 2, strike out the word "second," where it first occurs, and insert in lieu thereof the word "third;" on page 20, line 23, strike out the word "twenty-ninth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "last;" on page 28, line 10, strike out the word "twenty-eighth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-ninth," and on same page, line 24, strike out the word "twenty-eighth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-ninth."

J. S. SHERMAN,
CHAS. CURTIS,

Managers on the part of the House.

W. B. ALLISON,
GEO. C. PERKINS,
F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HULL. The Committee on Rules gave the Committee on Military Affairs two days in which to consider bills reported from that committee. I got the impression from the Committee on Rules when the report was made that the two days meant two full days.

The SPEAKER. How many hours?

Mr. HULL. That would depend on how long the House sat. I simply want to know whether the session of yesterday closed the power of the Committee on Military Affairs, under the rule adopted by the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it did. The Clerk will proceed.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the conferees be read and that the report be omitted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to omit the reading of the conference report and substitute therefor the statement of the House conferees. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

Statement of House conferees, to accompany report of conference committee on the Indian appropriation bill.

The conference report makes some purely verbal corrections of errors which were overlooked when the bill passed both the House and the Senate. From amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 13, 18, 23, 24, 45, 50, 59, 63, 71, and 72 the Senate recedes, leaving the bill in those particulars as it left the House.

The House recedes from amendments numbered 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 47, 48, 51, 54, 55, 60, 61, 62, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, and from amendments numbered 4, 6, 12, 15, 16, 27, 28, 37, 38, 42, 44, 46, 52, 53, 55, 64, and 73, it recedes with amendments, and to amendments 57 and 58 the Senate recedes with amendments which are explained hereafter, and from 38 the House and Senate both recede, leaving the entire provision out of the bill.

Amendment numbered 4 provides that the President may detail Army officers as Indian agents at such agencies as, in his opinion, require the presence of an Army officer. This had been the law prior to 1893, when it was changed to compel the President to detail Army officers. It would seem that the civil branch of the Government should be in the hands of civil officers unless special conditions demand the presence of an Army officer.

Amendments 5, 6, and 7 cover but one subject. The present inspection force is not sufficient for the requirements of the service, and, with the increase of three inspectors, it is expected to have one detailed by the Secretary to discharge the additional duties devolved upon him by recent and expected legislation as to the Indian Territory and, at the same time, relieve the present force of the duties they now have in that Territory. One, it is expected, will be detailed by the Secretary to perform the duties for which special commissioners have heretofore been provided, and also to assist in general field work, and by the terms of the amendment the third is to be a practical engineer and be put in charge of irrigation work.

Amendments 8 and 9 are the changes in the amount of the appropriation made necessary by the adoption of No. 5.

Amendment 10 simply protects the Government against any claim by reason of overflow caused by the construction of irrigation dams.

The provision of the bill to which No. 11 applies was first inserted when Dakota was a Territory, and now that the Territory has become two States, both should be named in the section. It entails no additional appropriation.

Amendment No. 12 prevents the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians in South Dakota from leasing their lands, except with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. This condition was removed some years since and experience has proven the advisability of restoring it. It also prohibits subleases.

Amendment numbered 14 does not increase the appropriation, but enlarges the scope of its expenditures "in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior."

The necessity for the appropriation called for by amendments 15 and 16 seemed so urgent, as shown by the Department reports, that the amounts were increased to conform to such recommendation.

A gradual reduction of 20 per cent per annum of the appropriation for contract schools was inaugurated some years ago. That reduction was one year increased to 30 per cent; hence the amendment was inserted in this bill increasing from 20 per cent to 30 per cent the amount provided for the next fiscal year.

No. 19 increases by $20,000 the appropriation for the Flandreau School. This appropriation provides for the erection of the buildings necessary to increase the capacity of this school to 300 pupils.

The amount appropriated in the appropriation bill for 1897 for a steam heating plant at the Genoa School was not expended during the fiscal year, and amendment 21 simply reappropriates the amount for the original purpose.

No. 22 appropriates $1,600 to finish certain work in progress at the Grand Junction Indian School.

Amendment 25 increases by $1,500 the amount of appropriation for equipment and minor improvements at the Sac and Fox School, Iowa, and amendment 26 simply changes the amount of the total made necessary by amendment 25.

Amendment 27 provides for improvements the necessity for which was stated in detail to the conference committee by the senior Senator from Washington, and by a Department report made subsequent to the passage of the bill in the House.

Amendment numbered 28, as amended by the conference report, makes no appropriation, but simply provides for an examination as to the feasibility of transforming an old military post into an Indian school.

Amendments numbered 29, 30, 31, and 32 make the membership of the so-called "Dawes Commission" four instead of three, as provided by the bill when it left the House, and makes the necessary changes in amount of appropriation.

Amendments 34 and 35 authorize the employment of interpreters by said Dawes Commission and authorize the payment of those already employed.

No. 36 simply changes the total of appropriation made necessary by 29.

Amendment 37 as agreed to simply provides for appeals in citizenship and allotment cases in the Five Civilized Tribes.

Amendment 39 extends the time within which an irrigation company may complete a work in progress.

Amendment 40 provides for an investigation by an Indian inspector and a report to the next session of Congress in reference to improvements on the Shoshone Reservation. No appropriation is made.

No. 41 increases by $5,000 the appropriation for the Crow and Flathead Commission, and 42 limits the life of that commission to April 1, 1890.

No. 43 provides for a resurvey of the boundary lines of the Klamath Indian Reservation with a view to a final determination of the controversy of long standing in reference thereto; and 44 provides for negotiations through an Indian inspector with the Klamath Indians for the relinquishment of whatever right or interest they may have.

Amendments 45 and 46 provide for certain surveys and the inspection thereof, which the Department informs the conference committee are advisable.

No. 47 appropriates $2,000 to continue the service of a commissioner to superintend the sale of lands of the Puyallup Indian Reservation.

No. 49 provides for the continuance of a work in progress, the necessity for which is set forth in a special report from the Department.

No. 51 opens the south half of the Colville Reservation for mineral entry.

No. 52 permits the cutting of timber on the north half of the Colville Reservation.

No. 53 directs the Secretary of the Interior to make investigation as to a water supply for the Southern Ute Indians, and, if deemed advisable, to make contracts therefor under stated restrictions, and to be paid for out of the funds of said Indians.

No. 54 permits the employment of a special attorney to prosecute the claims of the Pueblo Indians.

No. 55 authorizes the expenditure of $40,000 in assembling Indians at the Omaha Exposition for the purpose of illustrating the past and present condition of the race.

No. 56 authorizes the inhabitants of Wadsworth, Nev., to acquire title to town sites by due process, the receipts therefrom to be deposited in the Treasury to the credit and for the benefit of the Piute Indians.

Amendment 58 is the free homes amendment. From it the Senate recedes with an amendment to the House provision extending to two years the time under which settlers now on lands may make the payments provided by law.

Nos. 61, 62, 64, 65, 68, and 69 are simply changes of the numbers of the sections of the bill made necessary by other changes.

Amendment 64 makes immediately available the appropriation for transportation.

No. 66 gives the Department authority to move property from an agency where it is not needed to one where it is needed, or to sell the same and apply the proceeds in the purchase of needed property.

No. 67 authorizes the Secretary, where the advanced conditions of the Indians warrant, to pay in money instead of rations.

No. 70 directs the Secretary, through the inspection force, to investigate into and report upon the advisability of removing the Northern Cheyenne Indians to the Crow Reservation in Montana, and directs in detail the line of said investigation.

No. 73 provides a means of determining the validity of the unpaid Creek warrants, heretofore authorized to be paid out of the Creek fund, and where said warrants are found to be legally issued and in the hands of innocent parties directs their payment.

The total increase made in the appropriation carried by the bill by Senate amendments is $157,400.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table the deficiency bill, and I desire to move that the House nonconcur in all the Senate amendments and request a conference with the Senate. Before that motion is put, I desire to state that the bill is increased in round numbers $10,000,000. Eight millions is for war, or for alleged war purposes, and the other two millions cover many items which I have not had time to closely examine, some of which are proper, possibly some not warranted by the public service.

There is also among the Senate amendments a proposition to fund the Central Pacific Railroad debt and create a commission composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney-General, and to authorize the extension of time for ten years, in twenty semiannual payments of the amount, giving this commission plenary power in the premises, with the limitation of the approval of the President, and to make such provisions within the limitation as it seems proper. I have not had time to carefully examine it, but I will ask the House to adopt the motion to nonconcur in all these amendments and let it go to conference.

Mr. MAGUIRE. We shall desire a separate vote on the Pacific Railroad funding amendment which has been added, and we do not want any proceedings now that will cut off debate upon that measure. We think it ought to have a reasonable debate in the House.

Mr. CANNON. I will say in reply to the gentleman from California, that it is a proposition of so much importance, coming, as it does, by the way of a Senate amendment, that while I have a conviction that there ought to be legislation touching it, I will ask that this morning, without debate, nonconcurrence be had in that as well as the other amendments, stating to the House that I do not believe it ought to be agreed to one way or the other in conference until after the matter is reported back to the House and the House has had an opportunity, with such reasonable debate as is proper, to express itself as to whether there should be any legislation; and if so, what legislation.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I understand the chairman agrees to that as far as he is concerned.

Mr. CANNON. Well, if I am in charge of the bill, I have no doubt my confrères will agree with me as to the course that will be pursued.

Mr. MAGUIRE. With that understanding, I do not desire to delay the matter in going to conference.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I understood the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the committee, to say that there were some alleged items of war necessity. I want to ask if it is his opinion that these items referred to are not real war necessities?

Mr. CANNON. I have no reason to suppose that the eight millions put on by the Senate amendment are not for real war purposes. It is almost impossible with the many expeditions to Manila, and to the West Indies, and the different projects in prospect to give any accurate estimate of the cost of this service. We have had three sets of estimates before this bill was passed by the House. With the time that has elapsed, and the great necessity the Government is under to carry on the war, I think it entirely likely that the eight millions represent real necessity for expenditure, or at least funds that should be available, but I do not want to express a positive opinion about that, but will ascertain, so that whatever occasion may be had for ratification by the House, the House can act as intelligently as may be in light of the information obtained by its conference.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I understand upon these items the House would have an opportunity to have a separate vote?

Mr. CANNON. I do not want to put that too broadly. Of course the House could vote down the conference report. If it should appear to the conferees, after full and careful inquiry, that the $8,000,000, or any proportion thereof, was really required for genuine war expenditures, as we are now approaching the time when we can adjourn and get away from here until December, it is likely that the conferees would close the matter up in conference, and of course the House would have the full power to accept or reject the conference report. But the matter of the Pacific Railway fund stands differently. That is a matter of such universal interest that it seemed to be proper to say what I did to the gentleman from California, that there should be no agreement on the part of the House conferees until the matter was reported back and the House had an opportunity to register its will.

Mr. DALZELL. As I understand, the effect of the Senate amendment is that the Government shall not accept less than the whole amount of the debt with interest.

Mr. CANNON. The whole amount of the debt with interest, and on the extended payment, 8 per cent.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, there have come here so many protests against certain items in this bill which discriminate against certain interests of the country, particularly interests which I represent on the Pacific coast, that, having propounded these queries to my friend from Illinois, I desire to state that all the items which are necessary for the prosecution of the war I want to support, but all those which are not for the prosecution of the war but which come here under the guise of war claims, and which discriminate against the Pacific coast and its interests, I wish to oppose.

Mr. CANNON. Of course, the gentleman, either by opposition to the conference report as a whole or by singling out particular items, can have the opportunity of making known his desire in the premises. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. CANNON, Mr. NORTHWAY, and Mr. SAYERS as conferees on the part of the House.

ADJOURNMENT OVER FOURTH OF JULY.

Mr. HENDERSON. I move that when the House adjourns tomorrow, it adjourn to meet on Tuesday next. It seems desirable that this matter should be settled now, so that members may make their plans for the Fourth of July.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I would prefer that the gentleman should postpone this motion until a little later in the day, or possibly until to-morrow. This being the last day of the fiscal year, I shall in a few moments submit a report on the sundry civil bill, which I hope may become a law to-day; if not, a joint resolution extending the various appropriations will be necessary.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think my friend from Illinois does not comprehend my motion. It does not interfere with the session of to-morrow, but merely provides that when we adjourn to-morrow it shall be till Tuesday next. Present action on this matter is desirable, so that members may make their plans for the Fourth of July.

Mr. CANNON. I think it entirely probable that a little later in the day the motion of the gentleman may appear to be a proper one; but none of us would desire to dispense with the Saturday session if by sitting on that day we can close up the deficiency bill.

Mr. HENDERSON. If the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has any reason for wishing that this motion be withheld, I will not press it.

Mr. CANNON. I would be glad if the gentleman would withdraw the motion for the present.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will do so.

The SPEAKER. The motion is withdrawn.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed joint resolutions of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

S. R. 178. Joint resolution to carry out the recommendations of the President of the United States touching certain officers of the Revenue-Cutter Service; and

S. R. 179. Joint resolution tendering the thanks of Congress to Asst. Naval Constructor Richmond Pearson Hobson and to the volunteer crew of the Merrimac and authorizing the transfer of Assistant Naval Constructor Hobson from the construction corps to the line of the United States Navy.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON submitted a conference report, which was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8428) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

J. G. CANNON,

WM. A. STONE,

JOSEPH D. SAYERS,

Managers on the part of the House.

W. R. ALLISON,

EUGENE HALE,

A. P. GORMAN,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. CANNON. I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate. Yesterday a similar report to this was presented. We then met the Senate conferees and told them frankly the position of the House, and the discussion which had been had here, and the unanimous vote of the House touching the five items in controversy. As we were not at liberty to consent to a proposition that the House recede, the Senate conferees said, "Well, we will have another disagreement." Of course, we can always "agree to disagree." Now, unless the House has changed its views touching these matters, I ask that it further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments. Then it will be for the Senate, upon being informed of our action, to recede from its amendments or to take whatever other course may seem to it proper.

The motion of Mr. CANNON that the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate was agreed to.

PRINTING OF REPORT ON COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to call up from the Speaker's table a concurrent resolution of the House with Senate amendments.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

The SPEAKER. This is the regular order.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to print for distribution by the Department of State 5,000 copies of Commercial Relations, 1896 and 1897, and in separate form 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce, and so forth, being part of said Commercial Relations.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

After the word "Relations," in line 5, insert "and 500 copies for the use of the Senate and 1,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives."

After the word "forth," in line 8, insert "500 copies for the use of the Senate and 1,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives."

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.
The motion was agreed to.

INTERNATIONAL AMERICAN BANK.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table the bill S. 3414, and ask its adoption at this time.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman submits that motion, I desire to know if that bill is really on the Speaker's table, or if it is in the committee?

The SPEAKER. It is on the table.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand that it has been before the Committee on Banking and Currency; and if so, I make the point of order that the bill is not on the table and can not be called up in this way.

The SPEAKER. This bill has not been before the committee—

Mr. BAILEY. I was so informed by a member of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The misapprehension arose, perhaps, from the fact that the clerk allowed the bill to be examined and compared by members of the committee.

Mr. COX. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to know the facts in connection with this bill. Now, a bill like this—a bill of the same effect and having the same objects in view—came before the Committee on Banking and Currency and was reported back to the House. While that bill was here, before the committee, the Senate passed a bill of the same general character—

The SPEAKER. Substantially the same bill?

Mr. COX. Yes, the same bill.

Now, when that Senate bill came back to the House it went to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and thereupon the committee reported it back as a Senate bill and as a substitute for the original bill introduced by the committee.

Now I raise the point—these are the facts in connection with the matter—I raise the point that this bill can not occupy the position of privilege that the gentleman seems desirous of giving to it. I can not see how it is privileged under the circumstances. There is no dispute about the facts. They are just as I have stated them.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to understand the facts fully in reference to the matter. As the Chair has understood, the House committee passed a bill substantially the same as that which is now presented to the House for its consideration, a bill which was passed by the Senate.

Mr. COX. If the Chair will pardon me, the bill that came before the committee and was reported to the House from the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House was not the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER. No; the Chair did not mean to so intimate; but the House bill is substantially the same, as the Chair understands, as the Senate bill. Is that correct?

Mr. COX. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that it is substantially the same. That bill was reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House. But it is lying there for action, and the Senate passed their bill—an entirely different bill. Their bill came over here finally and was sent to the Committee on Banking and Currency. Thereupon that committee reported that Senate bill as a substitute for the original bill of the House. I have the facts before me, if the Chair will allow me a moment.

Mr. BAILEY. The point of order, I think, Mr. Speaker, has not been disposed of yet.

The SPEAKER. It has not been and will not be disposed of until the Chair is in possession of the facts.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Banking and Currency had before them the bill H. R. 7341. That bill provided for a special charter of an international American bank. The consideration of the matter was referred to a subcommittee, and they reported back the bill with instructions, or the recommendation, that it should become a general law.

While this matter was so pending before the House and in the committee, the Senate passed a bill making a general law covering the subject, and the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House passed a bill—or recommended a bill—identical in its provisions, with instructions to substitute this identical bill for the pending bill. The original bill was the bill H. R. 7341, and the substitute bill covering the same ground is the bill H. R. 10807.

The Senate bill comes over from the Senate and is lying upon the table, and under the rules I am instructed to call up the Senate bill, there being an identical bill or a bill substantially identical now upon the Calendar, No. 10807, reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency. And under those instructions I call up Senate bill 3414.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from Connecticut permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. I should like to ask the gentleman if the Committee on Banking and Currency have not directed him to offer certain amendments to the Senate bill?

Mr. HILL. They have.

Mr. BAILEY. Then will the gentleman tell the House how it could be that a committee of the House could consider amendments to a bill without ever having the bill before them?

Mr. HILL. The amendments that are to be offered are to be offered to the substitute that the Committee on Banking and Currency have reported.

Mr. BAILEY. Offered to the Senate bill?

Mr. HILL. To the substitute that the Committee on Banking and Currency have reported, and if the gentleman will read the report he will see that there is no parliamentary complication.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I simply desire to make this suggestion: That the rules of this House prescribe an order of business, and the fourth order of business every morning is the disposal of business on the Speaker's table. That must be disposed of by laying it before the House or by reference to a committee. I am aware that a different practice has grown up, of which I am not disposed to complain, as to bills about which there is absolutely no objection; but upon a bill of this kind the rule ought to be strictly observed. This bill passed the Senate on the 17th day of June—nearly two weeks ago. It came in the usual course of business between the two Houses here, was delivered to this House, and was laid on the Speaker's table.

Now, the regular, the usual, and the only course permissible, where the question is raised, was for the Speaker to lay that bill before the House, or to refer it to a committee. As a matter of fact, the Committee on Banking and Currency was not then ready to proceed with the consideration of that bill; but in order to enable them to take it up out of its order, in violation of the rules of the House, they applied to the Speaker's clerk to hold that bill upon the Speaker's table.

This is no criticism against the clerk, who is a very capable and excellent gentleman, and although this has been done repeatedly, it can not be done where the question is raised. And I submit that on a bill of this importance, not only is it our right, but it is our duty, to insist upon a strict enforcement of the rule. If it were some question against which no gentleman would raise objection, and where there was unanimous agreement that it ought to pass, then it would be practically a unanimous consent that that course might be pursued.

But on a bill of this kind, which a large number of gentlemen believe to be vastly important, and which some of us believe exceeds the power of Congress, we have a right to insist, and I do insist, that it shall take the regular course. It was not taken from the Speaker's table when it came to the House, and can not be kept upon the Speaker's table to accommodate the convenience of gentlemen or of the committee, and I insist that this bill can not be called up in this way, but that it must be referred to the committee which has jurisdiction of the subject.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call attention to this fact: If that bill has been kept on the Speaker's table, as my memory serves me, it has not been done by public announcement on this floor; because if that announcement had been made there would have been insistence that it should be referred to the proper committee. Now, if the bill has been kept on the Speaker's table—and I do not mean to charge anything or to make any insinuations, because I am not competent to make insinuations about a matter of that kind—if you have kept it on the Speaker's table by arrangement with the clerk, I ask the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] if he does not think he ought to give the members of the committee full notice of his application?

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to have the House understand what the course of practice was intended by the rule to be which the Chair intends to follow and has intended to follow. There is a provision that two classes of bills may be taken from the Speaker's table. One is House bills with Senate amendments which do not have to go to the Committee of the Whole, and the other is Senate bills substantially the same as House bills already favorably reported by committees of the House, and not required to be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Now, the reason for having those bills left upon the Speaker's table, to be disposed of by the House without reference to a committee, was that House bills with Senate amendments would not be a surprise to any member of the House, because they had already passed through the House and been amended by the Senate, and therefore were in a favorable condition to be finished. Then, also, it was determined when the rule was adopted that whenever the Senate passed a bill which was not required to go to the Committee of the Whole, not involving an appropriation of money, that if a House committee had passed a similar bill and reported it favorably to the House, in that event, by notifying the Speaker, the Senate bill would be retained on the Speaker's table, to be acted upon whenever the matter came up in the regular order—that is, when there was not prior business superseding it.

Now, the question before us is, Is this bill which is presented and which has been retained on the Speaker's table, as the Chair presumes, because of some notification of that sort—

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. Let the Chair finish. Is this a bill substantially the same as a bill which had already been reported by the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. BAILEY. If it will not interrupt the Chair, I want to call the Chair's attention to the fact that this report of the committee is dated the 27th day of June, and, therefore, the bill was not already reported when the Senate bill was retained on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. If it was not already reported, as the Chair was about to remark—if the House bill was not already reported, the Senate bill ought to have been referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency; and the point having been made it must be sustained. The Chair thinks the practice is a simple one. It is not a retention to oblige anybody, but simply a retention under the rules where notification has been given that a similar bill has been reported by the committee of the House.

Mr. BAILEY. I want to say that I make no criticism on the clerk, none at all; because I have requested the gentleman myself, in a case where there was absolutely no objection, to retain the bill on the Speaker's table; and I think the practice is a harmless one in that respect.

The SPEAKER. The object of the safeguards thrown about both these classes of bills was to prevent any surprise to the House by making a bill the regular order of which the House could not be presumed to have any notice. The Clerk will present the next bill.

Mr. HILL. I should like to make a single suggestion, if it is not too late.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. HILL. The bill was passed by the Senate on Friday, the 17th, I think, but it was Friday two weeks ago to-morrow. Later on the Committee on Banking and Currency was polled upon that question as to whether the bill should be reported, and I was authorized to report a substitute for the pending measure before the committee, and I had the authorization of the majority of the committee here to report that as a substitute to the pending measure two days before the bill came from the Senate at all and was put upon the Speaker's table; and in view of that fact I do not claim, but simply present the fact to the consideration of the Chair; in view of that fact, it was entirely justifiable that the notice should be given and that the bill should remain on the Speaker's table. This letter which I wish to present, then, is authority for reporting it to the House. The matter was disposed of by the committee, or by the majority of the committee. Precisely the action which has been taken was ordered, and there was due notice given, and given by a majority of the committee, before the bill was even upon the Speaker's table at all, or before it was reported from the Senate. Now, does that alter the situation?

The SPEAKER. It does not alter the parliamentary situation, but simply alters the individual situation.

Mr. COX. That is all.

The SPEAKER. The rule requires that the bill shall have been already reported, before the Senate bill reaches the Speaker's table.

Mr. HILL. That is the decision?

The SPEAKER. That is the decision. So far as the individual effort is concerned, in regard to this bill, the gentleman had the right to ask to retain it in this way for a public decision, to see if his views on that point would be sustained by the Chair.

Mr. BARTHOLOMT. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. In the call of committees the Committee on Banking and Currency was passed over last time without prejudice.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 4717. An act authorizing the use of typewriting machines for the recording of deeds and other instruments of writing in the office of the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 4807. An act directing the issue of duplicate of lost check drawn by C. C. Sniffen, major, United States Army, in favor of Fourth National Bank, New York City—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

S. 4812. An act to pay to J. and W. Seligman & Co. the sum of $1,794.56 for certain coupons detached from United States bonds, which said coupons were lost on the Cunard steamship Oregon, sunk at sea March 14, 1896—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

S. 4583. An act for the relief of the estate of Abel Adams, deceased—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

S. 3414. An act to carry into effect the recommendations of the International American Conference by the incorporation of the International American Bank—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 4713. An act relative to the Corps of Engineers of the Army; and

S. 1035. An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States.

INTERNATIONAL AMERICAN BANK.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 10807) favorably reported by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. BAILEY. What is it, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman calls up?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up for consideration the bill (H. R. 10807) under direction of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10807) to carry into effect the recommendations of the International American Conference by the incorporation of the International American Bank.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the bill has not been reported.

The SPEAKER. The bill was reported on the 27th day of June.

Mr. BAILEY. That is the bill that they say is identical with the Senate bill?

The SPEAKER. This is the bill that they say is identical with the Senate bill.

The Clerk again proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to know if it is in order, under a call of committees, to raise the question of consideration against any bill proposed by the committee?

The SPEAKER. The impression of the Chair is—

Mr. HILL. I would like to make the parliamentary inquiry if the question of consideration can be raised after the reading of the bill has been begun?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it can, and it can when the reading has been finished. In fact, perhaps it can not be raised until then. The Chair thinks the question of consideration can be raised.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, Mr. Speaker, I raise that question; but I desire to know if raising the question of consideration now would waive the further point that this bill is not of that special class that can be called up in the morning hour under the call of committees?

The SPEAKER. It would waive that.

Mr. BAILEY. Then I desire, first, to make the point that this does not belong to that class of bills that can be called up in the morning hour.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Texas state on what grounds? This is on the House Calendar.

Mr. BAILEY. But I think improperly so. I have not been able to examine the bill, but in the first place it creates a corporation, and for that reason I think it ought not to be on the House Calendar. Then my understanding is that it provides for the appointment of certain officers, although I have not had time to examine the bill with reference to that particularly.

Mr. HILL. It creates no corporation; it permits a corporation to be formed, but it is not a specific and special charter and creates no offices.

Mr. BAILEY. That is a distinction without a difference. The present national-bank law does not create a corporation in a strict sense, but nobody doubts but that national banks are corporations created under the law of the United States. Now, this bill names incorporators and names certain gentlemen upon whom it confers certain privileges. I think there can be no doubt but that it creates a corporation as much as the present national banking law creates a corporation. Further, this bill describes it as a corporation. In section 14 it says "the president and cashier of said corporation shall at all times require," etc.

Mr. HILL. I do not know what bearing the facts stated by the gentleman from Texas have upon the question of consideration. The bill designates certain gentlemen to do certain things, and any other twelve citizens of the United States can do it, and the bill creates no offices and no charge upon the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BAILEY. And again, Mr. Speaker, on page 29, section 38, it says "the corporation hereby formed may go into liquidation and be closed with the written consent of the shareholders holding two-thirds of the stock." It is described all through as a corporation.

Mr. HILL. And then supplemented in the last section but one by making it an absolutely general law.

Mr. MOODY. I think I can point out to the gentleman from Texas the exact status. The act has a double purpose. It forms a specific corporation, and in section 31 it authorizes any other citizens of the United States similar in number to the persons named in the first section to form a similar corporation; so it is a specific act of incorporation as well as a general law.

Mr. BAILEY. So it is doubly objectionable, being both particular and general.

Mr. HILL. Objectionable in what sense? In a parliamentary sense or a personal sense?

Mr. BAILEY. In the judgment of those who may oppose it. My attention is called by the gentleman from Utah to another provision that puts it almost entirely under the control of the Treasury Department and allows the Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to appoint a suitable person or persons to make an examination into the affairs of the bank. So it authorizes the appointment of an international bank examiner.

Mr. HILL. At the expense of the bank?

Mr. BAILEY. Yes; the present national-bank examiner conducts his examination at the expense of the bank, but they are officers from the Government, appointed by the Government.

Mr. HILL. I wish to remark that whatever objections the gentleman from Texas may have, I do not see that the objections he names have anything to do with the question of consideration.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, the further I read this bill, the clearer it becomes; and I want to say, in excuse of the desultory objections that I have made, that I had never examined it because I did not know it was coming up. It says that the person or persons so appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency to make the examination shall receive such compensation as the Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may fix, and it shall be collected just as the compensation for the examination of national banks is now collected—from the banks themselves. There is no doubt but that the examiners of the present national banks are officers of the United States, and so this bill creates and authorizes the appointment of a man in all respects similar to national-bank examiners.

Mr. LACEY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Texas whether he thinks this bill comes under section 3 of Rule XIII, which says "a bill directly or indirectly appropriating money or property." Wherein does this bill appropriate either money or property? If it does not, of course it goes to the House Calendar. If it is on the House Calendar, it can be called up on the call of committees.

Mr. BAILEY. But if the Secretary of the Treasury appoints an officer, that involves as a matter of course a charge, and while the Treasurer may collect it from the bank or may authorize the examiner to collect from the bank, still he is an officer of the United States, whose compensation is fixed by the United States.

Mr. PAYNE. This bill makes no charge against the United States in any way, nor any appropriation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks this matter is governed by the third section of Rule XXIII, and he has not heard anything stated which would indicate that the bill should go to the Committee of the Whole. The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. BAILEY. The Chair holds that this bill properly belongs on the House Calendar, and can be called up in this way?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so holds.

Mr. BAILEY. Then I raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House consider the bill?

The question being taken, there were on a division (called for by Mr. BAILEY)—ayes 70, noes 63.

Mr. BAILEY. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 93, nays 70, answered "present" 15, not voting 177; as follows:

YEAS—93.

Aldrich,	Danford,	Lacey,	Ray,
Alexander,	Davenport,	Landis,	Reeves,
Arnold,	Dorr,	Linnay,	Sherman,
Babcock,	Ellis,	Lovering,	Showalter,
Barham,	Fenton,	McCall,	Smith, Ill.
Bennett,	Fischer,	McCleary,	Southard,
Bingham,	Fletcher,	McClellan,	Sperry,
Bishop,	Foot,	McIntire,	Stewart, N. J.
Bronwell,	Gardner,	Mahany,	Stone, W. A.
Brown,	Gibson,	Mahon,	Updegraff,
Brownlow,	Gillet, N. Y.	Meekison,	Van Voorhis,
Burlingame,	Gillett, Mass.	Mercer,	Ward,
Burton,	Greene, Mass.	Mills,	Warner,
Butler,	Grosvenor,	Moody,	Weaver,
Cannon,	Grow,	Northway,	Weymouth,
Chickering,	Hager,	Olmsted,	White, Ill.
Clark, Iowa,	Hemenway,	Packer, Pa.	White, N. C.
Connell,	Henderson,	Parker, N. J.	Williams, Pa.
Cooper, Wis.	Hepburn,	Payne,	Wise,
Cousins,	Hilborn,	Pearce, Mo.	Yost,
Crump,	Howe,	Pearson,	Young,
Cummings,	Howell,	Perkins,
Curtis, Kans.	Ketcham,	Powers,
Dalzell,	Kirkpatrick,	Pugh,

NAYS—70.

Allen,	De Graffenreid,	Livingston,	Rixey,
Bailey,	De Vries,	Lloyd,	Robb,
Baker, Ill.	Dinsmore,	Love,	Sayers,
Bail,	Fleming,	McCormick,	Shafroth,
Bankhead,	Fox,	McCulloch,	Simpson,
Barlow,	Gaines,	McDowell,	Sims,
Bartholdt,	Gunn,	McRae,	Skinner,
Bartlett,	Hay,	Maddox,	Stallings,
Bell,	Henry, Miss.	Maguire,	Stark,
Bodine,	Henry, Tex.	Marshall,	Strait,
Brundidge,	Howard, Ga.	Maxwell,	Sulzer,
Castle,	Hunter,	Meyer, La.	Tate,
Clark, Mo.	Jones, Wash.	Moon,	Terry,
Cochran, Mo.	Kelley,	Norton, Ohio,	Vehslo,
Cowherd,	Kitchin,	Norton, S. C.	Wheeler, Ky.
Cox,	Kleberg,	Osborne,	Wilson,
Davis,	Knowles,	Rhea,
De Armond,	Lamb,	Ridgely,

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—15.

Boutell, Ill.	Griffith,	Loud,	Smith, S. W.
Brucker,	Griggs,	Miers, Ind.	Steele,
Burke,	Jenkins,	Otey,	Wanger.
Connolly,	Knox,	Pitney,

NOT VOTING—177.

Acheson,	Curtis, Iowa,	Joy,	Sauerhoring,
Adams,	Davey,	Kerr,	Settle,
Adamson,	Davidson, Wis.	King,	Shannon,
Baird,	Davison, Ky.	Kulp,	Shattuc,
Baker, Md.	Dayton,	Lanham,	Shelden,
Barber,	Dingley,	Latimer,	Shuford,
Barney,	Dockery,	Lawrence,	Slyden,
Barrett,	Dolliver,	Lentz,	Smith, Ky.
Barrows,	Dovener,	Lester,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Beach,	Driggs,	Lewis, Ga.	Snover,
Belden,	Eddy,	Lewis, Wash.	Southwick,
Belford,	Elliott,	Littauer,	Spalding,
Belknap,	Ermentrout,	Little,	Sparkman,
Benner, Pa.	Evans,	Lorimer,	Sprague,
Benton,	Faris,	Loudenslager,	Stephens, Tex.
Berry,	Fitzgerald,	Low,	Stevens, Minn.
Bland,	Fitzpatrick,	Lybrand,	Stewart, Wis.
Booze,	Foss,	McAleer,	Stokes,
Botkin,	Fowler, N. C.	McDonald,	Stone, C. W.
Boutelle, Me.	Fowler, N. J.	McEwan,	Strode, Nebr.
Bradley,	Gaff,	McMillin,	Strowd, N. C.
Brantley,	Greene, Nebr.	Mann,	Sturtevant,
Brenner, Ohio	Griffin,	Marsh,	Sulloway,
Brewer,	Grout,	Martin,	Sutherland,
Brewster,	Hamilton,	Mesick,	Swanson,
Broderick,	Handy,	Miller,	Talbert,
Brosius,	Harmer,	Minor,	Tawney,
Broussard,	Hartman,	Mitchell,	Taylor, Ohio
Brumm,	Hawley,	Morris,	Taylor, Ala.
Bull,	Heatwole,	Mudd,	Thorpe,
Campbell,	Henry, Conn.	Newlands,	Todd,
Capron,	Henry, Ind.	Odell,	Tongue,
Carmack,	Hicks,	Ogden,	Underwood,
Catchings,	Hill,	Olsen,	Vandiver,
Charles,	Hinrichsen,	Overstreet,	Vincent,
Clarke, N. H.	Hitt,	Peters,	Wadsworth,
Clayton,	Hooker,	Pierce, Tenn.	Walker, Mass.
Cochran, N. Y.	Hopkins,	Prince,	Walker, Va.
Coddling,	Howard, Ala.	Quigg,	Wheeler, Ala.
Colson,	Hull,	Richardson,	Wilber,
Cooney,	Hurley,	Robbins,	Williams, Miss.
Cooper, Tex.	Jett,	Robertson, La.	Zenor.
Corliss,	Johnson, Ind.	Robinson, Ind.
Cranford,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Royle,
Crumpacker,	Jones, Va.	Russell,

So the House decided to consider the bill.

Mr. GRIGGS. I am paired with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. BOUTELL. As he has not voted, I withdraw my vote in the negative and ask to be recorded "present."

Mr. BRUCKER. I am paired with my colleague from Michigan, General SPALDING. Not knowing how he would vote on this proposition, I desire to withdraw my negative vote and be marked "present."

Mr. CONNOLLY. I am paired with the gentleman from Texas, Mr. LANHAM. As I do not know how he would vote on this question, I withdraw the vote which I cast in the affirmative and ask to be recorded "present."

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I am paired with my colleague, Mr. OVERSTREET. Not knowing how he would vote, I desire to withdraw my negative vote and be marked "present."

The following pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. LOUD with Mr. RICHARDSON.

Mr. BELFORD with Mr. DAVEY.

Mr. SNOVER with Mr. HARTMAN.

Mr. DINGLEY with Mr. McMILLAN.

Mr. CONNOLLY with Mr. LANHAM.

Mr. BEACH with Mr. BRENNER of Ohio.

Mr. SHELLEN with Mr. TODD.

Mr. BARRETT with Mr. COOPER of Texas.

Mr. CRUMPACKER with Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana.

Mr. PITNEY with Mr. DOCKERY.

Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. SWANSON.

Mr. SPALDING with Mr. BRUCKER.

Mr. HOPKINS with Mr. JONES of Virginia.

Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire with Mr. CARMACK.

Mr. CHARLES W. STONE with Mr. BLAND.

Mr. LORIMER with Mr. CAMPBELL.
 Mr. RUSSELL with Mr. COONEY.
 Mr. MORRIS with Mr. SPARKMAN.
 Mr. MILLER with Mr. CLARDY.
 Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. ERMENTROUT.
 Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. STROWD of North Carolina.
 Mr. STURTEVANT with Mr. SLAYDEN.
 Mr. BARNEY with Mr. CLAYTON.
 Mr. ODELL with Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.
 Mr. HENRY of Connecticut with Mr. BOTKIN.
 Mr. ROYSE with Mr. ZENOR.
 Mr. SPRAGUE with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.
 Mr. HARMER with Mr. VANDIVER.
 Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi.
 Mr. MESICK with Mr. BURKE.
 Mr. TAYLER of Ohio with Mr. CATCHINGS.
 Mr. THORP with Mr. TALBERT.
 Mr. FISCHER with Mr. SETTLE.
 Mr. PRINCE with Mr. HINRICHSSEN.
 Mr. COLSON with Mr. FITZPATRICK.
 Mr. FOSS with Mr. SMITH of Kentucky.
 Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts with Mr. OGDEN.
 Mr. JOY with Mr. PIERCE of Tennessee.
 Mr. DOVENER with Mr. LESTER.
 Mr. HENRY of Indiana with Mr. GRIFFITH.
 Mr. BREWSTER with Mr. SUTHERLAND.
 Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin with Mr. LITTLE.
 Mr. QUIGG with Mr. CRANFORD.
 Mr. WALKER of Virginia with Mr. OTEY.
 Mr. CORLESS with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.
 Mr. OVERSTREET with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.
 Mr. KNOX with Mr. MCALEER.
 Mr. TAWNEY with Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania.
 Mr. MANN with Mr. JETT.
 Mr. ALEXANDER with Mr. ELLIOTT.
 Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana with Mr. BRANTLEY.
 Mr. JENKINS with Mr. STOKES.
 Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois with Mr. GRIGGS.
 Mr. HICKS with Mr. BANKHEAD.
 Mr. STRODE of Nebraska with Mr. LATIMER.
 Mr. COCHRANE of New York with Mr. FOWLER of North Carolina.
 Mr. ROBBINS with Mr. BROUSSARD.
 For this day:
 Mr. JOHNSON of North Dakota with Mr. BERRY.
 Mr. OTJEN with Mr. BAIRD.
 Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. BRADLEY.
 Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH with Mr. FITZGERALD.
 Mr. DAVIDSON of Wisconsin with Mr. BENTON.
 Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. DRIGGS.
 Mr. BULL with Mr. BREWER.
 Mr. KULP with Mr. VINCENT.
 Mr. SULLOWAY with Mr. STEPHENS of Texas.
 Mr. MUDD with Mr. LENTZ.
 Mr. SOUTHWICK with Mr. LIVINGSTON.
 Mr. SHANNON with Mr. KING.
 Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I inadvertently voted on this proposition. I am paired with the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. MESICK, and therefore desire to withdraw my vote and ask to be marked as "present."
 Mr. KNOX. Mr. Speaker, I desire simply to be marked as "present."
 Mr. McCLELLAN. I, also, Mr. Speaker, ask to be recorded as "present" on this vote.
 Mr. McEWAN. I, Mr. Speaker, ask to be recorded as "present."
 The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PAYNE). The gentleman from New Jersey will be so recorded.
 Mr. YOST. Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that a pair existed between the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. LAMB, and myself. I did not vote, and ask therefore to be recorded as "present" on this vote.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia will be so recorded.
 Mr. RIDGELY. I wish also to be recorded as "present."
 Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, is it too late to vote on this proposition?
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania can be marked as "present."
 Mr. ADAMS. Then I desire to be recorded as "present" on this question.
 Mr. CAPRON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to be recorded as "present."
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will be so recorded. The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.
 The following members were noted by the Clerk as present and not voting:
 Mr. CATCHINGS, Mr. ADAMS, Mr. CAPRON, Mr. McEWAN, Mr. ELLIOTT, Mr. FARIS, and Mr. HOOKER.

So the motion of Mr. HILL was agreed to.
 Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask if a quorum is present, according to the tally?
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present.
 Mr. McCLELLAN. Am I entitled to vote on this proposition?
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman being noted as present has the right to vote if he so desires.
 Mr. McCLELLAN. Then I vote "aye" on the pending proposition.
 Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I think that now is as good time as any other to raise the point with reference to the right of a member who is marked "present" to cast his vote. Do I understand the Chair to hold that where a member is marked "present" he may be recorded as voting either for or against a proposition if he did not answer on the original call? I am of the impression that a member who is marked "present" simply on a roll call is not, by reason of that fact, absolved from the necessity of answering the inquiry which is required of other members as to whether he was present when his name was called, and was listening and failed to hear it. In this particular case it is not so important; but I think it is a question that ought to be settled.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Texas to the last clause of Rule XV, which provides:
 The Speaker shall not entertain a request to record a vote or announce a pair unless the member's name has been noted under clause 3 of this rule.
 Now, clause 3 of the rule provides:
 That members who voluntarily appear shall, unless the House otherwise directs, be immediately admitted to the Hall of the House, and they shall report their names to the Clerk to be entered upon the Journal as present.
 Mr. BAILEY. That is where a point of order is made as to the absence of a quorum, and a roll call follows under the rule.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The rule provides that thereafter the Chair shall not entertain a request for unanimous consent to record a vote or pair unless the member named has been "noted as present," in which case he may have the privilege of recording his vote under the rule.
 Mr. BAILEY. That is where the point of order is made that a quorum is not present, and a roll call follows under the rule.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The rule provides that when a member is recorded by the Clerk as being present he may have the privilege of recording his vote thereafter, before the final result is made known to the House.
 Now, a quorum not voting, these gentlemen who are marked as present will be entitled to vote, if they so desire.
 Mr. BAILEY. The rule seems to be susceptible, Mr. Speaker, of that construction, and while it is a matter of little consequence in reference to the pending bill, still it is one that is important in connection with the transaction of the general business of the House. The only question at issue is whether a member, who may be present when his name is called, is entitled to the privilege of voting before the final result is announced, while some other gentleman, who did not respond to his name at the time it was called, is to be denied the privilege; that is to say, whether a gentleman who did not happen to be listening at the time, but was present, is to be placed in a worse position than one who was not present at all when his name was called.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The rule assumes that a member who exercises the privilege of voting was present when his name was called and simply desired to be marked as "present" and not voting for or against the proposition.
 The gentleman is aware of the fact, of course, that under the rule members who are present and not recorded either way may be noted as "present" by the Speaker.
 Mr. BAILEY. Still, Mr. Speaker, it is true that a gentleman who is noted as present by one of the clerks may be permitted to vote, while a member who asserts that he was present but did not hear his name might be excluded.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The rules have made the matter as clear as seems possible, and there is no exception to them as far as the Chair knows.
 Mr. PETERS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be recorded as "present."
 Mr. RIDGELY. I also desire to be recorded as "present."
 Mr. FARIS. I also ask to be marked as "present" on this vote.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlemen will be marked "present," as stated.
 A quorum being present, the House decided to consider the bill.
 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.
 Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
 The question was taken on the motion of Mr. BARTHOLDT; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.
 Mr. BARTHOLDT demanded a division.
 The House divided; and there were—ayes 49, noes 61.
 Mr. BARTHOLDT. The yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.
The question was taken; and there were—yeas 63, nays 95, answered "present" 14, not voting 182; as follows:

YEAS—63.

Bailey,	De Armond,	McCormick,	Bixey,
Baker, Ill.	De Graffenreid,	McCulloch,	Robb,
Bankhead,	De Vries,	McDowell,	Sayers,
Barlow,	Fleming,	McRae,	Shafroth,
Bartholdt,	Gunn,	Maddox,	Simpson,
Bartlett,	Hay,	Maguire,	Sims,
Bell,	Henry, Miss,	Marshall,	Stallings,
Berry,	Henry, Tex.	Maxwell,	Stark,
Bodine,	Howard, Ga.	Meekison,	Strait,
Brundidge,	Jones, Wash.	Meyer, La.	Sulzer,
Castle,	Kelley,	Moon,	Tate,
Clark, Mo.	Kitchin,	Norton, Ohio	Underwood,
Cochran, Mo.	Kleberg,	Norton, S. C.	Wheeler, Ky.
Cowherd,	Knowles,	Osborne,	Williams, Miss.
Cox,	Livingston,	Peters,	Wilson.
Davis,	Love,	Ridgely,

NAYS—95.

Acheson,	Dalzell,	Kirkpatrick,	Prince,
Adams,	Davenport,	Lacey,	Pugh,
Aldrich,	Davison, Ky.	Landis,	Ray,
Alexander,	Ellis,	Lento,	Reeves,
Allen,	Paris,	Linney,	Shannon,
Arnold,	Fischer,	Lybrand,	Sherman,
Babcock,	Fletcher,	McCall,	Showalter,
Barham,	Footo,	McCleary,	Smith, Ill.
Belknap,	Gardner,	McClellan,	Southard,
Bingham,	Gibson,	Mahany,	Sperry,
Bishop,	Gillet, N. Y.	Marsh,	Stewart, N. J.
Brown,	Gillett, Mass.	Mercer,	Stone, W. A.
Burleigh,	Graff,	Mills,	Sulloway,
Butler,	Greene, Mass.	Minor,	Tongue,
Capron,	Griffin,	Moody,	Van Voorhis,
Chickering,	Grosvenor,	Northway,	Warner,
Clark, Iowa	Henderson,	Olmsted,	Weaver,
Connell,	Hepburn,	Packer, Pa.	Weymouth,
Cooper, Wis.	Hill,	Parker, N. J.	White, N. C.
Cousins,	Hooker,	Payne,	Wilber,
Crump,	Howe,	Pearce, Mo.	Williams, Pa.
Cummings,	Hull,	Pearson,	Wise,
Curtis, Iowa	Hurley,	Perkins,	Yost,
Curtis, Kans.	Ketcham,	Powers,	Young.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—14.

Boutell, Ill.	Griggs,	Miers, Ind.	Terry,
Brucker,	Jenkins,	Miller,	Thorp.
Burke,	Loud,	Otey,
Connolly,	McEwan,	Pitney,

NOT VOTING—182.

Adamson,	Danford,	Johnson, Ind.	Russell,
Baird,	Davey,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Sauerhering,
Baker, Md.	Davidson, Wis.	Jones, Va.	Settle,
Ball,	Dayton,	Joy,	Shattuc,
Barber,	Dingley,	Kerr,	Shelden,
Barney,	Dinsmore,	King,	Shuford,
Barrett,	Dockery,	Knox,	Skinner,
Barrows,	Dolliver,	Kulp,	Slayden,
Beach,	Dorr,	Lamb,	Smith, Ky.
Belden,	Dovener,	Lanham,	Smith, S. W.
Belford,	Driggs,	Latimer,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Benner, Pa.	Eddy,	Lawrence,	Snover,
Bennett,	Elliott,	Lester,	Southwick,
Benton,	Ermentrout,	Lewis, Ga.	Spalding,
Bland,	Evans,	Lewis, Wash.	Sparkman,
Booze,	Fenton,	Littauer,	Sprague,
Botkin,	Fitzgerald,	Little,	Steele,
Boutelle, Mo.	Fitzpatrick,	Lloyd,	Stephens, Tex.
Bradley,	Foss,	Lorimer,	Stevens, Minn.
Brantley,	Fowler, N. C.	Loudenslager,	Stewart, Wis.
Brenner, Ohio	Fowler, N. J.	Lovering,	Stokes,
Brewer,	Fox,	Low,	Stone, C. W.
Brewster,	Gaines,	McAleer,	Strode, Nebr.
Broderick,	Greene, Nebr.	McDonald,	Strowd, N. C.
Bromwell,	Griffith,	McIntire,	Sturtevant,
Brosius,	Grout,	McMillin,	Sutherland,
Broussard,	Grow,	Mahon,	Swanson,
Brownlow,	Hager,	Mann,	Talbert,
Brumm,	Hamilton,	Martin,	Tawney,
Bull,	Handy,	Mesick,	Taylor, Ohio
Burton,	Harmer,	Mitchell,	Taylor, Ala.
Campbell,	Hartman,	Morris,	Todd,
Cannon,	Hawley,	Mudd,	Updegraff,
Carmack,	Heatwole,	Newlands,	Vandiver,
Catchings,	Hemenway,	Odell,	Vehslage,
Clardy,	Henry, Conn.	Ogden,	Vincent,
Clarke, N. H.	Henry, Ind.	Otjen,	Wadsworth,
Clayton,	Hicks,	Overstreet,	Walker, Mass.
Cochrane, N. Y.	Hilborn,	Pierce, Tenn.	Walker, Va.
Coddington,	Hinrichsen,	Quigg,	Wanger,
Colson,	Hitt,	Rhea,	Ward,
Cooney,	Hopkins,	Richardson,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cooper, Tex.	Howard, Ala.	Robbins,	White, Ill.
Corliss,	Howell,	Robertson, La.	Zenor.
Cranford,	Hunter,	Robinson, Ind.
Crumpacker,	Jett,	Royse,

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

During the roll call,

Mr. BARTLETT said: Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask if a member can have his vote recorded without voting personally?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will decide that point after the roll call. The roll call can not be interrupted.

The Clerk resumed and completed the calling of the roll.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. BENNETT with Mr. GAINES.

For this day:

Mr. HENDERSON with Mr. TERRY.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I voted "aye" on the roll call. I am paired with the gentleman from Iowa, Mr. HENDERSON, and I ask to withdraw my vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. I want to know whether it is competent for the Clerk to vote members who are absent?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not.

Mr. MADDOX. I should like to ask whether that has been done to-day, and on this call?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has no information on the subject.

Mr. MADDOX. Well, I am informed that that is the fact—that it has been done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has no information on the subject.

Mr. MADDOX. I am informed that it has been done on two occasions to-day. I want to know in some way whether that is the case or not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would be very glad to furnish the information if the Chair were in possession of it.

Mr. MADDOX. My colleague [Mr. BARTLETT] states to me that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BROWNLOW] was voted by one of the clerks. The gentleman from Ohio states to me that another gentleman left his proxy in the hands of the Clerk, who also voted him to-day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the name of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BROWNLOW] was called, and that after it was called he came to the desk and said that he had responded to his name and that the Clerk had not got his response. The Chair is so informed by the Clerk that that happened on the second roll call.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, the Chair will remember that I at once rose and inquired. I happened to be at the desk. I understand it has been customary. I am not making any charges of irregularity against the Clerk. I immediately rose and inquired of the Chair if it was competent for the Clerk to announce how a member should vote whose name was called, the member not being present, and the Chair announced that he would not decide that until the roll call was ended. I was present at the Clerk's desk on the second roll call when the name of Mr. BROWNLOW was called. The Clerk, whose name I do not know, announced "no." Mr. BROWNLOW did not vote at all. His vote was recorded as announced by the Clerk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman that although the fact be as stated by the Clerk that the gentleman came after his name had been called and passed and stated to the Clerk privately that he had answered and was not recorded, that his vote is not entitled to be recorded. The only way that would be done would be at the conclusion of the roll call by a public announcement of the fact, and if the point is made against that the Chair will direct the Clerk to correct the roll. In fact, the Chair will direct the Clerk to correct the roll anyway.

Mr. BARTLETT. I want to state, before I take my seat, that I understand it has been usual to do this; and the Speaker of the House on one occasion called attention to it and stated that it could not be done. I know the Clerk did not intend to violate the rule, and I make no such charge. He did it to accommodate members. I instantly made the point and the Speaker directed me to wait until the roll call was completed. I do it simply so that these matters can be done according to the rule. The Clerk ought not to be asked by members to record their votes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Of course, there is no way for a member to vote except to respond when his name is called, and if he does respond, and finds afterwards he is not recorded, he can rise in the House and so announce.

Mr. BARTLETT. I ask for a recapitulation of the vote.

Mr. GRIGGS. I desire to ask if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BOUTELL] has voted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He is not recorded.

Mr. GRIGGS. Then I desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. BRUCKER. I desire to know if the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SPALDING] has voted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. BRUCKER. Then I desire to withdraw my vote and be marked "present."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman withdraws his vote, and will be marked "present."

Mr. BARTLETT. I ask for a recapitulation of the vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sees no need of a recapitulation of this vote.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I have the right to ask that as a privilege.
Mr. ARNOLD. I make the point that that is purely a dilatory motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point.
Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Did I understand the gentleman from Missouri to demand a recapitulation of the last vote, and did the Chair say that he saw no reason for a recapitulation?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ARNOLD] made the point of order that it was a dilatory motion, and the Chair so held.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. I understood the Chair to say that he saw no reason why there should be a recapitulation of the vote.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. It is not a dilatory motion; it is a privilege.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this question the yeas are 63, the nays 95; the yeas have it, and the House refuses to adjourn.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the further reading of the bill.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make this point of order. While I know it is not necessary to have a quorum on a motion to adjourn, I raise this point: If a roll call develops that there is no quorum, can we go on with business? I make the point of no quorum present now.

Mr. BARTLETT. And that the bill can not be read.

Mr. MADDOX. And that the bill can not be read.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to suggest, on the point of order, that there has been no demonstration of the lack of a quorum. The roll was called, and no effort was made to ascertain the presence of members on the roll call, because it was not necessary on that motion. The motion was lost; and the provision that a quorum is not necessary upon a motion to adjourn is sufficient answer to that question, and the point can only be raised subsequently, on a vote that does require a quorum to decide.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman on the other side.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I desire to read from the rule.

Whenever a quorum fails to vote on any question, and a quorum is not present, and objection is made for that cause, unless the House shall adjourn, there shall be a call of the House, and the Sergeant-at-Arms shall forthwith proceed to bring in absent members, and the yeas and nays on the pending question shall at the same time be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to apply that to the vote which has just taken place?

Mr. MADDOX. My point, perhaps, the Speaker does not understand.

The SPEAKER. Perhaps not.

Mr. MADDOX. I am aware of the fact that it was not necessary to have a quorum present to adjourn; but in taking that vote, if it develops the fact that a quorum is not present, I made the point of order that the bill can not be read. In other words, that there was not a quorum present to do business.

Mr. McRAE. And made after the direction had been made to read.

Mr. MADDOX. Made after the direction had been made to read.

Mr. HILL. I called for the reading prior to the point being made.

Mr. MADDOX. I make the point, Mr. Speaker, that the bill can not be read when a quorum is not present, the roll call having developed that fact.

Mr. TERRY. In other words, can the House transact any business except to adjourn when it appears on the record that there is no quorum present?

The SPEAKER. The question which has been raised by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] is a question which has been a somewhat troublesome one in the House of Representatives, on account of the provision in the Constitution which requires one more than one-half of the members of the House to constitute a quorum. I think it has been for a long time the custom of the House to regard that as a matter to be determined by the record, as disclosed by the preceding vote, when that vote requires a quorum.

The present occupant of the chair recollects that the question was raised in the Fifty-first Congress, and he thinks that the Journal shows a ruling upon the subject as having been made by him, which ruling is incorrectly stated in the Journal. The RECORD shows very well how the question came up. The then member from Kentucky, Mr. Breckinridge, having made the point of no quorum just as the Speaker was putting a question to the House, the Speaker said, "That will be determined by the vote," and put the question. The Journal states the decision to be general that the point of no quorum "could only be raised when that fact was established by a division." As will be seen by the RECORD of second session Fifty-first Congress, page 1631, no such ruling was made.

Mr. Crisp ruled upon the question that under the practice of the House a member having been recognized could not be taken off the floor upon the point of no quorum.

The Speaker held that under the practice of the House, a member having been recognized could not be taken off the floor upon the point of no quorum, and that after the reading and approval of the Journal the failure of a quorum is only taken notice of when the same is disclosed from the vote upon some question or upon a call of the House.

The Chair does not think that is parliamentary law, although it might be an answer to the gentleman from Georgia. He thinks a quorum of the House is necessary to do business, although perhaps such a quorum may not necessarily be in the Hall itself of the House at the time. The House consists not only of the Hall of the House, but of the cloakrooms and the lobby in the rear as well.

The Chair does not see how the requirement that a majority of members shall be present to do business can be dispensed with. Such demands for a quorum can not, however, be used for delay only. As there may be some doubt if a quorum is present now, the Chair will proceed to see if there is a quorum present in the House. [After having counted the House.] One hundred and eighty members are present—a quorum. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk began reading the bill.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry in regard to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX. My point is that the bill which the Clerk is proceeding to read has never been passed by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Massachusetts; Henry W. Cannon, of New York; Samuel Hill, of Minnesota; Theodore C. Search, of Pennsylvania; John J. Mitchell, of Illinois; William Barbour, of New Jersey; John Cassels, of District of Columbia; Edward J. Berwind, of New York; John I. Waterbury, of New Jersey; Charles R. Flint, of New York; Grant B. Schley, of New York, and William H. T. Hughes, of New York, be, and they are hereby, designated commissioners to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation to be known as the International American Bank, and to exercise such other powers and perform such other duties as may be by the terms of this act imposed upon them.

SEC. 2. That the persons hereinbefore named as commissioners, a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, shall meet at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, within sixty days after the passage of this act, and shall then organize as a board by the election of a chairman, secretary, and treasurer, and shall require the treasurer to give bond for the faithful performance of his duties and for the accounting of all moneys received by him, and shall establish such rules prescribing the duties of such officers and other agents as may be required. The said commissioners shall thereafter open or cause to be opened books of subscription to the capital stock of said corporation in accordance with the terms of this act, and shall place such books, for the purpose of receiving such subscriptions, in the city of Washington, in the city of New York, and in any other cities within the United States which they may designate; and for the purpose of opening such books and receiving subscriptions for such stock, in accordance with the terms hereof, the said commissioners are authorized to appoint any such subordinate agents in such cities as may be required.

Such subscription books shall be so arranged that each subscriber shall write thereon his name, place of residence, the number of shares of the par value of $100 each for which he subscribes, and the total par value of such shares, and he shall deposit in lawful money 10 per cent of the par value of the shares so subscribed for with the persons receiving such subscriptions, who shall, in a separate column, write the amount of cash so received from each subscriber by reason of such subscription, at the time of the making thereof, in accordance with the terms and provisions of this act. As soon as 50,000 shares of the capital stock of the said company shall have been subscribed for, the said commissioners shall notify the subscribers therefor to pay in, within thirty days after the giving of such notice, 15 per cent of the amount of their subscriptions, respectively, in addition to the 10 per cent paid when such subscriptions were made.

Such notice shall be given by mailing to each subscriber, at the place of residence designated by him at the time of making such subscription, a notice specifying the amount of such 15 per cent and the number of shares subscribed for by each subscriber, respectively, and requiring the payment to be made to the treasurer of the said commissioners at a place to be designated in said notice. When and as soon as 50,000 shares of the capital stock of said company shall have been actually subscribed for and 25 per cent thereof paid in by such subscribers, respectively, as required by the terms of this act, the chairman and secretary of the board of commissioners hereby created shall appoint a time and place for the first meeting of the subscribers to the capital stock of said corporation, and shall give notice thereof by publication in at least two daily newspapers in each of the cities of Washington and New York for at least sixty days, and at least forty days previous to the day of such meeting shall also send notices by mail to each of the subscribers to said stock at the place of residence designated by him upon the subscription book signed by him.

The president of the said board of commissioners shall attend at such meeting, call the same to order, and produce to said meeting the original subscription books for said stock; and if it shall appear from the said subscription books that the subscriptions to the capital stock of said company exceed 50,000 shares, it shall be the duty of said board of commissioners to distribute the full number of shares authorized to and among the subscribers therefor in proportion to their respective subscriptions, and thereupon the persons appearing under such distribution to be subscribers for said stock shall participate in and be entitled to vote at said meeting, each one of such subscribers being entitled to cast one vote on each share of stock allotted to him. The said meeting shall select its own chairman, secretary, and tellers. Subscribers for a majority of the whole number of shares subscribed shall be present in order to constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the said meeting. If less than a quorum appear at the time and place specified in said notice, such meeting may adjourn from day to day until a quorum attends. After the organization of such meeting, which may be continued by adjournments, those present shall proceed to the election of directors of said bank to serve for the first year, and to the passage of by-laws for the government thereof, and shall transact no further business.

SEC. 3. That it shall be the duty of the officers elected at such meeting to deliver to the president and secretary of the commissioners hereby appointed duplicate copies of the proceedings of such meeting; said president and secretary shall retain one of such copies and shall transmit the other of such copies to the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, whose duty it shall be to forthwith examine the same, and in the event that the same shall be found to be correct in form and to contain no provisions in conflict with the provisions of this act or other laws of the United States, to so certify to the said board of commissioners; and upon the receiving of such certificate from the Comptroller of the Currency it shall be the duty of the said commissioners to deliver over to the board of directors elected at such meeting the books containing the subscriptions for said stock, all cash which may have been received by said commissioners upon the subscriptions for said stock, together with a detailed statement of their expenses in the performance of the duties hereby imposed, and a complete transcript of all records of all their proceedings under this act, and of all other records and papers pertaining thereto; and upon the surrender of such books and papers and payment of such money the said directors shall pay to the treasurer of said commissioners the amount of such expenses as shown by such statement directed to be furnished to them by the said commissioners. In the event of any dispute as to any or all the items of such expenditures the same shall be submitted to the Comptroller of the Currency, and the amount certified by him to the said directors shall forthwith be paid out of the funds collected and paid over by the said commissioners, or out of any other funds which may come to the hands of the said directors as the property of said corporation. Upon delivery of said papers, books, and records, and payment of said money, the duties of said commissioners and their powers under this act shall cease and determine. They shall receive for the performance thereof no compensation.

Sec. 4. That the capital stock of the corporation hereby authorized shall be fixed at $5,000,000, divided into shares of the par value of $100 each. Such shares shall be deemed personal property, and shall be transferred upon the books of the corporation in such manner as may be prescribed by the by-laws. The capital of said bank may, at any time after the completion of its organization as above provided, be increased, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, to any sum not exceeding the sum of $25,000,000. Such increase shall be authorized by a resolution passed at any regular meeting of the board of directors by the votes of two-thirds of the members of that body, and thereafter submitted to the next regular meeting of the stockholders, or to a special meeting called for that purpose, and by such meeting adopted and approved by a vote of stockholders representing two-thirds of the capital stock.

But no such increase of capital stock shall be valid until the whole amount of such increase is paid in and the Comptroller of the Currency duly notified thereof and his certificate obtained, specifying the amount of the increase of capital stock, with his approval thereof, and that it has been duly paid in as a part of the capital stock of this bank. The capital stock of said bank may at any time after the completion of its organization be reduced, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, to any sum not below $5,000,000. Such reduction shall be authorized by a resolution passed at any regular meeting of the board of directors by the votes of two-thirds of the members of that body, and thereafter submitted to the next regular meeting of the stockholders, or to a special meeting called for that purpose, and by such meeting adopted and approved by a vote of stockholders representing two-thirds of the capital stock; but no such reduction of capital stock shall be valid until the Comptroller of the Currency has been duly notified thereof and his certificate obtained, specifying the amount of the reduction and his approval thereof, with the amount of capital stock after said reduction. But no change shall be made in the capital stock of this bank by which the rights, remedies, or security of the existing creditors of the association shall be impaired.

Sec. 5. That subscriptions to the capital stock of said company, as above provided, or to any additional stock that may be hereafter authorized, shall not be received by the said commissioners or accepted by the officers of said corporation after the same shall be organized, unless accompanied at the time of each subscription with a payment in cash of 10 per cent of the amount thereof; and the said commissioners, in determining whether 50,000 shares of the said stock have been actually subscribed for the purpose of calling the subscribers' meeting, as above provided, shall not consider or count as part of said 50,000 shares required to be subscribed any subscription which was not accompanied by the payment in cash of 10 per cent of its face value at the time it was made.

Sec. 6. That in case the subscriptions to any additional stock authorized after the organization of said corporation shall at any time exceed the amount of additional stock at that time authorized to be issued, the board of directors of the said corporation shall distribute the full number of shares authorized at the time of such distribution, and not issued, to and among the subscribers therefor, in proportion to their respective subscriptions.

Sec. 7. That as soon as 50,000 shares of the capital stock shall have been subscribed for in the manner hereinbefore provided, and the certificate of the Comptroller of the Currency referred to in section 3 of this act has been executed, the persons so subscribing, and all persons who shall or may be associated with them or their successors, shall forthwith become a body corporate by and under the name of The International American Bank, and by that name shall have corporate existence for the term of fifty years, and shall have power—

First. To adopt and use a corporate seal and to issue certificates of stock as herein provided.

Second. To have succession for fifty years from the period of its organization, unless it is sooner dissolved by the act of its stockholders or by operation of law, or unless its franchise becomes forfeited by some violation of law.

Third. To make contracts.

Fourth. To sue and be sued, complain and defend, in any court of law or equity, as fully as natural persons.

Fifth. To elect or appoint directors; by its board of directors to appoint a president, a vice-president, a cashier, assistant cashier, and other officers; to dismiss such officers or any of them at pleasure, and appoint others to fill their places, and to employ all necessary assistants and employees, either in the United States of America or elsewhere, for the purpose of carrying out the powers hereby granted and transacting the business of said corporation; to fix the compensation of all such assistants and employees and change the same from time to time as may be deemed necessary, and to dismiss them or any of them at pleasure, and to appoint others to fill their places.

Sixth. To adopt by-laws, not inconsistent with law, regulating the manner in which its stock shall be transferred, its directors elected or appointed, its officers appointed, its property transferred, its general business conducted, and the privileges granted to it by law exercised and enjoyed, fixing the salaries, duties, and powers of its said officers, and prescribing the penalty of bonds to be given by them, which by-laws, except so far as they fix the salaries or bonds of such officers, may be amended by the board of directors, such amendment, however, to cease to be valid and effectual for any purpose after any meeting of the stockholders next succeeding the adoption of such amendment unless the same shall be ratified by such meeting by the vote of stockholders representing a majority of the stock of the bank.

Seventh. To act as the financial agent of any nation, government, State, municipality, corporation, or person, and to perform any and all acts and duties not inconsistent with law that it may undertake and assume as such financial agent, including the sale, exchange, or other disposition of any bonds or other evidences of indebtedness issued by any such government, State, municipality, corporation, or person.

Eighth. To carry on the business of banking by discounting and negotiating promissory notes, bills of exchange, drafts, and other evidences of debt; to receive deposits; to buy and sell exchange, coin, and bullion; to issue letters of credit to the order of the person therein named, and to loan money on personal security, subject to the limits hereinafter imposed; and to borrow money for use in its business in an amount not exceeding 50 per cent of its paid-up capital stock.

That said bank and its branches may take, reserve, receive, and charge on any loan, or discount made, or upon any note, bill of exchange, or other evidence of debt, such rate of interest or discount as is for the time the established rate of interest for delay in the payment of money, in the absence of contract between the parties, by the laws of the several States or countries in which the said bank and its branches are respectively located, and no more: Provided, however, That interest may be reserved or taken, in advance, at the time of making the loan or discount, according to the usual rules of banking; and the knowingly taking, reserving, or charging of a rate of interest greater than that allowed by this section shall be held and adjudged a forfeiture of the debt or demand on which the same is taken, reserved, or charged; but the purchase, discount, or sale of a bill of exchange, drawn on actually existing values, and payable at another place than the place of such purchase, discount, or sale, at the current discount or premium, shall not be considered as taking, reserving, or charging interest.

Ninth. To acquire, purchase, hold, and convey real estate for the following purposes, and for no others: (a) Such as shall be necessary for its immediate accommodation in the transaction of its business. (b) Such as shall be mortgaged to it in good faith as security for debts previously contracted. (c) Such as shall be conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings. (d) Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by it or shall purchase to secure debts due to it. But it shall not hold or be entitled to retain possession of any real estate purchased by it under either of the last three preceding clauses of this section for a longer period than five years.

Tenth. All such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking under the provisions and terms and for the purposes of this act, including the power to purchase and hold shares of the capital stock of any foreign corporation authorized to transact banking business in foreign countries.

Eleventh. The corporation hereby created shall not have the power and shall not issue notes or obligations in any form to be used and circulated as money, nor shall it make any loan or discount to any person upon the security of shares of its own capital stock, nor shall it purchase or hold any such shares unless it shall purchase the same to prevent loss upon a debt previously contracted with it in good faith, and it shall not hold any stock so purchased or acquired for a longer period than six months from the time of acquiring the same; but it shall be the duty of the board of directors to sell and dispose of all such stock at public or private sale within the period of six months from the time of acquiring the same.

Sec. 8. That the said corporation shall not exercise any of the above powers and shall not transact any business, except such as is preliminary to its organization, until authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence the business of banking, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 9. That within ten days after the commissioners to receive subscriptions to its stock shall have transferred to the directors of said corporation the subscription books, records, and money received by said commissioners, the president, cashier, and five directors of the corporation hereby created shall make a statement, under oath, and file the same with the Comptroller of the Currency, showing the number of shares of the capital stock subscribed, the amount of cash paid in on such subscriptions, and the amount in the hands of the board of directors at the time of the making of such statement, and the names and residences of all subscribers to said capital stock, and the number of shares subscribed for by each of them; whereupon, if it shall appear from such statement that the amount of 50,000 shares of the capital stock of said company has been subscribed, and that 25 per cent of the amount of such subscriptions has in each case been paid in and received by said board of directors, the Comptroller of the Currency shall issue to said corporation a final certificate, setting forth that the said capital of 50,000 shares having been subscribed for, and the amount prescribed herein having been paid in thereon, the said corporation is authorized and empowered to commence business and to exercise all powers and authority herein and hereby granted; and the said corporation shall cause such final certificate issued as is provided in this section to be published in some newspaper of general circulation published in the city of Washington for at least sixty days next after the issuing thereof; and the date of said final certificate shall be held to be the date or period of the organization of said corporation.

Sec. 10. That the entire subscription for the capital stock of said company, to the amount of 50,000 shares, shall be called and fully paid in within two years from the date of the granting of the certificate by the said Comptroller, as above provided, and at the times and in installments as follows: Twenty-five per cent as hereinbefore provided in section 2; 25 per cent within twelve months; 25 per cent within eighteen months, and 25 per cent within twenty-four months after the date of organization. The president and cashier shall report, under oath, to the Comptroller of the Currency the passage of every resolution of the directors calling for the payment of any installment, within five days after it shall be passed, and shall also report to him, within five days after the date fixed by each resolution for the payment of any installment, what amounts have been received upon each of such calls.

Sec. 11. That the principal office and place of business of said corporation shall be in the city of Washington, D. C., or in the city of New York, in the State of New York, as the board of directors shall determine; and the directors shall have power to open such additional branch offices in the United States, not exceeding eight, at points to be approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, as may be necessary to carry on its business; and to discontinue any of such branch offices when the same, in the opinion of the directors, shall no longer be necessary for the business of the corporation. The directors shall also, within two years after the commencement of the existence of said corporation, open one such branch office in Mexico, one in the West Indies, and two in South America, at such points as the directors shall determine, for the regular sale of bills of exchange drawn upon the principal office of the company, and for the transaction of such other classes of business as the directors may designate; and from and after the establishment of each of such branch offices the said corporation shall regularly sell bills of exchange at its principal office, drawn upon the said branch offices. The directors shall also have power from time to time to open such other branch offices in Mexico, the West Indies, South and Central America as they may determine, and to discontinue any such branch office which, in the opinion of the directors, may no longer be necessary for the business of the company, but not so as to reduce the number of branch offices for the regular sale of exchange, as aforesaid, below that originally required to be established.

Sec. 12. That the affairs of the corporation shall be managed by a board of 25 directors, who shall hold office until their successors are duly elected and qualified. Each director must, so long as he shall hold or be entitled to hold office, be the owner in his own right of not less than 100 shares of the capital stock of said corporation, the same not being hypothecated or in any way pledged as security for the payment of any loan or debt; and any director who shall cease to be the owner as aforesaid of 100 shares of the capital stock, or who becomes in any other manner disqualified, shall thereby vacate his office. Not less than 15 of the directors shall be citizens of the United States. Any vacancy in the board of directors caused by death, resignation, or otherwise shall be filled until the next ensuing election by an appointment by the remaining directors. Each director when elected or appointed shall take an oath that he will, so far as the duty devolves upon him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the corporation, and will not knowingly violate, or willingly permit to be violated, any of the provisions of this act, and that he is the owner in good faith and in his own right of the number of shares required by this act, and that the same is not hypothecated or in any way pledged as security for any loan or debt. Such oath, and any other oath required by this act, may be taken before any officer who is authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the United States or by the laws of the State, Territory, or District where the oath may be administered; and when taken in any foreign country any such oath may be administered by a diplomatic or consular representative of the United States and shall be forthwith filed with the Comptroller of the Currency.

SEC. 13. That there shall be called and held annually, on each day and in such manner as the by-laws may provide, a meeting of the stockholders of the corporation for the election of directors and the ordering of the business and affairs of the corporation generally. If from any cause an election is not made at the time appointed, an election may be held on any subsequent day; but thirty days' notice thereof shall be given in a newspaper published in the city of Washington and in a newspaper published in the city of New York, and also in a newspaper published in any other city where any branch of said bank may be located. At any such meeting, and in all meetings of stockholders, each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote on each share of stock held by him and standing in his name on the books of the company at least thirty days before the day of such meeting. In all elections of directors and in deciding all questions under consideration stockholders may vote by proxies, duly authorized in writing; but no vote shall be allowed on any share on which there is any installment or assessment due and unpaid, in whole or in part.

SEC. 14. That the president and cashier of said corporation shall cause to be kept at all times, in a book to be provided for that purpose, a full and correct list of the names and residences of the stockholders of the corporation and the number of shares held by each, which said list shall be filed at the principal place of business of said corporation and at each of its branch offices. Such lists shall be subject to the inspection of the stockholders of the corporation and the officers authorized to assess taxes under State authority during the business hours of each day in which business may be legally transacted, and a copy of such list, on July 1 of each year, verified by the oath of the president or cashier, shall be transmitted to the Comptroller of the Currency. No entry of the transfer of any share of stock shall be made upon the books of said company within thirty days before any annual meeting of the stockholders.

SEC. 15. That the stockholders of the corporation shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for the contracts, debts, and engagements of said corporation to the extent of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. Whenever any stockholder or his assignee fails to pay any installment on the stock when the same is required under the provisions of this act to be paid, the directors of the corporation may sell the stock of such delinquent stockholder at public auction to any person who will pay the highest price therefor, to be not less than the amount then due thereon, with the expenses of advertisement and sale, and the excess, if any, shall be paid to the delinquent stockholder. Thirty days' previous notice of such sale shall be given in a daily newspaper published and of general circulation in the city of New York, and by mailing to such delinquent stockholder at his place of residence a written or printed notice stating names of such delinquent stockholders, number of shares in name of each to be offered for sale, the amount due and unpaid on such shares, and the time and place of sale. If no bidder can be found who will pay for such stock the amount due thereon to the corporation and the cost of advertisement and sale, the amount previously paid shall be forfeited to the corporation, and such stock shall be sold as the directors may order within six months from the time of such forfeiture, and if not sold it shall be canceled and deducted from the capital stock of the corporation. If any such cancellation and reduction shall reduce the capital of the corporation below the minimum of capital required by this act, the capital stock shall, within thirty days from the date of such cancellation, be increased to the required amount, in default of which a receiver may be appointed to close up the business of the corporation.

SEC. 16. That if at any time it shall appear to the Comptroller of the Currency that the capital stock of the corporation is impaired, he may notify the directors of the said corporation to cause such impairment to be made good, by assessment upon the stockholders, as hereinafter provided; and if, within ninety days from the date of said notice the capital shall be still impaired, the said Comptroller may, in his discretion, notify the directors that no further business can be done by said corporation until said capital is made good; and if said requirement to make good such impairment be not complied with within ninety days from the date of the second notice, he may appoint a receiver for the said corporation, who shall, under his direction, proceed to wind up its affairs; and a receiver may be appointed in like manner in case the corporation shall at any time become insolvent. Such receiver shall take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of such association, collect all debts, dues, and claims belonging to it, and upon the order of a United States court of competent jurisdiction may sell or compound all bad or doubtful debts, and, on a like order, may sell all the assets of the corporation on such terms as the court shall direct, and may, if necessary to pay the debts of the association, enforce the individual liability of the stockholders. Such receiver shall pay over all moneys so made to the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the Comptroller of the Currency, and shall also make a report to the Comptroller of all his acts and proceedings. From time to time the said Comptroller shall make a ratable dividend of the moneys so paid over to him by such receiver on all such claims as may have been proven to his satisfaction or adjudicated in a court of competent jurisdiction, and as the proceeds of the assets of such association are paid over to him shall make further dividends on all claims previously proven or adjudicated, and the remainder of the assets, if any, shall be paid over to the stockholders of such association, or their legal representatives, in proportion to the stock by them, respectively, held.

SEC. 17. That if any stockholder or stockholders of the corporation shall neglect or refuse, after ninety days' notice, to pay the assessment as provided for in the foregoing section, it shall be the duty of the board of directors to cause a sufficient amount of his or their stock to be sold at public auction to pay the same. Thirty days' notice of such sale shall be given by publication in a newspaper published in the city in which the principal place of business of the corporation is located, and in a newspaper published in every city or town in which any branch office of the corporation is located, and by mailing notice as provided in section 15, and the balance of the proceeds of such sale, after paying the amount of such assessment and expenses of sale, shall revert to the owners of the stock so sold.

SEC. 18. That the corporation shall make to the Comptroller of the Currency not less than five reports during each year, according to the form which may be prescribed by him, verified by the oath or affirmation of the president or cashier thereof, and attested by the signature of at least five of the directors. Each such report shall exhibit in detail, and under appropriate heads, the resources and liabilities of the corporation at the close of business on any past day specified by the Comptroller, and each branch shall transmit its report to the principal office within five days after the receipt of the request or requisition from the Comptroller, and the principal office shall transmit the consolidated report of the bank to the Comptroller within five days after the receipt of the reports from the various branches, and in the same form in which it is made to the Comptroller it shall be published in one newspaper in the city of Washington, in one newspaper in the city of New York, and in at least one newspaper in each city in which the said corporation shall have a branch office, and such proof of publication shall be furnished as may be required by the Comptroller. The Comptroller shall also have power to call for special reports whenever the same, in his judgment, are necessary to a full and complete knowledge of the condition of the corporation. The corporation shall also report to the Comptroller of the Currency, within ten days after declaring any dividend, the amount of such dividend and the amount of net earnings in excess of such dividend. Such reports shall be attested by the oath of the president or cashier of the corporation.

SEC. 19. That the Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall, as often as shall be deemed necessary and proper, appoint a suitable person or persons to make an examination of the affairs of the corporation, who shall have power to make a thorough examination thereof, and in doing so to examine any of the officers or agents thereof on oath, and shall make to the Comptroller a full and detailed report of the condition of the corporation and the results of such examination. Any person or persons so appointed to make such examination shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, which compensation shall be collected from the said corporation by the Comptroller and by him paid to such person or persons.

SEC. 20. That no dividends shall at any time be declared or paid upon the stock of the said corporation unless at the time of the declaration of the same there shall be undivided profits made in the business of said corporation actually in cash in the hands of its treasurer to an amount at least equal to the amount of such dividend. All such dividends shall be declared upon the outstanding shares of stock of said corporation equally in favor of such persons as appear at the date of the declaration of such dividend upon the books of said company to be stockholders therein, and shall be payable at a time to be fixed in such resolution, and in a manner and at a place provided by the by-laws of said corporation. But said corporation shall, before the declaration of a dividend, carry one-tenth part of its net profits of the preceding half year to its surplus fund until the same shall amount to 50 per cent of its capital stock.

SEC. 21. That said corporation and each and every branch thereof shall at all times have and keep on hand in lawful money of the United States an amount equal to at least 25 per cent of the aggregate amount of its deposits, which must be shown in the reports to the Comptroller hereinbefore provided for in section 18.

SEC. 22. The property, franchise, and business of the said corporation shall be subject to be taxed by the States in which said property shall be, or the said franchise and business shall be exercised and conducted, as fully and to the same extent as said States may tax the property, franchise, and business of domestic corporations, and the shares of stock of said corporation, properly situated in any State for taxation, may be taxed in such State to the same extent and in the same manner as other personal property.

SEC. 23. That the Government of the United States shall not be, and shall not be assumed to be, responsible for the debts, obligations, contracts, or liabilities of said corporation, or for any claims that may in any manner arise or be asserted against it.

SEC. 24. That if the corporation hereby created or its officers shall fail to make and transmit any report required to be made by this act it shall be subject to the penalty of $100 for each day after the periods respectively herein mentioned for the making and transmission of such report shall have expired, and all such penalties shall, if not promptly paid, be used for and recovered in the name of the United States of America in any circuit court of the United States; and it is hereby made the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States, upon the request of the Comptroller of the Currency, to commence and prosecute any and all such actions for the purpose of recovering any and all such penalties. All moneys recovered in any such suit or suits shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 25. That in case said corporation or its officers shall assume to exercise any power hereby prohibited or denied to said corporation, or shall borrow money in excess of the limit herein established, or shall fail to establish and maintain such branch offices as are required by section 11 of this act, all rights, privileges, and franchises of the said corporation shall be thereby forfeited. Such violation, however, shall be determined and adjudged by the circuit court of the United States, in a suit brought in the name of the people of the United States, before the association shall be declared dissolved, and the Attorney-General of the United States, upon the request of the Comptroller of the Currency, shall commence and prosecute such suit or suits, whenever so requested, in any circuit court of the United States to be selected by him; and when in such suit judgment of the dissolution of the said corporation may be entered, a receiver may be appointed for it, and all other proceedings taken necessary to wind up its affairs and distribute the proceeds of its property as provided in section 16 of this act; and in cases of such violation every director who participated in or assented to the same shall be held liable in his personal and individual capacity for all damages which the corporation, its stockholders, or any other person shall have sustained in consequence of such violation.

SEC. 26. That if the said corporation or its officers at any time shall assume to exercise any powers not herein granted the Comptroller of the Currency is hereby authorized and required to notify said corporation and its officers to desist from such use and to furnish him, within thirty days of the giving of such notice, proof that the said corporation and its officers have ceased to assume the exercise of such powers. Such notice shall be given by the delivery thereof to such officers of said corporation at its principal place of business. If the said corporation shall not furnish, before the expiration of said period of thirty days, satisfactory proof to the said Comptroller that the said corporation and its officers have desisted from the use of any power or powers not granted to it, the rights, privileges, and franchises of the corporation hereby formed shall be thereby forfeited, and such proceedings shall thereafter be taken as are provided in the case of the forfeiture of such rights, privileges, and franchises in the preceding section hereof.

SEC. 27. That any officer of the corporation, or any branch thereof, who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, or neglect to perform any duty herein required of him, and any director who shall knowingly acquiesce in or permit any such violation of this act or neglect of duty, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $5,000, and imprisonment not less than one year nor more than five years, or both. Every president, director, cashier, teller, clerk, or other officer or agent of this corporation who embezzles, abstracts, or willfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds, or credits of the corporation; or who, without authority from the directors, issues or puts in circulation any note of the corporation; or who, without such authority, issues or puts forth any certificate of deposit, draws any order or bill of exchange, makes any acceptance, assigns any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree; or who makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of the corporation with intent, in either case, to injure or defraud the corporation or any other company, body politic or corporate, or any individual person, or to deceive any officer of the corporation or any agent appointed to examine the affairs of the corporation; and every person who, with like intent, aids or abets any officer, clerk, or agent in any violation of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned not less than five years nor more than ten.

SEC. 28. That the corporation hereby formed may go into liquidation and be closed by and with the written consent of its shareholders owning two-thirds of its stock.

SEC. 29. That whenever stockholders owning two-thirds of the stock of said corporation shall notify the officers thereof in writing of their desire that said corporation shall go into liquidation and be closed it shall be the duty of the board of directors to cause notice of this fact to be certified under the seal of the corporation, by its president or cashier, to the Comptroller of the Currency, and to publish notice thereof for a period of two months immediately after the filing of such consent in a newspaper published in the city of New York, which notice shall state that the said corporation is closed by its officers, and notify its creditors to present their claims against the said corporation for payment; and the existence of the corporation shall continue only for the purpose of closing its affairs. The Comptroller of the Currency, at any time after the corporation has been placed in liquidation by its stockholders, may, upon becoming satisfied of its insolvency, appoint a receiver, who shall wind up its affairs in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of this act. At any time after the expiration of six months from the date of the notice to the creditors of the bank to present their claims for payment the board of directors or any stockholder of said bank may commence suit in any circuit court of the United States for the judicial settlement of the business of the corporation and for the appointment of a receiver of its assets and property; and in any such suit the circuit court of the United States shall have, possess, and use all the powers and authority of courts of equity in such cases.

SEC. 30. That the corporation herein provided for shall be organized and obtain the certificate of organization as hereinbefore provided within two years from and after the passage of this act and not thereafter; and the power to repeal, amend, or alter this act in any and all respects is hereby reserved.

SEC. 31. That the powers, rights, privileges, obligations, and duties conferred and imposed by this act shall not be exclusive, but shall be conferred and imposed on any citizens of the United States similar in number to the persons named in the first section of this act, who for the purpose of incorporating an international bank shall take the steps and follow the procedure prescribed by this act to be taken and followed by the persons named in the first section hereof for the purpose of incorporating the said International American Bank; and said citizens of the United States shall have the right to adopt such corporate name as to them seems best.

SEC. 32. That for the purposes of jurisdiction of State courts in suits by or against the said corporation, the said corporation shall for all of said purposes be taken and held to be a domestic corporation in all the States of the Union in which it may do a general business or have established branches.

SEC. 33. That this act shall take effect immediately.

Mr. COX (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, I want to make an inquiry, so that the House can understand this matter. What bill is this that the Clerk is reading? Is it a House bill or a Senate bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BINGHAM). It is House bill No. 10807. The Chair reads from the bill:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 27, 1898.

Mr. HILL, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported, in lieu of H. R. 7341, the following bill; which was referred to the House Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. COX. Then this is the House bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.

Mr. BARTLETT. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry with reference to the bill which is being read. I hold in my hand the report of this committee upon House bill 7341; and the report states that the committee reports a bill (H. R. 10807) as a substitute for House bill 7341. I wish to inquire whether it is not proper to first lay the original bill before the House, prior to the substitute being read? The Chair will understand that the point of my inquiry is this: House Report No. 1627, made by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL], is to the effect that the committee has had under consideration House bill 7341, which they report back with the recommendation that it lie on the table, and that House bill 10807 be passed as a substitute for House bill 7341.

We are now engaged in reading the substitute recommended by the committee, although the bill which was referred to the committee and which was reported back with the recommendation of a substitute has never been laid before the House and no action has been taken upon it. My point is that we can not consider the substitute nor have it read until we have disposed of the original bill. The committee, according to the language of the report, clearly reports the bill now being read, House bill 10870, as a substitute for the original bill; and we are now engaged in the reading of the substitute before the original bill has been disposed of or even read. How can we act upon a substitute until we have in some way disposed of or considered or had read to the House the original bill for which the bill we are now reading is offered by the committee as a substitute?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This whole question has been gone over by the Speaker. The Clerk was proceeding under the Speaker's direction and in pursuance of his decision, and this is not the time for the gentleman to raise his point or question—

Mr. COX. When will be the time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And the reading of the bill will go on.

Mr. COX. A parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know when the Speaker made a ruling to the effect that the original bill was not in order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Speaker determined that this bill should be read, and it was being read when the gentleman from Tennessee interrupted the proceedings.

Mr. COX. Upon a point of order which I had the right to make, and which I made under the rules of the House. Of course I submit to the ruling of the Chair, but I think it is erroneous.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk resumed the reading, but was again interrupted by Mr. COX, who said: Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to understand this proceeding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will proceed.

Mr. COX. Oh, well, if the Clerk will hold on a minute—

The SPEAKER (resuming the chair). The Clerk will suspend.

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to know what bill we are reading.

The SPEAKER. The bill which the Clerk is reading.

Mr. COX. Of course we are reading the bill which the Clerk is reading; but where does it come from?

The SPEAKER. It is being read to the House, having been reported by the committee, having been called up by the committee, and the House having voted to consider it.

Mr. COX. What committee does it come from?

The SPEAKER. The House has voted to consider the bill.

Mr. COX. Well, now, Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. The Clerk must proceed with the reading.

Mr. COX. I do not care about the Clerk proceeding; but I want to know what bill he is reading.

The SPEAKER. After we get through, the gentleman will then know, perhaps.

Mr. COX. Probably I shall.

The SPEAKER. Perhaps. [Laughter.]

Mr. COX. I do not think the Speaker knows now.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading.

Mr. HILL. I desire to ask—

Mr. MADDOX. I desire to ask unanimous consent to submit a report from a portion of the minority of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] asks unanimous consent to file the views of the minority of the committee. Without objection, consent will be given.

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. I wish to ask gentlemen who are opposed to this bill, if there are any such in the House, whether they wish to make any arrangement as to the duration of the debate and the taking of a vote?

Mr. KELLEY. For one, I am opposed to the bill and would like to have considerable time to discuss it.

Mr. HILL. There is no desire on the part of the committee or on this side of the House to cut off reasonable discussion. I think there need be no trouble in reaching a definite agreement for a vote upon the bill with the two amendments recommended by the committee.

Mr. MADDOX. As one member of the minority, and representing perhaps one or two others, I wish to say that we deem this a very important question. It is a fundamental question, so far as our party is concerned. We feel that we ought to have either full debate or none at all.

There are a number of gentlemen on this side of the House who desire to be heard on this question. It is a matter of considerable importance; and if the gentleman will agree to give us, say, until about the day after to-morrow for the discussion, we would be satisfied, I take it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, of course it will be impossible to continue this debate until the day after to-morrow; for in all probability, as we have been informed already, there will be an adjournment over to-morrow and over the Fourth of July, and of course no business will be in order or can be transacted.

There will be no objection to fixing 2 o'clock to-morrow for a vote, when the previous question shall be considered as ordered, if that will meet the views of gentlemen who are disposed to oppose the measure. This will give ample time for the discussion of the bill and the two amendments proposed by the committee.

Mr. KELLEY. I suggest that there ought to be at least six days' debate on the bill. This is a far-reaching measure. It is of great consequence and a matter of importance. It disturbs the monetary system of the country and demands careful consideration, and, Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely impossible to give it proper consideration in the five or six hours suggested by the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MADDOX. That would give us only four or five hours for debate.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important bill and ought to be carefully considered.

Mr. KELLEY. I suggest that the gentleman from Connecticut let it go over, and let the discussion proceed, and take a vote after the House shall have given full consideration to it.

Mr. NEWLANDS. So far as I am concerned, I desire to participate in the discussion of the bill. It will be utterly impossible for me to proceed this afternoon, and I hope the matter will go over until some future day. I ask, therefore, unanimous consent that the time for taking a vote on this bill be fixed for next Thursday at 4 o'clock.

Mr. HILL. I am willing to agree, Mr. Speaker, that the bill be taken up and considered and disposed of to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and at that time the vote shall be taken on the bill and amendments. Now, if gentlemen on the other side will enter into such an agreement, we can proceed with the debate at once; and I ask unanimous consent that that order be made by the House.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Why, that would allow only an hour and three-quarters on each side—two hours to-morrow and an hour and a half this afternoon.

Mr. HILL. I am satisfied that this time would be sufficient, so far as this side of the House is concerned.

Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard on this bill. The International American Bank proposes to incorporate by name certain individuals taken from the various States. It is a remarkable proposition, and I, in connection with a large number of the members on this side of the House, desire to speak against such a proposition.

Now, with the intimation already given that the House will probably adjourn over until after the Fourth of July, I do not think it would be just or proper to force the matter at this time. This is legislation which departs entirely from our international system as heretofore adopted.

Why not, therefore, take up the bill and discuss it? Let the discussion proceed for a reasonable time, beginning to-day or to-morrow, and proceed to the conclusion according to the merits of the question presented, and then determine the time that the debate shall close. This would be infinitely better than undertaking now, in advance, to limit the time to one, two, or three or four hours, or even four or five days. Why should we limit the time at all for disposing of so important a matter? It seems to me that the proper course to be pursued in a matter of so great importance as this would be to discuss the bill now and give fair and full opportunity to all members to express their opinions upon it. If it is a proper bill, that is the proper course. If it is not a proper bill, it ought not to be passed.

Mr. MADDOX. I desire to say to the gentleman from Connecticut that we can not accept his proposition to fix a time for voting at so early a date.

Mr. HILL. I can not hear the statement of the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MADDOX. My statement was that we could not accept the proposition of the gentleman to vote to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Mr. HILL. I understood the gentleman to make that proposition himself.

Mr. MADDOX. That was a mistake.

Mr. HILL. I understood the gentleman to say that he would be satisfied to have a vote on Friday.

Mr. MADDOX. That is a mistake.

Mr. HILL. Then the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS] made some such suggestion.

Mr. MADDOX. My suggestion was that the matter go over until some other day.

A MEMBER. But somebody else suggested that a vote be taken on Thursday. To-day is Thursday.

Mr. HILL. I am willing to accept the proposition to vote at 2 o'clock on Friday.

Mr. MADDOX. But that does not give sufficient time.

Mr. PAYNE. Under the rules only two days could be devoted to the consideration of the bill. The gentleman's proposition extends that time to Tuesday.

Mr. BAILEY. Under what rule, I would ask the gentleman from New York, is the House limited to two days?

Mr. PAYNE. Under the rule providing for the call of committees. This bill is called up in that manner.

Mr. BAILEY. And if it has not been disposed of in that time it loses its status as a privileged matter under that rule?

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly, the gentleman would have to go on then with the matter under the previous question, and take a vote under that condition of things, and take up most of the time probably in roll calls. Now, it seems to me it is a reasonable proposition to take a vote Tuesday afternoon, say, at 3 o'clock.

Mr. HILL. Very well; at 3 o'clock, or even at 4 o'clock.

Mr. MADDOX. We can not accept that proposition, and do not accept it.

Mr. PAYNE. Then, of course, gentlemen will have to take their chances.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I can state that I am instructed by the Committee on Banking and Currency to offer two amendments to the bill, and I would like to give notice of them now. They will be called up at the proper time.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman offers the amendments, I desire to ask if it is in order to move to strike out the enacting clause of this bill?

Mr. HILL. I do not yield for that purpose.

Mr. McRAE. I make the point that amendments are not in order until the bill is read by paragraphs. General debate has not been closed.

Mr. HILL. I do not yield for that purpose. I simply give notice of the following amendments, and I desire to have them read in my time in order that members of the House may have a clear understanding of the bill as it will be presented by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.
The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, in line 22, page 16, after the words "Central America," the following: "or other foreign countries;" and in line 23, after the word "determine," "upon the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency."

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I had a parliamentary inquiry pending which I desire to have answered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut has the floor and is addressing the House, and this is read as a part of his remarks.

Mr. BAILEY. I supposed, however, that it was in order to respond to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HILL. Not in my time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not in the gentleman's time. After the gentleman has finished, the Chair will endeavor to answer the question.

Mr. BAILEY. I thought a parliamentary inquiry was always in order, and I simply desire not to lose the right to make the motion I intend to make.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's rights will be preserved. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read the second proposed amendment, as follows:

Insert in line 11, page 31, after the words "International American Bank," the following:

"Except that the location and number of foreign branches and the minimum of capital shall be in the discretion and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency."

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I understand that these propositions were simply read for information.

The SPEAKER. Read simply as a part of the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. HILL. My purpose in presenting the amendments at this time is in order that the members of the House may understand clearly the proposition which the committee desires to bring before the House. Perhaps I can explain it and make it more clear. I should be glad if I had more time to present the matter as it deserves, and I regret exceedingly that gentlemen on the other side of the House are not willing to extend the time for debate and thus not force me at the expiration of the hour to move the previous question, which I did not want to do.

The committee amendments make the bill more nearly a general law than it was before, and they are offered at the request of the minority, not at the request of the majority. The bill as originally drawn, Mr. Speaker, provided for the organization of one single banking institution. The proposition is the outgrowth of action taken by the Pan-American Congress held in this city some ten years ago. As a result of their conclusions the Banking Committee of that Congress presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the conference recommends to the governments here represented the granting of liberal concessions to facilitate inter-American banking, especially such as may be necessary for the establishment of an international American bank, with branches or agencies in the several countries represented in this conference.

This resolution was signed by the delegates from Colombia, Chile, the United States, Brazil, and Costa Rica. In accordance with that resolution—

Mr. TERRY. I should like to ask the gentleman a question here.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Connecticut yield to the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. HILL. I yield for a question.

Mr. TERRY. I should like to inquire of the gentleman where he finds any warrant in the Constitution of the United States for the establishment of an institution like this?

Mr. HILL. I will come to that by and by, and will answer the gentleman's question, but I prefer to take the matter up in my own way.

The resolution as submitted by the Pan-American Congress was indorsed by the President of the United States, Mr. Harrison, and also by the Secretary of State, the Hon. James G. Blaine. I desire, with the permission of the House, to have read as a part of my remarks a letter of Mr. Blaine indorsing this proposition.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, May 27, 1890.

THE PRESIDENT:

I have the honor to submit herewith the report of the committee on banking as unanimously adopted by the International American Conference recently in session in this city. It was the wish of the conference that this proposition, of such great interest to every American Republic, should, as promptly as possible, secure the earnest attention of the Congress of the United States.

The foreign commerce of the nations south of the Gulf of Mexico and the Rio Grande amounts annually to more than $1,100,000,000. At present the people of the United States enjoy only a meager share of this market, but the action of the recent conference will result, I believe, in the removal of certain obstacles which now tend to obstruct the expansion of our trade.

One of the most serious of these obstacles is the absence of a system of direct exchanges and credits, by reason of which the exporting and importing merchants of the United States engaged in commerce with Central and South America have been compelled to pay the bankers of London a tax upon every transaction. Last year our commerce with the countries south of us amounted to $232,005,057, of which the imports of merchandise were valued at $181,053,996, and the imports of specie and bullion were $51,236,791, while our exports consisted of merchandise valued at $71,903,181 and $2,003,470 in specie and bullion.

Of the merchandise imported into the United States, the greater part was paid for by remittances to London and the cities of the continent to cover drafts against European letters of credit. For use of these credits a commission of three-fourths of 1 per cent is customarily paid, so that the European banks enjoyed a large profit upon our business with a minimum of risk. This system steadily results in losses to our merchants in interest and differences in exchange as well as in commissions. These losses would be largely reduced by the establishment of an international system of banking between the American Republics.

The merchants of this country are as dependent upon the bankers of Europe in their financial transactions with their American neighbors as they are upon the shipowners of Great Britain for transportation facilities, and will continue to labor under these embarrassments until direct banking systems are established.

The report of the committee, hereto attached, presents a simple and easy method of relief, and the enactment of the measure recommended will, in the judgment of the conference, result in the establishment of proper facilities for inter-American banking.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, if there were any reasons whatever demanding the establishment of this institution ten years ago, those reasons are far greater in number and far more potent now.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I notice on page 9, enumerating the powers in the third paragraph, this bill authorizes this bank to make contracts without any limitation whatever.

Mr. HILL. Precisely. That is precisely the language of the national-bank law now. There is no change whatever in that respect, and I will come to that in a moment. Perhaps I had better touch on it now. I will state in drawing this bill the author has followed almost precisely the language of the national-bank law now, and in the particular clause to which the gentleman from Pennsylvania refers, it is precisely the language of the national-bank law. If there are changes from the national-bank law they are changes making the provisions more rigid than the law is to-day.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. This allows the bank to build railroads, or do anything.

Mr. HILL. Allows it to do what national banks would do, and nothing else.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I am simply asking for information, and not attacking the measure. If the gentleman will allow me to ask him another question. On page 35 I see that these powers and privileges are granted to any other number of persons who may desire to form corporations.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Is there not danger of inaugurating an entirely new system of banking, to the detriment of the established rights of those banks already existing?

Mr. HILL. I think not, for the reason, if the gentleman will read the bill through, he will find that there are certain things required of this organization under this law that will prevent anything of the kind. Every bank organized under this law must create and maintain a foreign branch in some foreign country, where in the open market bills of exchange between this and foreign countries shall always be sold. Now, there is no danger of breaking up the banking system under this provision.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not know the provision of the national-bank law as it there appears, but this provision is such as to enable this institution to do anything—to build and operate railroads and steamboats or anything else they may choose.

Mr. HILL. That are within powers incidental to banking.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. It does not say that there is any limit to that power.

Mr. HILL. Neither does the national-bank law. The law is here before me, and the gentleman can take it and examine it.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not dispute that; but the parties to the corporation obtain additional power by which they can take in any kind of business they choose.

Mr. HILL. In the matter of the organization and powers of national banks, they have been copied verbatim, except so far as it became necessary to permit additional language being used to organize foreign branches and to transact a foreign business.

Mr. BARTHOLOTT. I claim there is a difference. The national-bank law does not name any individuals to whom special privileges shall be granted. I will say, if you had come in here with a general bill, allowing such organization under general terms, I would be most heartily in favor of such a proposition, but I am opposed to granting these special privileges to the gentlemen named in the first page of the bill.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I will address myself to the particular point raised by the gentleman from Missouri, for that very point has been raised by other persons—that there are in this bill the names of certain gentlemen mentioned on the first page. The gentlemen mentioned on the first page are simply commissioners authorized to advertise for subscriptions for stock, and when the subscriptions for stock are made and apportioned their powers and privileges cease and determine then and there. They are not in any sense corporators, and not stockholders necessarily at all, unless they choose to subscribe as any other gentleman can subscribe; but they are simply designated as commissioners to solicit subscriptions.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I do not wish to interrupt the gentleman unnecessarily, but I like to have these things settled as we go along. I notice upon examination of the national-bank law that this power to make contracts is limited entirely to associations for carrying on the business of banking. This bill does not limit it to carrying on the business of banking; it has no limit on it at all. This corporation may engage in any enterprise, regardless of banks or the banking business. It may engage in the management of steamships, the running of railroads, or anything else. If that is the purpose of the bill, let us have it understood.

Mr. HILL. This bill is for an international American bank, with its powers and privileges copied verbatim from the national banking law of the country as it stands on the statute books, except as to the privileges incidental to a foreign business.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman allow me a question right there?

Mr. HILL. I shall have to decline, for I want to proceed consecutively. As originally drawn, the bill provided that the twelve gentlemen named on the first page should be commissioners and receive subscriptions of stock, and the committee limited it to this particular institution, the International American Bank. It was amended in the Senate, I think, on a motion offered by Senator MALLORY of Florida, adding the thirty-first section, which threw it entirely open and made it a general law.

Now, then, the Committee on Banking and Currency desired to extend it still further, because there were certain limitations not covered by section 31. It left the requirement of $5,000,000 capital and one and one-quarter paid in. It left the requirement of four branches being maintained in the countries of South America, and the proposition was advanced that gentlemen in Mobile, in New Orleans, in San Francisco, in Seattle might desire to organize a bank with only one branch, and if they did organize a bank with only one foreign branch they would not need a capital of $5,000,000.

So the amendment of the Senate was still further amended, or proposed to be by the Committee on Banking and Currency, by providing that other countries than those named in South America might be utilized for the location of branches, by providing that the number of branches and the amount of capital to be used and the location of the branches should be in the discretion and control of the Comptroller of the Currency. So that the bill, starting as a special charter for one single institution, has been elaborated into a general law covering the whole country and admitting any twelve gentlemen.

Now, then, in regard to the names mentioned, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLOTT] objects to these names being mentioned, not in and of themselves, but because it might possibly prevent other persons being named in other organizations. I want to say in reply that if the names were not mentioned in this bill they could not be mentioned in the act of incorporation, which any other gentlemen might choose to avail themselves of, because any other twelve gentlemen, to avail themselves of the provisions of this bill, must follow in all of the provisions—

Mr. BARTHOLOTT. Are there any names mentioned in the national banking act?

Mr. HILL. Not at all.

Mr. BARTHOLOTT. Did it prevent the organization of national banking corporations?

Mr. HILL. Not at all.

Mr. BARTHOLOTT. Why do you not come in here with a general provision putting everybody on an equality that has money to invest in an enterprise of this kind, and allow everybody to be a beneficiary in this great international banking system?

Mr. HILL. That is precisely the thing the committee has done.

Mr. MADDOX. Will the gentleman from Connecticut allow me a question?

Mr. HILL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MADDOX. The gentleman says this is a general banking business. Is it not a fact that under the provisions of this bill any other twelve gentlemen that want to form a banking corporation are required to do it within the next sixty days?

Mr. HILL. I recognize the criticism which the gentleman from Georgia makes, and I have not the slightest objection to his offering an amendment striking out the words "within the next sixty days." My attention has been called to it lately. However, it leaves everybody on an equality if you leave it in. I have no authority from the committee to accept the amendment; but if it is offered, I will vote for it.

Mr. MADDOX. It does not leave them on an equality, for these gentlemen who know about the bill stand ready to organize their bank, while other individuals in the country have not heard of it and know nothing about it, and the time might expire before they did hear of it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I can not quite appreciate the feeling which would ask the striking out of the names of gentlemen who have been solicited over and over again to become corporators in this enterprise. They have not themselves asked that their names be inserted. These are not the same gentlemen who in the last Congress came and asked for an act of incorporation of this kind. The names of the corporators at that time were materially different from these. The trouble has been to get men to carry out the resolution of the Pan-American Congress.

This project is an experiment. It is by no means certain that this undertaking will be successful financially, even if Congress grants the act of incorporation. The trouble has been up to this date in getting anybody who would put money into this enterprise and help to develop an international American bank for the furtherance of the interests of American commerce. I am glad to join in extending that privilege to anybody who will come forward and put money into such an undertaking. For this reason I would be opposed to taking these names out of this bill. These gentlemen came here asking, as naturally they would, for an independent separate act of incorporation. The committee has changed the proposition—turned it around.

As I said some time ago, if there were any reasons ten years ago why this bill should be enacted into law and why the citizens of the United States should have the privilege of engaging in foreign commerce through an international bank under any name or description, those reasons are far more potent now, for our foreign trade has increased enormously.

Mr. KELLEY. Is the international character of this bank limited to nations on the American Continent?

Mr. HILL. Not at all. Under the amendments offered by the committee it is extended to all the citizens of the United States and to any country in the world. There is no discrimination. Everybody is placed on an equality.

Mr. DANFORD. Permit me a question. Is there anything in this bill which authorizes this to be a bank of issue?

Mr. HILL. Not at all. It can issue no notes; it can do no business that any private individual can not do. The issuing of notes is expressly forbidden. This is a business proposition, pure and simple, with no politics in it. It has nothing to do with the currency. A political issue ought not to be raised on a business proposition of this kind. There was no politics in the Pan-American Congress. The gentlemen composing that convention represented the business interests of their respective countries.

Their idea was that the American nation, with its capital and its commercial greatness, could charter a financial institution, and by a supervisory power only, not by assuming any responsibility, give it a character which would make it acceptable in every foreign country. The pledge was practically given that if the United States would charter an institution of this kind it should have banking privileges in every country of South America.

In the ten years that have elapsed since that congress was held the American people have had commerce with those nations to the amount of $3,000,000,000, and this nation has paid 1 per cent toll to English banks for the privilege of paying those bills on a three-cornered circuit by way of London instead of by way of the United States.

And not only do the instruments of exchange which settle our commerce—by which it is carried just as much as it is carried by steamships or locomotives—go around by way of London, but everything in the way of travel to-day is practically by way of London. I have here a little clipping to which I wish to refer. Mr. C. D. Mitchell, of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the vice-presidents of the National Association of Manufacturers, went with a number of gentlemen to South America to spy out the land and see whether something could not be done to advance the interests of American trade. He says:

It was a national disgrace, when sending a business commission to Argentina and Brazil this year, to acquaint us with trade prospects, that they were compelled to cross the Atlantic twice each way in foreign-owned and foreign-made ships. In a three months' absence they had only twenty-five days to spy out the land, whereas if they had gone direct they would have had sixty days in which to do their allotted work. Thus the disgrace is overshadowed by the injury and the loss.

During the last year, out of $1,800,000,000 of foreign commerce, $189,000,000 only was carried in American ships. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I believe that, as Republicans and Democrats, it is our duty to so vote and act on any proposition that comes before this Congress that American business may be transacted in American ships, and that American commerce may be managed through American financial institutions without paying tribute to other nations. [Applause.]

Mr. McEWAN. What relation has the passage of this bill to allowing our commerce to be carried in American bottoms?

Mr. HILL. It is in the same line.

Mr. McEWAN. But what relation has the passage of the bill to the attainment of that object? The gentleman, while arguing in favor of the bill, is drawing in matter utterly extraneous to it.

Mr. HILL. I am simply saying that every facility which can be afforded for the extension of foreign commerce will help toward its development in every direction. If American business men be given an international bank through which they can draw exchange, if they be given a line of steamships by which they can carry their goods to foreign markets, certainly American commerce will be increased by such facilities, and just as much by one as by the other.

I have here a letter only fifteen days old which I believe I will spare time to have read, for it comes from a practical business concern and tells precisely the difficulties under which Americans are laboring in the transaction of foreign commerce. It is therefore very pertinent to the present topic.

The Clerk read as follows:

NEW YORK, June 15, 1898.

DEAR SIR: According to press reports of proceedings in Senate on June 14 on international bank, Senator TELLER claims that any of the large banks in New York by virtue of agencies they have in all parts of South America can offer the same facilities to exporters in the United States of America as would the international bank or as do the large English banks in Europe. This is a great mistake, as you will see. We inclose letter of Bank of New York of February 2, 1898, offering to attend to collections of drafts in South America for us.

Mr. HILL. I want to state, Mr. Speaker, that this is a notice from the Bank of New York which the Clerk is now reading, to merchants of New York, with reference to this foreign business. They state that it can be done under the existing organization. Now, I want you to see how it is done under existing conditions. I want you to see what a total and absolute failure this has been. I ask the Clerk to read on.

The Clerk proceeded with the reading, as follows:

We availed ourselves of this offer and were compelled to draw in pounds sterling against our shipments of butter, which drafts were sent by the Bank of New York through the British Bank of South America, to the Banco de Pernambuco, which alone charged three-fourths of 1 per cent collecting commission, and then remit a draft on London in pounds sterling, which draft, after long delay, was sent to us, and even the Bank of New York refused to buy the returned Bank of Pernambuco draft on the London and County Bank!

We inclose memoranda of George O. Gordon, agent of London and River Plate Bank, by which you will see that on a $3,898.49 draft on Bahia we had to draw in pounds sterling and pay heavy collecting commissions, and finally received remittance via London, netting us a loss in exchange and banking commission of $48.77, or over 1 1/2 per cent, and not counting loss of interest due to the remittance going via London.

It is all very well for Senator TELLER and others in Washington to say that the New York banks offer facilities on the strength of such letters as the Bank of New York sent us, which caused us the loss of the use of our money at least thirty days longer than if the United States of America had direct banking facilities with South America. Furthermore, the heavy collection charges are too great, and the loss in being forced to draw in pounds sterling and then on receipt of remittance to again sell the pounds sterling so as to obtain United States dollars, is also a great drawback.

The above shows you at what a great disadvantage exporters in United States of America are as compared to European houses.

Now let us point out to you an even greater drawback.

In order to facilitate our export trade of butter in South America (in trying to supplant the French and Danish butter), we asked our South American friends to open for us bank credits, so that on delivering shipping documents to the New York agents or New York banks we could obtain our money on the spot, and not be forced to send drafts for collection, which compels us to be out of our funds for three to six months, as in the collections made by Bank of New York and London and River Plate Bank.

Not a single bank doing business in Brazil would grant a letter of credit on the terms that such credits are opened for European trade, even to houses that have the highest rating in Brazil.

First. The banks demand a 1 per cent commission on the amount of the credit, whether used or not.

Second. The banks demand security for 25 to 50 per cent of the credit the moment it is granted, whether it will be used or not.

Third. If the drafts against the letter of credit are drawn as shipping documents at ninety days' sight, the moment the goods arrive in Brazil the banks there demand payment for the drafts before they deliver the documents (goods), notwithstanding that the credit and draft entitles the receivers to ninety days' time.

Such documents the banks doing business in Brazil call credits, and we hope you, Mr. FORAKER, will not allow yourself to be deceived by statements that United States exporters have ample facilities for doing business in South America.

Such banks as the London and River Plate Bank and London and Brazilian Bank have in the past twenty-five years paid dividends of 10 to 15 per cent, besides accumulating a surplus of 75 per cent or more, and most of it at the expense of United States merchants.

We are not interested in the proposed international bank, and we write our experiences to you in the hopes that you will be able to enlighten Senators and Representatives in Washington.

What we (United States of America) need is an international bank, United States steamship lines, and reciprocity.

Is there any prospect of reciprocity with Latin America, from whom we buy three to four times as much as we (United States) sell to it?

Thanking you for the interest you display in trying to increase the foreign commerce of our country, which means increased prosperity to the United States, we are,

Yours, respectfully,

KURZMAN BROS.

Hon. J. B. FORAKER,
U. S. Senator (Ohio), Washington, D. C.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, this letter will be found in the Senate proceedings of the week before last, and I want to say to the House that my only desire in this connection is to place this question and this proposition squarely before the House. The bank which is proposed to be chartered here is not a bank which will be authorized to issue currency. That is not allowed by its charter. It is confined to a specific purpose under the terms of the law creating the bank, and I need not go into the matter further than I have already gone.

Mr. KING. Will the gentleman allow an interruption just there?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Why do you invoke the Federal powers of the Government of the United States for the creation of such an organization as this?

Mr. HILL. Simply because it is necessary in such an organization. The capital can not be drawn together under ordinary circumstances.

There is not a man here that does not want to increase American trade and add to the value of our foreign commerce. There is not a Republican or a Democrat on the floor of the House who does not feel in reference to this matter the importance and the necessity of doing something in the line that this bill suggests. It is a legitimate measure, and I do not believe there can be any serious opposition to its passage.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I would like to ask the gentleman, with a view to meeting any opposition which has been made against the bill, if he will not consent, after the third paragraph of the bill, to insert a provision to make it definite and certain by adding these words—I refer to line 23 on page 9—add, after the word "contracts," the words "only in and connected with the business of banking."

Mr. HILL. I have no objection to that.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. If the gentleman will consent to that amendment, I am satisfied there will be no objection to the bill.

Mr. HILL. I have no objection whatever. It is but a slight change in the bill. It is the same power given to the national banks which the bill confers generally.

I have no objection, therefore, to the amendment personally. Of course, I can not speak for the committee. I would like to see this corporation organized, because I believe it will be of vast importance to our trade throughout the country. It is an attempt, at least, on the part of Congress in the right direction to enable the men who control capital and the representatives of trade to get in their work in a satisfactory manner. It is a proposition on the part of Congress to allow our people to proceed with this great and important work, which is not only a benefit to themselves, but to all of their fellow-citizens.

Now, why should not they do it? Because there are certain criticisms upon this franchise. What are they? They say the capital is too large, and that is one of the reasons advanced by the minority this afternoon. Let us see about that. There are to-day in the city of New York six banks with a larger capital than this is proposed to have. There is to-day in the city of San Francisco a bank with 50 per cent more capital than this proposes to have. There is to-day in Chicago a bank with a larger capital than the amount proposed here. How about the limit? This is a fixed limit. I have said to you that every provision of this charter is more rigid than the national-bank law is to-day. There is no limit to the amount of capital that a national bank can work under in this country; none whatever. It may just as well have a hundred million as to have fifty thousand. This limits the possible capital to $25,000,000.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. I will say to my friend that I understand and believe that the capital of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Association is to-day very nearly, if not quite, $25,000,000. That is a banking institution doing business throughout India, China, Japan, and Australia.

Mr. KING. Is it chartered by the Government?

Mr. HILL. I stated that the sixty banks in the city of London doing a foreign business have an average of $5,000,000 capital. The only wish I could have in the matter would be that the capital could be larger and that the scope of this organization was such as to reach around the world and take in a world-wide commerce and bring it into the United States of America.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. My only purpose is to enable you to answer some of these questions and objections.

Mr. HILL. Very well, I will take up the further criticisms which have been made.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I notice in the eighth power you follow the seventh section of the national banking law.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Until you get down to the last part of it. In the national banking law it reads:

By buying and selling exchange, coin and bullion; by loaning money on personal securities, and by obtaining, issuing, and circulating notes, according to the provisions of this title.

For that you substitute this:

And to borrow money for use in its business in an amount not exceeding 50 per cent of its paid-up capital stock.

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. A bank hardly needs to borrow money.

Mr. HILL. I think I have developed the fact that this matter is of interest at least to gentlemen on this side of the House, and I should like again to renew the proposition to gentlemen on the other side of the House, and I ask the attention of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX]. I would like again to renew the proposition that a time be fixed for taking a vote upon this bill, after fair and reasonable debate, when both sides of the question may be heard. Will the gentleman agree to any proposition that does not carry it beyond next Tuesday?

Mr. MADDOX. No, sir; that would give us no time.

Mr. HILL. You will agree to nothing?

Mr. MADDOX. With the understanding that the House is to adjourn to-morrow evening until Tuesday, that would give us no time to discuss the matter.

Mr. HILL. It would give all day to-morrow and all day Tuesday.

Mr. MADDOX. If the House adjourns to-morrow over the Fourth of July, then there would be no session on Saturday, Sunday, or Monday.

Mr. HILL. It would give to-morrow and all day Tuesday.

Mr. MADDOX. Oh, well, we are liable to be taken off our feet by conference reports.

Mr. HILL. Very well. What proposition will the gentleman make for an extension of time?

Mr. MADDOX. Proceed with the debate, and when we get along with it we will determine what we ought to have.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Nobody objects to such a measure as this bill contemplates.

Mr. BINGHAM. Gentlemen on the other side seem to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, there is one other criticism that has been made upon the bill, and that is the duration of the charter—that it continues for fifty years. I call attention to the national banking law. The charter of a national bank is perpetual. That may be disputed by some gentlemen on this floor, but a national-bank charter to-day is granted for twenty years, and it is in the control of the stockholders to extend it. If they comply with the provisions of the law, the Comptroller can not do anything else than permit its extension. So that in every respect this bill is more rigidly drawn and more carefully and more strictly drawn than the national-bank law.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe I have disposed of the question of the limit of capital. I would be glad, if the time had been extended, to bring forward arguments in regard to the constitutional powers of Congress to grant this charter. But I simply desire to say in the short time proposed—

Mr. JENKINS. I want to ask the gentleman from Connecticut if he does not deem that the most important question to be considered?

Mr. HILL. I do not. I stand here and say that it is my firm belief that the people of the United States of America have the right to do anything outside of its borders that is for the general welfare of the people.

Mr. JENKINS. Then you have got to go outside of the letter of the Constitution.

Mr. HILL (continuing). And that inside its own borders it can regulate domestic commerce. I do not confine myself to the letter, I think it can be done under both the letter and the spirit.

Mr. JENKINS. Will the gentleman refer me to the authority for Congress to create this corporation?

Mr. BROMWELL. The power to regulate foreign commerce.

Mr. HILL. If the gentleman will read the report prepared by the honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Brosius], of our committee, in the last Congress, on that question, where the distinguished gentleman takes it up and discusses it at great length, all doubts he may have will be removed as to that.

How much time have I, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has occupied forty-one minutes.

Mr. HILL. I desire to say that the organization of this institution meets the approval of many business organizations of the country.

I hold in my hand a series of resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of New York, specifically indorsing this proposition. I hold in my hand a series of resolutions adopted by the American Paper and Pulp Association.

I have in my mind resolutions adopted by the Associated Banks of New York, including the savings banks, advocating this proposition and recognizing the fact that they have not facilities for transacting this business and that a special charter and special privileges must be given to an institution of this kind. Now, Mr. Speaker, this proposition is not an exclusive one. It covers the whole country and takes in everybody; and the amendments proposed by the committee are intended to reach still further and obviate every possible objection. I would be glad to give some further elucidation of the bill.

Mr. TERRY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. TERRY. Why do you propose to give this corporation such large powers of acquiring and holding real estate?

Mr. HILL. It is absolutely no new power given. It is verbatim et literatim in the words and letters of the national-bank law, and gives them the same power as the national banks of the United States—no more and no less.

Mr. TERRY. In Subdivision D it is provided that they shall have the right to purchase, hold, and convey such real estate as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by it.

Mr. HILL. So does the national-bank law in the same letters.

Mr. TERRY. Now, under that broad power, they can go out and purchase judgments and purchase decrees. They will then be held by a corporation.

Mr. HILL. I would be very glad to yield to the gentleman for a question, but I can not yield for a speech.

Mr. TERRY. It can purchase judgments and decrees and then purchase real estate.

Mr. HILL. These are identically the powers held about real estate by national banks, no more and no less.

Mr. TERRY. Is this precisely the language of the national-bank law?

Mr. HILL. The national-bank law was here.

Mr. TERRY. I do not think it is so broad.

Mr. HILL. I have examined and compared the power given, and the power to hold real estate is precisely the same. It can only be acquired in the same way. So far as my recollection is concerned, there is no change in the law of the right to hold real estate between national banks and this bank.

Mr. REEVES. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. REEVES. You have made a statement frequently in the last few minutes that the powers of this corporation are the same as given to the national banks?

Mr. HILL. Except such incidental powers as are necessary for the transaction of a foreign business, including the purchase and sale of bills of exchange.

Mr. REEVES. I should like to correct you there, and in order to do so inquire in this manner—

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to lose control of the bill by having my time expire.

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman yield?

Mr. REEVES. You have not stated this correctly, as I understand it. I would like to ask you concerning this.

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. REEVES. All of these authorities under the national-bank act are limited, each and every one of them, by section 5133 of that act?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. REEVES (continuing). Which in terms limits them to do that which is within the functions of a banking business?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. REEVES (continuing). This bill, as you have presented it, with the powers conferred on this corporation, are not only not confined to a banking business, but it enumerates various kinds of business in which they may engage, and only section 8 refers to the banking business in terms. Everything else pertains to business outside of the affairs of national banks.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, it says all powers incidental to the powers necessary to carry on the business of banking in the provision, and it has necessarily included, in addition to the banking provisions which are given to a bank of the United States, one which must be necessarily included—the power to transact foreign business and sell bills of exchange and letters of credit and to act as the financial agent for other governments, which must necessarily be included in order to give it a status as a foreign business bank.

Mr. REEVES. Now, will the gentleman allow me to ask about one of the powers conferred in this bill?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. REEVES. As suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, you authorize the corporation to borrow money to the extent of 50 per cent of its paid-up capital. I do not think you will find that power in the national banking law.

Mr. HILL. I want to say to the gentleman from Illinois that under the power of issuing notes, a national bank has the power to borrow money to the extent of 90 per cent of its capital. There is no provision in this bill that is not more restricted than the provisions in the national banking act, except the power to transact the foreign business, and that is the purpose for which this bill is framed. Now, I should be glad to yield to any gentleman that desires to discuss the bill.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Let me urge the gentleman from Connecticut to get some time fixed for the consideration of this bill. There are many of us that want to help him on a bill that has for its purpose the one this bill has.

Mr. HILL. I will ask unanimous consent, then, Mr. Speaker, that a vote be taken at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Oh, that will not do; we want enough time to go over it. The national banking law has been taken and this bill drawn from it, and enough of the language used to give it the appearance of being exactly like it; but we want to look it over and see if it is like it. Say next Wednesday.

Mr. MADDOX. Well, Mr. Speaker, we on this side are objecting to any limit of debate at present.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Then you will have the previous question ordered and you will not get any debate.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I have not yielded the floor for any such purpose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman from Connecticut yield to me for a moment to make a motion in reference to the deficiency bill?

Mr. HILL. I will.

Mr. CANNON. I omitted, Mr. Speaker, this morning to ask unanimous consent that the deficiency bill be printed and numbered. The work has been done, but it is necessary that unanimous consent should be given to justify the action of the Clerk, who anticipated the order.

The SPEAKER. If there is no objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois, it will be so ordered. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, is it necessary that the bill should be read by sections?

The SPEAKER. Being considered in the House, it would not.

Mr. HILL. Well, if no agreement can be reached for further debate, I am ready to yield the balance of my time, except such as is necessary for amendment. If gentlemen will not agree to fixing a time for consideration, I desire to offer the amendment which I am instructed to offer.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, general debate has not been closed.

The SPEAKER. No; but the gentleman has a right to offer an amendment.

Mr. HILL. I offered the first amendment and called for the previous question on the amendment.

Mr. BARTLETT. What is the amendment? We would like to have it read.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. If the amendments offered by the committee are voted upon now, will it preclude members from offering any other amendment?

The SPEAKER. It would if the previous question was ordered.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. The gentleman from Connecticut does not ask for the previous question except on his amendment.

Mr. HILL. That is all.

Mr. McRAE. How many amendments are there?

The SPEAKER. Two amendments.

Mr. McRAE. How many more can the gentleman offer and retain the floor?

Mr. PAYNE. There are no amendments pending.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment which is the one offered by the gentleman from Connecticut.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, in line 22, page 16, after the words "Central America," the following: "or other foreign countries;" and in line 23, after the word "determine," "upon the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency."

The SPEAKER. Upon this the previous question is demanded. The question was taken; and pending the announcement,

Mr. HILL. Tellers, Mr. Speaker.

Tellers were ordered.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and upon a division (demanded by Mr. HILL) there were—ayes 78, noes 52.

Mr. HILL. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 77, nays 75, answered "present" 8, not voting 195; as follows:

YEAS—77.
Aller,	De Vries,	Linney,	Rhea,
Bailey,	Evans,	Livingston,	Ridgely,
Baker, Ill.	Fleming,	Lloyd,	Rixey,
Ball,	Fox,	Love,	Shafroth,
Barlow,	Griffith,	McCormick,	Sims,
Bartholdt,	Griggs,	McCulloch,	Stallings,
Bartlett,	Gunn,	McDowell,	Stark,
Bell,	Hay,	McEwan,	Stephens, Tex.
Benner, Pa.	Henry, Miss.	McRae,	Strait,
Bodine,	Howard, Ga.	Maddox,	Sulzer,
Broderick,	Howell,	Magnire,	Tate,
Brundidge,	Hunter,	Maxwell,	Terry,
Castle,	Jones, Wash.	Meekison,	Underwood,
Clark, Mo.	Kelley,	Meyer, La.	Vehslage,
Cochran, Mo.	King,	Moon,	Wheeler, Ky.
Cowherd,	Kitchin,	Norton, Ohio	White, Ill.
Cox,	Kleberg,	Osborne,	Williams, Miss.
Cummings,	Knowles,	Peters,
De Armoud,	Lentz,	Pugh,
De Graffenreid,	Lester,	Beeves,

NAYS—75.
Aldrich,	Curtis, Iowa	Knox,	Perkins,
Arnold,	Curtis, Kans.	Lacey,	Pitney,
Barham,	Danford,	Landis,	Ray,
Barrows,	Davison, Ky.	Loudenslager,	Shattuc,
Belknap,	Faris,	Lybrand,	Sherman,
Bingham,	Gardner,	McCall,	Showalter,
Bishop,	Gibson,	McCleary,	Southard,
Bronwell,	Gillett, Mass.	Mahon,	Sperry,
Brown,	Greene, Mass.	Marsh,	Steele,
Brownlow,	Griffin,	Mercer,	Stewart, N. J.
Burlingame,	Grosvenor,	Mills,	Stone, W. A.
Burton,	Grow,	Moody,	Updegraff,
Butler,	Hager,	Northway,	Van Voorhis,
Canon,	Hawley,	Olmsted,	Ward,
Capron,	Hepburn,	Packer, Pa.	Warner,
Chickering,	Hicks,	Parker, N. J.	Weymouth,
Cochrane, N. Y.	Hill,	Payne,	Yost,
Cooper, Wis.	Kirkpatrick,	Pearson,	Young.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—8.
Alexander,	Burke,	Loud,	Thorp,
Brucker,	Jenkins,	Norton, S. C.	Wanger.

NOT VOTING—195.
Acheson,	Davey,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Russell,
Adams,	Davidson, Wis.	Jones, Va.	Sauerhering,
Adamson,	Davis,	Joy,	Sayers,
Babcock,	Dayton,	Kerr,	Settle,
Haird,	Dingley,	Ketcham,	Shannon,
Baker, Md.	Dinsmore,	Kulp,	Shelden,
Bankhead,	Dockery,	Lamb,	Shuford,
Barber,	Dolliver,	Lanham,	Simpson,
Barney,	Dorr,	Latimer,	Skinner,
Barrett,	Dovener,	Lawrence,	Slayden,
Beach,	Driggs,	Lewis, Ga.	Smith, Ill.
Beldon,	Eddy,	Lewis, Wash.	Smith, Ky.
Belford,	Elliot,	Littauer,	Smith, S. W.
Bennett,	Ellis,	Little,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Benton,	Emmett,	Lovering,	Snover,
Berry,	Fenton,	Low,	Southwick,
Bland,	Fischer,	McAleer,	Spalding,
Booze,	Fitzgerald,	McClellan,	Sparkman,
Botkin,	Fitzpatrick,	McDonald,	Sprague,
Boutell, Ill.	Foot,	McIntire,	Stevens, Minn.
Boutelle, Me.	Foss,	McMillin,	Stewart, Wis.
Bradley,	Fowler, N. C.	Mahany,	Stokes,
Brantley,	Gaines,	Mann,	Stone, C. W.
Brenner, Ohio	Gillet, N. Y.	Marshall,	Strode, Nebr.
Brewer,	Graff,	Martin,	Strowd, N. C.
Brewster,	Greene, Nebr.	Mesick,	Sturtevant,
Brown,	Hamilton,	Miers, Ind.	Sulloway,
Broussard,	Handy,	Miller,	Sutherland,
Brumm,	Harmer,	Minor,	Swanson,
Bull,	Hartman,	Mitchell,	Talbert,
Campbell,	Heatwole,	Morris,	Tawney,
Carmack,	Hemenway,	Mudd,	Taylor, Ohio
Catchings,	Henderson,	Newlands,	Taylor, Ala.
Clardy,	Henry, Conn.	Odell,	Todd,
Clark, Iowa	Henry, Ind.	Ogden,	Tongue,
Clarke, N. H.	Henry, Tex.	Otey,	Vandiver,
Clayton,	Hilborn,	Otjen,	Vincent,
Coddington,	Hinrichsen,	Overstreet,	Wadsworth,
Colson,	Hitt,	Pierce, Tenn.	Walker, Mass.
Connell,	Hooker,	Powers,	Walker, Va.
Connolly,	Hopkins,	Prince,	Weaver,
Cooney,	Howard, Ala.	Quigg,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cooper, Tex.	Hova,	Richardson,	White, N. C.
Corlies,	Hull,	Robb,	Wilber,
Cranford,	Hurley,	Robbins,	Williams, Pa.
Crumpacker,	Jett,	Robertson, La.	Wilson,
Dalzell,	Johnson, Ind.	Boys,	Wise,
Davenport,			Zenor.

So the motion to adjourn was agreed to.

Mr. DAVEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be marked "present."

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HEPBURN). Was the gentleman present when his name was called, was he listening, and did he fail to hear it?

Mr. DAVEY. No, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the Chair can not entertain the gentleman's request.

Mr. DINSMORE. I did not care to vote on this question, but I would like to be marked "present."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Was the gentleman present when his name was called, was he listening, and did he fail to hear it?

Mr. DINSMORE. No, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the gentleman's request can not be entertained.

Mr. SIMS. My colleague, Mr. GAINES, has been suddenly called from the Hall. This fact will explain his absence on this roll call.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. WISE with Mr. NORTON of South Carolina.

For this day:

Mr. ADAMS with Mr. WILSON.

Mr. LOVERING with Mr. MARSHALL.

Mr. MCINTIRE with Mr. SIMPSON.

Mr. CRUMP with Mr. SAYERS.

Mr. ACHESON with Mr. LEWIS of Washington.

Mr. DALZELL with Mr. NEWLANDS.

On this vote:

Mr. BARBER with Mr. DOCKERY.

Mr. STEELE. I desire to be noted as "present." I could not get here to vote. I would have voted "nay."

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Pending the announcement of the vote on the motion to adjourn, by unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. NORTON of South Carolina, indefinitely, on account of important business.

To Mr. MILLER, for five days, on account of important business.

To Mr. WHITE of North Carolina, for six days, on account of important business.

To Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri, for ten days, on account of sickness.

To Mr. JONES of Washington, indefinitely, on account of important business.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. MADDÖX, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10807) to carry into effect the recommendations of the International American Conference by the incorporation of the International American Bank, submitted the views of the minority thereon, accompanied by a report (No. 1027, part 2); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10848) granting a pension to Samuel A. Lowmsbery; and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. OTEY: A bill (H. R. 10864) for the relief of soldiers and sailors—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WILBER: A bill (H. R. 10865) for the erection of a public building at Oneonta, N. Y.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 10876) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Anacostia or Eastern Branch of the Potomac River on a line with South Capitol street—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MEYER of Louisiana: A resolution (House Res. No. 332) providing for the consideration of business reported by the Committee on Naval Affairs—to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 10866) for the relief of Valentine Sauppe, a citizen of Gettysburg, Pa., at the time of the battle—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. FOOTE: A bill (H. R. 10867) for the relief of Ephraim Bouva—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10868) for the relief of Elisha W. Cook—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HOOKER: A bill (H. R. 10860) granting a pension to George Vanslyke—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KELLEY: A bill (H. R. 10870) for the relief of James Dugan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEWIS of Washington: A bill (H. R. 10871) for the relief of Schuyler Duryee—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MEYER of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 10872) for the relief of Mrs. Mary Shannon, widow of Joseph R. Shannon, deceased, and administratrix of his estate—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RIXEY (by request): A bill (H. R. 10873) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of the estate of William N. Hough, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 10874) for the relief of John T. McKeon, of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on Claims.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 10875) for the relief of James F. Arrington, of Stafford Store, Stafford County, Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania: Resolutions of a joint meeting of Brotherhoods of Railway Engineers, Firemen, and Trainmen, and Orders of Railway Conductors and Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, resolution of the York County Medical Society, State of Pennsylvania, protesting against the passage of the bill restricting vivisection—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CAPRON: Resolutions of a joint meeting of locomotive engineers and firemen and railway conductors, trainmen, and telegraphers, held in Philadelphia, Pa., in favor of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. COUSINS (by request): Petition of members of General Geddes's command, of Vinton, Iowa, against Congressional action for the erection of a monument to the late Albert Pike—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DINSMORE: Petition of A. J. James, to have his name placed on the pension roll—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KULP: Resolutions of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, indorsing the measure enacted to provide a liberal revenue to carry on the war—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, papers to accompany House bill No. 7233, to correct military record of Israel Wertz, of Mount Carmel, Pa.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MEYER of Louisiana: Resolution of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, State of Louisiana, asking for legislation prohibiting life-insurance companies to stipulate that policies shall be forfeited in case the assured enlist in the Army or Navy in time of war—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PAYNE: Papers to accompany House bill No. 10841, for the relief of Mrs. Bell Fries, of Ontario, N. Y.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RIXEY (by request): Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of James F. Arrington, of Stafford County, Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also (by request), evidence in support of House bill for the relief of John T. McKeon, of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on Claims.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, July 1, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. J. F. HEISS, of the city of Washington.

On motion of Mr. DAVIS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. FRYE presented the petition of Rev. Josiah T. Closson and 10 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Lebanon, Me., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in all Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. PERKINS. I present a telegraphic communication from the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, Cal., urging the construction of the Nicaragua Canal. It is very short and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the communication was ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Telegram.]

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., June 30, 1898.

Hon. GEORGE C. PERKINS,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:

Recent events incident to the present war and to the future commercial possibilities arising from it have made it more than ever evident that the immediate construction of the Nicaragua Canal under the control of our Government is a matter of the most vital and urgent public necessity. Commerce and trade, military and naval expediency, demand it. We of this coast have for years persistently urged its advantages. Now the entire coast country, north, south, east, and west, is awakening to the great opportunity offered to our future development by its early completion. We earnestly desire all the friends of this coast, and all those looking toward the grand future of our entire country, to unite in strenuous efforts toward making the canal an accomplished fact.

HUGH CRAIG,

President Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco.

Mr. PERKINS. I present resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, Cal., setting forth the manifest advisability of the early construction of the Nicaragua Canal. I ask that the resolutions be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions passed at a meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, held Wednesday, June 23, 1898.

Whereas the recent voyage of the battle ship Oregon from San Francisco to Florida, consuming, despite every effort, seventy-three days, at a most critical time in the affairs of the nation, when the same objective point could have been reached in not to exceed eleven days if the Nicaragua Canal had been available, serves, in addition to the urgent and well-known considerations advanced in support of its construction as a pressing necessity of commerce, to emphasize the indispensable necessity of this canal for the purpose of future naval operation and national defense; and

Whereas any further steps by the Government of the United States toward the construction of this canal are believed to await the report of the existing Nicaragua Canal Commission: Now, therefore,

Be it resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, Cal., respectfully represents to the Senators and Representatives of the State of California in the Congress of the United States the manifest advisability of the early construction of the said canal as an exclusive Government enterprise, and urges that they use such efforts as they may deem proper and effectual to secure the advancement and submission to Congress at an early date of the report of the said Nicaragua Canal Commission; and

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to each of the Senators and Representatives of the State of California in the Congress of the United States.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of the resolution passed by the directors of the chamber of commerce at the regular meeting held Wednesday, June 23, 1898.

In witness whereof I have hereunto affixed my hand and the seal of the corporation.

Attest:
[SEAL.]

C. L. FORMAN, President.

FRANK WIGGINS, Secretary.

Mr. PLATT of New York presented a resolution adopted at a joint meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and the Brotherhood of Railway Telegraphers, held in Philadelphia, Pa., June 5, 1898, favoring the passage of the so-called anti-scalping ticket bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PETTIGREW presented sundry papers in support of the bill (S. 2154) for the relief of John H. McLaughlin; which were referred to the Committee on Claims.

AGREEMENTS WITH INDIANS IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4623) to ratify agreements with the Indians of the Lower Brule and Rosebud reservations, in South Dakota, and making an appropriation to carry the same into effect.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask the Senator from South Dakota to allow me to present some reports from the Committee on Pensions, if he will?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Just let the bill be taken up and then I will yield the floor for morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from South Dakota? The Chair hears no objection, and the bill is before the Senate. The Senator from South Dakota now yields to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. PETTIGREW subsequently said: I find there is an error in the bill which I called up and which is now under consideration. I therefore move that Senate bill 4623 be recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5158) granting a pension to Cordelia Cheney, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7595) granting a pension to Sarah E. Ward;

A bill (H. R. 4741) granting a pension to Lucy Nichols;

A bill (H. R. 10276) granting an increase of pension to George Witter;

A bill (H. R. 10080) granting a pension to Frances E. Utley Davis;

A bill (H. R. 1045) granting a pension to Mary A. Caulfield;

A bill (H. R. 7357) granting a pension to Rachel T. Abbott; and

A bill (H. R. 2809) granting a pension to Eliza J. Mead.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 9832) granting a pension to Augusta Troland;

A bill (H. R. 5992) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary A. Freeman;

A bill (H. R. 7010) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary H. Harbour;

A bill (H. R. 9141) granting a pension to Mrs. A. A. Pinkston; and

A bill (H. R. 6645) to increase the pension of Theodore W. Cobia.

Mr. GALLINGER (for Mr. TURNER), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3239) for the relief of Catharine McCarty, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MORRILL. I am directed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1876) authorizing the purchase of a site for a building for the accommodation of the Supreme Court of the United States, to report it favorably without amendment.

I was authorized a long time ago by the committee to report the bill, but I have not presented it for the reason that I have understood that no appropriation would be made in the other House for any public buildings the present year. But I now give notice that at the earliest day practicable in the next session I shall endeavor to get a vote upon this bill.

Mr. MORGAN. I am very glad to know that the bill has been reported.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. BAKER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5920) granting an increase of pension to Monson W. Bliss, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PRITCHARD, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9322) granting a pension to Mary C. Gardheffner, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10055) granting a pension to James Burnett, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. KYLE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 7230) granting a pension to Mary Paul; and

A bill (H. R. 5746) granting a pension to Elizabeth D. Pittman.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4918) for the relief of J. Henry Rives, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6944) to pension John F. Gates, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4793) for the relief of the heirs of the late John Van Riswick, asked to be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia; which was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8180) granting a pension to Isabella Cross, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4543) for the relief of James H. Latham, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. CARTER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. CANNON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9866) granting a pension to Joseph Griffith, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

COMBINATIONS OR TRUSTS IN MANUFACTURING.

Mr. CANNON, from the Committee on Manufactures, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by himself on May 6, 1898, directing the Committee on Manufactures to make inquiry and report its findings to the Senate whether or not combinations or trusts in manufacturing are operating in the United States, reported it without amendment.

REPORT OF DELEGATES TO BRUSSELS CONFERENCE.

Mr. DAVIS. I submit from the Committee on Foreign Relations the report of the delegates from the United States to the Brussels Conference, to accompany Executive D, second session Fifty-fifth Congress, being the message from the President of the United States transmitting an authenticated copy of the industrial property convention, signed at Brussels on December 14, 1897, by the delegates of the United States and other powers, recommending amendments and additions to the convention for the protection of industrial property, concluded at Paris March 20, 1883. I move that the report be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. GALLINGER (by request) introduced a bill (S. 4832) to incorporate the Frederick Douglass Memorial and Historical Association; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. GALLINGER. In behalf of the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia [Mr. McMILLAN], I introduce two bills for reference to that committee.

The bill (S. 4833) relating to electric lighting in the District of Columbia; and

The bill (S. 4834) to provide a conduit system for the District of Columbia; were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 4835) granting a pension to Johana Fitzgerald; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PASCO introduced a bill (S. 4836) for the relief of John Jackson, of Bartow, Fla.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. HAWLEY introduced a bill (S. 4837) to indemnify the governors of States for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on June 28 approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

An act (S. 125) granting an increase of pension to George W. Palmer;

An act (S. 156) granting an increase of pension to John H. Mulen;

An act (S. 166) granting an increase of pension to Samuel A. Smith;

An act (S. 949) granting an increase of pension to Levi R. Long;

An act (S. 1090) to pension Mrs. Susan M. Sessford;

An act (S. 1539) granting an increase of pension to Paul Carr;

An act (S. 2112) granting a pension to Jesse O. Davy;

An act (S. 2114) granting a pension to Rebecca E. Kutz;

An act (S. 2219) granting a pension to Thomas Madden;

An act (S. 2247) granting a pension to Charles E. Mann;

An act (S. 3474) granting an increase of pension to John C. Brown;

An act (S. 3722) granting a pension to William J. Williams;

An act (S. 4004) granting a pension to Julia E. Warner;

An act (S. 4451) granting a pension to Nancy Barger; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 175) providing for the printing of additional copies of certain volumes of Decisions of the Department of the Interior relating to public lands for sale and distribution.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on June 29 approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 1895) for the relief of the heirs of Thomas J. Chace and Thomas J. Chace, jr., late of Monticello, Fla.;

An act (S. 2916) relating to the Washington, Woodside and Forest Glen Railway and Power Company, of Montgomery County, Md.;

An act (S. 3871) to authorize the Montgomery-Elmore Bridge and Improvement Company to construct and maintain a bridge across the Alabama River, near the city of Montgomery, Ala.; and

An act (S. 4456) to designate Gladstone, Mich., a subport of entry.

The message further announced that the President of the United States had on this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 242) for the relief of Moses Pendergrass, of Missouri;

An act (S. 1035) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States; and

An act (S. 3596) to ratify the agreement between the Dawes Commission and the Seminole Nation of Indians.

PAY OF VOLUNTEER TROOPS.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I desire to call attention to what seems to be the construction of the law providing for the payment of soldiers in the field, and to do so I desire to read a part of a letter or two which I have received on that subject. In the first place, an act was passed May 26, 1898, providing—

That the pay and allowance of such of the volunteers as are received into the service of the United States under the act of Congress approved April 23, 1898, and the acts supplemental thereto, shall be deemed to commence from the day on which they joined for duty and are enrolled at the battalion, regimental, or State rendezvous: Provided, That troops about to embark for service in the Philippine Islands may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid one month's wages in advance prior to embarkation.

That seems to be the act under which the Government has been paying troops. To call the attention of the Senate to the exact trouble that seems to be arising under it, I read the following from one or two gentlemen who were sent to the headquarters of the Illinois troops in different parts of the country. They say:

We found, however, that there is a widespread and threatening discontent among them—with reference to their pay. It would all have been a thing of the past but for the discrimination made between enlisted men and officers. The men have been paid from the date of enrollment—the officers only from the date of muster. I am informed, since my return to Chicago last night, that the reason for this is the wording of the act authorizing pay from the date of enrollment, which applies to the "men" only, the words "and officers" having been omitted. I have not seen the act, and so forth.

Referring to the troops—

That seems to be the point. I am sorry that the members of the Committee on Military Affairs do not seem to be present. As the act has been construed the men are paid from the date of enrollment when they come into camp, while the officers are not paid until after the date of muster.

Mr. SEWELL. I will state, as one member of the Committee on Military Affairs—

Mr. CULLOM. I did not observe the Senator from New Jersey present.

Mr. SEWELL. I do not know where that construction came from, but it is very far-fetched indeed to suppose that what applies to a regiment does not apply to the officers.

Mr. CULLOM. But the act, it seems, has not been construed that way.

Mr. SEWELL. If the Senator will have the matter referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, it will be investigated.

Mr. CULLOM. Very well. I desire to say a word further, however. I only wanted to call the attention of the committee to the fact that some States, as I understand from this correspondence, have taken care of the matter in some way so as to even it up, while others have not, as is the case in reference to Illinois. Here is a statement that "in the eight regiments from Illinois" now in the field "this would make a difference of about $3,000 a regiment from April 26, the date on which they were called out, and May 15 to 20, the time when they were mustered in. This $3,000 is for the officers of the line; it would take probably some $1,000 or $1,200 more for the field officers, or from $4,000 to $5,000 a regiment, or in all about $40,000 to $42,000."

Mr. SEWELL. I will state how the trouble probably arises. We did pass an act authorizing the payment of enlisted men from the time they were enrolled and sent into camp. That applied to all, but it applied particularly to those who were taken from the National Guard by companies and regiments. The officers would get their pay because they came there with their men. If the men were raised individually, the officers would not be mustered in until they got the proper equipment and the number of men necessary to make them officers; so many companies for a colonel, so many for a lieutenant-colonel, so many for a major, and so many for a captain. The trouble may have arisen in that way, but the whole matter can be investigated.

Mr. CULLOM. I am fully confident that there was no intention on the part of the committee having charge of the legislation to make any discrimination of that kind, but under the construction of the paymasters there seems to be that kind of a discrimination effected. I call the attention of the Senate and of the committee to the matter, so that it may be corrected if any amendatory legislation may be necessary.

PRINTING OF BANKRUPTCY ACT.

Mr. HOAR. I submit a resolution to print a document which is very much in demand. I am told that the number can be printed within the statute limits, and I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 25,000 copies of the act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3361) for the relief of P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10280) to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the concurrent resolution of the Senate for the printing and distribution of 5,000 copies of the Commercial Relations, 1896 and 1897, and 10,000 copies of the Review of the World's Commerce.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 3277) to authorize appointment of a military storekeeper in the Army;

A bill (H. R. 6896) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 8428) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask leave to call up the bill (H. R. 10424) to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department in the Army, which has been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint one inspector-general with the rank of colonel, one inspector-general with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and one inspector-general with the rank of major.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT, UNITED STATES ARMY.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4800) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

Strike out the matter inserted by said House amendments, and strike out all of section 2 of the bill after the word "appoint," at the end of line 15, and insert in lieu of the matter so stricken out the following: "2 quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of colonel, 2 quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, 3 quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of major, and 20 assistant quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of captain; and the Secretary of War may assign an officer of the Quartermaster's Department in charge of each principal depot of the Quartermaster's Department not exceeding 12, to be selected from the regular and volunteer officers of the Quartermaster's Department; and such officers while so acting shall have the rank next above that held by them and not above colonel, and the 4 principal assistants of the Quartermaster-General while so acting shall have the rank of colonel. The Secretary of War may assign such of the said volunteer quartermasters as may be deemed necessary to duty in the office of the Quartermaster-General, at the various supply depots or on other important and special work, and may continue such assignments for a period not exceeding one year after the close of the war, then to be discharged;" and the House agree to the same.

JOS. R. HAWLEY,

W. J. SEWELL,

F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. A. T. HULL,

B. F. MARSH,

WM. SULZER,

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT, UNITED STATES ARMY.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 4810) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 1 of said amendment, after the word "for," insert the words "not exceeding;" in line 4, after the word "shipping," strike out the word "of;" in line 5, after the word "rank," strike out the words "of colonel" and insert in lieu thereof the words "next above that held by him and not above colonel;" and add at the end of section 2 of said amendment the following: "to be nominated and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to be appointed by the President;" and the House agree to the same.

JOS. R. HAWLEY,

W. J. SEWELL,

F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. A. T. HULL,

M. GRIFFIN,

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution 259.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota, that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I have a favor to ask of Senators before I commence my remarks, and that is, that no Senator will have the Senate called to listen to what I have to say. I desire especially a hearing on the part of the gentlemen with whom I have always been associated in political life, because I will earnestly give a reason for the vote I intend to cast.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order. [A pause.] The Senator from Alabama will proceed.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, last Saturday evening at a late hour I made a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business. This motion, though customary at such time and though no Senator could possibly suppose that it was made for any sinister or improper purpose, produced an acrimonious debate. It seemed like a shovelful of live coals thrown on scattered gunpowder. I had no conception that these grave and eminent Senators could be so much excited and angered by so small a matter.

When I made that motion I was proceeding to give a reason for it when the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS] cut me off in the middle of a sentence with a display of parliamentary agility quite unusual in that distinguished Senator. He was good enough to inform the Senate that the motion was not debatable. That Senator has had very many better opportunities during the last year to communicate this occult learning to the Senate, but he patiently delayed action. He has seen many Senators urging or opposing motions not debatable, giving their reasons; but knowing that Senator to be amiable and impartial, I have been forced to the conclusion that he kindly intended to give one of the youngest members of this body an opportunity to see how one of its rules could be enforced.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I make the point that a quorum is not present.

Mr. DAVIS. The Senator from Alabama has requested that that might not be done.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I know, and I make the point.

Mr. CULLOM (to Mr. PETTIGREW). Withdraw it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I can not withdraw it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point is made that there is no quorum present, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] is at his home in New Hampshire in ill health, and that is the occasion of his absence from attendance upon the sessions of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I suggest that the absentees be called.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the absentees.

The Secretary called the names of the absent Senators, the following Senators having answered to their names:

Allen,	Frye,	Martin,	Sewell,
Allison,	Gallinger,	Mason,	Stewart,
Baker,	Gear,	Mills,	Sullivan,
Berry,	Hale,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Burrows,	Hansbrough,	Morrill,	Turley,
Carter,	Harris,	Nelson,	Turpie,
Clay,	Hittfield,	Pasco,	Warren,
Cockrell,	Jones, Ark.	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Cullom,	Lodge,	Pettigrew,	White,
Davis,	McBride,	Pettus,
Deboe,	McEnery,	Pritchard,
Fairbanks,	Mallory,	Quay,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Alabama will proceed.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I made that motion in perfect fairness. It was at a late hour Saturday evening. An ordinary day's work had been done. It was entirely unusual for the Senate to sit later on Saturdays. It is true that the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations [Mr. DAVIS] and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] had just failed to agree on a time for voting on the annexation resolution. But Mr. CLAY, the Senator from Georgia, had announced his intention to make an argument on the pending question. It was hardly fair, and certainly it was not according to our custom, to force him to commence at that late hour.

Mr. President, I had another reason for making that motion. It seemed to me that to require the argument to proceed at an unusual hour approximated an attempt on the part of the majority to force a vote on the annexation resolution whilst opponents of the resolution desired further to debate the question. I had observed no attempt on the part of the minority unreasonably to postpone action. It is true that long and able arguments had been made in opposition to annexation; but these arguments were not longer than arguments made during this Congress in favor of annexation.

I have no respect for the legislative proceeding vulgarly called "filibustering." And I have just as little for that other kind of legislative action, which is the attempt on the part of the majority to force a vote without allowing time for a free and full discussion.

But we are told by those opposed to a full and free debate on any particular measure that "a majority must govern" under our form of government. Yes, Mr. President, I admit broadly that in legislation, as a general rule, a majority must govern. But how and when? A majority must govern "decently and in order"—govern in the manner and according to the forms which the laws have prescribed.

Here a correct principle, universally admitted, is manifestly misapplied. No one has denied the right of a majority to govern. The real question is, Shall this right of a majority to govern destroy the right of a minority, equally secured by our laws, to debate freely and fully any and every measure proposed to this body to be enacted into a law?

"Filibustering" in the Senate would be in the last degree an act of bad taste, as a general rule, and below the dignity of a Senator—I do not say in all cases—and such a crime should not be charged except on evidence sufficient to convict. It would be a great evil if it could become respectable; but to deny the right of "free and full debate" would be in limine an attack on the liberty of the people, and if the denial proved to be a success, the foundation of this Republic would be destroyed. All of the true spirit would be gone. The form might be left, but there would be no soul in it.

Mr. President, why is it that the lawmakers of the United States tolerate that part of the public press which become licentious and of evil tendencies? It is not because they could not frame laws which would suppress such papers. No. The true reason why such papers are not suppressed is that statesmen who have studied our plan of government know that a free press is absolutely necessary to the maintenance of the liberties of the people. So thoughtful legislators will be extremely averse to the enactment of any law which might be used to hamper if not to destroy the free press of our country.

So, Senators, the right of free and full debate in your legislative halls is of equal value and is equally as necessary to the preservation of the liberties of the people as a free press.

Senators, you have all read the history of a great republic like our own. There was a senate and a house of representatives, and the latter was composed of representative men, chosen by the people. And among these representatives were a large number of really great men of that nation—men equal in intellect and in patriotism to Daniel Webster, or Silas Wright, or John C. Calhoun, or Henry Clay, or Allen G. Thurman. It was one of the wisest and best known deliberative bodies on earth. That republic grew and prospered. True, serious troubles came; but that great deliberative body of representative men met and counseled together, and framed laws and devised measures for overcoming troubles and for avoiding future difficulties and dangers. Party spirit was high and threatened great danger and finally caused internal war. But that grand representative body continued to deliberate and to debate freely, and to decide what was best to be done for the good of the people; and that Republic again became a united people; and after peace, prosperity came again.

But party spirit was very fierce and intolerant. Finally an overwhelming majority of the representatives were chosen by one of the parties. Then there was held a consultation of the triumphant party leaders to determine what was to be done to perpetuate that party in power. One of these leaders, bolder and more audacious than his associates, proposed to suppress their adversaries by denying any members right to free and full debate. But one of the leaders, not so bold or audacious, but more cautious, inquired, "Can that be done?"

"By making a rule" was promptly answered, "for the fundamental law declares, 'Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings.'" Therefore the dominant party made a simple rule to the effect that "the Committee on Rules shall have leave to report at any time on rules, joint rules, and order of business." At the first glance this rule may seem innocent to men who do not see more than the surface of things.

But thinking men were bound to inquire what was the purpose of the rule and what the effect of the rule. Its purpose was to destroy all the rights of the minority. The effect of the rule was to destroy the rights of the majority as well as the rights of the minority. It established a trio of despots over what had been a free legislative assembly—to report what should be "the order of business;" that is, what should be considered and how long a particular measure should be debated and when the vote thereon should be taken—thus destroying all freedom of speech.

The effect would have been farcical if it had not involved the destruction of one great deliberative body of a free Republic. So laws involving millions of money and vital principles of government were passed without being read and with no debate long enough properly to settle the title to a blind mule in a justice's court. Statesmen of the Democratic party fully the equals of any one of that trio had to obtain the permission of the trio before they could have any measure even considered in that once grand assembly of truly representative patriots. Statesmen and patriots of both parties were still there; but their right to speak for those they represented was abolished by what was called a "rule of proceeding." I must not comment, because in this place words which might do justice to this subject are not allowed. I will, however, entreat Senators to consider this lesson from modern history, and, whatever else we may do, let us maintain the right of free speech in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. President, in this debate allusion is occasionally made to party politics. I have always been a Democrat, and I have always been proud of my association with Democrats in this body. The matter under debate is no party measure. Some of the oldest and the greatest statesmen of the Republican party are equally opposed to this resolution as the fiercest opponent on the opposite side of the Chamber.

This is not a party question. Mr. President, I believe as a partisan in fidelity to the party to which you belong. I believe in it as a part of my moral creed, and I believe that so long as any man continues to be a member of a party he must obey the party decrees. When a man can no longer obey the party decrees in good faith, let him follow the example of the great statesman from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] who, with an honesty as fixed and firm as the mountains surrounding his home, and sometimes as rugged, walked out of the St. Louis convention. Mr. President, that is an example worthy to be put down among the principles which should control American partisans. When a man can not obey the behests of his party, let him retire.

But who can give the orders? That is a matter for every member of a party to inquire into. Who can issue the orders? Who can establish the doctrines? I have had it in my party creed for years, and I adhere to it, and intend to adhere to it, that no individual man has a right to announce a creed for any party. We have our supreme councils in which principles are declared and policies promulgated for the members of the party. True, I do not pretend even as a party man that every man can believe as his party has decreed. That would be an absurdity; but what he can do, so long as he remains in the party, is to support its measures. When he gets so that he can not support the measures and policies of his party, he ought to retire, and he ought to retire instantly. He ought not to be firing, in his party uniform, on the soldiers of his party.

This is no party question, and, Mr. President, we ought all to remember, every one of us, if it were a party question, that we were all Americans, and I hope all patriots, before we ever joined any party.

I always feel like I have done a small business when I make any allusion to myself. I will now proceed to the question under consideration. My purpose now is to discuss briefly certain questions of law which have been stated during the debate on the pending resolution.

First, it is asserted by the able Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] and others that the Congress has no authority to enact this resolution because in our Constitution it is declared that—

He [the President] shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, and so forth.

I shall not question that the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, has the power to make treaties for the United States; and it might also be admitted that, as a general rule, when nothing is to be done demanding legislation, that power is exclusive as granted; but no court or lawyer can safely declare the true meaning of this clause of our Constitution respecting treaties without considering other parts of the same instrument. It is the common learning of the profession declared by the courts and by the writers on constitutional law and statutory law that the entire Constitution or law must be considered in order to declare the proper meaning of any part thereof.

There is another general proposition which should be remembered. The United States Constitution can not be construed in reference to the powers of the different departments by the conduct of other nations. The powers of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments in this Republic are defined; and those powers are not placed under our Constitution as they were in other governments; at least, this is true of very many of the most important matters. Generally, in European countries, the king declared war and made peace, and made treaties and abrogated the treaties which he had made, and acquired territory, and gave up the possession and title of parts of his own dominion. Now, please notice some of the provisions of our Constitution, in addition to the one quoted, bearing on this resolution and the power of Congress to enact it:

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States.

Again:

The Congress shall have power to declare war.

The Congress shall have the power to dispose of—

Notice this wonderful sweep of words—

The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.

New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union.

The Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises.

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law.

Yet, with all these express powers granted by the Constitution to Congress, it is most earnestly claimed, and by able lawyers, that Congress has no power to acquire any territory except by war—a most curious exception.

But no Senator has dared to deny that Congress did have the power to acquire territory by force. Still, with that supreme power to take territory by war admitted to be in the Congress, we have it asserted that Congress can not accept a free grant of territory when tendered to it. Congress has the admitted power to send an army and take the land and the rulers and the inhabitants thereof, and force them to surrender their country, and it has the power to hold and own the land thus taken; yet by some mysterious and some undefined potentiality in this clause about making treaties Congress is prohibited the right to accept land until it has first declared war.

Mr. MALLORY. May I ask the Senator from Alabama a question?

Mr. PETTUS. Certainly.

Mr. MALLORY. Has Congress the power by the Constitution to make treaties—to make peace? The Senator is arguing that Congress has the power to make war, and therefore it has the power to make peace.

Mr. PETTUS. That Congress has?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes.

Mr. PETTUS. If Congress were to act as the framers of the Constitution intended, then it would have the power to make peace as well as to make war.

Can the President make peace? Never in the world. He can, as Commander in Chief, like any other commander of an army, make an armistice. Of course he can; but has he power to make peace? Never. The Congress of the United States, with the powers here defined, which I have read to you, has the power to make war and to make peace. I admit that the treaty-making power is in the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate as a general rule; but that general rule has its limitations, and I have read them to you. The truth is, Senators, that there is not in this Republic any power to take or to hold territory except the Congress of the United States. True, the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, can make a bargain for territory; but you all know that after that bargain is made and the deed is signed, sealed, and delivered, no mortal man has the power or the authority to take that territory for the United States and to hold it, unless he be authorized by Congress to do so.

Who can do it? Who can take territory and hold it without the authority of Congress, I should like to know? It can not be done. There is no authority in any officer of this Government either to take or to hold land for the Republic. He may bargain for it by the treaty-making power; but after he has bargained for it, and after you have got a contract right to go on it and take it, you can not do it unless the Congress authorizes it to be done. What will you do when you get on it? Govern the people there? Govern them how? I admit, Mr. President, that there is a military power which may be exercised of necessity during war in certain instances, but I am talking about a power apart from war. Who can govern a territory which the President and the Senate have succeeded in getting a deed to? No one; no power on earth can act for the United States on that territory, unless he be authorized by Congress.

Who and what is this sovereign power called Congress? It is the Senate and the House of Representatives acting together (I do not mean in the same body, but in concert), and acting by and with the approval of the President of the United States. That is the Congress. That is the sovereign power in this Republic, to the full extent of sovereignty, so far as that instrument called the Constitution of the United States has created a sovereignty.

Mr. President, I have called your attention to these clauses of the Constitution. I will now call your attention separately to one or two of them. Senators talk about the Congress not having power to acquire territory in any other manner than by war. There is a provision in this Constitution to the express effect that Congress shall have power to dispose of all the territory and all the property of the United States. Congress has power to dispose of it, but it has no power to acquire any! I will not use hard words about that, but it does seem to me that the argument proves too much. Congress has the power to dispose of all of it and to make rules and regulations for the government of all of it, and yet it is said that Congress has no power to acquire territory except by war.

Again, Mr. President, here in the clause 1 have just read is a provision that the Congress of the United States shall have power to admit new States. All lawyers are familiar with the rules of construction in reference to this very instrument. They have been laid down over and over again; they are stated in the great case of McCulloch and in the Osborn case.

Congress has power to admit new States. In these great cases to which I have referred, and in other cases that treat on the subject, it was declared that this power to admit new States carries with it all the other necessary and proper powers to prepare new States for admission. If Congress has power to admit new States into the Union under the Constitution, as the Constitution says, where are you going to get the new States? Congress has the power to prepare them for admission, and it has always done so.

But just here I am reminded of the argument which the distinguished Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] made. He carried the argument out. There were no stumps or obstacles which could impede his gigantic strides over the law. He said the power to admit new States was confined to the territory that Congress had when the Constitution was made, and he went on in detail and stated how that territory was acquired up to that time, and then he pursued the history of it downward to the present time. He said Congress has power to admit new States only out of territory which at the time of the adoption of the Constitution belonged to the United States. That was the argument made by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. President, this argument is a plain illustration of Sam Rice's 'possum hunter. The 'possum hunter went down into the bottom, and old Tige finally treed a 'possum, and the hunter went up the tree and got on a limb with a saw. He was a lazy sort of a fellow, and would not use an ax on a big tree, and he carried around with him a saw. He put his face toward the body of the tree, and sat on the same limb on which the 'possum had retreated and sawed on that limb. The 'possum was away out on a long limb. He sawed and sawed, and finally sawed off the 'possum, and he sawed off himself; and he and the 'possum went to the ground together. [Laughter.] If the argument of the Senator from Louisiana has any foundation in it, I say the Senator has sawed himself off.

By what right does the Senator from Louisiana dare to intrude himself into this great legislative body contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States? Why did he not stop at the door and tell us he was an intruder? He brought his credentials along with him from the State of Louisiana, illegally admitted into the Union of the States. Of course that thing is void which the Constitution of the United States prohibits, and it ought to be void, and it ought to be declared void on all occasions and wherever you may meet it. I say, if there is any foundation in that argument of the Senator from Louisiana, he has no right here, no semblance of a right. It will be strange news, though, down in Louisiana if they should hear that the Senator had denied his own right to represent Louisiana here.

Mr. President, these arguments prove too much. We have always treated the acquisition of territory as one of the attributes of government, and from the foundation of the Government and at a suitable time in the wisdom of Congress, and also sometimes when it suited party purposes, we have admitted new States. We have admitted them away out beyond the Mississippi River and away down into Florida. We admitted them out of territory that the Government of the United States owned when the Constitution was formed. There was never any question in those days, so far as I know, about admitting new States in that way; but after a while there came along a great statesman—but I will go back, Mr. President, and take the thing chronologically.

From the day the Constitution was formed down to the present Congress has been making contracts, has been making treaties of a certain class. Where do you get your custom-houses? The Congress of the United States would not build custom-houses on land over which it did not have jurisdiction. The Congress bought land in a State after the State had ceded to the United States jurisdiction over that land, and then the custom-house was built. And Congress has been accepting such grants from the States since the Government was formed. Congress has been accepting donations made by others, made by foreign powers and foreign individuals. Where did you get the Smithsonian Institution? You got it by accepting a legacy, accepting a donation. Where did you get your custom-houses? By accepting grants or buying land, with the jurisdiction over it granted by the States.

Congress did it all; but afterwards we acquired other large territory. Mr. Jefferson in his wisdom—I have always had a profound reverence for Mr. Jefferson—acquired this great territory out in the Northwest. It is said that he had doubts about it. Of course. The Government was new then; such a thing had never been done before; and when a new thing is to be done, any statesman ought to pause and think and study all the surroundings.

Mr. Jefferson, with all his wisdom and all his learning and all his patriotism—and I believe he was equal in any one of those to any man that ever lived—had never studied law as a profession; but he was a statesman beyond all doubt. He had his doubts about it; and how did he solve those doubts? Not like some of the Senators would do, against the right of the Government. Oh, no. Every man may have his doubts on a great constitutional question or on the question of the application of a simple law. But I do not like to have you solve those doubts against the interest of your country. Jefferson did not do that. He wanted the territory, and he acquired it. That, by the high standard of the Senator from Louisiana, was done by treaty.

However, Mr. Jefferson only pulled that great Northwestern Territory up to the boundaries of the United States. It could not get in—not then or by any possibility in the future—except by act of the Congress. Now, we will turn out every State that is beyond the Mississippi River, and we will say it belongs to us, but it is embraced in mere Territories, and you can not make States out of them. I do not want to delay the Senate or prolong this debate. We acquired territory from year to year, and we have acquired perhaps more than double as much territory as the Government of the United States owned when the Constitution was formed—vast territories. Would gentlemen have us believe that we acquired them contrary to law? If they did, let us sell them and make some money out of them. If we have got no title by which we could make States out of this territory, all of the people of the United States and every great party of the United States have acted very badly in this whole transaction, acquiring all this vast territory when they had no authority to do it and no authority to make States out of it.

We acquired most of this territory, it is true, under treaty. Does any gentleman dare say that we acquired New Mexico by treaty? Is there any man here bold enough to assert that we acquired it by treaty? No. We acquired it by the Army of the United States in the halls of the Montezumas. That is the way we acquired it. We acquired it by force, and our title was quieted by a quitclaim deed called a treaty.

"Oh," it is said "but you can not acquire territory separated from the United States and at a distance." What are you going to do with Alaska? There is a Territory almost as long on the sea shore as our boundaries on the Atlantic and separated from the United States, and including probably a hundred islands as far from any part of the United States as these we are discussing.

It is true you acquired Alaska and its islands by treaty. Now gentlemen are quarreling over the question, who has the credit of the annexation of this territory to the United States; and it is a matter to be considered, and it is a matter to the credit of any statesman who was engaged in any of these transactions. Which party did it? Mr. President, that is not the question now. I want to see the man who would dare to propose to sell or give away or yield up any single foot of any part of those acquisitions. He does not live who would have the hardihood to do it. A man might march up to the mouth of a cannon, but he never would consent to meet face to face an angry and infuriated people. Oh, no. We gave several millions for the Louisiana purchase. Who would take a hundred times as many millions for it to-day?

We gave many millions for Alaska, and we are told that we have not been benefited by it. Possibly we have not in the shape of dollars and cents. I have not ciphered up the account. But suppose we gave $7,200,000 for Alaska, does the man live, as a representative of the United States, who would dare to consent to take $100,000,000 for one-half of that territory? If we never have had any other use for it than to have dominion over it, it is worth the $7,200,000 which was paid for it. So I think, Mr. President, it will not do to say that the Congress has not the power to acquire territory except by war.

Gentlemen scout at the idea of quoting the example of the admission of Texas. On the constitutional question the admission of Texas is on all fours with the very question we are now debating. There are moral aspects of the case which surround this proposition that did not surround the admission of Texas. We had our brothers there, and we wanted them in the Union. But as a pure question of law that case can not be distinguished from this. How was it? A treaty was negotiated for the admission of Texas. The treaty was not ratified by the Senate. A treaty was made for the admission of these islands, but it was not ratified by the Senate. The people of the one country—Texas—asked to be admitted into the Union, and the Congress passed a statute or a resolution, which is a statute, admitting that great country into the United States. So these islands propose to surrender their territory and sovereignty to the United States, just as Texas did.

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from Alabama permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. PETTUS. Certainly.

Mr. CAFFERY. Is there any evidence that the people of Hawaii have consented to their incorporation into the United States as there was in the case of Texas?

Mr. PETTUS. That has no more bearing on the constitutional question than the man burning brush in the moon—not one particle. But I will admit that when you come to consider the moral question, when you come to consider the question of expediency and all that, it does have a bearing. But on the law question which is being debated it has no bearing. The Senator from Louisiana would not dare to say it has any bearing on the constitutional question. He would forfeit his repute as a lawyer to make such a declaration to this body.

Mr. CAFFERY. I understand that the Senator from Alabama, in response to my question, stated that the question had no bearing at all on the constitutional point.

Mr. PETTUS. That is what I say, but it does have a bearing on the moral aspect.

Mr. CAFFERY. The people of Texas having in convention assembled expressed their willingness to be admitted into the Union, the Senator from Alabama says that has only a moral bearing upon the question. Now, the Senator from Alabama, in denying that the consent of the people is necessary for their incorporation into the United States, as a legal question, it occurs to me says the very foundation of the genius and spirit of our institutions.

Mr. PETTUS. I am glad that the Senator has called my mind back to all that class of arguments which have been traveled over. That Senator has a tender heart or his sympathies go out and they embrace all mankind—Kanaka, Chinaman, Japanese, and those other people of whom he has talked in the Azores. His heart is so tender toward all these. Why was it, sir, that your ancestors took that whole piece of territory covering a continent? The Senator from Louisiana had in his own State hundreds and thousands not Kanakas, I will admit, but they were Cajans, colored people, and as the Senator has so much sympathy with the colored people, why did his ancestors rob those people of their land?

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from Alabama permit me? The Senator from Alabama has, I think, unwittingly made a misstatement of fact. He states that what he calls the Cajans of Louisiana were colored people. What were termed Cajans were the descendants of French whites. They were pure Caucasian. At the period of the admission of the province of Louisiana, which comprised not only Louisiana, but that vast territory lying north and west of Louisiana, the French population of that State was quite as intelligent as the like class of white American population in other States.

Mr. PETTUS. Did you invite them to vote?

Mr. CAFFERY. In answer to that inquiry I will say that the whites were so insignificant in number to the Indians, whom we have never invited to vote, that it was not considered necessary at all to obtain their consent. There was no government in Louisiana other than the French Government, and the French Government at that period was not a republic and did not give to its citizens the right to vote or the means whereby to vote. So there was no means whatever of obtaining the expression of the opinion of the white residents of that State. There were among what the Senator called Cajans quite a sprinkling of Americans and other nationalities, and they were not averse, as the historians state, to annexation.

Mr. PETTUS. The Senator from Louisiana has marvelous sympathy for these people. Does he think that here in the United States Senate he is talking to young children?

Mr. CAFFERY. I request the Senator to speak a little louder. I can not hear him.

Mr. PETTUS. I made the inquiry whether the Senator from Louisiana thinks that in the Senate of the United States he is talking to young children? Such arguments as he has made on this subject might be moving as a pamphlet for young children in the backwoods with their nursery maids surrounding them, telling them the wonderful sufferings of the poor Kanakas; it might have some effect on them, it might arouse their sympathies. Senators in this body are not expected to be of that mold, and if they were they had better have stayed at home.

We are legislating here for the best interests of the people of the United States. All men are created free and equal in the eye of the law. We do not mean to say that we grant them all exactly the same measure of rights or that they have the same bumps on their heads, but when the Senate of the United States seeks an investigation of such a question, what is the small matter of the consent of a few men? The Senator from Louisiana portrayed them as a most exalted class of Christian citizens. We are sorry if the necessities of the United States happen to require that we shall make them hereafter better citizens and better Christians. We are sorry for them on that account. But we are legislating for the United States and not for other people, and when a man is in that position he has to consider what is for the good of the people he represents. Where would this nation have been on the sympathetic idea? Who owned all this territory when our ancestors came here—those hard and flinty, honest, imperturbable and unsympathetic men who settled in the granite hills? Where was Webster? Who settled there when Webster went over from your neighborhood into New Jersey?

Mr. CAFFERY. Before the Senator from Alabama leaves this part of the subject, will he permit me to interrupt him again?

Mr. PETTUS. Certainly.

Mr. CAFFERY. I judge from what the Senator has said that he has turned what he pleases to term my sympathy into other channels than what little sympathy I expressed. I did not express any particular sympathy one way or the other for the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands, but I did say that the native Hawaiians were according to the statements of the annexationists themselves quite an intelligent and a Christian and a civilized people. I did contend in my feeble, adolescent way, whether sympathetic or other, that those people ought to have been consulted, that the voice of those people was not only not consulted, but was studiously smothered.

Now, in regard to the statement the Senator has made, that the florid and sympathetic arguments of youth which I have addressed to the Senate had better have been addressed to school boys, I will say that as between the spontaneous, effervescent, and adolescent expressions of sympathy which I have made and the senilities of age I would prefer the former.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana has made use of a custom in the Senate for a grossly improper purpose. He rose to ask me a question, and under the fraud of asking me a question he sought to denounce me personally. That was the whole of it. Mr. President, Senators ought not to do such small things. No interruption is right and proper in the Senate except for the purpose of a question or of obtaining information. The man who makes it otherwise is intruding upon the time of the other Senator, and the man who does it for the purpose of offering an insult—well, Mr. President, I was reared in the Presbyterian Church and it does not allow me to use proper language to characterize such conduct.

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from Alabama permit me again?

Mr. PETTUS. No; I will not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Senator from Alabama declines to yield.

Mr. PETTUS. I will hold the floor now, so far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned.

Yes; I am an old man. Here is the senility of age; exactly. Mr. President, sometimes men become senile very young—I have observed that in my passage through life—and sometimes they are born with imaginations so vivid that they can never get down to the truth even in their young days. I am an old man; yes, I am; but it is the first time I have been insulted in the United States Senate by such language as that, and I do not intend to tolerate it.

Mr. CAFFERY. I disclaim any intention of insulting the Senator. In my remarks I simply drew a comparison between what he calls the florid effervescent argument of youth and the drivings of age, and the Senator himself has taken that as a personal insult, when I only intended it as a set-off to his charge upon the remarks I made. I did not think that he made the remark to me personally. Had I thought so, I would not have replied; but it is only an answer to an argument that he made upon youth by a resort of an answer on age.

Mr. PETTUS. I said nothing whatever about the gentleman's age. I never said a word about the florid or effervescent declamation of his. I simply spoke of his sympathy for these people and stated that it would have more effect and that it would have been better addressed to young children and nursery maids. I am of that opinion still. I made no sort of reflection on the Senator until he attempted to throw brickbats under the guise of asking a question.

Mr. President, as I stated before, we are legislating here for the good of the people. These men who express so much sympathy with the men with whom they are dealing on the island, after characterizing them, I believe justly, as a Christian, moral people, turn around and say that they belong to a race that is trifling and inefficient—I do not remember the exact words, but they characterize them as men absolutely unfit to exercise any privilege of suffrage in the United States.

I will not refer back to what has passed. I want to say a few words in reference to the questions that have been raised in this discussion other than the question of law.

We have been told in the course of this debate that we are in war and that we ought to support the Administration. Mr. President, that expression is entirely beneath the dignity of the Senate. We are in war, of course, and we ought to support the President of the United States, and the Army of the United States, and the Navy of the United States. Why talk about supporting an Administration? No, Mr. President, we ought to support our country. That is what we ought to support.

It is true, gentlemen, that you elected the President of the United States, but do you suppose that he is your President? No; he is not your President. He is the President of the United States, and he ought to be, especially in war, without an eye to the right party or to the left party. There is no doubt about that. But, however that may be, Democrats assisted in the commencement of this war. Democrats have never failed to die for their country when the time came. We ought never to talk about supporting an Administration. It has a partisan ring and it ought never to have been said. We ought to be required to support the President of the United States, our President as well as yours, the President of the country.

Mr. MORGAN (at 13 o'clock and 46 minutes p. m.). I think it would be apt at this moment of time to call my colleague's attention to a dispatch which has just reached the Senate. It is an Associated Press bulletin, and reads as follows:

PLATA DEL ESTE, PROVINCE OF SANTIAGO DE CUBA,
July 1—11.20 a. m.

A general assault on Santiago de Cuba by land and sea forces of the United States began this morning. The Vesuvius used her dynamite guns with good effect. Hard fighting was in progress all along the line at 11 o'clock.

Mr. PETTUS. Yes, Mr. President, the fighting is all along the line. Every patriot in the United States will support this Army and Navy and their commanders in every possible way in his power, and no good Democrat will ever do otherwise.

I do not mean to say that Democrats do not differ as to measures of constitutional law and as to measures of policy. I would not for anything in the world cast a censure on any one of my associates in this Chamber. No, Mr. President, the Democratic party is the party of the people, and I have believed in it all my life because it was so. It is in favor of the government of this country by the people, the government of this country in the manner that the Constitution pointed out for the benefit of all mankind, and opposed to all systems and theories and pretenses by which one man grows rich on the labor of another and, after growing rich, claims the right to govern the country.

Yes, Mr. President, we ought to support the Army and the Navy, and the President, who is the Commander in Chief. He is our Commander in Chief. And who is he? He is a loyal citizen of the United States, elected to the highest office in the power of the people to confer, and he is no doubt acting patriotically, so far as he is allowed by his unconstitutional advisers, and, I believe, in a great degree better.

Oh, yes, our armies are engaged in that dreadful fight. How many of them will die in that battle? I pray to my God that they may die with victory in their ears when they do die.

Just here, as a piece of passing egotism, I will have the honor to inform the President of the Senate that there has never been a war in the United States of America in which men of my blood did not fight and die, and I hope to God there never will come a battle when some man of my race will not have the courage to fight, and to die if need be, for his country.

Mr. President, much has been said, even in this debate, about this war, and what it is waged for. What is it waged for? A country that does not protect its citizens wherever they may be, on land or on sea, is not a country that a patriot would like to die for. What have we gone to war about? We had hundreds of causes, and good causes.

You all remember the proof that was in the Senate about many citizens of the United States murdered by that accursed successor of the Duke of Alva. We had a treaty that they should be tried according to the forms of the Spanish civil law, and the Spaniards took them and led them out without the forms of trial and shot them to death. We had mathematical proof from three eyewitnesses of a case right near Havana where a captain coming along saw a man who did not belong at the house. He inquired who he was. He said he was an American citizen. The captain said, "You are the very man I am looking for," and they took him and, without any form of trial, without any offense, without any pretense of accusation, stood him up against a tree and shot him to death. And you all remember Dr. Ruiz. You remember how he was murdered in prison.

Mr. President, it is the duty of a nation to protect its citizens in all their rights wherever they may be. Some thirty or forty or more citizens of the United States thus died under the order of Alva-Weyler.

Then the government of that island has made it a curse and a stench in our nostrils for more than twenty years. At last they built a pen and organized a hell for the murder and torture of their own citizens right at our front door. Nobody could ever deny the right of a nation to abate such an infamous nuisance as that.

But in addition to all that, with the treachery which has always distinguished the Spanish character, they gave us more than 250 just causes of war by the explosion of one torpedo. You may talk about the Queen not ordering it, and about Blanco not ordering it, but the man would be incredulous of human testimony who did not believe that it was done by Spanish officers in charge of Spanish torpedoes. They gave us more than 250 just causes of war by one act.

We may be asked, What are you prosecuting the war for? We are prosecuting this war for the purpose of making it impossible for any nation on this earth to be guilty of such wrongs toward our citizens and our sailors as have been inflicted by the Spanish nation and to make it impossible for any nation to maintain an organized hell at our front door.

What are you going to do with these lands that you acquire in war? There is great alarm about that. The fact of the business is that we have not acquired any of them yet. I expect that we shall.

Oh, Mr. President, I have faith in the soldiers of the United States like a grain of mustard seed, and I have fully as much faith in the Navy of the United States. There never was a better or a braver set of men born on earth, true to their flag, true to their country, with no knowledge of the thing called fear, and with an acuteness of daring that is the admiration to-day of all mankind; and they are exhibiting it all now with their blood shed for the benefit of this people.

But it is feared that if we annex this group of islands out in the middle of the Pacific Ocean we shall make a mistake and it will be a source of weakness and not help either the Army or the Navy. Mr. President, I have had a good deal to do with land fighting, but I am not a sailor. I had to do with it in my youth and I had to do with it later on. I am no expert, however, and I do not claim to be. But any man who is an expert ought to be able to state with mathematical certainty what is the value of these islands to the Army and what is their value to the Navy. If you want to have a watch doctored, you take it to a silversmith. If you want to have your horse shod, you take it to a blacksmith. If, unfortunately, there should be a "curmurgung" within you, you go to a doctor. Why do you do this? It is plain common sense. You go to them because they are experts.

Why do you have at Annapolis that great school which has done so much for the glory of the United States? You have it to make naval experts. Why do you have that great school at West Point? To make army experts for the benefit of the United States; and, thank God, you have been marvelously successful in both. You have not only produced great sailors and great soldiers, but you have produced great experts in the various lines of military and naval warfare.

What do all these people say about these islands as a matter of benefit to the Army and Navy? They all say that they are invaluable. I have known men hung on the opinion of experts, and justly hung, too. Are you going to give no credit to the great naval officers, to the great Army officers, who are not only experts, but distinguished patriots also? Are you going to brush them away like a cobweb and say this coaling station and repair station is of no benefit; it will only be an expense; it will only require you to keep a strong navy? Mr. President, if it is no other benefit in the world to the United States except requiring it to keep and maintain every day throughout the ages a strong navy, that will be a benefit such as no other experts ever conferred on this country.

Are you afraid of a strong navy? What does the expense amount to? We squander more here uselessly in these legislative halls, in my opinion, than would maintain a navy from year to year. But whatever the cost may be, we ought to have a strong navy. We ought to have a navy that could protect the United States and its citizens wherever assailed.

Mr. President, that is the way to keep the peace, and it is the only way by which nations can successfully keep the peace. A navy now is of many times more importance than it was in former years.

I say we ought to have the Navy for the purpose of living in a peaceful country. Do you call that a peaceful country where your flag is insulted from year to year and month in and month out, and your people are wronged and degraded by the actions of foreign governments? No, Mr. President. A nation that is worth living in is worth dying for; but a nation that does not protect its own citizens is not worth living in or dying for. Shall we have a strong navy? Yes. To be sure, it may lead to a strong navy, and I hope to God it will. I want the day to come when the United States will never be insulted by a weak or a strong power, when we can go along peacefully and treat our neighbors with the utmost consideration, yielding to them all their rights, making them obey the law and yield their rights to all citizens of the United States wherever they may be. That can not be done without a strong navy.

Just here, Mr. President, I am forced to say a thing that may be disagreeable to some of my friends, but I am in no humor at this time to mince my words. I have had my conviction for a great number of years on the subject that I am going to call to your attention, and the conviction has been growing as the evil has been growing. You say that all patriots ought to support the President of the United States and the Army and Navy, and I say "Amen;" and yet what a spectacle did this war show when it was first announced to mankind! Where was our merchant marine?

Mr. President, the United States formerly was the carrying nation of the world. It carried more of the commerce of the world than any other nation on earth. Our ships were on every sea; they were everywhere. And we not only had a merchant marine but we had the materials already trained of a grand naval force educated in the merchant marine of the country, as sailors, men ready to do its battles. What was the presentation of affairs when this war commenced? Our merchant marine was substantially dead. One-twelfth of the carrying trade of the world is as much as all of it could do. It used to carry about half.

Mr. President, statesmen ought to look into the cause of such a disaster as that. Were you not alarmed, sir, at the condition of our Navy and the prospect of additions to it from our merchant marine? There was no thoughtful man in the country who was not shocked. Who does not know the cause of that degradation of this nation? It went on. I do not mean to charge the whole of the vessels. The vessels were scant; they were so scant that they could not do the carrying for the Government; and, as the papers tell us, when many of them did the carrying they charged a double price for it, and sometimes more. This is the merchant marine, the thing that the nation formerly relied on for glory in battle, not only produced by their numerous ships, but by their gallant sailors that they had trained for the Government. But it has gone.

Mr. President, a selfish greed and the assistance of Congress have destroyed the merchant marine. When this war came on this greed of wealth, for the benefit solely of a few shipbuilders and a few shipowners, had the Government by the throat and held it. The merchant marine had been destroyed, that thing which we depended on. From what cause? Oh, to foster this damnable idea of making one man grow rich at the expense of the people, and also to make the nation bow to the wealth which it has donated to such people.

And so it is now, and the people ought to know that this monopoly—I do not mean monopoly in the sense of one man carrying it on, but this favored class of money getters—has not only destroyed our merchant marine, but it has got the Government where the Government can not help itself if it would. To be sure, the Government has the power to seize these vessels, but where are they? They are few, and so few that they do not answer the purposes of the Government, and our officers are slow, and they are justly slow, to impress property for the use of the Government. But it is a disgrace to any nation on earth to have its operations and its great war purposes trammelled and thwarted and hampered by the greed of wealth, fostered by the laws of this country.

Mr. President, our merchant marine died under the navigation laws, and so long as you have the navigation laws you never can have a merchant marine such as it ought to be and such as it would be if the merchants and other individuals in this country were allowed to go where they could buy this absolute necessity for carrying on war even of a defensive nature. We protect others, we protect these getters of wealth, and we protect them to the absolute ruin of one of the main defenses of this country. I have no hope, however, of bettering that condition of affairs, and therefore I pass on to another subject.

It is objected also that if we annex these islands we must have a strong army. I deny it emphatically. There is no occasion for it. Those of us who know the history of this country know who has been fighting for it. I am not disparaging the Regular Army. I think it is a great and gallant body of men, and they are patriots, too; but the rank and file of that Army are generally, especially in times of peace, in it as a profession or a calling by way of making a living. But, Mr. President, do you not know that those who do the fighting of the country, the Army of the United States, consisted when we commenced this war, I believe, of 25,000 men? We have built it up to 26,000. We have ordered out 125,000 men, then 10,000 men, then 3,000 men, and then 75,000 men, in addition to filling up the Regular Army to 61,000. Where did they come from? They came from the best men God ever allowed to live in the United States; they came from the flower of the country, the young men of the country, all over the country, in the cities and villages and towns and hamlets, and from the farms; men who have no thought of becoming soldiers as a profession, but men who go into the ranks as privates and risk their lives, and risk them gladly, for the honor and dignity of the United States.

Mr. President, Tennessee was once called the Volunteer State, and that is the general name it goes by in our country to-day. The Republic of the United States is a volunteer Republic, and it can always produce as many soldiers as its necessities require, and without any large standing army. But it would be wisdom never to abate one jot or tittle of what you are doing at West Point. Cultivate that grand institution; enlarge it; give it every facility for teaching the science of war; try to get your best men into it; educate them and train them as patriots and soldiers; but there is no use in having a large army in time of peace for these men to command—none in the world. You have seen how the Army can be filled up. "But, oh," they say, "you are slow about it; the volunteers are slow, and you have to train them."

Yes, Mr. President, they are slow, and if the time allows they ought to be trained, and trained thoroughly, and drilled until they are accurate movers; but I tell you, Mr. President, if you take the class of men who form the Volunteer Army, and give them good guns and good ammunition and their neighbors to command them, and with the responsibilities they have in their own homes and their families to induce them to behave themselves like American citizens, a minute's training makes heroes of every one of them. I am not discrediting the drill. It ought to be perfect. I do not intend by anything that I have said to disparage the usefulness of training as soldiers, but I say that a nucleus of 26,000 men, as our Army now exists as a Regular Army on a peace establishment, is as much as the United States has any use for, because there is not, in my opinion, a nation in the world with whom we have any dealing, or with whom we are likely to have any, which can produce a stronger army than can the United States on a basis of 26,000 men to start with.

Mr. President, we are told that we are in danger of being slow; that we are in danger of being interfered with by some of the powers of Europe. That has been a threat which has been hung over us for many years, and it was hung over us to prevent us from doing what our consciences have told us that we ought to do. It was said, "Do not do that; you may bring on yourselves the disapprobation of the great nations of Europe. Germany may object; France may object."

Mr. President, I wish to say nothing in the slightest degree disrespectful or unkind about either of those nations. I have it not in my heart to do it. They are great people; they have great armies and great navies; but I was glad to hear the ringing voice of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] giving notice to all mankind that the United States would allow no interference by foreign nations in its affairs, and so sure as you live there is not a nation on earth, unless it is backed up by four or five other large powers, which will ever interfere with us. We can not help coalitions of foreign powers if they should come against us; although they may be against us, we can not avoid them. Let us live true to ourselves; let us protect our own rights; let us have a navy such as would warn all mankind—nemo me impune lacessit—no man shall touch the United States with safety.

Mr. President, I have consumed too much of the time of the Senate. I hope these resolutions will pass. I am sure we shall have a vote on them at a proper time, and I do not think it is my business to judge of when that time shall come. It is not the custom of this Senate for those who are acting with a supposed majority to dictate to others how they shall debate a question. I hope we shall possess our souls in patience and wait until the Senate is ready to vote, and then I hope that we shall adopt these resolutions and give our Army and Navy a foothold in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, put our ships there, and have such fortifications there that foreign nations had rather attack Gibraltar with their guns than to attack us in those islands.

Mr. MALLORY obtained the floor.

Mr. MASON. Will the Senator from Florida yield to me for a moment to make a statement?

Mr. MALLORY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MASON. I desire to give notice that I will move to have the Committee on Rules discharged from the further consideration of two resolutions which have been referred to them during the past year, which I have introduced. In giving this notice, I wish it understood that I have no desire to do anything discourteous or disrespectful or out of the usual way to that committee.

This body continues to operate under the ancient, childish, and absurd rules by which the minority and not the majority controls the affairs of the body. I have no fault to find with the gentlemen who are delaying or who are being heard upon the question of the Hawaiian annexation resolution. It is not their fault if it is not passed. The fault is more ancient and lies deeper.

It will not do for the older members of this body to complain of the gentlemen who are delaying this legislation, for the reason that the older Senators, who have been here for a quarter of a century or more, have never given us an opportunity to amend the rules so that the majority can transact the business of the Senate.

I gave notice upon the introduction of my first resolution that I intended to continue to press it, and Senators are well aware, owing to the excitement attending war legislation, that we have not attempted to amend the rules. I desire to give notice now that I do not consider that I am bound to stay here for the next thirty or sixty days while this gentlemanly filibuster is being pursued. I want it understood that I am not complaining of any gentleman who is engaged in it, nor do I consider it such a crime as some of the gentlemen on the other side seem to speak of. I have occasionally been obliged to filibuster myself in the other branch of Congress when I felt I was not having a fair hearing, being in the minority.

Although a majority of the Senate is for the passage of this resolution, and while I am going to vote for the resolution because the people of my State are for it, I wish to call to the attention of the Senate and to that of the people of the country that this delay and this kid-gloved filibuster is possible simply because the gentlemen who are now complaining of it have always refused to give the majority a chance to transact the business of this body.

I do not see why it should be expected that any of us who favor the acquisition of Hawaii should be compelled to stay here unless there is some prospect of having a vote upon this question. I am willing to do so, if necessary, but why not take now from the Committee on Rules and pass an amendment to the rules whereby there will be some day or some hour this side of the Eternal City of God when we can have a vote upon pending questions when a majority of the people and a majority of the Senate favor them?

I want to be understood. I do not intend to be disrespectful to the Committee on Rules; but unless an agreement is made whereby we can have a vote on the pending resolution, I propose to move to discharge that committee from the further consideration of the resolutions to which I have referred, and ask to have them put upon their passage.

My friends who favor the amendment of the rules say, "Let us put it off until next session; let us delay it; let us take up that particular question at the particular time when there is nothing else involved." One of the favorite pictures of the Arkansaw Traveler was a man under a leaky shed, and the passer-by said to the man, "Why do you not mend your roof?" Said he, "I can not; it is raining." "Well, why do you not mend it when it is not raining?" He said, "It does not need it then." I have appealed to you, Senators, when there was no great national question at stake to amend your rules; and you people who are now complaining of the filibuster said, "It is not raining; we do not need any amendment of the rules;" and to-day, with the people of this country favoring the pending proposition, and certainly by a test vote two-thirds of this Senate favoring the proposition, we sit here as powerless as a child, because we have not the courage to uproot these feeble-minded rules, these puerile, childish, and I might almost say indecent rules, which bind the upper branch of Congress and prevent the transaction of public business.

I thank the Senator from Florida for yielding so long. I am sorry to have taken so much of his time; but I give notice that Tuesday, if I am spared to be here, or I will say Wednesday, I shall raise the question again. I know it is raining now; but I prefer to mend the roof in the rain rather than to continue longer under the frivolous, absurd, weak, and childish rules which permit the minority in a representative government to run the business of that government.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, this measure is one which, in my judgment, entitles it to as grave and deliberate consideration as any measure which has been before Congress since the organization of the Republic. It involves a new departure in the policy of the Government of the United States; it involves an increase of our Army and Navy; it involves the establishment of a system of government in a colony of the United States such as never heretofore has existed.

In addition to the very grave questions which present themselves when we come to consider the policy or the expediency of annexing these islands, we are confronted with another question, and one which meets us at the very threshold of the subject, which, in my humble judgment, is far more important, and will be more far-reaching in its influences and effects upon our country than any of the other questions that are involved in the measure.

This is a joint resolution emanating from the House of Representatives, proposing to ratify and accept an alleged proposed agreement made by a sovereign power to this separate and distinct sovereign power, the United States of America. For it we have no precedent; against it, in my humble judgment, Mr. President, there are arguments to be urged which are so irresistible that those who give them adequate and due consideration must necessarily hesitate before they take the fatal plunge which the adoption of this resolution means.

And yet, notwithstanding the important, grave, and solemn questions which underlie this measure, it has not been discussed, it has not been presented to the deliberate consideration of the people of the United States. And even in this body, when we who are opposed to the measure are undertaking to invite the attention of our colleagues to the consideration of the points which we consider to be good as against annexation, even here we hear complaints and innuendoes and insinuations as to the purpose of those who are opposing it which are certainly both unfounded and unjust.

It has been said in the public press, or at least that element of the public press which favors the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, that the matter has been before the country for many years; that the people are informed as to the merits and demerits of the proposition, and that it is a useless waste of time for Senators to consume day after day in delivering their speeches upon the subject. But, Mr. President, while the question possibly has been mooted from time to time, while in the past there have on divers occasions been movements looking to the consummation of the result which is sought to be attained by the pending joint resolution, still we are all aware of the fact that none of the great parties of the country has committed itself to any view or expression of views which can be construed into an indorsement of the proposition that is now before the Senate.

I have the authority of the venerable and respected Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL], who addressed the Senate upon this subject some days ago, for the assertion that this measure has not received anything like adequate consideration. In that speech he said:

One prominent objection to the pending measure is that the people of neither Hawaii nor of the United States have been consulted or taken into confidence in relation to the impending compact. The promoters have been reluctant to trust the people with it. The country is to wake up next week and find a new but unwelcome member "incorporated," as Mr. Sherman, the Secretary of State, described it, "into the body politic of the United States." At Hawaii something leaked out about it after its final determination. Here the Senate was informed about it after the Secretary had signed the treaty; but even the Senate did not permit itself to discuss it except in secret session until its paucity of votes was disclosed; and it came originally in the form of a treaty, not to hide the fact that a treaty was not a courageous but a cowardly way to bring a State into the Union, as some people thought, but for the reason that the Hawaiian promoters of the compact could fix up their part of it in that way with less lubrication. The authorship of this state paper appears to have been miscellaneous and partly unknown, having been cut and dried in Honolulu, and yet it was to have been consented to by the United States Senate without subtraction or addition, as the committee reporting it seem to have regarded it as properly inspired and inerrant.

There is the testimony of the Nestor of the Senate, the testimony of a gentleman who but recently declared on the floor of the Senate that he had but one ambition in life and that was to be right, the sincerity of which expression no one will question—a gentleman for whom all of us, irrespective of party affiliations, have the most exalted esteem, respect, and veneration. And yet we hear it said here, and we see it in the public press from day to day, that this matter has been discussed to an extent that renders it absolutely unnecessary for anything more to be said upon it; that the people are unanimous almost in their desire to have the Senate take action upon it, and that those Senators who dare to stand upon this floor and consume the time necessary to express their views on this vast and important question are resorting to methods which are not legitimate and are exposing themselves to popular condemnation.

Mr. President, I desire to be understood as of those who believe that it is their duty to express their views upon this subject without reference to whether they meet with the favor of a majority or a minority in this body. I am here as one of the representatives of a sovereign State, and I am free to state that it is impossible for me to say now what are the wishes of a majority of the people of that sovereign State. But I know what my views are; I know that they are honest; I know that they are based upon a careful, deliberate examination of the question; and knowing that, I propose to express those views; I propose to put them on record; and if in doing so I incur the censure of any gentleman or any set of men, I am willing to abide the result.

Mr. President, I said this question has not been discussed. Whose fault is it that the people are uninformed, that the people do not know the facts which have been disclosed in the debate here within the last few days by gentlemen who are opposed to annexation—the facts as to the distances between points on the Pacific coast and the Hawaiian Islands and the Philippine Islands, and the distances between ports on the same coast and ports in the Aleutian Islands, equally as good as any port in the Hawaiian Islands, and other facts of importance as bearing on certain phases of this question? But conceding for the sake of argument that some consideration has been given to those points of detail, expediency, and policy, I think I can say with truth that the other question, the great vital question, the constitutionality of the step we are about to take, has received, outside of this Chamber, no consideration whatever.

If there has been any such discussion in any of the papers of this country in which the question of annexation has been treated of, I have not seen it. We had the opportunity six, seven, or eight months ago to inform the people of the United States as to all the merits and all the details of this important step. I am disclosing no secret when I say it was within the power of a majority of this body to deliberate in public instead of secret session on the question of the ratification of the treaty of this country with the Hawaiian Islands. It was within their power to bring this question out in open Senate and to have the arguments and debates printed in the RECORD, so that the people at large could have the time and opportunity to consider the pros and cons of the question.

They speak of their immense majority. We are told that the minority here is almost insignificant and that it is practically running the Senate. As one of the minority, at least I can say that in connection with my desire to put myself and my views upon record on this great question my other and only purpose is to endeavor to impress upon the people with whom I live and whom I in part represent a belief and a conviction that the step is not only inopportune, not only impolitic and inexpedient, but that in the way in which it is sought to be taken at this time it is in contravention of the fundamental law of the land.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask the courtesy of the Senator from Florida to make a statement to the Chair.

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I have counted the Senators present, and there is no quorum in the Chamber.

Mr. MALLORY. I am sorry the Senator thought proper to do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Senator from Indiana suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Elkins,	McEnery,	Proctor,
Allen,	Fairbanks,	Mallory,	Quay,
Bacon,	Foraker,	Mantle,	Sewell,
Baker,	Frye,	Martin,	Shoup,
Bate,	Gallinger,	Mason,	Teller,
Burrows,	Gear,	Mills,	Turley,
Butler,	Hansbrough,	Money,	Turpie,
Cannon,	Harris,	Morgan,	Warren,
Chilton,	Hawley,	Morrill,	Wetmore,
Clark,	Heitfeld,	Perkins,	White,
Clay,	Jones, Nev.	Pettigrow,	Wilson.
Cullom,	Kyle,	Potts,
Davis,	Lodge,	Platt, N. Y.
Deboe,	McBride,	Pritchard,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Florida will proceed.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, in addition to the constitutional question to which I have adverted there is also presented for our consideration in connection with the action proposed a question which, in my judgment, is a highly moral question. It involves complicity on our part in the violation of the constitution of a sovereign State. The authority on the part of the Hawaiian Government which it is contended will justify the passage of the joint resolution of annexation by Congress is found in the thirty-second article of that constitution. It provides that the President of Hawaii, with the approval of the cabinet, is authorized to make a treaty of political or commercial union between the Republic of Hawaii and the United States of America, subject to the ratification of the Senate of Hawaii.

The constitution of Hawaii expressly provides that in the event of political or commercial union with the United States being sought by that Government, it shall be done in a particular way—by a treaty. Yet the advocates of annexation under the joint resolution tell us that if we pass the joint resolution there will be no difficulty whatever about its being accepted by the Hawaiian Government, notwithstanding that solemn provision in its constitution. While we have a perfect right, undoubtedly, in my view, to do so, and to do many other things that may be unjust, immoral, and inequitable, it is a question I think worthy of consideration whether we should bring ourselves to the point of becoming particeps criminis in the deliberate, willful violation of the constitution of a sovereign country.

Mr. President, we have now upon our table a treaty proposed to be ratified by the Government of the United States for the purpose of carrying out and accomplishing the identical objects sought to be accomplished by the joint resolution. That treaty came to us from the executive branch of the Government as the power to which is confided the duty of making treaties, and it remains upon our desk unacted on, it is true, but still not rejected. What motive has led to the abandonment of the effort to ratify the treaty I shall not undertake to name.

I can not say that it was inspired by a fear that if subjected to a vote in this Chamber in secret session it would fail to receive the requisite two-thirds vote prescribed by the Constitution, because I can not undertake to say how any particular man or set of men under certain circumstances will vote. But it is a fact that in the regular process and in the manner prescribed by the Constitution there is an instrument waiting to be acted upon by this body which, if acted on by the constitutional majority of two-thirds, will consummate the purpose sought to be accomplished by the joint resolution. Yet, while the instrument is here, and while it has not been rejected, we are suddenly confronted with a joint resolution from the other branch of Congress, not emanating from the Executive, but coming spontaneously from the House of Representatives, proposing to accomplish the identical thing which the President has undertaken under the treaty-making power to submit to the judgment and action of this body.

I claim, Mr. President, that there is not only no authority for this action, but that a correct interpretation of the Constitution reveals as a necessity that such action is in contravention of the Constitution. Who has undertaken to sustain the proposed action? Although it is said that there is nearly a two-thirds majority in this Chamber in favor of it, how many of that excessive majority have undertaken upon the floor of the Senate to justify the proposed action? They can be counted upon the fingers of the one hand.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, which made a report recommending the adoption of the joint resolution, did in that report present an argument in favor of their view in connection with the measure, and they also undertook, in the absence of an opposite side, to present the arguments of the opposition and to meet those arguments. I shall not refer to the arguments based upon the expediency and necessity as a war measure and as a commercial advantage, which are urged on all hands, but I will confine myself to the manner in which the committee undertook to meet the alleged objections to the constitutional question involved in this measure. Let us see what they are.

The report, under a black-letter heading, announces "Twenty objections to the annexation of Hawaii, and replies thereto;" and in italics we find the objections stated. These objections are represented as urged by the opponents of annexation, and the Committee on Foreign Relations having decided to make a favorable report, feel in duty bound, for the edification and instruction of the Senate and of the country, because copies of this report go to the country broadcast, to state what those objections of the opponents of annexation are and to meet them in the manner in which the Committee on Foreign Relations can meet them. Now we have the first objection:

The committee says that the opponents of annexation contend that it is unconstitutional because the General Government is limited in its powers to those expressly conferred upon it by the Constitution.

The Constitution does not specifically grant power to annex a territory, and therefore the power does not exist.

I ask Senators if it is true that that objection has been offered by the opponents of the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands?

Is it true that that argument has been urged at any time within recent days, within recent times, or recent years as a reason why the Hawaiian Islands should not be annexed?

We are charged with claiming that—

The Constitution does not specifically grant power to annex territory, and therefore the power does not exist.

Is there any Senator who is opposed to the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands who has presented such an argument or such a proposition as a reason why they should not be annexed? I think I am safe in saying that no one has done so. Not only no Senator, but no one who understands the question, no one who understands a little law has enunciated such a proposition, and yet the Committee on Foreign Relations devotes two pages to the demolition of this alleged objection of the anti-annexationists.

Again, as a second objection, they say that those who are opposed to annexation claim "it is unconstitutional because Hawaii is not contiguous to the United States." I submit that that is not a fair presentation of the constitutional objection which is entertained by Senators to this step. No Senator on this floor, and I do not think any member of the other House, nor anyone in the country, has contended that it is unconstitutional because Hawaii is not contiguous to the United States. There may be a question of policy arising out of that fact, but with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, with the utterances of our distinguished statesmen from the days of Mr. Jefferson down to the present time, it would be absolute folly for any intelligent man to undertake to claim that that is a constitutional reason why Hawaii should not be annexed, and none has done so.

The third objection alleged to be entertained by those who are opposed to annexation is:

It is unconstitutional because its inhabitants are not homogeneous with the people of the United States.

Mr. President, I can see very well how that may be the basis of an argument against the policy or expediency of such a step, but I do not think the Committee on Foreign Relations will be able to find anyone here or elsewhere who is opposed to annexation who would ever base his grounds of unconstitutionality to annexation on the fact that the inhabitants of those islands are not homogeneous.

That is all the constitutional question pertaining to this subject that the Committee on Foreign Relations have thought proper to discuss. They have presented in their report three propositions, which they tell us and the people of the country are all the objections based on alleged constitutional grounds by those who are opposed to annexation—men of straw, dummies, set up to be knocked down, and they gravely and solemnly proceed to knock them over, and then dismiss the question of the constitutionality of this proceeding as established.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Florida allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator has, I think, not read the report of the committee. If the Senator will read the first two or three pages of the report, he will find that the committee discuss in full the constitutional status of the question not only upon their interpretation of that instrument, but upon the interpretation given by Congress to it in the annexation of Texas. The Senator makes no allusion at all to that part of the discussion by the committee.

Mr. MALLORY. It is not my purpose to deal unfairly either with the committee or its report. I have read the report, and I think that the most salient points which have been made or attempted to be made in favor of the annexation are those which are put in italics and refuted as the arguments of the opposition under the heading, on page 45 of the report, entitled "Twenty objections to the annexation of Hawaii, and replies thereto." But, Mr. President, they do go into an argument, and under the first head say that—

It is unconstitutional, because the General Government is limited in its powers to those expressly conferred upon it by the Constitution.

The Constitution does not specifically grant power to annex territory, and therefore the power does not exist.

The Committee on Foreign Relations has furnished us some authority in support of its refutation of those heretical propositions.

The instances of interpretation by the Supreme Court of the United States of the constitutionality of annexation are four in number—

Says the report—

viz. one in 1823, two in 1850, and one in 1889.

The first was in the case of the American Insurance Company vs. Canter, to be found in 1 Peters, 542. The opinion was delivered by Chief Justice Marshall, in the course of which the following words were used:

"The Constitution confers absolutely on the Government of the Union the power of making wars and of making treaties. Consequently that Government possesses the power of acquiring territory, either by conquest or treaty."

The two decisions rendered in 1850 were by Chief Justice Taney. The decision in 1889 is the case of the Mormon Church vs. The United States, contained in 130 United States Reports, page 43. In the course of the decision, the court used the following words:

"The power to acquire territory is derived from the treaty-making power, and the power to declare and carry on war."

"The incidents of these powers are those of national sovereignty and belong to all independent governments."

Those authorities are cited in support of the contention that the Government of the United States has the power to annex territory, a proposition which all, I believe, unquestionably all, those who are opposed to this annexation resolution, are in hearty accord with. We do not deny that the United States Government has the power whenever she thinks proper, whenever she can do so consistently with the rights of others, to annex territory. There has not been a word said in this Chamber, or anywhere else that I know of, in opposition to that proposition. The authorities that are cited here are authorities in support of the contention which we make—that the Government, the sovereign power of the United States, has the right to annex territory, but that right must be exercised in a particular way and through a particular branch of the Government of the United States.

Later on, under the second objection, the committee, in its discussion, uses language to which I call the attention of Senators. The second objection which they say is urged by those opposed to annexation is that—

It is unconstitutional because Hawaii is not contiguous to the United States.

The committee says:

The opponents of the constitutionality of annexation, finding the precedents and reasoning strongly against them, have fallen back from the position that annexation is directly prohibited by the Constitution to the claim that there are certain "implied prohibitions" in the Constitution which are as binding as those which appear on its face and that among these "implied prohibitions" is the one above stated.

It is a man of straw, as I have said—something set up to be knocked down—because no one among those who are opposing this measure has for an instant contended as they are charged in this report as contending.

The only reason—

Says the committee—

presented why the annexation of noncontiguous territory is unconstitutional is that the "people of the day" did not discuss nor contemplate the annexation of such territory.

You remember it was a constitutional question.

We have seen by the authoritative decision—

Says our committee—

of the Supreme Court in 1889—

That was the Mormon Church case—that the power to acquire territory is an incident of national sovereignty.

The Supreme Court says "that the power to acquire territory is an incident of national sovereignty." Now, the committee is arguing this question and is undertaking to upset what it says is a contention on the part of the opposite side, and it uses the following argument:

We have seen by the authoritative decision of the Supreme Court in 1889 that the power to acquire territory is an incident of national sovereignty; that is to say, the United States has the right to acquire territory, or any other property, because it is a nation.

We admit that.

It has the same rights and powers in this respect that any other nation has—that, for example, England has.

I call the attention of Senators to this reasoning. I do not mean to say that the committee has undertaken to deliberately distort the language or the reasoning of the Supreme Court in that case, but I invite the attention of Senators to the reasoning which is here pursued in connection with that case. Taking the doctrine laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States to the effect that the right to annex is a sovereign right, an incident of sovereignty, and that the United States as a nation, like all other nations, has that right—

It has the same rights and powers—

Says the committee—

In this respect that any other nation has—that, for example, England has. There is manifestly no limitation upon the power of England to acquire territory. How, then, can there be any limitation upon the power of the United States to do so?

Now, to one who does not examine critically this piece of reasoning it would appear the conclusion had been reached that there was no limitation as to the manner in which the power can be exercised. There is manifestly no limitation upon the power of England to acquire territory. In a country where the sovereign is simply a figurehead who can do no wrong and very little good, where Parliament is omnipotent, there is no limitation either upon the authority and power or upon the method or instrumentality which may be employed for a certain purpose.

But while the Constitution of the United States, which is an instrument of limitation, gives to the people of the United States the power to annex territory by the usual methods employed by nations of the world, it nevertheless distinctly, unequivocally, puts that power in the hands of one particular branch of the Government, and necessarily and impliedly, from the magnitude of the power, from the fact that it has no limitations as to the subjects it will treat of, intended that that power should be exclusively in the hands of the Executive.

These, then, Mr. President, are the arguments which the Committee on Foreign Relations have furnished us against the alleged argument that the proposed proceeding here is unconstitutional. But there have been other champions who had the courage of their convictions and who presented to the Senate their views and arguments, setting forth the reasons why they thought there was no infringement of the Constitution by this proposed action.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who I regret is not now in his seat, delivered a speech in which he gave his views. I have here an extract from his speech in which he very tersely and with that clearness which is characteristic of the gentleman stated what he believed to be the constitutional justification of the proposed action. He said.

The right of Jefferson (and Jefferson himself had some doubt upon it, it seems) to acquire territory by treaty or in any other way was denied. It seems to me we fail to see what I think everybody ought to recognize, that it is the right of every sovereign power, every nation, to add to its territory whenever it sees fit. I assert here that the Government of the United States may add territory to territory without any constitutional provision whatever, and that must have been understood by the fathers, because that was a recognized power of sovereignty which they could not have overlooked; and if they had not intended at the time that that should be done, they would have provided against it. They did not provide against it, and in the very beginning of our administration of public affairs we took in the Louisiana purchase.

Now, I have no quarrel with the distinguished Senator from Colorado as to the right of the United States to acquire territory. I agree with him fully. I could not undertake to disagree with him without at least putting myself in opposition to the opinions of the most distinguished jurists of this country and some of the ablest law writers and statesmen we have had. But I do differ with him as to the manner in which that power should be exercised. I say the Constitution puts in the hands of the President the power to annex all the territory that is necessary or proper to annex to this country. It is true that power—

Mr. SPOONER. You do not mean the President alone.

Mr. MALLORY. I was going to say with the consent of the Senate. The President, however, is the mover. The power which the Senate exercises is simply a veto power; it is not the mover. The President is the originator or designer, and the two-thirds of the Senate concurring give vitality and life to the proposed measure and it becomes a part of the supreme law of the land. The contention, however, of the Senator from Colorado is that there is some other power; that there is a power innate and inherent in all sovereigns that authorizes them to annex territory.

Granting that, granting that if we did not have that limitation upon it in the Constitution confining the exercise of the treaty-making power to the Executive, then some other branch of the Government, and possibly Congress, ought to exercise the power, as was the case under the old Confederation, still we have to bear in mind the fact that the framers of the Constitution, knowing at the time what had been the rule under the Confederation and that all treaties had to be subjected to the ratification and approval of Congress, in their deliberations over that branch of the great subject committed to them saw proper and deemed it but just and right that that great power should be confided to the Executive, subject to the approval or disapproval of two-thirds of the Senate.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHILTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. TURPIE. By the courtesy of the honorable Senator, I suggest to the Chair that I have carefully counted the number of Senators present, and I find that there is less than a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The suggestion of the absence of a quorum being made, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Foraker,	Lodge,	Pettus,
Baker,	Frye,	McBride,	Pritchard,
Bate,	Gallinger,	McNery,	Quay,
Berry,	Gear,	Mallory,	Roach,
Burrows,	Gorman,	Martin,	Sewell,
Butler,	Hanna,	Mason,	Shoup,
Chilton,	Hansbrough,	Mills,	Spooner,
Cullom,	Harris,	Money,	Teller,
Daniel,	Hawley,	Morgan,	Turley,
Davis,	Heitfeld,	Morrill,	Turpie,
Elkins,	Hoar,	Pasco,	Wetmore,
Fairbanks,	Kyle,	Pettigrew,	Wilson.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator from Florida kindly yields to me to call up the action of the House of Representatives upon Senate bill 4714. It will take but a short time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes, sir.

HARBOR DEFENSES AND FORTIFICATIONS.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 4714.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes.

The amendments of the House were, on page 1, line 3, after "willfully," to insert "wantonly;" on page 1, line 10, after "system," to insert "or shall knowingly, willfully, or wantonly violate any regulation of the War Department that has been or shall be made for the protection of such mine, torpedo fortification, or harbor-defense system;" on page 2, line 6, after "State," to strike out "or is occupied upon the written consent of the owner of the land."

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SPOONER. I should like to ask the Senator from Connecticut to explain in a word, if he can—and I know he can—the changes made in the Senate bill?

Mr. HAWLEY. I will have to hold it in my hand while I explain the changes, which are not considered material by the Committee on Military Affairs, and they authorize me to move concurrence.

The House have inserted these words:

Or shall knowingly, willfully, or wantonly violate any regulation of the War Department that has been or shall be made for the protection of such mine, torpedo, fortification, or harbor-defense system.

Then they struck out, on page 2, line 6, after the word "State," the words "or is occupied upon the written consent of the owner of the land."

In drawing up the bill originally there was considerable argument about the inability of the Government to get possession of certain land, there being no legislatures in session to cede jurisdiction, and they are going on with those works, wherever the Government intends to place them, in an informal way. The Senate put in the words "or is occupied upon the written consent of the owner of the land."

Mr. HOAR. I think those words ought to stay in. I believe those words were inserted by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. HAWLEY. I was quite satisfied to have them stay in, and it did no hurt at all to show some respect for the man who owns the land. At any rate, we can not do anything else. The committee do not regard the amendments as very material.

Mr. SPOONER. What is the penalty for a violation of the proposed statute?

Mr. HAWLEY. I was about saying that when the bill was up before I think the Senator from Wisconsin had some suggestion to make about it.

Mr. SPOONER. My suggestion when the bill was up before was that the penalty of five years' imprisonment or a fine, or both, for a mere misdemeanor was a little extraordinary, and that it should be changed.

Mr. HAWLEY. The word "misdemeanor" was stricken out in the Senate, and the bill now stands so that the court can classify the offense as it pleases, call it a felony or anything whatever. We simply punish a man for committing this offense.

Mr. SPOONER. What is the fine?

Mr. HAWLEY. A man may destroy $50,000 worth of property by carelessness as to these mines and fortifications, and the fine is not less than $100 nor more than $5,000, or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or with both, at the discretion of the court. There have been some very aggravating incidents.

Mr. SPOONER. And that for any sort of violation of a regulation of the War Department?

Mr. HAWLEY. It would seem to be so if the Senate and the House agree to the bill.

Mr. HOAR. What is the motion?

Mr. HAWLEY. To concur in the three amendments made by the House of Representatives.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, it is not the policy of the Senate, or of any Senator, to be fertile in raising difficulties about legislation required by the war; but we have always objected in the Senate for a great many years to having minimum penalties at all; that is, to having them in any case whatever, unless as to something which of itself must necessarily be of criminal intent and purpose to the greatest degree, like a criminal assault, or in matters of unusual cruelty; but here the court, if there has been a mere mistake, would be absolutely compelled to affix a sentence, and the only remedy would be by the party coming perhaps from California or Washington or Alaska to the seat of government for a pardon.

It seems to me that this fine of not less than $100 ought not to be in the bill, because therefore the judge, if it is a mere accident or mistake, or done in ignorance of the regulations of the War Department, would still be obliged to impose a fine.

Mr. HAWLEY. Do not the words "willfully, wantonly, or maliciously" cover that?

Mr. HOAR. They might cover that part of it as to the ignorance of the regulations of the War Department. We all know that ignorance of the law availeth no man. If his act be willful—and "willfully" applies to the purpose to do the thing—then it is certainly very doubtful indeed whether we can commit criminal legislative power to any Department of the Government, and say that a man shall be punished as a criminal who violates an edict to be hereafter uttered by a particular public officer.

I confess I do not wish to raise questions about this legislation, and I hope the necessity for it will be temporary. I shall not move any amendment, but I think I owe it to myself and to the Senate to call attention to the fact that if I should happen to be here hereafter I never shall agree to treat legislation of this kind as a precedent.

Mr. BATE. I ask that the amendments of the House of Representatives be again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee requests that the amendments of the House of Representatives be again read. They will be read.

The Secretary again read the amendments proposed by the House of Representatives.

Mr. BATE. I ask that the first section may be read as it will stand as proposed to be amended by the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

That any person who shall willfully, wantonly, or maliciously trespass upon, injure, or destroy any of the works or property or material of any submarine mine or torpedo, or fortification or harbor-defense system owned or constructed or in progress of construction by the United States, or shall willfully or maliciously interfere with the operation or use of any such submarine mine, torpedo, fortification, or harbor-defense system, or shall knowingly, willfully, or wantonly violate any regulation of the War Department that has been or shall be made for the protection of such mine, torpedo, fortification, or harbor-defense system, shall be punished, on conviction thereof in a district court of the United States for the district in which the offense is committed, by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or with both, in the discretion of the court.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if this was an original proposition I might be disposed to attempt to get a certain amendment on the bill, but I recognize the fact that this is a war measure and that it would be futile to attempt to oppose it at the present time.

I rose, Mr. President, for another purpose, however. There has been some very severe criticism in certain quarters of Captain Randall, who owns and operates steamboats on the Potomac River, and who has a wharf at River View, within the 2-mile limit fixed by the War Department; and in certain quarters Captain Randall has been called to task and criticised as a man wanting in patriotism because he contended that he had a right, not during the hours set by the War Department, but at other hours, to run his boats to his wharf and to leave his wharf during those hours on his return trips to Washington.

Mr. President, I do not know Captain Randall, but from the knowledge that I have derived of him from other sources I am satisfied he had no purpose to do other than what an honest and honorable and patriotic man would do. He has his money invested in those steamboats and in the wharf at River View, and it is, of course, a hardship for his business to be destroyed even as a consequence of the emergencies of war.

Captain Randall has been acting in strict accord with the advice given him by a very distinguished firm of lawyers in the city of Washington, Messrs. Dudley & Michener, who, of course, we all know to be patriotic and honorable gentlemen.

What I desire to do, Mr. President—and I am sure the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] will not object to it—is to ask to have inserted in the RECORD in connection with this little debate the correspondence between Captain Randall's counsel and the Secretary of War touching this matter, so that both sides of the question will appear: and I think it will be a sufficient vindication of Captain Randall from the aspersions which have been cast upon him in certain quarters. I ask that the correspondence may be inserted in the RECORD without further discussion on my part.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and that order will be made.

The correspondence referred to is as follows:

MAY 21, 1898.

DEAR SIR: We have the honor to represent Capt. E. S. Randall, proprietor of the Potomac River Line Steamboats and the owner of the wharf at River View, Md.

The regulations for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war for friendly vessels and for the protection of the defenses as established by the authority of the Secretary of War, as amended April 27, 1898, provide:

"1. No vessel will be allowed to pass through the channel between the fortifications at Fort Washington, Md., and Sheridan Point, Va., between the hours of 8 p. m. and 4 a. m., or at times of heavy fog. During these periods vessels must not approach within 2 miles of the wharf at Sheridan Point, or within 2 miles above the fortifications at Fort Washington."

"2. No vessel will be allowed to anchor at any time within the above-named limits except by special authority."

"6. Vessels are warned that, if they disregard these regulations, they will expose themselves to serious damage, and will be liable to be fired on by the batteries."

This is signed: "Charles J. Allen, Lieutenant-colonel, Corps of Engineers."

On the 14th day of May, 1898, Mr. Randall received the following communication in answer to a letter from him, in which he requested "permission to land the steamer Samuel J. Pents at River View wharf between the hours of sunset and 10.30 p. m., until further orders from the Department:"

"DEAR SIR: I have fully considered your letter in which you request permission to land the steamer Samuel J. Pents at River View wharf between the hours of sunset and 10.30 p. m., until further orders from the Department. While appreciating the importance to your line of being enabled to land as you suggest, I am unable to grant, or to indorse, your request, as such landing would not be in accordance with the regulations which have been promulgated for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war."

We would respectfully ask your attention to this correspondence. You will observe that the request is for authority to make approach to and effect a landing at River View within the prohibited hours, as they existed before the amended regulation No. 1, dated April 27, 1898, took effect, and that the denial by Colonel Allen of that request is manifestly proper. We beg leave to suggest that it would now be proper, and we hereby respectfully request that you grant special authority in writing to Capt. E. S. Randall as follows:

That when his steamers, the Samuel J. Pents and the River Queen, are landed at his wharf at River View after 4 a. m. and before 8 p. m., without casting any anchors in the stream, and the bows of his said vessels are pointed north, he may be recognized as having the right to leave said wharf, coming away from said channel between Fort Washington and Sheridan Point, returning to the city of Washington, without molestation, between the hours of 8 p. m. and 10.30 p. m., for the purpose of bringing passengers and the United States mail from his said wharf to the city of Washington; the express understanding being that he shall not be thereby granted any authority to approach the said River View landing, or any other point within the limits of the aforesaid regulations from the north, between the hours of 8 p. m. and 4 a. m.

We make this request in order that there may be no misunderstanding between the said owner of the said vessels and the Army authorities, as there is no intention to violate any of the regulations either in spirit or letter, and not because we believe if he were to do so without such special authority from you that he would be violating said regulations either in letter or spirit.

It seems to us too clear for argument that if the said vessels have been landed at said wharf during the hours before 8 p. m. and after 4 a. m., they have been so landed without violation of any regulation of the Department, and we believe that, having been so lawfully landed and being charged with the duty of returning passengers brought to his wharf to the city of Washington, he has the lawful right, strictly within the terms both as to letter and spirit of the regulations, to return to the city of Washington, provided he does not approach any nearer to the engineering obstructions lying in the channel between Fort Washington and Sheridan Point than is allowed, and provided that his progress after leaving the wharf is constantly away from the obstructions and returning to the city of Washington.

It seems to us that this resolution is in some respects similar to that which obtains in your Department. Persons may not be admitted to the Department after 2 o'clock p. m. under the present regulations; but if they are lawfully within the Department upon legitimate business before the hour of 2 p. m. arrives, it should not and does not require any authority to permit them to leave the building.

Both of these regulations are necessary, owing to the existence of war, and we fully recognize their propriety. We also recognize the correctness of the position assumed by Colonel Allen in his letter to Mr. Randall, as the request of Mr. Randall involved the privilege of approaching the obstructions within the then prohibited hours, at least as far as River View wharf, which is some distance above the Fort Washington channel, where the obstructions are, and it would be a violation of that very proper regulation that no vessel should be allowed to approach those obstructions from any direction; but it seems to us that it would be absurd to say that a vessel properly and lawfully within the restricted field which should leave its moorings and proceed away from the obstructions would be in any sense violating the letter or spirit of the regulations.

Moreover, it can not be said that Mr. Randall's vessels, when attached to his wharf by proper lines, and without the casting into the stream of any anchor, could be said to be anchored within the above-named limits.

To recapitulate the matter, we would say that Mr. Randall, in the pursuit of his business as a common carrier and a carrier of the United States mails and of Government supplies to Fort Washington, sends his river steam vessels, the Samuel J. Pents and the River Queen, to River View during the day, and after the hour of 4 a. m. and before 8 p. m., and that when the latter hour arrives he is lawfully within the restricted territory. He has, in our judgment, the undoubted right, under the rules and regulations which you have prescribed and the existing laws of the country, to complete his voyage and return his passengers and the United States mail to the city of Washington after the hour of 8 p. m. without in any manner violating the regulations you have prescribed for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war.

We have, nevertheless, advised him that it would be safer and more prudent to have your full consent in writing thereto, and hence this request is made for such consent in writing.

Respectfully, yours,

DUDLEY & MICHENER.

The SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.

MAY 23, 1898.

DEAR SIR: Referring to our communication of May 21, on behalf of Capt. E. S. Randall, proprietor of the Potomac River Line of steamboats and the owner of the wharf at River View, Maryland, we beg to state that we committed an error at the bottom of the second page and again at the bottom of the fifth page, in naming the steamboats owned by Captain Randall.

Those owned by him and intended to be covered by our communication are the Samuel J. Pents, the Harry Randall, and the Estelle Randall. Please let our letter of the 21st instant stand corrected as above.

Mr. Randall does not own the River Queen, nor is it a part of his line, nor is it intended to be included in our communication. Trusting that we may have an early response to ours of the 21st instant, we remain,

Very truly, yours,

DUDLEY & MICHENER.

The SECRETARY OF WAR,
Washington, D. C.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, June 2, 1898.

GENTLEMEN: In response to your letter of 21st ultimo, requesting in behalf of Capt. E. S. Randall certain privileges in passing through the mine fields of the Potomac River, I beg to inform you that the Chief of Engineers, to whom the matter was referred, reports as follows:

"It appears that the wharf at River View is within the prohibited area closed to navigation between the hours of 8 p. m. and 4 a. m., in accordance with regulations established by authority of the Secretary of War for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war."

"It is contended that vessels having landed at the River View wharf during hours open to navigation thereby acquire the right within the terms of the regulations to return to the city of Washington after prohibited hours. Such contention is purely technical and in violation of the spirit of the regulations."

"While the enforcement of the regulations will undoubtedly entail considerable hardship and probable financial loss to Captain Randall, it is of the highest importance to guard the defenses of the national capital against the operations of spies or other evilly disposed persons."

"The proximity of these defenses to the River View wharf and the presence of large crowds after darkness will make the duty of guarding the defensive works particularly difficult."

"For these reasons the Chief of Engineers is unable to recommend favorable consideration of this application."

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

MESSRS. DUDLEY & MICHENER,
Pacific Building, Washington, D. C.

JUNE 13, 1898.

DEAR SIR: Your esteemed favor of June 2, relative to the communication of Capt. E. S. Randall, of the Potomac Steamboat Company, has been received.

We most respectfully suggest that the matter should receive your careful and personal attention, as the grounds upon which the declination to accede to Captain Randall's very reasonable and modest request do not seem to be based upon sound propositions of law or reason, either under the regulations or under the unquestioned lawful rights possessed by Captain Randall.

The Chief of Engineers, whose language you quote in your letter, ignores entirely the legal propositions involved and, it seems to us, has been led through an excess of zeal to look upon Captain Randall's propositions in an entirely wrong light.

In the first place, Captain Randall asks for no privileges in passing through the "mined fields of the Potomac River." The necessities of his business require that he should pass out of the prohibited territory, 2 miles north of the mined fields, between the hours of 8 p. m. and 4 a. m.

Second. The contention that Captain Randall's vessels, without interference by the Department and without violation of its regulations, have been found at 8 o'clock p. m. within 2 miles of the mined fields is not technical in any sense, nor is it a violation of the spirit of the regulations. He has, under the common law, the laws of navigation, and the regulations of the Department as well, the undoubted legal right to bring his vessels, passengers, and mails out of the proscribed territory. And if, in the pursuance of that undoubted right, the Government should presume, by its vessels or guns, to interfere with him, so long as he is proceeding to take his vessels out of the mined fields, and is not in any way taking them into or nearer it, there is, in our opinion, no question that the courts would restrain the United States from interference of that kind.

Third. The reason given in the third paragraph of the Chief of Engineer's answer is absurd in the highest degree, we think. It is a matter of record that, of his own volition and with the knowledge of the Department, Captain Randall has totally and absolutely removed from his summer resort at River View and its vicinity all small and private boats, and it is impossible for any person to violate the guard which it is the duty of the United States to maintain over its mined fields, by spies and other evilly disposed persons, basing their operations from River View.

The fourth reason stated by the Chief of Engineers is equally absurd, we think. It is not contended for an instant that the regulations prevent Captain Randall from using his vessels for the purpose of conveying his passengers and recreation seekers from the city of Washington to River View between the hours of 4 a. m. and 8 p. m. If there is any danger from the presence of large crowds before darkness at River View, such danger is not recognized nor asserted by the Department in its regulations; but they do recognize the undoubted right of Captain Randall to carry all persons seeking passage on his steamers to River View at any hour between 4 a. m. and 8 p. m. If, therefore, there is no danger, which the Department recognizes, from the presence of large crowds at River View from 4 a. m. to 8 p. m., and if the Department recognizes or asserts that such danger exists after 8 p. m., it ought, in all reason and fairness, to not only countenance but approve of Captain Randall's efforts to remove such crowds from the proximity of River View to the river defenses.

We therefore respectfully urge that within the limits and bounds of a common-sense policy, which is prompted unquestionably by the regulations as they exist, the Department should not impose unnecessary, unreasonable, and technical objections to the efforts of Captain Randall to bring people away from River View, but rather encourage him in the same.

Very truly, yours,

HON. R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

DUDLEY & MICHENER.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, June 28, 1898.

GENTLEMEN: Referring to previous correspondence and to your request of the 13th instant on behalf of Captain Randall for modification of the regulations established for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war, I have to inform you that after careful consideration it has been decided to allow the regulations to stand as they are.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

Messrs. DUDLEY & MICHENER,
Pacific Building, Washington, D. C.

DUDLEY & MICHENER,
ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS AT LAW, PACIFIC BUILDING,
Washington, D. C., July 1, 1898.

DEAR SIR: We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your esteemed favor of June 28, numbered "3830-6" and "referring to regulations for the navigation of Potomac River in time of war."

We dislike to appear contentious in this matter, but, as the subject-matter and the argument contained in our letter of the 13th instant have been utterly ignored, and as your letter indicates that that communication has been construed as a request upon our part, on behalf of Captain Randall, for a modification of the regulations established for the navigation of the Potomac River in time of war, we must call your attention to the fact that we made no such request, nor could anything in our letter of the 13th instant be properly so construed.

If it is the intention of the War Department to close navigation of the Potomac River to all vessels, except those pertaining to the War and Navy Departments, due notice should be given to Captain Randall of that intention. The attitude of the Department would seem to indicate that such was its intention, but, as it is not clearly expressed, we would respectfully ask that we be informed in direct and unequivocal terms as to the intention of the Department with regard to it.

A careful perusal of our communication of the 13th instant will convince you that Captain Randall expressly disclaims any desire or intention to violate the regulations of the Department either in spirit or letter, and it will also convince you that it asks for no modification of those regulations, as he has not in any way violated any of their terms or conditions.

Respectfully,

DUDLEY & MICHENER,
Attorneys for Capt. E. S. Randall.

The SECRETARY OF WAR, Washington, D. C.

Mr. HAWLEY. I can not well criticize the defense of Captain Randall's counsel, not having read it, but I wish to say that the counsel and the Captain knew perfectly well that Captain Randall's steamboat was going over the torpedoes, or between the limits there, against the wishes and warnings of the engineers. It is not a matter which concerns the engineers personally, but it is largely a matter which concerns the people who sail in boats over these mines after 8 o'clock at night. I know it is a sacrifice. Of course it is. You can not defend a river and plant torpedoes without ordering people to keep away at certain hours when the electric connections are properly made.

As to the calamity to Captain Randall, it is nothing in his case compared with what is endured with cheerfulness by the owners of great steamboat lines leaving New York for Connecticut and other States. They were stopped from sending through East River any steamer between 12 o'clock at night and 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning. They have been doing a very large passenger business and a heavy freight business in connection with various railroads. They asked to have the order modified, but they were told by the army engineers that they thought it could not be done, whereupon they stopped their lines, or that branch of them. I think all men ought to cheerfully obey the direction and take heed to the warnings of the engineers in this matter. That is all. I do not wish to scold anybody.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, this matter was before the Committee on Military Affairs, and during the discussion there my attention was drawn to the propriety of the Government taking jurisdiction and administering punishment in a locality where the territory belonged to a State. We corrected that; and that part of the bill was stricken out a while ago.

I must say that I think the objection made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] is very well taken. I do not conceive that this Senate has a right, in its legislative capacity, to pass a penal act for the purpose of punishing parties who violate regulations of the War Department not yet framed or not yet put in force. Hence the words "or shall be" ought to be stricken out of this bill. We can not legislate here, it seems to me, for a punishment to be inflicted upon a violator of regulations of the War Department which have not yet been announced and not yet established. I think we can not do that; it may be possible to do so, but it would be useless and nugatory, and certainly it is improper legislation. I do not think we have the power to do it, and I do not think any court on appeal would sustain any such punishment when the fact was made known that the order had been made by the War Department subsequent to the passage of the act. Punishment for the violation of such an order I do not think would be regarded as legal, or even constitutional.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], that so far as Captain Randall is concerned, or any other commander, he ought to be willing in a time like this to pay heed to the wishes and notices of the War Department in relation to navigation in connection with the operations of the Department.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I think I ought to have added that Captain Randall, through his attorneys, hoped to get a modification of the order; and that really is the explanation of his conduct.

Mr. SPOONER. Of course I think he should have regarded the order, whatever it was. I never heard of the matter before the modification was obtained; but I agree, and every man must agree, that any knowing or wanton—which is the same thing—or willful interference by any person with mines or contrivances for defense authorized by law and under the control of the War Department should be subject to punishment, and severe punishment; but nothing can be plainer than the proposition of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE], that we ought not to adopt, nor can we adopt, regulations yet to be made by some Department of the Government, and punish their infraction by a five-thousand dollar fine or five years imprisonment.

The Congress can make laws, and it may adopt and give the force of law to any regulations now existing made by any Department, and may punish an infraction; but to say "or hereafter to be made" is to intrust to a Department of the Government, upon which the Constitution has not conferred legislative power, the function of making laws for a violation of which men shall be subject to fine and to imprisonment.

While in entire sympathy with this bill, I want to suggest to the Senator from Connecticut who has it in charge that it would be wise, perhaps, to strike out the element of futurity.

Mr. BATE. To strike out those three words "or shall be."

Mr. HAWLEY. I have no objection to concurring in the House amendments with the exception of the words "or shall be."

Mr. BATE. Yes.

Mr. HAWLEY. So as to read:

Or violate any regulation of the War Department that has been made.

Mr. BATE. I will make that motion, so as to put the bill in proper shape.

Mr. HAWLEY. I should like to be instructed by those who know more about these conferences than I do as to whether we can now amend any part of the bill that has met the minds of both Houses.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest, if I have caught this correctly, this is not a conference report, but a Senate bill amended by the House of Representatives. So the Senator can move to nonconcur in those amendments and ask for a conference, and then I think the whole matter can be adjusted.

Mr. SPOONER. We can disagree to the House amendments.

Mr. BATE. All you need do is to move to strike out the words I have named.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator that that can not be done.

Mr. BATE. Do I understand that this is a conference report?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; it is not a conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Chair will suggest that the simplest way would be to move to disagree to the amendments of the House of Representatives and ask for a conference.

Mr. SPOONER. That is the only thing we can do.

Mr. BATE. Why could we not amend the House amendment here? If we can, the motion which I have made is correct and would be in order.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I trust the Senator in charge of this bill will permit it to go over until we have time to ascertain what amendments ought to be made to it.

Mr. HAWLEY. There will be no trouble about that, I think.

Mr. GORMAN. I think from my knowledge of the affair that there is no earthly necessity for the passage of this bill at all, so far as it relates to interference with torpedo and other mines placed in our rivers and harbors by officers of the Government. This is an entirely new feature of warfare which has been adopted, if not hurriedly, certainly with such haste as to greatly impede the commerce of the country. There may be one or two cases, such as the one which was referred to by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], where there has been some determination on the part of the captains of vessels to run over the mines at hours prohibited by the War Department, but in the great ports, such as Boston, New York, and Baltimore, and those south of us, while there was some conflict in the beginning on account of the strict regulations of the Department, the threat to fire, if not the actual firing, upon vessels has prevented any such infringement in the past three or four weeks. I believe that regulation is sufficient. I think the power of the Department at present is sufficient without holding over the heads of these people the threat of imprisonment. I do not believe there is any necessity for it.

I doubt very much whether there is any necessity for the extensive manner in which some of the inland ports have already been mined and have had torpedoes placed in them. There has been great hardship attending it. There may be some military necessity for it which I do not understand, but take this city, for illustration. There is no outlet here for people of ordinary means to get a breath of fresh air except by going down the Potomac River, and yet no one can go from here to Fort Washington and return after 8 o'clock in the evening. This prohibition absolutely destroys the opportunity and renders it impossible for the laboring people and those who are employed in the Departments here to go upon the river in the evening, and they are prevented during this heated term, so that not one of them can leave Washington to go down the river and return after 8 o'clock at night.

Mr. HAWLEY. The mines are located a good many miles down the river.

Mr. GORMAN. Fort Washington is several miles down the river, and it is a great many miles from the mouth of the Chesapeake to Fort Washington.

The regulations of the War Department and the threats to fire on vessels has absolutely stopped excursions down the river. What necessity is there for the provision here imposing imprisonment and a fine of $5,000 for any infringement of the regulations of the Department?

I object to the consideration of the bill with a view of letting it go over and having proper amendments made to it.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not know that a single objection throws the bill over, but possibly it does.

Mr. GORMAN. It was reported here to-day.

Mr. HAWLEY. It is the judgment of all educated military men for twenty, thirty, or forty years that mines and torpedoes of various exploding substances and contrivances are of exceedingly great value in warfare. I know personally of some of the damage that they did on the Southern coast during the war of the rebellion, and we know something of the damage torpedoes did abroad. I think that it is a very serious offense to trifle with them. There have been willful and wanton breaking of the cables in the harbor of New York by fishermen, and if public sentiment justifies the boats of the Army and Navy in firing at some of these wanton, mischievous, dangerous trespassers, it certainly will justify us in adopting a statute which makes an offense of such conduct.

I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and ask for a committee of conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut, that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives, and ask for a committee of conference.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, we have in this country a fixed system of jurisprudence not only in the making of law, but in the administering of it. To the general section of this law providing for the punishment of trespassers against public buildings and fortifications and other structures of that kind I have no objection. I think the action there taken is enough, but the committee by this new enactment propose to make regulations of the War Department the basis for a criminal information or indictment against the citizen. I think that provision ought to be well guarded. I am satisfied that the provision is wholly void so far as it relates to future regulations.

Mr. HAWLEY. We intend to strike that out.

Mr. TURPIE. I wish to speak now of the regulations now in existence. I think it is not sufficient to say "knowingly." I do not think the Senate ought to be satisfied with the word "knowingly," because it may relate to the action, to the method, to the party knowing what he is doing, as well as relate to regulations by the War Department. I therefore suggest that this language be placed in this section: "With notice or knowledge of such regulations."

Mr. HAWLEY. I think these suggestions are valuable, and I ask for a vote on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut, that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and ask for a committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HAWLEY, Mr. SEWELL, and Mr. MITCHELL were appointed.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, when I was interrupted I was reviewing the statements or arguments presented by those gentlemen who favor the adoption of this resolution who have addressed the Senate in support of their views, and I had referred to the expression of view of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who at the time was absent, but whom I see here now, and was calling attention to the view expressed by him. He stated, and I quote his exact language:

I assert here that the Government of the United States may add territory to territory without any constitutional provision whatever, and that must have been understood by the fathers, because that was a recognized power of sovereignty which they could not have overlooked; and if they had not intended at the time that that should be done, they would have provided against it.

Mr. President, I do not purpose just now to criticize the view expressed by the Senator from Colorado, but I would say that the Government of the United States has not overlooked the question of annexation; that there is provision in the Constitution for the exercise of that sovereign power, and that provision, as I think I will be able subsequently to show, amply provides for the annexation of any territory that, in the judgment of those who are exercising the power of this Government, is desirable territory to annex.

Another Senator, who favors the annexation of Hawaii, took occasion to give his reasons as to why this proceeding was constitutional and to combat the views expressed by Senators who oppose this resolution with his expression of opinion as to why the proposed action is constitutional.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], who is undoubtedly very keen in his ability to appreciate a point, and whose fairness in argument, I think, is a model for the Senate, stated in the following language his opinion as to why this resolution could be adopted without any injury to the integrity of the Constitution. He said:

Senators talk about it being unconstitutional to annex except only by treaty, as though the Constitution of the United States had provided that there should be annexation by treaty. Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States is silent on the question of the annexation of territory. It does not seem to have entered into the minds of the framers of the Constitution to put into that instrument any express provision on that subject. They contented themselves, as they wisely did with other subjects, in regard to this subject with a general provision. They gave to Congress the power to promote the general welfare, and that carries along all the implied powers essential to the consummation of that purpose.

When they came to the treaty-making power they did not say in the Constitution what should be the subject-matter of a treaty. They simply said that treaties might be negotiated by the President, subject to ratification by the Senate; they did not say what we should treat about, and I agree with Senators on the other side that a treaty is a contract. You can not have a contract unless you have two parties to it, and you do not have any contract—that has been your contention throughout—until the treaty has been signed on both sides. The very minute that is done one of the parties is gone, and there is no continuing contract. Therefore it is simply a cession on their part and an acceptance on ours, and it might be done just as well by legislation as otherwise.

The same Senator in another portion of his remarks gave utterance to the following:

But that is not this case, and I want to distinguish this case from that. I say, as a broad proposition, that the Congress of the United States has power expressly given to it to promote the general welfare, and if we deem it a promotion of the general welfare to acquire any island of the sea that has its own government—but I will take the case before us—if we deem it to be a promotion of the general welfare to accept the cession from the Republic of Hawaii of all its territory, one of the conditions being that the Republic of Hawaii ceases to be, it is not a proper case for a treaty, for the very minute the treaty is consummated there is no treaty—there is no contract, for one of the contracting parties is politically dead and gone.

The Senator from Ohio takes the position that a treaty of annexation of an entire country is not a treaty. He takes the position that the proposed treaty which is now upon the desk of this body is not a treaty, and necessarily was not rightfully proposed by the Executive to this body for ratification, and it being an impossibility by reason of the fact that this was not a treaty arising from the extinction of one of the parties almost simultaneously with the signing of the treaty, there must be some other method, and that method is to be found in the general-welfare clause. I do not exactly understand which one of the two clauses in the Constitution referring to the general welfare the Senator from Ohio had in mind, and I should be glad if he would specifically state whether the general welfare mentioned in the preamble to the Constitution or the general welfare referred to in the taxing provision is the particular general welfare that he refers to, or whether there is any other.

Mr. FORAKER. I understood the Senator to address an inquiry to me?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. I did not have the Constitution before me, but I had in mind, when I used the language to which the Senator has called attention, the general provision of the Constitution empowering Congress to do certain things, among others to provide for the general welfare.

Mr. MALLORY. The Constitution in its preamble speaks of the general welfare, and also in section 8 of Article I.

Mr. FORAKER. My contention, as I recalled at the time the provision of the Constitution without stopping to look at it, was simply that Congress was especially invested with the power to provide for the general welfare. I was not undertaking to quote the language of the Constitution, but I merely referred to the fact, as I understood it, that it was competent for Congress to judge what was the promotion of the general welfare and provide accordingly. In the section to which the Senator doubtless refers, section 8 of Article I, it is provided as follows:

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare, etc.

I was speaking in a general way, without having any particular section in mind, of what I conceive to be the unquestioned power of Congress, namely, to take care of the interests of this country, and whenever they require the doing of something, even though it be the acquisition of an island in order that our general welfare may be promoted, that the Congress can do it.

I think there have been such cases. Since I made the remark to which the Senator has called attention, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] has called my attention to a case which occurred while Mr. Webster was Secretary of State—a case where property was acquired from another country without any treaty, and simply by act of Congress. I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts to call the attention of the Senator from Florida to that case. It did not seem to occur to Mr. Webster, who had some reputation in his day as a constitutional lawyer, that there was any infirmity in the power of Congress to do that.

Mr. MALLORY. I desired merely to understand the point made by the Senator from Ohio, because I did not wish to misrepresent him or to misstate his argument. As I understand his argument, it is that by reason of the fact that as soon as the treaty is ratified, the sovereignty of the Hawaiian Islands ceases, there is no treaty. Consequently, there must be some other way in a case of that kind of annexing territory, and therefore the power must reside in Congress. Why should it rest in Congress any more than in the judiciary or in the executive does not appear, but that, I believe, is the argument, which I desire to state fairly, because it is the argument of the opposite side that we have to meet. We have had but few; very able, it is true.

Another distinguished Senator, advocating the adoption of the joint resolution, had the courage of his convictions and favored his brethren of this body with them. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] took occasion not so much to answer any objection as to the unconstitutionality of the measure, as to tell us how the job could be done, and if I am not mistaken—it is not my wish or purpose to misstate the Senator's position—his position was that this could be done, because if we did it, whether rightly or wrongly, whether constitutionally or unconstitutionally, once done it was irrevocable, and there was no power on earth that could inquire into its propriety, its rectitude, or its constitutionality. That, Mr. President, I do not think is an overstatement of the view expressed by the distinguished Senator from Nevada. His remarks in that connection have not yet appeared in the RECORD; at least they had not when I yesterday endeavored to look for them, and I have to state from memory the position which he took.

But as I understand his contention, it is that it makes no difference whether the Constitution authorizes this proceeding or whether it prohibits it, impliedly or expressly; that if we do it, no court in the United States has the right to investigate it; there is no proceeding by which it can be inquired into; and that once done, it will be accomplished and that will be the end of it. That is an enunciation of political ethics that I think has been made in this Chamber for the first time. I shall not undertake to do more with reference to it than merely to announce it. I confess I was surprised that such a proposition should be submitted to the Senate, but I do not think it is entirely out of keeping with some of the arguments which I have heard urged in favor of this measure.

One more of the advocates and exponents of this measure has been heard upon the floor of the Senate, and that is the distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS], who spoke to-day. I was unable to follow entirely the argument of the distinguished Senator, but as far as I could observe as to its bearing on the constitutional question involved in this case the Senator argued that Congress had the war-making power, that it could by war annex territory, and that it was absurd to argue that when Congress could plunge this country into a condition of war and could annex thereby any quantity of territory, Congress did not have the power peaceably and by the processes of legislation to annex the same territory.

The Senator contended that a great part of the territory of this country was acquired by war, and I understood him to defy anybody to show that the territory of New Mexico was not acquired by war. I have great respect for the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. PETTUS. I admitted that the title was quieted by treaty, but not acquired.

Mr. MALLORY. That is a question I will not undertake to discuss with the Senator. I merely wish to call the Senator's attention to the fact that there was a treaty, which I have here.

Mr. PETTUS. I so stated.

Mr. MALLORY. I did not catch the Senator's remark at the time of his speech. However, while the war power is undoubtedly one of the powers under which territory can be annexed, in the majority of instances, even when the war power is invoked, while territory is held by our Government in the custody of the military it is not annexed, and in the majority of instances it is never annexed until the treaty steps in. I know the Senator disputes that. The Senator draws a distinction between the annexation of the Territory of New Mexico and the acquiring of title. Chief Justice Marshall, in a case which has been referred to in this debate incidentally, touched upon this subject, and while it may be considered obiter dictum, it was the opinion of that distinguished gentleman and I think was pertinent to the case which was before the court. It is the case of the American Insurance Company and others vs. Canter, 1 Peters. The Chief Justice, in speaking of the treaty power, says:

The Constitution confers absolutely on the Government of the Union the powers of making war and of making treaties. Consequently that Government possesses the power of acquiring territory either by conquest or by treaty.

That proposition is repeated again and again in the decisions of the Supreme Court down to a comparatively recent decision, the Mormon Church case, in 136 United States Reports. Chief Justice Marshall, going on, says:

The usage of the world is, if a nation be not entirely subdued, to consider the holding of conquered territory as a mere military occupation until its fate shall be determined at the treaty of peace.

I invite the attention of the Senator from Alabama to that expression.

If it be ceded by the treaty, the acquisition is confirmed, and the ceded territory becomes a part of the nation to which it is annexed either on the terms stipulated in the treaty of cession or on such as its new master shall impose.

There the learned Chief Justice lays down the proposition that unless we actually subdue the country, so long as there is any vestige of its own sovereignty left, the territory is acquired by treaty, notwithstanding it is in the military possession of the Government.

In the case of New Mexico, the Government of Mexico was not entirely subdued, and if the Chief Justice's opinion is worth anything, our holding of that territory was simply a military holding; and while it may have been, to a certain extent, an instrumentality in acquiring the territory, it was not the instrumentality by which the territory was acquired, for that was acquired by the treaty.

I have gone now over the arguments, I believe. These are all which have been urged in this body in behalf of the constitutionality of the joint resolution. We have the report of the committee with its refutation of alleged objections by those opposed to annexation. We have the argument by the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], giving it as his opinion that the United States has the sovereign power and can exercise that sovereign power in the acquisition of territory at any time. We have the argument by the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] that a treaty which annexes an entire sovereignty is not a treaty, and therefore we must fall back upon some other inherent and innate power of Congress to annex territory.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator from Florida allow me? What I said, when fairly construed, was that it was not a continuing contract; that it was consummated by the transaction; it was concluded.

Mr. MALLORY. The Senator did, I believe—

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Ohio said it could not be a treaty; that one party to it died by the terms of the contract, and, therefore, it was not a contract. In other words, it was not a treaty.

Mr. FORAKER. It was not a treaty; rather it was not any longer a treaty, according to the definition contended for by Senators in opposition; their definition was that a treaty was a contract. I say there can not be a contract without contractual relations, and there can not be contractual relations without the existence of at least two parties. It would be simply an executed contract.

Mr. MALLORY. I understood the Senator also to contend that it could not be a treaty even beforehand.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes. I was simply replying to the argument made on the other side in that connection and agreeing with Senators who made that contention, that there was not, of course, any treaty until the instrument was signed and ratified, and that there could not be afterwards any treaty, because in the very moment of signing and ratifying one of the parties perished.

Mr. MALLORY. But there was a signing before the disappearance or the destruction of the party took place.

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly. There was the signing before, but the signing which we now have is not effectual to create a treaty until it has been ratified by the Senate. The very minute the last act is done there is nothing but an executed transaction, and until it is consummated there is nothing—

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me for a moment?

Mr. FORAKER. I was contending that the term "treaty" implied an existing and continuing contractual relation between existing parties, and therefore any transaction that did not involve that idea was not so properly the subject-matter of a treaty as it was of legislation, if it could be effected by legislation, and my contention was that it could be effected by legislation.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator says "not so properly." His argument was that it could not at all. It is not a question of degree. It is a question of possibility. The Senator correctly says a treaty is a contract between two sovereign States. There could not be a unilateral treaty.

Mr. FORAKER. In using the word "properly" I was referring to what I said the other day. If the Senator will recall what I said, I used that term and modified my claim in that way, because I was contending that while this was, in my judgment, the more proper way to proceed, yet in legal effect the result by treaty was the same, because the very moment it was consummated the party ceased to be, that was the end of it, and there was nobody left to complain.

Mr. SPOONER. My friend the Senator from Ohio is a good lawyer. He is analytical and he is accurate. But there is no middle ground. He has to take one side or the other. A contract between nations, by the very terms of which the moment it becomes effective one dies, the Senator says is not a treaty. Now, that being true, how can he say that it may be more properly done by legislation than by some way that is not a treaty?

Mr. FORAKER. It does not seem to me that there is any difficulty about it at all. There is a contract even in the case of the party ceasing to be who enters into the contract with us; it is a contract, but not a continuing one. There is a contract whenever the minds meet. But because it is not a continuing contract, but a consummated transaction, I do not think it requires a treaty for its consummation.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. When the minds meet, there is an agreement which is to be formulated; they put it into legal form and execute it; and my contention is that the contract ceases to be, except only as an executed contract, with its execution. I used the word "properly," having relation to what I have said here briefly and what I said at some length when I spoke upon this subject the other day.

Mr. SPOONER. I understood the Senator the other day to say that the very idea and essence of a treaty, which is a compact between sovereign states, was that there should be two parties and a continuing obligation.

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly I did; and I say so still.

Mr. SPOONER. Allow me for a moment. That where, by the very terms of the contract itself, the moment it became effective one party to it was to be effaced, was to die; that that was not and could not be a treaty within the meaning of that word as used in the Constitution.

Mr. FORAKER. And as used ordinarily.

Mr. SPOONER. Well, as used in the Constitution, because the word as used in the Constitution has to be construed in its ordinary acceptance. There is great power—there is no question about that—in the position of the Senator from Ohio, and there never has been such a treaty made by the United States. Now, what I want to ask my friend is, accepting that as true and that under the Constitution a treaty or the power to make treaties does not cover such an arrangement as was proposed with Hawaii, leaving the field of diplomacy and treaty and going into the field of legislation, where does he find the authority to admit by resolution a sovereign country as a territory? As I understood the Senator the other day, he finds it under the general-welfare clause.

Mr. FORAKER. I said under the inherent power and also under the general-welfare clause; but I said in the same connection there are Senators here who have been taking exception to the proposition that there was this inherent power, and for that reason I would not then stop to discuss that question.

Mr. SPOONER. Which does my friend say it is?

Mr. FORAKER. For the sake of argument I would pass it by, although I thought the power was to be found inherent in our sovereignty—attached to it necessarily as a part of our sovereignty as a nation; and I said it was also to be found in the Constitution—expressly conferred upon Congress by that provision of the Constitution which authorizes Congress to provide for the general welfare.

Mr. SPOONER. Does my friend claim that the source of power is to be found in both?

Mr. FORAKER. I do. I think so.

Mr. SPOONER. It is the higher law?

Mr. FORAKER. I do not call it any higher law. The proposition is that it is inherent in sovereignty to do whatever sovereignty may see fit to do, and among other things to acquire territory. The Senator from Wisconsin will admit that sovereignty ordinarily carries with it the inherent power to annex territory. I assume that he will admit it. If he will not, he will dissent now. His contention is that the United States—

Mr. SPOONER. I have made no contention.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, so far as I understand the views of the Senator from Wisconsin, judging from the intimations he has thrown out here, his idea is that because our Government is one of limited powers—

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. Having no power except only that which is expressly delegated by the Constitution—

Mr. SPOONER. Not at all. I understand that the constitution of a State is a limitation. I understand that the Constitution of the United States is a grant.

Mr. FORAKER. Now, that is just the same thing—

Mr. SPOONER. Allow me to finish. I understand that the Congress of the United States has such legislative power as is granted to it expressly by the Constitution or by reasonable and necessary implication under the Constitution. When you leave the granted and implied powers, I want to know where the Senator gets his theory of inherent sovereignty outside of the Constitution.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not leave the granted and implied powers. I find it in the implied power. I do not differ from the Senator from Wisconsin as to the definition he gives as to the power of the States and the powers of the General Government.

Mr. SPOONER. Exactly.

Mr. FORAKER. It is true, of course, that the constitutions of the States are instruments of limitation and the Constitution of the United States is an instrument of grant. The Constitution of the United States grants certain powers, but the powers granted are not only those which are expressed, but also those which are implied.

Mr. SPOONER. Now, what I want to ask my honorable friend—

Mr. FORAKER. And among the implied powers is this power inherent in every other sovereignty.

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, well, inherent.

Mr. FORAKER. Now, let me put a point to the Senator from Wisconsin. I was talking with him in his seat a few minutes ago, and I trust I may with propriety recur to that conversation now. He was discussing this same proposition, and I know what his idea is about it, and I answered it then as I want to answer it here. We must agree that as to the thirteen States before they came in, when they were States, before they accepted the Constitution, each one was a sovereignty. Each one of those sovereign States had every power that sovereignty enjoys ordinarily, and among the powers so enjoyed by each one of the sovereign States was the power to make treaties with foreign nations, and any kind of a treaty it might choose to make, because there was no restriction unless by itself upon the exercise of that power. It could make war; it could make a treaty for the acquisition of territory; it could annex in any way it saw fit to annex.

But, Mr. President, no Senator here will contend that any State in this Union has that power now. That power has been lost to each and every State of the Union. As the price for coming into the Union, it was required to surrender it. The Constitution of the United States prohibits to the States the exercise of the treaty-making power with foreign nations. It prohibits all kinds of transactions on the part of States with foreign nations. No State could acquire territory by treaty or in any other manner.

Therefore each one of the States in the Union has surrendered that power of sovereignty. No one of them has it. Are we to be told that that inherent power of sovereignty, which every State enjoyed before it came into the Union, has been lost to the States and has not been given to any other power? What has become of it? Where has it gone? Our contention is that when to the States was denied this power, which they had a right to exercise as a sovereign power, it went by implication to the General Government among the implied powers, and it is not any "higher law." It seems to me it is but the necessary and legitimate result of a fair construction of the provisions of the Constitution.

Mr. SPOONER. Now, will my friend allow me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. I am only asking for information.

Mr. FORAKER. I shall be very glad to give any information I can to the Senator from Wisconsin, but it is very difficult to inform the Senator from Wisconsin on a legal proposition.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator from Ohio says there are two forms of States, and that under the Confederation the States had the power to enter into treaty with foreign Governments, as I understood him.

Mr. FORAKER. I did not say under the Confederation. I said independently and without regard to the Constitution, when they were free to act as States as they saw fit to act, to determine whether they would come into the Union or remain States.

Mr. SPOONER. Very good. Then I will change the phrase of the proposition, although it means the same thing. Prior to the adoption of the Constitution the States had the power to enter into treaties with foreign governments, and they surrendered to the Federal Government by the adoption of the Constitution the power to enter into treaties with foreign governments, did they not?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. To what branch of the Federal Government did they give that power?

Mr. FORAKER. It would necessarily go to the political department and branch of the Government. It would not, of course, go to the judiciary without express provision; it goes as an implied power to the General Government.

Mr. SPOONER. That is as universal as the air we breathe.

Mr. FORAKER. Does the Senator mean to assert that the General Government has the power but is incapable of exercising it because no agency has been designated in the Constitution for the exercise of it?

Mr. SPOONER. No; but an agency was designated in the Constitution for the exercise of the power to make treaties with foreign governments, which by the adoption of the Constitution the States surrendered.

Mr. FORAKER. But has not the Senator from Wisconsin just now contended that this could not in the nature of things be a treaty?

Mr. SPOONER. I am not talking about—

Mr. FORAKER. If it is not a treaty, are we not entirely estopped by the argument of the Senator from Wisconsin from acquiring territory when we take in the whole of a territory and not simply a part?

Mr. SPOONER. The trouble with my friend from Ohio is that he decides my proposition before he knows what it is.

Mr. FORAKER. The trouble with the Senator from Ohio is that he does not want the Senator from Wisconsin to misstate his proposition.

Mr. SPOONER. I did not intend to do so.

Mr. FORAKER. Of course he would not do so intentionally.

Mr. SPOONER. All I meant to say was this: I agree entirely with the Senator from Ohio that beyond the limitations of the Constitution, treating the States each as independent sovereignties, the States had the right to enter into contracts with foreign governments, and when they entered into the Union and became a part of the Constitution of the United States they surrendered, of course, the right to enter into contracts with foreign governments, whether you call that a treaty, or an agreement, or a compact. But by the Constitution itself, to which they agreed, they designated the department of the Federal Government to which they surrendered the power to enter into contracts and compacts and treaties with foreign governments. That was not the Congress of the United States, but the President of the United States and the Senate. That is all I meant to say, and that, I think, my friend will not controvert.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; I do controvert it most positively, for my contention is that nowhere in the Constitution is it expressed what shall be the subject-matter of a treaty.

Mr. SPOONER. I agree to that.

Mr. FORAKER. Nor a proper case for a treaty.

Mr. SPOONER. I agree to that.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not understand that the annexing power must be exercised in the way indicated by the Senator from Wisconsin, but when we have a case arising which it is admitted, as the Senator from Wisconsin admits, is not a proper case for treaty—

Mr. SPOONER. No.

Mr. FORAKER. I understand the Senator to say "no," but surely he has been arguing that he agrees with me that this is not a proper case in the ordinary sense for a treaty, that a treaty implies a continuing contract. I will state the difference between us, as I understand it. His contention is that when we come to a place where we can not act by treaty we can not act at all. He agrees with me that we should not act by treaty when the whole foreign country is to be brought in. There I differ from him. I say when it comes to a case not proper to be dealt with by treaty, then we can act by the Congress of the United States, where all powers are lodged that belong to the Government not expressly lodged elsewhere.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him if a constitution or a statute can operate extraterritorially?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly not. We went over that a few days ago pretty thoroughly, and it seemed to be agreed all around that that proposition was well taken.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Constitution is confined to the territory of the Government and can not reach to the territory and people of another government, and the statute is confined to the territory and the people of the Government and can not reach the people of another government, how can you annex those people by a law?

Mr. FORAKER. You can not annex that people by a law or by a joint resolution without the consent of the people.

Mr. ALLEN. No; but—

Mr. FORAKER. We can simply propose if we originate the transaction, or accept if they originate it.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Constitution and statute begin and end on territorial limitation, how can you annex a people beyond that limitation by statute?

Mr. FORAKER. We have this kind of a law in the State of Ohio, applicable to cities of the first grade of the first class. It provides that in any city of the first grade of the first class there may be an annexation of territory whenever outlying, contiguous territory will comply with certain terms and conditions, with a view of annexation, which the statute designates. Now, the first step is for the city to legislate by ordinance its side of the contract. That has no jurisdiction or no effect beyond the city limits. But when it is met on the other side by proper action on the part of contiguous territory, then it is provided that it may be regarded as annexed, and the city jurisdiction extends to it. Now, it is upon the same general principle, though, of course, not in the same way.

Mr. ALLEN. That is a case of municipal extension.

Mr. SPOONER. As I understand the argument of the Senator, it is that any agreement or contract, sub modo, I submit, which under the Constitution can not be entered into with a foreign government by the President and the Senate must of necessity be entered into by Congress with a foreign government.

Mr. FORAKER. I did not fully answer the Senator from Nebraska, but, if he will allow me, I will make answer now to the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin. My contention is that this Government is not without power to annex the Hawaiian Islands, and inasmuch as the proposition comes to us from the Government that covers the whole of the territory belonging to it, and inasmuch as that contracting party is to be absolutely absorbed by us—territory, people, government, all powers and all functions, and they are to cease to exist—I contend that not by treaty but by the joint resolution which we have under consideration is the most appropriate way for the annexation.

Mr. SPOONER. Of course—

Mr. FORAKER. I am not willing to admit that we are without power to accept the whole of the territory when it is offered to us, and I do not understand how Senators can conceive that we can take a part and then deny to us the power to take it all.

Mr. ALLEN. I agree with the Senator, if the Senator will permit me—

Mr. SPOONER. Then the Senator will say, if the Senator from Nebraska will excuse me a moment, we can not find in the Constitution the power to take another sovereignty and government; we must find it somewhere else.

Mr. FORAKER. I contend that we do find it in the Constitution.

Mr. SPOONER. Where?

Mr. FORAKER. In the implied power and—

Mr. SPOONER. What implied power?

Mr. FORAKER. You admit that the—

Mr. SPOONER. No matter what I admit. What implied power?

Mr. FORAKER. That our Government has the power inherent in all sovereignty unless denied—

Mr. SPOONER. I did not say that.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator agreed with me a while ago, as I understood, that if a State of the Union could step back out of the Union and be a State independent of the Union and not be bound by the Constitution, it would have a right to negotiate a treaty.

Mr. SPOONER. I think Great Britain inherently could annex the United States, but I doubt whether Congress could annex Great Britain.

Mr. FORAKER. I understand the proposition. Does the Senator think that Great Britain has more sovereign power than one of the States of this Union would have if she were to step back into her statehood?

Mr. SPOONER. I did not say that.

Mr. FORAKER. I did not think the Senator would.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not have to say that.

Mr. ALLEN. There comes the distinction between the construction of a State constitution and a Federal Constitution.

Mr. FORAKER. Let me finish so as to have in full my answer to the Senator from Wisconsin. My contention is that each and every State of this Union has exactly the same power to annex territory that England has, were the State separated from the Union and not bound by the Constitution and not limited by her own constitution; that is, that the people are a sovereign power. They have a right, of course, to place upon the government they may institute in their States such limitations as they see fit; but if they do not limit the power of sovereignty, each and every State has a right to annex Great Britain if she sees fit to do it and can agree with Great Britain upon the terms; and I contend that that same power thus conceded to the State is lodged somewhere to-day. The State that comes into this Union must surrender the power. Where does it go? I contend that it goes to the General Government. That is my view of it.

Mr. SPOONER. Could Great Britain annex the United States without a contract with the United States?

Mr. FORAKER. I do not suppose she would annex us without having our consent in some form or other.

Mr. SPOONER. Where does Congress get the power to enter into a compact or contract or agreement with a foreign nation?

Mr. FORAKER. My contention is simply that the inherent power of sovereignty, which you must admit belongs in the State, in the people of the State, exists still somewhere, and that it now belongs to the General Government.

Mr. SPOONER. No, but—

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator admits it is not in the State?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. FORAKER. It has been given to the General Government. It is one of the implied powers of government. You ask what particular department of the Government has it. No particular department of the Government is expressly empowered by the Constitution to exercise that power, but the Congress of the United States has all the powers of government that belong to the Government delegated by the States that are not expressly given to some other department of the Government, and if that power be not given to some other department of the Government and yet be given to the General Government, where can it reside except only in Congress?

Mr. ALLEN. If we have the implied power to annex a country by an implication of sovereignty, have we also the implied power to surrender our country to be annexed to another?

Mr. FORAKER. I suppose if the people of this country should desire it to be annexed to some other country, they could bring it about.

Mr. ALLEN. I am now talking about Congress, or the Government proper.

Mr. FORAKER. I think not at all.

Mr. ALLEN. Why not? Is not that a corollary of the other proposition?

Mr. FORAKER. We have simply delegated powers, and it is not an express power or an implied power that we should barter away the sovereignty of our country and the control of government of our country. But in the case before us it is different. The Government of the Republic of Hawaii is expressly empowered to do this identical thing by the constitution—the organic law of those islands.

Mr. ALLEN. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. SPOONER. Can Hawaii make a treaty with the Congress of the United States?

Mr. FORAKER. As I said the other day, that is a question that Hawaii can take care of.

Mr. SPOONER. That is the question we have got to take care of.

Mr. FORAKER. Suppose Hawaii has made a treaty?

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator answer my question? The constitution of Hawaii authorizes the cession, if you call it so, of the land and the sovereignty by treaty. Now, can Congress make a treaty with Hawaii?

Mr. FORAKER. I do not know what interpretation they put upon that. I should have some hesitation in saying that she could, but I do not have any hesitation in saying it is exactly within the spirit and intent of the framers of that organic law, that if she comes forward and accepts the tender we now make by this joint resolution, and we take possession of the island, I think the annexation will be effectual.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator one more question, with the permission of the Senator from Florida. Where the Constitution points out specifically a method of annexation, does it not by implication exclude all other methods?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; I would think so.

Mr. ALLEN. When the Constitution provides that these things shall be accomplished by a treaty which shall be initiated by the President and concurred in by two-thirds of the Senate, does not that exclude every other method of annexation?

Mr. FORAKER. If any such provision as that were found in the Constitution, that might be contended for; but as I said the other day in the colloquy I had with the Senator from Nebraska, I do not understand that there is any such provision in the Constitution.

Mr. ALLEN. I understand that to be there.

Mr. FORAKER. I can not quote the exact language, but the Constitution of the United States simply provides that this Government may make treaties.

Mr. ALLEN. The President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes, the President shall make a treaty and it shall be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. But it is nowhere stated in the Constitution, and nowhere else is it stated outside of the Constitution that I know of except only by Senators in this debate, that the annexation of territory must of necessity be by treaty. We all agree that it is a proper subject-matter in certain cases. Some of us deny that it is a proper subject-matter in particular cases. My contention is that it is not in this case necessary to resort to a treaty.

Mr. ALLEN. What is the treaty-making power, and to what does it extend?

Mr. FORAKER. It is the President of the United States and the Senate.

Mr. ALLEN. It embraces every subject-matter that may be in controversy between nations, does it not?

Mr. TELLER. No, it does not.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator from Nebraska has said so. I do not concur in that proposition. That is what I have been arguing.

Mr. TELLER. Our treaty-making power would not include everything that could be done.

Mr. ALLEN. What is there in the relation between two nations that does not fall within the treaty-making power of the United States?

Mr. TELLER. Mr. Jefferson said he had looked over the treaty made with Great Britain before the Jay treaty was made, before any other treaty, and he found a few things, not more than five or six, which might not have been included under the Constitution. He does not say what they were, but there were some. I can name one to the Senator, and that is the question of revenue. There can be no treaty made that will bind the Government of the United States concerning the raising of revenue.

Mr. ALLEN. Very well; that in its very nature is altogether domestic and can not be the subject of a treaty.

Mr. TELLER. It is not because it is domestic; it is because the Constitution has put that business in the hands of Congress exclusively.

Mr. ALLEN. No, Mr. President, not necessarily so, because the raising of revenue is purely a domestic matter. It lies at the foundation of the life of the nation, and it must be exercised by the Government alone without the consent or participation of a foreign power. But I say that neither Mr. Jefferson nor any other man in the history of this country has ever held that there is a solitary thing which may be in controversy between nations as such that is not properly reached by the treaty-making power, including the power of annexation. That being true, the Constitution pointing out substantially the course to be pursued, it impliedly excludes every other power or every other method.

Mr. FORAKER. I intended to draw attention, and will do so in order that it may appear in the RECORD in this connection, to the third paragraph of section 10 of the first paragraph of the Constitution, which is as follows:

No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

There, in other words, is a denial to the State of the exercise of the treaty-making power. No State shall be allowed to make any contract with any other State or with any foreign power, and the denial of that power to the State, a power that it did admittedly have before it came into the Union, was by implication a grant of it to the General Government, because the power must, of necessity, rest and abide somewhere.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator will follow that up, he will find another provision which invests the treaty-making power in the President of the United States and two-thirds of the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; that is true.

Mr. ALLEN. When that power is expressly conferred on the President and on two-thirds of the Senate, can it be exercised by the other House?

Mr. FORAKER. Of course, the treaty-making power can not be exercised by Congress. The only point in the whole controversy is whether or not this is necessarily the subject-matter of a treaty, whether or not this is an exercise of the treaty-making power. My contention is that it is not necessarily so.

Mr. MALLORY. The position which the Senator from Ohio has taken struck me at the time when he assumed it some days ago as being the only position that those who advocate with him the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands under this resolution could sustain.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] proclaimed the fact that he did not believe that you could annex any territory by treaty at all, in the face of the history of this country and the precedents established by the annexation of Louisiana, Florida, and other territories to this country. The Senator from Nevada found it was necessary, in order for him to maintain his position, that he should adopt that extraordinary attitude before the Senate; that is, that the treaty-making power did not include the annexation of territory from foreign countries.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator refers to my position, which I think he does not quite fully understand.

Mr. MALLORY. I should be glad to be corrected.

Mr. TELLER. I did not mean to say, and I do not think I have said, that there might not be specific power under the Constitution to acquire territory. It may be included in the power to admit new States. I do not say that it is not. What I intended to say was that if the power could not there be found—which has been a mooted question, and very ably discussed on very many occasions by very strong men on both sides—if it could not be found there, it certainly could be found in the general authority of every sovereign power.

Now, I want to read, without committing myself to either proposition; that is to say, I do not wish now to commit myself to the proposition that you may not under the power to admit States take in territory which did not belong to the Government at that time; but I want to read to the Senator from Florida, who is a Democrat, what Mr. Jefferson said about this question when the Constitution was new. I suppose the fact that Mr. Jefferson subsequently modified his views about twenty years later will not at all militate against the strength of his statement as he then made it. After he had taken the step and made the treaty he wrote a letter to Mr. Breckenridge which is dated on the 12th of August, 1803. I will not read the whole of the letter; but I will say, if I get an opportunity for half an hour, I shall hereafter present some authorities on this constitutional question, but I do not want to do it in the time of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. SPOONER. Will half an hour be sufficient time for the Senator's deliverance?

Mr. TELLER. I think I can fairly present the initiatory in half an hour.

Speaking of this treaty, Mr. Jefferson says:

This treaty must of course be laid before both Houses, because both have important functions to exercise respecting it.

That is, the House of Representatives had to appropriate for the payment of the money.

They, I presume, will see their duty to their country in ratifying and paying for it, so as to secure a good which would otherwise probably be never again in their power. But I suppose they must then appeal to the nation for an additional article to the Constitution approving and confirming an act which the nation had not previously authorized. The Constitution has made no provision for our holding foreign territory, still less for incorporating foreign nations into our Union. The Executive in seizing the fugitive occurrence which so much advances the good of their country, have done an act beyond the Constitution.

It is not possible for language to more plainly set out the opinion of Mr. Jefferson upon that act of his. He continues:

The Legislature, in casting behind them metaphysical subtleties and risking themselves like faithful servants, must ratify and pay for it and throw themselves on their country for doing for them unauthorized what we know they would have done for themselves had they been in a situation to do it. It is the case of a guardian investing the money of his ward in purchasing an important adjacent territory and saying to him when of age: "I did this for your good. I pretend to no right to bind you. You may disavow me, and I must get out of the scrape as I can. I thought it my duty to risk myself for you."

Then he speaks of what the nation will do, and he says:

But we shall not be disavowed by the nation, and their act of indemnity will confirm and not weaken the Constitution, by more strongly marking out its lines.

The remainder of the letter does not refer to this question.

Mr. BACON. The Senator will doubtless remember the fact that in that same communication, I think it was, Mr. Jefferson pointed out the fact that what he had done had to be followed by a treaty by the Senate and by an appropriation by Congress. I think the Senator will find it in the same document.

Mr. TELLER. I think not.

Mr. BACON. If not in that document, there is no question about the fact that Mr. Jefferson does lay down the proposition that it must be by treaty, and that the money to pay for it must be appropriated by Congress.

Mr. TELLER. He does not lay it down that it must be by treaty; and if the Senator will show me where that is, or that it can be done in any other way, I shall be glad.

Mr. BACON. I can do it.

Mr. TELLER. I shall be glad of it. Undoubtedly Mr. Jefferson understood at that time that that was the proper method. I am not myself assailing that method, but I do not recollect that Mr. Jefferson said it could only be done by treaty. When he declared under the Constitution that it could not be done at all, how could he have said that?

Mr. BACON. Mr. President—

Mr. TELLER. Wait a minute. How could Mr. Jefferson have said it could be done by treaty and treaty alone, when he declared it could not be done at all within constitutional limits? Any other method would have been just as legal as this method, and he said you could not do it at all without a violation of the Constitution.

Mr. BACON. The Senator will recognize the fact, as everybody recognizes it, that Mr. Jefferson was not correct, and the Supreme Court of the United States have held that for the purpose of erecting a Territory into a State the United States Government is competent to acquire territory, and the only question is how it shall be done.

But, if the Senator will pardon me a moment, as he challenged the correctness of my statement—and I will get the book directly and show it to him—the statement of Mr. Jefferson was this: That what had been done must be followed by two things—by a ratification of the act by the treaty-making power and by an appropriation of money to pay for it by Congress.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, yes.

Mr. BACON. It must be done in that way.

Mr. TELLER. But Mr. Jefferson does not say anywhere that I have been able to find in his writings—and I have been somewhat familiar with them for many years—that that is the only method, because he says that was not the method at all at that time. I believe about 1823 there could be found some expressions in Mr. Jefferson's writings from which it would appear that he changed his views where he was speaking of the power of the Government through a treaty, but he is very explicit—and I shall, if I have an opportunity, present the authorities—in the declaration that there were some things that could not be done by treaty.

Mr. BACON. I desire to ask the Senator there, with his permission and the permission of the Senator from Florida, one question, and that is, whether he recognizes that it is legitimate to acquire territory of a foreign government by treaty with this Government?

Mr. TELLER. I have stated that.

Mr. BACON. I understand the Senator to say that it is. Am I correct?

Mr. TELLER. Yes.

Mr. BACON. Then I want to ask the Senator if he contends that there is concurrent jurisdiction to acquire foreign territory both in the treaty-making power and in the Congress? Is that the position of the Senator?

Mr. TELLER. That is exactly my position, and that has been the position of the Government of the United States.

Mr. BACON. I think not.

Mr. TELLER. That is exactly the position. You may take it by treaty, and if your treaty requires anything to be done by Congress, Congress may repudiate the treaty by failing to do it.

Mr. BACON. That is not the question.

Mr. SPOONER. But Congress does not make a treaty.

Mr. TELLER. No; it does not. You might admit territory without a treaty, because you did it in the case of Texas.

Mr. BACON. No.

Mr. TELLER. Yes, you did.

Mr. BACON. Never.

Mr. TELLER. Yes; you admitted Texas without a treaty.

Mr. SPOONER. Texas was not a Territory.

Mr. TELLER. When I speak of admitting territory, I do not mean admitting it as a Territory. I mean that you take under the jurisdiction of the United States what before has not been under its jurisdiction.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator from Florida allow me a moment?

Mr. MALLORY. Yes, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. Nobody can pretend that Congress has not the power to admit a State. It must be considered settled now by the case of Texas that Congress may admit a State; but where has Congress ever admitted a Territory as a Territory?

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, because we have not exercised the legislative power to admit to this country an inferior relation, it does not follow that we have not that power when we have exercised the greater power. However, I do not want to discuss that question now, because it is not fair to the Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY] who has the floor; but I shall take occasion hereafter, if I can get the opportunity, to show the absurdity of the proposition that you can admit a State by an act of law to the highest possible relation between the Government and the people, and then that you can not admit a territory or a region of country to an inferior relation. I want to hear some lawyer tell me why the exercise of the power which admits a State to that high relation can not admit a section of a foreign country to an inferior relation; that you can not acquire territory out of which a State can be created. It can not be defended upon philosophy, principle, precedent, or anything else.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, when interrupted I was about winding up my review of the arguments presented by Senators on the affirmative of this question. Since then we have had some additional arguments by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] explaining more fully the positions which they hold with regard to the question. The two Senators differ, if I am not mistaken, in the positions which they have assumed. The Senator from Ohio holds that such a compact as is this now pending, whereby one of the contracting powers is by the act of the compact itself stricken out of existence, is not a treaty, and can not be a treaty, and therefore can not be dealt with by the treaty-making power.

Mr. FORAKER. I have not said that. I want to remind the Senator again that what I have been saying is that it is not a continuing contract, and therefore not a treaty in the sense in which we ordinarily employ that term. It is of course a contract when the two parties' minds meet. The fact is that it is executed by the consummation of the transaction, and by reason of that fact it becomes a thing of the past, which makes it inappropriate to call it a treaty, as I contend, in the ordinary sense.

Mr. MALLORY. Not a treaty in the ordinary sense?

Mr. FORAKER. It is a past transaction; it is consummated.

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to ask the Senator, in order to understand his position exactly, Does he contend that the treaty which is now upon the table of the Senate is not an instrument that should be acted upon by the Senate because of the fact that the Hawaiian Islands will go out of existence as a sovereign power?

Mr. FORAKER. No; I have said all the time that in my judgment you can act upon the treaty and you can consummate the transaction in that way; but because of the fact that the Hawaiian Republic ceases to exist there can not be any treaty continuing in the future. It will end at once with the consummation of the transaction. Therefore, I say, while you can consummate the transaction in that way, yet that way is not exclusive, nor, in my judgment, the most appropriate.

Mr. MALLORY. In other words, the position of the Senator from Ohio, if I understand it, is that you can effect this annexation by treaty, but that it is better to effect it in the manner proposed by those who favor this legislation.

Mr. FORAKER. I preferred that method personally before these resolutions were introduced, just as I have since.

Mr. MALLORY. In other words, the Senator from Ohio is in the same position regarding this proposition as the Senator from Colorado; that is, that either the treaty-making power or this indefinite power possessed by Congress may be exercised with reference to this matter—

Mr. FORAKER. I do not think it is exclusive.

Mr. MALLORY. Does the Senator think they are concurrent powers?

Mr. FORAKER. I do not think they are exclusive the one of the other.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, that is the position of two of the advocates of this resolution in justification of the constitutionality of the measure. I shall not consume time by undertaking to review other arguments, but merely to refer to them, as I have referred to them, and take them up incidentally in the course of my remarks.

The Constitution of the United States names three distinct branches of power conferred by the people of the United States upon this Government—the legislative, the judicial, and the executive. All legislative power is confided to Congress; all executive power is conferred upon the President; and all judicial power is conferred upon the judiciary. The three branches or elements of this composite Government necessarily must be separate and distinct; and it has been the province of the judiciary, which has the construction and interpretation of the laws devolved upon it—it has been its province and its duty from the beginning to see that neither one nor the other branch of the Government transcends the limits of its legitimate power, and consequently we have in the course of the century that has passed over our heads as a nation any number of decisions of our Supreme Court bearing upon the question of the exercise of illegitimate power by one or the other of these branches of the Government.

The treaty-making power—that is, the power of making contracts with foreign sovereignties, not with foreign individuals—the power of making contracts or compacts, conventions or agreements, with foreign nationalities, sovereignties, is confided to the President, by and with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate. It is embodied in the Constitution under the head of Executive power, and is so worded that the President is the one who has to take the initiative and upon whom the burden of acting lies. The Senate has merely the power of veto, of approving or disapproving the action of the Executive in the matter of treaties.

The treaty-making power, necessarily from the definition of treaties as given to us by the best legal authorities, includes all contracts, agreements, and negotiations of all kinds with the nations of the earth, unless there is some limitation in the Constitution upon it.

On this question, Mr. President, I read an extract from Duer's Constitutional Jurisprudence, which I believe is familiar to most of the Senators, at least those who are lawyers, bearing upon the subject. On page 231 he says:

That department of the Government which is intrusted with the power of making treaties may bind the national faith at its discretion; for the treaty-making power must be coextensive with the national exigencies, and necessarily involves in it every branch of the national sovereignty of which the operation may be necessary to give effect to negotiations and compacts with foreign nations. If a nation have conferred on its executive department without reserve the right of treating and contracting with other sovereignties, it is considered as having invested it with all the power necessary to make a valid contract, because that department is the organ of the government for the purpose, and its contracts are made by the deputed will of the nation. The fundamental laws of the state may withhold from it the power of alienating the public domain or other property belonging to it; but if there be no express provision of that kind, the inference is that it has confided to the department charged with the duty and the power of making treaties a discretion commensurate with all the great interests of the nation.

In support of that he cites Vattel's Law of Nations, § 3 Dallas, 199, and Grotius's Law of War and Peace. He then continues:

The concurrence of each branch of the legislative power, we have seen, is necessary to a declaration of war, while the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate alone, may conclude a treaty of peace.

Something that was denied, I believe, here to-day by a Senator, who claimed that the Congress also could conclude a treaty of peace. To repeat:

The concurrence of each branch of the legislative power, we have seen, is necessary to a declaration of war, while the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate alone, may conclude a treaty of peace. Now, a power to make treaties necessarily implies a power to settle the terms on which they shall be concluded, and foreign States could not deal safely with the Government on any other presumption. That branch of the Government which is intrusted thus largely and generally with authority to make valid treaties of peace can, of course, bind the nation by the alienation of part of its territory; and this, according to an approved writer on the law of nations, is equally the case whether that territory be already in the occupation of the enemy or remain in possession of the nation, or whether the property be public or private.

I would have Senators bear in mind that there is no restraint, limitation, or qualification upon the treaty-making powers conferred on the Executive by the Constitution. It extends to everything, and unless it can be shown that a proposed contract, such as is pending here upon our table, between a foreign Government and the United States is not a treaty, then we have, it seems to me, necessarily to be governed by the action of the treaty-making power in the premises.

Mr. Hamilton, in his works, volume 7, page 504, speaking of this subject, says:

1. As to the theory of the Constitution.—The Constitution of the United States distributes its powers into three departments—legislative, executive, judiciary. The first article defines the structure and specifies the various powers of the legislative department; the second article establishes the organization and powers of the executive department; the third article does the same with respect to the judiciary department; the fourth and fifth and sixth articles, which are the last, are a miscellany of particular provisions.

The first article declares that "all legislative power granted by the Constitution shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives."

The second article, which organizes and regulates the executive department, declares that the "executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America," and proceeding to detail particular authorities of the Executive, it declares that the "President shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur." There is in no part of the Constitution any explanation of this power to make treaties and definition of its objects or delineation of its bounds. The only other provision in the Constitution respecting it is in the sixth article, which provides, as already noticed, that all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land; and this notwithstanding anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary.

It was impossible for words more comprehensive to be used than those which grant the power to make treaties.

Now mark the language of Mr. Hamilton:

They are such as would naturally be employed to confer a plenipotentiary authority. A power to make treaties, granted in these indefinite terms, extends to all kinds of treaties and with all the latitude which such a power under any form of government can possess. The power "to make" implies a power to act authoritatively and conclusively, independent of the after clause which expressly places treaties among the supreme laws of the land. The thing to be made is a treaty.

With regard to the objects of the treaty, there being no specification, there is, of course, a carte blanche. The general proposition must therefore be that whatever is a proper subject of compact between nation and nation may be embraced by a treaty between the President of the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the correspondent organ of a foreign state.

Now, we have the assurance of at least two Senators who have ably advocated the annexation cause that this instrument which is now in a state of suspended animation and lying upon the table of the Senate, namely, the alleged annexation treaty, is, to a certain extent at least, a treaty, or would be if it were ratified.

If the annexation of a sovereignty is a matter that "is a proper subject of contract between nation and nation"—and no one will deny that the annexation of one sovereignty to another is a proper matter of contract, for there is no other way, except by the exercise of force, that it can be done—it "may be embraced by a treaty between the United States, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the corresponding organ in a foreign state." Again, on page 518 of the same works, volume 7, Mr. Hamilton says:

The manner in which the power of treaty, as it exists in the Constitution, was understood by the convention in framing it, and by the people in adopting it, is the point next to be considered.

As to the sense of the convention, the secrecy with which their deliberations were conducted does not permit any formal proof of the opinions and views which prevailed in digesting the power of treaties. But from the best opportunity of knowing the fact, I aver that it was understood by all to be the intent of the provision to give to that power the most ample latitude—to render it competent to all the stipulations which the exigencies of national affairs might require; competent to the making of treaties of alliance, treaties of commerce, treaties of peace, and every other species of convention usual among nations; and competent in the course of its exercise for these purposes to control and bind the legislative power of Congress.

And it was emphatically for this reason that it was so carefully guarded, the cooperation of two-thirds of the Senate, with the President, being required to make any treaty whatever. I appeal for this with confidence to every member of the convention—particularly to those in the two Houses of Congress. Two of these are in the House of Representatives, Mr. Madison and Mr. Baldwin. It is expected by the adversaries of the treaty that these gentlemen will, in their places, obstruct its execution. However this may be, I feel a confidence that neither of them will deny the assertion I have made. To suppose them capable of such a denial were to suppose them utterly regardless of truth.

In other words, we have it from Mr. Hamilton and we have it from the extracts which I have read from Professor Duer's work that the treaty-making power of the Executive and the Senate is adequate for all the stipulations which the exigencies of national affairs may require. Chancellor Kent, also, in his first Commentaries, thirteenth edition, page 166, says:

The department of the Government that is intrusted by the Constitution with the treaty-making power is competent to bind the national faith in its discretion, for the power to make treaties of peace must be coextensive with all the exigencies of the nation, and necessarily involves in it that portion of the national sovereignty which has the exclusive direction of diplomatic negotiations and contracts with foreign powers. All treaties made by that power become of absolute efficacy because they are the supreme law of the land. There can be no doubt that the power competent to bind the nation by treaty may alienate the public domain and property by treaty.

The power that is intrusted generally and largely with authority to make valid treaties of peace can, of course, bind the nation by alienation of part of its territory.

There Chancellor Kent goes to the extent of declaring, and so do others, and all others of any authoritative standing who have discussed this question, that not only can you annex territory, but that the sovereign has the right, unless there is some limitation or qualification in the organic law to prevent, to alienate its own territory, and I do not know that there is any qualification or any limitation on the treaty-making power, possessed by the President and the Senate under our Constitution, which would prevent us from alienating territory if it were conceived advisable for the best interests of the nation that it should be done.

The Supreme Court of the United States in 17 Wallace, page 243, in the case of Holden vs. Joy, referring to the same subject, the latitude of power possessed by the Executive and the Senate in the exercise of the treaty-making function, says:

Express power is given to the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur, and inasmuch as the power is given, in general terms, without any description of the objects intended to be embraced within its scope, it must be assumed that the framers of the Constitution intended that it should extend to all those objects which, in the intercourse of nations, had usually been regarded as the proper subjects of negotiation and treaty, if not inconsistent with the nature of our Government and the relation between the States and United States.

Therefore we see that under the treaty-making power the President and two-thirds of the Senate are vested with plenary authority to do anything in connection with foreign relations that has ever heretofore been done by treaty to engage in all stipulations, contracts, conventions, or pacts which national exigencies or national objects may require. I can conceive of no transaction of the character of a negotiation that can be undertaken between two sovereignties in which there is any element of a contract that is not a treaty; and it will not do to say, for the purpose of getting rid of the objections presented in this debate, that this instrument which we have before us still pending, a proposed treaty between the Hawaiian Government and the United States, is not a treaty because of the fact that its ratification will extinguish the existence of one of the parties thereto. It seems to me that is not even a specious assumption, and that it can not be maintained. It must be a treaty before the sovereignty of the Hawaiian Islands is extinguished.

Undoubtedly, on the ratification of the treaty the sovereignty of the Hawaiian Islands would pass out of being; but before it passed out of being, before that sovereignty ceased to exist, it would be necessary that the treaty should be ratified, and that a treaty should exist, if only for an instant of time. If it was a treaty at one time, if it was for a single instant a treaty, then it was within the legitimate province and proper power of the President and the Senate to deal with it and constitute a subject which the Constitution has expressly taken from the jurisdiction of Congress.

The joint resolution which is under consideration is entitled "A joint resolution to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States," and it begins with a preamble, a portion of which I will read:

Whereas the Government of the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its constitution, to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty, etc.

On that representation of the facts the body of the joint resolution declares that "said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed." It is a singular fact, Mr. President, that the author of the joint resolution should have thought proper to indulge in such a periphrastic method of expressing a very simple fact as he has in the use of the language "in due form signified its consent." It is true the Hawaiian Republic has in due form signified its consent in the manner provided in its constitution, but to whom has it signified that consent and in what way?

In what manner has it signified it? They have signified that consent to the Executive of the United States, the power with which they are properly treating, and he has presented their signification of consent to the body which has concern of the matter in conjunction with him, the Senate of the United States, with his recommendation or approval of the treaty. In other words, the House of Representatives, by joint resolution sent to the Senate, informs the Senate that whereas the Hawaiian Republic has by treaty proposed to be entered into between it and the United States by the proper instrumentalities for dealing with treaties, namely, the President and the Senate, signified its purpose to do certain things, therefore the House of Representatives, without any official or authoritative information upon the subject, with nothing on its files to show that it has any knowledge whether the facts it alleges to be true are actually true—the House of Representatives, which is not a part of the treaty-making power under the Constitution, whether it is by wild implication or not, without, as I say, any official or authoritative information as to the transaction in question between the Republic of Hawaii and the Republic of the United States, undertakes to tell us that it has accepted, ratified, and confirmed—what? The cession. What cession, Mr. President? Has there been a cession of any territory here? There has not. But it was necessary, in order for the House of Representatives to take jurisdiction of this matter, to get its grip, so to speak, upon the subject, to state that there was a cession.

Mr. CAFFERY. It is nothing more than a willingness to cede.

Mr. MALLORY. It is simply a proposition to our treaty-making power to make us a cession. It was not made to the House of Representatives. It is a matter that comes to this country through its Executive without the intervention of the House of Representatives, with which it has no concern, and while the proposed treaty is still unacted upon and may be acted upon, for all the House knows, to-morrow or next day by a two-thirds majority of the Senate, it undertakes to submit the same subject-matter, the same mutual obligations and stipulations that are contained in the proposed treaty to the Government of Hawaii for its acceptance and concurrence, whereby the object, end, and purpose sought by the treaty will be accomplished by the action of the President of the United States, a majority of the House of Representatives, and a majority of the Senate.

But the Constitution ordains that in order to do that there must be a majority of two-thirds in the Senate. With the treaty still pending in the Senate, the whole matter is sought to be wrested from the hands of those to whom the Constitution has confided it, and a precedent established which will probably come back again and again to vex and distract the conscientious lawmakers of this country. Why? Has anyone said why? I do not undertake to answer the question, though I think I can.

It has been urged that we are in a state of great emergency; that this is absolutely essential to be done now. But, Mr. President, with all the clamor that has been raised we have not heard any real reason why due consideration should not be given; we have heard no reason why such debate should not be had as would enable not only the Congress but the people of the United States to thoroughly understand the question; no reason why we should not wait until the next session of Congress in order to act finally upon the question of the treaty. I have heard no reason from the most earnest advocate of the measure to justify this haste and the apparent willingness to subvert a principle of our Constitution and overturn doctrines that have been adhered to as fundamental by the ablest and most venerated of our legislators and statesmen.

Mr. CAFFERY. With the permission of the Senator from Florida—

Mr. MALLORY. Certainly.

Mr. CAFFERY. I ask him if the very attempt to annex Hawaii by treaty—that attempt persisted in by two Administrations, Harrison's Administration and this Administration—does not show that the President at least is convinced that annexation is properly done and only done through the treaty-making power?

Mr. MALLORY. I really do not know that I could answer that question, but I would say that so far as the Senate knows (I am speaking now as knowing officially) the President believes that the only way to annex this territory to the United States is by treaty, because the only communication the Executive has favored us with on this subject has been in connection with the treaty, whereby we are to infer at least that he is in favor of the prompt and early ratification of that treaty. Whether there has been any private or unofficial intimation from the Executive to inspire this resolution in the other branch of Congress I do not pretend to say. I would not undertake to express an opinion upon that point.

Mr. CAFFERY. Is not the action of the President at least significant that he thinks the treaty-making power is concurrent with the legislative power? And if that be so, is it not a universal principle of law that where there is concurrent jurisdiction the first jurisdiction which seizes hold of the subject-matter must exhaust the jurisdiction?

Mr. MALLORY. I do not know. The question is one which I have not considered, and it involves some points that I would not undertake to consider now.

Mr. President, I have not referred, and I do not intend to refer, to the questions of expediency and policy involved in this proposition. I regard them as important. I can see, as far as my judgment will permit me, a great deal that can be said on both sides of that question. But to my mind, before we can enter upon the consideration of the policy of the measure it is necessary for us to determine as to our power and authority in the premises, the legitimacy of the proceeding which is proposed to be followed for carrying out the object sought.

I have undertaken in a somewhat disconnected way to briefly advert to what has been said in favor of the right to take this step and to give the reasons which have presented themselves to my mind for believing that the authority for it is not to be found in the Constitution and also for believing that what authority there is in the Constitution bearing on the subject is prohibitory and antagonistic to it. I do not see any necessity for throwing overboard the treaty, so to speak, and failing to take action on it, because I think the matter of the annexation of Hawaii by treaty is still one upon which a majority of our people have not yet reached a conclusion. I am inclined to think that had not the proposition been burdened with the weight of the constitutional objection which, in my judgment, necessarily attaches to this effort, much of the earnest antagonism which it has excited would have remained unmanifested.

But, sir, I can not, as a Senator, as one who believes that it is his duty to consider well the constitutional sanction of an act before he undertakes, in his Senatorial capacity, to put such act in effect; as one who believes that the Constitution is a sacred instrument which should be regarded with the reverence with which we were wont to regard the religious tenets that were taught us in our youth, I can not permit the proposed action to be taken without entering my protest. Believing as I believe, that any lapse from the observance of the Constitution's sacred character is a most dangerous step, and one that can hardly, if ever, be retraced; knowing as I know, that there are to-day constant assaults upon its integrity, and that the necessities of party or of faction will not hesitate, if the opportunity presents, to make further and more impudent attacks upon it, I have felt, Mr. President, that it was my duty to stand up in this Chamber and utter my protest, feeble as it is, against this ill-considered proposition, because it involves not only great questions of policy heretofore untried and unconsidered, but also and especially because it involves a flagrant, gratuitous, and most alarming infraction of the fundamental law of the land.

Mr. PETTIGREW obtained the floor.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do not care to go on to-night. I simply wish to take the floor for the purpose of speaking to-morrow.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4809) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4810) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army.

The message further announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HULL, Mr. GRIFFIN, and Mr. HAY, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After forty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, July 2, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 1, 1898.

CONSUL.

Alfred A. Winslow, of Indiana, to be consul of the United States at Liege, Belgium, vice Marcus R. Sulzer, resigned.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Henry Whiting, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of Frenchmans Bay, in the State of Maine, to succeed John B. Redman, whose term of office has expired by limitation.

ASSISTANT TREASURER.

Charles A. Bosworth, of Ohio, to be assistant treasurer of the United States at Cincinnati, Ohio, to succeed Michael Ryan, whose term of office has expired by limitation, to take effect on October 1, 1898.

POSTMASTERS.

Marshall M. Murdock, to be postmaster at Wichita, in the county of Sedgwick and State of Kansas, in the place of T. G. Fitch, whose commission expired June 29, 1898.

Allen P. Dickey, to be postmaster at Waynesburg, in the county of Greene and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of J. J. Pauley, whose commission expired June 2, 1898.

John C. McKean, to be postmaster at Charleroi, in the county of Washington and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of K. V. Caseber, removed.

J. F. Nicholson, to be postmaster at Monongahela, in the county of Washington and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of John Holland, whose commission expired May 16, 1898.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY—INFANTRY ARM.

To be captains, to date from April 26, 1898.

First Lieut. Frank B. McCoy, Third Infantry, vice Auman, Thirteenth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Elias Chandler, Sixteenth Infantry, vice Lee, Ninth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Frank L. Dodds, Ninth Infantry, vice Miller, Second Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Charles R. Noyes, Ninth Infantry, vice Wilhelm, Eighth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Charles W. Abbot, jr., Twelfth Infantry, vice Stone, Twenty-first Infantry, retired from active service.

First Lieut. Richard M. Blatchford, Eleventh Infantry, vice Ward, Sixteenth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. James E. Brett, Twenty-fourth Infantry, vice Parker, First Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. John H. Beacom, Third Infantry, vice Craigie, Twelfth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Will T. May, Fifteenth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Henry W. Hovey, Twenty-fourth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Lawrence J. Hearn, Twenty-first Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. John H. Shollenberger, Tenth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Walter K. Wright, Sixteenth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Charles B. Hardin, Eighteenth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Edwin P. Pendleton, Twenty-third Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Harry A. Leonhauser, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Charles B. Vogdes, First Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Charles W. Penrose, Eleventh Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

First Lieut. Daniel L. Howell, Seventh Infantry, to fill an original vacancy.

To be first lieutenant, to date from April 26, 1898.

Second Lieut. Thomas F. Schley, Twenty-third Infantry, vice McCoy, Third Infantry, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

THIRD REGIMENT UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

To be second lieutenant.

Edward Harralson, of Georgia.

The nomination of Edward Harolson, of Georgia, for the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate June 28, 1898, is hereby withdrawn.

SECOND REGIMENT UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

Barton F. Dickson, of Indiana.

To be first lieutenant.

Arthur T. Balentine, of Ohio.
The nominations of Burton F. Dickson, of Indiana, and Arthur E. Ballentine, of Ohio, for the above-named offices, which were delivered to the Senate June —, 1898, are hereby withdrawn.

UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Charles E. Kilbourne, jr., United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn July 1, 1898.

Ernest Taylor Tappey, of Michigan, for the office of brigade surgeon of volunteers with the rank of major, which was delivered to the Senate June 21, 1898.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 1, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Neil P. Leary, of Maryland.
Fred'k R. Huseman, of West Virginia.
Joachim Jorgenson, of the District of Columbia.

To be second lieutenant.

Elbert S. Maloney, of the District of Columbia.

SECOND REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

Howard A. Springett, of New York.

To be second lieutenant.

Josiah W. Howe, of Connecticut.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Wade H. Westmoreland, of Georgia.

To be first lieutenant.

William Albert Jones, of Georgia.

SEVENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Amos W. Brandt, of Iowa.
Phillip Bernhardt, of New York.

NINTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be lieutenant-colonel.

David M. Sells, of Iowa.

To be captains.

Walter A. Dayton, of Louisiana.
Henry A. Chandler, of Texas.
Clarion A. Windus, of Texas.

TENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Thomas B. Turney, ordnance-sergeant, United States Army.
Luther Sage Kelly, of New York.

FIRST REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be assistant surgeons with the rank of first lieutenant.

Charles D. Webb, of New York.
Charles I. Proben, of New York.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. George Perrine, First United States Volunteer Engineers.

To be second lieutenant.

Percy R. Owens, of New York.

SECOND REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captains.

Alexander W. Cooke, of Illinois.
Alexander H. Weber, of South Carolina.
Archibald O. Powell, of Minnesota.
Tillinghast L'H. Huston, of Ohio.
George A. Hurd, of Illinois.

To be first lieutenants.

William M. Venable, of Ohio.
Frank H. Hamilton, of Illinois.
Gates A. Johnson, jr., of Minnesota.
Fremont Hill, of Illinois.
Oscar S. Durfee, of Illinois.
Maurice W. Cooley, of Ohio.
Christopher C. Fitzgerald, of Indiana.
Eugene Klapp, of Illinois.
Randolph E. Fishburn, of Illinois.

To be second lieutenants.

James E. Lawton, of Ohio.
Frank S. Clark, of Indiana.
David G. Anderson, of Pennsylvania.
Joseph R. McAndrews, of Illinois.
Orville Benson, of Ohio.
George A. Purington, of Ohio.
Clarence F. Jackson, of Indiana.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be surgeon with the rank of major.

George E. Lyon, of Missouri.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

John H. Gibbon, of Pennsylvania.

NINTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be lieutenant-colonel.

David M. Sells, of Colorado.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Richard C. Marshall, jr., of Virginia.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY—INFANTRY ARM.

To be second lieutenant.

Frank D. Wickham, of Missouri (now first lieutenant, Fourth Missouri Volunteer Infantry).

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

William Mahone, of Virginia, to be collector of customs for the district of Petersburg, in the State of Virginia.

POSTMASTERS.

Charles K. Bailey, to be postmaster at Bethel, in the county of Fairfield and State of Connecticut.

John A. Anderson, to be postmaster at Wahoo, in the county of Saunders and State of Nebraska.

J. S. McHarg, to be postmaster at Walsenburg, in the county of Huerfano and State of Colorado.

Rufus F. Bond, to be postmaster at Sterling, in the county of Rice and State of Kansas.

William E. Beeson, to be postmaster at Harper, in the county of Harper and State of Kansas.

James A. Arment, to be postmaster at Dodge City, in the county of Ford and State of Kansas.

E. P. Greer, to be postmaster at Winfield, in the county of Cowley and State of Kansas.

Frank J. Davis, to be postmaster at Larned, in the county of Pawnee and State of Kansas.

George B. Crooker, to be postmaster at Anthony, in the county of Harper and State of Kansas.

Joseph C. Kitchen, to be postmaster at Garden City, in the county of Finney and State of Kansas.

R. C. Howard, to be postmaster at Arkansas City, in the county of Cowley and State of Kansas.

Martin L. Grimes, to be postmaster at Lyons, in the county of Rice and State of Kansas.

George A. Ballard, to be postmaster at Fall River, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts.

George W. Watson, to be postmaster at Kinsley, in the county of Edwards and State of Kansas.

Frank A. Lanstrum, to be postmaster at Pratt, in the county of Pratt and State of Kansas.

Allen T. Holmes, to be postmaster at Plymouth, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

Martin Hickey, to be postmaster at Grafton, in the county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts.

Charles T. Drake, to be postmaster at Stoughton, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts.

Hamilton Schuyler, to be postmaster at Bellevue, in the county of Huron and State of Ohio.

Charles Eichhorn, to be postmaster at West Hoboken, in the county of Hudson and State of New Jersey.

Charles A. Wilbar, to be postmaster at Bridgewater, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

Joel S. Ray, to be postmaster at Arcola, in the county of Douglas and State of Illinois.

Silas D. Patton, to be postmaster at El Paso, in the county of Woodford and State of Illinois.

Wilburn M. McCoy, to be postmaster at Guthrie, in the county of Logan and Territory of Oklahoma.

Sylvanus S. Thompson, to be postmaster at Marseilles, in the county of LaSalle and State of Illinois.

J. T. Van Gundy, to be postmaster at Monticello, in the county of Piatt and State of Illinois.

Hezekiah S. Van Dervort, to be postmaster at Warren, in the county of Jo Daviess and State of Illinois.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, July 1, 1898.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

REMARKS ON HAWAIIAN ANNEXATION.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the privilege of extending certain remarks on the Hawaiian annexation resolutions in the RECORD.

Mr. DALZELL. For yourself only?

Mr. SHAFROTH. For myself alone.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House of Representatives, and had appointed Mr. HALE, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. COCKRELL as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6896) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had receded from its amendments numbered 13, 14, 186, 221, 222, and 233, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, to the bill (H. R. 8438) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 10424) to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department of the Army.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following order:

Ordered, That Mr. CARTER be excused as one of the conferees on the bill (S. 4809) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, and that Mr. SEWELL be appointed in his place.

ADDITIONAL CLERKS, COMMITTEE ON ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to call up for consideration a resolution which is really an emergency matter at this time, and I would like to make a brief statement regarding the same before the question of consent is submitted to the House.

This resolution to which I refer provides for the appointment of two additional clerks to the Committee on Enrolled Bills of the House for the remainder of this session of Congress. I will state that it is in accordance with an old custom in the closing days of a session, when the business is usually of such a character as requires this additional service on the part of the committee and demands the aid of the services provided for by the resolution to which I refer.

This resolution, I will state, however, has not been reported by the Committee on Accounts, although it was introduced and so referred at the proper time and before these men were employed. We have been trying to get a meeting of the Committee on Accounts, but it is somewhat difficult to do so because of the fact that most of the members of the committee are absent from the city, and we were therefore able only to get together two members, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] and myself, who were unanimous in supporting the resolution. [Laughter.]

I ask unanimous consent, therefore, for the adoption of the resolution I send to the desk, with an amendment proposed by the members of the Committee on Accounts who attended the meeting.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills be, and he hereby is, authorized to appoint two additional clerks to said committee for the remainder of the session, said appointments to date from June 23, 1898.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Add at the end of the resolution the following:

"And that the clerks appointed under this resolution be paid $6 per diem, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, the amendment recommended by the Committee on Accounts was agreed to, and the resolution as amended was adopted.

On motion of Mr. LOUD, a motion to reconsider the vote last taken was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. McCLEARY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. McCLEARY. In the Washington Times of yesterday morning there appeared a statement with the following heading:

The cloven hoof shown—A House committee plagiarizes its report—Bankers' Journal quoted—Mr. FOWLER of New Jersey threatens exposure, and the report is withdrawn.

Then follows a statement of about three-quarters of a column in length respecting the report of the Committee on Banking and Currency, recently submitted by myself. In the article it is alleged that the report in question was taken bodily out of the Bankers' Journal.

It is but just to myself and the committee that I declare here that not one single word or syllable in that report was taken from the journal referred to, or any other. As a matter of fact, I have never seen the inside of that issue of the Journal. I did see the outside of the Journal last Friday morning, when Mr. FOWLER of New Jersey made an attack on me in the committee room, an attack which was unkind in its nature, untrue in its essence, and uncalled for by the facts. The allegation in the newspaper that the report, or any part of it, was taken from the Bankers' Journal is utterly false and completely at variance with the facts.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is true, I am informed, that the matter occupying something over three pages of the report is almost identical with an article which appears in Rhodes's Journal of Banking for June. This is the fact upon which the gentleman from New Jersey bases his charge against me.

So far as the membership of this House goes, Mr. Speaker, I am sure that no explanation is necessary. I have been treated with uniform courtesy and respect by gentlemen on both sides of the Chamber. I believe that my standing with my colleagues in the House is such that no one here would credit the charge made in the Times, and yet it is only proper, Mr. Speaker, for the sake of others who may not understand, that an explanation be given.

Under date of May 21 last, Mr. Jules Guthridge, secretary of the executive committee of the Indianapolis Monetary Convention, sent to every member of the House a letter in the following terms. I read from the letter sent to me:

DEAR SIR: The executive committee of the Indianapolis Monetary Convention, in view of the wide interest in the subject, have prepared a clear and comprehensive synopsis of the currency reform bill recently reported by the Banking and Currency Committee to the House. This synopsis will enable the busy men among your constituents to grasp the principles of the bill without loss of time and will be useful to editors who may wish to reproduce it in their columns or to comment upon it. If you would like 500 or 1,000 copies for distribution, I shall be pleased to forward them upon receipt of your reply. A copy of the synopsis is inclosed.

Very truly yours,

JULES GUTHRIDGE, Secretary.

Attached to the letter, as you see, is a copy of the synopsis mentioned. A few days after he had sent out this letter, Mr. Guthridge met me and said, "Mr. McCLEARY, a great many members of the House have expressed to me a desire to send out large numbers of this synopsis, but they do not like to pay postage on it. It is a matter of public concern, pertaining to a measure before this House, and it ought to be made frankable. Is there not some way in which this can be accomplished?" I answered, "Yes; I think so. Put the synopsis in shape for the printer, and I will see if I can not get it into the RECORD some day under the five-minute rule." So he took the pamphlet, which you see consists of 4 pages, and pasted one page on each of four sheets of paper. These sheets I kept in my desk for some time, awaiting an opportunity to properly put them into the RECORD. But, being busy on the report, I could not be in the House very long on anyone day, and no good opportunity for putting the synopsis into the RECORD presented itself. On several occasions when we met, Mr. Guthridge made inquiry as to whether or not I had yet succeeded in placing it in the RECORD; to which I could only answer, "No."

At the first meeting of the subcommittee, consisting of Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota, Mr. FOWLER of New Jersey, and Mr. HILL of Connecticut, it was agreed that the first thing in our report should be a brief synopsis of the bill, after which should come an extended discussion of the principal features of the bill. One day when I had the report pretty well along, I happened to go over to the office of the Monetary Commission and met Messrs. Guthridge and Conant, the secretaries. Mr. Guthridge again inquired whether I had got the synopsis in condition to be franked. I told him "No," and then added, "Mr. Guthridge, I am being urged to finish the report as soon as possible. I have left the preparation of the synopsis until the body of the report shall have been completed. I shall have no time to get your synopsis into the RECORD. How would it do to use it as the synopsis at the beginning of the report?" Mr. Guthridge and Mr. Conant both declared that it would be a capital idea, and that they would be glad to have me so use it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that is the way that it came to be in the report. It was put into the report for the purpose of making it frankable. Many copies had been sent out to newspapers, magazines, and so forth. Every member of the House had had a copy of it. It was inserted with the understanding that he would know that it became frankable by reason of its appearance in the report.

Now, let me call your attention to a fact with which you are all familiar, namely, that every day reports are submitted to this House not one word of which was written by the man whose name the report bears. Take, for example, the case of a pension bill. You have introduced it. The committee have considered it. They have voted to report it favorably. They have assigned the preparation of a report upon the bill to a certain member of the committee. What does he do? Almost invariably he comes to you and says, "My friend, we have agreed to report your bill. You are acquainted with the facts in the case. Now, write the report."

Is not that the practice? Is there a man here who has not had that experience? It is a daily occurrence. It is the common practice of the House. Now, here is a report of 38 pages. The first 3 pages or so consist of the synopsis under discussion. It was put in there after you had all seen it. It was put in there for your convenience, in order that you might be able to frank it to your constituents. You now have the motive and the method of its going into the report. I believe that you will agree with me that so far from being a subject of censure my action is worthy of commendation. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. McCLEARY. Certainly.

Mr. COX. In the preparation of that report, I desire to ask you if any Democrat on that committee had an opportunity to see that report until it was brought into this House?

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the question, on the ground that it has nothing to do with the question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that debate should be confined to the matter of personal privilege.

Mr. HILL. I should like to ask the gentleman from Minnesota a single question. In the article to which you refer my name is found. Will you kindly state to the House the whole of my connection with the report?

Mr. McCLEARY. I was just about to do that.

When we three assembled here at my desk, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] said, "Gentlemen, I do not wish to participate in the preparation of the report. Two can prepare it better than three, and one better than two. Our chairman, Mr. WALKER, will present a minority report, and I am making a careful analysis of his bill, with a view of being ready to explain it thoroughly to the House. This and my other regular work will occupy all of my time. I do not want to be assigned any part in the preparation of the report. When opportunity offers I shall cheerfully read the report for the purpose of criticism." The gentleman from Connecticut, therefore, had no hand in the preparation of the report, except to be of help by way of criticism, and the report is better in consequence of the criticisms which he made.

Mr. Speaker, the article in the Times makes the charge that the whole report was taken from the Bankers' Journal. This is the impression which the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FOWLER] sought to convey by the language which he used when he attacked me in the committee. I am loath to believe it, and yet this fact and other internal evidences seem to indicate that that gentleman had some connection with the publication of that article. He is not in the city, however—

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. I would like to suggest to the gentleman from Minnesota that the gentleman from New Jersey is not present, and I hope the gentleman will defer his remarks until he shall be present.

Mr. McCLEARY. I was about to say, Mr. Speaker, that inasmuch as the gentleman from New Jersey is not present, I shall refrain from saying some things that I would feel bound to say if he were here. What I have said by way of explanation seems to me to have been called for at this time in justice to myself and my friends. I thank the House for its attention.

ADJOURNMENT OVER FOURTH OF JULY.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourn to-day it be to meet on Tuesday next.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. BAILEY. I know, of course, that no debate is in order—

Mr. PAYNE. There is no business to be transacted of importance except to receive a report of the Committee on Enrolled Bills on two appropriation bills. It is very important that the House should remain in session until those enrolled bills can be presented to the House, as this is the first day of the fiscal year.

Mr. BAILEY. Let us, then, proceed with the consideration of the bill that we had before us on yesterday.

Mr. DALZELL. That is not the regular order.

Mr. PAYNE. We did not seem to be able to proceed unless we should have a quorum, and I am afraid that we would develop the fact that there is no quorum.

Mr. BAILEY. Then you can not take a recess without a quorum. My understanding of the rule is that the bill was entitled to be considered for two days.

Mr. DALZELL. But not on private-bill day.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to correct the gentleman in regard to that. I was in the same error yesterday that the gentleman labors under. It is entitled to be considered until disposed of; but after two days the committee can not take up any other bill. Any bill remaining before the House the second day undisposed of can be proceeded with under that order at any time thereafter until disposed of.

Mr. BAILEY. I have not examined the rule, but in the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses a bill was entitled to be considered for an hour; and if the hour expired before the consideration of the bill was finished, it went over until the next day or the next call of the committees. It was again entitled to be considered for an hour, and if the consideration was not then finished, it could not be called up by the committee again until all other committees had been called.

Mr. PAYNE. That was true as to those Congresses, but the rule is now different.

Mr. BAILEY. My understanding is that the only difference between this rule in the present House and the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses is that the consideration of a bill now is not limited to an hour, but can proceed through an entire day's session of the House; but after the bill has been considered during two sessions of the House it then loses its privilege.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is an error.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, if that is not true, I have no particular desire to proceed to the consideration of the international-bank bill. I am frank to say that I do not want to see it passed, and I was anxious that it should lose its place. If the Chair and the gentleman from New York are right, there is no good reason to insist upon proceeding with its consideration, and I ask the Chair for a ruling on that point.

The SPEAKER. The rule was intended to finish business.

Mr. BAILEY. But the Chair will permit me to suggest that the purpose of allowing a bill two days was that if a committee brought before the House a bill that provoked that much opposition, then the bill should not be permitted to obstruct other business that could be finished within a reasonable time. My view of it is that this call of the committees was designed to enable committees to dispose of business against which there would be no serious objection and no extended debate.

The SPEAKER. The object of the rule is for the committee to take up such business as is on the House Calendar and to dispose of it. That is the difference between the present rule and the rule of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses.

Mr. BAILEY. I am inclined to think I am right about it. The rule says:

Provided, That whenever any committee shall have occupied the morning hour on two days, it shall not be in order to call up any other bill until the other committees have been called in their turn.

The SPEAKER. "Any other bill?"

Mr. BAILEY. Not only this bill, but any other bill.

The SPEAKER. Not any other bill.

Mr. BAILEY. The very purpose of this is that when the committee has consumed two days upon any bill, then it must give way to other committees of the House who may present bills that involve no such contest.

The SPEAKER. It is intended that the bill shall be finished.

Mr. BAILEY. It does not say that whenever the committee shall have occupied two days on any bill; and it means that whenever the committee shall have occupied two days, it can neither take up another bill nor proceed with the bill that has occupied the attention of the House.

The SPEAKER. The trouble is that the gentleman from Texas has not had his attention called to the exact language, which is:

Provided, That whenever any committee shall have occupied the morning hour on two days, it shall not be in order to call up any other bill until the other committees have been called in their turn.

Mr. BAILEY. While I understand that my construction seems to render the word "other" meaningless, yet to contend that it can call up the same bill renders the other part of the rule meaningless.

The SPEAKER. There is no other part of the rule that intends to kill off a bill by indirection.

Mr. BAILEY. No; but there is a part that intends to kill off the committee after it occupies two morning hours.

The SPEAKER. The language of the rule shows how it is intended to kill off the committee, to prevent it from introducing any new bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Under the construction of the Chair this bill can occupy the morning hour devoted to the call of committees to the exclusion of every other committee in the House, and every other bill, until the end of the session.

The SPEAKER. Until the bill is finished.

Mr. BAILEY. I think that is not the intention of the rule.

The SPEAKER. That was the rule of the Fifty-first Congress, and that was the intention and practice.

Mr. BAILEY. Not of the Fifty-second.

The SPEAKER. The Fifty-second Congress went back to the old rule which enabled members, in common parlance, to filibuster to prevent a bill from passing. In other words, if one-fifth of the members were opposed to it, the bill could not pass, and sometimes it was not necessary to have that number. When the Fifty-first Congress came in it was intended that bills should be met by the House and disposed of under the rule.

Mr. BAILEY. That would be wise or unwise according to whether this rule was intended to facilitate one kind or another kind of business.

The SPEAKER. It was intended to facilitate and finish all business that was on the House Calendar.

Mr. BAILEY. My own opinion was, and I know that was the substantial result of the rule in the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses, to induce the committees to call up matters that ordinarily would be disposed of by unanimous consent.

BRIGHTWOOD RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. BABCOCK. Pending that, I submit the conference report which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10280) to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same, amended as follows: At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted add: "Provided, That the issue of said bonds shall not in the aggregate exceed the amount necessary for the equipment aforesaid, and the total outstanding bonds and stock shall in no event exceed the sum of $150,000 per mile of single track;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the second amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

J. W. BABCOCK,
G. M. CURTIS,
JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
Managers on the part of the House.
JAMES MCMILLAN,
J. H. GALLINGER,
CHAS. J. FAULKNER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The following is the statement of the House conferees:

Statement to accompany report of the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives on H. R. 10280, to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate, and agrees to the same with an amendment limiting the issue of bonds to a sum which in the aggregate shall not exceed the amount necessary for the equipment of the road from Seventh to Fourteenth streets on Kenyon street with the underground electric system, and further provides that the total amount of outstanding stock and bonds shall in no event exceed the sum of $150,000 per mile of single track. This provision has been incorporated in the conference reports on the Belt Railway and the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company bills which have recently become laws.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2.

The report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RAY of New York. I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to address the House for one hour upon the general subject of pensions and pension legislation.

Mr. BAILEY. I have no objection to that request; but there is a matter which would perhaps occupy ten minutes—not over that—in which we on this side are interested; and I will simply ask for ten minutes before the gentleman proceeds.

Mr. RAY of New York. I have no objection. The gentleman may occupy the ten minutes before I begin, or I will give way at any time.

Mr. BAILEY. Well, let it be before.

Mr. MAHON. As this is private-bill day and I am very anxious to bring up a small bill from the Court of Claims, I hope I may be allowed to do so, and then I will yield.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAILEY. Our request is that we may be permitted to occupy ten minutes before the gentleman from New York proceeds.

Mr. RICHARDSON. One further suggestion. We do not know what line of argument the gentleman from New York will pursue. I think we ought to be allowed some little time to reply, in the event that we shall deem it necessary to do so.

Mr. RAY of New York. I shall have no objection.

Mr. RICHARDSON. If we be allowed the same length of time to reply, provided we desire to use that much time, there will be no objection to the proposition of the gentleman from New York.

A MEMBER. Say thirty minutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, we should like at least thirty minutes for such reply as we may deem necessary.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Oh, no; we want an hour.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Gentlemen here say they want an hour.

Mr. HULL. I rise simply to ask whether the ten minutes asked by the gentleman from Texas is to be occupied on the subject of pensions, or on what subject are we granting unanimous consent?

Mr. BAILEY. In those ten minutes I want to file a bill of discovery, to ascertain, if possible, who the Democrat was who wrote the editorial referred to the other day by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR]. I wish to do this because the paper from which that editorial was taken has called upon the gentleman from Ohio to furnish the name, which is practically a denial.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks ten minutes for the purpose he has indicated; and the gentleman from New York one hour for the purpose he has indicated; and the gentleman from Tennessee desires thirty minutes to reply to the gentleman from New York.

Several MEMBERS (on the Democratic side). One hour.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Well, I will ask fifty minutes, which, with the ten minutes asked by the gentleman from Texas, will make one hour for this side.

Mr. MAHON. This is private-bill day. I would like to be included in this request for unanimous consent, so that at the end of the speech of the gentleman from New York I may be permitted to bring up a bill from the Court of Claims.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the proposition which the Chair has submitted?

Mr. SIMS. I will object, unless I can have permission to call up House bill 7695, for the relief of Hiram Johnson and others. I think it will only take ten minutes to dispose of it.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SIMS].

Mr. SIMS. I do not want to be captious—

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion of Mr. PAYNE was rejected; there being—ayes 58, noes 59.

PUBLIC BUILDING, NORFOLK, VA.

Mr. MERCER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which I send to the desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10877) to amend chapter 42 of the acts of the second session Fifty-first Congress.

Be it enacted, etc., That chapter 42 of the acts of the second session Fifty-first Congress is hereby amended by adding to the last paragraph thereof the following:

"Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, if deemed expedient, to locate said building on the site secured, so that the southwest corner thereof may be at least 35 feet distant from the nearest structure, and the fire limit in said particular only is reduced to 35 feet."

Mr. PAYNE. I believe the original limit was 40 feet.

Mr. MERCER. The situation is this: The site has been purchased and the erection of the building authorized; and the Secretary of the Treasury telegraphed me yesterday that it was absolutely essential the legislation embraced in this bill should be had. It seems that some person owns a piece of land joining the southwest corner of the post-office site, and in order to preserve the usual fire limit of 40 feet it will be necessary for the Government to purchase a small strip or block of this land at an enormous price or pass this bill.

Mr. PAYNE. The original limit was 40 feet, and this bill makes it only 35?

Mr. MERCER. Thirty-five in one corner; 40 feet will remain the limit everywhere else.

Mr. PAYNE. I have no objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, in justice to our side of the House, I will say that a day or two ago I gave notice that, as a gentleman on the other side had notified us that he would object to all requests for unanimous consent by our side, I would demand the regular order. I understand now, however, that the embargo against us has been raised, and I shall not make objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there further objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

The bill was considered, was read a first and second time, and was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

P. F. DUNDON, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3261) for the relief of P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to remit to P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal., the penalty imposed under the contract for the construction of Grays Harbor Light, Washington; and the sum of $2,900 is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, pending the request of the gentleman from California for unanimous consent, I repeat my request that I may be permitted to have an hour to address the House on the general subject of pensions.

So far as I am individually concerned, I have no possible objection to the bill of the gentleman.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I hope the gentleman from New York will not couple my request with one that may possibly meet with objection. Let this be disposed of first.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that the request for unanimous consent should be complicated in this manner. It would only produce a conflict where several requests are pending at the same time.

Mr. RAY of New York. Very well, Mr. Speaker; I withdraw my request.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to vacate a penalty, or rather to remit to the beneficiary a penalty imposed upon him under a contract for the construction of a portion of Grays Harbor light-house, Washington, and the sum of $2,900 is appropriated for that purpose.

The work has been fully performed. It was recently completed to the entire satisfaction of the Department, but it was not constructed within the time required by the contract. The bill sets aside that objection and provides payment for the work, which is admitted to be satisfactory.

The circumstances are that the Department recognizes the efficient completion and the satisfactory character of the work, but has no power to remit the penalty imposed for failure to complete the work within the time fixed in the contract. The committee state in their report that the delay was not due to any fault on the part of the contractor, and recommend that the penalty be remitted.

Mr. DALZELL. From what committee does this come?

Mr. MAGUIRE. From the Committee on Claims.

Mr. KING. Has the forfeiture been demanded or exacted by the Government?

Mr. MAGUIRE. It has been enforced by deduction from the contract price.

Mr. PAYNE. Has this been recommended by the Department?

Mr. MAGUIRE. Yes.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand that this work has been done, and the only question now is as to the time in which it was done.

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is correct. The last part of the report shows that the committee is satisfied that the delay in completing the work, and for which the penalty was imposed, inflicted no loss upon the Government and was not due to any willful fault on the part of the contractor. For this reason they recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. FARIS. Did the committee unanimously report on this bill?

Mr. MAGUIRE. They did.

A MEMBER. And the delay in the prosecution of the work was occasioned largely by matters over which this party had no control?

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is true to a certain extent. At least there was no willful or unreasonable delay on the part of the contractor. I ask, therefore, unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. FARIS. Does the Department recommend the passage of the bill?

Mr. MAGUIRE. It does. The recommendation of the Treasury Department, as set forth in the report, is specific, and is signed by O. L. Spaulding, the Acting Secretary.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, and was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, it was passed.

On motion of Mr. MAGUIRE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I now ask the privilege to renew my request.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, this is Friday—private-bill day under the rule—and I believe it is in order to move to go into Committee of the Whole to consider bills on the Private Calendar.

Mr. RAY of New York. I have a request for unanimous consent pending, Mr. Speaker, and while I do not wish to antagonize the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I would like to have that request submitted to the House.

Mr. LOVE. Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to the distinguished gentleman from New York, I will have to object to his request.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. PAYNE. Then I move that the House take a recess until 3 o'clock to-day.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me ask the gentleman from New York, prior to that motion, if he will not yield to the requests for unanimous consent? There are a number of members who have requests pending—

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. ALLEN. There are a number of bridge bills, for instance, that might be passed. Inasmuch as we will have to stay here, it seems to me that that would be the best way to pass the time.

Mr. BAILEY. Of course, if gentlemen object—

Mr. McRAE. I think we ought to have a roll call on the motion.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask a vote on my motion.

Mr. SIMS. I wish to make a statement.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to take a recess until 3 o'clock.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. BRUCKER) there were—ayes 59, noes 54.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 3 o'clock.

The recess having expired, the House at 3 o'clock p. m. resumed its session.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to reports of committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

S. 4809. An act to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army; and

S. 4810. An act to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army.

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HAWLEY, Mr. SEWELL, and Mr. MITCHELL as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8428. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

H. R. 6896. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 3277. An act to authorize appointment of a military storekeeper in the Army.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. MAXWELL, for two weeks, on account of important business.

To Mr. GUNN, indefinitely, on account of important business. To Mr. KNOWLES, indefinitely, on account of important business.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege. On last Wednesday the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], in the course of his remarks, read an editorial in which this language occurred:

Since the outbreak of the Spanish war they [that is, the Democrats in the House] have committed about every error possible. Giving a grudging support to the various imperative measures which followed the original appropriation of $50,000,000 for the national defense, they lined themselves up almost solidly against the war-revenue bill.

In this editorial it is charged that the Democrats of the House in this hour of grave national peril have given a grudging support to measures which were imperatively necessary for the conduct of the war. We could very well leave that editorial to be answered by the records of this House, and so far as the editorial itself is concerned, I intend to leave it to that answer; but the serious aspect of it is that it was charged that this editorial bitterly assailing the whole Democratic party as represented on the floor of this House was written by a Democratic member of Congress.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] declared—and I repeat his very words in order to avoid the possibility of doing him an injustice—

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. I should like to know how this presents any question of personal privilege. If the gentleman from Texas admits that he wrote the article—

Mr. BAILEY. That who wrote the article?

Mr. RAY of New York. The whole burden of the complaint thus far is—

Mr. BAILEY. Does the gentleman mean to say that I admit that I wrote the article?

Mr. RAY of New York. No; I do not. I was raising a point here. I understood the gentleman from Texas to raise a question of personal privilege.

Mr. BAILEY. Yes.

Mr. RAY of New York. And the complaint he enters is that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] charged that a certain article in a certain newspaper criticising the Democratic party was written by a Democrat.

Mr. BAILEY. A Democratic member of the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. A Democratic member of the House, yes. Now, how that can be a question of personal privilege to the gentleman from Texas, unless he either wrote the article or thinks it was intended to charge him with writing it, I do not see.

Mr. BAILEY. It raises a question of personal privilege on the part of every Democrat in the House, as far as that is concerned, and I think that the gentleman from New York, as well as every gentleman on that side, might be perfectly willing for this side of the House at least to arrive at the truth about it. It is charged that we have given a grudging support to measures which are imperatively necessary, and then the charge is—

Mr. RAY of New York. I will tell the gentleman from Texas the point I wanted to raise is this: I wanted to do a little talking here on the general subject of pensions.

Mr. BAILEY. I am perfectly willing for you to do that.

Mr. RAY of New York. Without attacking anybody.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. You will get time quicker if you let him go on.

Mr. RAY of New York. This is by way of suggestion. I will let him go on.

Mr. LENTZ. Let him go on. We are going to give you all the time you want.

Mr. FLEMING. We will let you go ahead.

Mr. RAY of New York. I think I will let the gentleman go ahead.

Mr. GROSVENOR. If the gentleman from Texas will allow me—

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not know that it is at all necessary for me to be here. I must leave here at about twenty minutes past 3 o'clock. My sleeping-car space is all engaged and my baggage at the depot, and I ought not to miss the train.

Mr. BAILEY. I shall not occupy more than ten minutes or so. The gentleman from Ohio says:

I hold that article in my hand, and I am authorized to say that it was written by a Democratic Congressman now sitting on this floor.

Further on in the debate I asked the gentleman from Ohio if he would give the House the name of the offending Democrat. He replied that he could not do so without the gentleman's permission, unless he committed a breach of confidence. The gentleman from Ohio declared in the beginning of the speech that he was authorized to say that this editorial was written by a Democratic member of Congress, and if his authority came from the newspaper, I agreed that if the editor of the paper had given him the information, the editor's statement would not authorize the gentleman from Ohio to divulge the name of the author of the article without the author's own permission.

The gentleman from Ohio, later on in the controversy, did go so far as to say that a colleague of his, sitting near him, had heard a Democratic member of the House admit the authorship of the article; but my statement that he could, without permission, divulge the name was predicated entirely upon the supposition that when the gentleman from Ohio said he was authorized to say the editorial was written by a Democratic member of this House, his authority for that statement was from the editor of the newspaper in which the editorial appeared. But to my amazement the next morning I found in the same paper the following editorial paragraph:

Will the Hon. CHARLES H. GROSVENOR kindly send to this office the name of the Democratic Representative who announced himself as the author of the leading editorial in the Morning Times of June 23, entitled "Democratic folly"? It occurs to the editor of the Times that his interest in the identity of this extraordinary individual is greater, perhaps, than that of any member of the House, be he Democrat, Republican, or Populist.

Now, I do not assume to advise the gentleman from Ohio upon a point so delicate as that; but he knows, as well as I do, that the rule among men of honor is that when a demand is made for a name it is equivalent to a denial of the charge; and when the newspaper calls upon him to send to its office the name of the Democrat who declared that he was the author of that editorial, it was a denial of the fact that any Democratic member of the House had written it.

It raises a question of veracity between the gentleman from Ohio and the Washington Times. I have no interest in that, and it is not necessary for me to express an opinion as to which side I would believe; but I do have an interest, and every Democrat on this floor has an interest, in knowing the guilty man, because upon me and upon every Democrat who occupies a seat here an imputation rests that he has been assailing his associates from ambush. If there is a Democrat so lost to all sense of honor and decency that he not only attacks individual members of his party, but attacks and misrepresents the conduct of the party itself upon important measures, and, not content with that, goes further and predicts Republican success and rejoices in it—if there is a man of that kind on either side of this Chamber, every man on both sides ought to be willing to uncover him before the public. [Applause.]

Upon his brow there ought to be written in letters of living light the word "Slanderer!" so that in after years all men may know him and all honest men may shun him. [Applause.]

If he will not stand up himself and avow before his colleagues his authorship of that article, then the gentleman from Ohio, as well as every other man here, is absolved from all obligations to protect him from the consequences of his own disgraceful treachery.

I want to say to the gentleman from Ohio, further, that upon close investigation—almost a complete personal investigation—every gentleman on this side denies the authorship of that article. I have conferred with every man who by any possibility, in our judgment, could have written it, and they have all said that they did not write it. With this statement before him, it is due not only to the Democrats, but it is due to the gentleman from Ohio himself, that he no longer protect a man who refuses to avow his own disgrace.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Will the gentleman allow me just a moment? I feel confident that this side of the House will now authorize the gentleman from Texas to speak in our behalf, and say that every man present now on this side of the House authorizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] to announce the name of the author of that article.

Mr. BAILEY. I believe every man will do that; and furthermore, in the name of every Democrat on this floor, I challenge the gentleman from Ohio to give the name of that Democratic member.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas has not been quite as frank as he usually is in a contest of this character; but I will assume that he has done it in good faith, and overlooked a very material statement made by me at the time to which he refers, or it would have shown him that any attempt to make it appear that I represented or implied that my informant was the editor of the paper has done me an injustice, and himself.

Mr. BAILEY. I simply want to say to the gentleman that in connection with the words "I am authorized to say" the authority can come from but one of two persons, either the editor or the author himself; and if the man himself authorized you to make the statement, then certainly you can not be bound in honor to protect him by withholding his name.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That depends on a variety of circumstances. Let me read what I said:

There is a gentleman sitting within 4 feet of me who heard a Democratic Congressman say to both of us that he was the author of this paper.

So I did not make any reference pointing in the direction of the editor.

Mr. BAILEY. I will agree that on that statement the gentlemen might not be authorized to divulge the name; but to refer further back, in the early part of his speech, he declared that he was authorized to say it "was written by a Democratic Congressman sitting on the floor." I assumed, in view of what subsequently followed, that of course the member himself did not authorize him to make the statement, because he declined to give his name, and then there was but one other person who could have authorized him to make the statement, and that was the editor of the paper, who practically denies it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. My friend from Texas and I disagree only to this extent: He argues that my statement that I had the authority for certain things implies that I was authorized by the author, or the alleged or pretended author, to make the statement.

Mr. BAILEY. I took it that you were authorized by the editor of the newspaper.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, whatever way. Now, my construction is that I was authorized to make the statement that it was a Democratic Congressman who wrote it, because a Democratic Congressman had told me that he wrote it.

Mr. BAILEY. The word "authorized" does not mean that.
Mr. GROSVENOR. Do you not think, my friend, that is drawing a little too fine a sight?

Mr. BAILEY. When the gentleman made that statement, I thought he could not, without a breach of confidence, divulge the member's name; but I was proceeding on the theory that the gentleman from Ohio understood the exact meaning of the English language, and when he said that he was "authorized" I thought he meant exactly what he said and said exactly what he meant. Now, there were but two men on earth that could authorize him to make the statement—one was the editor in whose paper it appeared and the other was the author himself. When he declined to divulge the author's name, saying to do that would be a breach of confidence, I supposed of course that his authority to make the statement was from the editor of the paper; but the editor of the paper denies, in substance and to all intents and purposes, that he authorized the gentleman from Ohio to make the statement and that a Democratic Congressman wrote the editorial.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I took particular pains to exonerate the editor by stating my authority for the statement was the statement of the Democratic member himself.

Mr. BAILEY. If any Democratic member told you that, he ought to have the manliness to tell his Democratic colleagues the same thing, and if he does not, the gentleman from Ohio ought to tell it for him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, if you will let me proceed with my statement, perhaps I would have been wiser not to have involved my Democratic brothers in such a turmoil, and I feel painfully regretful that I did. Nevertheless, I made the statement, and I made it in perfect good faith, and I made a truthful statement.

Mr. BAILEY. I want to ask the gentleman from Ohio this question—

Mr. GROSVENOR. Let me finish my statement.

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, ask the question you want to and then, perhaps, I can finish the whole statement.

Mr. BAILEY. I want to ask the gentleman if the Democrat who told him this authorized him to make that statement on the floor?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Decidedly not.

Mr. BAILEY. Did the gentleman think he had a right to make that statement and withhold the name of the Democratic member?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes; I think so. I will debate that with you some time when the weather is cooler.

Mr. BAILEY. The idea that a man can make a statement of that kind and yet not give his name is at least singular.

Mr. GROSVENOR. There are plenty of such things as that arise in this country. Now, then, I wish to say further that it is my opinion that a matter of such enormous importance as this ought to be divulged. I did not think when I made the statement it was a matter of any serious importance. [Derisive cries of "Oh, no!" on the Democratic side.] If my friends over there will keep still and treat me with decent respect, I will go forward. I had a desk full of like criticism, and one was from a distinguished newspaper in the State represented by my friend from Texas.

Mr. BAILEY. Will you give us the name of the paper?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The Galveston News.

Mr. BAILEY. It is not a Democratic paper and has never supported a Democratic candidate for ten years, and I hope it never will. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. It has never supported a Republican, and so you have had the last of it. You have it later than we. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Now, I think this matter has taken shape and importance in the estimation of my friends on the other side to such extent that they ought to know the name. I think that the tendency of the whole argument is to prejudice me in the eyes of gentlemen on that side who so earnestly think I ought to tell who this gentleman is. Now, I will not accept the challenge of the gentleman from Texas that I make known the name of the man at this time; but I challenge the man who made that statement to me, and who knows he made it, and who knows that I know it, and who has admitted it to me within twenty-four hours—I challenge him to make a frank statement to his comrades of the truth.

Mr. BAILEY. Is he on the floor now?

Mr. GROSVENOR. If he does not do that at some early time, it may become necessary—

Mr. BAILEY. Is he on the floor now?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Wait a moment. If he does not do that within a reasonable length of time, it is barely possible I may take the view of the case that the gentleman from Texas does.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from Ohio say whether that member is on the floor or not?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not propose to answer that question.

Mr. BAILEY. I call on every gentleman on this side to say by rising that he did not write that article.

[As the Democratic members rose from their seats in a body, there were cries from that side of the House to Mr. GROSVENOR of "Point him out!" "Who is he?" etc.]

Mr. GROSVENOR. There are some gentlemen standing up over there whom I would not classify as Democrats. I do not know how to go through with the catechism. I remember an occasion when a body of men not so large as the Democratic minority on the other side asked that sort of a question. They asked, not of a Republican Congressman, but of a much higher Power, "Is it I?" I do not remember that the culprit at that time answered, and I am afraid the culprit is not going to answer now.

Mr. BAILEY. If there is one, he will answer. I still repeat that I think the gentleman from Ohio owes it to himself, to the House, and to every Democrat on this floor to give the name of the man, because the gentleman said he was authorized to say that the article was written by a Democratic Congressman.

GEORGE W. LAWRENCE.

Mr. MAHON. I ask unanimous consent for the passage of the bill which I send to the desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 2234) for the relief of the estate of George W. Lawrence.

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of George W. Lawrence for further compensation for the construction of the U. S. monitor Wassuc under his contract with the Navy Department of June 2, 1863, may be submitted by his personal representative within six months after the passage of this act to the Court of Claims, under and in compliance with the rules and regulations of said court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine and render judgment upon the same: Provided, however, That the investigation of said claim shall be made upon the following basis:

The said court shall ascertain the additional cost which was necessarily incurred by the contractor for the construction of the ironclad monitor Wassuc under said contract in the completion of the same by reason of any changes or alterations in the plans and specifications required and delays in the prosecution of the work: Provided further, That such changes or alterations in the plans and specifications required were occasioned by the Government of the United States; but no allowance for any advance in the price of labor or material shall be considered unless such advance occurred during the prolonged term for completing the work beginning February 3, 1864, and then only when such advance could not have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary prudence and diligence on the part of the contractor: And provided further, That the compensation fixed by the contractor and the Government for specific alterations in advance of such alterations shall be conclusive as to the compensation to be made therefor: Provided, That such alterations, when made, complied with the specifications of the same as furnished by the Government aforesaid: And provided further, That all moneys paid to said contractor by the Government over and above the original contract price for building said vessel shall be deducted from any amounts allowed by said court by reason of the matters hereinbefore stated: And provided further, That if any such changes caused less work and expense to the contractor than the original plans and specifications a corresponding deduction shall be made from the contract price and the amount thereof shall be deducted from any allowance which may be made by said court to said claimant.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DALZELL). Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? The Chair hears none. The question is, Shall the bill be read a third time?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. What amount is involved in the bill?

Mr. MAHON. I will make a short statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Did the gentleman from Iowa object?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I want to know what amount is carried by the bill. This bill, I understand, is one which carries a pretty large amount. The claim has been before one or two boards already. It is a stale claim—

Mr. MAHON. No.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. And I must object to it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is now before the House.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I want to make a statement. I believe the bill is before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the request for unanimous consent was put to the House and no objection was made.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I was looking for the papers with the purpose of making objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The fact is, however, that the bill is before the House by unanimous consent, and the question is, Shall it be read the third time?

Mr. MAHON. I think I can satisfy the gentleman from Iowa that the bill is all right.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I made the point of order that this bill involves an appropriation and should be considered in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But the House has already given unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill; and its consideration had proceeded so far that the question was put whether it should be read the third time.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I submit to the Chair that there was not sufficient time given—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is certainly before the House by unanimous consent.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Very well.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the bill is not a proper one, it can be voted down. The question is, Shall the bill be read a third time?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. The gentleman from Pennsylvania wanted to make a statement, and I want to say something in reply.

Mr. MAHON. I am perfectly willing.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman.

Mr. MAHON. I do not wish to take advantage of the gentleman from Iowa or any other gentleman. If the bill is not right, let him state his objections.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Let us see what the parliamentary status is.

Mr. LOUD. The bill is before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Iowa desire to be recognized?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Not before the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but after.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the ruling made by the Chair is a very dangerous one. I do not care about this bill, but I was closely watching, and my recollection is that the consent had just been given, and no further action had been taken by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair had put the question on the third reading of the bill.

Mr. LOUD. I was unable to hear the Chair, and I was as close as any member can get to the Chair, and was paying close attention. I do not care about this bill, but for the future guidance of the House, I think it would be a very dangerous precedent to shut a man off from raising the point that the bill must be considered in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I am thoroughly familiar with the facts surrounding this bill. I made a full and complete report to the House, which anybody who wants to see can read. It has been recommended by seven committees of this House in seven Congresses, and the same in the Senate. It passed this House three times, and passed the Senate three times, but failed to reach the President. That was, if I am correct, for a direct appropriation.

This matter in contention involves, between the Government of the United States and this party, about $60,000. Against this claim the Government of the United States has probably a considerable set-off. I refused to report a bill asking for a direct appropriation. The bill refers the whole matter to the Court of Claims.

Mr. LOUD. How much did the bill carry when it carried a direct appropriation?

Mr. MAHON. I think about sixty-eight or seventy thousand dollars.

Mr. LOUD. And now the gentleman states that there is a Government set-off.

Mr. MAHON. Just wait until I get through. This bill as drawn sends the matter to the Court of Claims. I suppose that when the matter gets before the court, it will appear that while there was an increase in the cost of material and labor caused by the delays and interference on the part of the Government in changing the plans of the vessel, it will also appear that a considerable portion of the changes made the cost less than the work the contract called for.

Whatever that amount is, it will be a set-off to the total of the claim. This bill has passed the Senate for the third time and passed the House three times. We want to refer it to the Court of Claims and let that court and a jury ascertain all the facts between these parties. This claimant may get sixty thousand dollars, and he may not get ten. The Attorney-General of the United States will put in a defense to part of it. It is a carefully drawn bill. The man is entitled to go to the Court of Claims, and he does not ask for a direct appropriation.

Mr. LOUD. What is the possible set-off?

Mr. MAHON. I should think the amount is probably fifteen or twenty thousand dollars. There is no doubt that some of the changes made some of the work cheaper than it would have been if the original contract had been carried out, but other changes resulted in greatly increasing the expense.

Mr. LOUD. Let me suggest to the gentleman—

Mr. MAHON. There is no question but what a great deal of the work caused by these changes outside of the contract cost the contractor a great deal more than the work called for under the contract would have cost. Now they can not agree—

Mr. LOUD. Let me make a suggestion to the gentleman about the line of his argument. His argument was that this bill had been reported and passed several times.

Mr. MAHON. Three times in each House.

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman says it passed for $70,000. Now the claim is for $60,000, and there is a set-off of $15,000. There must have been lax investigation heretofore somewhere.

Mr. MAHON. There is a contention between these parties. The contractor insists that he is entitled to the whole amount. This district attorney of the United States insists that the Government has a set-off. Now, like all litigants, they can not agree, and this bill proposes to refer the matter to the Court of Claims and let the court pass upon the question and settle it.

Mr. LOUD. Has it never been before the court?

Mr. MAHON. No; not that I know of. I think it is a perfectly fair bill. I have tried to get it up here on private-bill day, but we have been deprived of our day for three months, or I would not bring it up here by unanimous consent.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I should like to see a copy of the bill.

Mr. MAHON. I will give you a copy of it.

Mr. LOUD. This goes to the court for judgment, does it not?

Mr. MAHON. Oh, yes; it is not under the Bowman Act. If it was, I would simply ask for findings; but it is not under the Bowman Act or the Tucker Act, and the court must either throw out the whole claim or enter a judgment, and if it renders a judgment, then this gentleman has got to come back to this House for an appropriation to pay whatever the court finds.

Mr. LOUD. It would be a proper matter to go into the deficiency bill, though, as a judgment. It would not come up for investigation really.

Mr. MAHON. Well, it would go to the committee for its judgment, and it is a careful committee.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention to the fact that this claim has been submitted to what is known as the Marchand board, and that board found that there was nothing whatever due. This matter takes me by surprise.

Mr. MAHON. The Marchand board found simply that they had no jurisdiction over it.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. It has been before both the Selfridge board and the Marchand board. I find here in the report of the Marchand board on the claim of George W. Lawrence for the light-draft monitor Wassuc that the contract price was $386,000; that the whole increased cost of the work over the contract price, as claimed by the contractors, was $210,000; that the amount already paid the contractors over and above the contract price was $169,000, and on the claim for increased cost, caused by the delay of the Government, it is determined by the board that nothing is due.

Mr. MAHON. Your own figures would give thirty or forty thousand dollars.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. No; they have got $169,000 that they never were entitled to, and the Marchand Board, which was the only legal board that ever made these investigations, say there was nothing due. Therefore, I insist that this bill should not pass this House.

Mr. MAHON. If the gentleman would read that report of the Marchand Board (as I have read it, and read it carefully, and I am familiar with nearly all their findings), the Marchand Board found that the question of increased cost by reason of the delays caused by the Government was one of damages, and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the Department, and not included in the jurisdiction of the act that referred these cases to that board. The very contention of the board is that they had no jurisdiction of it and they never considered it; that is, as to the extra cost.

There is no question but what the Government set aside the contract as made and made large and extensive modifications, because other monitors built under the same plan had proved to be an absolute failure. When this monitor was half constructed, they made almost an entire change in the plan of the boat. During that time, while the Government was delaying the work, the wages of mechanics rose from a dollar and a half to four and five dollars a day, and the cost of material increased accordingly.

That is the controversy. But, on the other hand, some changes were made that made less work, and the only controversy in this case is for the court and the jury, not by an ex parte proceeding like that of the Marchand Board, but under the rules of law and evidence, to carefully inquire and find out what is due to this man, if anything. They may not allow him a dollar. They may allow him $5,000 or $10,000, but if they give him his whole claim they will allow him $68,000.

All the papers are on file in the Department. This is not a stale claim. It has been before these boards. It has been before Congress, and this House three times and the Senate three times, after a careful investigation, passed this bill. Now I ask that the case may go to the Court of Claims and let that court settle it forever. It can not do any harm to the Government. It is simple justice to the man and to the Government that the matter should be settled. You can trust your courts. I would let any man go there for the determination of such a question.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Your parties have received $169,000 above the contract price already.

Mr. MAHON. If they have received all they are entitled to, then they will not get anything.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. The official documents here show that they have received $169,000 above the contract price.

Mr. MAHON. Yes; that is right.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. They have received it and accepted it. They made a claim for extra work and received $169,815.87.

Mr. MAHON. No; the Government allowed them for changes, but never allowed them for the advance in wages and in cost of material, an entirely distinct claim. If they can not show there was extra cost in the way of labor and material by reason of the changes and delays caused by the Government, then they will get no damages.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. The case stands just this way: These parties made claim for extra compensation and received $169,815.37, and accepted the money. Then they made another claim, and that was referred to the Marchand board, and that board, after a careful examination, made a report, a copy of which I hold in my hand, stating that nothing was due these parties. Now, ought there not to be an end of this matter? I have not read the bill, and I did not expect the bill to come up. I do not know but what the bill might go so far as to give to the Court of Claims authority to render judgment in favor of these parties for something not due to them.

Mr. MAHON. Let the bill be read again.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I think, Mr. Speaker, if I can not verify it by an examination now, I can do so afterwards. This is a claim that belongs to a class of claims of that old Secor scandal. It belongs to the same class of claims; but I think upon examination gentlemen will see that the act of Congress under which this claim was submitted provided that the receipt should be in full.

Mr. MAHON. No.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I am very sure that it is. That is my recollection. My attention was called to it some two or three years ago, and my recollection is that the act of Congress under which the $169,000 for extra allowance was paid provided that it should be in full of all claims. These parties accepted it, and now I give the facts to the House as I understand the case.

Mr. MAHON. This is not like the Secor claim. I examined that claim.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. They are all on my list.

Mr. MAHON. I wrote a vicious adverse report against the Secor claim. You will find it filed within the last three months. I have filed adverse reports in a large number of cases where the claim embraced increase of wages and advance in material. If it had not, in my opinion, been an honest case, there would have been an adverse report filed in this case. The Marchand board simply say that these parties had been paid in full for the original contract and for the changes, but they declined to go into the question of the increase in wages and advance in material. And that is the point in this case. It has passed Congress before.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I submit the matter to the House, with the facts as I understand them.

Mr. BARTLETT. Is this a unanimous report?

Mr. MAHON. It is a unanimous report. There is not a report coming from the committee that is more just than this one.

Mr. BARTLETT. I understood the gentleman from Iowa to say that the party had accepted payment in full of this claim?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. A claim for extra work and labor was submitted under an act of Congress which, I am sure, provided that the allowance then made should be in full.

Mr. BARTLETT. This grows out of the same contract?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF (continuing). One hundred and sixty-nine thousand dollars was allowed and paid to the parties.

Mr. BARTLETT. And this grows out of the same contract?

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. It grows out of the same contract.

Mr. MAHON. Now, the matter in controversy has never been adjudicated.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. There are a large number of these cases, and they are all alike, practically. They received an allowance under the Selfridge board, and under an act of Congress which I am sure provided that any allowance received should be in full. They come here now again; the report of the Marchand board, the second board appointed, had disallowed their claim entirely, and they ask to go to the Court of Claims under a provision which nobody could support for a moment.

Mr. MAHON. If the gentleman from Iowa is correct, the Attorney-General of the United States will confront these people in the court with that act of Congress he speaks about and that receipt in full.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. And they will confront him with this act.

Mr. MAHON. No.

Mr. BARTLETT. I call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the gentleman from Iowa to the fact that the President of the United States vetoed a bill which we passed very much like this, giving an old claim the right to be heard before the Court of Claims, not long ago.

Mr. MAHON. You mean the Chouteau claim. That is not like this at all.

Mr. BARTLETT. That claim was very much like this. It passed this House, and when it came back there was not a solitary vote to pass it over the veto of the President.

Mr. MAHON. Because it had the French spoliation and other things on it.

Mr. BARTLETT. Oh, no. It was this session of Congress. The veto was written by Mr. McKinley.

Mr. MAHON. No; it was not Mr. McKinley; it was Mr. Cleveland.

Mr. BARTLETT. It was something with reference to some patents.

Mr. OSBORNE. It was the Tice claim.

Mr. BARTLETT. The Tice claim. It passed in this House, and passed by a large majority. It was one of the old claims that had been before the court and passed on by the court, and when we passed that bill and sent it to the President, he vetoed it. It was passed in a slim House like this, and there was not found a man in the House who would vote to pass it over the veto of the President.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. HULL. I hope that will not be done. I have two important conference reports that I desire to submit.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. As the gentleman has a conference report to present, I will withdraw that motion.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman from Iowa can take the floor for that purpose.

Mr. MAHON. You can not take me off the floor.

Mr. PAYNE. I was taken off the floor in that way.

Mr. MAHON. If the gentleman wants to do that, if he wants to insist on a discourtesy to me, he can do it.

Mr. HULL. I do not believe it will take more than a few minutes, and it is very important that the bills should pass.

Mr. MAHON. I will agree to it if you will give me the floor when you get through.

Mr. HULL. I do not want to take the gentleman off the floor, and I do not want to be guilty of any discourtesy to him.

Mr. MAHON. With that understanding, I will yield.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa presents a conference report.

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the bill (S. 4800) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4800) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1 and 2, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

Strike out the matter inserted by said House amendments and strike out all of section 2 of the bill after the word "appoint," at the end of line 15, and insert in lieu of the matter so stricken out the following: "Two quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of colonel, 2 quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, 3 quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of major, and 20 assistant quartermasters of volunteers with the rank of captain; and the Secretary of War may assign an officer of the Quartermaster's Department in charge of each principal depot of the Quartermaster's Department, not exceeding 12, to be selected from the Regular and Volunteer officers of the Quartermaster's Department; and such officers while so acting shall have the rank next above that held by them and not above colonel, and the four principal assistants of the Quartermaster-General while so acting shall have the rank of colonel. The Secretary of War may assign such of the said volunteer quartermasters as may be deemed necessary to duty in the office of the Quartermaster-General, at the various supply depots or on other important and special work, and may continue such assignments for a period not exceeding one year after the close of the war, then to be discharged;" and the House agree to the same.

J. A. T. HULL,
B. F. MARSH,
WM. SULZER,

Managers on the part of the House.

JOS. R. HAWLEY,
W. J. SEWELL,
F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the conference report be omitted and the statement be read.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The conferees have agreed on S. 4800, relating to the Quartermaster's Department. It restores the 20 assistant quartermasters, and gives the right to the Secretary of War to assign an officer of the Quartermaster's Department in charge of each principal depot, limiting the number to 12.

It also inserts the same provision in this bill as in the commissary bill, advancing the officer assigned to this important duty one rank in place of re-commissioning him at a higher rank.

It increases the rank somewhat over that provided for in the Senate bill, and reduces the rank as provided for in the House bill.

J. A. T. HULL,
WILLIAM SULZER,

Conferees on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

SUBSISTENCE DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I present the conference report on the bill (S. 4810) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4810) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In line 1 of said amendment, after the word "for," insert the words "not exceeding;" in line 4, after the word "shipping," strike out the word "of;" in line 5, after the word "rank," strike out the words "of colonel" and insert in lieu thereof the words "next above that held by him and not above colonel;" and add at the end of section 2 of said amendment the following: "to be nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to be appointed by the President;" and the House agree to the same.

J. A. T. HULL,
M. GRIFFIN,
Managers on the part of the House.
JOS. R. HAWLEY,
W. J. SEWELL,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on S. 4810 have agreed.

The first amendment, inserting the words "not exceeding," simply provides for a limitation on rank.

The second amendment, striking out the word "of," is verbal.
The third amendment, striking out the words "of colonel" and inserting the words "next above that held by him and not above colonel," is a limitation advancing the officers so assigned one grade, while the original bill of the House gave positive rank of colonel and lieutenant-colonel.

The amendment at the end of section 2 simply provides for confirmation by the Senate.

J. A. T. HULL,
M. GRIFFIN,
N. N. COX,
Conferees on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

HARBOR DEFENSES.

Mr. HULL. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move that the Senate bill 4714, relating to harbor defenses, be taken up and the House agree to the conference asked for by the Senate. It came over from the Senate a few hours ago, and the Senate is waiting for it.

Mr. BARTLETT. Is that the bill with reference to punishment for destroying harbor mines?

Mr. HULL. It is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. What is the motion of the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. HULL. I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference asked for.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore appointed the following conferees on the part of the House: Mr. HULL, Mr. GRIFFIN, and Mr. HAY.

COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to announce the following committee assignments:

Mr. LOVERING, from the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. THORP, to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures and to the Committee on the Pacific Railroads.

Mr. GREEN of Massachusetts, to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries and the Committee on Labor.

Mr. NORTON of South Carolina, to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. RIXEY, to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

COMMITTEE ON CENSUS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair also announces the following Committee on the Census: Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois, Mr. RUSSELL of Connecticut, Mr. BABCOCK of Wisconsin, Mr. HEATWOLE of Minnesota, Mr. ACHESON of Pennsylvania, Mr. ALEXANDER of New York, Mr. ALDRICH of Alabama, Mr. WISE of Virginia, Mr. DE VRIES of California, Mr. NORTON of South Carolina, Mr. RIDGELY of Kansas, Mr. GRIFFITH of Indiana, Mr. McDOWELL of Ohio.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Mr. Speaker, I now renew my motion to adjourn.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I hope that motion will not prevail. There are a number of pension cases that ought to be disposed of.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Then I move that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. MAHON. I do not see, Mr. Speaker, how the gentleman can take me off the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has made a privileged motion.

Mr. HULL. Is the motion to take a recess a privileged motion? A motion to adjourn is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not a privileged motion.

Mr. PAYNE. I think it is enumerated as a privileged motion next after the motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That was so in the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses; but it is not so in this.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. I did not hear the ruling of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to take a recess is not a privileged motion under the rules of the present House.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF. Then I move to adjourn.

Mr. MAHON. I hope that motion will be voted down.

The motion was not agreed to; there being—ayes 30, noes 39.

Mr. MAHON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote on the bill. I am not going to weary the House this hot weather.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 12, noes 31.

Mr. MAHON. No quorum. I move now that the House adjourn.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were, on a division (called for by Mr. MIERS of Indiana)—ayes 53, noes 22.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MAHON. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the bill just voted on.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the bill will be considered as withdrawn. The question is on ordering the yeas and nays upon the motion to adjourn.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that instead of adjourning the House take a recess until 8 o'clock to dispose of pension bills.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Can a rule of the House be vacated by a motion to adjourn without a quorum? A rule of the House requires a session to-night.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question of no quorum was withdrawn before the motion was made. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS] asks unanimous consent that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. KING. A parliamentary inquiry. Did not the Chair announce that the ayes had it on the motion to adjourn?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has not announced the result.

Mr. KING. I so understood.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BAIRD. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 58, the noes 22.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The carrying of the motion to adjourn means that we shall have no recess for the purpose of considering pension bills to-night, does it?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is as capable of answering that question as the Chair.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. And I suppose other members have the same capability.

Mr. PAYNE. Before the call of the roll is begun, I renew the request of the gentleman from Indiana that we take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BAIRD. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. STEELE. I should like to know who objected.

Mr. BABCOCK. No gentleman rose to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order (which is equivalent to an objection) was called by the gentleman in front of the Chair [Mr. BAIRD].

Mr. STEELE. I renew the request that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BAIRD. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the roll on the motion to adjourn.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 53, nays 66, answered "present" 15, not voting 221; as follows:

YEAS—53.

Allen,	Bishop,	Curtis, Kans.	Fox,
Babcock,	Bodine,	Dalzell,	Griffin,
Baird,	Bradley,	Davis,	Hawley,
Barham,	Broderick,	De Armond,	Hay,
Barrett,	Brundidge,	Dinsmore,	Henry, Miss.
Burke,	Burke,	Fenton,	Henry, Tex.
Berry,	Curtis, Iowa	Fleming,	Howard, Ga.

Kelley,
King,
Kleberg,
Knowles,
Linney,
Little,
Livingston,

Lloyd,
Love,
Lybrand,
McClary,
McCulloch,
Maddox,
Mahon,

Marsh,
Moon,
Payne,
Pearce, Mo.
Perkins,
Rhea,
Sims,

Stephens, Tex.
Strait,
Wheeler, Ky.
Williams, Miss.

NAYS—66.

Alexander,
Bailey,
Baker, Ill.
Barlow,
Bartlett,
Belknap,
Brown,
Brownlow,
Bull,
Burleigh,
Burton,
Connolly,
Cowherd,
Cox,
Danford,
Davenport,
Davidson, Wis.

Ellis,
Evans,
Faris,
Gibson,
Graft,
Hemenway,
Hepburn,
Hicks,
Hilborn,
Hooker,
Kirkpatrick,
Kitchin,
Lacey,
Landis,
Lentz,
Lewis, Wash.
Loudenslager,

McCormick,
McDowell,
McRae,
Maguire,
Maxwell,
Mercer,
Miers, Ind.
Minor,
Mudd,
Norton, Ohio
Olmsted,
Osborne,
Parker, N. J.
Peters,
Ray,
Reeves,
Ridgely,

Robb,
Russell,
Shannon,
Stallings,
Stark,
Steele,
Sulloway,
Terry,
Updegraff,
Van Voorhis,
Ward,
Weaver,
Weymouth,
White, Ill.
Yost.

Aldrich,
Benner, Pa.
Brucker,
Clark, Mo.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—15.
Davey,
De Vries,
Gaines,
Griggs,

Jenkins,
Loud,
Packer, Pa.
Prince,

Stone, C. W.
Stone, W. A.
Thorp.

NOT VOTING—221.

Acheson,
Adams,
Adamson,
Arnold,
Baker, Md.
Ball,
Bankhead,
Barber,
Barney,
Bartholdt,
Beach,
Belden,
Belford,
Bell,
Bennett,
Benton,
Bingham,
Bland,
Booze,
Botkin,
Boutell, Ill.
Boutelle, Mo.
Brantley,
Brenner, Ohio
Brewer,
Brewster,
Bromwell,
Brosius,
Brouseard,
Brumm,
Butler,
Campbell,
Cannon,
Capron,
Carmack,
Castle,
Catchings,
Chickering,
Clardy,
Clark, Iowa
Clarke, N. H.
Clayton,
Cochran, Mo.
Cochrane, N. Y.
Coddling,
Colson,
Connell,
Cooney,
Cooper, Tex.
Cooper, Wis.
Corliss,
Cousins,
Cranford,
Crump,
Crumpacker,
Cummings,

Davison, Ky.
Dayton,
De Graffenreid,
Dingley,
Dockery,
Dolliver,
Dorr,
Dovener,
Driggs,
Eddy,
Elliott,
Ermentrout,
Fischer,
Fitzgerald,
Fitzpatrick,
Fletcher,
Foote,
Foss,
Fowler, N. C.
Fowler, N. J.
Gardner,
Gillett, N. Y.
Gillett, Mass.
Greene, Mass.
Greene, Nebr.
Griffith,
Grosvenor,
Grout,
Grow,
Gunn,
Hager,
Hamilton,
Handy,
Harmer,
Hartman,
Heatwole,
Henderson,
Henry, Conn.
Henry, Ind.
Hill,
Hinrichsen,
Hitt,
Hopkins,
Howard, Ala.
Howe,
Howell,
Hull,
Hunter,
Hurley,
Jett,
Johnson, Ind.
Johnson, N. Dak.
Jones, Va.
Jones, Wash.
Joy,
Kerr,

Ketcham,
Knox,
Kulp,
Lamb,
Lanham,
Latimer,
Lawrence,
Lester,
Lewis, Ga.
Littauer,
Lorimer,
Lovering,
Low,
McAleer,
McCall,
McClellan,
McDonald,
McEwan,
McIntire,
McMillin,
Mahany,
Mann,
Marshall,
Martin,
Meekison,
Mesick,
Meyer, La.
Miller,
Mills,
Mitchell,
Moody,
Morris,
Newlands,
Northway,
Norton, S. C.
Odell,
Ogden,
Otey,
Otken,
Overstreet,
Pearson,
Pierce, Tenn.
Pitney,
Powers,
Pugh,
Quigg,
Richardson,
Rixey,
Robbins,
Robertson, La.
Robinson, Ind.
Royle,
Sauerhering,
Sayers,
Settle,
Shafroth,

Shattuc,
Shelden,
Sherman,
Showalter,
Shuford,
Simpeon,
Skinner,
Slayden,
Smith, Ill.
Smith, Ky.
Smith, S. W.
Smith, Wm. Alden
Snover,
Southard,
Southwick,
Spalding,
Sparkman,
Sperry,
Sprague,
Stevens, Minn.
Stewart, N. J.
Stewart, Wis.
Stokes,
Strode, Nebr.
Strowd, N. C.
Sturtevant,
Sulzer,
Sutherland,
Swanson,
Talbert,
Tate,
Tawney,
Taylor, Ohio
Taylor, Ala.
Todd,
Tongue,
Underwood,
Vandiver,
Vehslage,
Vincent,
Wadsworth,
Walker, Mass.
Walker, Va.
Wanger,
Warner,
Wheeler, Ala.
White, N. C.
Wilber,
Williams, Pa.
Wilson,
Wise,
Young,
Zenor.

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. SAYERS, is unavoidably absent, attending a meeting of a conference committee. I ask that he be excused.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the gentleman's request will be granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. GRIGGS. I wish to inquire if the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. BOUTELL, has voted on this motion?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that he has not.

Mr. GRIGGS. I voted "aye," and I desire to withdraw my vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. GAINES. I wish to inquire if the gentleman from New York, Mr. BENNETT, has voted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. GAINES. I voted in the negative, and I desire to withdraw my vote. If the gentleman from New York were present, he would vote "aye."

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am paired with the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. GROW, and not knowing how he would have voted on this question, I will withdraw my vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. ALDRICH. I desire to be recorded as "present."

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I desire to inquire if the gentleman from New York, Mr. McCLELLAN, has voted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He has not.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. Then I desire to withdraw my vote and to be marked "present."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. BRUCKER. I am paired with my colleague from Michigan, Mr. SPALDING. Not knowing how he would vote on this proposition, I desire to withdraw my negative vote and to be recorded "present."

Mr. PACKER of Pennsylvania. I desire to be recorded "present."

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. MESICK with Mr. BURKE.

Mr. MORRIS with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. MILLER with Mr. CLARDY.

Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. ERMENTROUT.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio with Mr. CATCHINGS.

Mr. THORP with Mr. TALBERT.

Mr. FISCHER with Mr. SETTLE.

Mr. PRINCE with Mr. HINRICHSSEN.

Mr. COLSON with Mr. FITZPATRICK.

Mr. ROYSE with Mr. ZENOR.

Mr. SPRAGUE with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. HARMER with Mr. VANDIVER.

Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi.

Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. STROWD of North Carolina.

Mr. STURTEVANT with Mr. SLAYDEN.

Mr. BARNEY with Mr. CLAYTON.

Mr. ODELL with Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.

Mr. HENRY of Connecticut with Mr. BOTKIN.

Mr. FOSS with Mr. SMITH of Kentucky.

Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts with Mr. OGDEN.

Mr. JOY with Mr. PIERCE of Tennessee.

Mr. DOVENER with Mr. LESTER.

Mr. HENRY of Indiana with Mr. GRIFFITH.

Mr. BREWSTER with Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin with Mr. LITTLE.

Mr. QUIGG with Mr. CRANFORD.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia with Mr. OTEY.

Mr. CORLISS with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.

Mr. OVERSTREET with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.

Mr. KNOX with Mr. MCALEER.

Mr. TAWNEY with Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania.

Mr. MANN with Mr. JETT.

Mr. ALEXANDER with Mr. ELLIOTT.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana with Mr. BRANTLEY.

Mr. JENKINS with Mr. STOKES.

Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. LOUD with Mr. RICHARDSON.

Mr. HOWE with Mr. GUNN.

Mr. LOVERING with Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri.

Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. COONEY.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. DE VRIES.

Mr. DORR with Mr. DRIGGS.

Mr. MCEWAN with Mr. VEHSAGE.

Mr. WISE with Mr. NORTON of South Carolina.

Mr. BARNEY with Mr. DE GRAFFENREID.

Mr. GROW with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.

Mr. YOUNG of Pennsylvania with Mr. BENTON.

Mr. LORIMER with Mr. CAMPBELL.

Mr. CHARLES W. STONE with Mr. BLAND.

Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire with Mr. CARMACK.

Mr. HOPKINS with Mr. JONES of Virginia.

Mr. SPALDING with Mr. BRUCKER.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. SWANSON.

Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON.

Mr. PITNEY with Mr. DOCKERY.

Mr. CRUMPACKER with Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana.

Mr. BARRETT with Mr. COOPER of Texas.

Mr. SHELLEN with Mr. TODD.

Mr. BEACH with Mr. BRENNER of Ohio.

Mr. CONNOLLY with Mr. LANHAM.

Mr. DINGLEY with Mr. MCMILLIN.

Mr. SNOVER with Mr. HARTMAN.

Mr. BELFORD with Mr. DAVEY.

Mr. ROBBINS with Mr. BROUSSARD.
Mr. COCHRANE of New York with Mr. FOWLER of North Carolina.

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska with Mr. LATIMER.
Mr. HICKS with Mr. BANKHEAD.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE with Mr. McCLELLAN.
For this day:

Mr. CHICKERING with Mr. LAMB.
Mr. LITTAUER with Mr. JONES of Virginia.
Mr. SAUERHERING with Mr. HUNTER.
Mr. WILBER with Mr. MEEKISON.
Mr. CODDING with Mr. UNDERWOOD.
Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin with Mr. SULZER.
Mr. JOHNSON of North Dakota with Mr. BERRY.
Mr. BULL with Mr. BREWER.
Mr. KULP with Mr. VINCENT.
Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH with Mr. FITZGERALD.
Mr. GREEN of Massachusetts with Mr. CUMMINGS.
Mr. JOHNSON of North Dakota with Mr. HANDY.
Mr. HULL with Mr. MARSHALL.

On this vote:

Mr. OTJEN with Mr. SAYERS.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand that I made a mistake in saying, a few moments ago, that the Galveston News had not supported a Democratic candidate for ten years; and as I have no desire to do an injustice to any man or any paper, I desire to withdraw that statement.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. LOUD. Against that I raise the point that the last vote showed no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California makes the point of no quorum.

Mr. RAY of New York. I ask unanimous consent that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] asks unanimous consent that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock. Is there objection?

Mr. LOUD. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I move that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. PAYNE. What has become of my motion?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair can not entertain that motion when the point of no quorum has been made.

Mr. PAYNE. Does the gentleman make the point of no quorum?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That point has been made.

Mr. PAYNE. I call for the regular order, which I suppose is a count by the Speaker.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MIERS of Indiana) there were—ayes 47, noes 30.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 31 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Tuesday, July 5, 1898, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers in response to the joint resolution of Congress approved May 28, 1898, relating to a ship canal at Sabine Pass, Tex.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Henry C. Browne against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Francis B. Appling against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of John W. Hall and James P. Hall against The United States—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a list of the names of all civilians appointed to positions in the Volunteer Army since April 24, 1898—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. HENDERSON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 163) to provide for holding terms of the United States circuit and district courts at Butte, Mont., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1640); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7343) authorizing the Commissioner of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to pay certain dividends barred by the act of February 21, 1881, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1641); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BABCOCK, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4717) authorizing the use of typewriting machines for the recording of deeds and other instruments of writing in the office of the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1643); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. FENTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8631) for the relief of Gustavus Cooley, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1642); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. McRAE: A bill (H. R. 10878) to prevent the free use of timber or stone on public lands, except by bona fide settler miners, residents, and prospectors, for firewood, fencing, building, mining, and other domestic purposes, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BENNETT: A bill (H. R. 10879) to provide American register for the steamer Windward, presented to Lieut. R. E. Peary, United States Navy—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BOUTELLE of Maine: A bill (H. R. 10880) granting an extension of letters patent No. 244898—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. DINSMORE: A bill (H. R. 10881) to authorize Clifton R. Breckinridge to accept a medal presented to him by the Russian Government—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MAHON: A bill (H. R. 10882) granting a pension to Sarah A. McCann—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MEEKISON: A bill (H. R. 10883) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of John Donn, late of Company C, One hundred and sixty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH: A bill (H. R. 10884) granting a pension to James M. Travis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BOUTELLE of Maine: Petition of Sarah A. Hoskins for extension of letters patent—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. GRIFFITH: Petition of J. G. Parks and 2 other citizens of Dearborn County, Ind., in favor of the passage of House bill No. 10167, for a natural standard of value and a national monetary system—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWE: Resolution of the Irish National Club of New York City, Edward O'Flaherty, president, in opposition to the so-called "Anglo-Saxon alliance"—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. MAHON: Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of Sarah A. McCann—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of veterans of the civil war residing in Huntingdon County, Pa., in favor of the passage of Senate bill No. 2260, granting pensions to soldiers, sailors, and marines who served ninety days or more during the war of the rebellion, and to widows and minor children of such—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MEEKISON: Papers to accompany House bill for the removal of the charge of desertion against John Doan, late of Company C, One hundred and sixty-eighth Ohio Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. REED: Petition of Rev. J. T. Closson and others, of Lebanon, Me., asking for the passage of a bill to forbid the sale of intoxicating beverages in all Government buildings—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, July 2, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. J. F. HEISSE, of the city of Washington.

On motion of Mr. DAVIS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

THE FREEDMEN'S HOSPITAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 30th ultimo, certain information relative to the management of the Freedmen's Hospital; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and order to be printed.

JOHN C. COLEMAN.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9874) for the relief of John C. Coleman, of Emanuel County, Ga., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. Is the morning business closed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business appears to be closed.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution 259.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I do not think there are more than ten Senators present. I suggest the want of a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Tennessee suggests the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BATE. There are just ten present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Elkins,	Martin,	Shoup,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Mitchell,	Spooner,
Bate,	Frye,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Berry,	Gear,	Morrill,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Hale,	Pasco,	Teller,
Carter,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Turley,
Clark,	Harris,	Pettigrew,	Turpie,
Clay,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wetmore,
Cockrell,	Heitfeld,	Pritchard,	White,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Proctor,
Davis,	Lindsay,	Quay,
Deboe,	Lodge,	Roach,

The VICE-PRESIDENT (at 11 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m.). Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to morning business, with the leave of the Senator who has the floor.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly.

WINSLOW WARREN.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4806) for the relief of Winslow Warren, to report it favorably without amendment, and I ask leave to put it on its passage.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read for information.

Mr. HOAR. Let the bill be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Whereas Winslow Warren, of Boston, Mass., a commissioner of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, is justly entitled to compensation for services rendered to the United States in the years 1893 and 1894 as such commissioner, at the request and by the appointment of the Hon. William L. Putnam, judge of the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts, by an order of said circuit court dated September 15, 1892, directing him as special examiner to examine the records, files, and registry of funds of said court, and to report to the court on the completeness and correctness of the same, for which he has not been compensated: Therefore

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to said Winslow Warren the sum of $500, in full for the claim due him as aforesaid.

Mr. HOAR. I can make a statement in thirty seconds or thereabouts. This Mr. Warren is the old Democratic collector of the port of Boston. When an old clerk went out of office some years ago he was appointed by Judge Putnam to examine the clerk's accounts, not merely the accounts that are returned into the Department here, but especially the accounts for moneys paid into court, the accounts which did not go at that time at any rate, and I do not think they now go, through the ordinary Treasury accounting.

That has been the custom in Massachusetts from the beginning of the Government. The clerk had been in office a great while and it was a very important security to the parties and to the public to have it done. This gentleman was one of the commissioners and he was appointed by Judge Putnam a special examiner for this purpose. Judge Putnam allowed him $500 for the service and reported it to the Department. Mr. Attorney-General Olney writes a letter to the Department saying that the claim is just and reasonable and ought to be paid, but that the Department has not the power to pay it.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is the bill reported?

Mr. HOAR. It is reported from the Judiciary Committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

FALSE AFFIDAVITS, ETC.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6160) to amend section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to report it favorably without amendment. It is a House bill, which I should also like to put on its passage. It will take but a moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That every person who knowingly or willfully makes or aids, or assists in the making, or in any wise procures the making or presentation of any false or fraudulent affidavit, declaration, certificate, voucher, or paper or writing purporting to be such, concerning any claim for pension or payment thereof, or pertaining to any other matter within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Pensions or of the Secretary of the Interior, or who knowingly or willfully makes or causes to be made, or aids or assists in the making, or presents or causes to be presented at any pension agency any power of attorney or other paper required as a voucher in drawing a pension, which paper bears a date subsequent to that upon which it was actually signed or acknowledged by the pensioner, and every person before whom any declaration, affidavit, voucher, or other paper or writing to be used in aid of the prosecution of any claim for pension or bounty land or payment thereof purports to have been executed who shall knowingly certify that the declarant, affiant, or witness named in such declaration, affidavit, voucher, or other paper or writing personally appeared before him and was sworn thereto, or acknowledged the execution thereof, when, in fact, such declarant, affiant, or witness did not personally appear before him or was not sworn thereto, or did not acknowledge the execution thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years."

Mr. HOAR. If I may make one brief statement about this bill, I do not myself think it is necessary; but the House of Representatives think it is necessary, the Department of the Interior think it is necessary, and the Pension Office think it is necessary. It was drawn in the Department.

Under the existing law the making of blank affidavits or blank certificates or jurats to be filled up fraudulently, which is a common practice, can only be punished where it is proved to be done to defraud the United States. That has to be alleged and proved.

The law officers of the Department think that if a pension agent or claim agent or anybody having a transaction with that Department has on hand a lot of blank jurats or blank certificates, blank testimony signed by witnesses in blank to be filled up afterwards, and if they are filled up in aid of an honest claim against the Government, that is not doing it to defraud the United States. I do not think so. I think it is a fraud on the United States to impose on its officers as a genuine affidavit or a genuine certificate of the facts contained in it a paper which was signed in blank by the man who signed it and filled up afterwards. But if the practice is otherwise, if the Department think it is otherwise, it is better to make it clear; and accordingly the Judiciary Committee unanimously recommend the passage of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. And this bill covers that kind of an affidavit?

Mr. HOAR. This bill is to cover that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 10877) to amend chapter 43 of the acts of the second session of the Fifty-first Congress; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. GEAR presented a memorial of Aug. Wentz Post, No. 1, Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic, of Keokuk, Iowa, remonstrating against the erection of a monument to the late Gen. Albert Pike; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MALLORY presented a petition of the Democratic convention of Hamilton County, Fla., praying for the imposition of an import duty of 50 per cent ad valorem and 5 cents per pound on all long-staple cotton imported into the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FAIRBANKS presented a resolution adopted at a joint meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Order of Railway Telegraphers, held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 5, 1898, favoring the passage of the so-called anti-scalping ticket bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 917) to provide for the maintenance of the Free Public Library of the District of Columbia, to move that it be postponed indefinitely, the legislation having been effected in the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. HANNA, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 351) granting a pension to Charles Howard;

A bill (H. R. 4668) granting a pension to Maggie Morris; and

A bill (H. R. 7971) granting a pension to Mary L. Cook.

Mr. COCKRELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5463) granting an honorable discharge to Prentice Holmes, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HAWLEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 4840) to provide for a force of colored troops in the Volunteer Army of the United States.

OWNERS OF SHIP ACHILLES.

Mr. FRYE. I report back favorably without amendment from the Committee on Foreign Relations the bill (H. R. 4629) for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles. This is an act of mere justice, which has been delayed altogether too long, and therefore I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby is, authorized and directed to pay the owners of the British ship Achilles $1,543, for expenses incurred in rescuing, provisioning, and landing at Montevideo the crew of the wrecked American ship Arabia, in June, 1895.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why was not this claim settled before?

Mr. FRYE. I do not know. This ship was occupied twenty-eight days, and it landed twenty-eight people at Montevideo. The law allowed only $10 a head. Of course the demurrage of the ship alone was a good deal more than $10 a head. The matter ought to have been attended to before. The bill just passed the House, and I report it promptly. It came to the committee yesterday.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. THURSTON introduced a bill (S. 4838) for restoration to the active list of Lieut. R. H. Townley, retired, of the United States Navy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MASON introduced a bill (S. 4839) to establish the grade of vice-admiral in the United States Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 180) creating a commission for the sale of United States lots in the District of Columbia; which was read by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

LAND IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate by whom and under what authority reservation No. 180, in the city of Washington, is occupied.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 1st instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 129) to amend "An act for the correction of the military record of Wilhelm Spiegelburg," approved July 21, 1892;

An act (S. 873) to remove the charge of desertion against Edwin Higgins;

An act (S. 1737) to correct the military record of Patrick Hanley;

An act (S. 2063) to authorize the White and Black River Valley Railway Company to build a bridge across the Black River in Arkansas;

An act (S. 3277) to authorize appointment of a military storekeeper in the Army; and

An act (S. 3968) extending the time for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Yankton, S. Dak.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. MANTLE. Mr. President, I desire to ask leave of absence from the Senate. Very important business matters which require my attention compel me to make this request. I did not desire, under all the circumstances, to absent myself without making the request. I have been away from home now some seven months in attendance upon the sessions of the Senate. Living so far away, of course the distance prevents me from making trips as other Senators may do to attend to private matters, and only business of the gravest importance leads me to ask permission to leave at this time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Montana? The Chair hears none, and leave of absence is granted.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 10877) to amend chapter 43 of the acts of the second session of the Fifty-first Congress was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. PETTIGREW addressed the Senate. After having spoken forty minutes,

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. Having counted the members of the Senate now here, I find that there is not a quorum present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota yields to the Senator from Texas, who suggests the absence of a quorum. That suggestion being made, the Secretary is directed to call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Davis,	Hoar,	Quay,
Allen,	Deboe,	Kyle,	Shoup,
Allison,	Elkins,	Lodge,	Spooner,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	McBride,	Stewart,
Berry,	Foraker,	Martin,	Teller,
Burrows,	Frye,	Mason,	Turley,
Cannon,	Gallinger,	Morgan,	Turpie,
Carter,	Gear,	Morrill,	Wellington,
Chilton,	Hale,	Nelson,	Wetmore,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Pasco,	Wilson.
Clay,	Harris,	Pettigrew,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Pritchard,
Cullom,	Heitfeld,	Proctor,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

VOTING OF VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

Mr. HOAR. Before the Senator from South Dakota proceeds, I wish to say that I should like at some convenient time to the Senate to ask to have put upon its passage the bill authorizing volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections, in accordance with the policy which was adopted during the late war. The bill has passed the House of Representatives.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will yield to the Senator at this time for that purpose.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose that bill will not take up any time for debate. I should like to ask to have it taken up now; and if it shall lead to any debate, I shall postpone asking for its consideration until some other time. I ask that that bill be now put upon its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Massachusetts kindly state the Calendar number of the bill?

Mr. HOAR. It is Order of Business 1401, being the bill (H. R. 10550) to enable volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections. It was reported favorably from the Committee on Privileges and Elections day before yesterday.

Mr. PETTUS. I do not think that bill ought to pass, and I object to its consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to ask the Senator from Alabama if it will be agreeable to him at some early time that this bill may be called up for consideration? The session is approaching its termination, we hope, and I should like to do my duty to the committee and to the Senate.

Mr. PETTUS. I think the Senator from Massachusetts always does his duty, but I do not think, having the opinion of that bill that I have, that I ought to further its passage in any way, as I consider it very objectionable.

Mr. HOAR. I did not ask that. I do not think it would be proper for me to ask the Senator having the present matter in charge to interrupt the flow of debate, as I said before; but I wish to ask the Senator from Alabama if it will be agreeable to him if I shall call this bill up at some early time hereafter? I do not ask him, of course, to support it or to further its passage, but only to see whether we can dispose of it. Of course, I suppose the Senator will oppose it.

Mr. PETTUS and Mr. FRYE addressed the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS] has the floor for the purpose of answering a question put to him by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I do not think I ought to consent to the consideration of that bill until it is regularly reached on the Calendar.

Mr. HOAR. Very well. Then, I will give notice that at some early and convenient time, when the Senate is not occupied with the discussion of the measure now pending, I shall move to take that bill up.

INCREASED FORCE OF ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota has the floor on the pending resolution.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator from South Dakota yielding, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department.

Mr. DAVIS. Is that a war measure?

Mr. CARTER. It is a war measure, and it is important that it should be disposed of at this time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Montana?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That section 5 of an act entitled "An act reorganizing the several staff corps of the Army," approved June 23, 1874, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Ordnance Department shall consist of 1 Chief of Ordnance, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier-general; 4 colonels, 6 lieutenant-colonels, 12 majors, 24 captains, 20 first lieutenants.

"A chief ordnance officer may be assigned to the staff of an army or a corps commander, and while so assigned shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a lieutenant-colonel. A chief ordnance officer may be assigned to the staff of a division commander, and while so assigned shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major."

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish the Senator in charge of the bill would give the reasons and the necessity for this measure. I understand there have been appointed two majors for every regiment, and that the law allows only one. I see twelve majors are provided for here. I have been looking for legislation to take care of the surplus majors. We have more officers now in the Army, almost, than privates.

Mr. CARTER. I will state that this relates only to the Regular Army and not to the volunteer service of the United States.

Mr. FRYE. And to the ordnance branch only.

Mr. CARTER. The additional officers and the additional grade here provided are essential in many ways—for instance, to furnish a chief of ordnance to each army corps and division in the field, and for all independent armies operated. There is no provision of law making ordnance officers available for that work.

Mr. PETTIGREW. We have always had a surplus of officers in the Regular Army, and now we are creating a great number more.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator will find that is not the case here. The grade is somewhat increased, it is true, but the Chief of the Ordnance Department assured the committee of this body and of the other as well that this bill is necessary for the efficient administration of the Ordnance Department. The great increase in coast defenses, and the amount of construction now in progress under private contract, as well as at public places, requires the assignment of ordnance officers who are not now available for the purpose, and I am sure the Senator would find on full investigation that the bill is entirely meritorious and should be passed. It has the unanimous approval of the Military Committees of both Houses.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am not satisfied. I am not doing this for delay, however.

Mr. DAVIS. The bill seems to be leading to debate, and I object to its further consideration at present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I simply wish to ask the Senator from Montana a question. I understand that there have been appointed two majors for each regiment where the law allows only one.

Mr. HAWLEY. The law for the new Volunteer Army allows two.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I understand that one of these positions leaves no duty to be performed at all by the lieutenant-colonel.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am sorry the Senator does not understand the proposition at all.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I am trying to get information from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HAWLEY. The proper regiment now, under the law, is a regiment of three battalions of four companies each. Two majors can take proper command of two battalions, and a lieutenant-colonel is made to act as another major, so to speak. Each battalion of four companies has a commander under the colonel. It resembles a brigade in its formation. That is the formation adopted by all the nations of Europe. We are the last nation to adopt the twelve-battalion formation.

Mr. CARTER. This bill does not relate to the regimental organization at all.

Mr. HAWLEY. No; not at all.

Mr. CARTER. It is purely a bureau organization, having charge of the ordnance, both in the matter of construction and the matter of maintaining the ordnance branch of the public service. I trust the Senator from Minnesota will withdraw his objection.

Mr. DAVIS. If there can be a vote without further debate, I shall interpose no further objection.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Military Affairs.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I understand the bill relates purely and simply to the Ordnance Department and to the Regular Army, and does not take care of the surplus majors.

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. NELSON. I ask the Senator from South Dakota to yield to me that I may call up a bill which will not give rise to debate.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NELSON. I ask the Senate to put on its passage the bill (H. R. 10477) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build or authorize the building of a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River, between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in said State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896.

Mr. DAVIS. I shall object to any further business at present except the regular order.

Mr. PETTIGREW resumed his speech. After having spoken for an hour and five minutes,

Mr. TURPIE. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me to make a suggestion to the Chair?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes.

Mr. TURPIE. I wish to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that there is not a quorum of the Senate present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Senator from Indiana suggests the absence of a quorum, and the Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, it ought to be stated that there are, I think, but six or seven Senators present on the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. GORMAN. I object to any statement. Let the roll be called.

Mr. WHITE. Well, the statement has been made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Bacon,	Fairbanks,	Mallory,	Spooner,
Baker,	Frye,	Mason,	Teller,
Bate,	Gallinger,	Mitchell,	Thurston,
Berry,	Gear,	Money,	Turley,
Burrows,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Hanna,	Perkins,	Warren,
Cannon,	Hansbrough,	Pettigrew,	Wellington,
Clark,	Harris,	Pettus,	White,
Clay,	Hawley,	Pritchard,	Wolcott,
Cockrell,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,
Davis,	Lodge,	Quay,
Elkins,	McBride,	Shoup,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The Senator from South Dakota will proceed.

Mr. PETTIGREW resumed his speech. After having spoken ten minutes,

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from South Dakota kindly yields to me that I may make a report from the committee of conference on the deficiency appropriation bill, which I think will take but a short time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILSON in the chair). The report of the committee of conference will be read.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10991) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, and for prior years, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 5, 8, 9, 47, 49, 50, 60, 62, 71, 73, 74, 105, 124, 141, 147, 175, 176, 177, 184, 195, 202, 203, 204, and 215.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 29, 32, 33, 34, 35, 40, 41, 42, 43, 46, 48, 51, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 61, 63, 64, 65, 67, 68, 69, 72, 73, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 143, 144, 145, 146, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 176, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 204, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, and 224, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "To make the salaries of the Second and Third Assistant Secretaries of State $4,000 each for the fiscal year 1890, $1,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "delegates" and insert in lieu thereof the words "a delegate," and in line 4 of said amendment, after the word "year," insert the words "not exceeding;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment, after the word "Relations," insert the following: "at a compensation in full not exceeding $1,500, which sum is hereby appropriated;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment, insert the following: "To make the salary of the Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue $4,000 for the fiscal year 1890, $800;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of said amendment insert the following: "Provided, That no payment shall be made hereunder until the sureties on said contract shall consent in writing to the same;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment and add at the end thereof the following: "Provided, That no part of this sum shall be expended for pneumatic-tube service connected outside of said building;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 37, 38, and 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Transpose the matter inserted by said amendments to come in after line 12, on page 120 of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "The salaries of the officers and clerks of the mint at New Orleans, La., shall be the same in number and amount for the fiscal year 1890 as for the fiscal year 1893, and for this purpose the sum of $9,750 is hereby appropriated in addition to the amount appropriated in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1890;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment, after the word "Dakota," insert the words "fiscal year 1890;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "same," insert the words "fiscal year 1890;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment and add thereto the following: "Provided, That during such time as jurors are not in attendance upon said criminal courts the marshal may, in such cases, impanel the jurors in attendance upon the police court, who shall perform such duties, in addition to and as part of their duties in said police court;" and the Senate agree to the same.

tion to and as part of their duties in said police court;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 66, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Transpose the matter inserted by said amendment to come in after line 10, on page 117, of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following: "That the jurisdiction over the places purchased for the location of the Branches of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, under and by authority of an act of Congress approved July 23, 1888, in Grant County, State of Indiana, and upon which said Branch Home is located, and by authority of an act of Congress approved June 4, 1897, 'at the town of Danville, in the county of Vermilion, State of Illinois,' and upon which said Branch is now located, is hereby ceded to the respective States in which said Branches are located and relinquished by the United States, and the United States shall claim or exercise no jurisdiction over said places after the passage of this act: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall be construed to impair the powers and rights heretofore conferred upon the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in and over said places;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out of said amendment, in lines 5, 6, and 7, the following: "and as far as practicable from the residents of the respective States where forest reservations exist or may hereafter be set apart;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 103, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add at the end of the matter inserted by said amendment the following: "And so much of the trust vested in said boards and heretofore initiated as shall remain unexecuted on said date shall be vested in the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who is hereby authorized and empowered to complete the same;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For additional pay of physician employed by contract for the Indians of the Walker River Indian Reservation in Nevada, fiscal year 1890, $300;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 133, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out of said amendment, in lines 9 and 10, the following: "and no such sum shall be barred by the statute of limitations;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$60,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 201, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "one hundred and nineteen;" and, on page 100 of the bill, after line 24, insert as a separate paragraph the following: "Total amount of pay to increased force of Regular Army, under this act, $4,017,804."

And on page 102 of the bill, in line 16, after the word "surgeons," insert the words "at 7 cents per mile."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 203, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,968,475;" and, after said amendment, insert as a separate paragraph the following: "For pay of 42,000 enlisted men to complete regiments already organized, $5,959,718.31."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 213, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$17,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 214, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$28,400;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendment of the Senate numbered 30 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

EUGENE HALE,

W. B. ALLISON,

F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. G. CANNON,

JOSEPH D. SAYERS,

Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the report of the committee of conference. If there be no objection, the report will be agreed to. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. WHITE. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Maine what are the items which are now involved in disagreement?

Mr. HALE. It is a complete agreement upon everything with the exception of the Pacific Railroad matter, upon which the conferees do not agree and which will be reported to the House for the action of that body.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to say with relation to that matter, not to consume any time at all unnecessarily, that there can be no concession, as far as the railroad interests are involved, regarding that amendment without a protest here which will be prolonged, I think, much more than anyone anticipates. In considering the subject, I trust that the conferees on the part of the Senate will remember the conditions surrounding this subject and recollect that there can be no recession without a dispute here which is too disagreeable, in view of the atmospheric conditions, to anticipate.

If any additional time is attempted to be given for the payment of the railroad's indebtedness, or if any new privileges are sought to be conferred on the Central Pacific Railroad, such amendments will not be permitted without an indefinite contest. I am determined to prevent the according of any new advantages to this railroad. The whole matter may be stricken out of this bill with my consent, but it can not be altered in the railroad's interest.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendment No. 80.

The motion was agreed to.

BRIGHTWOOD RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10280) to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same amended as follows: At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted add: "Provided, That the issue of said bonds shall not in the aggregate exceed the amount necessary for the equipment aforesaid, and the total outstanding bonds and stock shall in no event exceed the sum of $150,000 per mile of single track;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the second amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

JAMES McMILLAN,
J. H. GALLINGER,
CHAS. J. PAULKNER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. W. BABCOCK,
G. M. CURTIS,
JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. PETTIGREW resumed his speech. After having spoken thirty minutes,

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me for a moment? I would not make the suggestion I am about to make if there were a reasonable number of Senators present, but there are by actual count, including the Presiding Officer, twelve Senators in the Chamber. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Senator from Georgia suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Bacon,	Elkins,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Kyle,	Quay,
Bate,	Foraker,	Lodge,	Spooner,
Berry,	Frye,	McBride,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Gear,	Mallory,	Teller,
Butler,	Gorman,	Money,	Turley,
Caffery,	Hanna,	Morgan,	Warren,
Carter,	Hansbrough,	Nelson,	Wellington,
Clark,	Harris,	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Clay,	Hawley,	Pettigrew,	Wilson.
Cullom,	Heitfeld,	Pettus,
Davis,	Hoar,	Pritchard,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. PETTIGREW resumed his speech. After having spoken one hour and five minutes,

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, this is a very interesting document that the Secretary is reading, and I think a quorum ought to be present to hear it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Elkins,	Lodge,	Quay,
Allison,	Fairbanks,	McBride,	Shoup,
Bacon,	Foraker,	Mallory,	Spooner,
Baker,	Frye,	Mantle,	Stewart,
Bate,	Gallinger,	Mason,	Sullivan,
Berry,	Gear,	Money,	Teller,
Burrows,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Thurston,
Butler,	Hale,	Nelson,	Turley,
Cannon,	Hansbrough,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Clark,	Harris,	Penrose,	Warren,
Clay,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Wellington,
Cockrell,	Heitfeld,	Pettigrew,	Wetmore,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Pettus,	White,
Davis,	Kyle,	Pritchard,	Wolcott.
Deboe,	Lindsay,	Proctor,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. PETTIGREW resumed his speech. After having spoken for fifteen minutes,

Mr. QUAY. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me for a moment in order that I may ask the Senate to take up a Senate pension bill which I am anxious to have passed by the other branch of Congress before it adjourns? If it were a House bill, I would not ask the indulgence.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

ELIZA M. MILLER.

Mr. QUAY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4382) granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 6, after the word "late," to insert "first;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty" and insert "seventeen;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eliza M. Miller, widow of James H. Miller, late first Lieutenant Company H, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN SEAMEN.

Mr. WHITE. Upon one occasion an effort was made to call up the bill (S. 95) to amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce. The bill was under consideration for quite a while in the Committee on Commerce and has been very carefully considered by the chairman of the committee and other members. The whole committee agreed finally that the chairman and I should look over the subject, and after much deliberation we have reached an agreement as to all of its provisions.

I should like very much to have the bill taken up and passed in the Senate as soon as possible. While I have no desire to dictate the hour or to attempt to do so or to urge it upon anybody, I suggest that the importance of the matter involved in the bill, which I think is thoroughly and generally understood, would suggest its early consideration. It would have been disposed of last evening, perhaps, had it not been that Senators, in the discharge of their duty of course, felt it necessary to object, because there were not sufficient members of the body here properly to consider it. I hope this Saturday evening we will be able to take it up and dispose of it, so as to let it go to the House. There is no controversy in the measure and it will not create any debate.

Mr. FRYE. Suppose the Senator from California asks unanimous consent that at 5 o'clock the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the bill he has referred to be considered?

Mr. WHITE. I will be very glad to make that request, and I do so.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request that at 5 o'clock the bill named by the Senator from California be taken up for consideration? The Chair hears none, and that will be the order.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, this is a government of limited powers, possessing only such attributes of sovereignty as are conferred upon it by the Constitution, such as were released to it and conferred upon it specially by the sovereign States that compose the Union. It is evident from the discussion already had, in fact, it has been conclusively proven, that the annexation of these islands by joint resolution finds no authority in the Constitution; that it, in fact, is a method in violation of the Constitution, because no such power has been conferred upon this Government by the Constitution.

But I believe it is equally well admitted that we have the power and the right to annex these islands by treaty; that such a method would be constitutional. As I am opposed to the annexation of the Hawaiian islands by treaty or otherwise, as my objection goes further than the objection that it is unconstitutional to proceed in this manner, I do not care to discuss the constitutional question. If the method were constitutional, if the power were complete and ample, still I should oppose the annexation of the islands, because I believe there is no argument which can be presented as a matter of expediency in favor of the annexation, and no benefit can be pointed out to the people of the United States that will come therefrom.

I can see the advantage to the people who reside upon the islands. That is clear. They go into partnership with the greatest nation of the world, with the richest people on the globe. What man would decline an equal partnership with the richest men in the world, and what people residing within the Tropics, comparatively poor, would decline a partnership with us? But where is our advantage?

Senators advocating the annexation of these islands sit silent while a most momentous debate is going on. While the greatest question ever presented for the Senate to decide is being discussed nothing comes from their lips. We fought this contest in secret session. We who oppose the annexation of the islands urged that the debate should be carried on in public, before the American people. For weeks we discussed this question and the friends of annexation presented their side of the argument. Why are they now silent? They were beaten in that debate, driven to the wall, unable to answer our contentions, silenced absolutely, and failed to secure annexation in a constitutional manner, by a treaty.

Now, when we get before the American people so absolutely vanquished were they that they are ashamed to present their side of the case. All we hear is what we see in the public press, talk about the sugar trust and the evil influences that prompt the opponents of annexation to this combat. No reason is given why the islands should be annexed and no statement of benefits that can come to the people of this country from their annexation.

In the debate a few days ago I answered what seemed to be the only argument I could hear of why the islands should be annexed. That argument was that they were on the road to Manila, that we needed them for a coaling station and a stopping place, and that while the distance was hundreds of miles farther than by our own islands, the Aleutian chain, still the currents, the winds, made this route more desirable.

Mr. President, if a coaling station to a certain point on the globe has a current in favor of the ship going to that point, the same current has to be encountered coming back. If favorable currents flow toward Manila by the Hawaiian Islands when a ship starts from San Francisco, unfavorable currents from the same spot encounter that ship on its return. It is as essential to have favorable currents to return as to go. Therefore, steam vessels follow the shortest route. Their course is dictated by reason. Commerce on the Pacific follows the shortest route.

The fact of the matter is that the Japan current flowing along by the western coast of the United States turns west below San Francisco and flows by the Hawaiian Islands. Its speed is from half a knot to 1 knot per hour. A vessel going west goes with it. When that vessel returns it comes against it, for it flows the year round. Of what use is a coaling station unless it is good both ways?

If a vessel going west from San Francisco should follow the shortest route, it is said it would combat the Japan current crossing the Pacific. This is not true. The Japan current reaches only to the forty-fourth degree of north latitude. South of that line it flows east. A vessel crossing the Pacific south of the forty-fourth degree of north latitude would combat the Japan current, but the vessels that cross the Pacific upon the shortest route from San Francisco or Vancouver pass north of the fifty-first degree of north latitude, in a calm sea, going and coming, without any current to combat or any current to assist. The consequence is that a vessel sailing from Vancouver to Manila would sail only 6,000 miles, and in that 6,000 miles could touch at Unalaska and at Kiska, two harbors of our own. A vessel sailing 10 knots an hour can reach Manila in twenty-four days from Puget Sound.

Our transports carrying troops for Manila have been on the way more than a month, and the slowest ship in the lot can sail more than 10 knots. They left San Francisco by the 7,000-mile route. They went down into the region of the equator instead of going the northern route. Our boys have been cooped up now for more than a month. It is thirty days since they left Honolulu, in the Tropics, where the heat is almost intolerable. Instead of being sent by the northern route, a thousand miles less in distance, through a cool and comfortable climate, we sent them into the region of typhoons and storms along the Tropics at this time of the year—an affair unheard of. They started over that broad expanse of the Pacific from Honolulu to Manila, 5,000 miles, without a haven or a harbor, without any chance to be communicated with, while if the flotilla had started from Puget Sound, going along our own coast across the Pacific, through cool and comfortable waters, in fifteen days it would have been at Yokohama, Japan. There we would have heard from it. It could have stopped again at Nagasaki.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask the Senator if it is not possible that the troops have gone to the Ladrone Islands, having landed there under orders from the powers that be?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Well, if they have been ordered to the Ladrone, it would be just about as smart a performance as some of the other orders that have been issued in this controversy. Stop at the Ladrone! I hardly charge the Administration with that, Mr. President. I leave that for its friends.

As I said before, a vessel leaving Puget Sound (and from Puget Sound our operations should be carried on in the Pacific), sailing 10 knots an hour, would reach Manila in twenty-four days. Our vessels left Honolulu on the 3d of June. It is now the 2d of July, and still they have not arrived at Manila. They have been cooped up in those ships in the Tropics, with disease and discomfort, when we had a route a thousand miles shorter and a cooler climate on a healthful course, without ocean currents either way; a route traveled by all the great steamship companies, a route traveled by every ship that crosses the Pacific, unless it has business at Honolulu, which compels it to go three days out of its course. And yet this absurd proposition that we need these islands as a coaling station is presented as a reason why we shall introduce into this country an undesirable, tropical, incompetent population.

Oh, but it is said that the northern route has ice and snow. As I showed the other day, it never freezes at Unalaska and it never freezes on the Island of Kiska. I find the following item in the Post of this city:

Acting Secretary Spaulding has been advised that twenty-five steamers and barges are building at Unalaska, making that support fifth in rank in the number of vessels under construction, though the vessels are all light draft for Yukon River travel.

Here is a harbor, one of the very best in the world, a harbor we own, a harbor on the track of commerce across the Pacific, a harbor 1,700 miles from Seattle in Puget Sound. Its area is sufficient to hold every vessel in the Navy of the United States and nearly our entire merchant marine besides. It has 20 fathoms of water. I read from Findlay's North Pacific Ocean and Japan Directory. This work I secured from the Navy Department, and it is authority with all navigators of the Pacific:

Dutch (Bay) Harbor or Ulakhta Bay is a fine landlocked harbor, with 15 to 20 fathoms of water throughout. It stretches southward from the northeast point of Amognak 14 miles. The holding ground in the center is good—14 to 15 fathoms over black mud and shells.

On the eastern side of Unalaska is the small bay of Killiliak (Killiluk). Unalaska here presents the appearance of being divided into two parts. The bay is perfectly sheltered from all winds—depth, 10 fathoms.

Unalaska Bay is on the north side of the Island of Unalaska and contains within itself two harbors absolutely landlocked, and it has already become the fifth shipbuilding point in the United States. But, independent of Unalaska, there are several bays and harbors extending along the Aleutian chain that are accessible at all times of the year, that never have any ice, and the last one, Kiska, is within 500 miles of the coast of Asia.

I submit that no man of sense or reason in managing his private affairs would neglect this chain of islands, these splendid harbors on the shortest route to where he wants to go and purchase or annex a country in the Tropics off from the route where he wishes to go? If I were going to build a cable to the Asiatic coast, I would build it from Puget Sound, and it would be a thousand miles shorter than to build it from San Francisco by way of Honolulu, and I would touch at the points in Alaska where there are forty times more Americans than there are in the Hawaiian Islands. Thus I would assist in developing that great empire in Alaska which we already own, 500,000 square miles of country, in a climate so cold that it can raise men capable of self-government. I would touch at Kiska. I would make that splendid bay, if you want a coaling port, the coaling port upon the route to Asia, instead of going down into the center of the Pacific a thousand miles off from the route and getting possession of a few tremulous islands gathered around active and extinct volcanoes.

Suppose an enemy should attack us from the Pacific, from Asia, and we had acquired the Hawaiian Islands and fortified Pearl Harbor and left the Aleutian chain untouched. Melville says that we can protect the Aleutian chain from Hawaii. The enemy would take possession of Dutch Harbor, 1,700 miles from our coast, and operate from there, sending their barges and coal to that point. They could occupy Kiska, or the Bay of Islands, half way between Kiska and Unalaska, and operate from there nearer our coast than Hawaii; and yet we propose to get Hawaii in order to protect Alaska. If we are going to protect Alaska, we must go there to protect it. Everybody knows that, and yet it is one of the arguments, foolish, flimsy, worthless, that are offered up in order to make an array in favor of annexation, for the Committee on Foreign Relations sends in that argument in their report.

Would we protect the coast of California from Hawaii if we acquired those islands? From what would we protect it? Armed cruisers? Vessels of war? Our cruisers at those islands would be of no assistance whatever in protecting our forts along the Pacific. We have no guns that have a range of 2,000 miles, not an effective range, and scarce a ship can sail that distance under forced draft without getting out of coal. So the enemy, concluding to attack San Francisco, starts around by the Aleutian chain. We expect it will come by Honolulu, so we will have our whole fleet down there. They attack San Francisco and their base of supplies is perhaps in British America, or they have brought barges along loaded with coal.

They appear before San Francisco and begin to bombard. We cable at once to Hawaii for our fleet, and it hurries and comes under full speed. Of course it comes in great haste, because the enemy are destroying the lives of our people. The Brooklyn, an armored cruiser, coming at its best pace, can travel 1,470 miles, and then it is out of coal. It is 2,100 miles to San Francisco. The New York could travel 1,845 miles, and then it would be out of coal. The Columbia could travel 1,814 miles, and then its coal would run out. The Minneapolis could travel 1,565 miles and the Olympia 1,408 miles; and not one of these could reach San Francisco, and some of them could not get two-thirds of the way up there.

But we will suppose they have not hurried, but instead have come at the slowest pace, because a ship would consume less coal and go more miles if it goes exceedingly slow than if it goes exceedingly fast. So the Indiana, steaming at the most economical rate, in knots could steam 4,805 miles and get to San Francisco, 2,100 miles, and engage in a fight for a day or two, and then, of course, it consumes coal at the greatest possible speed. She finds she can not enter the harbor, because the enemy's fleet is all around the entrance, and therefore she starts back to Honolulu for coal. She is obliged to sail in the most economical fashion in order to get back. If she should fight one day she could barely get back, and if she would fight two days she could not get back to this base of supply to renew her coal.

The Brooklyn can sail 4,342 miles by the most economic use of her coal. She could get up to San Francisco and have just coal enough to get back to Honolulu, but would not have time to fight at all. The New York would sail 4,486 miles. She could get up there and get back, and she could fight part of a day, if pretty careful, and she would have to return to Honolulu for more coal to go back and fight another part of a day. The enemy operating against San Francisco from Honolulu would be in the same bad fix.

So we can not defend our coast from Honolulu and the enemy can not attack us from Honolulu. They would be in the same situation if they owned the islands that we would be in if we owned them. The type of modern fighting ships is the same the world over. If they undertook to attack us from Honolulu, their vessels could not carry coal enough to more than get to our coast and go back by the most economic steaming. Suppose we engaged them and prevented them from getting back, and should fight them around a circle for three or four days, then what will we have to do? Follow them back? They would not get near to Honolulu when they would be out of coal and absolutely helpless and forced to surrender. So we are not afraid of naval attack.

By the way, Mr. President, if we were afraid, suppose we had no navy, and the enemy did attack our coasts, they could not land a great force of men. Sampson bombarded the coasts of Cuba for six weeks, and the only authentic report we have of the damage was that he killed a mule at Matanzas. We have shown how useless fleets are to bombard a coast unless you have men to back up the work of the fleet and land with them. We have been dodging around the shores of the West Indies for the last two months, and have accomplished absolutely nothing in the world. It is useless.

Modern warfare does not permit the destruction of an unfortified city. You can fire away at earthworks all you choose, and when night comes the enemy can repair them. Without a landing party you can do nothing. It is idle, it is foolish, to attack the coast of an enemy unless you occupy it with an armed force. Therefore, we do not fear their ships along the coast of the Pacific.

What is it, then, we fear? "Oh, we need these islands for safety," some Senator says. To cross the Pacific to these islands, spanning the 7,000 miles of water, with an army that could even land and stay a day upon our shores, would tax all the ships in the world to carry it and all their resources, and such vast quantities of food and ammunition that it is an impossibility, for that army must first cross the 5,000 miles of water to Honolulu and then 2,000 miles to our coast. Therefore there is nothing to fear, and we know it.

Mr. President, England, with a strip of water 20 miles wide, has resisted the assaults of Europe during all time. What would have hindered Napoleon from marching across that island with his victorious forces if it had not been for that strip of water? What did hinder him? Transportation by sea. No great army in modern times has been or can be transported long distances by sea. The greatest preparation ever made was made by Spain in 1588, when she sent her great fleet into the English Channel to transport the army in Flanders to the soil of England, but that 20 miles of water proved an impassable barrier, and the history of the Armada is well known to the world.

In 1281, Kubla Khan, the conqueror of China, the mighty Mongolian, overran all southern Asia, conquering it from Burmah to Siberia. He thought he would also add the islands of Japan to his crown, and he gathered an army to cross that 100 miles of water, an army of 150,000 men and a thousand ships. Japan at that time had a population of about one-tenth, or less, of the population of China and Mongolia, and yet no one of that great armament ever returned to China to tell the tale. The wind and the sea destroyed more of them than the armies of Japan. They never made a landing. The hundred miles of water between Japan and Asia have been a sufficient protection to preserve the independence of those islands.

And yet, Mr. President, we are told that we fear something if we do not acquire this worthless spot in the Pacific, the nearest land being 2,000 miles away. We fear what? Not ships of war, but the vast armies that will cross this intervening space and conquer our coast! What nonsense! Yet that is the only argument that is presented, except the argument that we need a coaling station in Hawaii to reach the coast of Asia. That argument we have completely exploded by showing that it is a thousand miles off the shortest route of travel.

Mr. President, the United States in times past, for a century, has held a position in relation to the other nations of the world different from that of any other nation that ever existed. One hundred years ago we issued to the world the first written Constitution. We said that governments derived their just powers from the consent of the governed; and, copying after that Constitution, 400 other constitutions have been made during these 100 years, and the name of this great Republic has gone forth throughout the world as a beacon of light to all strugglers for liberty.

We have occupied a position on this continent reaching from ocean to ocean, between the civilization of Europe and that ancient civilization across the Pacific. On the one hand, to the people of Europe we have furnished an asylum. Downtrodden, as they have been in the past, our example has liberalized their governments and conferred a measure of freedom on their people. On the other hand, we have furnished to the people of Asia an example of just government; an example of a government doing right; an example of a government which has abandoned the old doctrine that might makes right, that what you can do it is lawful to do, and setting up a new doctrine as protectors of the oppressed as an example to those who desire individual and national liberty.

So great has been the moral force of this grand position that no American can travel in any Asiatic country without being constantly reminded of it. No American can travel in those countries without being constantly reminded that he is welcome, that his nation is admired; and when you seek the reason you are told that it is because the United States recognizes and respects the rights of other nations and is not engaged in a career of conquest.

The people of China and Japan fear England, fear Russia, fear Germany; but they love and respect the United States. Shall we break down this splendid position? Shall we abandon the policy of a century? Shall we conquer and govern an unwilling people because we have the power?

The people of Hawaii do not seek this alliance. Their Government was overturned by the armed forces of the United States. We landed our marines and our guns and our armed men, and we overturned a government satisfactory to those people in the interest of a small body of sugar planters, sons of the missionaries, who believed their financial interests would be promoted thereby; and the friends of this measure dare not submit it to a vote of the people of Hawaii, because those people are nine to one opposed to annexation.

Where is our long-time boast that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed? Some one says that this is an old-fogy notion. It is not; it is new. That idea is only a hundred years old, and nations are thousands and thousands of years old, and all of them before we established that principle announced the doctrine that might make right. It is not an old-fogy idea. Is it to be abandoned in its youth? Is this great Government to recede from that splendid position and to take its first step in wrong, in crime, as a people by overturning the doctrine that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, and without the consent of those people force them to become part of this Union? Oh, Mr. President, I hope not.

Around this doctrine is the idea that comes along with it, that wherever our flag is planted, there it shall forever remain. It sounds fine, it is good Fourth of July stock, that wherever the American soldier has fallen and been buried that region shall become part of this country. Mr. President, this Government is maintained for the living, not for the dead. What can we do to contribute to the happiness and prosperity and comfort of our people alive is the problem for us to solve. No such sentiment as that, based on bad morals, as it seems to me, can ever take hold of the people of the United States.

Our sons' bodies lie moldering in the soil of Cuba; and yet, because they do, is that a reason why we should annex that island against the will of those people and force them to become a part of this Government? Would we not build a higher, a grander, and a more splendid monument to those men who fall upon the soil of Cuba if we there establish a free republic, if we there say to those people: "Govern yourselves under a constitution like ours, and we will see that no nation interferes with you?" What grander monument can be built to the heroes of the Maine than to build three republics where Spanish despotism has heretofore cursed the earth—in Puerto Rico, the Philippine Islands, and Cuba? The Malays and the Cubans are capable of self-government under a protectorate, or, hardly that, for the moral power of our position would be so strong that no protectorate would be necessary. An intimation on our part that no nation should interfere with the government adopted by the people of those islands would be enough, and that would be a grander monument to our dead than the mere sentiment that because their bones rest in that soil therefore we will conquer and subjugate an unwilling people.

But, Mr. President, what is the reason we want to annex these islands? The military reason, the naval reason, is not good. It has not been sustained by argument; it has been absolutely refuted and destroyed. Some have said that those islands possess commercial advantages; that they are rich in tropical products, and therefore we will annex them, so that we may grow those tropical products within our own borders.

Certain reasons were urged in the public prints and in executive session by the advocates of annexation, and I regret very much that we have to go outside of this Chamber to find out what induces them to support this measure. It seems remarkable that a great and momentous question like this should have no defenders on this floor. It is simply stated that a majority will vote for it. It is remarkable that a majority will vote for it when in sentiment and at heart a majority of this body are opposed to it. The excuse is given that the President is pushing the matter; that he has for a time abandoned his Executive functions to interfere with legislation; that Senators are constantly importuned and sent for and lectured to compel them to vote for this iniquitous measure, and that these influences persuade men to insist on staying here through hot weather, induce men to vote against their own clear judgment, against the interests of their country, and in favor of abandoning the policy of a century to acquire territory and a people unfit to assimilate with us or be a part of this great Republic.

Such is the situation. Induced by these arguments, of course you are dumb. You can not tell your true reason, and you have no other, and so you say, "Talk as long as you choose; we can not meet your argument, but we are going to beat you anyhow." I do not blame you for being silent. I would be silent if I had been bulldozed by a President, contrary to my convictions, to vote for that which I did not approve. It is the only way you can account for your silence. You have no honest argument. You dare not tell the real reason. So you sit here or run into the cloakroom to prevent being harried by the truth and to escape the chastising which you deserve.

There are only four of you, on the average, present—six or eight at the outside—and you have nothing to say. Keep silent. We will present this great question to the American people. It is better for you to keep silent than to tell the truth. It is better for you to sit in your seats or escape to the cloakroom or flee from the combat than it is to tell the American people that you do not dare to vote as you want to because you will not get the appointments for your friends of generals, majors, and captains.

Are there not some of you who have convictions on this subject? Are we forced to go into the public prints and tell what occurred in executive session to find out what your supposed reasons are? I do not expect we will smoke any of you out. We shall talk all next week, but we shall not bring one of you to the front, because you do not dare to do it. If you undertook to give reasons, they would not appeal to your reason and judgment; they would be so flimsy that you would be ashamed of them yourselves, and you dare not tell the truth.

In executive session and in the public prints we have been told of the great commercial interests of these islands and that their trade with the United States would increase. That was the argument made when the reciprocity treaty was adopted in 1875, twenty-three years ago—immense trade relations, enormous commerce. What has been the result? The goods we ship to the Hawaiian Islands to-day are less in value than those ten years ago. The population of the islands has doubled. They ship to us about three times in value what they did then, but our trade with those islands has fallen off. Why is it? Because their increase in population was from Asia—from China and Japan. Those people do not consume the goods we produce. They live upon rice; they wear oriental clothing. Commerce has increased with Asia and not with the United States, and so it will be in the future.

As the sugar industry grows, more and more coolies are imported to cultivate the sugar, and less and less of the products of this country will be consumed. Americans will not cultivate sugar, have not gone to those islands as laborers, and although in 1895 there were eighty-four men of American blood employed upon sugar plantations, in 1897 there was not one. Why? Because the Japanese—skillful, able—would fill the places of our bookkeepers and our superintendents for $15 a month, while the Americans must have $50 or $75. So no matter what you do, if you annex the islands there will not be American toilers or American population. It must be Asiatic. No Anglo-Saxon ever yet toiled in the sugar-cane fields or produced coffee.

But they say there are great shipping interests. I desire to have the Secretary read an interview with Claus Spreckels on this subject. I take it from the San Francisco Call of Tuesday, April 27, 1897. At that time they were agitating the repeal of the reciprocity treaty with Hawaii.

The Secretary read as follows:

SPRECKELS TALKS OF THE TREATY—WAS OPPOSED TO HAWAIIAN RECIPROcity FROM THE START—WAS A SCHEME OF THE TRUST—HAS NEVER BEEN AND IS NOT CONTROLLED BY THE SUGAR COMBINE—WORKING FOR THE INTERESTS OF HIS COUNTRY—MONEY PAID FOR HAWAIIAN SUGAR FLOWS MOSTLY INTO THE COFFERS OF EUROPEANS.

[From the San Francisco Call, Tuesday, April 27, 1897.]

Claus Spreckels has every reason, he declared in an interview yesterday, to believe that the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty will be abrogated. His confidence in such an outcome, he said, is due to the fact that right and reason were on the side of those who favored the discontinuance of the existing convention.

"Reciprocity," he continued, "means an exchange of benefits that have some approach to being equal on both sides. No one, I believe, will attempt to controvert such an interpretation of the term. Now, I claim, and existing facts and circumstances will bear me out fully, that the treaty in force between this country and Hawaii is reciprocal in name only, and that all the advantages arising under it are enjoyed by Hawaii, or rather the foreigners resident there.

"At the present time the balance of trade between the United States and Hawaii is $8,000,000 per annum, and no effort is made by the Hawaiian Government to encourage more trading with the United States. On the contrary, everything that is done tends to the encouragement of trade with other countries—notably Canada, Germany, and England. They have even withdrawn the subsidy formerly paid to the Oceanic Steamship Company, an American line which has done more to develop the islands than any other transportation company.

"I noticed a statement in one of the local papers that our commerce with Hawaii was a great factor in giving employment to American vessels and that the American shipping engaged in this traffic has a valuation of $18,000,000. Anyone who will take the trouble to look over the custom-house records can learn for himself that the value of all vessels carrying between this port and Hawaii will not exceed $2,000,000.

"Much has been said about the trust being interested in the best-sugar factory at Watsonville, and of its being opposed to the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty. It is claimed by the advocates of the treaty that if the Hawaiian free sugar is prevented from coming here, the trust would be able to shut down one of the refineries. That is simply nonsense. The Watsonville factory is turning out 20,000 tons of sugar annually, and the Salinas factory, in course of construction, will have a capacity of 60,000 tons. Thus these two factories alone will be capable of manufacturing enough sugar to supply the people of the Pacific coast, and all this sugar will be refined on the coast.

"But in addition to these factories there are two others, which produce between 20,000 and 30,000 tons per year. All this will also be refined here, and this will mean not a curtailing of the refining capacity, but an increase of it. It would not pay to ship the raw sugar East, have it refined there, and then have it sent back to the consumer.

"The result will be the establishment of more refineries in California; and instead of the California product being used as a supply for the Pacific coast States and Territories, it will go to consumers in the Missouri River territory, and perhaps eventually as far east as Chicago.

"This means employment in California of additional thousands of people, the great enhancement in value of farming property in the sugar-belt sections, and added prosperity for the State at large.

"Let me call attention to a phase of the situation that is entirely lost sight of. We are taking from Hawaii its entire crop of sugar, which will this year be about 225,000 tons, for which we will pay in round figures $15,000,000. Of this product not to exceed 70,000 tons are turned out by Americans, while the money for the remaining 155,000 tons is paid to German and English planters and manufacturers, and out of the 70,000 tons credited to Americans, 45,000 tons are produced from the plantations in which I am interested.

"My course in this matter is prompted simply and solely by my desire to see the sugar industry of California fostered and improved. My opposition to the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty is inspired by the desire to encourage the investment of American capital in this State, instead of paying millions each year to the foreigners—not Hawaiians—who largely control the sugar product of the islands. Not even the workmen employed on the sugar plantations and in the factories are native Hawaiians, but Chinese and Japanese coolies and Portuguese, who receive from $12 to $15 a month and must find themselves.

"Those who are standing for a continuance of the treaty I am sure are not aware of the fact that the money we pay for Hawaiian sugar does not benefit the islands, for it eventually mostly flows to England, Germany, China, and Japan. My contention is that the money can be and should be kept in this country, and this can be accomplished by the abrogation of the existing treaty with Hawaii and by placing the same duty on Hawaiian sugar that is placed on any other similar foreign product.

"Another popular fallacy that is being circulated is that I was always strongly in favor of the treaty. That is not so. No one was more bitterly opposed to it when it was under consideration than I, and I spent at one time about $2,800 in sending a petition, with a long list of signatures attached, to Washington in 1876 in opposition to it.

"At that time I was importing the raw material from Manila and Batavia and had to pay duty on it. There was a combination at that time between the sugar trust, with Searles at its head, the sugar planters of Hawaii, and the owners of the American Sugar Refinery of this city against me because I would not go into the trust.

"For self-protection I proceeded to the islands and soon became the largest sugar raiser there, with the ultimate result of not only beating the trust and its combination on the coast, but of invading its best territory in the East and erecting a refinery in Philadelphia. I have never allowed the trust to control me in the past and it does not control me now. While it has an interest in the Watsonville factory, that fact still leaves me an independent factor in the sugar market, and this position I propose to always maintain.

"While still owning large interests in Hawaii, I began experimenting with sugar-beet growing in California, as I never felt just right to have my capital, mostly made in California, invested in a foreign country. My experiments proved highly successful and the result is now before the world.

"I have sacrificed large interests in Hawaii, and stand ready to make further sacrifices. I feel that I owe my first duty to this country, and have always endeavored to perform it to the utmost of my ability. I have at last succeeded in transferring the major part of my interests to this State and the benefits that have accrued to the Commonwealth I think I can safely leave to the people of the San Joaquin, Pajaro, and Salinas valleys to tell.

"I am confident that when the people of the United States are put in possession of the facts connected with the Hawaiian treaty there will be an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of its abrogation. If we continue the treaty, it will be equivalent to putting at least $15,000,000 annually into the pockets of a number of English and German sugar producers and the coolies whom they employ, instead of keeping this vast amount of money in this country to be distributed among our farmers and the people employed in our own sugar plantations, factories, and refineries."

Mr. PETTIGREW. It seems from this interview with Mr. Spreckels that $2,000,000 is the total value of all vessels engaged exclusively in the Hawaiian trade. The total value of the shipping interest is less than one-fourth the value of a wheat crop in one county in North Dakota at a reasonable price, and yet this nation is called upon to abandon its policy of a century and take against their will a people and govern them.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator restate the statistical matter, which interested me exceedingly? I do not know that I understood it. What was he speaking of?

Mr. PETTIGREW. The value of all the ships which are engaged exclusively in the Hawaiian trade, according to Mr. Spreckels's interview, is only $2,000,000. That is only one-fourth the value of one year's wheat crop at a reasonable price for one county in North Dakota, and we are asked to change the policy of this Government for a century because of the shipping interest. Is it the trade relations which induce us to do this? Let us look into it.

In 1876 we made a treaty with the Hawaiian Islands by which we agreed that their products should come into this country free of duty. The duty was then 2 cents a pound on sugar. It was said that there was little sugar produced there and that it would never compete seriously with the United States. Finally we made a treaty by which they agreed to admit our products free of duty and we agreed to admit their products free of duty.

Now we are told that they have become the greatest producers of wealth in the world per capita. No wonder! They produce each year a sugar crop worth, in the United States, $15,000,000, and one-half of that value is in the duties which we remit. It is a clear gift of $7,500,000 a year, not to the people, but to the planters, to the missionary planters of Hawaii. It has taken seven and a half million dollars out of the pockets of the people of the United States in order to confer this gratuity upon those people. Wonderful producers! They produce a crop of seven and a half million dollars in value, and we give them seven and a half million dollars, and they say they produce that and then say that the people of Hawaii, according to their population, are the greatest producers of wealth in the world.

We made a treaty in 1876 by which we agreed to admit their products free of duty—their fruit, their wool, their sugar. What has been the consequence? It will bear recording. It will be well for every Senator to remember the fact. Since that time we have sold to those people $66,000,000 worth of goods. We have remitted in duties $78,000,000. We have given them, then, as a direct present, everything they bought of us and $12,000,000 in money besides; and yet it is said we should annex the islands to perpetuate this iniquity forever, because of the trade relations. Marvelous, is it not, that a nation will continue such a policy? We have taken out of the pockets of the people of the United States $78,000,000, because Hawaiian sugar never reduced the price of sugar to the American consumer one particle. We have taken $78,000,000 by taxes out of the pockets of our people and given it to those sugar planters, and yet we refused to abrogate the treaty, and now we propose to annex the islands so that this shall go on forever.

Yet it is said that the sugar trust is the only influence behind the men who oppose annexation. Let us see what interest the sugar trust has in this matter. The importation of Hawaiian sugar will kill the beet-sugar industry in this country absolutely. It can go no further. It can enlarge no more. The beet-sugar factory refines the sugar. There is no necessity for refining it after the factory is through with it. It is claimed by sugar experts that cane sugar can not be successfully refined in a factory where raw sugar is made—that is, has to be remelted and refined—but beet sugar is successfully refined and the factories which produce it turn out the finished product.

Therefore, if we build up the beet-sugar industry in this country and it supplies the United States with sugar, the sugar trust is out of business; there is no further use whatever for its refineries. Abrogate the Hawaiian treaty, close the doors to the Hawaiian sugar, and in ten years the United States will produce its own sugar from the sugar beet and the sugar trust will be a thing of the past. Its interest is absolutely in favor of the annexation of these islands, to produce raw sugar for them to refine. You annex those islands so as to kill the growing beet-sugar industry in this country, and you leave the trust in command of the American market.

The world all knows what members of this body have been the special champions of the sugar trust in the past, and every one of them is in favor of annexation. What further answer is needed to that miserable argument? What interest is there in favor of this annexation? I read in the morning paper that the Ewa plantation stock of Hawaii is worth 400 cents on the dollar—four times what it was originally worth; that it went from 300 to 400 cents on the passage of the joint resolution through the House of Representatives. Who can afford to spend money in order to perpetuate a system by which the sugar planters of Hawaii get $7,500,000 a year?

Who has the money to spend? The men in favor of annexation, who got from the people of this country in remitted duties last year $7,500,000, who have received in remitted duties since 1876 $78,149,000. If the sugar trust were here trying to defeat the joint resolution, do you think the three papers in this town would all be on the other side? Have they exhibited such vast and marvelous virtue in the past as to leave them incorruptible by the sugar trust? The opponents of annexation have no organ, and the impatience of one of the papers here would indicate that instead of receiving part of the remitted duties in cash it has a contingent fee.

The Star draws upon its imagination for its facts; and, as everybody knows, its editor has no imagination, therefore they have no facts. And yet, impatiently, falsely, they continue to attack those who oppose the annexation of the islands, and attribute to them corrupt motives and pursue the debate—no, not the debate, Mr. President—they pursue a course such as no lawyer, no newspaper would pursue if they were conducting an honest contest. No one would be so impatient, no one would be so willing to resort to falsehood unless they had a contingent fee, something dependent upon success not quite in the grasp, eagerly reaching forward, hoping by success to secure the corrupt price of their services. That is the only thing which would induce the New York Sun and the Evening Star to pursue the course they have pursued. They are advocating the cause of the men who got the $78,000,000. They are advocating the cause of the men who want reciprocity because it results in our presenting them not only all the goods they have bought of us, but in twenty years $12,000,000 in cash besides.

Let me state our trade in 1891. In that year we sold to the people of Hawaii $4,935,911 worth of domestic goods and $171,301 worth of foreign goods, a total of $5,107,212. In 1896 we sold to them $3,985,000 worth. We imported from Hawaii in 1891 $13,161,000 worth of stuff. We sold to them over $5,000,000 worth of stuff. In 1896 we sold to them $3,985,000, or a million dollars less than we sold to them in 1891, and we bought of them $15,098,000 worth of goods. So while our purchases and the amount of duties which we remit constantly increase, their purchases from us decline, because their population is becoming more and more Asiatic, and Asiatic people do not consume the things we produce.

I will place this table in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. It shows the amount of goods we have imported from the islands since 1877, the amount of goods we have sold to the islands since 1877, and the amount of duties each year which we have remitted to the people of the islands.

The table referred to is as follows.

Statement showing the quantities and values of molasses and brown sugar imported from the Hawaiian Islands and entered for consumption in the United States; also the estimated amounts of duty remitted.

[Free of duty under reciprocity treaty, act of Congress approved August 15, 1876, which went into effect September 9, 1876.]

Year ending June 30—	Molasses.		Sugar, Dutch standard in color.										Total value of sugar and molasses.	Estimated duties remitted. a
			Above No. 7 and not above No. 10.		Above No. 10 and not above No. 13.		Above No. 13 and not above No. 16.		Above No. 16 and not above No. 20.		Total.
	Gallons.	Dollars.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Pounds.	Dollars.
1877	138,072	23,500	3,980,804	230,155	11,201,315	714,490	10,183,556	737,525	5,186,406	426,903	30,042,061	2,108,473	2,131,962	996,475.30
1878	87,594	14,449	2,437,930	161,922	10,805,283	757,734	12,227,780	963,550	4,897,345	391,224	30,368,328	2,274,430	2,288,879	989,602.02
1879	98,112	14,938	8,174,146	501,850	10,615,686	1,000,164	15,070,564	1,118,118	1,232,673	92,061	41,690,069	2,811,166	2,820,129	1,266,554.77
1880	111,950	19,835	7,793,349	450,000	28,416,593	1,802,737	23,868,886	1,689,061	1,477,499	108,659	61,556,324	4,135,487	4,155,322	1,881,563.44
1881	198,987	35,037	5,373,006	286,707	28,493,569	1,774,932	43,049,613	2,865,362	4,027,380	292,595	76,900,207	4,927,021	4,963,058	2,437,777.57
1882	152,700	25,256	3,932,806	182,873	53,228,379	3,416,818	44,973,299	3,026,298	2,234,111	157,006	106,181,856	6,918,064	6,943,340	3,314,038.90
1883	238,773	37,493	5,179,736	243,582	55,797,719	3,553,651	50,921,114	3,385,194	2,234,111	157,006	114,132,670	7,340,063	7,377,526	3,554,139.96
1884	163,347	22,964	-----	-----	78,249,593	4,267,730	44,993,790	2,702,782	1,963,297	117,770	125,148,680	7,108,292	7,131,256	3,590,913.39
1885	71,649	9,054	-----	-----	116,365,006	5,490,517	52,193,920	2,654,762	1,093,257	52,865	109,652,783	8,198,144	8,207,198	3,937,947.32
1886	61,127	7,786	-----	-----	133,638,542	6,275,442	57,331,700	2,856,511	762,932	34,873	191,733,175	9,166,826	9,174,612	4,435,091.90
1887	113,574	14,712	-----	-----	157,390,339	6,535,021	60,740,925	2,713,232	139,571	7,008	218,290,836	9,255,351	9,270,063	5,016,390.71
1888	52,582	6,417	-----	-----	203,137,535	9,119,890	25,402,978	1,140,149	-----	-----	228,540,513	10,360,048	10,368,465	5,007,300.93
1889	48,140	6,148	-----	-----	235,445,211	11,641,490	7,870,472	437,028	-----	-----	243,324,683	12,078,518	12,084,666	5,210,049.55
1890	81,443	9,314	-----	-----	217,674,339	11,130,862	6,782,673	409,086	-----	-----	224,457,011	11,549,828	11,559,142	4,804,477.19
1891	76,019	8,550	-----	-----	109,157,107	7,682,749	136,097,909	5,490,975	-----	-----	307,255,016	13,152,562	13,161,274	5,544,150.73
1892	51,139	5,911	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	262,612,405	7,442,047	7,447,958	(b)
1893	67,324	7,561	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	288,517,929	8,455,622	8,463,182	(b)
1894	7,370	853	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	324,726,584	9,379,317	9,379,870	(b)
1895	51,879	3,500	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	274,219,829	7,396,215	7,399,715	3,425,000.00
1896	33,705	1,002	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	352,175,200	11,336,706	11,338,698	4,536,302.50
1897	26,866	1,529	-----	-----	-----	-----	431,190,980	13,164,379	20,136	705	431,217,116	13,165,084	13,166,013	6,465,000.00
Total	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	-----	65,761,000.00

a The collector of customs at San Francisco, under date of February 20, 1896, forwards a statement of his appraiser that the polariscopic test of the Hawaiian sugar brought into that port during the fiscal years 1884 and 1885 would average a little above 93°. The estimated duty remitted has, therefore, since 1883, been computed, on sugar not above No. 13, at 2.12 cents per pound, which is the equivalent of the polariscopic test above indicated.

b Duty remitted calculated only to April 1, 1891, when sugar imported from all countries was made free.

Table showing total exports to Hawaiian Islands from the United States.

Year.	Exports—
	Domestic.	Foreign.	Total.
1878	$1,083,446	$52,653	$1,136,099
1879	2,288,178	86,740	2,374,918
1880	1,965,506	100,664	2,066,170
1881	2,694,583	83,480	2,778,063
1882	3,272,172	78,003	3,350,175
1883	3,653,460	92,005	3,745,465
1884	3,446,024	77,329	3,523,353
1885	2,709,573	78,940	2,788,513
1886	3,115,890	76,700	3,192,590
1887	3,520,593	101,430	3,622,023
1888	3,025,898	99,305	3,125,203
1889	3,336,040	100,621	3,436,661
1890	4,606,900	104,517	4,711,417
1891	4,935,911	171,301	5,107,212
1892	3,662,018	119,610	3,781,628
1893	-----	-----	2,827,000
1894	-----	-----	3,306,000
1895	-----	-----	3,723,000
1896	-----	-----	3,985,000

Mr. PETTIGREW. This remission of duties, this enormous bonus which we have conferred upon those people, has gone not to the people of the United States but to foreigners. It has not gone to pay a single American laborer. It has gone to pay Asiatic labor under contract—slave labor; and two-thirds of the profit has gone to Germans, Englishmen, Scandinavians, and native Hawaiians, and less than one-third of it to citizens of the United States. Less than one-third of the sugar plantations of those islands are owned by Americans; two-thirds are owned by other people. So we have remitted this vast sum of $78,000,000, and two-thirds of it has gone to men who are not citizens of the United States. Yet one of the arguments which has been used to justify this miserable business is that the sugar was produced by American citizens!

I had an investigation made when I was in Hawaii of the books in the interior department, for their law requires that every sugar corporation shall file a report giving the names of the stockholders. All do not comply with the law, but they did partially comply with the law, and Mr. Carter made an investigation to ascertain who the owners of the stock were, how many were Americans, and how many belonged to other nationalities. He says:

In accordance with my promise I sent a competent person to the department of the interior to make copies of the names of shareholders and their holdings in the sugar corporations of these islands to be taken from the "exhibits" of such corporations, as of July 1, 1897, made in compliance with our law.

My employee was told that there had been but 23 "exhibits" filed, 17 of the sugar corporations not having complied with the law. The copies obtained have passed under the eyes of two reliable persons, who marked the nationality of each shareholder. An American is understood to be a person who is a citizen of the United States, entitled to the rights and privileges of such citizenship when in the States. Other nationalities were determined in the same way. Hawaiians include Hawaiian corporations holding shares and all persons entitled to and claiming the rights and privileges of Hawaiian citizenship.

Of the "exhibits" obtained, 10 were for corporations on the Island of Hawaii, 6 on Maui, 4 on Kauai, 3 on Oahu.

On Hawaii the value of holdings by nationality were as follows:

American	$3,225,750
British	1,642,350
Hawaiian	792,000
German	458,700
Portuguese	1,200
Total	6,120,000

But it must be remembered that the American interests in the islands engaged in sugar raising are on the Island of Hawaii and the Island of Maui. In the other islands the interests are exclusively foreign. However, the general result will show that two-thirds of these plantations are owned by people who are not citizens of the United States.

On Maui:

Hawaiian	$1,390,200
American	638,100
German	620,200
British	80,700
Chinese	5,800
Total	2,675,000

On Kauai:

Hawaiian	1,154,400
American	852,200
German	691,100
British	501,900
Portuguese	400
Total	3,200,000

On Oahu:

Hawaiian	1,659,500
German	770,000
American	456,900
British	137,000
Chinese	18,600
Portuguese	9,500
Norwegian	500
Total	3,052,000

Total value of holdings by nationality, as follows:

American	5,172,850
Hawaiian	4,936,100
German	2,540,000
British	2,361,900
Chinese	24,400
Portuguese	11,100
Norwegian	500
Total	15,047,000

The percentages of value of holdings are about as follows:

	Per cent.
American	34.4
Hawaiian	32.8
German	16.9
British	15.6
Other	.3
Total	100

What the result of a like examination of the remaining seventeen corporation "exhibits" would be is a matter of speculation. In my opinion they would not alter the figures materially.

I have mailed to you a copy of The Hawaiian Annual, containing an article (pages 149-157) on the "The financial outlook," by Alatau T. Atkinson, who compiled the Hawaiian census of 1896. This article contains a statement (page 155) of the amount of the public debt and valuation of the property of the Government and classification of Government lands, which you asked me to procure and forward.

The Planters' Association has published a statement of laborers on sugar estates for the current year, which varies a little from the figures I gave you for the year 1895. The figures for the current year as compared with 1895 are:

Nationality.	1907.	1895.
Japanese.....	11,394	11,584
Chinese.....	9,881	3,847
Portuguese.....	1,902	2,499
Hawaiians.....	1,356	1,584
Total.....	21,513	19,514

The increase in laborers is due to the starting of a large estate and the increased acreage of old estates.

Inclosed you will find an article on coffee raising, which you may find useful. The endeavor of the Hawaiian Government to induce the immigration of small farmers from your country is fraught with mischief to the farmer, as you will see by reading the inclosure. This article was written by a man I can vouch for. A man with money can make money anywhere if he has the proper mental and physical equipment. The planting of coffee in these islands is largely experimental at this time.

These figures show that the Hawaiian sugar planters are two-thirds foreigners and one-third Americans, and that the benefits derived from annexation by this remission of duty will be conferred two-thirds of it upon foreigners and one-third of it upon a few sons of missionaries whose fathers went to the islands to confer upon the inhabitants the blessings of Christianity and whose sons have stolen their lands and now have stolen their government. They are not subjects of charity. The people of the United States ought not to be taxed to confer this benefit of one-third of $7,500,000 a year upon these sons of missionaries and two-thirds of $7,500,000 a year upon foreigners.

I read from Blount's report with regard to American interests, on page 455, part 1, Report of Commissioner to the Hawaiian Islands:

To cover their numerical weakness, the annexationists' faction have tried to awaken American sympathies by alluding to the necessity of protecting American capital, which they claim to be so largely invested in these islands. To give plausibility to this assertion, tables have been prepared, purporting (on estimations, not on any positive documents) to show that the total capital engaged in sugar (in corporations and nonincorporated plantations) amounted to $33,420,990, out of which $24,735,610 was claimed to be American, or about four-fifths: $6,039,130 British, $2,008,600 German, $228,280 native, and $299,000 of other nationalities.

This fantastic array is contradicted by the mere fact that out of a total of $537,757 for internal taxes Americans paid only $153,938—official figures—or one-fourth, while according to the above statement American plantation stock alone, outside of commercial firms and other American taxable property, ought to have paid over $247,000. But even allowing that a large portion of the sugar interests may be apparently in American hands, it is far from correct to call it American capital.

It is an undeniable fact that outside of Mr. Clans Spreckels, of California, no American has ever brought into this country any capital worth mentioning, but many have sent away fortunes made here. Most of our present American capitalists, outside of sons of missionaries, came here as sailors or school-teachers, some few as clerks, others as mechanics, so that, even if now they do own or manage, or have their names in some way connected with property or corporations, this does not make their wealth of American origin.

And so every investigation that can be made shows the commercial interests of these islands are in the hands of foreigners, and that whatever benefit we confer we confer upon an alien race as laborers and foreigners as capitalists.

Here is some more from Blount's report. I quote Mr. Blount:

The minister of finance informs me that the taxes paid by Americans and Europeans amount to $274,518.74; those by the natives, $71,888.82; half-castes, $26,868.08; Chinese, $87,266.10; Japanese, $67,368.07; other nationalities, $729.82. That is, the natives pay only about one-seventh of the taxes, indicating a very small ownership of property. The commissioner adds:

"He also informs me that the acreage on which taxes are paid by various nationalities is: Europeans and Americans, 1,052,492 acres; natives, 257,457 acres; half-castes, 531,545 acres; Chinese, 12,324 acres; Japanese, 300 acres; other nationalities, none.

"The surveyor-general reports the crown lands for 1895 as containing 915,288 acres. Of these he reports 94,116 acres available for lease. Of this latter number only 47,000 acres are reported to be good, arable land. He likewise reports the Government land as containing 823,370 acres. He reports these, estimated in 1890, to be worth $2,123,850. The annual income from them is $67,694. Of this income $19,500 is from wharfage and $7,800 from rent of land with buildings thereon.

"The cane and arable land is estimated at 35,150 acres.

"It is important here to recall his statement made to the Legislature in 1891, in the following language: 'Most Government lands at the present time consist of mere remnants left here and there, and of the worthless and unsalable portions remaining after the rest had been sold.'

So it appears that our enterprising missionaries and the other foreign adventurers who inhabit that tropical land have secured title to a million acres.

Mr. CAFFERY. What is the total number of acres in the island?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Four and one-half million acres form the total area of the whole island, and at least 1,000,000 acres of this area is lava and unproductive. The whole area is lava, but one and a half million acres, I should say, is recent lava, and therefore produces nothing. It is of high elevation. The great island of Hawaii has an elevation at two points of nearly 14,000 feet above the sea. One of those points, Mauna Loa, is an active volcano, and down its sides up to 1881 there flowed great streams of lava. In 1881 an eruption occurred at a point 8,000 feet above the sea, and an immense river of lava hundreds of feet in width rolled through the forest down its slopes into the village of Hilo and stopped.

Mr. CAFFERY. And about one-half of the arable acreage is held by the sons of missionaries?

Mr. PETTIGREW. They and the other foreigners.

Mr. CAFFERY. How much does that leave the natives?

Mr. PETTIGREW. The natives have 250,000 acres upon which they pay taxes, and the half-castes 500,000 acres; but it leaves the natives also a vast area of comparatively valueless land—the pasture lands. There are great areas that are pasture lands, and they are owned almost entirely by the natives.

Hawaii is no exception to the rule. Wherever the English foot has stopped upon the globe personal property pays little or no tax; the burden is upon the land; the revenue to support the government is upon consumption, and the individual has to pay it; the accumulated wealth escapes. And so it is in Hawaii.

The first thing to be considered is the real estate. The total value of this in 1895 was $23,183,443. It was divided as follows:

REAL ESTATE.

Hawaiians and part Hawaiians own.....	$6,950,597
Americans, British, and Germans own.....	12,958,700
Chinese.....	1,146,301
Japanese.....	50,900
Other nationalities.....	1,084,939

This statement is taken from the tax books of 1895. At the close of the biennial period of 1897 a fresh table will be made out.

These figures are from Thrum's annual book, issued by the annexationists for the purpose of making out the best case they can in favor of annexation, issued solely and exclusively in the interest of the missionary sugar planters.

But I am informed by the assessor in chief that the increase is not very large. There must be some increase, however, as much land which formerly was waste forest land has gone into the cultivation of coffee.

The personal property was valued at $17,491,068, but the division shows up somewhat differently, the bulk being held by the Americans, British, and Germans. The figures are as follows:

PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Hawaiians and half-castes.....	$1,144,104
Americans, British, and Germans.....	2,161,795
American, British, and German corporations.....	9,333,551
American, British, and German firms.....	2,247,856
	13,743,306

Making a total of $13,743,000 as the value of the personal property of the island owned by foreigners out of $17,000,000 in all.

Chinese.....	2,295,330
Japanese.....	177,937
Other nationalities.....	221,116

As taxable value by no means represents intrinsic value, this estimate of the property, real and personal, may be regarded as under the marketable value of the property; but it serves to show in a measure the wealth of the entire nation and its distribution, and shows where the preponderance of property interests lies.

The Hawaiian and part Hawaiians number together 39,504 individuals, while the Americans, British, and Germans count 6,763 individuals. The property interests of the former aggregate $3,101,701, while those of the latter amount to $23,701,903. To put it in another form, the percentage of the total real estate of the whole community held by Hawaiians and part Hawaiians is 0.21, the percentage of the total personal estate held by Hawaiians and part Hawaiians is 0.06.

The main industries in which Americans and Europeans are engaged in on the islands are sugar and coffee. The latter is a comparatively young industry, and can hardly be considered far out of the experimental stage; moreover, as the value of the crop is not assessed, it is difficult to arrive at a fair estimate of the worth of the plantations, but a rough estimate is given.

It has been argued that the beet-sugar industry would not be interfered with by the annexation of those islands or by allowing their sugar to come in free. I propose to take up that subject and show that the Hawaiian Islands now produce a sufficient quantity of sugar to supply all the United States west of the Missouri River, including Texas. I also propose to show that those islands can produce twice as much sugar, if not four times as much, as they now produce; that last year they shipped to this country 500,000,000 pounds of sugar; that when they double that they will ship to this country 1,000,000,000 pounds of sugar; and that the consumption of sugar west of the Missouri River last year was only 530,000,000 pounds. I may not have the figures exactly right, but it was between 500,000,000 and 600,000,000 pounds. I also propose to show that the increase in Hawaii, stimulated by the pending resolution, if the islands are annexed, will more than supply that country for all time to come.

To-day the only beet-sugar industry in this country is west of the Missouri River. That country can produce the sugar beet in sufficient quantity to supply the people of the United States with sugar; but, Mr. President, it can not do it in competition with Asiatic labor. The Asiatic toils in the cane field and boards himself for $12 a month. He is the best agricultural laborer in the world. He comes from Japan under our treaty with Japan. That treaty is to continue for twelve years. We can not exclude that labor from the United States. It will come to those islands and come continuously, for we have made a treaty with Japan which goes into effect a year from this month, and is to continue twelve years, by which they are on an equal footing with the nations of Europe.

Our people have a right to go to Japan and go into business; their people have a right to come to the United States. You will notice in the joint resolution now before the Senate that there is a provision prohibiting Chinese from emigrating to the islands after they are annexed, but there is no provision prohibiting the importation of Japanese. Why? Because it would be a violation of our treaty to do it. The fact is that the Jap is a cheaper man because he is a better laborer, and there are to-day 30,000 Japanese laborers in the islands and 24,000 Chinese. As the Chinese contract term expires, his place will be filled by Japanese, and we can not stop it under existing treaties. So the lands of the islands will be occupied with sugar plantations to the absolute ruin of the beet-sugar industry in this country.

It is said that the area that will produce sugar is exhausted. Let us see with regard to that. I read again from Thrum's Annual of Hawaii, in which the total amount of Government land is given, which may be classified as follows:

Cane land, 25,000 acres still held by the Government; average production of sugar in Hawaii, 4 tons to the acre; Ewa plantation produces 8 tons to the acre; 25,000 acres will produce 100,000 tons.

Also the following:

The total amount of Government land may be roughly classified as follows:

Classification of Government lands.		Acres.
Valuable building lots.....		145
Cane land.....		25,026
Coffee land.....		76,270
Rice land.....		977
Homesteads, Government interest in.....		20,000
Grazing lands, various qualities.....		451,200
Forest lands, high.....		681,232
Rugged mountain tracts.....		227,000
Barren lands, estimated.....		300,000
Total.....		1,782,500

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from South Dakota permit me to make an inquiry in this connection? He speaks of the crown lands, 25,000 acres of which are given to making sugar. I desire to know whether the crown lands of Hawaii are not under lease for long periods of time to the sugar planters?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Some of them undoubtedly are.

Mr. CAFFERY. Does not the evidence gathered by Mr. Blount show the fact that the crown lands have been leased over to the sugar planters for very long periods of time?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think so; not all of them. I am speaking of the Government lands. On the Ewa plantation they claim there are 10,000 acres; 2,000 acres are in cultivation. There are 8,000 acres yet that can be planted with sugar. In my opinion the vast areas now devoted to coffee, and said to be good coffee land, are sugar lands, and that with this enormous stimulus, with the admission of those islands into the Union, there are at least 200,000 acres of the lands yet susceptible to the production of sugar in addition to that already in use.

On the island of Hawaii there is a vast belt of tropical forest, tree ferns 30 feet in height, with trunks 2 feet through, mangoes and every tropical fruit growing in marvelous profusion, with wild bananas and vines that grow only in a tropical climate. It is the most fertile soil in the world. Those lands will be subjected to the cultivation of sugar, in my opinion, under this provision. I see no reason why the present production of 500,000,000 pounds, enough to supply the people west of the Missouri River, shall not be increased to two or three billion pounds, and that with Asiatic labor at $12 a month. They can produce sugar for less than a cent and a half a pound, and I venture to say you can not produce it in Louisiana for less than 3 cents a pound. They raise in Louisiana a ton and a half to the acre, as against 4 tons in these marvelously rich islands. In Louisiana they must pay American citizens and American laborers, but in Hawaii they employ contract slave labor—Asiatic labor.

In the Hawaiian Annual I find the following:

I see no reason, from present conditions of the sugar industry or from any outlook, to believe that it is not to continue to be the leading and profitable industry of these islands for years to come. With annexation there should be somewhat more extended cultivation of sugar cane be made possible by artesian wells and pumping plants; hence a larger output than at present; but I would not, at the same time, neglect any other industry that offered a fair return for the capital invested.

One can not doubt that the present prosperity of the islands is due almost wholly to its sugar industry. Contrast, if you please, the condition of the whole country in 1860 and now.

So I say, Mr. President, that there is no doubt, after investigating these islands—and I visited nearly every one of them—that the sugar industry there can be increased at least to four times its present dimensions; and, if that is done, there is no possible hope for the beet-sugar industry of this country. It is the death knell of that industry, which has already attracted the attention of our people and caused the investment of millions of dollars.

I want to say in this connection that it is the beet-sugar people who are opposing annexation, if there is any lobby here whatever. I have met people who are engaged in the production of beet sugar in Nebraska and in California, and I do not blame those people for doing what they can to protect from ruin an industry in which they have invested large sums of money; but that they are not using money to influence this contest is proved conclusively by the fact that they have not a newspaper in this city advocating their cause. You say the newspapers are too good. They prove that they are not.

Mr. CAFFERY. I ask the Senator from South Dakota to permit me at this point to suggest to him that the American Sugar Refining Company imports only raw cane sugar, unless it is for the purpose of filling a temporary vacuum in their supply of that article; that they control the markets of the world as to raw sugar, and of course control the price of raw sugar. So little beet sugar is being raised in the United States. They thereby control the price of both. Is it not manifest that if the home production of beet sugar ever attains the proportion of supplying the home demand, the sugar trust will have to loosen its grasp upon the markets of the United States; and that, therefore, the more raw cane sugar they can control and bring into the United States free of duty, the greater will be their grasp upon the home market for their refined article?

Mr. PETTIGREW. There is no question about that, Mr. President. On the contrary, it is absolutely true, and they know it, that if the beet-sugar industry grows so as to supply the market of the United States, their business is gone forever, for a beet-sugar factory makes refined sugar.

What does the sugar trust do? It refines raw sugar. Where? Along the coast, in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, perhaps in Maryland, and up in Maine. Every one of the refinery companies in those States and the representatives of those States is in favor of annexation. Did you ever hear of their abandoning the interests of the sugar trust in any contest? No; and they have not done so in this. The sugar trust, residing as it does and having all its stock held in those States, is enabled to command the vote if they are opposed to annexation. What nonsense to talk about the sugar trust being opposed to annexation when every vote which represents their side and their interest is in favor of annexation! I am tired of this talk about the sugar trust's opposition to annexation.

Mr. President, when I offered an amendment to the last tariff bill striking off the eighth of a cent extra duty on refined sugar, which had been imposed purely and absolutely in the interest of the sugar trust, known by everybody to be a trust, I did not get a vote for my amendment from the States where the sugar trust is located. They knew, and the sugar trust knew, that if the beet-sugar industry of the West supplies the people of this country with sugar their factories will be silent, refining by them will be at an end, and this infamous and odious corrupter of men will be out of business. Beet sugar is what they fear. Cane sugar, as I said before, requires remelting. Beet sugar can be made refined sugar by one continuous process, the beets going in at one end of the factory and coming out refined, white, granulated sugar at the other end of the factory in eighteen hours. That is what the sugar trust fear. But if this annexation is accomplished, if Hawaiian sugar continues to come in free, it will be the end of the beet-sugar industry in this country.

But you say the Hawaiian Islands will not produce enough to compete with the beet sugar of the United States. This same controversy was up before. In 1876, when this treaty was adopted, some one objected that if we remitted duties to the amount of 3 cents a pound the sugar industry would grow upon these islands enormously. The friends of the treaty in 1876 took this position, and I will read from the majority report on the Hawaiian treaty, March 2, 1876, page 1419, volume 4, part 2, first session Forty-fourth Congress.

When the treaty of 1876 was made, it was objected that it remitted the duty upon Hawaiian sugar, and that this sugar, coming in free of duty, would supplant the production of sugar in this country and result in an enormous loss of revenue to the Treasury. This was urged by the opponents of the treaty of 1876, but without avail, for the reason that the friends of the treaty—those who advocated the measure—made statements which were apparently unanswerable. They predicted that the sugar industry could never grow in the Hawaiian Islands to more than 135,000,000 pounds a year; that that was the wildest dream of anyone. The assurance was that the Hawaiians were producing 23,000,000 pounds at that time, and never would produce over 50,000,000 pounds, and therefore the loss of revenue could be but slight, and it would not interfere with the production of sugar from beets in the West.

I am going to read these predictions, because the same statement is now made. Fifty millions, they told us, was all that ever could be produced; and yet last year they produced 500,000,000 pounds and shipped it to the United States. Five hundred million pounds is ten times as much as the production predicted by the friends of the treaty when it was made.

I say, then, it is within the bounds of reason to predict, after visiting these islands, that the present production of sugar within the next ten years will increase to four times its present amount, and that, instead of 500,000,000 pounds, they will ship to this country 2,000,000,000 pounds; and that means the absolute destruction of the beet-sugar industry in the United States.

Do our laborers favor this treaty? Not a labor organization in the United States favors it. Do our farmers favor this treaty of annexation? I have heard of none. A special interest favors the Hawaiian and American sugar trust, and the President of the United States because he wishes his name to go down in history as having acquired territory. That is a craze which has seized more than one President. A great President will go down in history anyhow, but a small President can go down in history only if his name goes along with a piece of land added to the area of the country. So great Presidents are not annexationists and little Presidents are.

I am going to read the predictions. This is the majority report of the Committee on the Hawaiian Treaty, March 2, 1876, page 1419, volume 4, part 2, first session Forty-fourth Congress:

Importations of sugar from Hawaii.		Pounds.
1873	14,808,000
1874	13,574,000
1875	17,988,000

It is not possible that Hawaiian sugar can ever find its way to the Atlantic States—

And yet in 1896, 49,000 tons of Hawaiian sugar found their way direct to the port of New York—

The cost of transportation would exclude it; nor can there be fear of any great increase in the production of this sugar, in view of the steadily diminishing population of the islands.

From the time we offered a bonus of 2 cents a pound more than the total cost of sugar, the population of the island began to increase by leaps and bounds, not by American toilers, but by Asiatic laborers.

It has been said that the United States will surely have this trade, if they do nothing to encourage it.

This is an entire mistake, for production must diminish and trade lessen by the impoverished condition of the people, or they will be compelled to make commercial relations with some other country.

That is the report of the majority of the committee of the House of Representatives in favor of the treaty of 1876, by which sugar was admitted free of duty. They said it was impossible for the industry to increase, and we would lose the trade by an impoverishment of the people if we did not give them this reciprocity treaty, as they called it; and yet under the treaty our trade has fallen off since 1891, the population has increased, and the trade with Asiatic countries has doubled.

Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, who was the chief advocate of this treaty in the Senate in 1876, said, as appears by the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Appendix, page 154, first session Forty-fourth Congress:

The consumption of sugar on the Pacific coast in 1873, or rather on that part of the Pacific coast supplied from San Francisco, Cal., and Portland, Oreg., was 75,005,005 pounds, while of this amount but little in excess of one-fifth, or 15,743,146 pounds, came from the Sandwich Islands, although this constituted two-thirds of the whole sugar production of the islands for that year, the whole amount being little in excess of 23,000,000 pounds. So that, even should the amount of sugar consumed on the Pacific coast annually not increase from year to year, which is far wide of the actual fact, it would be necessary that the annual production of the islands should be increased over fourfold, and in addition to this that, instead of our coast getting but two-thirds it should get every pound of that production in order that the demand of the Pacific coast alone should be met; and until this is done and a surplus remains to force its way into the free ports of the Atlantic or the Gulf, how, I would inquire, would the sugar interests of this country be affected?

But, Mr. President, this is not all. It is a fact that must be borne in mind that the annual increase in the consumption of sugar on the Pacific coast each year above the preceding is in itself almost equal in amount to the present importations to the ports of that coast from the Sandwich Islands. In the year 1892 the amount consumed was, or rather the total amount of importations was, 62,861,460 pounds, while in the year 1873, the year following, it was 75,007,005 pounds—

I think the other date must be 1872, although the print is 1862—or an excess of 12,145,545 pounds, while during the past year the importations were still greater in proportion. The Secretary of the Treasury, in speaking of this large annual increase and of the probable effect of this treaty on the interest and revenues of the Government, says:

I call special attention to the fact that they had the Secretary of the Treasury in as a witness then as now. Whenever the Administration wants to do anything its Secretaries are always brought forward to bolster up the cause, and they always give that which is necessary in order to sustain the argument. We have now the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture in relation to the beet-sugar industry, and then we have this statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, and let us see how far it is borne out by the facts:

This increasing importation and consumption, therefore, causes the question to stand not so much as one of diminution of present revenues, but rather as a check to their increase to the extent of the importation of sugar and other dutiable articles made free. The lack of natural facilities for developing the production of sugar in the islands embraced in the treaty would keep down the future proportions of this check.

Senator Mitchell proceeds:

"But," says the Southern planter who has not informed himself properly on the subject, and who is perhaps somewhat befogged by interested and wild statements of the sugar refiners, "throw your American ports open to the producers of the islands and the annual productions will soon increase to 150,000,000 pounds, an amount more than necessary to supply the demands of the people of the Pacific States and Territories." This, Mr. President, I deny; and one principal reason why I deny it is because it is a physical impossibility, besides there are many reasons of minor importance abundantly forcible to sustain my position. I will proceed to show why it is a physical impossibility.

Now, let us see. The opponents of the treaty which proposed to admit Hawaiian sugar free of duty said that the production would grow to 150,000,000 pounds, and they were ridiculed and were told that they were interested in the sugar refiners, just as we are now, and the friends of the treaty undertook to show them that it was physically impossible. What are the facts? The importation of sugar from Hawaii, instead of increasing to 150,000,000 pounds, increased to 500,000,000 pounds last year. The enemies of the treaty in 1876 predicted that enough would be imported to supply the people of the Western States and Territories, and last year they imported enough to supply the States and Territories west of the Missouri River.

Senator MITCHELL goes on to say:

According to the uniform statement of historians, supported by the census tables of the Hawaiian Government, the whole area of tillable and grazing lands on all the islands does not exceed 500,000 acres—

On the contrary, it is more than 2,500,000 acres—and of this amount not over 100,000 acres, at the very most, are susceptible of sugar cultivation, while a portion of this area is so destitute of water and means of irrigation as to render its profitable cultivation extremely problematical. To-day the whole number of acres in sugar cultivation is only about 23,000, producing on an average about 1,000,000 pounds to every 1,000 acres. It therefore follows that if every foot of soil on the islands capable of producing sugar were put in cultivation, the production would fall far short of the estimate made by the refiners and would not exceed even then the amount in pounds that will be consumed the present year on the Pacific coast alone.

But how improbable is the statement that the annual production of the islands will be doubled even during the next seven years, the limit of the proposed treaty. Where is the labor to come from sufficient to work such a revolution in the production of these islands? * * * Or will the simple release from the payment of an annual duty of less than $400,000 be sufficient to work such a revolution in the industry and material prosperity of these islands so as to increase its productions to any very appreciable amount? The idea is preposterous and can not be sustained by either facts or argument.

This was what was said in answer to the prediction of the Louisiana sugar producers that the production of sugar in the islands would increase under the treaty so as to endanger their industry. They were ridiculed; they were charged with being in with the refiners, and yet the facts are that their prediction was less one-third of the fact. The facts are that while they said the production would grow from 23,000,000 to 150,000,000 pounds, it has grown from 23,000,000 pounds to 500,000,000 pounds a year, and it will continue to grow with Asiatic labor, and the purchases of goods from this country will continue to fall off just in proportion as the increase of sugar continues.

Senator Booth, in the United States Senate, March 18, 1875. Page 160 of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Appendix, first session Forty-fourth Congress, said:

Their [Hawaiian Islands] exports to the United States in 1874 amounted in round numbers to a million dollars, of which sugar constituted something more than nine-tenths in value. The entire production of sugar in the islands in that year was about 28,000,000 pounds, of which the United States received more than one-half. Under the existing tariff 14,000,000 pounds of "Sandwich Island sugar" would pay an average of 3 cents per pound, and the loss to the Treasury by admitting it duty free would be $420,000; but under the provisions of the treaty we should receive the entire crop of the islands, and the loss next year would be $840,000.

Last year it was $7,500,000. No wonder there has been an unequal distribution of wealth in this country. No wonder great fortunes are built up when legislation—legislation, pure and simple—has taken $78,000,000 out of the pockets of the American people within the last twenty years and put it into the pockets of those interested in sugar planting in Hawaii. What we ought to do is to abrogate the treaty of 1875, leave the islands to govern themselves, and collect the $7,500,000 of duty a year from their sugar, and if necessary use the money to protect our coasts, use it to encourage our merchant marine, use it to build a navy instead of giving it to the missionary sugar planters of Hawaii.

Senator Booth continues:

It was admitted and even argued by the Senator from Maine, Mr. Hamlin, in support of the treaty that the production of the islands at their maximum capacity bore so small a proportion to the consumption in the United States that its admission duty free would not influence the price of sugar in our markets. Last year the Hawaiians supplied us with less than 1 per cent of our entire consumption, and under the most favorable circumstances could not send us more than 6 per cent. Last year the consumption of sugar in the United States was 1,000,000,000 pounds, and the estimated annual increase is 30,000,000 pounds. I believe this argument of the Senator is correct, and that this proportion would be found true even if our importation from the islands should exceed the largest estimate.

Even the opponents of the treaty were overcome by the constant statements that the production of sugar could not increase in the islands. Yet it did increase more than fortyfold under the stimulus of the treaty, until it has grown to 500,000,000 pounds a year.

The commissioners who represent the Hawaiian Government estimate the probable production at 50,000,000 pounds, and certain gentlemen in San Francisco who are familiar with the subject estimate it at 135,000,000 pounds. The average annual production during the seven years this treaty is to continue would certainly not be less than 50,000,000 pounds, and the annual loss to our Treasury $1,500,000 (I think it would be much more), without any advantage to consumers.

It is suggested that by creating a demand for American capital, enterprise, and labor, in extending our protective tariff over Sandwich Island sugar, an immigration will be drawn to the islands from the United States which will eventually control the Hawaiian Government; that an American colony will be first established in sentiment, afterwards in fact. If the limitations placed upon the capacity of the islands to produce sugar by the supporters of this treaty, when they estimate loss of revenue, are correct, this colony would be far too small to accomplish any such purpose.

Mr. Booth was entirely right. The argument in favor of the treaty was that it would stimulate American labor, that it would send Americans to those islands to produce sugar. Several hundred went there after the treaty was made, but to-day not one single American laborer of any sort is employed upon any sugar plantation in those islands. The American colony did not grow. There are fewer American citizens in each thousand of the population to-day than in 1876. The American colony did not grow. It did not grow large enough to take control of the Government. It got control, but it got control of the Government by the landing of the marines from our battle ship, by the landing of armed men, by the overthrow of the Government by the armed forces of the United States; and it has been maintained from that day to this by the armed force of the United States.

Not a day since that Government was set up by us has there been absent from the harbor an American battle ship with shotted guns bearing directly on the city, commanding its public buildings and public streets, overawing its people. When the war broke out, Hawaii could not declare neutrality because our ship would have had to leave, and they dared not have it leave. They had to have it there in order to maintain them in their power, in order to maintain them in their usurpation. I should like to know what Senators think of overthrowing a friendly government by the arms of the United States and then setting up a puppet of ours to treat with and taking title against the will of the inhabitants without consulting them.

These facts, if nothing else, ought to make the American people turn their backs upon this whole scheme. Suppose a few filibusters, two or three hundred men, American citizens, went down to Venezuela, created a disturbance, that three or four of our great war ships were in that harbor, and that at the request of those men they would land their forces, land their Gatling gun, land their marines, put up our flag, and overthrow and overturn the government. Would the people, would you, would any other honest man, would any Senator under such circumstances take the title to that country? And yet that is exactly what we have done in Hawaii.

I challenge contradiction. No wonder the friends of annexation refuse to talk. No wonder they dare not enter this debate. I say here, and it is unchallenged and it will be undisputed, that we overturned that friendly government by landing the armed forces of the United States; that the revolutionists had no troops, not one, not a gun; that they read their pretended constitution right under the guns and within 75 yards of the armed forces of the United States, and that when they had done it the Queen surrendered to the Government of the United States and said she would submit the question to Washington; that we then have treated with our puppets, treated with the men we set up and maintained by the force of arms for the title to her country and the country of her people, although seven-eighths of them are opposed to this scheme and opposed to annexation.

How dare you to vote for annexation in the face of these facts? They are facts which you have to face before the American people. Our flag went up in dishonor and came down in honor on the Hawaiian Islands, and if we plant it back there under the circumstances it goes up in infamy and in shame and we join the ranks of the robber nations of the world. Some other nation might treat with this Government which has been maintained by us for five years, but in good morals we can not treat with it unless we submit the proposition of annexation to a vote of the people of those islands. I shall offer an amendment to the joint resolution providing that every native-born Hawaiian and every person naturalized under the Hawaiian law shall first have a chance to register his vote for or against the joint resolution before the Islands shall be annexed to the United States; and I expect you will go to see the President and find out what he wants you to do, and then vote it down, and more brigadier-generals will be appointed.

The Secretary of the Treasury, March 2, 1876, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 1424, volume 4, part 2, first session Forty-fourth Congress, says:

The effect on the revenue of admitting the articles named in the schedule free of duty is first to remit the amount levied on sugar. At 3 cents per pound it amounts to $30,345. This is the average for three years ending with 1873.

Should the sugar product so released increase to 25,000,000 pounds yearly, the export trade would probably equal it in value.

Congressman Wood, in the House, March 2, 1876, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 1423, volume 4, part 2, first session Forty-fourth Congress, said:

When they go further and estimate a much larger probable loss by predicting an increase of the population so as to raise, as they say, an aggregate of 50,000,000 tons of sugar, my reply is, those islands can not produce it. The population has decreased from 400,000 in 1770 to less than 50,000, including 6,000 foreigners, in 1875. No sugar can be produced except by the manual labor of the natives of those islands—

Yet to-day there is scarcely a pound of sugar produced by the natives. It is produced by Asiatics. Twenty-three thousand laborers—all Asiatics except about 1,584, who are natives—are employed upon these plantations—

... and gentlemen are frightened at this prospect of a handful of starving natives lest it may interfere with the revenues of this nation.

These were the predictions made when this improvident and unwise treaty was under consideration.

Congressman Morrison, March 6, 1876, page 1491, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 4, part 2, first session Forty-fourth Congress, said:

The duties imposed on the import of such sugars as the Sandwich Islands are likely to send to the United States will be about 2½ cents per pound, which will be equivalent to a bounty of about 50 per cent on the average market price at Honolulu. ... The area of arable land in the islands is limited. The Sandwich Islands commissioners think the product can not be increased beyond 50,000,000 pounds per annum.

Of course the commissioners who were here to get the treaty made all sorts of predictions, and they are here again in the same interest, making the same predictions, that the sugar industry can not increase; and yet if it does not increase, the loss is seven and a half million dollars a year to the United States.

Senator Booth states on authority of California experts that the product can be pushed to 135,000,000 pounds per annum. Mr. Nordhoff says there is room for about seventy-five to eighty more plantations on the scale now common, or about three times as many as now exist. It is therefore reasonable to assume that an import of at least 50,000,000 pounds, on which the United States will give a bounty and suffer a reduction of revenue from sugar to the extent of $1,200,000, may be anticipated. ... The import of Sandwich Islands sugar is only about 1 per cent of the consumption of the United States. It can never exceed 5 or 6 per cent of our consumption.

Even the enemies did not anticipate seven and a half million dollars a year of remitted duties. I tried to have the treaty abrogated in 1893, when the Wilson bill was pending, and to collect duties on the sugar. I tried again in 1897, when the Dingley bill was being considered. I tried it when the McKinley bill was pending, but the Senate always refused to levy a duty on Hawaiian sugar for some reason.

Mr. President, I have shown that when this treaty was made in 1876, by which we admitted Hawaiian sugar free, the wildest prediction as to the production was 150,000,000 pounds, and that by the enemies of the treaty. I have shown that the friends, those who were advocating the admission of the islands, insisted that it could never exceed 50,000,000 pounds. I now propose to put into the RECORD as a part of my remarks a letter from the Treasury Department, dated May 17, 1896, showing the gradual growth of the production in and importation of sugar from Hawaii:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF STATISTICS,
Washington, D. C., May 17, 1896.

SIR: In response to your communication of the 14th instant to the Treasury Department, referred to this office, I transmit to you herewith reports showing the imports of sugar into the United States, by grades, from 1884 to 1896, and the amount of duty paid thereon; also a report showing our trade with the Hawaiian Islands, our imports therefrom and exports thereto, showing separately the imports of sugar, covering the series of years named in your letter.

Respectfully, yours,

J. N. WHITNEY,
Acting Chief of Bureau.

HON. R. F. PETTIGREW,
United States Senate.

Table showing the quantity and value of sugar imported into the United States from the Hawaiian Islands during the years ending June 30, 1877 to 1896, inclusive.

Year.	Dutch standard in color.
	Pounds.	Value.
1877	30,642,081	$2,108,473
1878	30,368,328	2,274,430
1879	41,093,069	2,811,193
1880	61,556,324	4,135,487
1881	70,909,207	4,927,021
1882	106,181,858	6,918,084
1883	114,132,670	7,340,063
1884	125,148,680	7,108,293
1885	169,652,793	8,198,144
1886	191,733,175	9,186,826
1887	218,290,835	9,255,351
1888	228,540,513	10,260,048
1889	243,324,693	12,073,518
1890	224,457,011	11,549,828
1891	79,657,436	2,826,244
1892	262,612,405	7,445,047
1893	238,517,923	6,455,622
1894	Free	1,035,600
	Dutiable	46,604
1895	Free	324,726,584
	Dutiable	1,848,000
1896	Free	274,219,828
	Dutiable	165,400
1896		352,175,269
1897		496,175,000
Total	3,998,000,000	170,302,000

I have added in my own figures the importations for 1897.

We have imported from those islands in the twenty-one years 3,998,000,000 pounds of sugar, upon which we have remitted duties to the amount of $78,000,000.

I am of the opinion that if these islands are annexed, they will produce most of the sugar used by the people of the United States and that the annexation of these islands means the destruction of the growing beet-sugar industry in this country. It means the turning over to Asiatic labor the production of $100,000,000 worth of sugar, that being the value of the sugar consumed by the people of the United States each year. It means an abandonment of the theory of protection, upon which the Republican party is founded and to which it owes its being.

But what more? While the New England Senators will vote without hesitation for the destruction of the beet-sugar industry, what effect will it have upon their manufacturing industry? The Hawaiian Islands are in the Tropics. The Japanese laborer is a tropical laborer. He is a Malay. He is an artist. He is industrious. He can toil under a tropical sun. You can employ him for 20 cents a day as a skilled laborer, and from that to 30, never more. You can employ the men at from 20 to 30 cents a day and the women at from 8 to 20 cents a day. They are great manufacturers. I visited woolen mills and cotton mills in Ozaka, Japan, as great as any in this country. There are within 100 miles of Ozaka 16,000,000 Japanese. In that city there are 5,000 modern factories. They can produce everything that we can just as well as we can do it, and they are doing it to-day.

Annex these islands, and I advise any man who has money to purchase a woolen mill at once and start for Hawaii, import his labor from Japan, import his wool from Australia, and make woolen goods in competition with New England by labor worth from 20 to 30 cents a day, labor as good as theirs, labor as skillful. I visited a woolen mill in Ozaka last summer that employed 350 people. It was a modern mill; it had the latest possible improved machinery. They were making as good woolen goods as were ever made anywhere in the United States.

A man can take $100,000 and go to Hawaii, if this resolution is adopted, and make $100,000 a year. He can double it every twelve months with Asiatic labor. He will pay duty on his wool, but he will pay one-third for labor—and that is the principal cost in manufacturing the New England manufacturer has to pay—and drive the New England manufacturer out of the market. The freight charge from Hawaii to New York is only $5 a ton. You can get all the ships you want. That is what they pay for carrying sugar around the Horn, and that is what they would pay for carrying these manufactured goods and landing them right at the door of the New England mills, so as to bankrupt every one of them.

What limit is there where there are 45,000,000 people to draw from in Japan? The Japanese will come to this island because it is in the Tropics, where people wear but little clothing, and it is adapted to the food they eat. There are 25,000 there already, and those who come will only come to their kindred and friends. If you can put up a woolen mill, you can put up any other mill you choose, and where is your theory of protection?

Oh, I suppose the next cry will be, "On to the Philippines!" and you will take in 8,000,000 of Malays. But I shall not enlarge upon this subject. At a later time in this debate I shall go fully into the question of Asiatic competition. It is pertinent to this issue. I shall show what I saw in China and Japan, and the wages they pay and the goods they are turning out.

I do not know but that New England has reached the point old England has reached. Old England is interested, not in her manufacturers, but in her money loaners. Perhaps New England has got to a point where she is willing to sacrifice her laborers and live on her interest money, on her dividends on stocks, on her manipulation of the lines of transportation and accumulated capital. I half suspect it. The creditor never cares what becomes of the laborer. England cares not that her industries perish so that she can maintain the gold standard and her creditors reap more and more of an unearned increment. Perhaps New England has reached that point. Perhaps that is the cause of her indifference in regard to these questions, which certainly must encroach terribly upon her industries.

I shall also publish as a part of my remarks a table in regard to the production of sugar in Hawaii, but I shall not stop to read it. The table referred to is as follows:

The Hawaiian product would operate in this way:
Our total consumption of sugar in 1897 was 2,096,293 gross tons, or 4,695,629,120 pounds. If our population was 72,000,000, the per capita consumption was about 65½ pounds. The population of the thirteen States beyond the Missouri River was as follows:

Alaska.....	31,000	New Mexico.....	185,000
Arizona.....	77,000	Oklahoma.....	275,000
California.....	1,220,000	Oregon.....	400,000
Colorado.....	450,000	Texas.....	2,838,000
Idaho.....	130,000	Utah.....	255,000
Kansas.....	1,350,000	Washington.....	415,000
Montana.....	135,000	Wyoming.....	100,000
Nebraska.....	1,158,000
Nevada.....	90,000	Total.....	9,129,000

Per capita consumption.....pounds.....65½
Total consumption.....do.....585,200,800
1894—Hawaii exported to the United States of sugar.....do.....305,684,993
1897—In only eleven months she exported to us sugar.....do.....496,760,983

Here we find over 62 per cent increase in three years, and only eleven months of the full year 1897 are accounted for.

Mr. PETTIGREW. But some have questioned the possibility of the production of beet sugar successfully in this country. Beet sugar was first produced in Germany in the latter part of the last century. France soon followed, but the industry did not prosper until Napoleon, desirous of making France independent, began giving large bounties to beet-sugar growers, which stimulated the industry so that improved methods were introduced, and between 1815 and 1823 103 factories were built in France, which produced 3,375 tons in 1828. In 1868 the production in France was 152,475 tons. Higher duties were producing their effect, and the next year there was produced 266,923 tons, an increase of 75 per cent. In 1879 the product was 370 tons; in 1889, 460,000 tons; in 1896, 780,000 tons. Tariff and bounty on exports have produced these results.

Germany has made greater progress than France, and this was caused by her system of bounties and rebates, and her production amounts to over 1,000,000 tons per annum.

Austria produces 900,000 tons, and pays $3,640,000 in bounties. All European countries give small bounties to beet-sugar producers, and the result shows the wisdom of their course.

In 1879 the total product of beet sugar in Europe was 1,558,000 tons; in 1884, 2,360,000 tons; in 1889, 2,785,000 tons; in 1896, 4,675,000 tons.

We use 2,000,000 tons of sugar in the United States, and pay about $100,000,000 annually for it. We should produce every pound of that product in the United States.

I have read these figures of the growth of this industry in Europe to show that we can produce from beets all the sugar used in this country if we will pursue a protective policy. I shall now briefly show what we have done in this direction:

Statement showing beet-sugar production in California, 1833 to 1893, inclusive.

Year.	Beets.		Sugar produced.
	Acreage.	Price.
		Cents.	Tons.
1838.....	2,100	4.83	1,400
1839.....	2,735	4.75	2,457
1840.....	4,220	4.50	3,530
1841.....	4,192	4.96	4,083
1842.....	9,306	5	10,948
1843.....	12,391	5	17,512
1844.....	18,687	4.50	19,752
1845.....	17,165	4.13	24,000
1846.....	21,910	4	32,278
1847.....	29,000	4	*35,000
1893.....	78,500	-----	*90,000

* Estimated.

I contend that if these islands are annexed and this Asiatic labor is allowed to compete, there will be no more factories built, and that those which are in operation will become unprofitable, because as the production of sugar in Hawaii approaches American consumption competition must wipe out the beet-sugar industry. The fact that they produce in Hawaii to-day enough to supply all the people west of the Missouri River, where all the beet sugar is produced, already menaces that industry and must result in its ruin, because that region being nearest to Hawaii is the region in which they will most bitterly compete. They can sell the sugar in that country below the cost of producing it from beets and ultimately ruin the industry.

I ask the Secretary to read a very interesting letter on this subject with regard to the production of beets in California, written by Mr. Howard, who is president of the Alameda Sugar Company, of California. I requested him to write me this letter and give me the facts contained therein. The letter is dated May 18, 1897.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HANSBROUGH in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

ALAMEDA SUGAR COMPANY,
No. 133 Market street, San Francisco, May 18, 1897.

DEAR SIR: Having been interested during the past ten years in the oldest beet-sugar factory in the country, one which remains independent of the sugar trust and, in competition therewith, manufactures white sugar and sells direct to the consumer, we beg respectfully to submit a few considerations upon tariff and annexation.

Let us dismiss for the moment the many-sided issues with which these questions have been designedly obscured.

There are two gigantic sugar trusts. The one has monopolized 70 per cent of our total refining trade; the other, helped by coolly contract labor and the productiveness of its soil, produces the cheapest sugar of the world.

These two monopolies soon found a modus vivendi by which to divide the great spoil offered by our National Legislature in granting free entry to Hawaiian sugar.

The basis they agreed upon was, say, one-fifth to the American trust and four-fifths to the Hawaiian trust. The spirit of this exemption was that the Pacific coast might enjoy cheaper sugar, while, in point of fact, this intended benefit has inured solely to these two trusts.

In further evidence, by their last contract the trust pays the planter "the New York price, less one-fourth cent per pound," which price always includes full duty.

Thus in 1896 they divided as follows, viz:

To the sugar trust (one-fourth cent on 227,000 tons).....$1,135,000
To the Hawaiian planter (about).....5,000,000

For reasons inscrutable to the public these two sugar trusts are to-day in apparent open hostility. The contract under which they have conspired to fleece the American people expires this year of 1897, and it is stated that the American sugar trust will not renew upon the same terms, but insists upon a greater share in the division of the yearly spoil.

This American sugar trust is an association of American citizens—wholesale grocers and capitalists.

The Hawaiian sugar trust is largely composed of German and of English capital as well as of what was once American capital, but which, having now sought investment beyond our borders and thus escaped our taxation, is no longer American capital, but foreign capital, equally with its German and English associates.

The sugar trust of America at least gives employment to some American labor and pays some tax to the American Government; but the Hawaiian sugar trust receives everything, but gives nothing in return. The whole value of their imports from us does not equal one-half the duty yearly remitted by the United States.

The sugar trust of America, being a national industry, is entitled to a reasonable protection.

The labor which this sugar trust employs in refining only bears the labor necessary to produce from the ground up the nation's sugar the ratio of 1 to 38.

As a labor proposition to America the comparison is as follows, viz:

Hawaiian sugar.....	minus..	36 1/2
Sugar trust (refining).....	plus..	1 1/2
Native-grown sugar.....	plus..	38

or, reckoning by the known figures of beet-sugar production, these 227,000 tons of Hawaiian cooly-made sugar now yearly displace the best product of 165,000 acres of American land and rob 10,750 American farmers of their most profitable crop. But the American people are to-day awakening to the fact that at last they can be freed from the domination of both of these trusts, and in the promise of a new and rising industry the dignity of American labor sees its coming deliverance.

In 1875 the Hawaiian Islands raised 16,000 tons of sugar; in 1896 it exported 227,000 tons. In 1875 no native sugar was made on the Pacific coast. In 1897 California alone will produce upward of 50,000 tons, while the whole consumption is but 75,000 tons.

There will remain, therefore, a scant 25,000 tons to be supplied, and this balance will be more than supplied in 1898 by new factories now in actual construction.

A charitable fund is being solicited in San Francisco and has reached the sum of $30,644.41 for building an unnecessary boulevard, in order to provide work for the idle, while we are giving away our birthright, namely, the right to labor for and to supply our own markets.

The Hawaiian bureau, organized in San Francisco to influence legislation, sent the State labor commissioner, E. L. Fitzgerald, to those islands to report in their favor. The San Francisco Bulletin, in its issue of May 12, has the following, viz:

"Labor Commissioner Fitzgerald returned to-day from Honolulu with every assurance that a market for American labor will surely be opened there in the very near future. A very large majority of the planters have pledged me their word that they will employ American laborers as fast as room can be made for them on the several plantations."

Alas! and has America sunk so low? Is our beloved country now compelled to deport her own citizens to beg work from Hawaii and take the place of cooly labor at "$3 per month and found," instead of working for fair wages at home?

The population of the eight Hawaiian Islands numbers 109,020. Of these, 24,407 are Japanese, 21,016 are Chinese, 15,191 are Portuguese, 39,504 are Hawaiians, leaving a balance of only 8,202, and of these about 3,500 are from America. "This census indicates the class of people who are being favored at the expense of the white farmers of California," and for which heterogeneous population, 2,100 miles away, these sugar monopolists are now seeking annexation in order to accomplish the perpetuation of their privileges.

Among disinterested well-informed people in San Francisco there is a well-grounded belief that the recent attempt to create excitement over Japanese naval intervention in Hawaii is only another clever scheme of these would-be Hawaiian sugar annexationists.

We are not opposed to a reciprocity treaty so far as to grant them "the most-favored-nation clause," but we do not see how other sugar-producing nations of the first class and their dependencies may not justly feel aggrieved if we grant a total exemption from duty. Is the name Hawaii a fetich, that no duty must be placed upon its product?

Were it not better to grant sugar bounty to some other country with whom our trade relations are undeniably reciprocal, rather than to Hawaii, where trade relations are so disproportioned?

The people of the United States are practically paying to Hawaiian sugar-planters a bounty of $30 per ton, when in 1894 they withdrew the same from their domestic sugar producers and broke faith with their own citizens.

The eight leading sugar-producing nations of Europe protect their home markets for their native industry to the extent of from 3.9 to 8.86 cents per pound.

The American sugar producer asks barely half this protection from Congress to-day. Let this reasonable protection be granted and no undue favoritism be shown to any Asiatic or other contract-labor product, and a new era will dawn upon America.

A more profitable crop than any we now raise will be found for 1,500,000 acres of land and direct employment at good wages created for at least 200,000 American workmen, while allied industries in every walk of life will receive new impetus and upward of $100,000,000 be yearly saved to the national exchequer.

Very respectfully,

Hon. R. F. PETTIGREW,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

J. L. HOWARD, President.
JAMES COFFIN, Secretary.

Mr. PETTIGREW. We had hoped when the McKinley bill passed in 1890, giving a bounty of 2 cents a pound upon beet sugar, that that industry would grow and flourish in the United States and that the day was not distant when the States of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, and the States west of those States to the Pacific Ocean would be the scene of a great industry producing $100,000,000 worth of sugar per year. That hope was badly blighted by the enactment of the Wilson law of 1893, which repealed the bounty and placed a slight duty upon sugar, but not sufficient to materially stimulate the industry. Between 1890 and 1893 many beet-sugar factories were built in that region, two in Nebraska, and very many more were contemplated. But the Wilson tariff law checked the industry.

However, when we passed the Dingley Act last year and increased the duties upon sugar, we hoped this industry would increase, but owing to Hawaiian competition we now see that it is bound to be absolutely ruined and destroyed. We had supposed that the stories they had told us with regard to the limit of production in Hawaii were true. We now find that they are not true. Their production increased from 1895 to 1897 from 850,000,000 pounds to 500,000,000 pounds. The same increase must supply the country where beet sugar is now produced through all time to come. We believe that that increase is imminent, and therefore for those who attempt to produce beet sugar in this country the industry must surrender, if the pending resolution passes and the Hawaiian Islands are annexed. There is no getting around it; and every man from those Western States who votes for this resolution deliberately, with his eyes open, with the facts undisputed, votes to destroy the beet-sugar industry in this country. There is no getting around it, no chance to avoid it, and no chance to plead ignorance.

In 1876, when they adopted this treaty and remitted the duties on Hawaiian sugar, a Senator could escape the charge that he intended to destroy the American sugar industry, because the friends and foes alike of the treaty claimed that it was not possible to produce more than 150,000,000 pounds of sugar in Hawaii, and it was generally conceded that they could not produce over 50,000,000 pounds; but now the facts are undisputed and stare us in the face that they did produce 500,000,000 pounds and with every prospect of their being able to produce four times as much; and I believe they can, because I examined those coffee lands in that broad belt from the ocean up the side of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea, on the Island of Hawaii, now covered with dense tropical forests, partially planted with coffee, and they will, in my opinion, successfully grow sugar, every acre, and while it is broken land and the fields can not be large, the profit is so enormous, owing to the duty which we remitted and the Asiatic labor which they employ, that they can afford to cultivate sugar on fields but a few acres in extent, and they can afford to till the soil by hand, and spade it up with the spade, for the remitted duties alone on the crop of the Ewa plantation last year amounted to over $300 an acre, and they produced 9 tons to the acre.

No wonder it is profitable, no wonder the industry so grows. I say every Senator who votes for this resolution votes with his eyes open, intending to destroy the beet-sugar industry of this country. I contend for that industry. I want to see it grow and thrive. I want to see sugar mills built in my State, but none will ever be built there if we annex Hawaii.

Mr. James Coffin, who is secretary of the Alameda Sugar Company, wrote me a letter furnishing certain facts with regard to the beet-sugar industry in California. I will send it to the desk and ask to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

ALAMEDA SUGAR COMPANY.

No. 132 Market street, San Francisco, April 26, 1897.

DEAR SIR: The Alameda Sugar Company, an association of 65 American stockholders, with a paid-up capital of $400,000, begs to present the following plan: Last year we manufactured 4,700 tons refined sugar from 3,500 acres, grown by 228 different farmers. This year we expect 9,000 tons refined sugar from 6,000 acres, grown by 430 different farmers.

From the Hawaiian Islands, under the falsely called reciprocity treaty, there came in free of duty last year 227,000 tons of sugar.

This equals the product of twenty-five such factories as ours. These 227,000 tons displaced the most profitable product of 165,000 acres of land and robbed 10,750 American farmers of their most profitable crop.

The manual labor which these 10,750 American farmers would have employed in the intensive farming which the cultivation of the sugar beet requires is still another consideration.

The factory labor yet another.

To refine a ton of duty-free Hawaiian sugar requires the labor of one man for one and one-third days. To grow from the soil up and manufacture 1 ton of refined sugar requires the labor of one man for thirty-eight days.

This 227,000 tons of Hawaiian duty-free sugar yearly displaces in money value for factory labor, $1,135,000; for farm labor and rentals, $9,000,000; for limestone, $400,000; for coal, $1,500,000; for other supplies, $650,000.

The labor of allied industries, foundries, jute and cotton mills, etc., remain still to be reckoned on, and all this native labor displaced that a cooly-made contract labor product may thrive in a foreign island.

The three localities in California where the three beet-sugar factories are already established are the only really prosperous agricultural communities in that State to-day.

Domestic exports to Hawaii in 1895 were not so large as in 1893, less by nearly $1,000,000 than in 1890, and less by over a million and a quarter than in 1891.

1893.....	$3,683,000
1890.....	4,000,000
1891.....	4,935,000
1892.....	3,721,000
1895.....	3,648,000

In 1895-96 the value of Hawaiian sugar imported was over $19,000,000, upon which the duty, at 40 per cent, would have been $7,600,000.

For the sake of maintaining a foreign commerce of $3,648,000, and in order that a few shipping houses of San Francisco may benefit by the trade and keep control of the large cash balances of Hawaiian planters, the nation at large must give up $7,600,000 of revenue.

For the sake that coolies may work in a foreign climate which white labor can not stand, and where the white and dominant race forms about 3 per cent only of the population, the laboring men of San Francisco now parade its streets calling for work, and a charitable fund aggregating $25,000 is daily published in its newspapers, and is now being disbursed to an idle crowd who clamor for the tickets doled out to them in the order of application, and which entitle each to a day's work at $1 per day upon an unnecessary boulevard.

Should a Coxe army again march on Washington and class ever be arrayed against class in our fair country it will be because home labor is denied a right to work for its own market in order that foreign coolly labor may add to the wealth of a class now actively at work to influence national legislation in the perpetuation of their privileges.

The local agents of Hawaiian planters, without any possible accruing benefit to themselves and as mere retaliation against the producer of native sugar, are to-day so unpatriotic as to be collecting figures from native California sugar factories in order to produce them at Washington and support their claim that native sugar needs no protection.

Whereas up to January 1, 1897, they knew that the Alameda Sugar Company had since 1880 paid out in dividends $130,000 and received in bounty $226,744.93, showing a loss without bounty of $96,744.93.

Conditioned upon favorable legislation, within two years the 75,000 tons sugar needed on the Pacific coast would be entirely made from the native product, and not a pound of this Hawaiian sugar would be required to supply the coast consumption.

The opposition to tariff legislation has always contended that tariffs were designed to aid manufacturers, trusts, and the moneyed class generally.

The abrogation of the Hawaiian treaty is respectfully asked in the interest of the agricultural class and of native labor.

For the purpose of diverting attention from the main question of protecting the California farmer and the investments of American capital in an American industry the advocates of the continuance of Hawaiian reciprocity have recently begun the use of part of the California press in appealing to the prejudices of people on the ground of an admission that Claus Spreckels had sold a minority interest in his two beet-sugar factories to the American sugar trust. While this fact may be regarded by many as a misfortune, the facts remain that there are other sugaries uncontrolled by the sugar trust and the development of the industry on so large a scale will tend to the permanent benefit of the depressed agricultural interests of the State.

Let the example of California in the matter of beet sugar be imitated by the different States along the northern and temperate belt of our country and the multiplicity of factories would make the control of the industry by any concentrated power a commercial impossibility.

Very respectfully,

JAMES COFFIN.

Hon. R. F. PETTIGREW,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, this letter is extremely interesting as bearing upon the production of beet sugar in California. The opinion therein expressed is unquestionably correct—that if the beet-sugar industry was encouraged it would grow, so that it would supply the American market; and Mr. Coffin says the sugar trust would be a thing of the past and its occupation gone.

But it is said we need not fear Hawaiian competition for the reason that our labor laws will apply to that country and that Asiatic labor will no longer be employed upon the plantations. I showed the other day that the Anglo-Saxon does not toil within the Tropics; that there are no settlements of Anglo-Saxons in the world anywhere within 23° of the equator; that there are none employed in toil upon these islands, and that there never will be any.

But is the dream that Asiatic labor will not be employed founded upon any fact to justify entertaining it? We made a treaty in 1894 with Japan, by which she is placed upon an equal footing with all other nations, and her people can come to the United States the same as people can come from France or Germany or England and engage in any of the occupations of this country; and that treaty is to run for twelve years, and here are some of its provisions:

TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE EMPIRE OF JAPAN—COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION.

Concluded at Washington November 22, 1894.
Ratification advised by the Senate February 5, 1895.
Ratified by the President February 15, 1895.
Ratified by the Emperor February 27, 1895.
Ratifications exchanged at Washington March 21, 1895.
Proclaimed March 21, 1895.

ARTICLE XIX.

This treaty shall go into operation on the 17th day of July, 1899, and shall remain in force for the period of twelve years from that date.

Either high contracting party shall have the right, at any time thereafter, to give notice to the other of its intention to terminate the same, and at the expiration of twelve months after such notice is given this treaty shall wholly cease and determine.

This treaty provides in Article I that—

The citizens or subjects of each of the two high contracting parties shall have full liberty to enter, travel, or reside in any part of the territories of the other contracting party, and shall enjoy full and perfect protection for their persons and property.

So that Japanese in any numbers can come in as laborers from Japan to the United States under this treaty, the same as persons from England, or France, or Italy, or any of the countries of Europe. The Japanese will go to Hawaii, and they will not come in any great numbers to the United States, because they are used to a climate like Hawaii. The Jap wears but little clothing in the summer. He lives upon vegetable food, upon rice, and that climate, where there are already 25,000 Japanese, is particularly adapted to them. You pass this resolution and they will swarm there, and Japanese money will go there, millions of it, to build factories and to ship goods to the United States free of duty, made by Asiatic labor, and you will have no way to stop it.

The citizens or subjects of each of the high contracting parties may trade in any part of the territories of the other by wholesale or retail in all kinds of produce, manufactures, and merchandise of lawful commerce, either in person or by agents, singly or in partnership with foreigners or native citizens or subjects; and they may there own or hire and occupy houses, manufactories, warehouses, shops, and premises which may be necessary for them, and lease land for residential and commercial purposes, conforming themselves to the laws, police and customs regulations of the country like native citizens or subjects.

So the Japanese can come here and do exactly as any other people can do. I want to call the especial attention of the New England manufacturers and the Pennsylvania manufacturers to these facts, for there is not an industry in which the Japanese are not skilled. This treaty also provides:

ARTICLE XI.

Any ship of war or merchant vessel of either of the high contracting parties which may be compelled by stress of weather, or by reason of any other distress, to take shelter in a port of the other, shall be at liberty to refit therein, to procure all necessary supplies, and to put to sea again, without paying any dues other than such as would be payable by national vessels. In case, however, the master of a merchant vessel should be under the necessity of disposing of a part of his cargo in order to defray the expenses, he shall be bound to conform to the regulations and tariffs of the place to which he may have come.

Here, then, is a provision that our war vessels out of coal, out of provisions, or in any way disabled, can enter their ports and procure these things. Why, then, should not our ships go direct to Manila, instead of drifting through the Tropics for a month?

ARTICLE XVI.

The citizens or subjects of each of the high contracting parties shall enjoy in the territories of the other the same protection as native citizens or subjects in regard to patents, trade-marks, and designs, upon fulfillment of the formalities prescribed by law.

So we have with these people a treaty exactly the same as that which we have with the most civilized nations of the earth, and the Japanese are one of the most civilized nations of the world.

We propose to strike down this sugar industry, and I am sorry that I am again obliged to allude to the platform of the Republican party. I am afraid I shall find not one plank that they ever intended or pretended to live up to. Here is the plank with regard to beet sugar:

PROTECTION OF BEET-SUGAR GROWERS.

We condemn the present Administration for not keeping faith with the sugar producers of this country. The Republican party favors such protection as will lead to the production on American soil of all the sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

So they propose to annex the soil in order to comply with that plank, and produce the sugar upon American soil. They did not tell the people of the Dakotas and the people of Nebraska in the last campaign that they proposed to do it in that way; that they would annex Hawaii and make it American soil and there produce our sugar. They made our people believe, and they talked it upon the stump everywhere, that they were going by this tariff to encourage the beet-sugar industry in those States. Now it turns out that the platform was cunningly worded, and that they were going simply to stimulate production on foreign soil and then annex the soil!

Here is McKinley's letter of acceptance. It reads as follows:

The Republican platform wisely declares in favor of such encouragement to our sugar interests as will lead to the production on American soil of all the sugar which the American people use. * * *

Now he is trying to annex the soil.

Confidence in home enterprises has almost wholly disappeared. Our men are idle, and, while they are idle, men abroad are occupied in supplying us with goods. * * * It is not open mints which is the need of the time, but open mills for the employment of American workmen; * * * the establishment of a wise protective policy which shall encourage manufacturing at home.

He is now engaged, in violation of his duties as President, in lobbying this measure through Congress, in violation of the spirit, if not the words, of the platform on which he was elected; and that it is its chief support; for there are no arguments to sustain this measure, nobody presents any argument, and nobody has any argument to present. I have been told that this measure would fall to the ground if it were not for the intense interest of the President in the matter.

We have heard a great deal about the coffee industry of Hawaii, and that we can not produce the coffee we use in this country if we annex the islands. I am going to show that they can not produce it in Hawaii; I am going to show it from their own works, from Thrum's Annual. They can produce some coffee, but here is a record of coffee production since 1877. I am going to put it in the RECORD, and anyone who will examine it will conclude that they can not successfully produce coffee in that country. For instance, in 1877 they produced 170,379 pounds of coffee; in 1882, 3,008; in 1884, 950 pounds; in 1885, 3,786 pounds; in 1886, 2,748 pounds; in 1887, 2,875 pounds; in 1888, 3,680 pounds, and in 1895, 183,680 pounds—just a little more than they produced in 1877.

The statement in full is as follows:

If we required any additional evidence of the hollow mockery of this

"coffee" racket, we could find it in official statistics. In Finance and Commerce, House Document 453, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session, page 1699, there will be found ample inferential evidence to prove that coffee-raising in the islands is, because of blight and other reasons, too insecure and uncertain to ever attract capital, even if the proper lands were at hand on which to grow it, and they are not. The figures from the document cited show the fluctuations in coffee production, from which any farmer or other good business man will readily draw the proper and a safe conclusion.

Coffee exported to United States.

1877	$33,062
1895	36,168

This shows little or no gain in eighteen years. Again—

	Pounds.
1877	170,379
1882	3,008
1884	950
1885	3,786
1886	2,748
1887	2,875
1888	3,680
1895	183,690

Mr. PETTIGREW. What is the trouble? The trouble is that some insect destroys the crop, so that it is not safe to go into the business. The trouble is, there is a white mildew on the leaves of the plants. I asked the planters if that was not injurious. They said, "Oh, no; it amounts to nothing;" but it appears that from 1877, when they produced 170,379 pounds of coffee, the production fell to nothing, and never exceeded 3,600 pounds up to 1888. Something destroyed the crop. They can not produce coffee successfully. But this dream of coffee production, this dream of an opening for American capital, is a delusion and a snare.

If anyone is going to Hawaii with money after this resolution is passed, I advise him to invest it in textile machinery for the making of goods which are spun or woven, for you can get your labor from Japan at 30 cents a day, your wool from Australia, and your cotton from this country; and with the cheap labor in that tropical climate, where but little clothing is needed and where men can live upon rice, you could close every mill in the United States, and there is room enough in those islands to set up all the machinery in the United States. If I had $100,000 and was looking for an investment, as soon as this resolution passed I would secure machinery for a woolen mill and start for Hawaii, and I would have $200,000 in twelve months, for they are skilled laborers, and you can employ thousands upon thousands of the most skilled laborers in the world in Osaka, Japan.

I will not stop to read it, but I will place in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, an article on coffee growing in Hawaii, written by one of the citizens of that country who is a native Hawaiian, a very ardent advocate of the resources of the island, and interested, as all these people are, in developing any industry which will induce the importation of capital. I believe his statements are true. He shows what it will cost to open a coffee plantation, and what the income will be if they have a crop such as they get in some years; but he says nothing about that blight which destroys the crop more than three-fourths of the time, which is absolutely destructive of the profits of the industry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the insertion in the RECORD of the paper referred to by the Senator from South Dakota? The Chair hears none.

The article referred to is as follows:

COFFEE RAISING IN HAWAII.

In order to make a success of coffee cultivation in the Hawaiian Islands, it requires primarily a capital of at least $200 per acre for the amount of land planted and brought to such a state of bearing as will return a revenue large enough to make returns above the expenditure. Aside from this, one must live, and living is as economical or as expensive as one desires.

Land is obtained by claiming homesteads from the Government at a nominal cost, $5 or $6 per acre, or by private purchase at rates varying from $10 to $40 per acre.

The lands of Puna, Hawaii, are by many counts the best upon the group, the principal reason of the above having more value being on account of the higher altitude and more equable temperature. The land is forest land, densely wooded; it is extremely rocky, so much so that it is impossible to either hoe or plow it. This is the proper condition for coffee land, as the lands in Arabia, Ceylon, and the best portions of Java are of this nature.

The rocks are semidisintegrated lava, called "A-A." They, together with the vegetable mold formed from decayed vegetation, compose a soil unsurpassed anywhere in the world for its advantages as regards coffee culture.

The first step in starting a plantation is to clear a small area—say two acres—build a house to live in, and workmen's quarters. The necessary tools will cost $100, and men's quarters and the sufficiently comfortable house for the proprietor will necessitate an expenditure of, say, $500.

Half an acre is then prepared for nursery beds. The ground must be dug over many times, the stones removed, the sourness of the soil allowed to become dispelled under the rays of the sun, and then the seed is planted. This should be only of perfectly formed grains.

The seeds are planted endwise about 2 inches apart. When this is done (and, by the way, it must be done under the personal supervision of an overseer or the planter), the work of clearing the ground for planting is commenced.

The laborers are first sent through the land to be cleared with no implements but cane knives to cut away all undergrowth, vines, etc. Next they fell the timber and hew away all branches so as to leave the tree trunks perfectly bare. The bark soon rots away, but the hard wood of the ohia and koa does not decay for many years. The logs are sawed into convenient lengths and then all of the other growth, underbrush, limbs, branches, vines, etc., are burned.

The logs are let lie where they are. A base line is then run and from it cross lines in either direction. This is done by using a small rope to which are attached tags at the proper distances (I believe 6 feet to be the best distance apart for trees). This gives 1,200 trees to the acre. At each point where a tree is to be set, a bamboo stake is stuck into the ground. Wild bamboo is found in small clumps all over the forest, and a patch 100 feet square will furnish stakes for several hundred acres. Then the laborers go over the field digging holes 18 inches square and 14 to 18 inches deep. As soon as excavated they are refilled with loose soil, the same soil that was taken out. The plants by this time are large enough for transplanting and care is necessary in doing this for various reasons. From that time on, the pruning, replacing of weak by strong plants, and weeding constitute the labor of the plantation up to the bearing period.

Weeding, the greatest expense of all, is begun as soon as the ground is burned over, and it is absolutely necessary to do this weeding by hand, and to keep a force of men (one man to every 10 acres) constantly at it.

Many varieties of grass and seeds seed here every twenty-eight days, so that neglect of a place for, say, three months entails enormous expenditure. A tree 3 years old will bear from one-third to one-half pound of coffee.

A tree 5 years old should bear a pound or more.

It is generally reckoned that the fourth year's crop will more than pay all the expenses of that year, and that the fifth year's crop will nearly return all serious outlay on the field. The cost is about as follows, estimate being based on actual expenditures on ten plantations:

Preparing nursery and cleaning for building space, garden, nursery, etc., buildings, tools, etc., for, say, a 50-acre plantation, about $900 (this a little high).

Cleaning and burning, ready for holling, from $15 to $30 per acre, according to the density of the forest.

Lining, holling, and transplanting, from $5 to $6 an acre.

Pruning, replacing, and incidental expenses, for four years, $10 per acre.

Weeding the first year, $20 per acre; the second year, $18 per acre; the third year, $15 per acre; the fourth year, $10 per acre; thereafter, from $5 to $10 per acre.

In round numbers, in computing expenditures, one should figure on $300 per acre, including the living of two owners, to bring the plantation into bearing profitably.

The average returns on the five best plantations, 5 and 6 years of age, are as follows:

Fourth year, 500 pounds coffee netting 16 cents per pound, or $80 per acre; fifth year, 1,000 pounds of coffee netting 16 cents, or $160 per acre. The cost of picking, pulping, fermenting, cleaning, drying, sorting, and transportation is about 5 cents per pound.

The price varies but little for Hawaiian coffee on account of the limited area, the fine aroma, and the dangers of over production are "nil."

It is an extremely profitable industry, but one which requires great care, constant attention, and tireless supervision.

With a capital of $10,000 a person can take up 100 acres, plant 50 of them, and expect in the sixth year to have his capital back, with interest, and thereafter "play on velvet."

To come without capital is superlatively foolish.

The best way for a new comer is to engage the services of an experienced planter and pay him to make frequent calls in order to supervise the work, and follow his instructions.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It has been argued most earnestly, Mr. President, that if we do not take these islands Japan will take them. There is one thing certain: Our relations have been such with Japan for the last fifty years that Japan will never interfere with these islands as long as we express a desire that they shall maintain a government of their own. Japan disclaimed it. Then we are told that there was difficulty between these people and Japan last year. Mr. President, that difficulty was created by the unjust act of the sugar raising missionaries who now control the Government of Hawaii, under the guns of American war vessels. They created that difficulty. They picked a quarrel with Japan as an excuse, in order to influence the American people. First, they said that England was going to take the islands. England disclaimed it and said she had no desire to take them. In fact, the islands were taken once by England in 1843 and turned back. England refused to accept them. Nobody has seemed to want them.

Then it was said that Germany was going to take the islands. Germany disclaimed it; and having gone the rounds and annexation not yet being accomplished, it was said that Japan was going to take the islands. So they picked a quarrel with Japan and they turned back her immigrants, although since they picked that quarrel with Japan they have admitted over 6,000 Japanese. They turned back her immigrants, claiming that they were coming in violation of the Hawaiian law, and yet since that time they have admitted over 6,000 Japanese laborers under the same conditions.

I talked with one of the officers of the Hawaiian Government upon this matter, and he said that their law required when immigrants came there that they should have $50 each. He said those immigrants did not have it, or, if they did have it, he did not believe it was their own money; that they had $50-drafts on the bank of Honolulu, and the officers believed that they would go and cash the drafts at the bank and return the money to the people who had furnished it. I said, "Why did you not cash the drafts and give them the money?" He said, "We did in some cases give them the money, as we have done since." But there was no indication and no proof that it was not their money. However, since then the Hawaiian Government have admitted over 6,000 Japanese under these same exact conditions, showing conclusively that they picked this quarrel for the purpose of effecting sentiment in the United States.

Japan disclaims any desire to interfere. I will have placed in the RECORD a clear statement of this controversy; but I will first have read President Dole's interview published in the New York Journal of the 24th of last January on this same subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

There is absolutely no foundation for these stories of Hawaii being menaced by Japan. There is absolutely nothing in it. There is nothing in the relations between our country and Japan that hurried me to America.

And yet for weeks and days the American people were humbugged with the statement that unless the United States annexed Hawaii, Japan or some other nation would.

And Mr. Dole is reported to have also said, in answer to a question as to what would become of the present government should the United States refuse to annex the islands:

"Well, the Republic is there. I don't know that anything would happen except that things will go on as usual. I don't see any immediate danger from possession by any other country."

And so, too, the "commercial" argument has ceased to be used. So that the reasons on which this annexation "scheme" were originally based, to a very considerable extent, have dropped entirely out, and we have more sentiment left. The latest scheme to secure free sugar for the Hawaiian trust is to have Mr. Dole duplicate the visit of King Kalakaua here.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask to have the Secretary read a statement in relation to the controversy between Japan and Hawaii with regard to this labor question. I propose to set at rest forever this talk that Japan is trying to capture the islands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

During the months of March and April, 1897, the Hawaiian Government refused permission to 1,185 Japanese subjects to land in Hawaii, and compelled the steamers which brought them to Hawaii to take them back again to Japan.

The first case was that of the Shinshu-maru, which arrived at Honolulu on the 27th of February, 1897, having on board 804 Japanese immigrants, 463 of whom were expelled.

The second case was that of the Sakura-maru, which arrived at Honolulu on March 19, 1897, having on board 815 Japanese immigrants, 164 of whom were expelled.

The third case was that of the Kinai-maru, which arrived at Honolulu on the 9th of April, having on board 684 Japanese immigrants, 553 of whom were expelled.

All of the persons thus expelled while in Hawaii were detained on shore and practically deprived of their liberty. They were not allowed to hold communication with their friends and countrymen in Hawaii, or to employ lawyers or agents or to take legal advice. During their detention they were examined by the Hawaiian minister for foreign affairs, the collector-general of customs, and the deputy collector of customs, but by no one else, regarding their rights and qualifications under the law to land in Hawaii.

For the purpose of conveniently describing the grounds upon which the Hawaiian Government based its action the immigrants who were expelled may be divided into two classes.

The first, 1,030 in number, were refused permission to remain in Hawaii and were expelled therefrom because they had in their possession agreements with the immigration companies under whose auspices they went to Hawaii, by the terms of which the companies bound themselves to endeavor to find employment for the immigrants in Hawaii, and in case of failure or inability to do so, or in case of illness or other misfortune, to provide the immigrants with means of subsistence or, if necessary, with return passages to Japan. These agreements are required by the law of Japan, and are intended to protect the immigrants and to prevent the immigration companies from inducing immigrants to go to any country where they can not find employment and where they might consequently become a public charge.

The Hawaiian authorities construed this agreement to be a contract, and this was the sole reason alleged for the expulsion of the 1,030 persons in question at the time. Subsequently, however, in the correspondence which ensued between the two Governments, it was alleged that these immigrants were not the bona fide possessors of $50 each, as required by the law of Hawaii, although it was not denied that each one of the 1,030 was found to have at least that much money in his possession when examined by the Hawaiian authorities. From June, 1894, to December, 1896, between 1,500 and 2,000 Japanese subjects, whose case was precisely similar to that of the 1,030 thus expelled, were permitted by the Hawaiian Government to land and reside in Hawaii; and previous to April 2, 1897, when the Hawaiian minister for foreign affairs first informed the Japanese diplomatic representative at Honolulu of the reason for the expulsion of the immigrants, no notice was ever given to the Japanese Government that the possession of agreements of the kind above described would be held to disqualify Japanese subjects for admission into Hawaii.

It may also be added in this place that no decision of the Hawaiian authorities respecting the qualifications of the 1,185 expelled immigrants to land in Hawaii was ever communicated by the said authorities to the immigrants, neither were the latter ever informed by the said authorities of the reasons why they, the said immigrants, were refused permission to remain and reside in Hawaii and were expelled therefrom.

The other immigrants who were expelled, 146 in number, came by the Shinshu-maru. They were all contract laborers employed by the Kobe Immigration Company, a company organized under the laws of Japan, doing business in Hawaii and recognized by the Hawaiian Government. The company had applied in due course to the Hawaiian board of immigration for authority to employ these laborers (as was the usual custom); but the Hawaiian minister for foreign affairs, on the 19th of March, 1897, after the laborers had arrived, informed the Japanese diplomatic representative that these persons also would be expelled, because the application for permission to employ them was not accompanied by a bond whereby the applicants bound themselves to introduce into Hawaii, within eighteen months from the date of the application, 10 European or American laborers for every 100 Japanese.

On the 10th of March, 1897, petitions for writs of habeas corpus were filed in the supreme court of Hawaii on behalf of the Japanese passengers on board the first steamer, the Shinshu-maru, who were then detained on shore and restrained of their liberties. The collector of customs, in his return to the said writs, gave as his reason for the detention of the petitioners that they were aliens and foreigners; that it had been decided that they were not entitled to enter the Hawaiian Islands, and that they should be deported therefrom.

The supreme court decided on the 17th of March that the decision of the collector was final and could not be inquired into by the court. This left the immigrants entirely without remedy under the laws of Hawaii.

The Japanese Government held that these acts of the Hawaiian authorities were in complete reversal of all precedent, in derogation of the laws of Hawaii, and in violation of the treaty between the two countries. By reason of the construction of the law and of the treaty thus annulled by the Hawaiian Government, without warning and contrary to its previous practice, a number of Japanese subjects have, without any fault of their own, been subjected to great loss and inconvenience, and the steamship companies have incurred large losses, including the expenditure of considerable sums paid to the Hawaiian Government.

For this reason the Japanese Government is convinced that it has a valid claim against Hawaii for damages suffered by the immigrants, the immigration companies, and the steamers, which can be traced directly to the action of the Hawaiian authorities. The arbitration of these claims has been proposed and accepted, but the negotiations have not yet been definitely concluded. This has certainly not been owing to any delay occasioned by the Japanese Government, which earnestly desires to have the whole question finally settled at the earliest practicable moment.

It may be added that since the expulsion of the Japanese immigrants above described the Hawaiian Government has voluntarily admitted a large number of Japanese laborers under contracts approved by the board of immigration. More than 800 such laborers came in during the month of November alone, and it is stated on good authority that at least 2,000 altogether will be so admitted during the present season. This would seem to dispose of the charge that the Hawaiian Government has reason to dread Japanese domination or that its action last spring had a valid excuse in the danger of such domination.

NOTE.—In the correspondence between the Japanese and Hawaiian Governments regarding the claims for damages on account of the expulsion of the Japanese immigrants, the amount of the claims has not yet been stated. It is, roughly speaking, about 200,000 yen, or $130,000 United States gold.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss the question further this evening. I shall at some future time present to the Senate the conclusive proof that the United States overturned the Hawaiian Government—a friendly Government—and set up in its place this missionary, sugar-raising Government; that it is a puppet of ours with which we are treating for title to a country inhabited by a people who do not wish to be annexed to the United States. That question I shall go into fully and shall show from official records in a way that can not be disputed or controverted that we, the people of the United States, through our Navy, overturned a friendly Government and set up in its place and are now treating with a puppet for title to an unwilling country.

I also wish to show to the Senate the effect of Asiatic competition on our manufactures, upon our industries, what must certainly come to the mill toilers and the mill owners of this country with the admission into this Union of vast hordes of Asiatic laborers. The Malay is as skillful as the Japanese, and to-day in Manila they are producing the highest grade of silk, and it is sold in Europe in competition with that of France. They can produce every manufactured product produced by the skill of the people of the United States, and they can do it with laborers who cost but $1.75 a month in gold and who board themselves. At some future time I will tell the Senate those things which I saw, which certainly must be destructive to the industries of this country if we admit those people to our citizenship. Eight hundred miles from the coast, in China, I visited—

Mr. GALLINGER. Why not do it now?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will give you a sample. Eight hundred miles from the coast, in China, I visited a factory where there were 34,000 spindles and a thousand looms—a model institution in every respect. It had been running three years night and day. There was but one European employee, an Englishman, who had charge of the machinery. Every other toiler was a Chinaman. The engineers, spinners, weavers, every person employed in that great factory, were Chinese, and the average wages of those employees was $3.50 in silver per month and they boarded themselves, or $1.75 in gold, or a little less than that, for the difference in exchange was more than 2 in 1.

We can not manufacture an article against that competition. In Nankin you can get all the able-bodied Chinamen you want for a dollar a month, and you can hire them boarded for $1.00 in silver per month. That is the competition which the Anglo-Saxon greed for land impels us to annex. I sometimes think the Anglo-Saxon affinity for land is greater than the affinity of salt for water. No matter how poor or how worthless it is, if there is a chance to steal a piece of land the Anglo-Saxon goes after it. We supposed we had inaugurated a new system, a new idea, when we set up our Constitution, and that we would never be a party to the land-grabbing schemes of our kindred across the sea; but now we are to abandon that theory and we are to take the first step in the shape of a few volcanic islands inhabited by a worthless population. It is this against which I protest.

Mr. President, I am opposed to the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands because it is a step in sin, the first step in the wrong direction, the abandonment of the grand moral position which this country has held before the world. I am opposed to it because it violates the fundamental principles of the Constitution of the United States; and while we may violate the Constitution in other directions, in this direction I believe it is destructive to those principles upon which the Constitution is based, to the fundamental principles of our civilization, and therefore more dangerous than any other violation of the Constitution which can be had.

I am opposed to annexation because it brings in a population which, in my opinion, can never perform the duties of governing an American State. It brings in a climate where the white man can not toll, and, therefore, will not live and rear children. It brings in a population 72,000 of which are males and 36,000 are females, precluding the idea which is the fundamental principle of our civilization—of the home, the fireside, the husband and the wife and the children. I am opposed to it because it is a step in breaking down the barriers of protection, which are essential to the maintenance and the dignity and character of American labor.

Mr. President, before I take my seat I ask unanimous consent to have a pamphlet printed as a document. It is a small pamphlet written by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], being an analysis of the functions of money. I make that request.

Mr. GALLINGER. I object to it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The pamphlet is not very long.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from South Dakota to have printed as a document certain matter which he has stated. Is there objection?

Mr. GALLINGER. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. DANIEL. If my friend will allow me to interrupt him for a moment, the author of this document is a distinguished member of our body, and I hope our courteous friend, the Senator from New Hampshire, will allow this paper to be published. It will not interfere with any saving of time.

Mr. GALLINGER. In response to the suggestion of my always courteous friend, the Senator from Virginia, I regret that I can not agree with him. The money that we expend for printing documents is the money of the people, and I know of no reason why we should take a book written even by a United States Senator and print it at the public expense, so that it can be sent free through the mails of the United States. I must insist upon my objection.

Mr. DANIEL. If the Senator will indulge me just a moment, I will say that such permission has been frequently granted on other occasions, and it is not one by which any political advantage is sought or ought to be sought. No courtesy of that kind would be asked by any gentleman on this floor unless he would as freely grant it to another, although he might not entirely concur with the statements in the document. I know this is a very valuable contribution to the literature of the subject. It is very ample and has been contributed to by the best minds of our country on both sides.

But I will not press the matter if my honorable friend feels that he ought to object to it, although I think he should strain his natural liberality and generous inclinations a little on this occasion; and on serious second thought he will probably like to withdraw his objection.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will only commence reading the book to-night and will finish it at the next session of the Senate.

[At this point Mr. PETTIGREW yielded to Mr. QUAY.]

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I dislike to encumber the RECORD with this pamphlet; but if there is objection to its being presented as a document, which would not encumber the RECORD, I shall read it and put it into the RECORD, and read it all, because I consider it a very valuable contribution to this subject, and one that ought to be in the hands of every producer of wealth in this country.

Mr. CULLOM. Will my friend the Senator from South Dakota allow me to make a suggestion to my friend the Senator from New Hampshire? In view of this being a document prepared by a Senator, and in view of the further fact that if the Senator now upon the floor does read it it will go into the RECORD, and if he does not it will only be printed as a document, I beg my friend the Senator from New Hampshire to allow it to be printed as a document, so that we can go forward.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, it is unnecessary for Senators to make appeals of that kind to me. If the Senator from South Dakota wishes to read the pamphlet he can do it, and it will emphasize the absurdity of our rules, and that I am very anxious to have emphasized before the country in this debate. It makes no difference to me who wrote the pamphlet; it is an abuse of the Senate to have it printed as a document and sent through the mail free of postage. I shall insist on my objection.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, I beg leave to say, respecting the paper which the Senator from South Dakota asked might be published as a document, that I think the Senate has very little abused the privileges of publication. On the contrary, I think it has held very strictly to the rule that nothing should be printed as a speech made by any member of this body except a speech actually delivered upon the floor of the Senate, which is a good and wholesome rule. The multitude of members in the coordinate legislative branch of this Government has led to great liberality as to publications in the RECORD. As we all know, it is through the publication of the sentiments of the members of both bodies that the great audience is reached, and it is an educational function which the speeches perform, and the people of the country at large read them with more or less interest.

In this case a distinguished member of this body, who has expert knowledge and who has given lifelong study to a great subject of controversy, has contributed to literature in a compact form the views which he has often expressed upon this floor, and which for aught I know he might be tempted to express in full and in the very words of this paper but for his forbearance upon the time and patience of the Senate. His knowledge that it is cramped for opportunity to finish much needed legislation no doubt has properly deterred him.

Under these circumstances, when we have often permitted, in cases analogous, documents to be printed at the instance of gentlemen of all kinds of political affiliation and views, while I know my honorable friend from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] would not be discourteous to any of his colleagues and would not wish to do anything that was not in full deference to them, it seems to me a little rigorous and not sufficiently respectful of the fair and appropriate wish of others to deny to this paper that publication.

I hope I may be pardoned for saying this much, because the sentiments which I express are entirely without regard to the personality of the author or to the views which he expresses save that he is a member of this body. I would entertain the same opinion and would ask the same action in the case of any member of this body, whatever might be his affiliation or whatever might be his views in a case at all similar to the one before us.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I should like to ask the honorable Senator from Virginia before he takes his seat whether the volume that is to be read or printed in the RECORD relates to the subject that is under consideration, the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. Is it germane to that general subject? If so, in what particular? If it is germane, Mr. President, I would unite in the request to the honorable Senator from New Hampshire to withdraw his objection; but if the book that is proposed to be inserted in the RECORD in the midst of the discussion of this great question is not relevant but quite foreign to it, as I conceive it to be, I should myself insist upon interposing an objection if the Senator from New Hampshire did not object.

Mr. DANIEL. The views which I was presenting are entirely independent of the matter as to the pertinency of this pamphlet to the immediate discussion before the Senate. I would not like to undertake to make such analysis either of the measure now before the Senate or the pamphlet as to pass upon the question as to whether something germane to the one might not be found in the other. They are both world-wide questions; that we know; and what line of connection might be found between them is a matter which others can decide for themselves. It would take perhaps too much of the time of the Senate to undertake to make that analysis now.

It seems to me, sir, independent of that consideration, from the mere fact that the request is made pending this debate, the question whether it is germane might be regarded as a collateral matter. The gentleman upon the floor made the request near the conclusion of his speech, and he sees a connection sufficient for his purpose. Independent of this discussion, which I have not sought to delay in any way and which I think ought not to be unduly delayed, it seems to me that the request stands upon its own merits, simply as a request for liberty to insert the matter in the RECORD.

Mr. PETTIGREW. My request was not to have the pamphlet inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, but simply to have it published as a document.

Mr. DANIEL. It was a request to publish as a document a well-conned article upon a subject which we have been known to discuss in this body and which has been a standing subject of reflection on the part of its members. That request has its own merits. It is not necessarily associated with the measure under discussion. The Senator asked that it might be printed as a document, and I do not think that the one proposition ought to be at all involved in the other in the disposition to be made of it. It would be an economy of time in all probability, if coming events throw their shadows before, to permit it to be printed as a document; but I do not think the Senate ought to be constrained by that fact to permit anything to be printed which it did not think fairly should be printed independently. Certainly it is not naturally contributory to economy of time to oppose a request reasonably made and fairly stated by a member of the Senate.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. If the Senator please, I understood the Senator from South Dakota to request the printing of this volume as a document and to make the threat that if the Senate did not allow it to be so printed then he should proceed to read it to the Senate as a part of his remarks on the subject of the annexation of Hawaii.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I made no threat.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I understood the Senator to say that he would read a part of the volume to-night, and that he would read the residue at the next session of the Senate. I may have been in error.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It was not a threat. That is my right as a Senator. It was not a threat.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I dislike exceedingly to take a moment of the time of the Senate in this matter. I dislike exceedingly to do anything that may possibly suggest itself to any member of this body as being a discourteous or an ungracious act. But we are confronted with a practical matter. The question of the annexation of Hawaii has been discussed in this country for twenty-five years. It has been discussed in the Senate now for nearly two weeks. The Senator from South Dakota informed me to-day, and I presume I am at liberty to state it, that we could not have a vote on this question next week. He has given notice—

Mr. PETTIGREW. No, that is hardly true. I said I did not think we should reach it, as there were so many Senators I knew of who wished to speak. I have made no threat or anything of the sort, and the language of the Senator intimates that I have done so.

Mr. GALLINGER. I did not suggest that the Senator had made a threat. I stated what I understood the Senator to say. The Senator has given two installments of a speech. He informs us to-day that at some future time he will proceed to tell us something about the Sandwich Islands, and in the midst of his speech he asks the Senate, with the people's money, to print a book of ninety-four pages entitled An Analysis of the Money Question, and hence make it frankable through the mails of the United States, and that at a time when it is being argued that we ought to exclude legitimate literature from the mails at a certain rate of postage because it is a burden upon the public Treasury.

Now, I have remained here at very great personal discomfort and some disadvantage in certain directions to vote on the annexation of Hawaii. I am going to stay with the question just as long as the Senator from South Dakota does if my health permits, but I should like very much to get away from Washington during this heated term.

I, however, am not going to be deterred by the suggestion that if the book is not printed without reading it will be read and printed and circulated through the mails. I think it will be much more interesting reading, with all due deference to the Senator from South Dakota, than a good deal of the talk he has indulged in on this question, especially that of to-day, when he arraigned the President of the United States and arraigned the Senate as lobbying on this question, and being afraid to discuss it, and all that sort of thing.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] is always interesting. He has talked once or twice on the subject of money in the Senate, to my knowledge, and I presume he has covered all the ground he has covered in his book. It is always a matter of thrilling interest to those of us who do not agree with him, and I should myself, Mr. President, very much prefer to have this book read than to have it printed without being read. Therefore I feel constrained to insist upon my objection. This is all I am going to say about the matter.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I had concluded my remarks for to-day upon Hawaii, and I supposed there would be no objection whatever to the publication of this book as a document. It is only a few weeks ago that we printed as a document a letter by Melin, of France. It is only a few days ago, or a few weeks ago, that we printed as a document an article published by Prof. Garrett Droppers, of the Imperial University of Japan, which appeared in some Harvard magazine. It is only two days ago that we published as a document, at the request of the Senator from Washington [Mr. WILSON], an article that appeared in a paper in the city of Portland, Oreg., on the money question, and now—

Mr. FRYE. Has not the Senator had papers printed as a document?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly; I have had several documents printed; and now when I ask to have printed as a document a book written by the Senator from Nevada, one of our own members, objection is made. It seems to me that this is an unfortunate place to make the issue, and under the circumstances I am justified in reading the book, and I shall read it, not as a matter of threat, but because I wish to get the book before the people of this country and because I wish to have it so that I can frank it through the mails and send it to my constituents to read and because I know many others ought to read it.

I am sure if the Senator from New Hampshire could listen while I read it, he would be vastly benefited in a greater and more accurate knowledge on the subject of money than he now possesses, even whether it does him any good or not. I doubt his ability to accept and retain right information on this great question.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President—

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. I wish to inquire of the Senator whether he is absolutely sure that he might not violate the copyright law in putting this publication in the RECORD without the consent of the author. I see the author is in his seat.

Mr. WHITE. I submit that it is improper to create an estoppel in pais against the Senator from Nevada. [Laughter.]

Mr. MASON. Of course silence gives consent in a certain way, but I wanted to know whether we might be liable to his publishers in some way if we publish the book as a document. I do not want it understood that by my silence I wish to make myself liable for a violation of the copyright law.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I shall read but a very small portion of this book to-night, because I have been on the floor for about four hours and am slightly exhausted. At the next opportunity after to-day I shall try to secure the floor to complete it.

By the way, it is somewhat pertinent to the subject under discussion—the Hawaiian resolution—for an amendment has been offered to the Hawaiian resolution which provides that we shall redeem the silver money of Hawaii at a parity with gold, and there is a million dollars of it. The whole question of bimetalism is opened up by the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GEAR]. Therefore it is pertinent to the issue and comes in point very materially.

Besides, the whole question of money is involved by the fact that the Asiatics are manufacturing on a silver basis, and that they are thus enabled, in view of the fact that silver has retained its purchasing power in those countries, to compete with us to our great disadvantage, because wages are no higher, as food is no higher, the same amount of silver buying the same amount of products that it did in those countries twenty years ago.

Mr. GEAR. Mr. President, may I remind my friend from South Dakota that the silver money of Hawaii is at present maintained at a parity?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Oh, yes, it is maintained at a parity because of the function it performs—it is a legal tender—and because it is limited in its quantity; that is all. We propose now to be sure to redeem it at a parity with gold. I think it can continue to maintain itself at a parity, if we did not redeem it, but if we do the loss will be $500,000.

Mr. GEAR. May I inform the Senator that it is maintained at a parity with American currency?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly; it is maintained at a parity with the American currency. I am well aware of that. I used it when there last year. So I say the question of bimetalism, the question of money and its functions, and the effect of an appreciating or depreciating standard upon the producers of wealth throughout the world are involved in this proposition to add an Asiatic population to the United States. This question is pertinent to the issue, and I have no doubt it is more ably stated in this book than I can state it. I have no doubt the Senator from New Hampshire will be much more delighted with hearing these views from the able Senator from Nevada than in hearing them from my lips, and I shall take great pleasure in imparting to him, if that is possible, some knowledge upon this subject.

Mr. PETTIGREW proceeded to read the Analysis of the Functions of Money, and read the first page.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the Senator from South Dakota pardon me? I ask the Senator from South Dakota if he has read the preface of the book?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have read it.

Mr. BUTLER. Has the Senator read it as a part of his remarks?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have not.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask the Senator, if he please, to read it. I should like to have the preface go in.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall be glad to read it before I get through.

The reading was continued to page 9.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MASON. I desire to make a suggestion, not entirely for the purpose of giving a rest to the Senator, but to sow some seeds of thought as to the need of an amendment to the rules of the Senate. If the Senator will permit me just one minute, I am sure he will be glad to rest.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish to finish this quotation from Aristotle, and then I shall be glad to hear the Senator.

Mr. MASON. I shall be very glad to follow Aristotle. [Laughter.]

Mr. PETTIGREW. Very well.

The reading was continued to the end of the quotation from Aristotle, on page 11.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I now yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. I want to employ the one minute which has been assigned to me to again call attention to the fact that the Senate of the United States is the only deliberative body in the world where the majority can not transact business. I want to call to the attention of the people I represent in the Senate and the few Senators who happen to be here this afternoon that this is the only legislative body in the world where the minority controls the affairs of the Government.

While I have no fault to find with the distinguished Senator who is now reading the book written by the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], which seems to be largely quoted from Aristotle and other learned philosophers of the past, I desire to emphasize each minute and to call attention to this each day, as I shall, and I should like to do it following the morning prayer, so that it might have some effect upon the wickedness of heart of those who are determined that the majority shall not run the business of the Government.

Understand me, I am not here to find fault, and I do not propose to find fault with the gentlemen who are conducting the filibuster. Some of you deny it; most of those who conduct filibusters do deny it. You put on kid gloves, and you think you can make the people believe that there are no hands in the gloves.

I again call attention to the fact that while this book is being read, which is not germane to the discussion at all, that there is no law by which the Government of the United States can transact business in this body—in this fossilized debating society known as the United States Senate. There is no rule by which debate can be cut off, and the very gentlemen who are now complaining of the filibuster have sat here from twenty-five to fifty years and kept the rule upon the book, so that any Senator whenever he felt disposed could put a spoke in your wheel and stop the transaction of Government business.

Having again called attention to this in my most powerful tone of voice, I thank the Senator for permitting this interruption of his reading from Aristotle and other philosophers.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I have not filibustered; neither do I intend to filibuster. I did not intend nor expect to read this book. I had hoped that it would be published as a document, without burdening the Senate by taking the time to read it.

In the discussion of the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands I have spoken, I believe, on those subjects germane to that question. That we have consumed two weeks in a discussion of an absolute change of what has been the policy of this country for a century is certainly not filibustering for delay; and if we discuss that question two weeks more, it certainly will not be filibustering simply to consume time. This question, in my opinion, that is now being considered and about to be passed upon by the Senate is the most important and most momentous that the Senate has been called upon for many years to decide.

It is a question whether the republican institutions shall continue to survive or whether we will adopt an imperial policy and launch out upon a career of conquest. It is a question whether we will abandon all that is grand and sacred in our history as a people and join the land grabbers of Europe in plundering the rest of mankind. Shall we step down from that exalted position of grandeur which we have held among the nations of the world and reach out and take in an unwilling people to tax and govern them against their will?

A question so mighty in its consequences to future generations and to us who live to-day is too important to be lightly passed over and disposed of without debate. That our rules are wholesome and proper is evidenced by the fact that if debate could be limited we would be deprived of presenting to the people of this country the momentous and important arguments against the passage of this resolution, which, by our rules, we are enabled to present.

When I entered this body I would have voted in favor of changing the rule as to debate, but after watching its workings for the last ten years, I am satisfied, Mr. President, that the only way this can continue to be the greatest deliberative body upon the globe is by maintaining our rule, by which the majority can not limit debate; and I believe when the honored Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] has served ten years in this body, he, too, will discover that the rule has its wholesome results, and never ends in harm.

No measure was ever ultimately defeated that ought to become a law or that ought to pass this body by this rule. The Senate has too much judgment and good sense not to arrive at a conclusion in the end. So it will be with this question. Ultimately it must be disposed of, and the question of a little time is of less importance than the destruction of the only legislative and deliberative body left in our Government.

Mr. President, I will not resume the reading of this book tonight, but I hope to secure the floor at an early day next week and complete it.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, at this time I desire to inquire of the Senator from Minnesota whether it is the intention to have a session of the Senate on Monday next? I am asked to make this inquiry by persons in the employ of the Government who are here, and I think they ought to know now. I am not interposing any obstacle to the consideration of the measure before us, but I simply desire to know the intention of the Senator in that regard.

Mr. DAVIS. My answer to that will depend upon whether I can secure at this time an agreement to have a vote at some time next week upon the pending resolution.

Mr. WHITE. In view of the fact that this is Saturday evening and that there are many Senators greatly interested in this matter who are not here, I would not feel justified, even if I could see my way personally to do so—which I do not—to enter into any understanding in regard to the taking of the final vote. That would not, in my judgment, be a proper course to pursue. Many gentlemen who are deeply interested in the subject are absent, and had no idea that a discussion of this sort would be had at all—I mean in reference to fixing a time to vote. Hence I am unable this evening to suggest any day.

Mr. DAVIS. Then I am unable to agree that there shall be an adjournment over Monday. Unless we can have some agreement, I shall move at the proper time that the Senate adjourn until Monday.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President—

Mr. MONEY. I ask the Senator from California to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MONEY. I hope the Senator from Minnesota who has charge of the pending resolution will permit the Senate to adjourn over until Tuesday. So far as I am personally concerned, I come here day after day under a good deal of pain and physical disability, and I am willing to continue to come, but there are a great many employees who desire to keep the Fourth of July, our national holiday; and I think it would be rather unkind to them, as well as unjust to ourselves, not to adjourn over until after the Fourth of July. That is not only true so far as the employees of the Senate are concerned, but the employees of the Government Printing Office also will be compelled to be at their places in this sweltering weather, which we are told by the Weather Bureau is likely to continue for several days. I do not believe it will hurt the case to have it go over one day.

So far as filibustering is concerned, the Senator knows that I am not a party to that, because the Senator is aware that I am heartily with him and shall vote with him in favor of the passage of this measure, but I favor the adjournment over for the reason I have given. I hope the Senator will reconsider the matter and allow us, when we do adjourn, to adjourn until Tuesday next. I do not think it will protract the debate, because these gentlemen are going to break down after a while, when they run out of reading matter, and we shall then come to a vote. So I hope the Senator from Minnesota will allow us to adjourn over.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, this question as to one day's adjournment is one which is to be settled by a vote. My own opinion is very clear that we ought to sit on Monday in view of the remarks in extenso which are being made by Senators and the reading by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] as a portion of his speech of a book heretofore published. I can conceive of no better time for this Senate to do its duty on a secular day than the present time.

I am perfectly aware of the inconvenience which we all suffer here, and I feel a proper sympathy for the inconvenience of the employees, but, Mr. President, I can not be unmindful of the fact that at this very time and on the Fourth of July at Santiago de Cuba and at Manila the brave men in arms on land and sea, the soldiers and sailors of the United States, are performing and will be performing their duties in actual warfare and bloody combat, and are not raising and will not raise any question as to whether the fight should be postponed on account of the Fourth of July or the question of their inconvenience.

Mr. President, I shall move at the proper time for a regular adjournment.

JAMES S. CHAPMAN.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from California, who, I understand, is entitled to the floor on the Hawaiian resolution, to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 4274) granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 3, after the word "be," to strike out "authorized, and he is hereby" and insert "and he is hereby authorized and;" in line 5, before the words "the pension roll," to strike out "upon" and insert

"on;" and in line 9, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of James S. Chapman, late private, Company B, Fifth Battalion Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JEREMIAH HACKETT.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have two pension bills which are very urgent. I ask unanimous consent first for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2267) to increase the pension of Jeremiah Hackett.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the roll the name of Jeremiah Hackett, late private, Company C, Fourth Regiment of Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDSON SULLIVAN.

Mr. GALLINGER. I now ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5102) granting an increase of pension to Edson Sullivan.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Edson Sullivan, late private in Company C, First New Hampshire Heavy Artillery Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT WATER-MAIN TAXES.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] will permit me, some days ago I entered a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate passed the bill (H. R. 5883) to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with a view of making an amendment to it. Since then the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], who reported the bill from the Committee on the District of Columbia, and I have agreed upon an amendment, and I ask that the motion to reconsider may be now acted upon with a view of amending the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland moves to reconsider the vote by which the bill named by him was passed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none; and, in the absence of objection, the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and read the third time will also be reconsidered. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I now move to amend the bill in section 1, page 2, line 11, after the word "land," by striking out the proviso.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, on page 2, line 11, after the word "land," it is proposed to strike out:

Provided, however, That where lots or parcels of land have been released from water-main taxes or assessments by reason of technical defects or errors in making such assessments, and where such lots or parcels of land have been sold by the former owner between the order of said release of said tax or assessment and the passage of this act, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall not reassess the same against such property in the hands of bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the failure to pay the water-main assessment on said property.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

APPOINTMENTS TO MEDICAL CORPS.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 164) preventing discrimination against graduates of legally chartered medical colleges in appointments to the medical corps in the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution indicated by the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. DAVIS. Let it be read for information.

The joint resolution was read, and by unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The joint resolution was reported from the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "State," to strike out "of the United States" and insert "Territory or the District of Columbia;" and in line 6, after the word "State," to insert "Territory, or the District of Columbia;" so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That graduates in good standing of any medical college regularly chartered under the laws of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, and eligible to practice therein under the laws of such State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, shall, on application, be entitled to examination for appointment in the medical corps of the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States, any statute or departmental rule or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAY OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred to bill (H. R. 10805) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers, to report it with sundry amendments.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope that bill will be taken up and considered now.

Mr. COCKRELL. I report only two or three small amendments to the bill, which authorizes payment to the officers at the same time the men are being paid.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the bill will be passed at once.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think it will only take a minute, if the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] will yield.

Mr. DAVIS. I yield.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 10805) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers.

The amendments reported by the Committee on Military Affairs were, on page 1, line 9, after the word "of," to strike out "such" and insert "all officers and enlisted men;" in line 10, on the same page, before the word "received," to strike out "as are;" and on page 2, line 1, after the word "President," to insert "of all officers and enlisted men who have not been so paid, shall be so paid by the Pay Department of the Army out of any moneys appropriated for the maintenance of the Army;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved May 26, 1898, entitled "An act providing for the payment and maintenance of volunteers during the interval between their enrollment and muster into the United States service, and for other purposes," be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That the pay and allowance of all officers and enlisted men of the volunteers received into the service of the United States under the act of Congress approved April 22, 1898, and the acts supplemental thereto, shall be deemed to commence from the day on which they had their names enrolled for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States and joined for duty therein after having been called for by the governor on the authority of the President, of all officers and enlisted men who have not been so paid shall be paid by the Pay Department of the Army out of any moneys appropriated for the maintenance of the Army: Provided, That troops about to embark for service in the Philippine Islands may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be paid one month's wages in advance prior to embarkation."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer officers and soldiers."

FRANKING PRIVILEGES TO SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

Mr. DAVIS. Regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota calls for the regular order. The Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] is recognized.

Mr. CANNON. Will the Senator from Minnesota yield to me for a moment to call up a bill?

Mr. DAVIS. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from California.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President—

Mr. MASON. I have a very short bill here, to which I do not believe there is one objection now. Will the Senator from California yield to me?

Mr. WHITE. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the call for the regular order withdrawn?

Mr. DAVIS. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from California.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator from Illinois has appealed to me, and I yield to him. I believe I have that right.

Mr. MASON. I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that the bill which I desire to have called up was unanimously reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. It will not take more than a moment. It is to give the soldiers the franking privilege.

Mr. DAVIS. To give the franking privilege to the soldiers?

Mr. MASON. Yes.

Mr. DAVIS. I yield.

Mr. MASON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4704) extending franking privileges through the mails to officers and enlisted men in the Army and Navy of the United States.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "matter," to insert the words "not to exceed 1 ounce;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That during the continuance of the present war between the United States and the Kingdom of Spain the franking privilege be, and is hereby, extended to the officers and enlisted men of the Army and Navy of the United States, and that all first-class mail matter, not to exceed 1 ounce, mailed by any of said officers or enlisted men be carried free through the mails of the United States, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Postmaster-General.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I should like to ask the Senator reporting the bill whether there is any precedent whatever for such a measure? Has this privilege ever been granted to the officers and soldiers of the Army of the United States at any time since the Government was established?

Mr. MASON. Under the present law they can, when it is properly certified by an officer, send their mail in such way that the people have to pay for it after it gets home. That is a precedent looking in the right direction. I do not know of any precedent except that the soldiers and sailors are already given some advantage. As a rule, when they send their mail in that way they imagine they are sending it free to their mothers and sweethearts, but later on they learn that their friends at home have to raise the money to pay the Government for bringing the letters.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator will not press the bill in the form in which it is. If it is desired, we can very easily make some adjustment by which stamps can be furnished through the commanding officers of the companies or regiments and not have the mere indorsement by the officers and soldiers, these gallant men, suffice to carry the mail, while the Government pays the expense.

Mr. MASON. The Senator will see that the regulations provide that the franking shall be certified by a commissioned officer. The bill provides that it shall be done under regulations and rules.

The Senator will see the great inconvenience of carrying stamps. I think the Senator ought not to object to it. The point is this: It is to give them the same marked consideration that we ourselves receive from the Government of the United States. It is true, ours extends only to official business. It is not so much the money they save as a mark of honor for the services they are rendering to the country. It is very inconvenient to these men as it is. They are traveling from place to place, on water and now on land, and it is only fair to let the soldiers send their letters home free. I hope the Senator will not object. There is no prospect of the measure passing unless we get it through the Senate now.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator from Illinois if there should not be in the bill some phrase like this, "being in camp" or "being in actual service;" that then the regulations shall take effect? I suppose the Senator would not expect that a soldier on furlough should be at liberty to frank all his letters.

Mr. MASON. I am willing to accept such an amendment. I move to amend the bill by inserting the words "in actual service."

Mr. HOAR. I think that would improve it very much.

Mr. MASON. I think so. I move to insert the words "in actual service" after the words "Army and Navy of the United States."

Mr. GORMAN. What does the Senator mean by "actual service"? There is some reason why the men who are actually at the front, on foreign land, in Cuba or Manila, or wherever they happen to be, should have this privilege, but the idea of giving this—

Mr. MASON. That would be an easy matter for the Department to construe. The whole thing is left to the rules and regulations. It can not cost the Government a great deal. A large share of the work of bringing the mail to the regular channels is done by the soldiers anyway. It seems to me it is a small matter of honor.

Mr. HOAR. I would suggest the insertion of the words "being with the Army in actual service."

Mr. MASON. "Army or Navy."

Mr. HOAR. Yes.

Mr. MASON. "Being with the Army or Navy in actual service." I accept the amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that that would cover all the regular posts throughout the country and all the regular stations.

Mr. HOAR. During the war?

Mr. GORMAN. During the war.

Mr. MASON. It only continues during the war.

Mr. GORMAN. I think I shall object to the further consideration of the bill to-day. Let it go over, and there may be amendments prepared to the measure to cover the men actually in the field and at the front. The franking privilege ought not to be extended to the regular army and navy officers at the ordinary stations. I object to the further consideration of the bill to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go over, under objection.

Mr. MASON. I understand this is a body where we have to have unanimous consent. I withdraw the bill and give notice that I shall renew the request and shall ask for the consideration of the bill at the proper time.

VOTING BY VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10550) to enable volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PETTUS. I for one can not consent to taking up the bill now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

MICHAEL J. FOGERTY.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. TURPIE. I appeal to the Senator from Minnesota to allow me to call up a private pension bill.

Mr. DAVIS. I yield.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3081) granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Fogerty.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Michael J. Fogerty, late a member of Company F, Twelfth United States Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $50 per month, in lieu of any pension he may now be drawing.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BELLE PETER.

Mr. LINDSAY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8000) granting a pension to Belle Peter.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before action is taken on the request, I will state that the bill was reported adversely by the committee for the reason that it appeared in the House report that the claim was pending in the Pension Bureau. The Senator from Kentucky has since ascertained that that is a mistake. Hence the bill ought to pass.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Belle Peter, widow of Henry W. Peter, late acting assistant (contract) surgeon in United States Army, and pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PHINEAS L. SQUIRES.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4823) granting an increase of pension to Phineas L. Squires.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Phineas L. Squires, late of Company B, Sixth Connecticut Infantry Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $17 per month, in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM B. MURRAY.

Mr. TURLEY. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 4288) granting an increase of pension to William B. Murray.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place the name of William B. Murray, late a private soldier in Company I, Tenth Tennessee Infantry, on the pension rolls and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE H. WHITE.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3471) for the relief of George H. White, late captain Company H, Nineteenth Michigan Infantry Volunteers.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "revoke," in line 4, and insert:

And set aside so much of General Orders, No. 14, Headquarters Department of the Ohio, Cincinnati, Ohio, March 1, 1863, as approved the finding and sentence of the general court-martial dismissing Capt. George H. White, Nineteenth Regiment Michigan Infantry Volunteers, and to issue to said White a certificate of discharge as of date March 1, 1863: Provided, That no pay, bounty, compensation, or allowance shall accrue to said George H. White by virtue of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to revoke and set aside so much of General Orders, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OVID G. SPARKS.

Mr. BACON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4534) to grant a pension to Ovid G. Sparks.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ovid G. Sparks, who served in Capt. J. A. Meriwether's company of the battalion commanded by Maj. M. A. Cooper, in the Florida Indian war of 1836, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Ovid G. Sparks."

ENLISTMENT OF COOKS.

Mr. HAWLEY. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10683) directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer armies of the United States to report it favorably; and I ask for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the bill (S. 4791) directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer armies of the United States be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

DWIGHT D. WILBER.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2681) to increase the pension of Dwight D. Wilber.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 7, after the word "pension," to insert "at the rate;" in line 8, after the word "month," to strike out "from and after the passage of this act;" and in line 9, after the word "receiving," to strike out "under certificate No. 61135;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Dwight D. Wilber, late a private in Company G, One hundred and thirty-seventh Regiment of New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Dwight D. Wilber."

MARTHA JENNIE FREER.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10117) granting a pension to Martha Jennie Freer.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator, in connection with his request, if he does not contemplate at an early day having all these pension bills passed?

Mr. GALLINGER. I am purposing to ask for their consideration, but I will say that I have been notified to-day that this poor old woman, living in the District of Columbia, is very ill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not object, but I think all the bills ought to be passed.

Mr. GALLINGER. I propose to ask for their consideration early next week.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Martha Jennie Freer, late an army nurse, and pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ST. LOUIS RIVER BRIDGE AT FOND DU LAC.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 10477) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build or authorize the building of a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in said State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COURTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4728) to change the time of holding the United States courts in the eastern district of North Carolina.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE CONSULAR SERVICE.

Mr. FRYE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8925) to amend sections 1698 and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. HOAR. Will not that interfere somewhat with the Hawaiian matter?

Mr. FRYE. No.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator from Maine is not trying to displace the Hawaiian matter. If he is not, I do not object.

Mr. FRYE. I do not see the point. I am not undertaking to displace that measure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, and by unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments. The first amendment was, in section 1, page 1, line 3, after the word "and," to strike out "ninety-eight" and insert "ninety-seven;" so as to read:

That section 1697 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is, amended to read as follows.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1, page 1, after line 5, to insert:

"SEC. 1697. Every consul-general, consul, and commercial agent, before he receives his commission or enters upon the duties of his office, shall give a bond to the United States, with such sureties, who shall be permanent residents of the United States, as the Secretary of State shall approve, in a penal sum not less than $1,000, and in no case less than the annual compensation allowed to such officer, and not more than $10,000, and in such form as the President shall prescribe, conditioned for the true and faithful accounting for, paying over, and delivering up of all fees, moneys, goods, effects, books, records, papers, and other property which shall come to his hands, or to the hands of any other person, to his use as such consul-general, consul, or commercial agent under any law now or hereafter enacted, or by virtue of his office; and for the true and faithful performance of all other duties now or hereafter lawfully imposed upon him as such consul-general, consul, or commercial agent.

"The bond herein mentioned shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury. In case of a breach of any such bond, any person thereby injured may institute, in his own name and for his sole use, a suit on said bond, and thereupon recover such damages as shall be legally assessed, with costs of suit, for which execution may issue for him in due form; but if such party fails to recover in the suits, judgment shall be rendered and execution may issue against him for costs in favor of the defendant, and the United States shall in no case be liable for the same. The said bond shall remain, after any judgment rendered thereon, as a security for the benefit of any person injured by a breach of the condition of the same until the whole penalty has been recovered; and the proceeding shall always be as directed in this section."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 3, to insert the following:

SEC. 2. That section 1698 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is, amended to read as follows:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 4, line 1, after the word "section," to insert:

That when suit is brought upon the bond prescribed in this or the preceding section, if the principal in the bond resides in a foreign country, the summons, or other process, may be served upon him by filing a certified copy of the same with the Secretary of the Treasury, which service shall be deemed sufficient to give the court jurisdiction over the person and property of the defendant; and the bond prescribed in this and the preceding section shall contain a condition to accept such service as sufficient to give the court jurisdiction as aforesaid. The principal shall have ninety days from the time of such service in which to enter his appearance in the action. When a copy of such summons or other process has been filed with the Secretary of the Treasury, he shall at once mail a copy thereof to the principal at his last known place of residence.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest to the Senator who has this bill in charge whether it would not be well to strike out from the penalty the provision that the person convicted shall be forever disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit under the United States. It is a very grave doubt whether it is not an unusual punishment within the Constitution. At any rate, it is a very serious thing to have such a disqualification put upon a man. There may be some extenuating circumstances. The one great objection to that particular penalty—it is very uncommon now in our jurisprudence—is that a man may go to some distant part of the country or get appointed to an office without the old conviction being known, and then all his official acts are void. It will affect other people.

Mr. FRYE. I do not know that I care anything about retaining the clause.

Mr. HOAR. Very well. I move that amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 8, section 3, it is proposed to strike out, after the word "dollars," at the end of the bill, the following:

And shall be forever disqualified from holding any office of trust or profit under the United States.

Mr. FRYE. I have no objection to its going out. Has the Senator from Minnesota any objection?

Mr. NELSON. No, sir.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to amend sections 1697, 1698, and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to consul and vice-consul generals, consuls and vice-consuls, and commercial agents."

Mr. FRYE. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. NELSON, Mr. PASCO, and Mr. BERRY were appointed.

AMERICAN SEAMEN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT (at 5 o'clock p. m.). The Chair lays before the Senate, under the unanimous-consent agreement, Senate bill 95.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 95) to amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

Mr. FRYE. I ask that the amendments of the committee may be acted upon as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, that course will be pursued.

The first amendment was, on page 1, section 1, line 10, after the word "refill," to strike out:

And in all merchant vessels of the United States the sailors shall, while at sea, be divided into two watches, which shall be kept on deck alternately for the performance of ordinary work incident to the sailing and management of the vessel; but this shall in no way limit either the authority of the master or other officer or the obedience of the seamen when, in the judgment of the master or other officer, the whole crew is needed for the maneuvering of the vessel or the performance of the work necessary for the safety of the vessel or her cargo. While the vessel is in a safe harbor no seaman shall be required to do any unnecessary work on Sundays or legal holidays. Whenever the master of any vessel shall fail to comply with this section the seamen shall be entitled to discharge from such vessel, and shall upon demand receive wages then due.

And insert:

And report the same to the United States consul at the first port at which he shall arrive, without incurring the penalty prescribed by the two preceding sections.

So as to make the section read:

That section 4516 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4516. In case of desertion or casualty resulting in the loss of one or more seamen, the master must ship, if obtainable, a number equal to the number of those whose services he has been deprived of by desertion or casualty, who must be of the same grade or rating and equally expert with those whose place or position they refill, and report the same to the United States consul at the first port at which he shall arrive, without incurring the penalty prescribed by the two preceding sections."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, page 3, line 20, after the word "the," to strike out "term" and insert "time;" so as to read:

SEC. 4526. In cases where the service of any seaman terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement, by reason of the loss or wreck of the vessel, such seaman shall be entitled to wages for the time of service prior to such termination, but not for any further period.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, page 4, line 10, after the word "whichever," to insert "first;" in line 14, after the word "all," to strike out "other;" and in line 20, after the word "sum," to strike out "not exceeding the amount of two days" and insert "equal to one day's;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. That section 4520 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4520. The master or owner of any vessel making coasting voyages shall pay to every seaman his wages within two days after the termination of the agreement under which he shipped, or at the time such seaman is discharged, whichever first happens; and in the case of vessels making foreign voyages, or from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, within twenty-four hours after the cargo has been discharged, or within four days after the seaman has been discharged, whichever first happens; and in all cases the seaman shall, at the time of his discharge, be entitled to be paid, on account of wages, a sum equal to one-third part of the balance due him. Every master or owner who refuses or neglects to make payment in manner hereinbefore mentioned without sufficient cause shall pay to the seaman a sum equal to one day's pay for each and every day during which payment is delayed beyond the respective periods, which sum shall be recoverable as wages in any claim made before the court; but this section shall not apply to the masters or owners of any vessel the seamen on which are entitled to share in the profits of the cruise or voyage."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, page 5, line 8, after the word "vessel," to insert "after the voyage has commenced," and in line 10, after the word "ended," to strike out "All stipulations to the contrary shall be held as void" and insert "unless the contrary be expressly stipulated in the contract;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That section 4530 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4530. Every seaman on a vessel of the United States shall be entitled to receive from the master of the vessel to which he belongs one-half part of the wages which shall be due him at every port where such vessel, after the voyage has commenced, shall load or deliver cargo before the voyage is ended, unless the contrary be expressly stipulated in the contract; and when the voyage is ended every such seaman shall be entitled to the remainder of the wages which shall then be due him, as provided in section 4520 of the Revised Statutes."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 8, page 7, line 23, after the word "port," to strike out "or consul, or consular agent, or person who may discharge the duties of consul, if in a foreign port;" on page 8, line 5, before the word "such," to insert "one of;" in the same line, after the word "shall," to strike out "consist of doctors, one of whom shall be the," and insert "be a physician or a;" in line 7, after the word "service," to insert "if such service is established at the place where the complaint is made;" in line 12, after the word "justice," to strike out "or consul, or consular agent;" in line 18, after the word "justice," to strike out "or consul, or consular agent;" and on page 9, line 9, after the word "justice," to strike out "or consul, or consular agent;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 8. That section 4557 of the Revised Statutes be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4557. The judge, or justice, in a domestic port shall, upon such application of the master or commander, issue his precept, directed to three persons in the neighborhood, the most experienced and skillful in maritime affairs that can be procured; and whenever such complaint is about the provisions one of such surveyors shall be a physician or a surgeon of the Marine Hospital Service, if such service is established at the place where the complaint is made. It shall be the duty of such surveyors to repair on board such vessel and to examine the same in respect to the defects and insufficiencies complained of, and shall make reports to the judge or justice, as the case may be, in writing, under their hands or the hands of two of them, whether in any or in what respect the vessel is unfit to proceed on the intended voyage, and what addition of men, provisions, or stores, or what repairs or alterations in the body, tackle, or apparel will be necessary; and upon such report the judge or justice shall adjudge and shall indorse on his report his judgment whether the vessel is fit to proceed on the intended voyage, and, if not, whether such repairs can be made or deficiencies supplied where the vessel then lies, or whether it is necessary for her to proceed to the nearest or most convenient place where such supplies can be made or deficiencies supplied; and the master and the crew shall, in all things, conform to the judgment. The master or commander shall, in the first instance, pay all the costs of such review, report, or judgment, to be taxed and allowed on a fair copy thereof, certified by the judge or justice. But if the complaint of the crew shall appear upon the report and judgment to have been without foundation, the master or commander, or the owner or consignee of such vessel, shall deduct the amount thereof, and of reasonable damages for the detention, to be ascertained by the judge or justice, out of the wages of the complaining seamen."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FRYE. On page 8, line 11, I move to strike out "shall," after the word "and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 10, page 8, line 23, after the word "first," to strike out "and second officer or" and insert "or second officer and;" so as to read:

SEC. 10. That section 4550 of the Revised Statutes be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4550. Upon a complaint in writing, signed by the first or second officer and a majority of the crew of any vessel while in a foreign port, that such vessel is in an unsuitable condition to go to sea because she is leaky or insufficiently supplied with sails, rigging, anchors, or any other equipment, or that the crew is insufficient to man her, or that her provisions, stores, and supplies are not, or have not been during the voyage, sufficient and wholesome," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 11, page 11, line 12, after the word "sea," to insert "in the foreign or coastwise trade;" in line 15, after the words "respect of," to strike out "such" and insert "each;" in the same line, after the word "misdemeanor," to insert "and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $1,000 or by imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, at the discretion of the court;" and in line 23, after the word "other," to strike out "citizen" and insert "witness;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 11. That section 4561 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4561. The inspectors in their report shall also state whether in their opinion the vessel was sent to sea unsuitably provided in any important or essential particular, by neglect or design, or through mistake or accident; and in case it was by neglect or design, and the consular officer approves of such finding, he shall discharge such of the crew as request it, and shall require the payment by the master of one month's wages for each seaman over and above the wages then due, or sufficient money for the return of such of the crew as desire to be discharged to the nearest and most convenient port of the United States, or by furnishing the seamen who so desire to be discharged with employment on a ship agreed to by him.

"But if in the opinion of the inspectors the defects or deficiencies found to exist have been the result of mistake or accident, and could not, in the exercise of ordinary care, have been known and provided against before the sailing of the vessel, and the master shall in a reasonable time remove or remedy the causes of complaint, then the crew shall remain and discharge their duty. If any person knowingly sends or attempts to send or is party to the sending or attempting to send an American ship to sea, in the foreign or coastwise trade, in such an unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered, he shall, in respect of each offense, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $1,000 or by imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, at the discretion of the court, unless he proves that either he used all reasonable means to insure her being sent to sea in a seaworthy state, or that her going to sea in an unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purposes of giving that proof he may give evidence in the same manner as any other witness."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. On page 11, line 4, I move to strike out "him" and insert "them."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 13, page 12, line 16, after the word "reasonable," to strike out "grounds" and insert "ground;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 13. That section 4566 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4566. If the officer to whom any such complaint in regard to the provisions or the water is made certifies in such statement that there was no reasonable ground for such complaint, each of the parties so complaining shall forfeit to the master or owner his share of the expense, if any, of the survey."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, section 14, line 25, after the word "Statutes," to insert "is reduced;" so as to read:

SEC. 14. That section 4568 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4568. If, during a voyage, the allowance of any of the provisions which any seaman is entitled to under section 4612 of the Revised Statutes is reduced except for any time during which such seaman willfully and without sufficient cause refuses or neglects to perform his duty, or is lawfully under confinement for misconduct either on board or on shore," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 15, page 14, line 10, after the word "weather," to strike out:

And that on and after June 30, 1898, every place appropriated to the crew of a sea-going vessel of the United States, except a fishing vessel, yacht, or pilot boat, and all vessels under 100 tons register, shall have a space of not less than 108 cubic feet and not less than 16 square feet measured on the deck or floor of that place for such seaman or apprentice lodged therein. Such place shall be securely constructed, properly lighted, heated, and ventilated, properly protected from weather and sea, and as far as practicable, properly shut off and protected from the effluvia of cargo or bilge water.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 15. That section 4572 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4572. Every vessel bound on any foreign voyage exceeding in length fourteen days shall also be provided with at least one suit of woolen clothing for each seaman, and every vessel in the foreign or domestic trade shall provide a safe and warm room for the use of seamen in cold weather. Failure to make such provision shall subject the owner or master to a penalty of not less than $100."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 18, page 17, line 3, after the word "the," to strike out "latter" and insert "master;" and in line 10, after the word "seaman," to strike out:

Provided, however, That in any serious case of ill-treatment the consul may send such master or officer to the nearest port in the United States for trial, and the seaman shall be entitled to redress as provided in section 4611 of the Revised Statutes.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 18. That section 4583 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4583. Whenever on the discharge of a seaman in a foreign country by a consular officer on his complaint that the voyage is continued contrary to agreement, or that the vessel is badly provisioned or unseaworthy, or against the officers for cruel treatment, it shall be the duty of the consul or consular agent to institute a proper inquiry into the matter, and, upon his being satisfied of the truth and justice of such complaint, he shall require the master to pay to such seaman one month's wages over and above the wages due at the time of discharge, and to provide him with adequate employment on board some other vessel, or provide him with a passage on board some other vessel bound to the port from which he was originally shipped, or to the most convenient port of entry in the United States, or to a port agreed to by the seaman."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 19, page 17, after line 17, to insert:

SEC. 4596. The words "domestic trade" in this section shall include trade between ports of the United States and trade between ports of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies, and Mexico. The words "foreign trade" shall include trade between ports of the United States and foreign ports, except as above specified, and trade between ports of the United States on the Atlantic and on the Pacific.

Mr. WHITE. I move to amend the amendment. On line 1, page 18, I move to strike out the words "on the Atlantic and on the Pacific," inserting a period after the words "United States," at the bottom of page 17, line 24, and after the word "between," in that line, to insert "Atlantic and Pacific."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 18, after line 4, to strike out:

First. For desertion in any foreign port, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned.

And insert:

First. For desertion, if the offense occur at a port of the United States, or a foreign port in the domestic trade, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned. If the offense occur at a foreign port in the foreign trade, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned; and also, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, after line 18, to strike out:

Second. For desertion in a port of the United States, by forfeiture of all or any part of the clothes or effects he leaves on board and of all or any part of the wages or emoluments which he has then earned.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 23, before the words "for neglecting," to strike out "Third" and insert "Second;" on page 19, line 5, after the word "master," to strike out "by a forfeiture of his wages of not more than two days' pay, or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in having a substitute" and insert "if the offense occur at a port of the United States or a foreign port in the domestic trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute; or if the offense occur at a foreign port, in the foreign trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month;" so as to make the subdivision read:

Second. For neglecting or refusing, without reasonable cause, to join his vessel or to proceed to sea in his vessel, or for absence without leave at any time within twenty-four hours of the vessel's sailing from any port, either at the commencement or during the progress of any voyage, or for absence at any time without leave and without sufficient reason from his vessel or from his duty, not amounting to desertion or not treated as such by the master, if the offense occur at a port of the United States or a foreign port in the domestic trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute; or if the offense occur at a foreign port, in the foreign trade, by a forfeiture from his wages of not more than two days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 16, before the words "for quitting," to strike out "fourth" and insert "third;" in the same line, after the word "vessel," to insert "in whatever trade engaged, at a foreign or domestic port;" and in line 19, after the word "forfeiture," to strike out "of," and insert "from;" so as to make the subdivision read:

Third. For quitting the vessel, in whatever trade engaged, at a foreign or domestic port, without leave after her arrival at her port of delivery and before she is placed in security, by forfeiture from his wages of not more than one month's pay.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 20, to insert:

Fourth. For willful disobedience to any lawful command at sea, by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons until such disobedience shall cease, and upon arrival in port, if of the United States, by forfeiture from his wages of not more than four days' pay, or upon arrival in a foreign port by forfeiture from his wages of not more than four days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 3, to strike out:

Fifth. For willful disobedience of any lawful command at sea, by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons until such disobedience shall cease, and upon arrival in port by forfeiture of his wages of not more than four days' pay, or, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than one month.

And insert:

Fifth. For continued willful disobedience to lawful command or continued willful neglect of duty at sea by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons, on bread and water, with full rations every fifth day, until such disobedience shall cease, and upon arrival in port, if of the United States, by forfeiture, for every twenty-four hours' continuance of such disobedience or neglect, of either a sum of not more than twelve days' pay or sufficient to defray any expenses which have been properly incurred in hiring a substitute, or upon arrival in a foreign port, in addition to the above penalty, by imprisonment for not more than three months, at the discretion of the court.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 21, to strike out:

Sixth. For continued willful disobedience to lawful command or continued willful neglect of duty at sea, by being, at the option of the master, placed in irons, on bread and water, with full rations on every fifth day, until such disobedience shall cease; and upon arrival in port, by forfeiture, for every twenty-four hours' continuance of such disobedience or neglect, of a sum of not more than twelve days' pay, and also at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than three months.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 6, before the words "For assaulting," to strike out "Seventh" and insert "Sixth;" so as to read:

Sixth. For assaulting any master or mate, by imprisonment for not more than two years.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. In line 6, on page 21, after the word "mate," I move to insert "in whatever trade engaged."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 21, line 8, before the words "For willfully," to strike out "Eighth" and insert "Seventh;" so as to read:

Seventh. For willfully damaging the vessel, or embezzling or willfully damaging any of the stores or cargo, by forfeiture out of his wages of a sum equal in amount to the loss thereby sustained, and also, at the discretion of the court, by imprisonment for not more than twelve months.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. In line 9, on page 21, in the subdivision which has just been read, after the word "cargo," I move to insert "in whatever trade engaged."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 21, line 13, before the words "For any act of smuggling," to strike out "Ninth" and insert "Eighth;" so as to read:

Eighth. For any act of smuggling for which he is convicted, and whereby loss or damage is occasioned to the master or owner, he shall be liable to pay such master or owner such a sum as is sufficient to reimburse the master or owner for such loss or damage; and the whole or any part of his wages may be retained in satisfaction or on account of such liability; and he shall be liable to imprisonment for a period of not more than twelve months.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. In line 15, on page 21, of the subdivision which has just been read, after the word "owner," I move to insert "in whatever trade engaged."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 22, after the word "offender," at the end of line 3, to insert "if still in the vessel;" after the word "port," at the end of line 4, to insert "or, if she is at the time in port, before her departure therefrom;" in line 13, after the word "if," to strike out "not lost through wreck or fire" and insert "practicable;" in line 14, after the words "produced or," to strike out "if so lost;" in line 16, after the word "case," to strike out "shall" and insert "may," at its discretion;" and in line 17, before the word "offense," to insert "the;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 20. That section 4597 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4597. Upon the commission of any of the offenses enumerated in the preceding section an entry thereof shall be made in the official log book on the day on which the offense was committed, and shall be signed by the master and by the mate or one of the crew; and the offender, if still in the vessel, shall, before her next arrival at any port, or, if she is at the time in port, before her departure therefrom, be furnished with a copy of such entry, and have the same read over distinctly and audibly to him, and may thereupon make such a reply thereto as he thinks fit; and a statement that a copy of the entry has been so furnished, or the same has been so read over, together with his reply, if any, made by the offender, shall likewise be entered and signed in the same manner. In any subsequent legal proceedings the entries hereinbefore required shall, if practicable, be produced or proved, and in default of such production or proof the court hearing the case may, at its discretion, refuse to receive evidence of the offense."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, section 21, line 20, before the word "consular," to strike out "the" and insert "all;" in line 21, before the word "discontinuation," to insert "reclaim deserters;" and in line 2, on page 23, after the word "eighty-three," to strike out "and forty-six hundred and eleven;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 21. That section 4600 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4600. It shall be the duty of all consular officers to reclaim deserters, discontinuance in subordination by every means in their power, and, where the local authorities can be usefully employed for that purpose, to lend their aid and use their exertions to that end in the most effectual manner. In all cases where seamen or officers are accused the consular officer shall inquire into the facts and proceed as provided in section 4583 of the Revised Statutes; and the officer discharging such seamen shall enter upon the crew list and shipping articles and official log the cause of discharge and the particulars in which the cruel or unusual treatment consisted, and subscribe his name thereto officially. He shall read the entry made in the official log to the master, and his reply thereto, if any, shall likewise be entered and subscribed in the same manner."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 22, on page 24, line 2, before the word "liable," to strike out "vessel" and insert "master;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 22. That section 4611 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4611. Flogging and all other forms of corporal punishment are hereby prohibited on board any vessel, and no form of corporal punishment on board any vessel shall be deemed justifiable, and any master or other officer thereof who shall violate the aforesaid provisions of this section or either thereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment not less than three months or more than two years. Whenever any officer other than the master of such vessel shall violate any provision of this section, it shall be the duty of such master to surrender such officer to the proper authorities as soon as practicable. Any failure upon the part of such master to comply herewith, which failure shall result in the escape of such officer, shall render said master liable in damages to the person illegally punished by such officer."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 23, on page 25, after the word "fruit," in line 16, to insert:

Fresh fruit and vegetables shall be served while in port if obtainable. The seamen shall have the option of accepting the fare the master may provide, but the right at any time to demand the foregoing scale of provisions.

So as to make the clause read:

When the vessel is in port and it is possible to obtain the same, 1½ pounds of fresh meat shall be substituted for the daily rations of salt and canned meat; one-half pound of green cabbage for one ration of canned tomatoes; one-half pound of fresh fruit for one ration of dried fruit. Fresh fruit and vegetables shall be served while in port if obtainable. The seamen shall have the option of accepting the fare the master may provide, but the right at any time to demand the foregoing scale of provisions.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the same section, on page 25, line 23, after the word "contract," to insert "except as above;" so as to make the clause read:

The foregoing scale of provisions shall be inserted in every article of agreement, and shall not be reduced by any contract, except as above, and a copy of the same shall be posted in a conspicuous place in the galley and in the fore-castle of each vessel.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 24, line 9, after the word "person," to strike out the comma and the words "or to pay any person than an officer authorized by act of Congress any remuneration for the shipment of seamen;" so as to read:

SEC. 24. That section 10 of chapter 121 of the laws of 1884, as amended by section 3 of chapter 421 of the laws of 1896, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 10. That it shall be, and is hereby, made unlawful in any case to pay any seaman wages in advance of the time when he has actually earned the same, or to pay such advance wages to any other person."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. After the words "Sec. 10," in line 6, on page 26, I move to insert in parentheses a small "a." The section is subdivided.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 24, on page 26, after the word "wages," at the end of line 11, to strike out "or such remuneration;" after the word "advanced," at the end of line 14, to strike out "or remuneration so paid;" and in line 17, after the word "wages," to strike out "or remuneration;" so as to read:

Any person paying such advance wages shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not less than four times the amount of the wages so advanced, and may also be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court. The payment of such advance wages shall in no case, excepting as herein provided, absolve the vessel or the master or owner thereof from full payment of wages after the same shall have been actually earned, and shall be no defense to a libel, suit, or action for the recovery of such wages. If any person shall demand or receive, either directly or indirectly, from any seaman or other person seeking employment as seaman, or from any person on his behalf, any remuneration whatever for providing him with employment, he shall for every such offense be liable to a penalty of not more than $100.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 6, on page 27, section 24.

Mr. WHITE. After line 6, on page 27, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 6, on page 27, it is proposed to insert:

But no allotment whatever shall be allowed in trade between ports of the United States, except as provided in subdivision C of this section, or in trade between ports of the United States and the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies, and Mexico.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 27, after the amendment just adopted, to insert:

(c) That it shall be lawful for any seaman engaged in a vessel bound from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific or vice versa, or in a vessel engaged in foreign trade, except trade between the United States and the Dominion of Canada or Newfoundland or the West Indies or the Republic of Mexico, to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of an amount, to be fixed by regulation of the Commissioner of Navigation, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, not exceeding one month's wages, to an original creditor in liquidation of any just debt for board or clothing which he may have contracted prior to engagement.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, line 18, to change the "e" in parentheses to "d."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 3, to change the "d" in parentheses to "e;" and in line 6, after the word "section," to insert "or shall make a false statement of the nature or amount of any debt claimed to be due from any seaman under this section;" so as to make the clause read:

(e) That no allotment except as provided for in this section shall be lawful. Any person who shall falsely claim to be such relation as above described of a seaman under this section or shall make a false statement of the nature or amount of any debt claimed to be due from any seaman under this section shall for every such offense be punishable by a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 11, to change the "e" in parentheses to "f."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 19, to change the "f" in parentheses to "g."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 25, on page 29, line 1, after the word "sections," to strike out "4392;" and in line 6, after the words "Revised Statutes," to insert "and so much of chapter 97 of the laws of 1895 as relates to allotment, and also subdivisions 7 and 8 of section 4511 of the Revised Statutes, in so far as the same relate to the domestic trade as defined in section 19 of this act;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 25. That section 3 of chapter 421 of the laws of 1886, approved June 19, 1886; sections 4531, 4532, 4593, 4594, 4598, 4599, 4601, and 4609 of the Revised Statutes, and so much of chapter 97 of the laws of 1895 as relates to allotment, and also subdivisions 7 and 8 of section 4511 of the Revised Statutes, in so far as the same relate to the domestic trade as defined in section 19 of this act, and that section 3 of an act entitled "An act to amend the laws relating to navigation, and for other purposes," approved April 4, 1888, chapter 61, page 80, Statutes Fiftyeth Congress, first session, are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. An amendment to the amendment has been agreed upon by the committee, in line 8, on page 29, after the word "and," to strike out "also subdivisions seven and" and insert the word "subdivision," so as to read "and subdivision eight of section 4511 of the Revised Statutes, etc;" and in line 10, to change the word "relate" to "relates."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 26, on page 29, after the words "approval, and," to insert "shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts, but;" so as to read:

SEC. 26. That this act shall take effect sixty days after its approval, and shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts, but shall apply to all vessels not herein specifically exempted.

Mr. WHITE. Section 26 as finally agreed upon by the committee should read as follows:

SEC. 26. That this act shall take effect sixty days after its approval, and shall apply to all vessels not herein specifically exempted, but sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 23, and 24 shall not apply to fishing or whaling vessels or yachts.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the amendment first reported by the committee will be considered as disagreed to, and the question is on the amendment as now proposed by the Senator from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 29 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, July 4, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

SENATE.

MONDAY, July 4, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. J. F. HEISSE, of the city of Washington.

On motion of Mr. DAVIS, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was dispensed with.

ENLISTMENT OF COLORED TROOPS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a draft of a bill for raising 25,000 colored troops from the nation at large; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army, together with draft of a bill to increase his department by adding to it one colonelcy and one lieutenant-colonelcy; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. PROCTOR presented the petition of J. H. Jones, of Bradford, Vt., and 13 other members of the Homeopathic School of Medicine in the State of Vermont, and the petition of Daniel C. Noble, of Middleburg, Vt., and 9 other members of the Homeopathic School of Medicine in the State of Vermont, praying for the passage of Senate joint resolution No. 164, preventing discrimination against graduates of legally chartered medical colleges in appointments to the medical corps of the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAFFERY presented a memorial of the legislature of Louisiana, relative to the construction of a system of locks and dams in the Ouachita River, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PROCTOR, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3056) to correct the military record of Joseph Graham, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ALLISON, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4592) to pay certain judgments against John C. Bates and Jonathan A. Yeckley, captain and first lieutenant in the United States Army, for acts done by them under orders of their superior officers, asked that the committee be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred, together with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Claims; which was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4374) to place the name of Nellie M. Guild upon the pension roll, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2545) granting an increase of pension to Mary Elizabeth Hieskell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

NEWTON W. COOPER.

Mr. GALLINGER. A few days ago upon my motion the bill (H. R. 4189) granting an increase of pension to Newton W. Cooper was indefinitely postponed. I move a reconsideration of the vote whereby the bill was postponed, and in courtesy to a member of the other House I ask unanimous consent that the bill be now considered.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent to put the bill on its passage.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Newton W. Cooper, late private, Company H, Third Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FLAGS ON MERCHANT VESSELS.

Mr. PASCO. From the Committee on Commerce I report favorably without amendment the bill (S. 4827) relating to the flag of the United States on merchant vessels. It requires our merchant vessels to raise the flag in entering into or leaving any foreign or home port. It is recommended unanimously by the Committee on Commerce, and I was authorized by the committee to request the Senate to proceed to its consideration when reported. Ours is the only civilized nation without such regulations, and I ask that the bill may be now considered.

Mr. HALE. I object to the consideration of the bill for the reason I shall state. I do not believe in legislation which tends to make trouble for our navigation interests by imposing penalties. There has never any real harm come without a law so severe and offensive. To provide that the master of every vessel going out or coming into a port shall be subject to a new penalty because he does not happen to raise his flag is, I think, an unnecessary burden upon the interests of navigation.

It is a pretty good rule, Mr. President, to let well enough alone. I do not know that we have suffered or that anybody else has suffered, or that the world has been any the worse because we have not had such a severe law upon our statute books. I am against it. I believe there is no call for it. I have no idea that the merchant marine has asked for it. It is one of those uneasy things that somebody takes into his head ought to be done and for which we are asked to enact a new statute. I object to the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. PASCO. Before the bill goes over, I should like to make a few remarks.

Mr. HALE. Of course my objection will carry the bill over, but I withhold the objection.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, the information before the Committee on Commerce, which unanimously recommended the passage of the bill, was that this is the only commercial nation of the world that is without such regulations as are prescribed in the bill. The bill is drawn after the British act requiring such vessels to display the British flag under similar circumstances. The committee were unanimously of the opinion that the American flag should receive the same honor that other nations give to their flag when coming into or leaving a foreign port or a port of the United States. The restrictions are not onerous. There is ample time given to our vessels to provide themselves with flags, if they have not already got them.

I must say that I am entirely surprised that this objection comes from the source it does. The Senator's colleague, who is chairman of the committee, and who I regret is not now in his seat, introduced the bill; and it is a source of surprise to me that the Senator from Maine should object to its consideration and base his objections upon the grounds that he urges.

It is certainly not an onerous restriction to require an American vessel to display an American flag when it comes into an American port or when it comes out of a foreign port. I am sorry to hear the Senator from Maine state as an objection to the bill that it is an onerous and objectionable requirement for our merchant vessels to exhibit the flag, particularly at a time like this, when we are engaged in war with a foreign nation and when we should delight to see it displayed in every port in the world where we have vessels under circumstances such as are set forth in the bill.

I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection and that the bill will be passed.

Mr. HALE. I not only will not withdraw it, but I renew it with greater force than ever since what the Senator has said. I do not object to its effect upon anybody except upon our own navigation interests. I supposed that before we got very far it would be claimed, as the Senator from Florida does claim, that this is a war measure.

Mr. PASCO. The Senator misunderstood me if he thinks I said any such thing.

Mr. HALE. What did the Senator refer to when he spoke of the circumstances which surround us now?

Mr. PASCO. I said it was particularly appropriate now, when we are engaged in war with a foreign nation; but I never referred to it as a war measure.

Mr. HALE. Precisely. It is one of the uneasy things urged before us every day on account of the war that we must do some new thing, some special thing, that will make trouble for somebody. If an American master can not be trusted in time of war or peace to have a flag on board of his own volition to dip and to raise as he sees fit, then I am not in favor of compelling him by penalties and punishments to do it.

Mr. CULLOM. I inquire if there is any law on the subject now.

Mr. HALE. I take it there is no law on the subject now, because it is not needed. Whether other nations legislate differently from what we do and have statutes of this kind I do not know. At any rate, I object to the bill and ask that it may go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PROCTOR introduced a bill (S. 4841) granting a pension to Henry Hill; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. TURPIE introduced a bill (S. 4842) to correct the military record of Albert S. Jonas; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 4843) granting a pension to Elizabeth L. Morse; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a bill (S. 4844) granting an increase of pension to Michael Herbst; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PRINTING OF BANKRUPTCY ACT.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that 10,000 extra copies of the bankruptcy act be printed for the use of the Senate. I am told that 25,000 copies would come within the $500 limit.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The motion was agreed to.

PATENTS AND DEVICES FOR EXPLOSIVES.

Mr. TELLER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to transmit to the Senate full reports of any experiments or tests made under the present Administration or under the Administration of President Cleveland for the testing of any device for the use of gun cotton or other explosive substances in shells, whether such device or devices are patented, and who are the owners of the patents; whether in the conducting of such experiments any guns belonging to the Government have been burst or injured; the names of any and all parties, whether owners or attorneys, who have or who are now seeking the use and adoption by the Secretary of War of such devices and the purchase by the Government of the patents controlling such devices; and the price and terms asked from the Government for the use and ownership of such patents and devices; whether in such sale to the Government of such patents and devices the Government is to be sole owner; whether the money appropriated by the Government has been expended under the direct control and supervision of the Government, or whether bills have been made by the owners of the patents for the purchase of shells or other material used or expenses incurred in the conducting of such experiments, and whether such bills have been paid by the Government, the expenses incurred in conducting such experiments, and the character of such negotiations between the owners or the parties representing the owners of such patents or devices for the firing of gun cotton in shells from cannon; copies of all the correspondence between the War Department and the owners of such patents or devices or with their attorneys or anyone representing or promoting the interests of the ownership of such devices.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN submitted the following resolution; which was read:

Resolved, That the Select Committee on the Construction of the Nicaragua Canal have leave to sit, in the recess of the Senate, to execute the orders of the Senate made at the present session of Congress.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. HOAR. I suggest as a result of experience in such matters, of which I have had a good deal, that it will be convenient to the committee to put in the words "or any subcommittee of their number," in order that the authority of the full committee may be delegated, if they wish to do so.

Mr. MORGAN. That was provided for in the previous resolution, which was adopted a few days ago.

Mr. HOAR. Very well.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

JUNIUS ALEXANDER.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask the courtesy of the Senate to call up, by unanimous consent, the bill (H. R. 7362) to grant a pension to Junius Alexander. I will state that this is a case of very great merit, and one, also, of absolute destitution. I am advised that the ex-soldier will go to the poorhouse next winter, unless this relief is granted. He is one of those men who helped to the utmost to perpetuate the great Declaration the anniversary of which we to-day celebrate. I hope the bill may be taken up.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Junius Alexander, late a private in Company F, First Regiment United States Colored Troops, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN C. COLEMAN.

Mr. CLAY. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 9874) for the relief of John C. Coleman, of Emanuel County, Ga.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President—

Mr. CLAY. It is a small matter. It will not lead to any debate.

Mr. DAVIS. I do not object to the consideration of this bill, but after it is disposed of I shall call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Georgia?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The preamble recites that John C. Coleman, one of the sureties of Chesley Faircloth, on his bond as mail contractor, paid to the United States $343.58, on a judgment obtained against Faircloth and his sureties, which judgment should have been credited with the sum of $116.39, and which judgment was duly assigned by the United States to John C. Coleman; that Faircloth is dead and his estate insolvent. The bill proposes to pay to John C. Coleman $116.39.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution 259.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. WHITE. I took the floor on Saturday. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, the plain and comprehensive question before the Senate is this: Shall the United States abandon the well-defined and universally accepted Monroe doctrine and her traditional domestic policy, and at this time enter on the dangerous career of colonial expansion and European imperialism, encountering as a consequence all the dangers and assuming all the burdens incident to such a change?

Imperialism is defined to be a system of imperial government, ambition to form an empire, a policy of territorial extension, the spirit of Napoleonic empire, or advocacy of it or of its revival.

It would serve no useful purpose to now recall at length the history and tradition of the United States respecting this question, but the discussion would be incomplete if I did not direct attention to the fact that, from the organization of the Government of the United States to the present time, ours has been exclusively a domestic policy intended to advance the best interest and elevate our own people. To now change that policy and enter upon the uncertain and perilous career of imperialism would be an experiment that I am not prepared to make. I am not willing to incorporate in our population, as citizens of the United States, 15,000,000 people belonging to alien races, the most of them ignorant, brutal, hostile, and savage, and reduce the standard of our home civilization to that of a low and brutal Asiatic population. And that such would be the case if imperialism should prevail in our country no one who has given the question any serious thought can successfully deny.

Henry Norman, in an article published in the Washington Post July 1, 1898, says:

Unless all signs fail, however, or I fail to interpret them, the old America, the America obedient to the traditions of the founders of the Republic, is passing away, and a new America, an America standing armed, alert, and exigent in the arena of the world struggle, is taking its place.

The change is threefold:

1. The United States is about to take its place among the great armed powers of the world.
2. By the seizure and retention of territory not only not contiguous to the borders of the Republic, but remote from them, the United States becomes a colonizing nation and enters the field of international rivalries.

I shall endeavor to demonstrate that my position is that of the fathers of the Republic, and with them I cheerfully take my stand against imperial aggression and the danger incident to its exercise. If anything can be said to be completely settled in our country, it is the Monroe doctrine, which declares that, while we will not ourselves engage in a career of imperialism and colonial acquisition, no other nation shall invade or extend her dominion on this continent to the detriment or injury of the United States, and if we hold to this doctrine we must also be bound by its terms. Here, Mr. President, the nation has stood throughout all its existence, and here we must stand in the future, as immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar, if our Government is to be safe and our people are to reap the highest rewards of their sacrifices and efforts in establishing this Government.

In saying this it must not be understood that I favor returning to Spain any of the territory lost to her as a result of the war now in progress. I have so repeatedly stated my position on this subject in this Chamber that it would seem to be a work of supererogation to repeat it, to the effect that every acre of Spain's possessions on this continent and in the seas must be lost to her forever. Spain must pay every dollar this war costs us, and for the Maine and our dead and wounded seamen.

The Philippines, Cuba, and Puerto Rico must pass from her dominion and become independent republics, and no arrangement must be made by which there will be any recession of territory to that decaying and brutal monarchy, now, thank God, rapidly disappearing from the map of the world.

Nor, Mr. President, must the Hawaiian Islands be permitted to pass from their present government, or at least from a republican form of government, into the possession or under the dominion or influence of any foreign power. They, too, must, as was declared fifty years ago or more, remain a friendly and cooperating power with the United States.

Mr. President, in the orderly discussion of the main question now before the Senate, there arises this important subordinate question: Have we the constitutional power to annex territory by a joint resolution? I will point out that this is a dangerous and unprecedented exercise of power, not conferred by the Constitution and not intended by the framers of that instrument to be exercised by the United States except through the treaty-making power. There is no instance in history where it has been done. The single case of the annexation of Texas was accomplished only after the people of that Republic had voted in favor of it, there being less than 100 votes against it; and then only after the duly constituted authority of Texas had ratified the action of the people at the polls, and that had been adopted and ratified by the President of the United States.

Every other instance of the purchase or acquisition in any form of territory by the United States has been by treaty; and if precedents are of any value and are to control the action of the Senate they are all one way on this question, demonstrating beyond all question and dispute that it was distinctly understood by the framers of the Constitution and those who have wisely administered its provisions to this time that the only way by which the United States can acquire territory or other property rights of a foreign power is by the exercise of the treaty-making power of the Constitution.

And where does that power reside? Certainly it is not found in the House of Representatives, for that body has no more right, under the Constitution, to consider the question of annexation than have the judges of the courts or the humblest private citizen of the land.

In speaking of the powers of the President, the Constitution says:

He shall have power, by and with the consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.

This is the sole and exclusive authority to enter into treaty stipulations on behalf of the United States; and treaties, it will be observed, must be initiated or begun by the President. The Senate can not do so. It can only "advise and consent;" and when the President has initiated a treaty with a foreign government and submitted it to the Senate, the Constitution requires two-thirds of the Senators present to concur in order to give it life and vitality, while the House has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter whatever.

By the resolution we are now considering, this power is to be ruthlessly stricken down and the constitutional safeguard ignored, if not absolutely destroyed. The President has not initiated or begun the negotiations for the treaty with the Hawaiian Islands. He has not even advised it in a message; but the lower House of Congress, having no more constitutional power to do so than the humblest citizen of the land, has passed the resolution we are now considering, and is now insisting that we shall adopt it, and that its adoption by a majority of the Senate will give it the force of law.

The exclusive right of the President to initiate or begin a treaty is destroyed by this proposition. The two-thirds safeguard of the Senate required by the Constitution is also destroyed, and a new body appears upon the political horizon without any power to initiate a treaty, or engage in treaty relations, asserting a usurped power.

Mr. President, it is then declared by the Constitution that the judicial power shall extend to treaties and that they shall be regarded as the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby. It is also provided that no State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; and these provisions are all that are found in the Constitution on the subject of the treaty-making power of the United States.

It is elementary in the construction of the Constitution that a power expressly and exclusively conferred on one body or officer can be exercised alone by that body or officer. The implication immediately arises that all other persons than those enumerated are excluded from its exercise, and the constitutional provision which confers on the President the power to initiate a treaty with a foreign nation and on two-thirds of the Senate the power to concur therein places the exclusive jurisdiction over the treaty-making power of the United States in the President and the Senate of the United States.

Mr. President, the Constitution was made to be observed, not to be violated. It is an irrevocable contract between the States of the Union, binding on them as political entities and on all citizens; and every individual is bound by its provisions and its just implication. And whoever would consciously violate a provision of this instrument, whoever would consciously strike down or emasculate any of its provisions, would be guilty of moral treason, and whoever would resist its enforcement by armed rebellion would be guilty of high treason under its provisions and subjected to conviction and execution.

The Constitution must not only, in the nature of things, be a grant of power, but it must, to some extent, also be a restraint on power, for laws, whether primary or statutory, are more frequently restrictive in their character than otherwise. We restrain an individual from the exercise of a natural right that order, harmony, and peace may prevail in the State. It may, in a state of nature, be the natural right of the strong to prey on the weak, but in orderly and well-regulated society this right is restrained, and the strong are required by punitive legislation to respect the rights of the weak; and before the law of this country all citizens, regardless of religious belief, station, or social, intellectual, moral, or racial status, stand upon an equality. Any other construction than this would lead to anarchy, ruin, and national dishonor and social chaos.

Mr. President, I submit to the candid judgment of the most earnest imperialist the following propositions, which I challenge him to successfully deny:

1. The Constitution of the United States is a grant of power that does not exist outside of its expressed provisions and necessary implication. It creates a government which can not exist otherwise and confers on it certain specific powers by express language or by necessary implication; but powers not expressly granted or not necessarily implied or proper for the execution of granted powers do not exist and can not be constitutionally employed.

2. The Constitution and the statutes are territorial in their operation; that is, they can not have any binding force or operation beyond the territorial limits of the government in which they are promulgated. In other words, the Constitution and statutes can not reach across the territorial boundaries of the United States into the territorial domain of another government and affect that government or persons or property therein.

A joint resolution if passed becomes a statute law. It has no other or greater force. It is the same as it would be if it were entitled "An act" instead of "A joint resolution." That is its legal classification. It is therefore impossible for the Government of the United States, by statute or joint resolution, to reach across its boundary into the dominion of another government and annex that government or affect persons or property therein. But the United States may do so under the treaty-making power, which I shall hereafter consider.

3. That where a constitution expressly provides a means to be pursued for the accomplishment of a given thing or purpose, it impliedly excludes all other means; and the Constitution having specifically placed the treaty-making power, which embraces the authority to annex territory, in the President, to be concurred in or not by two-thirds of the Senators present when submitted to the Senate, it excludes any other method of acquiring additional territory. And, Mr. President, if we will turn to the precedents, we will find this assertion well sustained by the history of our country.

Alaska came to us by treaty from Russia March 30, 1867.

Arizona was included in the Territory of New Mexico ceded to the United States by Mexico by treaty of February 2, 1848. Its boundary was extended south by the Gadsden treaty of December 3, 1853-June 30, 1854.

California came to us from Mexico, primarily by conquest in 1846-47, followed by treaty of February 2, 1848.

Florida came to the United States by treaty from Spain February 22, 1819.

Louisiana came to us from France by treaty April 30, 1803.

New Mexico came to the United States from Mexico by treaty of February 2, 1848.

Santo Domingo was proposed to be annexed by treaty in 1869-70, but it failed. That treaty contained a clause for the assent or a vote of the people, which was taken in March, 1870, and they voted 1,006 for to 9 against.

In 1867 the United States negotiated a treaty with Denmark for St. Thomas and St. Johns, and the assent of the people of those islands was made a condition precedent, and they voted "aye" about January 13, 1868, but the treaty failed.

Mr. President, notwithstanding these precedents, it is proposed to annex the Hawaiian Islands without consulting the people of that country.

I hold, without further discussion, that under the rules I have stated the treaty-making power, which includes the power of acquiring additional territory, rests exclusively in the President and the Senate, that it is an executive power which in its very nature can not be exercised by the House of Representatives, and that the only method of exercising it is by treaty and not by joint resolution or act of Congress; and the case of Texas, when rightly understood, forms no exception to this rule; therefore an attempt to annex or acquire territory by act or joint resolution of Congress is in violation of the letter, spirit, and policy of the Constitution.

Mr. President, my time will not permit me to elaborate or expand on this proposition, nor is it necessary that I should do so, for to the lawyer and the conscientious student of constitutional history and constitutional construction they are as elementary and indispensable in applying the provisions of the Constitution as is the alphabet in the use of the English language.

When I was a boy but 15 years of age, I registered a solemn oath to support and obey the Constitution of the United States, and to defend it against its enemies; and although as a public officer I have since then frequently sworn to support that instrument, I have never for a moment in the thirty-six years since that important event in my life supposed myself absolved from its binding force. It has been an ever-present duty with me, and, I may add as well, an ever-present pleasure, to observe it, for in its observation by the citizens of the United States lies the sole safety of the Republic. To abandon its wise provisions means to invite anarchy and the decay of the Republic and finally the enthronement of monarchy, and thus the Government of the United States would be transformed from a republic or democracy into that form of government from which we rescued it after our ancestors had waged seven years of bloody and devastating war.

I assert, the Constitution having placed in the President the power to initiate all treaties and in the Senate the power to concur in or reject the proposed treaties, that annexation by treaty excludes all other methods and that the acquisition of territory in any other form, except as a mere tentative war measure and as an incident to the conduct of war, would be in violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution. I do not for one moment doubt that if the Chief Executive should officially declare that the occupancy of the Hawaiian Islands was a necessary war measure in the successful prosecution of the war with Spain, he would have the constitutional power to occupy them, but this has reference to the war power of the Constitution and not to the treaty-making power. If it is determined that we shall acquire this territory, let the President assume full responsibility under a well-known and well-defined constitutional power.

Under our form of government the power to "declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water" is vested in Congress; and when war has been declared, it is provided that—

The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States.

By virtue of his office of Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, if the President deems the seizure and holding of specific territory during a state of war to be necessary, he may so seize and hold it regardless of the legislative and judicial branches of the Government; but in such case he must act in a military capacity and by virtue of the military authority lodged in him by the Constitution. Such seizure is to be regarded as a military necessity, and the power to make it is implied from the power to make war. The authority to occupy the Hawaiian Islands under such circumstances would be due to the existence of this power, but that would not authorize Congress to pass the joint resolution now before the Senate or to act in any other manner than that pointed out specifically in the Constitution itself.

I am perfectly willing, if the President believes the exigencies of the war require it, that he shall seize the Hawaiian Islands and occupy them; but, Mr. President, I can not myself see any necessity for doing so.

Two propositions are plain: First, that territory can only be annexed or acquired by treaty; second, that the President, under the Constitution, may occupy the Hawaiian Islands under the war power and by virtue of his office of Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy.

Without detaining the Senate too long on these propositions, I submit it is apparent to any person who may give the subject a moment's serious thought that to pass this resolution and enforce it would be to utterly destroy forever and obliterate the provision of the Constitution I have referred to, which declares that the President "shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur."

Two-thirds of the Senators present would mean two-thirds of the States present by Senators in the Senate at the time of the concurrence, and this declaration is another form of saying that two-thirds of the States as represented in the Senate shall be present and concur in a treaty to give it binding force.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to ask him if that statement can be reconciled with the possibility of difference of opinion between two Senators from the same State?

Mr. ALLEN. I see nothing in the question to militate against the proposition I make.

Mr. HOAR. My honorable friend will pardon me; I do not wish to interrupt him, because I see he has prepared himself very carefully, but I understand him to say that the provision of the Constitution that two-thirds of the Senators shall concur in a treaty to give it validity is equivalent to a statement that two-thirds of the States must concur.

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator how that can be when all the States have two Senators, and the two Senators may differ?

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, it may be, and quite likely would be in some cases, that the Senators representing a State would differ; but nevertheless the proposition is plain that two-thirds of the Senators concurring would mean, as a matter of fact, the representation of two-thirds of the States; and that would be the exercise of the power that came to the States in their original capacity from the English Crown.

When our States secured their liberation from England before the formation of the Constitution, they inherited every power that could be exercised by the British Government, among which was the treaty-making power; and when the Constitution of the United States was formed, that treaty-making power was lodged in the President of the United States and two-thirds of the States as represented by their Senators in this Chamber. That treaty-making power embraces every conceivable treaty that can be made between this Government and a foreign power; and there is no authority in the Constitution or in the history or traditions of this Government for this Government to negotiate even with another nation excepting as it is found expressed in the provisions of the Constitution.

Mr. President, the Constitution must begin and end with the territorial jurisdiction of the United States; it can not reach beyond the boundaries of our Government. It would be as lifeless and impotent as a piece of blank paper in Canada or in the Hawaiian Islands; and so with a statute or joint resolution. But as respects the treaty-making power, the President is authorized to open negotiations with foreign countries and enter into treaties of all kinds, subject to the right of the States as represented in this Chamber to approve or reject; and whenever we depart from this specific and plain pathway, we abandon the provision, the letter, the spirit, and the policy of the Constitution.

Mr. President, these constitutional checks and safeguards would be utterly thrown down if we were to pursue the course now attempted by the other side. We would strike down absolutely and for all time the power of the President to initiate or make treaties, and also the constitutional safeguard requiring two-thirds of the Senators present to concur in their terms and conditions. This can not be done with impunity and without being guilty of a flagrant violation of the express terms of the Constitution itself.

And thus, Mr. President, from year to year and from decade to decade, substantial and elementary provisions of the Constitution, solemnly promulgated for the protection of the people and the preservation of the nation, are obliterated and set aside as obsolete by those intrusted with their preservation and who have taken a solemn oath to observe and sustain them. This course of constantly violating the provisions of the Constitution can not be carried on to any great extent without our reaching that period where the Constitution will be set at utter defiance in all of its provisions and we will enter on the chaotic sea of Presidential and legislative caprice without any restraint whatever. In fact, so notorious and open have been the violations of the Constitution within the last few years that a distinguished American statesman, who for many years served in this Chamber and who is yet alive, declared that "the Constitution means whatever a majority of Congress says it means."

Section 3, Article IV, of the Constitution, authorizing Congress to admit new States into the Union, does not mean the annexation of foreign territory as a State, but has reference solely to the authority of Congress to create new States out of territory originally in the possession of the United States or that may be acquired by proper treaty under the Constitution. This is its full scope and meaning, and any argument to the effect that under this provision Congress has power to annex the Hawaiian Islands is unwarranted and violative of the plain purpose and policy of the Constitution.

I pass from the interesting and important question I have been discussing with these simple observations, restraining myself from discussing it more fully, scientifically, and accurately, because of a lack of time, to the consideration of other equally important and interesting questions.

Mr. President, the policy of annexation, territorial aggrandizement, or colonization has been studiously condemned by every distinguished statesman from Washington to the present hour; and I regard it as highly important, before this discussion shall end, to cite their utterances with some degree of liberality.

President Washington said September 17, 1796:

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not legally hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor, or caprice?

President William Henry Harrison said in his inaugural address, March 4, 1841:

I can conceive of no more sublime spectacle, none more likely to propitiate an impartial and common Creator, than a rigid adherence to the principles of justice on the part of a powerful nation in its transactions with a weaker and uncivilized people whom circumstances have placed at its disposal.

In the first annual message of John Tyler to the Senate and House of Representatives, December 7, 1841, he said:

We look to no foreign conquests, nor do we propose to enter into competition with any other nation for supremacy on the ocean; but it is due not only to the honor but to the security of the people of the United States that no nation should be permitted to invade our waters at pleasure and subject our towns and villages to conflagration and pillage.

In the special message of John Tyler to the Senate and House of Representatives, December 30, 1842, he said:

Considering, therefore, that the United States possesses so large a share of the intercourse with these islands, it is deemed not unfit to make the declaration that their Government seeks, nevertheless, no peculiar advantages, no exclusive control over the Hawaiian Government, but is content with its independent existence and anxiously wishes for its security and prosperity.

In the third annual message of John Tyler to the Senate and House of Representatives, December, 1843, he said:

The United States would be at all times indisposed to aggrandize itself at the expense of any other nation; but while they would be restrained by principles of honor, which should govern the conduct of nations as well as that of individuals, from setting up a demand for territory which does not belong to them, they would as unwillingly consent to a surrender of their rights.

In the special message of John Tyler to the Senate of the United States, April 23, 1844, he said:

I transmit herewith, for your approval and ratification, a treaty which I have caused to be negotiated between the United States and Texas, whereby the latter, on the conditions therein set forth, has transferred and conveyed all its right of separate and independent sovereignty and jurisdiction to the United States. In taking so important a step I have been influenced by what appeared to me to be the most controlling considerations of public policy and the general good, and in having accomplished it, should it meet with your approval, the Government will have succeeded in reclaiming a territory which formerly constituted a portion, as it is confidently believed, of its domain under the treaty of cession of 1803 by France to the United States.

The country thus proposed to be annexed has been settled principally by persons from the United States, who emigrated on the invitation of both Spain and Mexico, and who carried with them into the wilderness which they have partially reclaimed the laws, customs, and political and domestic institutions of their native land. They are deeply indoctrinated in all the principles of civil liberty, and will bring along with them in the act of reassociation devotion to our Union and a firm and inflexible resolution to assist in maintaining the public liberty unimpaired—a consideration which, as it appears to me, is to be regarded as of no small moment. The country itself thus obtained is of incalculable value in an agricultural and commercial point of view. To a soil of inexhaustible fertility it unites a genial and healthy climate, and is destined at a day not distant to make large contributions to the commerce of the world. Its territory is separated from the United States in part by an imaginary line, and by the River Sabine for a distance of 310 miles, and its productions are the same with those of many of the contiguous States of the Union.

Such is the country, such are its inhabitants, and such its capacities to add to the general wealth of the Union. As to the latter, it may be safely asserted that in the magnitude of its productions it will equal in a short time, under the protecting care of this Government, if it does not surpass, the combined production of many of the States of the Confederacy. A new and powerful impulse will thus be given to the navigating interest of the country, which will be chiefly engrossed by our fellow-citizens of the Eastern and Middle States, who have already attained a remarkable degree of prosperity by the partial monopoly they have enjoyed of the carrying trade of the Union, particularly the coastwise trade, which this new acquisition is destined in time, and that not distant, to swell to a magnitude which can not easily be computed, while the addition made to the boundaries of the home market thus secured to their mining, manufacturing, and mechanical skill and industry will be of a character the most commanding and important.

Such are some of the many advantages which will accrue to the Eastern and Middle States by the ratification of the treaty—advantages the extent of which it is impossible to estimate with accuracy or properly to appreciate. Texas, being adapted to the culture of cotton, sugar, and rice, and devoting most of her energies to the raising of these productions, will open an extensive market to the Western States in the important articles of beef, pork, horses, mules, etc., as well as in breadstuffs. At the same time, the Southern and Southeastern States will find in the fact of annexation protection and security to their peace and tranquillity, as well against all domestic as foreign efforts to disturb them, thus consecrating anew the union of the States and holding out the promise of its perpetual duration.

Thus, at the same time that the tide of public prosperity is greatly swollen, an appeal of what appears to the Executive to be of an imposing, if not of a resistless, character is made to the interests of every portion of the country. Agriculture, which would have a new and extensive market opened for its produce; commerce, whose ships would be freighted with the rich productions of an extensive and fertile region; and the mechanical arts, in all their various ramifications, would seem to unite in one universal demand for the ratification of the treaty. But important as these considerations may appear, they are to be regarded as but secondary to others. Texas, for reasons deemed sufficient by herself, threw off her dependence on Mexico as far back as 1836, and consummated her independence by the battle of San Jacinto in the same year, since which period Mexico has attempted no serious invasion of her territory; but the contest has assumed features of a mere border war, characterized by acts revolting to humanity.

In the year 1836 Texas adopted her constitution, under which she has existed as a sovereign power ever since, having been recognized as such by many of the principal powers of the world; and contemporaneously with its adoption, by a solemn vote of her people, embracing all her population but 98 persons, declared her anxious desire to be admitted into association with the United States as a portion of their territory. This vote, thus solemnly taken, has never been reversed, and now by the action of her constituted authorities, sustained as it is by popular sentiment, she reaffirms her desire for annexation. This course has been adopted by her without the employment of any sinister measures on the part of this Government. No intrigue has been set on foot to accomplish it. Texas herself wills it, and the executive of the United States, concurring with her, has seen no sufficient reason to avoid the consummation of an act esteemed to be so desirable by both. It can not be denied that Texas is greatly depressed in her energies by her long-protracted war with Mexico.

Under these circumstances it is but natural that she should seek for safety and repose under the protection of some stronger power, and it is equally so that her people should turn to the United States, the land of their birth, in the first instance in the pursuit of such protection. She has often before made known her wishes, but her advances have to this time been repelled. The Executive of the United States sees no longer any cause for pursuing such a course. The hazard of now defeating her wishes may be of the most fatal tendency. It might lead, and most probably would, to such an entire alienation of sentiment and feeling as would inevitably induce her to look elsewhere for aid, and force her either to enter into dangerous alliances with other nations, who, looking with more wisdom to their own interests, would, it is fairly to be presumed, readily adopt such expedients; or she would hold out the proffer of discriminating duties in trade and commerce in order to secure the necessary assistance.

Whatever step she might adopt looking to this object would prove disastrous in the highest degree to the interests of the whole Union. To say nothing of the impolicy of our permitting the carrying trade and home market of such a country to pass out of our hands into those of a commercial rival, the Government, in the first place, would be certain to suffer most disastrously in its revenue by the introduction of a system of smuggling upon an extensive scale, which an army of custom-house officers could not prevent, and which would operate to affect injuriously the interests of all the industrial classes of this country. Hence would arise constant collisions between the inhabitants of the two countries, which would evermore endanger their peace. A large increase of the military force of the United States would inevitably follow, thus developing upon the people new and extraordinary burdens in order not only to protect them from the danger of daily collision with Texas herself, but to guard their border inhabitants against hostile incursions so easily excited on the part of the numerous and warlike tribes of Indians dwelling in their neighborhood. Texas would undoubtedly be unable for many years to come, if at any time, to resist unaided and alone the military power of the United States; but it is not extravagant to suppose that nations reaping a rich harvest from her trade, secured to them by advantageous treaties, would be induced to take part with her in any conflict with us, from the strongest considerations of public policy.

Such a state of things might subject to devastation the territory of contiguous States, and would cost the country in a single campaign more treasure, thrice told over, than is stipulated to be paid and reimbursed by the treaty now proposed for ratification. I will not permit myself to dwell on this view of the subject. Consequences of a fatal character to the peace of the Union, and even to the preservation of the Union itself, might be dwelt upon. They will not, however, fail to occur to the mind of the Senate and of the country. Nor do I indulge in the vague conjectures of the future. The documents now transmitted along with the treaty lead to the conclusion, as inevitable, that if the boon now tendered be rejected Texas will seek for the friendship of others. In contemplating such a contingency it can not be overlooked that the United States are already almost surrounded by the possessions of European powers. The Canadas, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, the islands in the American seas, with Texas trammelled by treaties of alliance or of a commercial character differing in policy from that of the United States, would complete the circle. Texas voluntarily steps forth, upon terms of perfect honor and good faith to all nations, to ask to be annexed to the Union.

As an independent sovereignty her right to do this is unquestionable. In doing so she gives no cause of umbrage to any other power; her people desire it, and there is no slavish transfer of her sovereignty and independence. She has for eight years maintained her independence against all efforts to subdue her. She has been recognized as independent by many of the most prominent of the family of nations, and that recognition, so far as they are concerned, places her in a position, without giving any just cause of umbrage to them, to surrender her sovereignty at her own will and pleasure. The United States, actuated evermore by a spirit of justice, has desired by the stipulations of the treaty to render justice to all. They have made provision for the payment of the public debt of Texas. We look to her ample and fertile domain as the certain means of accomplishing this; but this is a matter between the United States and Texas, and with which other governments have nothing to do. Our right to receive the rich grant tendered by Texas is perfect, and this Government should not, having due respect either to its own honor or its own interests, permit its course of policy to be interrupted by the interference of other powers, even if such interference were threatened. The question is one purely American. In the acquisition, while we abstain most carefully from all that could interrupt the public peace, we claim the right to exercise a due regard to our own. This Government can not consistently with its honor permit any such interference. With equal, if not greater, propriety might the United States demand of other governments to surrender their numerous and valuable acquisitions made in past time at numberless places on the surface of the globe, whereby they have added to their power and enlarged their resources.

To Mexico the Executive is disposed to pursue a course conciliatory in its character and at the same time to render her the most ample justice by conventions and stipulations not inconsistent with the rights and dignity of the Government. It is actuated by no spirit of unjust aggrandizement, but looks only to its own security. It has made known to Mexico at several periods its extreme anxiety to witness the termination of hostilities between that country and Texas. Its wishes, however, have been entirely disregarded. It has ever been ready to urge an adjustment of the dispute upon terms mutually advantageous to both. It will be ready at all times to hear and discuss any claims Mexico may think she has on the justice of the United States and to adjust any that may be deemed to be so on the most liberal terms. There is no desire on the part of the Executive to wound her pride or affect injuriously her interest, but at the same time it can not compromise by any delay in its action the essential interests of the United States. Mexico has no right to ask or expect this of us; we deal rightfully with Texas as an independent power.

The war which has been waged for eight years has resulted only in the conviction with all others than herself that Texas can not be reconquered. I can not but repeat the opinion expressed in my message at the opening of Congress that it is time it had ceased. The Executive, while it could not look upon its longer continuance without the greatest uneasiness, has, nevertheless, for all past time preserved a course of strict neutrality. It could not be ignorant of the fact of the exhaustion which a war of so long a duration had produced. Least of all was it ignorant of the anxiety of other powers to induce Mexico to enter into terms of recognition with Texas, which, affecting the domestic institutions of Texas, would operate most injuriously upon the United States and might most seriously threaten the existence of this happy Union. Nor could it be unacquainted with the fact that although foreign governments might disavow all design to disturb the relations which exist under the Constitution between these States, yet that one, the most powerful among them, had not failed to declare its marked and decided hostility to the chief feature in those relations and its purpose on all suitable occasions to urge upon Mexico the adoption of such a course in negotiating with Texas as to produce the obliteration of that feature from her domestic policy as one of the conditions of her recognition by Mexico as an independent State.

The Executive was also aware of the fact that formidable associations of persons, the subjects of foreign powers, existed, who were directing their utmost efforts to the accomplishment of this object. To these conclusions it was inevitably brought by the documents now submitted to the Senate. I repeat, the Executive saw Texas in a state of almost hopeless exhaustion, and the question was narrowed down to the simple proposition whether the United States should accept the boon of annexation upon fair and even liberal terms, or, by refusing to do so, force Texas to seek refuge in the arms of some other power, either through a treaty of alliance, offensive and defensive, or the adoption of some other expedient which might virtually make her tributary to such power and dependent upon it for all future time. The Executive has full reason to believe that such would have been the result without its interposition and that such will be the result in the event either of unnecessary delay in the ratification or the rejection of the proposed treaty.

In full view, then, of the highest public duty, and as a measure of security against evils incalculably great, the Executive has entered into the negotiation the fruits of which are now submitted to the Senate. Independent of the urgent reasons which existed for the step it has taken, it might safely invoke the fact (which it confidently believes) that there exists no civilized government on earth having a voluntary tender made of a domain so rich and fertile, so replete with all that can add to national greatness and wealth, and so necessary to its peace and safety, that would reject the offer. Nor are other powers, Mexico inclusive, likely in any degree to be injuriously affected by the ratification of the treaty. The prosperity of Texas will be equally interesting to all; in the increase of the general commerce of the world that prosperity will be secured by annexation.

But one view of the subject remains to be presented. It grows out of the proposed enlargement of our territory. From this, I am free to confess, I see no danger. The federative system is susceptible of the greatest extension compatible with the ability of the representation of the most distant State or Territory to reach the seat of Government in time to participate in the functions of legislation and to make known the wants of the constituent body. Our confederated Republic consisted originally of thirteen members. It now consists of twice that number, while applications are before Congress to permit other additions. This addition of new States has served to strengthen rather than to weaken the Union. New interests have sprung up which require the united power of all, through the action of the common Government, to protect and defend upon the high seas and in foreign parts.

Each State commits with perfect security to that common Government those great interests growing out of our relations with other nations of the world, and which equally involve the good of all the States. Its domestic concerns are left to its own exclusive management. But if there were any force in the objection it would seem to require an immediate abandonment of territorial possessions which lie in the distance and stretch to a far-off sea, and yet no one would be found, it is believed, ready to recommend such an abandonment. Texas lies at our very doors and in our immediate vicinity.

Under every view which I have been able to take of the subject, I think that the interests of our common constituents, the people of all the States, and a love of the Union left the Executive no other alternative than to negotiate the treaty. The high and solemn duty of ratifying or rejecting it is wisely devolved on the Senate by the Constitution of the United States.

In the special message of John Tyler to the House of Representatives of the United States, June 10, 1844, he said:

The Government and people of the United States have never evinced nor do they feel any desire to interfere in public questions not affecting the relations existing between the States of the American continent. We leave the European powers exclusive control over matters affecting their continent and the relations of their different states; the United States claim a similar exemption from any such interference on their part. The treaty with Texas was negotiated from considerations of high public policy, influencing the conduct of the two Republics. We have treated with Texas as an independent power solely with a view of bettering the condition of the two countries. If annexation in any form occur, it will arise from the free and unfettered action of the people of the two countries; and it seems altogether becoming in me to say that the honor of the country, the dignity of the American name, and the permanent interests of the United States would forbid acquiescence in any such interference.

In the fourth annual message of John Tyler to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, December, 1844, he said:

An interference of one in the affairs of another is the fruitful cause of family dissensions and neighborhood disputes, and the same cause affects the peace, happiness, and prosperity of states. It may be most devoutly hoped that the good sense of the American people will ever be ready to repel all such attempts should they ever be made.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask the courtesy of the honorable Senator from Nebraska to yield to me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, there is a special order for to-day at 12 o'clock, one of the most ancient, I think, known to the American Congress. I wish, therefore, to call attention to this most special and ancient order made by Congress on the 4th of July, 1776:

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE—A DECLARATION BY THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED.
[July 4, 1776.]

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind—

Said to be the most felicitous phrase in the paper—a great state paper—requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown—

"Hath shown"—a literary anomaly now. It will be seen at the date of this declaration the particles "hath" and "has" were both used. The struggle was going on in the language as to which should survive. The one, "has," has supplanted the other, "hath." I do not know whether or not the change in this case has been an improvement—that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time after such dissolutions to cause others to be elected, whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise, the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies without the consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them by a mock trial from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these States.

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world.

For imposing taxes on us without our consent.

For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury.

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses.

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies.

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments.

For suspending our own legislatures and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens taken captive on the high seas to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their Legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America in general Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Mr. President, the paper just read has not only been the subject of great and continuous panegyric by that nation whose birth it witnessed and declared, but it has also been the subject of immeasurable praise by the publicists, the legists, and the statesmen of Europe, the wisest and ablest of the Old World at the time of its appearance and submission to the candid judgment of mankind.

It is naturally divided into three parts. Perhaps the division was wholly unconscious, for when a great paper is to be drafted which shall vindicate the establishment of a separate nationality, the argument of nature, its force and influence, the mental characteristics of those engaged in drafting and signing it, give it that natural tripartite division.

In the first instance there is the exordium, the statement commencing with the maxim "that all men are created equal," and following that up to the conclusion of "the unalienable right"—a right which no people can be bereaved of or deprived of—the right to alter or amend their form of government by arms or otherwise—the right of revolution—that right which we are now vindicating at Santiago, and which we have vindicated from Saratoga to Yorktown, at Palo Alto, at Chapultepec, at every battlefield and camp since the 4th day of July, 1776.

The great philosophers and statesmen, authors of the Declaration, took the free man, the unit, as the basis of free government, and asserted the doctrine that no just government could be based upon anything except his consent, their continuous consent; and whenever this consent ceases, and especially when dissent appears with arms in its hand, there revolution is flagrant. The right, the fact, the doctrine, the causes can not be settled, can not be adjusted in any way except by the arbitrament of the sword. It is the final and last argument made among men.

That doctrine, with its corollary that all men are born free and equal, does not glitter reflected light. It is luminous with its own light and radiance. It is a doctrine founded in the everlasting truth and gospel of nature, belonging to the very alphabet of liberty. If it be heresy, then this whole Capitol should vanish as an unsubstantial dream; both Houses of the Congress, whose predecessors made this declaration, ought at once to abdicate their offices. We must adhere, as has been said by the honorable Senator from Nebraska, we must do more than obey, we must support actively, affirmatively, earnestly this doctrine that all government—all government—is founded justly only upon the consent of the governed.

The second part of this great state paper may be called the declaration or narration. It is the account of grievances. It is, perhaps, the most forcible, lucid, and commanding statement of grievances ever made by petitioners against any government. It has been the most highly praised of any paragraph in the declaration, especially by that class of scholars who have lived the subjects of kings and emperors and have never felt the beneficial results of that great day which we are celebrating.

The third and last division of the declaration is the conclusion or sanction, a very memorable sanction, one never made before. The barons at Runnymede made no such sanction as this. The great Protestant reformers who met at Westminster, at the Synod of Dort, the great movements of the public mind, either in a political, religious, or civil direction, had not prior to this time ever affixed such a sanction and conclusion to a declaration of principles. "We pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor." It is an ascending, increasing climax of grandeur and solemnity. It begins with the least—life. What shall a man give in exchange for his life? These men offered life first as the least of the great sacrifices which might be demanded as a penalty for the signing and publishing of this declaration.

Next they offered their fortunes. Lastly, in gravest manner, the thing of chiefest magnitude, the tie which bound them in all the years to come, which never was broken, they pledged their sacred honor, and that pledge was kept. We had during the Revolution treason, we had treachery, but upon not one of the signers—fifty-six in number—upon not one of these illustrious names can there be placed a suspicion of bad faith, of slowness in meeting the duty and debt of his obligation, of any hesitancy in accepting the result of this great act. There is no evidence on their part that any of the signers in the least retracted from the result, the consequences, or the principles involved in this great political testament which they witnessed and delivered to the world, to be forever revered in all the latitudes of liberty.

Fortunes, it will be seen, followed life. It was the next thing in importance after life, of more importance than life itself, because in the state of the law upon treason at that time all that a man had was forfeited to the Crown; his wife and children, dependent upon him, were cast forth as beggars and pariahs upon the charity of the world, always with corrupted blood, with a bar sinister, always tainted with the royal conviction and judgment. Fortune was swept away; and it involved the ruin of all those nearest and dearest to the men who set their names and seals to this instrument. It was the greatest sacrifice next to life.

Many of these signers were men of fortune. They were accounted such in that day. John Hancock was the wealthiest merchant in the United States; Charles Carroll of Carrollton, a very wealthy citizen of Maryland; Robert Morris, of Philadelphia, the wealthiest man of that State. One of these signers was poor. He was in limited circumstances; his name was Read—George Read. He had been elected from the State of Delaware as a member of this Congress, and after his election he was approached by an emissary of the British Crown and offered the sum of £10,000 sterling, $30,000 more than he could ever earn, more than he had ever dreamt of possessing, if he would simply vacate his seat and not attend the session of Congress.

His memorable reply discloses the state of his fortune, that fortune pledged to his compatriots, with his sacred honor, in support of this declaration. His reply was:

I am a poor man, a very poor man, but thank God the King of England is not rich enough to buy me.

That was the reply of a member of Congress approached with an offer of a bribe from one thought to be a personal friend, supposed to be a political supporter. It is a memorable lesson which we should take to heart. Members of Congress, like other men, may resist temptation. They can not avoid it; they can not evade it; it will come to them. If not in the shape of money, in the shape of something else; and whenever the tempter approaches in any form, in any guise, let us say to any executive—I speak not of the present; that is too transient, too transitory to be mentioned in such a commentary—let us say to any executive, to any tempter, "I am poor, but you with your devil's purse are not rich enough to buy me."

We know with respect to one member of the convention how he carried out his pledge regarding the fortune named in the sanction of this declaration. Benjamin Franklin was a member of Congress. He was a member of the Congress which was in session on the 4th of July, 1776. We have so long associated that name with philosophy, with philanthropy, with the highest class of studies relating to human right, to social economy, that it is almost an anomaly to think of Dr. Franklin as a member of Congress. But he was a member of Congress, and he was among those who pledged his fortune in support of this declaration, and we know from the most veritable records how he carried out that pledge.

Immediately upon the adjournment of this Congress he had been selected as minister of the United States to France. Before he set sail for that country he sold all his movable property, his books, his store, his trade, his press, his household goods—every possible thing of a movable character. He could sell no other. He had large real estate interests, but he was one who had signed the Declaration of Independence, and whose title was already tainted by the anticipated charge and conviction of treason.

There was no market for real estate in his circumstances. He sold all, and he covered it into the treasury of the Continental Congress. It went into their military chest. It went to the support of the army and navy engaged in the Revolution, and it stayed there until his return from France, when it was refunded to him in solido, without interest, he declining even to take interest, positively refusing to take any interest, even 3 per cent interest. This first creditor of the United States, this greatest creditor of the United States, this most glorious creditor of the new Republic just born, refused to take his own with usury, took his own without usury, having pledged his fortune to the support of the American cause.

I sometimes regret, sir, that in the many historical celebrations of this day, of the great oratorical exhibits upon such occasions and the eulogies delivered upon Jefferson, Adams, and other members of the Continental Congress, the country has sometimes lost sight of Dr. Franklin, refusing to consider him or to think of him as a member of that body. Yet, sir, I believe that he was the most influential, the most conspicuous, the most eminent member of the Congress that sat on the 4th day of July, 1776.

I go so far as to say that if that paper had not borne the sanction and the signature of Benjamin Franklin its effect and influence upon the world would have been greatly disparaged and deteriorated. Consider now the circumstances under which Dr. Franklin took his seat in that Congress. He had been elected by the metropolitan district of his State, the city of Philadelphia. He was one of the oldest men in the convention. He was almost twice the age of Jefferson; nearly twice the age of Adams; very much older than any other member of the convention who took any prominent part in its procedure.

Again, he had nothing to gain, either in the way of reputation, wealth, or renown, by taking his seat and acting as a member of the Continental Congress in 1776. He was not only the oldest member, but he put more to the hazard, infinitely more, than all the other members of that body. I speak not now of his private fortune, but I speak of that reputation, worth more to him than his fortune, which he had established in the Old World. It was a very little matter to the people of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, to the people of the Continent, to the multitudes of France, Holland, the Netherlands, or Prussia, whether such a man as Button Gwinnett, of Georgia, or Mr. Matthew Thornton, of New Hampshire, had taken seats in the Congress of 1776 and had signed a paper issued by that Congress.

They knew nothing and they cared less for the delegates I have named, and for many others whom I could select from that celebrated number of the fifty-six signers. No doubt those gentlemen were well known in the colonies which had sent them to this national assembly; no doubt they were well known and highly trusted in the State of Georgia and in the State of New Hampshire, their constituencies; but what was their connection, what was their communication, what was their repute with the Old World, with Europe, with the masses of people in the British Empire, the multitudes of France, the leading power upon the Continent?

What did they know of these gentlemen, so well known locally as politicians, as statesmen, and as being loyal to the cause of the patriots? Nothing whatever. Any other name might have served as well.

But Franklin had spent fourteen years of his life in London. He had made long journeys on the Continent. He had gone repeatedly before committees of the House of Commons. He had served with the highest and greatest of British statesmen. He had corresponded with the most profound British and French philosophers. He had attended a meeting of the privy council, a privilege only granted once, and then to Benjamin Franklin, as a representative of the united colonies of America. He was in the closest intimacy with the minority, a very great and noble minority, to become afterwards the majority, who were opposed to the American war.

When, therefore, Benjamin Franklin went into this Congress, was appointed one of the committee to draft the declaration, it meant more than that Mr. Button Gwinnett, or Mr. Matthew Thornton, or Mr. Thomas Jefferson, an eminent lawyer and planter of Virginia, or Mr. Livingston, of New York, had done so. The fifty-five names together on the instrument were neither of them nor any of them nor all together so full of meaning and significance as the one name, B. Franklin; so full of significance to that opinion of mankind for which the declaration has spread upon its own pages its deference and decent respect.

Rapidly the news circulated that Benjamin Franklin, the bosom friend of Pitt and Barry, counselor and adviser of the great Whig leaders of the Crown in Great Britain, the esteemed friend of statesmen then in their high career and power in France, the close correspondent of the philosophers and literati of the Netherlands and of Prussia, had become a member of the Continental Congress.

Franklin, indeed, had become a household name. He was well known to the people of the four great divisions of the British Empire—a great deal better known than some of their own leading statesmen. No man could pretend to approach him with the shadow of prestige or importance which he carried when he walked through Independence Square into the hall and took his seat in this assembly. He pledged his fortune, and he followed up the pledge by the gift of its use. He gave all; he reserved nothing in the cause of liberty. All the signers may not have done the same, but all of them pledged to Franklin, as he pledged to each of them, his life, his fortune, his sacred honor, and all of them recognized in Franklin that uncrowned sovereignty, that unsurpassed excellence, which shall always distinguish him as the unarmed but victorious champion of liberty and union.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I desire to read this language from the inaugural address of President Polk, March 4, 1845:

All alliances having a tendency to jeopard the welfare and honor of our country or sacrifice any one of the national interests will be studiously avoided, and yet no opportunity will be lost to cultivate a favorable understanding with foreign governments by which our navigation and commerce may be extended, and the ample products of our fertile soil, as well as the manufactures of our skillful artisans, find a ready market and remunerating prices in foreign countries.

Mr. Polk, December 2, 1845, in his first annual message to Congress, said:

The United States, sincerely desirous of preserving relations of good understanding with all nations, can not in silence permit any European interference on the North American continent, and should any such interference be attempted will be ready to resist it at any and all hazards.

It is well known to the American people and to all nations that this Government has never interfered with the relations subsisting between other governments. We have never made ourselves parties to their wars or their alliances; we have not sought their territories by conquest; we have not mingled with parties in their domestic struggles; and believing our own form of government to be the best, we have never attempted to propagate it by intrigues, by diplomacy, or by force.

We may claim on this continent a like exemption from European interference. The nations of America are equally sovereign and independent with those of Europe. They possess the same rights, independent of all foreign interposition, to make war, to conclude peace, and to regulate their internal affairs. The people of the United States can not, therefore, view with indifference attempts of European powers to interfere with the independent action of the nations on this continent. The American system of government is entirely different from that of Europe. Jealousy among the different sovereigns of Europe, lest any one of them might become too powerful for the rest, has caused them anxiously to desire the establishment of what they term the "balance of power." It can not be permitted to have any application on the North American continent, and especially to the United States. We must ever maintain the principle that the people of this continent alone have the right to decide their own destiny.

Should any portion of them, constituting an independent state, propose to unite themselves with our confederacy, this will be a question for them and us to determine without any foreign interposition. We can never consent that European powers shall interfere to prevent such a union because it might disturb the "balance of power" which they may desire to maintain upon this continent. Near a quarter of a century ago the principle was distinctly announced to the world, in the annual message of one of my predecessors, that—

"The American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers."

This principle will apply with greatly increased force should any European power attempt to establish any new colony in North America. In the existing circumstances of the world the present is deemed a proper occasion to reiterate and reaffirm the principle avowed by Mr. Monroe and to state my cordial concurrence in its wisdom and sound policy. The reassertion of this principle, especially in reference to North America, is at this day but the promulgation of a policy which no European power should cherish the disposition to resist. Existing rights of every European nation should be respected, but it is due alike to our safety and our interests that the efficient protection of our laws should be extended over our whole territorial limits and that it should be distinctly announced to the world as our settled policy that no future European colony or dominion shall with our consent be planted or established on any part of the North American continent.

It has never been our policy to maintain large standing armies in time of peace. They are contrary to the genius of our free institutions, would impose heavy burdens on the people, and be dangerous to public liberty. Our reliance for protection and defense on the land must be mainly on our citizen soldiers, who will be ever ready, as they ever have been ready in times past, to rush with alacrity at the call of their country to her defense. This description of force, however, can not defend our coast, harbors, and inland seas, nor protect our commerce on the ocean or the lakes. These must be protected by our Navy.

In his third annual message, December 7, 1847, President Polk said:

I am persuaded that the best means of vindicating the national honor and interest and of bringing the war—

Speaking of the war with Mexico—to an honorable close will be to prosecute it with increased energy and power in the vital parts of the enemy's country.

In my annual message to Congress of December last I declared that—

"The war has not been waged with a view to conquest, but, having been commenced by Mexico, it has been carried into the enemy's country and will be vigorously prosecuted there with a view to obtain an honorable peace, and thereby secure ample indemnity for the expenses of the war, as well as to our much-injured citizens, who hold large pecuniary demands against Mexico."

Such, in my judgment, continues to be our true policy; indeed, the only policy which will probably secure a permanent peace.

It has never been contemplated by me, as an object of the war, to make a permanent conquest of the Republic of Mexico or to annihilate her separate existence as an independent nation. On the contrary, it has ever been my desire that she should maintain her nationality, and under a good government adapted to her condition be a free, independent, and prosperous Republic. The United States were the first among the nations to recognize her independence, and have always desired to be on terms of amity and good neighborhood with her. This she would not suffer. By her own conduct we have been compelled to engage in the present war. In its prosecution we seek not her overthrow as a nation, but in vindicating our national honor we seek to obtain redress for the wrongs she has done us and indemnity for our just demands against her. We demand an honorable peace, and that peace must bring with it indemnity for the past and security for the future. Hitherto Mexico has refused all accommodation by which such a peace could be obtained.

I cite this language of President Polk for the purpose of showing that down to 1847, when this message was delivered, it continued to be the policy of the United States, as originally inaugurated, to pursue purely a domestic course and not to enter the field of territorial acquisition and aggrandizement.

Zachary Taylor, in his first annual message to the Senate and House of Representatives, December 4, 1849, said:

The position of the Sandwich Islands with reference to the territory of the United States on the Pacific, the success of our persevering and benevolent citizens who have repaired to that remote quarter in Christianizing the natives and inducing them to adopt a system of government and laws suited to their capacity and wants, and the use made by our numerous whale ships of the harbors of the islands as places of resort for obtaining refreshments and repairs all combine to render their destiny peculiarly interesting to us. It is our duty to encourage the authorities of those islands in their efforts to improve and elevate the moral and political condition of the inhabitants, and we should make reasonable allowances for the difficulties inseparable from this task. We desire that the islands may maintain their independence and that other nations should concur with us in this sentiment. We could in no event be indifferent to their passing under the dominion of any other power. The principal commercial states have in this a common interest, and it is to be hoped that none of them will attempt to interpose obstacles to the entire independence of the islands.

It was then understood that this Government would give its moral if not its physical aid to the maintenance of an independent government in the Hawaiian Islands, and it was distinctly disclaimed that we had any purpose of annexing or making them a portion of the United States.

So, in his first annual message, December 2, 1850, President Fillmore said:

Among the acknowledged rights of nations is that which each possesses of establishing that form of government which it may deem most conducive to the happiness and prosperity of its own citizens, of changing that form as circumstances may require, and of managing its internal affairs according to its own will. The people of the United States claim this right for themselves, and they readily concede it to others.

Mr. President, is that statement of President Fillmore true, in the light of the fact that we propose to annex the Hawaiian Islands without taking a vote of their people or giving them an opportunity to express themselves on this subject one way or the other? There has never been an instance, so far as this nation is concerned, of an attempt to annex the territory of a foreign government without the consent of the people of that government, expressed in a regular and constitutional method, until we reach the present instance.

President Fillmore continues:

Hence it becomes an imperative duty not to interfere in the government or internal policy of other nations; and although we may sympathize with the unfortunate or the oppressed everywhere in their struggles for freedom, our principles forbid us from taking any part in such foreign contests. We make no wars to promote or to prevent successions to thrones, to maintain any theory of a balance of power, or to suppress the actual government which any country chooses to establish for itself. We instigate no revolutions, nor suffer any hostile military expeditions to be fitted out in the United States to invade the territory or provinces of a friendly nation. The great law of morality ought to have a national as well as a personal and individual application. We should act toward other nations as we wish them to act toward us, and justice and conscience should form the rule of conduct between governments instead of mere power, self-interest, or the desire of aggrandizement. To maintain a strict neutrality in foreign wars, to cultivate friendly relations, to reciprocate every noble and generous act, and to perform punctually and scrupulously every treaty obligation—these are the duties which we owe to other states, and by the performance of which we best entitle ourselves to like treatment from them, or if that in any case be refused we can enforce our own rights with justice and a clear conscience.

On December 2, 1851, President Fillmore said, in his second annual message:

It is earnestly to be hoped that the differences which have for some time past been pending between the Government of the French Republic and that of the Sandwich Islands may be peaceably and durably adjusted so as to secure the independence of those islands. Long before the events which have of late imparted so much importance to the possessions of the United States on the Pacific we acknowledged the independence of the Hawaiian Government. This Government was first in taking that step, and several of the leading powers of Europe immediately followed.

We were also influenced by a desire that those islands should not pass under the control of any other great maritime state, but should remain in an independent condition, and so be accessible and useful to the commerce of all nations. I need not say that the importance of these considerations has been greatly enhanced by the sudden and vast development which the interest of the United States have attained in California and Oregon, and the policy heretofore adopted in regard to those islands will be steadily pursued.

Mr. FRYE. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield one moment?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. FRYE. There is very good news which it is well for the Senate to hear.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KYLE in the chair). The Secretary will read the dispatch sent to the desk by the Senator from Maine, if there be no objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, Washington, July 4, 1898.

The Secretary of the Navy has received the following dispatch:

PLAYA DEL ESTE (by way of Haiti), July 4—3.15 a. m.
SABONAY, July 3, 1898.

To the SECRETARY OF THE NAVY:

The fleet under my command offers the nation as a Fourth of July present the destruction of the whole of Cervera's fleet. Not one escaped. They attempted to escape at 9.30 this morning. At 2 the last ship, the Cristobal Colon, had run ashore 60 miles west of Santiago and has let down her colors.

The Maria Theresa, Oquendo, and Vizcaya were forced ashore, burned, and blown up within 20 miles of Santiago. The Furor and Pluton were destroyed within 4 miles of the port. Loss, 1 killed and 2 wounded.

Enemy's loss probably several hundred, from gunpowder explosions and drowning. About 1,300 prisoners, including Admiral Cervera. The man killed was George H. Ellis, chief yeoman of the Brooklyn.

SAMPSON.

[Applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

Mr. ALLEN. President Pierce, in his inaugural address, March 4, 1853, said:

The rights which belong to us as a nation are not alone to be regarded, but those which pertain to every citizen in his individual capacity, at home and abroad, must be sacredly maintained. So long as he can discern every star in its place upon that ensign, without wealth to purchase for him preferment or title to secure for him place, it will be his privilege and must be his acknowledged right to stand unabashed, even in the presence of princes, with a proud consciousness that he is himself one of a nation of sovereigns and that he can not in legitimate pursuit wander so far from home that the agent whom he shall leave behind in the place which I now occupy will not see that no rude hand of power or tyrannical passion is laid upon him with impunity.

He must realize that upon every sea and on every soil where our enterprise may rightfully seek the protection of our flag American citizenship is an inviolable panoply for the security of American rights. And in this connection it can hardly be necessary to reaffirm a principle which should now be regarded as fundamental. The rights, security, and repose of this Confederacy reject the idea of interference or colonization on this side of the ocean by any foreign power beyond present jurisdiction as utterly inadmissible.

The opportunities of observation furnished by my brief experience as a soldier confirmed in my own mind the opinion, entertained and acted upon by others from the formation of the Government, that the maintenance of large standing armies in our country would be not only dangerous but unnecessary.

I call attention to this language for the purpose of showing that the spirit of a purely domestic policy actuated the conduct and the language of President Pierce. From the origin of the Government down to the present time there was never manifested the slightest disposition to engage in imperialism or colonization. So Mr. Pierce, in his special message, May 15, 1856, said:

What is memorable in this respect in the conduct and policy of the United States is that while it would be easy for us to annex and absorb new territories in America as it is for European states to do this in Asia or Africa, and while if done by us it might be justified as well on the alleged ground of the advantage which would accrue therefrom to the territories annexed and absorbed, yet we have abstained from doing it, in obedience to considerations of right not less than of policy.

James Buchanan, in his inaugural address, March 4, 1857, said:

We ought to cherish a sacred regard for the independence of all nations and never attempt to interfere in the domestic concerns of any unless this shall be imperatively required by the great law of self-preservation. To avoid entangling alliances has been a maxim of our policy ever since the days of Washington, and its wisdom no one will attempt to dispute. In short, we ought to do justice in a kindly spirit to all nations and require justice from them in return.

It is our glory that whilst other nations have extended their dominions by the sword, we have never acquired any territory except by fair purchase or, as in the case of Texas, by the voluntary determination of a brave, kindred, and independent people to blend their destinies with our own. Even our acquisitions from Mexico form no exception. Unwilling to take advantage of the fortune of war against a sister Republic, we purchased these possessions under the treaty of peace for a sum which was considered at the time a fair equivalent.

President McKinley, in his inaugural address, said:

We want no wars of conquest; we must avoid the temptation of territorial aggression.

Again he said, quoting the language of Mr. Lincoln, that our Government was "conceived in freedom and dedicated to the happiness of free and equal men" and that it "should not entangle itself in the unrest and intrigue of militarism, which is the scourge of the Old World." So it is true that from the formation of the Republic down to and including the present Chief Executive we have been warned by the Presidents against imperialism or territorial aggression.

Now, Mr. President, without any change in the circumstances, without any new fact having arisen to make a change of policy necessary, it is proposed to force the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the Government of the United States by a revolutionary process and one directly in conflict with the language and policy of the Constitution.

Mr. President, if we are to pursue this method of construing the Constitution of our Government, where will this Republic end? I was talking but a short time ago with a distinguished Senator, and I asked him, "What do you take the Constitution of the United States to mean?" "Well," he said, "a sort of a guide or hand board to the course the Government should pursue." I said, "Do you not regard it as absolutely binding?" "No," he said, "it is more in the nature of a direction."

If that doctrine is to become the doctrine of this country, we have entered now upon a sea of uncertainty that will result in the complete overturning of every branch of the Government. No man can afford, whatever popular opinion may be among his constituents, to violate his sense of the Constitution to meet their requirements. If I were satisfied, as I am, that this process of annexation is in violation of the Constitution, I would vote against it, although in doing so I might be driven to private life.

From the organization of the Government to the present time there has been a uniform consensus of judgment and expression on the part of the Presidents, including the present Chief Executive, that we should avoid an imperial or aggressive policy, a policy that will seize the territory of other governments and annex it to ours.

Mr. President, we have been warned against the consequences of this policy by others.

Mr. John Morley, Liberal member of Parliament and formerly chief secretary for Ireland, recently said in a public speech in England:

I know tens of thousands of the best and wisest men in America believe that hardly any more inexpressible calamity can befall mankind than that a community, as Lincoln nobly said, "conceived in freedom and dedicated to the happiness of free and equal men, should entangle themselves in the unrest and intrigue of militarism, which are the torment and scourge of the Old World."

Henry Labouchere, another friend of America, says in London Truth:

What I would respectfully impress upon Americans is that they will make a terrible mistake if they seize the occasion of this war to acquire territories outside the area of their legitimate influence, such as the Philippine Islands. . . . The whole scheme of American polity would be shattered were the globe to be dotted over with American islands, neither States nor Territories, held under subjection. . . .

Speaking of England, he says:

We have drifted into the position of a nation with larger armaments than any other. No matter what we spend on armaments, we are called on to spend more. We hold a larger portion of the globe than any other nation. So absorbing becomes earth hunger when once indulged that we are every year adding new territories to our empire. And what is the result? All domestic reforms are put aside as unworthy to occupy our imperial minds. If a poor man asks for bread, he is told joyfully to starve, with the comforting reflection that he is the citizen of an expansive and expanding empire.

It is with us as it is with a silly land owner who allows the tares and weeds to flourish in his fields and bends all his efforts to his useless rocks and swamps. We who hold to the wise policy of Mr. Gladstone and of other of our departed leaders are sneeringly called "Little Englanders." Be warned, therefore, by the example of this country, my American friends. Be ready, as I know you are, to defend the vast heritage that has accrued to you. But rest satisfied with it. Remain an example to the world that it is possible to be great and prosperous without grabbing, now on one pretext, now on another, territory that is a source of weakness rather than of strength, and without wasting your substance in armaments designed to defend and to increase these unremunerative acquisitions.

Prof. James Bryce, one of the ablest European writers on the principles of the American Government, said in a recent magazine article:

The argument most frequently used in the United States to recommend the annexation of Cuba and Hawaii is that their annexation would strengthen the strategic position of America by giving her two points of naval vantage—one commanding the Caribbean Sea and the other the eastern Pacific, thus protecting her southern and western coasts.

Cuba and Hawaii, in the hands of the United States, would be liable, at the outbreak of a war, to be seized by the fleet of any enemy stronger at sea; and the only way to prevent this would be for the United States to maintain a fleet in the Pacific and another in the Gulf of Mexico powerful enough to defend both islands. Now, of course, the United States can, if she likes, build and maintain a navy adequate for this purpose. But is it worth her while to do so? Why should she spend the hundreds of millions of dollars that would be needed?

The annexation of either Cuba or Hawaii would be a source not of strength, but of weakness. It may be proper for America to see that neither island falls into the hands of any possible naval enemy. Neither, however, is threatened with any such danger; and the expression of the feelings of the United States would be sufficient at any time to avert it, just as a dispatch of Mr. Seward's led Louis Napoleon to withdraw his troops from Mexico.

On the 20th of April last the Senate passed a joint resolution, No. 21, known as the resolutions of intervention in the war between Spain and Cuba. The fourth paragraph of those resolutions is in the following language:

Fourth. That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

That is the latest and most authoritative declaration of Congress on the subject now under consideration. We were not content with simply disclaiming a disposition to exercise sovereignty over Cuba, but we declared our purpose that as soon as the island was pacified we would leave the government and control of Cuba to its people. There again we instinctively recognized the doctrine of a purely domestic policy that has been followed during the existence of our Government.

Even Alexander Hamilton, who spoke of this country as a republican monarchy and who had no faith in the ability of the people to govern themselves, declared that our isolated condition and the fact that ours was a republican form of government made it absolutely impossible for us to pursue other than a purely domestic policy, because, as was said by that distinguished statesman, and by Jefferson, Madison, and others at that time, the policies and measures of a republican form of government are constantly changing. To-day, for instance, we may have a Chief Executive who believes in a policy of aggrandizement, but before four years elapse the temper of the American people may change and we may choose a President who believes in pursuing a purely domestic policy.

Under such circumstances is it not to be seen by the commonest mind that it is impossible for a republic to pursue an aggressive foreign policy? And yet, sir, we propose to reach out 2,100 miles in the Pacific Ocean and annex to this country some ten or twelve islands, probably not to exceed six or seven of them inhabited, not because they are of value to us, but because, as I shall show before this discussion concludes, the American sugar trust desire them to be annexed that they may avoid the payment of about $10,000,000 of taxes a year.

What is the pretense or the pretended cause for this proposed annexation? It is said we need them for defensive purposes, that strategic reasons underlie the proposed annexation. General Schofield said, and others of equal knowledge concur with him, that there is not a solitary thing about the islands giving them any military value except Pearl Harbor. According to Senators in the remarks a few days ago we have a title to Pearl Harbor and we have made an appropriation to improve it. If we have a title to Pearl Harbor as a harbor of refuge and for coaling and watering and repairing purposes, what is there about the balance of those islands that would induce the Government of the United States to annex them? Absolutely nothing.

Then, Mr. President, look at that peculiar kind of reasoning which says we must have islands 2,100 miles from us for the purpose of enabling us to defend the coast of our country. I suppose after a time it will be said we must reach still farther east and get some islands to enable us to defend the Hawaiian Islands, and then some other islands and mainlands to enable us to defend them, and so on until we girdle the earth.

Mr. President, we would have to increase our Navy by pursuing a policy of this kind to at least 100 if not 120 war vessels. It would mean an increase of the taxes to the people of the United States of at least $200,000,000 a year, to say nothing about the money we should be compelled to expend in erecting and arming land fortifications.

I have never yet heard in all the arguments which have been submitted in this Chamber, in anything that has been written or spoken on the subject, one substantial reason in favor of this proposed annexation. There can be but one motive that underlies it, and that is the motive, Mr. President, of enriching those who have acquired the productive lands of the Hawaiian Islands, and all that is to be done at the expense of the American people.

Are we to consider the condition of the inhabitants of that country in determining whether or not we shall annex those islands? No; our primary duty is to consider the effect of annexation on the people of this country. Are we prepared to lower our standard of civilization? Are we prepared to supplement the act of annexing the Hawaiian Islands by an act annexing the Philippines, annexing Cuba, annexing Puerto Rico and the other islands we are capturing, and by that means precipitate into our civilization 15,000,000 Malays, Chinese, Japanese, and hamitic races, absolutely incompetent to assume the duties and responsibilities of citizenship; and by that means, Mr. President, permitting all those millions to come to this country and mingle with our people without restraint?

Once annex those islands to the United States and there is no power in Congress by legislation to prohibit the Malay of the Philippine Islands from coming to South Dakota or Nebraska or New York; and, sir, they will come by the million to compete with the farmers and laborers of your State [Mr. KYLE in the chair] and of my State. They will come to reduce the standard of civilization in all the occupations in this country among our legitimate population. The Japanese cooly and his son will become farmers in your State and in Nebraska, and they will lower the prices of farm products there; and the Nebraska and South Dakota farmer and his son must enter upon a ruinous competition with them in the price of farm products and in the price of wages. So, sir, the Japanese cooly's wife and daughter will become competitors with the wife and daughter of the American citizen. The result will be that our society can not carry the load; civilization will stagger under it; the standard will be lowered rather than elevated; and out of it all will grow a landed peasantry with a few thousand landlords, who will own millions of acres of our country.

Sir, the people of this country are not blind to the situation. They can foresee it coming as plainly as can we. I am glad to say that out in the State of Nebraska, with the great newspapers of that State there is no division of sentiment; that Republicans, Democrats, and Populists are against annexation. The Omaha Bee is the greatest daily paper published between Chicago and San Francisco. It has the largest circulation, no doubt. In its issue of June 10 last it published an editorial which I send to the desk and ask the Secretary to read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KYLE in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

IMPERIALISM OR TERRITORIAL AGGREGATION—NOT A WAR FOR EMPIRE.

Every voice that is raised in opposition to the spirit of imperialism that is being fostered in this country should receive the careful attention of the people. The advocates of territorial aggrandizement have scored a victory in the House of Representatives and are expecting to triumph in the Senate. If they succeed, as seems dangerously probable, in annexing Hawaii, it will stimulate effort in favor of the permanent retention of conquered territory. We confidently believe that at this time a large majority of our people are opposed to this policy. In order that this opposition shall not decline, those who would renounce the traditional policy of the nation and embark it upon a course pregnant with difficulties and dangers must be met and combated at every point.

There was held in Boston a few days ago a public meeting to protest against the policy of territorial acquisition. Resolutions were adopted declaring that a war begun as an unselfish endeavor to fulfill a duty to humanity by ending the unhappy situation in Cuba must not be perverted into a war of conquest; that any annexation of territory as a result of the war would be a violation of the national faith pledged in the joint resolution of Congress, which declared that the United States disclaimed "any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control" over Cuba "except for the pacification thereof," a disclaimer which was intended to mean that this country had no selfish purpose in making war; that the mission of the United States is to help the world by an example of successful self-government, and that to abandon the principles and the policy under which we have prospered and embrace the doctrines and practices now called imperial is to enter the path which with other great republics has ended in the downfall of free institutions. There was no opposition to the war. On the contrary, the chairman of the meeting said, "The war exists, and it is the duty of every citizen to support the Government," and one of the speakers declared, "We are not here to oppose the war or to throw any obstacle in the way of its speedy and successful termination. The question upon which men differed before war was declared is decided, and it is idle to discuss that question now. We are here to deal with a far graver issue—to insist that a war begun in the cause of humanity shall not be turned into a war for empire; that an attempt to win for Cubans the right to govern themselves shall not be made an excuse for extending our sway over alien peoples without their consent." It was further declared that to seize any colony of Spain and hold it as our own, without the free consent of its people, is a violation of the principles upon which the Government rests, which we have preached to the world for a century, and which we pledged ourselves to respect when the war was declared.

This voice of protest from New England against a policy of imperialism, against a proposed course on the part of the United States distinctly hostile to our republican system and which would inevitably lead us into militarism, with all that implies, should find an echo in every quarter of the nation. Thoughtful men, conservative men, patriotic men, should everywhere within the boundaries of the Union make themselves heard in explicit and unqualified terms in opposition to the demand that this war be made a war for empire; that it shall be perverted from the humanitarian purpose for which it was declared into a war of conquest and territorial aggrandizement. Let those who realize the dangerous character of the spirit of imperialism not delude themselves with the idea that left to itself it will not grow. There are powerful influences fostering it—influences prompted by avarice and by ambition for power, commercial and military influences—and the force of these upon public sentiment must not be underrated. Against such influences all who believe that the Republic should adhere to its traditional policy should array themselves at once. That is dictated by a wise and true patriotism.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President—

Mr. TURPIE. Will the honorable Senator from Nebraska allow me to make a suggestion to the Chair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CANNON in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. ALLEN. I do.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I have counted the Senators present in the Chamber and find that there are less than a quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana makes the point that a quorum of the Senate is not present. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Davis,	Jones, Ark.	Pritchard
Allison,	Ellins,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	Kyle,	Quay,
Baker,	Foraker,	Lodge,	Shoup,
Bate,	Frye,	McBride,	Spooner,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Mallory,	Stewart,
Burrows,	Gear,	Mason,	Sullivan,
Clark,	Gray,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Cannon,	Hanna,	Money,	Thornton,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Turley,
Clay,	Harris,	Morrill,	Turpie,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Nelson,	Warren,
Cullom,	Heitfeld,	Penrose,	Wellington,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Perkins,	Wilson.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present. The Senator from Nebraska will proceed.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, in the Omaha Bee, under date of June 24, 1898, I find an editorial which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

EFFECT ON THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

"We can not afford to denounce and forbid all acquisitions of territory in the Western Hemisphere by European governments, even at the peril of war, and forthwith embark in a thus bedamned enterprise ourselves. If we would have our yet unstained doctrine respected by others, we must scrupulously practice what we preach." If we do not want Europe to seize territory in this hemisphere, consistency demands that we shall not seize territory in the other hemisphere.

Senator MORRILL is not the only man whose opinion should carry weight and authority who holds this view. Soon after the question of the occupation of the Philippines was raised ex-Senator Edmunds pointed out that if the islands should be permanently held by the United States European governments might reasonably regard it as relieving them from any obligation to respect the wishes of this country in regard to the western part of the world. Ex-Secretary of State Olney a short time ago in a public address said that no doubt consistency requires that the conduct toward America which America expects of Europe should be observed by America toward Europe, and that such reciprocal conduct is required of us not only by consistency but by both principle and expediency. "The vital feature of the Monroe doctrine," said Mr. Olney, "is that no European power shall forcibly possess itself of American soil and forcibly control the political fortunes and destinies of its people. Assuredly America can have no difficulty in governing its behavior toward Europe on the same lines." We can not evade this by saying that Philippine territory is Asiatic and not European. Enough that it is another hemisphere. Besides, the acquisition of territory in the far East would as certainly involve the United States in European politics as though it were contiguous to Europe.

It is perfectly obvious that we shall deprecate the Monroe doctrine if we assume a concern in the disposition of territory in the Old World which we deny to European states in the New.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, the Omaha Daily World-Herald occupies the same position toward the Democratic party in the Middle West that the Omaha Bee occupies toward the Republican party. It is one of the oldest papers in the Missouri Valley, having a large circulation, and speaks with authority. I send to the desk and ask to have the Secretary read an editorial taken from that paper of June 19, 1898.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

THE LESSON OF EXPERIENCE.

The annexation of Hawaii, which now seems inevitable, will be the precursor of events the study of which may well appall the most ardent well-wishers of the Republic. It may be the beginning of a period of imperialism which the founders of the Republic avoided as they would a plague. It may mark an era of colonization, which means huge standing armies, constant turmoil, and political corruption even greater than that which disgraced the Republic during the Presidential campaign of 1896. After Hawaii, what? The Philippines and Puerto Rico? Shall it be alliances, offensive and defensive, with European nations? Will the people be called upon, as the people of Italy have been called upon, to bear the burdens of taxation to support a triple alliance? Can we hope to begin and carry out a policy of imperialism or colonization without becoming entangled in the meshes of foreign intrigue and foreign craft?

There is an attraction about the scheme of imperialism that is difficult to resist. It holds out inducements to the restless, the speculative, and the discontented. It parades in glittering raiment before the eyes of the unthinking, and appeals to the ambitions of those who are eager for conquest and spoils. The talk about the isolation of the United States is claptrap. For a century the United States have wielded a potent influence in the affairs of mankind. For a century their influence has been growing and widening, slowly but surely undermining the foundation of thrones and sowing the seeds of religious and political liberty in the breasts of the peoples of all lands and all climes. Their commerce and trade have slowly but surely been ramifying throughout the world, and all other nations have come to pay tribute to the genius of Americans. To talk of national isolation in order to bolster up a policy of imperialism is to cast a stain upon the achievements of one hundred years in American history. The law of force has never obtained in American history. The influence and power of the United States have been vested in example, not in mighty standing armies and overgrown navies.

Out of the roar of the beating surf of ambition that is dashing against the solid rocks upon which the superstructure of the Republic was raised by the fathers will come trouble. The founders of the Republic took warning by the experience of nations that have been born and which have died, and they founded a nation that they intended should be a beacon light to the oppressed of all lands—not an octopus that would reach out and gather in, whether or no, countries and races that would forever be a burden and an expense. The statesmanship of to-day that would overturn the wisdom and foresight of the statesmen of the early days of the Republic is a statesmanship to be feared and avoided. The statesmanship that vents itself in schemes based upon political corruption and which owes its force to the well-invested millions of fat-fried from corporations which demand returns upon their investments is not the statesmanship which laid the solid foundations of the Republic and erected in the wilderness of the Western world an altar upon which the watch fires of liberty should forever burn.

The situation confronting the United States to-day is fraught with danger. Radical and sudden changes from the basic principles of the Republic, made in the heat of war, can have but one result. That result will be turmoil, strife, bickering, and heartburnings. But out of them may come in God's good time the best for all. The Republic will live, but the new blood will be a reincarnation of the blood which stained the snows of Valley Forge, and not a reincarnation of the greed which is manifest in the councils of the Republic to-day. It is that manifest greed which is to-day plunging the nation upon the reefs which have wrecked many nations.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, Hon. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, understood the full force of the blow of annexation to the laboring interests of this country when he addressed a letter to the Hon. THOMAS B. REED, Speaker of the House of Representatives, which I send to the Secretary's desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,
Washington, D. C., June 11, 1898.

DEAR SIR: Inasmuch as the House of Representatives has now under consideration a bill for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States, and since there are a number of features involving principles affecting the working people of our country in the proposition to annex these islands, I beg to address you, and through you, the honorable the House of Representatives, as briefly as possible, summarizing a few of the objections which prompted the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor held at Nashville, Tenn., December 15-21, 1897, to protest against the annexation of Hawaii to the United States.

Of a population estimated at about 100,000, Hawaii contains about 50,000 contract slave laborers, made up as follows:

About 80 per cent Chinese and Japanese.
About 20 per cent Portuguese from Azore Islands and South Sea Islanders.
Some of the features of the contracts under which these 50,000 laborers work in Hawaii may be briefly stated here.

1. The terms of the contract usually run for seven years.
2. That the laborers have no right to change their employers or leave their employment.
3. That the contract to labor is specifically enforceable by the laws of Hawaii.

4. That any time a laborer may serve in prison for desertion from labor is added to the term of the life of the contract to labor.

The laborers are corralled in gangs of from twelve to sixteen, each gang having an overseer on horseback, armed with a whip, with which diligence to labor is enforced.

The overwhelming number of contract slave laborers in Hawaii is employed in the sugar industry, and the master employers have always insisted that the sugar industry can not be successfully conducted without this species of slave labor in these islands.

Though this point is contested, yet if Hawaii should become annexed to the United States, the status of the laborers may not be changed, and if the Sandwich Islands as a part of the United States are permitted to continue a species of labor repugnant to the free institutions of our country, there is no safeguard against the extension of the same species of contract slave labor to the sugar industry in Louisiana and the cotton fields of the Southern States.

It required more than twenty years of constant organization, agitation, and education to legislatively close the gates of our country to the Chinese. The wisdom of that legislation has been demonstrated, until there are few, if any, who now advocate its repeal.

The annexation of Hawaii would, with one stroke of the pen, obliterate that beneficent legislation and open wide our gates, which would threaten an inundation of Mongolians to overwhelm the free laborers of our country.

The annexation of Hawaii to the United States would be the admission of a slave State side by side with the free States of America; and, in the language of the statesmen of our own and all other countries, "We can not be part free and part slaves; we will have to be either all free or all slaves."

Though the number in Hawaii is small in comparison to the people of the United States, yet the dangers and the possibilities are such as to make the workers apprehensive.

In the war in which the people of our country are engaged the workers are gladly volunteering their lives and their all upon the altar of the honor and the interests of our country; but we submit that in the effort to make Cuba free and independent we should not hazard the loss of our own liberty.

The foregoing is submitted in the name and by the authority of the American Federation of Labor.

Very respectfully,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Gompers saw with very clear vision the effect of a policy of annexation and aggrandizement. He readily understood, as every man will understand, that the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, with an ignorant and brutal population of about 115,000, principally Chinese and Japanese coolies and natives, would lead to the annexation of the Philippine Islands, Cuba, Puerto Rico, and all the possessions that may be lost to Spain during the present war, and that would mean the sudden precipitation into our population of about 15,000,000 undesirable people.

What, under such circumstances, becomes of the policy adopted by Congress of excluding the Mongolians from this hemisphere? We will open the doors so that they can never again be closed; and it does not require a stretch of imagination to foresee the time when the United States will be overrun, from New York to San Francisco, with millions of Malays and other undesirable classes, who can not be excluded. When this time does come, Mr. President, as I fear it will come, as I feel almost certain it will come, if this policy is to be pursued, there can be but one result, and that will be the complete overturning of the Government of the United States. It will pass from a Republic, which was framed by the founders, into an oligarchy, if not into absolute monarchy itself. Those of us who have been intrusted by sovereign States to represent our people in this Chamber can not lightly contemplate consequences of that kind. We must understand that a fearful responsibility rests on us, and that if the institutions of the Government shall be overturned as the result of this policy, the anathemas and the curses of future generations will rest upon us, as they ought.

Mr. Gompers can foresee the consequences to the labor interests of this country, just as Mr. Herbert Myrick, editor of the American Agriculturist and several other agricultural journals in the United States, foresees the consequences to the agriculturists of the country. Mr. Myrick is president of the Orange Judd Company, editor of the American Agriculturist, of New York, editor of the Orange Judd Farmer, of Chicago, editor of the New England Homestead, of Springfield, Mass., and in a recent letter to Hon. J. W. WADSWORTH, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, Mr. Myrick states his views, which I will ask the Secretary to read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Hon. J. W. WADSWORTH,
Chairman House Committee on Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In the name of the farmers of America, nearly 1,000,000 of whom are our clients, we solemnly protest against the policy of colonization which it is proposed to inaugurate by annexing Hawaii. That policy would at once expose us to embroilment with other nations. It would vastly magnify the power and expense of our Army and Navy. It would perpetuate increased taxes. It would inaugurate an era of corruption in our foreign possessions, a debasement of the blood, that could not fail to in time affect the physical and mental stamina of our people at home. It would be un-American, unwise, unconstitutional, and in results unworthy of the effort.

On still higher grounds a colonial policy is objectionable. It would degenerate the holiest war ever waged for humanity into a campaign of conquest. This would lower the United States before the world, but its moral effect upon our own people would be still worse. Again, the more our people are led to indorse the policy of expansion, the more will domestic interests be neglected. Under such a policy no expense will be spared on Army and Navy, but how about those home interests that vitally concern everybody every day? Better roads and improved waterways, more mails and free delivery, a better banking system, better education, reform of existing abuses, protection against monopoly and corporate extortion—all these and many other things will be neglected. Monopoly in various forms and other enemies of social progress would hold high carnival at home, while national and State legislatures were concerned about our colonies abroad.

It will be bad for the American farmer should Uncle Sam ever decide to embark upon an era of "imperial colonization." The cool labor of these tropical colonies, directed by capable overseers, and their products manipulated by world-wide trusts, would close up every beet-sugar proposition and cane-sugar mill in the United States. The growing and manufacture of smoking tobacco and cigars, one of the large interests of the United States, would be annihilated, and the heavy leaf industry also injured. Rice, cotton, hemp, and all fiber crops would be so cheaply produced and worked in the East and West Indies as to sound the death knell of these industries in the United States, or perpetuate the low prices which have for a year past brought only disaster to the cotton planter, factor, manufacturer, or operative. Please bring this promptly to official attention of the House before vote is taken. Respectfully submitted in the farmers' behalf.

HERBERT MYRICK,
President Orange Judd Company,
Editor American Agriculturist, of New York,
Editor Orange Judd Farmer, of Chicago,
Editor New England Homestead, of Springfield.

Mr. ALLEN. Since the joint resolution has been before Congress there has been held in the city of Boston, Mass., a meeting of very distinguished citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to protest against the wisdom and policy of annexation. I do not recall exactly the date of the meeting, but it was held within a few weeks. I send to the desk and ask to have read the proceedings of the meeting.

The Secretary read as follows:

In opening the meeting Mr. Bradford said:

"One hundred years ago our ancestors established that Constitution which Mr. Gladstone has pronounced to be one of the most wonderful political instruments which ever sprang from the brain of man. Under it we have enjoyed a century of such prosperity as has hardly ever fallen to the lot of a nation. It has been a center of attraction to the eyes of all the world, monarchy and aristocracy regarding it with fear and distrust, the nations with hope and rejoicing. A generation has elapsed since the country, by a violent effort, threw off the disease of slavery, which it had been confidently predicted would destroy the Union. The Union, on the contrary, came out stronger and more prosperous than ever before.

"No such organization of democracy had ever been seen in the world. The strain upon it had become tremendous. The one thing that seemed fatal to our Government was foreign war, swamping all domestic questions with military excitement. The future welfare of 70,000,000 people and of institutions on which the fate of the world might be said to depend should not be sacrificed for the uncertain relief of 1,000,000 of a different race and under a different government.

"The war exists, however, and it is the duty of every citizen to support the Government. It may be asked, why talk about peace when the war has hardly begun? There can be no doubt that the sole motive of the war was not humanity. Private interests seeking after gain, politicians striving to keep themselves in power, and imaginations thirsting after military and naval glory had a large share.

"What of the future? The fourth of the resolutions which Congress passed in the small hours of the morning of April 19 expressly renounced all desire or intention of retaining possession of Cuba. To go back on that would bring upon us the scorn and contempt of the world. It would seem absurd to retain Puerto Rico without Cuba. If we do either, Spain will have provided, in retaliation for the harm we may do her, a revenge as bitter as even a Spanish heart can desire. But that is a trifle compared with the Philippine Islands. We are dispatching a considerable army to take possession, which will need to be multiplied many times before we complete it. The forces at Washington are working hard under the lead, it is reported, of the junior Senator from Massachusetts to enforce the permanence of that possession.

"When a war with Spain was wanted, 'commercialism' was hooted at and despised. Now that the Philippines are wanted, the advantages to commerce are worked for more than they are worth. Is Congress so successful in the management of our domestic affairs that we can afford to burden it with the government of 10,000,000 of Orientals on the other side of the world? It seems certain that those Eastern seas are to become a gigantic arena of strife for the nations of Europe and Asia. When Germany took Alsace and Lorraine in 1870, it meant that she should remain armed to the teeth for two hundred years to come. They have already cost many times more than they are worth from the material, not to mention the moral, side. With these islands we must keep our coast fortified from Oregon to New Brunswick, at a cost which the imagination reels to contemplate. We must have by the hundreds those marine monsters, the first cost of each of which would keep the poor of a great city in comfort for a year. We must have an immense standing army. And so to a population, bowed down with debt and taxes beyond what any nation has ever felt, would come that last of human miseries, an enforced military conscription.

"The clergy of this country have shown of late a painfully defective sense of proportion. For the doubtful chance of raising the condition of some no doubt very wretched people, they are willing to risk infinite disaster to the people of the United States.

"In the name of the Pilgrims who planted at Plymouth the seeds of civil and religious liberty; in the name of Washington, who, after leading us through the war of independence and seeing the Constitution launched in full glory, left us that noble legacy of warning which has never had a deeper meaning than to-day; in the name of the martyred Lincoln, who sealed with his blood the work he has done; in the name of humanity, whose fate is bound up with our institutions, I appeal to the people of Massachusetts to protest against this rush of reckless and unbridled ambition."

Mr. Bradford read a telegram from Clarence Fiske, saying that a death would prevent John Fiske, of Harvard, from being present.

These resolutions were then read:

"Resolved, That a war begun as an 'unselfish endeavor to fulfill a duty to humanity by ending' the unhappy situation in Cuba must not be perverted into a war of conquest;

"That any annexation of territory as a result of this war would be a violation of the national faith, pledged in the joint resolution of Congress, which declared that the United States disclaimed any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over Cuba except for the pacification thereof, a disclaimer which was intended to mean that this country had no selfish purpose in making war, and which, in spirit, applies to every other possession of Spain;

"That the mission of the United States is to help the world by an example of successful self-government, and that to abandon the principles and the policy under which we have prospered and embraced the doctrines and practices now called imperial, is to enter the path which, with other great republics, has ended in the downfall of free institutions; and

"That our first duty is to cure the evils in our own country, the corrupt government, of which New York and Pennsylvania afford only conspicuous examples, the disturbed relations between labor and capital, our disordered currency, our unjust system of taxation, the debasing influence of money at elections and on legislation, and the use of offices as spoils; and when we have shown that we can protect the rights of men within our own borders like the colored race at the South and the Indians in the West, and that we can govern great cities like New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago, it will be time to consider whether we can wisely invite distant populations of alien race and language and of traditions unlike our own to become our subjects and accept our rule or our fellow-citizens and take part in governing us."

The Rev. Charles G. Ames, the next speaker, said:

"I desire to be just and would gladly be generous to the motives of all of my countrymen. I should like to believe that the mass cherish the spirit of the Roman emperor who said he was ready to hear any man who had anything to say for the good of the State.

"Imagination has its uses, but also its abuses. To some of us it presents two pictures of a possible future. It is a choice between becoming a world power, with a mighty mission for good, and one with a mighty mission for evil. To adopt the military rôle is to make ourselves one more of the oppressors of mankind.

"Not a man among us, I think, wishes that the island populations may become our fellow-citizens. If we are not to add to the forces of our republican institutions by the acquisition of new populations, what motive have we? The greed for land, the lust for domination, the interests of trade, or simply a base for future military operations? What does that mean? Great heavens! Has it come to this, that for the sake of placing ourselves in a position to carry on future wars we sacrifice the principles on which the Republic was founded?

"The military spirit and military caste are nourished by sucking the blood of the people, and they poison the blood of free institutions. We are asked to follow the example for four hundred years of the nations of Christendom, the course the powers are following in taking portions of Asia and Africa and the islands of the sea. If we take the Philippines, we do it in precisely the same way as Spain took them.

"In principle we give up the republic. Whenever we undertake to govern other peoples as our subjects, we run a serious risk of being governed at home by the same methods.

"I think our system will stand any kind of strain so long as it is sound at the center. But in the military system power passes down hill from the many to the few. Once lost, we do not acquire it again except through another century of struggling."

Moorfield Storey made a thoughtful speech, saying:

"We are not here to oppose the war or to throw any obstacle in the way of its speedy and successful termination. We are here to deal with a far graver issue—to insist that a war begun in the cause of humanity shall not be turned into a war for empire; that an attempt to win for Cubans the right to govern themselves shall not be made an excuse for extending our sway over alien people without their consent.

"The fundamental principles of our Government are at stake. 'Fourscore and ten years ago,' said Lincoln at Gettysburg, 'our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal,' and no utterance of man has been more cordially approved by us all than the immortal speech which begins thus. When that nation was born our fathers declared, as the very breath of the infant's nostrils, that 'governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed,' and 'whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it and to institute new government.'

"Now a brilliant victory over a hostile fleet has turned our heads. Men propose to add Puerto Rico, the Philippine Islands, the Ladrões, the Canaries, and every other colony of Spain to our territories, and to embark in a career of foreign conquest. It is even suggested that we seize the Hawaiian Islands, a friendly state, as a war measure.

"No graver danger ever confronted us. Why should Cuba have a right to freedom and self-government and the millions in the Philippine Islands be denied the same right? It is said that the people of these islands are unfit for self-government. Are the people of Puerto Rico less fit than those of Cuba, or are the citizens of Manila inferior to those of Santiago? Are either less fit than were the slaves to whom we gave the ballot thirty years ago? But it is said, 'We need indemnity!' Can we exact our expenses from the enslaved people whom we interfered to help? Is Puerto Rico more indebted to us than Cuba?

"We not only abandon the boasted Monroe doctrine; we not only disregard that wise policy of nonintervention in European troubles which Washington preached and which until now we have followed; we become a military power, burdened with a standing army and an enormous navy, threatened with complications thousands of miles away and exposed to constant apprehension. We take up the burden which is crushing Europe.

"Our taxation must increase, our currency become more disordered, and, worse than all, the corruption which threatens us can not fail to spread. When we undertake to govern subject people separated from us by half the world, let us remember how we despoiled the Indians and how impossible it has been to keep that service pure. Such a system means a great increase of wealth and fresh fields for corruption. It means not only imperialism abroad, but imperialism at home. For an imperial system the concentrated power of an emperor is essential. Let us once govern any considerable body of men without their consent and it is but a question of time how soon this Republic shares the fate of Rome."

George E. McNeill, speaking for the laboring interests, said:

"As loyal citizens we pledge our lives, fortunes, and honor to the principles and institutions bequeathed us.

"The change proposed by our imperialist partisans will necessitate a change in our own form of government. It is impossible to control those colonies otherwise. Cheap labor from China necessitates prohibition, and now it is proposed to bring in hundreds of thousands not by immigration or naturalization, but by annexation.

"The American Federation of Labor, the most conservative and conserving force in the Republic to-day, met at Nashville in December and unanimously adopted resolutions against the annexation of Hawaii. I believe I express the minds of a great majority of unionists when I protest against any and every system of imperial government.

"This policy means to the wage workers a large standing army. Are there more liberty, higher wages, shorter hours, and better conditions in Germany, Austria, Italy, and France because of their standing armies? It means the reduction of wages and increased cost of living. Low wages mean low civilization. Annexation means an increase in officeholders; the grabbing of power by political parties; the strengthening of the speculative industrial monstrosities that are to-day devouring enterprise; the turning the attention of the Government from home problems.

"I have no fear of the result. I am a Democrat of the Sam Adams school who believes in the American people, and when the glamour of war has ceased they will recall the great deeds and great men of the past."

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, the press of the country has spoken quite freely on the subject of annexation and in opposition to it. I send to the desk and ask to have read extracts from the editorial columns of the various papers referred to.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I desire to inquire who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KYLE in the chair). The Secretary is reading matter sent to the desk by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] to be read.

Mr. ALLEN. The senior Senator from Nebraska has the floor.

Mr. MASON. May I be permitted to interrupt you for one moment?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I promised the Senate that I would devote one or two minutes each day, being as brief as possible, in calling the attention of the Senate and the people of the country to the fossilized debating society now transacting business under the name and style of the United States Senate, the only parliamentary body in the world where the minority is the boss, the only parliamentary body in the world where the majority can not govern, the only body in the world where there is no such thing as an ending of eternal talk.

I call attention again at this particular time to the reason. Although the country may express itself with practical unanimity upon any given question, and although the House of Representatives may unanimously pass a given proposition, yet if there be a live and energetic minority in this body they can actually stop the transaction of public business by this eternal talk and reading clippings from newspapers, as the distinguished Senator has done, sending them to the Clerk's desk to be read.

It is known as the kid-glove filibuster. The gentleman engaged in it, instead of having the frankness that ought to characterize every man in this business, says: "I am not filibustering. I simply wish to be heard for a year or two upon this question." I wish the Senate and the people to understand, if there are any of them who do not understand, that it is known as a filibuster and is actually a filibuster: that it means that the minority of this body do not intend that the majority of the body shall transact the business of the Government.

In this connection, I wish to say that I do not blame the Senator who now has the floor, who has kindly yielded me a moment of his time, his time being very precious. Under the rules, having once received the floor, he can only talk up to the last moment of the time when his term of service expires. I think if I had not interrupted him he might have gone on until the 4th of March, 1903. I am not blaming him or scolding him. I am simply calling attention to the fact that the very distinguished Senators who are now asking us to stay here and vote are the very men who are to blame for this rule. For years and years it has been suggested that there ought to be a time in a representative body when we can vote, and the very men who are now complaining of this kid-glove filibuster are the men who when the time comes will vote against changing the rule. The reason is that they themselves are sometimes in the minority and they want to control the business of this Government.

Oh, but some of my friends say there comes a time when the minority has done a great thing for the people by opening long discussions, and has frequently prevented the passage of unwise legislation. Then, Mr. President, we ought to change our form of government and make it a government of minorities and not a government of majorities.

Everything is supposed to be governed by the majority of this country. When election day comes we have had our time to prepare ourselves to vote. We go and vote, and the majority settles the question for that time. In legislative bodies everywhere else except here the majority has the rule. Even in our court of last resort, the Supreme Court of the United States, a majority opinion makes the law; and a majority opinion of next year wipes off the decisions and opinions of the majority of last year. It will not do to say to the people of this country that this is the only body where the minority is wiser and more to be trusted with the affairs of the Government than the majority.

Mr. President, I have taken nearly two minutes of the valuable time that ought to have been given. I am much obliged to the Senator from Nebraska. I am sorry to have interrupted the interesting reading that now fills the RECORD. But I call his attention, and the attention of the people, and the attention of the Senate, to the fact that you can not blindfold the people upon this question much longer. State and national conventions will demand of the people who come here and draw the people's salary that they shall amend the rules so that the Government's business can be transacted, and that the majority in the Senate, like the majority of the people, shall dictate the policy of the Government of the United States.

Mr. DANIEL rose.

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, I do not perceive that gentlemen are shortening this debate by interjecting other important subjects in the course of it. For my own part, I have said nothing since the debate commenced. I have not felt called upon to utter those views which have been so much better expressed by other gentlemen.

But it seems to me, sir, that the honorable Senator from Illinois does not truly reflect in his remarks the character of this body nor the character of this Government. He speaks of this body as the only one in the world in which the majority does not rule.

He might have said that our Government of the United States itself is nearly the only one in the world in which the majority does not rule. But if that be true, it is because the Constitution, evolved out of the wisdom of ages, made it so.

We have often had Presidents of the United States elected by a minority of the people of the United States. The distinguished President of the United States who came from the State now so ably represented by the Senator from Illinois was elected to that great office by a minority of the people of the United States, and yet, sir, he had just as honorable and just as clear a title to that office as any other President who ever ruled this nation. The last President elected in the United States representing the party of which the Senator from Illinois is so distinguished a member, saving the President who is now at the head of the Government, was elected by a minority of the people of the United States, and yet I never heard, either upon this floor or anywhere else, a complaint from any member of that party that their President was chosen by a minority of the people.

The Constitution made this great fabric of government to protect minorities. The reason why our Government has been so successful, rising to the expectations and to the hopes of its founders, is because the right of a single individual, however humble, is consecrated and defended by law, and the rights of minorities are protected by law.

In the conduct of our affairs with foreign nations this is created by the Constitution a body in which a minority is forbidden to rule. It requires two-thirds of this body to make a treaty with any foreign nation. Why? Because we have a complicated form of government, imperium in imperio, e pluribus unum, one composed of many, and it was the judgment of the framers of the Constitution that that great route step march of government rather than the mathematical abstractions of uniformity would succeed in the long run in having the wise introducing the wisest results.

I do not think, Mr. President, if I may be permitted to express an opinion, that the minority of this body have been filibustering or are now filibustering upon this question of Hawaiian annexation. I do not think it is filibustering for gentlemen to state their own views deliberately, fully, and to lay before the Senate by reading the deliberate views of eminent publicists who are studying this question.

This is a question of the first dignity. It is proposed to introduce a new member into the great family of the American people. It is a step which, once taken, can never or will never be recalled. What are the few days or the few hours which we spend here in debate compared to that great, boundless future that lies before us? And what necessity, Mr. President, is there for anyone to desire to curtail the privileges of his colleague, representing a State, standing for no little community, but standing for the dignity and the welfare and the permanent fortune of a great Commonwealth, from taking such time as he may think fit to lay his views before the public in the United States? What is a month, what are two months, what are six months, in the life of a great nation dedicated to immortality, as we fain would hope, but a triviality compared to the momentous, far-reaching question which we have before us?

I do not want to see filibustering in this body, Mr. President, but I do want to see the Senate, whenever it pleases, exercise the freest, fullest, unmeasured right of debate. I have never within the ten or twelve years I have had the honor to be an humble member of this great body seen any measure defeated that in another year all were not glad that it was defeated by the efforts of a minority. If it is the deliberate and determined sense of the Senate of the United States to annex the Hawaiian Islands to this Government, no one is going to prevent it from doing it. It may be that when others are speaking time may hang heavily upon our hands occasionally, but the gentleman who is inconvenienced to-day by the exercise of that great privilege on the part of another may be the one to-morrow who will be under pressure and urgency of circumstance which may make him desire the same liberty in himself.

I believe that the free debate in the Senate of the United States is the very crowning glory of this great institution. There is no privilege of liberty that some man somewhere at some time will not abuse. There is no gift of Providence or of nature that may not be abused. But there is none which this great body has preserved to itself, whether it may have been abused at one time or another, which is so essential, in my judgment, to the preservation of its utility to all the people of this country and to all of the States which its members so honorably represent. We should remember that as populations increase, as great interests are magnified, there is less and less opportunity for the complaints of the great mass of the people to be fully heard. The mass of business, the emergency for action, crowd out every opportunity of hearing the great mass of minor matters, and sometimes many important matters, which, were they heard, would have that response made to them which wisdom and good judgment would suggest.

The legislatures of the world are crowded with business. The House of Representatives is suffocated and drowned with the enormity of its business. But it has come to pass (I am not going into the question how) that this single body, composed of less than 100 members, is the only body representing the whole United States and legislating for the destinies of 75,000,000 people in which they are assured that they may have some one to state freely the views of his own people at length upon any question.

Sympathizing with the honorable Senator from Illinois in many of his views, I have been compelled to dissent from those which he has stated this morning; and it is my belief, Mr. President, that when that honorable Senator has had larger experience in this body, when he has shared in it the vicissitudes of fortune which must come to all who are long members here, he will modify his views, and in the not distant future I should not be at all surprised to hear him announce that his experience in affairs here had made him a convert to that doctrine which the Senate for over a hundred years has jealously guarded, and which it has up to this time preserved, of absolute free debate.

It is one hundred and twenty-two years to-day, Mr. President, since we became a free and independent people. It is over one hundred years since this body has fulfilled its functions as a legislative, as an executive, and as a treaty-making body on the part of the United States, and I venture to say that the Senator from Illinois can not to-day, in reviewing that long track of constitutional history, point to a single case in which the people of this country have been injured, in which wise and healthful legislation was defeated, or in which any great inconvenience was suffered by the preservation here of absolutely free debate. It has made the Senate a body, Mr. President, the best fitted to guard the rights, the liberties, and the fortunes of the American people that the wit of man could possibly devise. It is wise to stand in the ancient way unless some wrong appears which can not be corrected by standing in the ancient way. No such wrong has appeared.

I do not believe that the honorable gentlemen who are taking part so actively in this debate have abused their privileges here. They are speaking upon a subject in which their people and they themselves have great concern and deep conviction. There is only one man here for a million constituents, and so small a mouthpiece, so tremendous a volume of force, of public thought, and feeling ought not to be "cabined, cribbed, confined," and overrun or overwhelmed in the exercise of what he thinks to be his proper action by the mere transient inconvenience of one or of many.

I hope, Mr. President, that this debate may go on until every gentleman in this Chamber who desires to speak has had full and fair opportunity to do so, and each man being his own judge, as he ought to be, and each man deferring to the judgment and to the convenience of others, as he ought to defer, I have no doubt then a vote will be taken, and that in the fullness of time that will happen which to those who are conducting it may seem good, but the minority ought not to be prodded here, it ought not to be taunted here, it ought to have its rights fairly and fully recognized here, as I have no doubt they will be; and we should wait with patience upon an event so vast, so comprehensive, so far-reaching—upon an event which, if it be a mistake, can not be undone.

Mr. MASON. May I interrupt the Senator a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Virginia fully understands that I have no desire to override the minority. Under the amendments to the rules which have been suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts and under every suggestion which I have had the honor of making, we have contemplated the giving to each Senator from one to two hours' debate, or longer if he desires, in which to make a few feeble remarks on the side of the question in which he shall be interested.

But suppose the Senator's suggestion is correct that the Senate is founded upon the principle that the minority, and not the majority, should govern; suppose that in the coming election, when there are two candidates in the field and a time is fixed for voting, the people who fear they can not carry the election should ask to have six months longer in which to debate the silver question or the tariff question, the whole theory of the Government being that there must come a time when the people shall somehow express themselves and determine the questions before them.

The suggestion made by the learned Senator that Presidents are elected by minorities is not correct. If it is a minority of individual electors, yes; but it is a majority of the electoral college that controls the choice of President according to the Constitution. The wisdom of that has been sometimes questioned by very wise men and very learned and patriotic men. So that the suggestion is not at all germane to this discussion.

I say again and again you can not point to any legislative body in the world except this body where, after they have given the minority a fair chance to express themselves, a majority may not have a vote.

The Senator says that in the fullness of time we are to have a vote upon this question. It may be in the fullness of time, but the suspicion dwells in my mind that it will be in the dawning of eternity. I have no suggestion or hope or expectation of ever having a vote upon this question under the present rules. The minority do not intend that we shall have a vote, and the majority do not intend that we shall adjourn. We are in that beautiful situation. We are in a position where all the world sees that we are endeavoring to transact public business and are absolutely unable to do so.

I have no desire in the suggestion I make to cut off debate, except to provide that there must come a time under our rules, after each Senator has expressed himself for or against a measure, that we shall have a vote. Under the present rules he may take his turn and express himself again and again, and the individual Senator, according to the suggestion of the learned Senator who has just taken his seat, must be the judge as to whether he is transgressing the rules of propriety, whether he is doing the thing he ought not to do. That is not the rule in any other deliberative body in the world. The rule should be personal liberty, not license; personal rights, but not the right to intrude your opinions at such length and with such repetition as shall delay the transaction of public business.

But when you speak about prodding the minority, I am not. I rather like filibustering. I respect men who filibuster, but I like to have them say so. I am not saying that the Senator is indulging in anything of that kind.

Mr. ALLEN. What would the Senator call a filibuster?

Mr. MASON. Well, I have been somewhat in the business myself.

Mr. ALLEN. I have no doubt of it.

Mr. MASON. It is when we set our mouths going and leave them a week or two without any intellectual or physical exercise. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Illinois is certainly an expert in that line.

Mr. MASON. Certainly; and I do not deny it. I have filibustered, and I have led a filibuster; but I am not especially proud of it. But when I lead a filibuster in this Senate, I shall announce that it is a filibuster, so that there will be no misunderstanding between me and my colleagues. I am not blaming the Senator. I am simply saying that the very men who are finding fault with you are the very men who will not give us a chance to amend the rules so that the majority can transact business.

Mr. ALLEN. I think I will cut off this debate.

Mr. MASON. You need not so far as I am concerned, for I have finished. I am very much obliged to the Senator, however.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I regret that I should have given way for the interjection of a discussion which has no relation whatever to the subject before the Senate; but I may be permitted to say to the Senator from Illinois—I trust without any offense to him—that from his alignment on this question I should think six or eight months' debate were absolutely necessary.

Mr. MASON. For what?

Mr. ALLEN. To convince the Senator from Illinois of the error of his ways.

Mr. MASON. You are entitled to six or eight months. There is nothing to stop you.

Mr. ALLEN. I came into this Chamber with quite as much effervescence and determination to change the rules as did the Senator from Illinois. I introduced a proposed amendment to the rules which would cut off debate. I had been used all my life to transacting business rapidly, and I could not for the first year and a half or two years of my stay here understand why so much time was taken in the consideration of public questions. But I never heard from my proposed amendment to the rules, and the Senator from Illinois has never heard from his, and he never will hear from it. It is quite likely the rules of the Senate will go on for the next hundred years as they have for the last one hundred and eight or one hundred and ten years, without any particular change, and the public business will be transacted in a respectable and orderly and timely manner.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I wish to state the history of the rule of the Senate now in question. The Senate, like the House of Representatives, had both the previous question and the main question, similar parliamentary overtures, until the year 1806. In the year 1806, after full debate upon the merits, and especially upon the parliamentary origin of the cloture, and with direct reference to the transaction of what is called the business of the Senate—which is primarily that of deliberation, not passing bills, not enacting laws—they abolished the previous question in the Senate, while at the same time it was retained in the House of Representatives.

Since the year 1806 we have had in the Senate no previous question and no method of cloture. We could not have under the rule. The rule expressed the will of the majority. It has now since 1806. It is the will of the majority which prevents the cloture; it is the will of the majority to which we defer in obeying the rule; it is the will of the majority which preserves in this body the last refuge of a minority and, it may be, the last refuge of political liberty of debate in the world. Until the rule is changed it is the will of the majority and as such governs this body.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] takes his seat, with the permission of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], I will say that we are entitled now to a membership in this body of ninety. Will the Senator from Indiana be kind enough to state for my personal information what the membership of this body was in 1806, when that rule was adopted?

Mr. TURPIE. The membership of the body in 1806 was 26, I think.

Mr. GALLINGER. Does not the Senator think that rules which were applicable to a body of 26 may be very inapplicable to a body of 90?

Mr. TURPIE. Not at all. I will ask the honorable Senator from New Hampshire to note that the rule was adopted after deliberate debate and after an examination of the parliamentary laws extant at that time, and especially the precedents of the Roman senate, to which I have alluded. The Roman senate, which resembled this body more than any other that ever existed, never had a cloture, always resisted the cloture, and when Cato the Younger rose and proceeded evidently, in the language of the reporter, to waste the night in useless debate, and the consul, Julius Caesar—a military character of whom Senators have doubtless heard—sitting in the chair, anxious for the passage of the bill pending before the senate, ordered his arrest, the whole senate rose to their feet and offered to go to prison with him rather than to abandon a rule against cloture, rather than to limit the freedom of debate which had for centuries prevailed in that body. The consul rescinded his order and the debate proceeded.

Every year since 1806, when we had 30 members, when we had 40 members, when we had 50 members, up to the last admission of the latest State and the last additional membership to this body, that rule has prevailed; that rule has received the approval of the majority; that rule is yet the will of the majority; and the 90 members who now compose this body in that rule represent the will and obey the will of the majority in observing it; and a comparison of numbers between the numbers of the Senate in 1806 and the numbers of the Senate in 1898 is no argument, not even the remotest argument, against the rule confirmed now by ninety years of usage and assent.

Mr. GALLINGER. With the permission of the Senator from Nebraska—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, I do.

Mr. DANIEL. As a little matter of history, I want to ask my honorable friend from Indiana if there were not 16 States in the Union in 1806 and 32 members in the Senate?

Mr. TURPIE. That may be; I do not recollect.

Mr. DANIEL. There were 16 States. Vermont, Kentucky, and Tennessee had then been admitted into the Union.

Mr. TURPIE. I think the Senator is right. There were 32 members of the Senate at that time.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have no disposition to engage in a discussion which is not germane or to prolong this question as to the rules. I happen to be one of those who, after a service of seven years—a very short service, of course—have not changed my mind from the views I held the first day I came here; and that is, that these rules ought to be changed, and that we ought to have the power to close debate at some time in this body. I should be in favor of a very liberal rule, not, however, so stringent a rule as prevails in most other legislative bodies.

Mr. President, I do not know why we should have rules here that allow us to debate a question forever. For instance, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] has talked about three days, and he has informed us that he is going to talk again some time in the future on this question. My friend the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFEY], who always talks entertainingly and well, has printed in the RECORD of this morning forty-five solid pages, most of it in very small type, which would make about 180 pages of an ordinary book, and I understand he is going to talk again and enlighten us further on this subject.

I am not sure that we have not rules enough now to accomplish the purpose of limiting debate. I turn to Jefferson's Manual, which is a portion of the rules of this body, and I find on page 91 the following:

No one is to speak impertinently or beside the question, superfluous, or tediously.

Mr. President, if that rule were invoked and put in force in this body, we would not have these long, tiresome, tedious debates, much of which has no more reference to the question under discussion than if a Senator should read the almanac of last year.

Mr. LINDSAY. I will ask the Senator whether he has heard those debates which he has now pronounced tedious, uninteresting, and dull, or whether he has deserted the Senate Chamber to avoid hearing them?

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Kentucky evidently has not been looking in this direction. I have been a pretty punctual attendant.

I turn to page 108 of Jefferson's Manual, and I find:

A member has not a right to read a paper in his place, if it be objected to, without leave of the House. But this rigor is never exercised but where there is an intentional or gross abuse of the time and patience of the House.

Furthermore, Jefferson says:

A member has not a right even to read his own speech, committed to writing, without leave. This is also to prevent an abuse of time, and therefore is not refused but where that is intended.

That is, where an abuse of time is intended. I am not sure, as I said before, that we have not rules enough now if they were invoked and put in force; but inasmuch as they never are put in force, I stand, after a service of seven years, where I stood after a service of seven days, in favor of amending these rules. I have sent to the Committee on Rules about ten amendments, and I presume those amendments are pigeonholed in that committee somewhere. They have not been reported favorably or unfavorably, and I feel like entering, as I have done once or twice before, a protest against a committee doing business in that way. I believe they ought to report back proposed amendments either favorably or unfavorably, and let the Senate act upon them.

I trust that in the near future, not, of course, during this debate—I hope this debate will end some time; that is my hope and faint belief—I hope in the future, perhaps during the next Congress, we may have an opportunity to vote upon an amendment to these rules. Of course the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] will vote against it, as will the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], but the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] and I will vote for a new code of rules in some respects, and we will see what the majority of the Senate believe about this question; whether they think it is wise to continue under this code of rules, which has existed since 1806, when we had a small Senate, and put in the hands of six or eight men the power to keep fifty men—I do not say that that is the proportion on this question, but it might be—the power to keep fifty men here for six months listening to a debate that, to some of us certainly, is tedious and much of it with no relevancy whatever to the question that is under discussion.

I thank the Senator from Nebraska for giving me an opportunity to say this much.

Mr. TURPIE. With the courtesy of the honorable Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], I wish to correct a statement made in my remarks in reference to the number of Senators in 1806. There were 32 members at the time when the previous question was abolished in the Senate, and the proportion of the minority to the majority might have been as great as or even greater than the one now existing here or at any other time when there was an overtone pending for action.

I wish to allude to one great formative reason for the abolishment of the previous question in this body. Not only then was it seriously debated, but I think all experience has approved of the action of its abolishment, for it will be recollected that then the cloture was a thing very much unknown. It did not prevail in the House of Commons until very recently; it did not prevail in the Chamber of Deputies until recent years. The cloture as established, with all its inhibitions and accompaniments—they are very delicate and very difficult—amounts substantially almost to our own rule—unlimited freedom of debate.

But the consideration here in 1806 was with reference to the duties of the position which your honor [Mr. KYLE in the chair] is now occupying. I am glad the regular occupant of the chair is not now in it, the Vice-President of the United States, who, by the Constitution, becomes the Presiding Officer of this body. So long as unlimited debate is allowed, he has no possible temptation to be otherwise than fair in recognition and just in distribution of the time and opportunity of debate.

On the contrary, his own repute, his own character as an officer, his historic reputation as a presiding officer of the Senate and as Vice-President of the United States, is dependent upon the entire fairness and disinterestedness with which he discharges the functions of the Chair. But the moment, under whatever possible conditions, you make a cloture, the moment you establish a limitation, the moment you cut off the time, the moment you prohibit debate in advance, the Chair is clothed with an insurmountable temptation to recognize those who are in favor of the measure which he may personally favor—and he always has an opinion—and not to recognize Senators upon the floor who are opposed to his opinion.

No possible calamity could be greater to the character or the history of this body than to expose the Presiding Officer to a temptation of that character. He would in a moment become not such as the Speaker of the House should be, but such as a Speaker of the House has been within the last three or four years, by the action of the majority there—without reference to the personality of the gentleman now occupying that chair—he would in a moment become the arbiter, the supreme controller of the time of debate, of the debate, its purposes and its objects, in this Chamber.

That, sir, is more of an encroachment upon liberty, it is more of an invasion of the freedom of debate, it is more of a destruction of the rights of the sovereign representatives in this body, representatives of sovereign States, than any other possible action, and would involve, in my judgment, more of disparagement to the dignity, to the historic repute, and to the memorable traditions of the Senate than any benefit which could possibly be derived from a modification of the existing rules.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, we learn in this world by experience, and I have learned a lesson this afternoon by experience by submitting to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] to interject an expression in the midst of my remarks having no reference whatsoever to the question before the Senate. I shall profit in the future by my experience.

Just a word, Mr. President, as respects the rule, and then I will resume the general course of my remarks. I would not now change those rules if I had it in my power. As I said, I was in favor of the change when I first came here, but I have seen more vicious legislation killed by an active minority than I have seen good legislation thwarted by it. In fact, I have never known a measure that could be said to be of any benefit to the public which did not pass eventually if a majority was in favor of it.

I do not understand how the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from New Hampshire and other Senators assume that there is a majority here in favor of this unconstitutional proceeding. There is nothing here to warrant an assumption of that kind or its announcement. There is nothing here that warrants my honorable friend the Senator from Illinois standing on this floor and waving his hands and gesticulating ferociously against some of us on this side and saying we are obstructing the majority. The Senator from Illinois does not know anything about the majority, nor do I. It is a mere matter of assumption. For my amiable friend the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to protest against prolix and tiresome and tedious speeches—I take it having special reference to the speech I am now making—

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, no; not at all.

Mr. ALLEN. Is something rather refreshing in the light of what transpired in 1894, when we were considering what is known as the Wilson tariff bill. Mr. President, it is known in this Chamber that a speech was prepared for that bill, all of which has never yet been delivered. I do not know but that I shall negotiate for what remains of it to use during this debate. That speech was delivered in sections for a week or more, and on one or more occasions since that time it has appeared on the desk of the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] to frighten Senators into submission.

I recall well that the Senator from New Hampshire debated that question repeatedly, not one day, not two days, nor three days alone, but day after day until he said—and no man can say it better—all that possibly could be said in favor of a system of spoliation and robbery. Now for that Senator to protest against long and tedious speeches, in the light of the history of the recent past, passes my understanding of the propriety and fitness of things.

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from Nebraska permit me to interrupt him at this point?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, my friend the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] referred to me a while ago as having made a speech of three days' duration, with a promise of a continuation at some indefinite time in the future. My friend the Senator from New Hampshire did me the credit of saying that if I do not speak enlighteningly, I at least speak entertainingly. I can say there has not yet been a speech—I think I have heard all of them or read all of them—delivered in the Senate on this question which has been in any way irrelevant. There has been no effort to consume time. There has simply been an effort upon the part of the opponents of the annexation scheme to get this subject fully before the American people.

Mr. President, I believe that the will of the majority of the people will finally prevail. I believe that the rules of the Senate in permitting unlimited debate give opportunity for that voice of the people of the United States to be heard. I believe that the question now pending in the Senate is one upon which the voice of the people ought to be heard. I do not believe in the tyrannous rule of majorities, especially in legislation. I believe the slower the legislation the better it is likely to be. I think a celebrated writer has said that all the good legislation which has been enacted is in the repeal of bad legislation; and the statute books are full of enactments, made under the whip and spur of majorities, where, if ample time for discussion had been had, so that the people could have taken cognizance of the subjects-matter of the bills, they would not have been enacted into law.

Mr. President, upon this particular question we have not heard from what the Senator from New Hampshire or the Senator from Illinois, I do not remember which, pleases to term the majority. It is a curious spectacle to see a great question of this sort debated only on one side.

It is said in extenuation of the silence of the reputed majority that this question has been before the American people for several years. Mr. President, the question of the annexation of these islands, under the peculiar conditions that now exist, has never been presented to the American people. We have entered upon a new era. The war with Spain which, by the late victory at Santiago seems near its termination, opens a new vista, brings the United States into contact with new conditions, and it occurs to me, as the annexation scheme is the first step in our pathway toward colonial possessions, that right at its threshold the gravest and the calmest and the wisest deliberation which the American Senate can give to the subject ought to be given without stint and without limit.

Now, sir, we can not be charged with filibustering in this matter. We think it is a matter of grave and vital moment. We think this initial step is fraught with consequences of great danger for the future, and we must be pardoned, if it does cause a little delay, in attempting to search the voice of the whole American people, with the hope that that voice will express itself and be heard against this scheme. If that voice is for it, if the will of the majority of the American people desire annexation, that will will have its way.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will it interfere with the honorable Senator from Louisiana if I ask him a simple question?

Mr. CAFFERY. No, sir.

Mr. GALLINGER. I understood the Senator to say that the voice of the people ought to be heard on this question. That verdict can not be rendered until November next, at the earliest. Do I understand the Senator to hold to the position that this debate ought to be prolonged and the question ought not to be decided until the people are heard at the polls in November next?

Mr. CAFFERY. The Senator refers to the November elections. I do not refer to any special election as expressive of the voice of the people more than any other organ of public opinion. I believe the press of the United States, the pulpit of the United States, and various conventions in the United States held for literary or public or patriotic purposes are all efficient organs of public opinion.

Mr. President, under the whip and spur of a majority a vicious step may be taken, but that vicious step must be retraced or not taken if the voice of the people of the United States can be heard through any legitimate channel—through every legitimate channel. I doubt not that the November elections will be expressive to some extent of the will of the people. But that is not the only channel through which the people express their sentiments and views upon public questions, and I think there ought to be sufficient time given to let that mighty voice of the American people be heard, and that voice will prevail. Under the peculiar conditions of the joint resolution, with the claimed and reputed majority utterly silent, with only one side arguing the question against annexation, it occurs to me that we ought to be allowed to exhaust debate without the charge of filibustering being leveled against us.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope the Secretary will now resume the reading of the editorials.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the editorials, which are as follows:

[American Agriculturist.]

The policy of colonial expansion, now so extravagantly urged in interested quarters, may not at present contemplate interference in European politics, but such interference would be less a departure from the new policy than this policy is a departure from the Monroe doctrine. The new idea sounds very grand at first, and in the flush of victory, the appeal to extend our domination beyond the seas is so alluring that the consequences of such action are lost sight of.

The policy of colonial empire would at once expose us to embroilment with other nations. It would vastly magnify the power and expense of Army and Navy. It would perpetuate increased taxes. It would inaugurate an era of corruption in our foreign possessions, a debasement of the blood, that could not fail to in time affect the physical and mental stamina of our people at home. It would be un-American, unwise, unconstitutional, and in results unworthy of the effort.

On still higher grounds a colonial policy is objectionable. It would degenerate the holiest war ever waged for humanity into a campaign of conquest. This would lower the United States before the world, but its moral effect upon our own people would be still worse.

[Baltimore American.]

England wants an alliance, of course. It would be strange if she did not. She wants an alliance because the continental powers are opposed to her, not because they are opposed to the United States. There are many people in this country who sympathize with England, and some others who do not. This is not an English, but an American country. The people are made up from every country under heaven. There are some millions of Germans, more millions of Irishmen, and a heavy sprinkling of Russians and other European nations. They are good citizens, many of them among the best we have. Would it not be the height of folly for the Government, with these facts staring it in the face, to attempt to negotiate an alliance with Great Britain which engaged the United States to help carry out English projects in China, in opposition to the continental powers? If this country wants anything in China, the Empire is still open, and Americans can do quite as well, we imagine, as England has recently done in the East.

[Baltimore News.]

If we are to assume "imperial" responsibilities, let us endeavor first to look them in the face and find out what they are. Let us go in with our eyes open. Let us consider whether or not their assumption means a large standing army and a great navy and permanently heavy Federal taxation. Let us not ignore but calmly weigh the question whether the new policy would or would not bring us into the circle of European jealousies and antagonisms. Let us not leave entirely to the future, but endeavor to anticipate in the present, not indeed, the details but the broad outlines of the problems of government which the acquisition of distant dependencies, peopled by mixed races in various stages of civilization, will assuredly present. The coming debate in the Senate furnishes a most admirable opportunity for the education of public opinion and even for the education of Senatorial opinion on these great and pressing subjects. It furnishes an opportunity for the Senate to revive the high traditions of its past in doing the country this great service. Let us hope that there are a few members of it who are able and willing to rise to so great an occasion.

[Baltimore News.]

It is the special function of the Senate to interpose its deliberation and its dignity between the sudden or ill-considered inception of a movement and its consummation. That body has been charged—and we have repeatedly held, justly charged—with abuse of the character and privileges which it has established, in cases in which there was no proper occasion for their exercise. The case of Hawaii is one in which the Senate as a whole, and each individual member of it, may feel that insistence upon its ancient traditions will be amply justified by the occasion. If there is anything which calls for the calm and deliberate weighing of all consequences, for resistance to swift impulse, for ignoring of the demands of factitious urgency and haste, it is the taking of a step which is likely to involve the whole future policy, internal and external, of the nation. Let the Senate take its time on the Hawaiian question, and let it not be decided until every objector has had every opportunity for honest, serious, and deliberate resistance.

[Baltimore Sun.]

Of course if the United States intends to start upon a policy of colonial expansion and to hold the Philippines, the annexation of Hawaii may in time become necessary to the plan of imperialism which is now so popular in certain quarters. But Congress should not annex Hawaii as a war measure, not even if the President sends a message urging annexation as a military necessity. The new policy of imperialism ought not to be entered upon after a day's debate, but should be given the most thorough investigation after the war ends and when the subject can be considered dispassionately and with some measure of statesmanship. Annexation and imperialism with a hurrah will be a national calamity.

[Boston Herald.]

If we are not to take the Philippine Islands, we do not want Hawaii. But this problem of whether we should stretch out into the Eastern Hemisphere is not one which should be settled offhand. It needs to be deliberately settled, after full reflection, by the American people. Speaker Reed is greatly to be commended for the course that he has thus far taken, and we sincerely hope that he will persist in his antagonism to a scheme which has been conceived in fraud, and, if successful, would have its birth in iniquity.

[Boston Herald.]

The meeting yesterday at Faneuil Hall in protest against the policy of imperialism is action which may well be taken for the purpose of crystallizing public opinion. No such wide departure from our traditional system should be made unless it has been carefully discussed, and both its merits and demerits made plainly apparent. We imagine, however, that long before definite action can be taken—for the United States can not safely make known its intentions in regard to the Philippine Islands until war is at an end—circumstances will present themselves which will materially qualify existing public opinion. When, as will probably be the case, it is found that of the troops sent to assist Admiral Dewey more than half will have perished from tropical diseases during the present season, the advantages of American ownership of these islands and of American occupancy of them are questions which will present themselves in quite a different light from that in which they are now popularly viewed.

[Boston Herald.]

All that Hawaii can possibly do for us is to furnish us a basis of supplies, and this she has already done by furnishing us with the best harbor and landing place that she possesses. So far as a coaling station or basis of supply is concerned, we can not get from Hawaii by annexation anything more or better than that which we have, and yet, by a sophistry of reasoning, it is held that unless we annex Hawaii we shall be deprived of advantages which to the fullest extent we now possess. Following out this line of argument, if we establish a coaling station at the Philippine Islands, such a proceeding would be merely the prelude toward an alleged necessity of taking control of that entire group of islands; or if later on we should secure, as we might, a coaling station on the coast of Africa, the possession would be merely the entering wedge to an extension of our influence well into the center of that continent.

There is in the case of Hawaii no military necessity that can not be met by conditions as they now exist; and hence the true reason for annexation has to be found in entirely different grounds. It is as clear as daylight that if the sugar interest did not exist there, and those who control it did not contribute large sums of money to influence public opinion in this country through the newspapers and Congressional action at Washington, there would be no more present call for the annexation of Hawaii than for the annexation of Iceland or the Azores.

[Boston Transcript.]

There is less basis than for a long time past for working on popular fear that Hawaii will be grabbed by some other power if we do not first do the grab act ourselves. Great Britain is certainly not going to put herself in that position, and neither is Japan. Our relations with those countries were never before so friendly, and with the entente cordiale thus established we need not fear a demonstration by other powers in that quarter. In fact, not for a long time has the Hawaiian situation been so comfortable, and it is a waste of sophistry to contend that just now is the hour of peril for our naval prestige. This working up of excitement is simply part of the so-called imperial scheme which already regards Hawaii, not as our extreme possible outpost, but only as a "half-way station" in our progress to the ends of the earth.

[Buffalo Courier.]

President McKinley, who at the beginning of his Administration was so lukewarm toward annexation that his inaugural address contained a declaration against colonial aggrandizement, has in the brief period of fifteen months become an enthusiastic convert not only to this scheme, but apparently to the whole policy of colonial expansion so loudly approved by the jingo element. It is evident that the President is using all the legitimate influence of his Administration to induce the Senate to pass the Hawaiian resolution, it having been long ago demonstrated that the more orderly method of annexation by treaty could not command the necessary two-thirds vote.

[Buffalo Express.]

Under annexation this Anglo-Saxon rule could not be maintained against a hostile native opposition, except by doing violence to the principles of the United States Constitution and of the Declaration of Independence after the manner now too much practiced in the negro section of the South.

The simple truth is that our Constitution is not suited to the governing of such a population as inhabits Hawaii. Shall we abandon the annexation project or the principles of our Constitution?

[Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican.]

There are many Americans who are not so certain that we want even Hawaii. There are going to be more of them. There is bound to come a reaction on this jingoism and annexationism. We have simply allowed our greed to get the better of our judgment. Wait and see how the matters turn out.

We are aware that it is unpopular at the present time to counsel caution. The popular heart is inflamed on this subject. Our military and naval men, who are for the time being the biggest men in the United States, are all for annexation. That is their business—to conquer and to patrol. But the war will be over some time, and then will come the sober second thought of the nation.

[Chicago Chronicle.]

Some Senators who are inclined to favor annexation are said to be doubtful as to the policy of consummating it so long as we are at war with Spain. The act might be regarded as indicating that we were bent on territorial aggrandizement, and that our real purpose in making war on Spain was conquest. Spain's European friends might choose to view it in that light and make it a pretext for reconsidering their determination to maintain an attitude of neutrality.

[Chicago Chronicle.]

If we decide to annex the Philippines, we shall ipso facto become a member of the associated banditti who are now parceling out China, growing at one another, and constantly on the alert for treachery. If we seize the Canaries, we shall acquire European "interests" and European responsibilities. Our diplomatic representatives will be obliged to have a finger in every pie and a voice in the regulation of every dispute from the tariffs of the Suez Canal to the idiosyncrasies of the unspeakable Turk. We shall cut loose from James Monroe and follow the precepts of Napoleon Bonaparte and Frederick the Great. We shall be in hot water twenty-four hours of the day. Can we afford to do it? Will it be a good thing to turn this country into a second France, ruled to all intents and purposes by a military oligarchy—a country where honest industry is sneeringly termed "bourgeois" and the profession of arms alone is honorable?

[Cleveland Leader.]

All prudent and thoughtful Americans must deprecate the hasty assertions of enthusiasts that the Philippine Islands will be held permanently as a part of the territory of the United States. It is a rash and entirely needless attempt to prejudice a very weighty question, the ultimate decision of which is uncertain.

To assume that once the power of Spain shall be thoroughly demolished in the Philippines and the large native population brought under the control of the United States the whole matter of the future of the islands will be settled is to talk arrant nonsense. Annexation will not be so easy. Already many of the most important organs of public opinion of the country have declared against any such extension of the duties and cares of this Republic. Eminent public men have announced their strenuous opposition to the permanent occupation of any detached territory inhabited by a large alien population, incapable for generations of being brought up to the full exercise of the powers of American citizenship. The nearer the final decision comes the more emphatic the resistance of conservative men is likely to be.

[Dubuque (Iowa) Herald.]

It does appear that our Government would in this way have enough to deal with without rushing into voluntary annexation of Hawaii. It is purely a movement of the jingoes, and if they have captured McKinley to push their purposes they have been lucky. All the talk about annexation as a war measure, of Hawaii as a naval and coaling station and as a present help, is all pretense. No man can show where the possession of Hawaii would be of any possible benefit in the present war. The Spaniards do not want it. Instead of helping us it takes one of our best battle ships to watch its interests that should be fighting with Sampson or Dewey. It is now a coaling station and has been for years. The Charleston, on its way to Manila, has stopped there for a supply. The islands could do no more for us than they are now doing. Whether we annex Hawaii or not, it is pretty certain that Dole has annexed McKinley.

[Indianapolis News.]

We do not see that the possession of the Philippines makes the annexation of Hawaii necessary. We already have a coaling station in Hawaii, and we can get any concessions we want in the way of territory from the present Hawaiian Government. We can lease whatever land we may need, as the powers of Europe are leasing land in the far East, which we can use for our own purposes without assuming the least responsibility for the government of the islands. Yet it must be conceded that Dewey's victory has weakened the strength of the opposition to the annexation policy. We hope that some arrangement can be made which will give us what we really need, but which will save us from annexation; but we confess that there is now little ground for expectation that this hope can be realized.

[New York Daily News.]

A large number of the American people are opposed to the acquisition of colonial dependencies, such as Hawaii, the Philippines, and Puerto Rico would undoubtedly be, because they believe that our national energies and resources can be best employed in developing our present extensive territory and perfecting our existing democratic institutions.

This section of the public holds fast to the doctrine taught by the fathers of the Republic that the North American continent is quite large enough to give ample employment to all the talent the nation can produce, and they do not want to see any of it wasted in a chase for colonial empire, such as England, France, and Germany are engaged in. They fear the neglect of domestic questions that lie at the root of the welfare of the masses and the evolution of a class of military rulers through the necessity for the maintenance of numerous legions to maintain authority among the alien island races.

[New York Times.]

Against the annexation of Hawaii as a war measure, suggested and justified by the exigencies of war, very little would or could be said. For the national defense or the speedier defeat of the enemy we could afford to override tradition and take up problems to be solved in the future.

But the annexation of these islands is not a war necessity. That is an impudent pretense. The suggestion is not an outcome of the war. It originated long ago with a set of plotters and schemers. A vulgar money job lies at the bottom of the transaction. That makes the effort to sneak the thing through as a measure of patriotism peculiarly nauseating. It is the motive of the original annexationists even more than the annexation itself that offends and disgusts.

[New York Times.]

The House has now been talking for three whole days about this wretched business, and, from the elaborate and rather too ingenious speech of Mr. HITT to the harangue from the Nevada Representative, not the suggestion of a new reason for annexation has been made. Nor has there been any refutation of the charge that the business from beginning to end is a job. The pretense of war necessity and of the danger of not getting the facilities we require in the islands is a mock-auction device. It is the practice on a large scale in national legislation of methods which when indulged in in business are by the statutes of most States made a State prison offense.

[New York World.]

Our Republic sprang from the people's abhorrence of despotism. It is a Government of laws, not of men—and especially not of "a man on horseback." Can we inject into our system of self-government and equal rights the old despotic and military idea without doing violence to our principles? Can we accustom our people to such a rule over a part of our possessions containing 7,000,000 human beings without danger to ourselves. Have not the invasions of plutocracy, the growing power of monopoly, and the development of the boss system into a rule that in effect vitiates in many instances the very essence of democracy given us problems enough at home that we need to seek them on the other side of the globe?

There are many other phases of this "pipe dream" of colonial empire which will, we believe, cause the American people to hold true to their rational and traditional policy, but the danger to this country involved in these wild schemes should prove a sufficient deterrent to their adoption.

[Omaha Bee.]

We can not bring ourselves to think that President McKinley, who has thus far shown a wise sagacity and statesmanship commanding almost universal commendation, is ready to yield to a clamor for which there is no valid reason or justification and lend his great influence to a proposal to drift the nation out of a path in which for more than a hundred years it has enjoyed security and realized a growth of power and a degree of prosperity without parallel in the history of nations.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

It is believed by the majority of Americans that the annexation of the Hawaiian oligarchy, masquerading as a republic resting on the "consent of the governed," by treaty, or by resolution of Congress, would not only be a plain departure from our long-proclaimed "Monroe doctrine," but would impose American institutions and American law upon a community the majority of whose inhabitants have expressed no desire for the change. It is the basic American doctrine that governments shall derive their powers from the consent of the governed. So long as consent to the annexation scheme is withheld by a majority of the Hawaiian people our title to the islands will be assailable in the high court of morals, though all Federal constitutional forms be observed in appropriating the country. To fling aside constitutional methods in annexing Hawaii, to seize the country as a part of the plan of campaign against Spain, as an act of war, would place us in a still more regrettable relation to the islands. The President has extensive powers as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy in war times, but the reported desire to "seize" Hawaii savors too much of usurpation of power and of the misuse of Executive functions.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

The real question is whether we are to continue a law-abiding and law-obeying people, patient of the restraints put upon us by those who framed our plan of government, or are to brush aside the restrictions and limitations of the Constitution and of the law whenever they interfere with the whim of the hour. It can not be possible that President McKinley proposes to carry out the design imputed to him, for, sworn to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, he will not be guilty of so plain and flagrant a violation of the supreme law. He must have been grievously misrepresented.

[Philadelphia Record.]

Hawaii will make its entry into the Union as the result of a Cæsarean operation—by an avoidance of natural, popular, and constitutional methods. The treaty of annexation was never approved by the Hawaiian people; it could never have been ratified by the American Senate. The right of the Hawaiians to decide their own destiny and the right of the people of the United States to the safeguard of their own Constitution have both been disregarded.

[Pittsburg Dispatch.]

It is little wonder the debate of this question is attracting nearly as much attention as the news from the squadrons off Cuba. It is more important to the American people than any battle that has been fought in the war, for, if carried through, it will be an actual renunciation of the principles upon which the war was begun and the beginning of a national policy foreign to our history, our institutions, and the popular instinct. It will mark the beginning of the end of popular government—"government of the people, by the people, and for the people," which Lincoln declared should "not perish from the earth."

[Pittsburg Dispatch.]

The loyal citizens who have responded to their country's call were moved by the desire to free Cuba and avenge the crew of the Maine. They never intended to give their services to the cause of colonizing the Pacific Ocean. The loyal people who remain at home are prepared to cheerfully take up the burden of taxation to support the conflict for the removal of Spanish cruelty, treachery, and barbarity from the Western Hemisphere. But none of them desires to make sacrifices for the purpose of embarking the country upon a strange and mischievous policy of land grabbing.

[Pittsburg Post.]

Annexation would make the lobbying unnecessary, as the Hawaiian sugar would then come in free for all time. It is the product of virtual slave labor, to be sure, and would remain so under annexation, coming in competition with the sugar raised by free labor in the United States.

But this is a trifling objection compared with the potent one. It will be the commencement of a colonial system that may entail unnumbered evils on our country. If Hawaii, why not the Philippines, the Ladrone Islands, Cuba, and Puerto Rico? It marks a well-defined departure on a new and perilous chapter of American policy. President McKinley will be directly responsible. He has carried it through a reluctant Congress and against the best judgment of a vast majority of the intelligent people of the United States.

[Richmond Dispatch.]

Aside from the miserable jobbery that has been and is still in the Hawaiian annexation scheme, Mr. FAULKNER has given the strongest of reasons why the Democrats should fight annexation to the bitter end. It is the first step that counts and costs. The expansionists know full well that the annexation of Hawaii, no matter under what subterfuge, would prove a most potent agency in stimulating the movement for the permanent retention of the Philippines and the annexation of Cuba. They know full well that it could be made a potent influence in preparing the public mind for a departure from our time-honored policy.

We do not undertake to say that the time will not come when it will be necessary to annex Hawaii. Nor do we undertake to say what should be our future relations to the Philippines. But we do maintain that in dealing with these matters wisdom and patriotism and due regard for the integrity of our institutions and our pledges, past and present, to the world demand that we make haste slowly.

[Richmond Times.]

From the beginning of agitation toward that end the Times has steadily opposed the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. To annex them is to depart entirely from that theory of government under which we have lived for more than a hundred years and prospered as no people prospered before. The Times frankly admits its fear of what will happen if we abandon our old-time notion that the United States are big enough for us and enter upon a career of world aggrandizement.

[St. Louis Post.]

President McKinley thinks the Hawaiian Islands are necessary to the United States.

They are no doubt essential to the success of some jobs and schemes which have been maturing for several years past. But it is not so clear that the national good will be in any degree promoted by the possession of distant islands which will require a large navy for their defense.

If as a consequence of the Spanish war we are drawn into the current of "world politics," we may need a big navy, and in that event the Hawaiian Islands will be convenient as a station and base. But we should not put the cart before the horse.

[St. Louis Republic.]

While the Monroe doctrine is an unwritten law, it is nevertheless an important factor in our national life. Next to the Constitution itself, it has done more in shaping international affairs than any other and has been the guiding star of the Western Hemisphere. From the days of Washington and Jefferson to the present time there has been no apparent desire to step beyond its limitations except since the battle of Manila, and the people of the United States will think long before they exchange the right to guard the Western Hemisphere for the right of partnership in the colonizing schemes of European monarchies.

[Savannah News.]

The most patriotic and farseeing of our citizens regarded it as fortunate that we had nothing to do with the question of disrupting the Chinese Empire, which was being considered by Germany, Russia, France, and Great Britain. But what a change has taken place in a few short weeks! Now plenty of reasons are offered why we should become the permanent possessors of the Philippines and should also have a voice in whatever changes the powers of Europe propose to make in the Chinese Empire. Not only that, but it is urged that we should take permanent possession of Puerto Rico and so shape our policy that Cuba would eventually become a part of our territory. In short, the underlying thought is that we should become the possessor of great colonies in widely separate parts of the world, and should cast aside as obsolete the policy inaugurated by the fathers of the Republic, which avoids interfering in questions which compel the powers of Europe to maintain big armies and powerful navies.

[Springfield Republican.]

Richard Olney not long ago uttered a protest, in an address at Harvard College, against the "international isolation" of the United States. But read his address and you will find no approval, even by implication, of the suggestion that the United States should conquer and permanently occupy the Philippine Islands, inhabited by Malays and Chinese, 8,500 miles away. * * * The President or the political party that smashes the Monroe doctrine will live to rue the day, and will live very little longer. And the smashing of the Monroe doctrine is what the conquest and permanent occupation of the Philippine Islands will mean.

[Springfield Republican.]

The wage-earning classes have a peculiar interest in averting the calamitous policy into which the heedless and adventurous would drag the country. For it is from that class that the armies would be recruited to police the distant colonies and waste themselves away in idleness and dissipation and disease under tropical suns. And as the Federal tax system stands and is likely to stand for years to come, that class would bear the chief burden of expense. The positions of honor and emolument in the Army and the civil government of the colonies would go to the aristocracy of wealth and "pull," as we have seen commissions in the Volunteer Army recently go.

The wage-earners accordingly can not make themselves heard too early and insistently in this crisis. Their concern is the more immediate, and their interests, as of all the plain people, are the more threatened by this clamor of the influential and powerful to be led away from the problems which press up from the laboring classes for solution.

[Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.]

If we are to be supreme on one, can we stop without attaining supremacy on all?

And yet, it is sophistry like this that is put forward by the people's representatives as an excuse for a policy which, if carried to its legitimate conclusion, will result in this country taking possession not only of Hawaii, but of the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and Cuba, and possibly the Canary Islands. The cost of this "grand extension of empire" would be incalculable. But who can show any benefit that would accrue to the United States?

It is time for the people to consult together, for the purpose of devising some means of bringing these Congressmen who are opening such a Pandora's box of territorial complications, to a realization of their unwise, unrepresentative, and unpatriotic course.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I have caused these various letters and editorial extracts to be read for the purpose of showing that the opposition to annexation is widespread and among all classes of the people. Staid and conservative Massachusetts has protested against it, or at least a large and respectable portion of her people have protested against it. The press of the country, scattered throughout the various States and Territories, have protested against it—not all of the papers, but many of them; and I could multiply by the hundreds the extracts which I have had read here to-day, and I do not know but that I shall have them printed as a separate document or in the RECORD hereafter, so that they can be read.

This question, Mr. President, has never been a party question. It has never been submitted to the American people. It is proposed now, without the people having an opportunity to pass on the question, to annex the Hawaiian Islands, regardless of the wish of the American people and regardless of the wish of the people of those islands, by a joint resolution that is exceptional and even revolutionary in its character. I had hoped that good sense would prevail, and that this whole question would be permitted to go over until the close of the war now going on, when our foreign policy or proposed foreign policy could be taken up and considered by Congress deliberately. But it would seem that, taking advantage of an absorbed public attention, it is proposed, under whip and spur, to put this measure through, regardless of its consequences to the present or future generations of our people.

The Republican party in 1896 were very guarded in expressing themselves on the subject of our foreign relations. They said:

Our foreign policy should be at all times firm, vigorous, and dignified, and all our interests in the Western Hemisphere carefully watched and guarded. The Hawaiian Islands should be controlled by the United States, and no foreign power should be permitted to interfere with them.

It was not declared that it was the intention of the Republican party to annex the Hawaiian Islands. They were content with merely controlling the policy and the commerce of those people. That, sir, was in strict harmony with the whole course of this nation in respect to the Sandwich Islands. We have always expressed our deep concern in their welfare. We have always pledged ourselves to support them in maintaining an independent government. We have always declared our purpose to sustain friendly relations with them, and so, following that precedent, the Republican party in 1896 declared the same policy.

But not one word was said in the Republican platform of 1896 about entering on a career of imperialism, on a career, Mr. President, that will lead to complications with foreign nations and that will engulf our nation unless we are more fortunate than nations have been in the past who have pursued that policy. The moment we begin a career of territorial acquisition and aggrandizement, that moment we become one of the powers of the world in that offensive sense the word "power" is now used. That moment we must add to the taxes of our people from $350,000,000 to $500,000,000 a year, making our total annual taxation about $950,000,000, in order to occupy the position that we shall voluntarily assume. Our Navy must be increased; our standing Army must be increased to at least 200,000 soldiers, and all the burdens of taxation are to rest upon the people of this country, for we can expect nothing from the Hawaiian Islands or the other islands that we shall annex.

Under the present government existing in the Hawaiian Islands that Republic is scarcely self-supporting. We are to assume its public debt. We are to assume its citizenship and incorporate them in our citizenship. We are to assume this without any benefit to be derived to the people of this country. And what for? Simply that the gigantic and controlling monopoly of this country may be appeased. I say there is no inspiration to this movement of territorial aggrandizement except that inspiration found in the American sugar trust, the tobacco interest, and those who want to build large navies, and manufacturing interests of that kind.

Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to ask the Senator from Nebraska a question. The Senator charges that annexation is in the interest of the sugar trust. I see it charged in the newspapers and pamphlets I get that it is the sugar trust that is opposing annexation. The sugar trust seems to be on both sides. I should like to have the Senator explain that.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I assume that the sugar trust is not a patriotic organization. I assume that the sugar trust is to be found on that side where the most money is to be made by it and by its members. I shall undertake before I conclude my remarks (not the remarks I am making this evening, but the remarks I propose to submit upon this measure) to show conclusively that by this scheme of annexation the sugar trust alone makes over $40,000,000 annually. And yet I presume there are those who will want us to believe that under those circumstances the sugar trust is opposing annexation.

No, Mr. President, the sugar trust is to be found where the biggest sum of money is to be made. Like all other such institutions, it knows no flag, no country, no duty of patriotism that conflicts with its financial interests and its pecuniary welfare. If I shall succeed in demonstrating, as I propose to attempt, that this gigantic monopoly will make annually over $40,000,000 a year by this scheme of annexation, I will have demonstrated, I think, quite completely to the people of the United States that that is the inspiring influence to be found in connection with this project.

Mr. President, I think I ought not to permit the statement the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] made a few days ago to pass unnoticed at this time, although I may be guilty of digressing somewhat from the main thread of my remarks. When pressed for an answer to the question where the power was to be found in the Constitution for this method of annexation, the Senator from Ohio said it was to be found in the general-welfare clause of the Constitution, inferring, I suppose, or, at least, logically leading to the conclusion, that Congress was the sole judge of what constituted the general welfare of the United States, and that whenever Congress should declare by resolution or by act a certain thing to exist or a certain step to be necessary that would be construed to be in furtherance of the general welfare.

The words "general welfare" occur twice at least in the Constitution. They occur in the preamble. They are to be found in that portion of section 8, Article I, having reference to the taxing power of the Government. Then it is declared, and this the Senator did not cite—

The Congress shall have power * * * to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

But we were given to understand, according to the declaration of the Senator from Ohio, that whatever the President or Congress might see fit to designate the general welfare would be conclusively so. What is the general welfare of the United States as declared by the preamble of the Constitution and by the language to be found in section 8? Is it simply the aimless vagaries that Congress or some department of the Government shall declare? Certainly not. General welfare to be promoted by the passage of laws is that political welfare marked out by the Constitution and by the reasonable deductions to be made from it. If that were not true, then, according to the position of the Senator from Ohio, whenever Congress and the President should declare by joint resolution or act that the general welfare of the people of the United States was best subserved by the dissolution of the Union, we would have power to dissolve the Constitution itself that confers this power.

No, Mr. President, that kind of reasoning will not do. We must follow the footsteps of the fathers as written in the Constitution. We must take the declarations there made in their free, full, and comprehensive sense. We must not construe them narrowly nor too liberally, but construe them as they were intended, and be guided by their provisions. It is the general welfare mapped out in this document and by other official documents co-existent with it that we are to follow. Otherwise the whole scheme of the Republic tumbles and is overthrown.

Mr. President, the American people are going to think about the question of annexation. There may be a few of them swept off their feet by excitement and by contemplating a career of aggrandizement and glory, but when the time comes, as it will come, that the people of the United States begin to look into the consequences of a policy of annexation and aggrandizement I have no doubt their judgment will be registered against it, and I have no hesitancy in aligning myself with that class of people.

Mr. HOAR obtained the floor.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLAY in the chair). The Secretary will call the roll to ascertain if a quorum is present.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Davis,	Heitfeld,	Penrose,
Allison,	Deboe,	Hoar,	Perkins,
Bacon,	Elkins,	Jones, Ark.	Pritchard,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,
Bate,	Foraker,	Kyle,	Quay,
Berry,	Frye,	Lindsay,	Shoup,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Lodge,	Stewart,
Caffery,	Gear,	McBride,	Sullivan,
Clark,	Gray,	Mallory,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hale,	Mason,	Turley,
Cullom,	Hanna,	Money,	Turpie,
Daniel,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Wellington,
	Hawley,	Nelson,	Wilson.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Fifty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. HOAR. I do not know whether the Senate prefer that I should go on at this time this afternoon or not. I myself have no choice; but I think I ought to state my views and those of the people whom I represent, amounting now in numbers nearly to the number of the entire people of the country when the Constitution was formed.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Will the Senator from Massachusetts yield to me a moment?

Mr. HOAR. Certainly.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There are a number of Senators who desire to listen to the argument of the Senator from Massachusetts. I do, among others; but at this late hour—4 o'clock in the afternoon of an exceedingly warm day, and that the Fourth of July—I hope it will meet the views of the Senator from Minnesota to allow an executive session and then an adjournment.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to be understood as not expressing the slightest personal choice whether I go on now or to-morrow morning. I wish to do what is agreeable to the majority of the Senate, and more especially to the gentlemen having the pending joint resolution in charge. I can go on now or I can go on then, as the Senate shall prefer.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I feel that it is hardly fair to the Senator from Massachusetts that he should be required to begin an argument now.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator from Minnesota will withhold that motion one moment, I desire to say that there is not on the Private Pension Calendar a single bill, so far as I know, in which I have the least earthly interest; but a large number of Senators, and many of them on the other side of the Chamber, have suggested to me that I ought to ask for a little time to consider the Pension Calendar. I now ask forty minutes for that purpose before an executive session is moved. I make that request.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Now?

Mr. GALLINGER. Now. I understand the Senator from Massachusetts is willing to have this course pursued.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from New Hampshire, that forty minutes be devoted at once to the consideration of cases on the Private Pension Calendar.

Mr. TURPIE. Unobjected cases.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unobjected cases on the Private Pension Calendar. Will the Senator from Minnesota withhold his motion for that purposes?

Mr. DAVIS. Certainly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and the private unobjected pension cases will be considered in their order.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator from New Hampshire kindly yields to offer me an opportunity to ask for the consideration of the bill (S. 4840) to provide for a force of colored troops in the Volunteer Army of the United States. It is a bill that the War Department desires to have acted upon at this session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MORGAN. I object to the consideration of that bill this evening.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the special order be carried out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Private Pension Calendar is in order.

JOEL H. HALLOWELL.

The bill (H. R. 1712) granting an increase of pension to Joel H. Hallowell was announced as the first private pension bill on the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is an adverse report. Let it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

FOSTER C. CARL.

The bill (H. R. 9195) granting a pension to Foster C. Carl was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Foster C. Carl, Company I, First Regiment of New York Mounted Rifles, and to pay him a pension of $18 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY HANNAH CLARK.

The bill (H. R. 4977) granting a pension to Mary Hannah Clark was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary Hannah Clark, totally blind and dependent child of John W. Clark, deceased, late a member of Company B, Eighth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, and Company A, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FELIX TAIT.

The bill (H. R. 9140) granting an increase of pension to Felix Tait was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Felix Tait, late a soldier in the Mexican war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PRYOR PERKINS.

The bill (H. R. 8670) granting a pension to Pryor Perkins was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 7, after the word "of," to strike out "$40 a month" and insert "$12 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Pryor Perkins, a scout and guide in the United States Army during the war of the rebellion, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MARY ANN SULLIVAN.

The bill (H. R. 6525) granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary Ann Sullivan, mother of the late James J. Sullivan, late of Company B, Sixty-ninth Regiment New York State Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 6 I move to insert the word "dependent" before the word "mother."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN I. BARROWS.

The bill (H. R. 377) granting a pension to Susan I. Barrows was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Susan I. Barrows, idiotic and dependent child of Silas Barrows, deceased, late a member of Company E, Eighth Regiment Maine Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month, the pension to be paid to her duly appointed guardian.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THERESA BONNAVEAU.

The bill (H. R. 3565) to grant a pension to Theresa Bonnavau was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Theresa Bonnavau, the widow of John B. Bonnavau, who served in the Mexican war in the Louisiana Volunteers, and to pay her a pension of $3 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH FRY.

The bill (H. R. 8950) increasing the pension of Mrs. Sarah Fry was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to strike out "upon" and insert "on;" and in line 7, after the word "pension," to strike out "rated at" and insert "at the rate of;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Sarah Fry, widow of Henry Fry, late of the United States Navy, war of 1812, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month, the same to be in lieu of the pension now drawn by her.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to strike out, after the word "pension," in line 8, the words "now drawn by her," and to substitute the words "that she is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sarah Fry."

J. HENRY RIVES.

Mr. DANIEL. I do not want to interrupt this procedure, but, if I am in order, I beg leave to ask the Senate to take up for consideration the bill (H. R. 4918) for the relief of J. Henry Rives. It is a bill which has passed the Senate once or twice, and has now passed the House of Representatives. It involves only $293.90.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will yield if the bill does not lead to debate.

Mr. DANIEL. I think it will not lead to debate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then I will yield for that purpose; but I hope no further request will be made until we complete the consideration of pension bills.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4918) for the relief of J. Henry Rives. It proposes to pay to J. Henry Rives, of Virginia, $293.90, being the amount of the expenses necessarily incurred and paid by him in the arrest of John C. Henry, deputy collector, for embezzlement.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN E. NASH.

The bill (H. R. 6093) granting a pension to Ellen E. Nash was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Ellen E. Nash, who was an army nurse during the war of the rebellion, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VIRGINIA C. FLEANOR.

The bill (H. R. 4916) granting a pension to Virginia C. Fleanor was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to strike out "upon" and insert "on;" in line 5, before the name "Henry," to strike out "Colonel;" and in line 6, after the name "Daugherty," to strike out "deceased;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Virginia C. Fleanor, widow of Henry Daugherty, a veteran of the Mexican war, and colonel of the Twenty-second Illinois Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MIRIAM V. KENNY.

The bill (H. R. 4484) granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenny was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to strike out "upon" and insert "on;" and in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Miriam V. Kenny, widow of Samuel W. Kenny, late a spy in the service of the Army of the Cumberland, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

OLIVE H. SOUTH.

The bill (H. R. 727) granting a pension to Olive H. South was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 5, after the name "South," to strike out "formerly the wife of William W. Glenn, late of Company H, Second Regiment West Virginia Cavalry," and insert "late an army nurse;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Olive H. South, late an army nurse, and pay her a pension at the rate of $13 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ADDIE L. BALLOU.

The bill (H. R. 8724) granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to strike out

"upon" and insert "on;" and in line 5, after the name "Ballou," to strike out "who rendered remarkable and unusual services as a hospital nurse during the late war of the rebellion" and insert "an army nurse;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Addie L. Ballou, an army nurse, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD MADDEN.

The bill (S. 3232) granting a pension to Edward Madden, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward Madden, late private, Company F, Seventh Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Edward Madden."

MARY A. WATTS.

The bill (H. R. 6064) granting a pension to Mary A. Watts was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Mary A. Watts, widow of Little B. Watts, late of Company G, First Regiment of Alabama Vidette Cavalry, on the pension roll, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALMON STUART.

The bill (H. R. 2276) granting an increase of pension to Almon Stuart, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Almon Stuart, late a private in Company I, Ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WARREN W. MORGAN.

The bill (H. R. 6790) granting an increase of pension to Warren W. Morgan was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Warren W. Morgan, who served as a private in Company G, Eighth United States Infantry, in the Indian wars, and to pay him a pension of $12 a month in lieu of his present pension.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES E. JONES.

The bill (H. R. 7260) granting a pension to James E. Jones was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of James E. Jones, late brevet colonel and assistant quartermaster, and to pay him a pension of $25 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE S. WALTON.

The bill (H. R. 7841) granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to George S. Walton, late of Company N, Second Missouri Mounted Volunteers, Mexican war, a pension of $24 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to amend, in line 4, before the name "George S. Walton," by striking out the words "pay to" and inserting "place on the pension roll the name of;" in line 6, after the word "war," by inserting the words "and pay him;" and in the same line, after the word "pension," by inserting "at the rate."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ALPHONZO O. DRAKE.

The bill (H. R. 8286) granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo O. Drake was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Alphonzo O. Drake, late a private in Company E, Second Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $20 per month, in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERBERT W. LEACH.

The bill (H. R. 6482) granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll, at $12 per month, the name of Herbert W. Leach, of Brockton, Mass., late a seaman on the U. S. S. Jeannette, under Commander George W. De Long.

Mr. GALLINGER. After the name "Leach," at the end of line 5, I move to strike out the words "of Brockton, Mass."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL H. BECKWITH.

The bill (H. R. 7306) granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Beckwith was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Samuel H. Beckwith, late a private and sergeant in Company F, Eleventh Illinois Infantry Volunteers and Military Telegraph Corps, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension which he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN CONNOLLY.

The bill (H. R. 8243) granting a pension to John Connolly was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 6, before the word "father," to insert "dependent," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Connolly, dependent father of Thomas Connolly, late of Company A, Sixty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARMENIAS H. EVANS.

The bill (H. R. 8551) to increase the pension of Armenias H. Evans was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Armenias H. Evans, late a private in Company C, Sixth Regiment Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and Battery A, West Virginia Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Armenias H. Evans."

JOHN N. WILEY.

The bill (H. R. 9765) to increase the pension of John N. Wiley was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 3, before the word "is," to insert "he;" and in line 7, before the word "in," to strike out "$50 a month" and insert "$30 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of John N. Wiley, late a member of Company G, Sixty-third Regiment Indiana Infantry, on the pension roll and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to John N. Wiley."

EUGENE A. SHAW.

The bill (H. R. 8679) granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place" to insert "on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" in line 7, after the word "Infantry," to strike out "upon the pension rolls of the United States;" and in line 8, after the word "pension," to strike out "of twenty-five" and insert "at the rate of eighteen;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eugene A. Shaw, late a sergeant in Company C, Twenty-second Regiment of Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $18 per month in lieu of any pension that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ANNIE J. BASSETT.

The bill (H. R. 7989) granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Annie J. Bassett, widow of Lieut. Commander Wesley W. Bassett, United States Navy, on the pension roll, and that she be paid a pension of $15 a month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 6, after the words "pension roll, and" I move to amend by striking out the words "that she be paid" and inserting "pay her;" in line 7, after the word "pension," where it first occurs, to insert "at the rate of" and in the same line, before the word "month," to strike out the word "a" and insert the word "per;" so as to read "and pay her a pension at the rate of $15 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

ALDEN B. THOMPSON.

The bill (H. R. 3164) granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson, of Farmvale, Hamilton County, Nebr., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 6, after the name "Thompson," to strike out "of Farmvale, Hamilton County, Nebr.," and in line 8, after the word "Navy," to strike out "from April 25, 1840, to April 17, 1843," and insert "and pay him a pension;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alden B. Thompson, late a landsman on the ships Columbus and Ohio, in the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson."

MILLIE A. BERRY.

The bill (S. 4281) granting an increase of pension to Millie A. Berry was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Millie A. Berry, widow of R. C. Berry, late first lieutenant of Company F, Seventy-seventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $17 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 8, after the word "pension," I move to insert "at the rate of."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES C. HERVEY.

The bill (H. R. 6841) granting an increase of pension to James C. Hervey was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of James C. Hervey, late captain Company I, Sixty-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and Company C, Ninth Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and to pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he now receives.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB N. ATHERTON.

The bill (H. R. 5069) to pension Jacob N. Atherton was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "month," to strike out "$24 a" and insert "$12 per;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jacob N. Atherton, late of Signal Corps, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Jacob N. Atherton."

JANE E. ZINK.

The bill (H. R. 4811) granting a pension to Jane E. Zink was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pension with amendments, in line 5, before the name "Jane," to insert "of;" and in line 6, before the word "pay," to strike out "to;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Jane E. Zink, widow of James M. Shane, late colonel of the Ninety-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MATILDA WAEDDEL.

The bill (H. R. 9755) granting a pension to Matilda Waedel was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Matilda Waedel, widow of Ferdinand Waedel, late private of Company H, Thirty-fifth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM MANLEY.

The bill (H. R. 1858) granting an increase of pension to William Manley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of William Manley, late private of Company L, Sixteenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and to pay him a pension of $50 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE D. PHINNEY.

The bill (H. R. 4315) to increase the pension of George D. Phinney was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of George D. Phinney, late of Company A, Seventh Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $36 per month in lieu of the pension now being paid him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAULINE ROBBINS.

The bill (H. R. 3624) granting a pension to Pauline Robbins was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Pauline Robbins, the dependent and permanently helpless daughter of Elisha Robbins, late of Company I, One hundred and eighty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHAUNCEY A. BRADLEY.

The bill (S. 4030) to increase the pension of Chauncey A. Bradley was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty-six" and insert "thirty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Chauncey A. Bradley, late private in Company A, One hundred and fourteenth Regiment New York

Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Chauncey A. Bradley."

WILLIAM SHARROCK.

The bill (S. 1918) to increase the pension of William Sharrock was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Sharrock, late of Company F, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to William Sharrock."

LEWIS E. HUMPTON.

The bill (S. 2965) granting a pension to Lewis E. Humpton was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the word "roll," to strike out "at the rate of $24 per month" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" and in line 8, after the word "Volunteers," to insert "and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lewis E. Humpton, late private Company A, Ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Lewis E. Humpton."

LOUISA HALE.

The bill (S. 4207) granting a pension to Louisa Hale was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 6, before the word "stepmother," to strike out "the" and insert "dependent;" and in line 8, after the word "pension," to insert "at the rate;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Louisa Hale, dependent stepmother of Joseph C. Hale, a corporal in Company D, Nineteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move to further amend, in line 7, after the name "Hale," by inserting the word "late;" so as to read: "late a corporal in Company D," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ELLEN LAURIAT.

The bill (S. 3276) granting a pension to Mary Ellen Lauriat was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, after the word "pension," to strike out "of $25 a month" and insert "at the rate of $12 per month;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Ellen Lauriat, widow of George W. Lauriat, late a major of the Thirty-second Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Mary Ellen Lauriat."

SARAH GRESHAM.

The bill (S. 400) to increase the pension of Sarah Gresham, widow of Col. Benjamin Q. A. Gresham, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah Gresham, widow of Benjamin Q. A. Gresham, late colonel Third Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sarah Gresham."

VINTON MASSIE.

The bill (S. 605) granting pension to Vinton Massie was considered as Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Vinton Massie, late private, Company G, Nineteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Vinton Massie."

JUSTIN O. HOTTENSTEIN.

The bill (H. R. 9295) granting an increase of pension to Justin O. Hottenstein was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four;" and in the same line, after the word "month," to insert "in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Justin O. Hottenstein, late of Company G, Twentieth Illinois Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MARY M'LAUGHLIN.

The bill (H. R. 3001) granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 3, after the word "the," to strike out "Commissioner of Pensions" and insert "Secretary of the Interior;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Mary McLaughlin, widow of the late James McLaughlin, captain of Company I, Tenth Regiment Kansas State Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. In line 5, I move to strike out the word "late;" and in line 6, before the word "captain," to insert the word "late."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CURTIS B. M'INTOSH.

The bill (S. 3777) granting an increase of pension to Curtis B. McIntosh was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 6, after the word "and," to strike out "grant him an increase of" and insert "pay him a;" in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" and in the same line, after the word "month," to insert "in lieu of that he is now receiving;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of Curtis B. McIntosh, late of Company I, Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANN GIBBONS.

The bill (H. R. 8266) to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place the name of Ann Gibbons, dependent mother of John J. Gibbons, late captain of Company C, Sixty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, on the pension roll and to pay her a pension of $20 per month in lieu of that which she is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. WENDELL.

The bill (S. 2618) to increase the pension of William H. Wendell was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William H. Wendell, late captain and assistant quartermaster of volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to William H. Wendell."

CLARINDA S. HILLMAN.

The bill (S. 569) granting an increase of pension to Clarinda S. Hillman was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 9, before the word "month," to strike out "that she receive $20 a" and insert "pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Clarinda S. Hillman, widow of Erasmus B. Hillman, late a soldier of the war of 1812, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DIANA CLARK.

The bill (H. R. 2673) granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions, with amendments, in line 4, after the word "place," to strike out "upon" and insert "on;" and in the same line, after the word "roll," to strike out "of the United States" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Diana Clark, widow of Capt. Charles Clark, of Company B, Thirtieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of the pension which she now receives.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. After the name "Clark," in line 7, I move to insert the word "late."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CORYDON G. CRAFTS.

The bill (H. R. 8501) for the relief of Corydon G. Crafts was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Corydon G. Crafts, dependent and permanently helpless son of Moses Crafts, late of the Tenth Regiment Maine Infantry Volunteers, and to pay him a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Corydon G. Crafts."

CLARISSA A. DUNHAM.

The bill (H. R. 6437) for the relief of Clarissa A. Dunham, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Clarissa A. Dunham, the dependent stepmother of Marcus N. Dunham, late private of Company D, United States Engineers, and to pay her a pension of $12 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Clarissa A. Dunham."

Mr. GALLINGER (at 4 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.). I suggest that there are only five minutes left under the special order; and if any Senator wants to call up a special bill, I hope he will do so.

Mr. COCKRELL. We can get through with the entire Pension Calendar in a few moments.

Mr. GALLINGER. I hope so.

JAMES E. EATON.

The bill (H. R. 2497) to increase the pension of James E. Eaton, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 4, after the name "Eaton," to strike out "upon the pension roll of the United States" and insert "late landsman on the Princeton and Wissahickon, United States Navy, on the pension roll;" and in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-four" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of James E. Eaton, late landsman on the Princeton and Wissahickon, United States Navy, on the pension roll, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to James E. Eaton."

MARY E. WALKER.

The bill (H. R. 9732) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Mary E. Walker, late an acting assistant or contract surgeon in the United States Army; and to pay her a pension of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

Mr. GRAY. Is there a report in this case? If there is, I should like to hear it, in order to ascertain upon what ground the pension is asked for.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is a report. The Senate committee adopted the report of the House committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. HANSBROUGH June 25, 1898, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9732) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker, have examined the same and report:

The report of the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House of Representatives, hereto appended, is adopted, and the passage of the bill is recommended.

HOUSE REPORT.

This bill as amended proposes to increase from $8.50 to $20 per month the pension of Mary E. Walker, of the city of Washington, who served as acting assistant or contract surgeon, United States Army, from March 11, 1864, to June 12, 1865, when her service was honorably terminated. Her original appointment was by order of Major-General Thomas, and she appears to have been paid $20 per month. In September, 1864, on the recommendation of General Thomas, she was employed under contract at $100 per month and assigned to the female prison at Louisville, Ky., where she was on duty until May 25, 1865. She was given a medal of honor by Congress and was highly commended by Edw. E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., medical director at Louisville. The following is a copy of an Executive order in her case:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE.

Whereas it appears from official reports that Dr. Mary E. Walker, a graduate of medicine, "has rendered valuable service to the Government, and her efforts have been earnest and untiring in a variety of ways," and that she was assigned to duty and served as an assistant surgeon in charge of female prisoners at Louisville, Ky., upon the recommendation of Major-Generals Sherman and Thomas, and faithfully served as contract surgeon in the service of the United States, and has devoted herself with much patriotic zeal to the sick and wounded soldiers, both in the field and hospitals, to the detriment of her own health, and has also endured hardships as a prisoner of war four months in a Southern prison while acting as contract surgeon; and Whereas, by reason of her not being a commissioned officer in the military service, a brevet or honorary rank can not, under existing laws, be conferred upon her; and

Whereas in the opinion of the President an honorable recognition of her services and sufferings should be made:

It is ordered, That a testimonial thereof shall be hereby made and given to the said Dr. Mary E. Walker, and that the usual medal of honor for meritorious services be given her.

Given under my hand in the city of Washington, D. C., this 11th day of November, A. D. 1865.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President.

By the President:

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Claimant appears to have served as an acting assistant surgeon for fifteen months and to have been a prisoner of war for four months, and, as would be natural, her general health and constitution were greatly injured by the strain of confinement and exposure.

Dr. E. E. Phelps, medical director at Louisville, Ky., testifies to her having suffered from debility and prostration while under his charge at the female military prison at Louisville, and other evidence tends to show that by the hardships and exposure of the military service her general health was greatly impaired and has so continued ever since, and also that she contracted disease of eyes from which she has continuously suffered ever since.

She filed and established a claim in the Pension Office under the general law for disease of eyes, and for that disability she has been pensioned at $8.50 per month (one-half total of rank as assistant surgeon). She has claimed that other disabilities, to wit, affection of lungs and impairment of digestive organs, have resulted from her disease of eyes, but this has not been accepted by the medical authorities of the Pension Office, and the claim based thereon was rejected.

She appealed the claim to the Secretary of the Interior and the rejection was sustained. She appealed for reconsideration and that appeal was overruled. The action of the Pension Office and the Department appears to have been strictly correct. The disabilities named are not shown to have been due to disease of eyes or in any way connected therewith, but the general debilitated condition does appear to have been due to service and to have existed to a greater or less degree ever since, and by reason of such debilitated condition, together with disease of eyes, Dr. Walker would appear to be totally disabled for manual labor.

Had she served simply as a nurse for the length of time that she served in the higher capacity of assistant surgeon, she would, under the act of August 5, 1892, be entitled to a pension of $12 per month. Her services were much more valuable and meritorious, involving much more hardship and exposure, and resulted in greatly injuring her general health. For these services she was commended by the officers under whom she served, by the President, and by the Congress.

She is now 63 years of age and poor, and it certainly is not improper for Congress to make some provision for her support for the remainder of her life.

The bill is reported back with the recommendation that it pass.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, I know how many of these cases go through; how they appeal to the good nature of Congress in dealing with other people's money. It is very easy to be charitable when we are thus dealing. But I do think we owe it to ourselves and to the country to make some scrutiny of these cases.

It appears that in this lady's case her application, on the ground of disability incurred in the service, in addition to the affection of her eyes, has been rejected by competent medical authority, and that upon appeal from that decision to the Secretary of the Interior the rejection has been confirmed. There is not one syllable in the report which overrides or in any way contravenes, by anything that may be called the semblance of evidence, that rejection by the competent pension authorities.

Our pension laws are exceedingly liberal, and are open to criticism, almost, on account of their liberality, and I see nothing in the report to entitle this lady, who I have no doubt is very worthy and has been patriotic, to any recognition that hundreds of other women are not entitled to on grounds just as strong. If we are to pension this woman, we must pension every other woman who has rendered patriotic service without any pay. She was a contract surgeon, according to the report, and received $100 a month for her services. I have no doubt she considered that ample compensation at the time, and while there is a suggestion there is no allegation which amounts to a convincing statement that she incurred, by reason of her service, any other disability than the affection of the eyes; and for that she has already been pensioned.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, we do not allow pensions by Congressional action upon the theory that the Department has made a mistake; it is not an overruling of the Department. But we do it because of the inability of the party to make proof to the satisfaction of the Department or because we think the condition is such that it is a case for the equitable consideration of Congress. That is the theory upon which special bills are granted. It is very likely that there are a great many others just as deserving as Dr. Mary Walker—

Mr. GRAY. Or as undeserving.

Mr. TELLER. But perhaps they have not presented themselves, or perhaps we have already provided for their relief. Dr. Mary Walker was a contract surgeon, and she was entitled to a pension, according to law, if she proved disability, which she did, and she proved that the disability for which she is pensioned did occur because of her service.

She has certainly, as everybody who has known her knows, been for many years in very bad health, to say nothing further about it. I understand she is extremely poor. I think she rendered very good service to the Government of the United States. She did some very good things. She accompanied very many sick and wounded soldiers to their homes, and she has been very generous in her treatment of those people ever since whenever she has had any funds. I do not know who made the report or anything about it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, it is proper I should say that I did not make the report. It was written by a member of the House. I do not know by whom.

Mr. TELLER. Is it a House bill?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes. The House passed the bill and sent it to our committee. The bill was referred to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] as a subcommittee, and he reported it to the full committee, and his report was adopted by the full committee.

I confess that I have entertained prejudices in this case. I have been somewhat importuned of late years in regard to it and have refused to consider it outside of the committee room. It has not come to me in the committee room, or I should have given it consideration. But I confess I was very much surprised when I read the report to find that this woman rendered the service she did render during the late war. I was surprised to learn that she was actually employed as a contract surgeon. I had formerly entertained the opinion that she was not an educated physician. I do not know how highly educated she is, but it seems she was employed and did render service as a physician, and I have no doubt she rendered valuable service to the soldiers. I am not quite sure that I ought not to say this, since the bill has been reported, as a matter of self-defense of the committee.

I trust the Senator from Delaware will let the bill go through. Unfortunately we are passing a great many bills where we have not proof. We are passing some bills that are in the nature of charity. Perhaps we ought not to do it. I revolt every time one comes to me, but we do something in that line in our pension legislation. There is a great deal of pressure for individual bills. I think this bill is quite as meritorious as a good many others, and in view of the fact that this woman's labors and services were recognized to the extent they were by the President of the United States, and I think the report says by Congress—I have not looked it up to see whether any action ever was taken by Congress—I have an impression that her advanced age, which likewise is a surprise to me, and her poverty and the service she rendered may justify us in passing the bill. I am not going to urge it particularly, but I think it might be passed.

Mr. GRAY. I wish to say one word about the matter of pensions. I am in favor of liberal pensions to every man or woman, if there be such a woman, who is worse for having served the country in war time. I believe that in many cases more liberal pensions than are paid by the general pension laws ought to be paid to those who have suffered in mind, body, or estate, as the book of common prayer says, by reason of devotion to country and service to or in the armies of the United States. But I also believe that spirit on the part of the people of this country and the Government of this country toward those who have served it should be protected. I believe that the pension roll, as it has been called by some, should be a roll of honor, and I do believe we owe it to the country, we owe it to ourselves and to our own self-respect some time to call a halt upon the matter of indiscriminate charity.

If this worthy lady is suffering, she is suffering like thousands of other women are suffering all over our country who must help pay this pension, and if she is right here at our door, while we are affected by suffering right before us and not by that far away, let us put our hands into our pockets and help her, but do not let us establish a precedent that everyone who is badly off and has come to feel the pinch of hard times has a right to turn to the common Treasury for relief. It is bound to get us into trouble and it has got us into trouble.

It is a dangerous precedent, and I for one, while not wanting to make a special case of this poor lady, do think we ought to pause before we, upon such a statement as that, grant a pension of $20 a month to her, when there are thousands and hundreds of thousands of worthy women dependent upon their own exertions, in old age or approaching old age, in want, who are without relief and have no pretense upon which to apply to the Government of the United States. Therefore I am opposed to the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. COCKRELL. One minute. I desire to say a word on the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. Very well; I withdraw the motion to enable the Senator from Missouri to address the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, there was a time, some years ago, when I opposed a similar bill. Dr. Walker applied to the Pension Office for a pension. The Pension Office decided that she was entitled to a pension, and granted her a pension of $8.50 a month. I confess I was a little surprised at that, because I thought it had been granted by special act of Congress.

Mr. TELLER. No.

Mr. COCKRELL. But it seems it was granted by the Pension

Office. She has applied for an increase, and the Pension Office has rejected the application for an increase. The Pension Committee has reported in favor of granting an increase.

Now, that is all there is in this case. Congress is not setting a precedent of granting a pension to some one not entitled to it by existing law. That would be a dangerous precedent. That class of cases, I will say to my friend from Delaware, I have continually opposed. But here is a case where the claimant is entitled to a pension, as construed by the Department of the Government having absolute charge of pensions. Being the judge of the law and the fact, it has decided her to be entitled to a pension and has given her $8.50 a month. The only question is as to whether that is a reasonable amount according to the disability? The Pension Office says it is all that her disability justifies, and the Committee on Pensions proposes an increase. Now, the only question is in the increase, and it does not involve the making of a new class of pensionable cases.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. TELLER (to Mr. CULLOM). Withdraw that motion and let us take a vote on the bill.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Colorado and others insist upon my withdrawing the motion. I will do so.

Mr. TELLER. Let us have a vote on the question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I renew my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eighteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, July 5, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 4, 1898.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Capt. William S. Muse, United States Marine Corps, to be a major in said corps, from the 2d day of June, 1898, vice Maj. Percival C. Pope, promoted.

P. A. Surg. Louis W. Atlee, to be a surgeon in the Navy, from the 18th day of June, 1898, vice Surg. Remus C. Persons, promoted.

Alfred Gilbert Grunwell, a citizen of Virginia, to be an assistant surgeon in the Navy, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Harry A. Field, to be a lieutenant in the Navy, from the 1st day of May, 1898, vice Lieut. Kossuth Niles, promoted.

Ensign Albert L. Norton, to be a lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy, from the 1st day of May, 1898 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Lieut. (Junior Grade) Harry A. Field, promoted.

Lieut. Commander William S. Cowles, to be a commander in the Navy, from the 5th day of June, 1898, vice Commander John Schouler, promoted.

Commodore Frederick V. McNair, to be a rear-admiral in the Navy, from the 3d day of July, 1898, vice Rear-Admiral William A. Kirkland, retired.

Capt. William T. Sampson, to be a commodore in the Navy, from the 3d day of July, 1898 (subject to the examinations required by law), vice Commodore Frederick V. McNair, promoted.

Commander Francis W. Dickens, to be a captain in the Navy, from the 3d day of July, 1898, vice Capt. William T. Sampson, promoted.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 4, 1898.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. John B. Bernadou, United States Navy, to be advanced ten numbers on the list of lieutenants, from No. 201 to No. 191, under the provisions of section 1506 of the Revised Statutes, for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle at Cardenas on May 11, 1898.

Asst. Paymaster Richard Hatton, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Barron P. Du Bois, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Harry E. Biscoe, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster John Irwin, jr., to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster George G. Seibels, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Edmund W. Bonnaffon, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

Asst. Paymaster Joseph Fyffe, to be a passed assistant paymaster.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY,
SIXTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Ike T. Jobe, of Kentucky.
William H. Gillenwaters, of Tennessee.
William B. Penny, of Kentucky.
Benjamin W. Hooper, of Tennessee.
Winston Baird, of Tennessee.
Douglas E. McDowell, of Tennessee.
James J. Bowers, of Tennessee.
Charles W. Wadsworth, of Tennessee.
Oliver E. Fox, of Tennessee.
Xenophon Z. Hicks, of Tennessee.

To be first lieutenants.

Frank E. Murphy, of Tennessee.
Thomas A. Davis, of Tennessee.
George F. Milton, of Tennessee.
James P. Clark, of Tennessee.
Frederick H. Gregg, of Tennessee.
Edgar R. Carter, of Tennessee.
John T. Fuller, of Tennessee.
Thomas F. Peck, of Tennessee.
Jacob B. French, of Tennessee.
Frank Maloney, of Tennessee.
Lou Routhan Dennis, of Tennessee.
Antry Greer, of Tennessee, vice Wright, declined.

To be second lieutenants.

James W. Park, of Tennessee.
Harris Lindsley, of the District of Columbia.
Frank L. Case, of Tennessee.
Grant T. Trent, of Tennessee.
Cornelius C. Williams, of Tennessee.
Elmer E. Houk, of Tennessee.
Samuel F. Rogers, of Tennessee.
Harry A. Sizer, of Tennessee.
Andrew J. Brown, jr., of Tennessee.
John Q. Tilson, of Tennessee.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

John D. Twiggs, jr., of Georgia.
Frank R. Frost, of South Carolina.

To be first lieutenants.

Albert W. Gilchrist, of Florida.
Rex Van Den Corput, of Georgia.
Robert B. McBride, of Georgia.

To be second lieutenant.

Martin L. Williams, of Florida.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

Charles C. Berkeley, of Virginia.

To be second lieutenants.

Lawrence W. H. Peyton, of Virginia.
James B. Adams, of Maryland.
Thomas M. Clinton, of Maryland.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Charles P. Pollard, of Alabama.

NINTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

James Henry Aldrich, of Louisiana.
Frank E. Patrick, of Louisiana.
Robert M. Nolan, of Louisiana.
Willis P. Coleman, of Louisiana.
William Lowry, of Louisiana.

To be first lieutenants.

Louis E. Brown, of Texas.
Sterling P. Brown, of Louisiana.
Louis A. Barnett, of Louisiana.
Nelson A. Smiley, of Texas.

To be second lieutenants.

Adolph J. Wakefield, of Texas.
Philip Philipson, of Louisiana.
George W. Butler, of Louisiana.
Wallace D. Seals, of Texas.

TENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be second lieutenant.

Robert S. Hansbury, of Pennsylvania.

TO BE ADDITIONAL PAYMASTER.

Philip Dallam, of Illinois.

FIRST REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Walter D. Webb, of New York.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

John R. Tolbert, of South Carolina, to be collector of customs for the district of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina.

POSTMASTERS.

Frank M. Hoeye, to be postmaster at Perry, in the county of Dallas and State of Iowa.

Seth B. Strong, to be postmaster at Houston, in the county of Harris and State of Texas.

William T. Black, to be postmaster at Mount Pleasant, in the county of Titus and State of Texas.

Robert T. Bartley, to be postmaster at Ladonia, in the county of Fannin and State of Texas.

Laban L. Jenkins, to be postmaster at Gastonia, in the county of Gaston and State of North Carolina.

Mark Sternberger, to be postmaster at Jackson, in the county of Jackson and State of Ohio.

Stephen G. Newman, to be postmaster at Haverstraw, in the county of Rockland and State of New York.

Jay Jackson, to be postmaster at Pine Plains, in the county of Dutchess and State of New York.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, July 5, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. J. F. HEISSE, of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. DAVIS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury transmitting a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, submitting an estimate of deficiency in the appropriation for "Salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue" for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1898, $30,000; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1037) to remove the charge of desertion standing against the name of Patrick Dougherty, Company A, Thirteenth New York Volunteer Infantry, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SEWELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4331) fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, reported it with amendments.

JULIA MOORE SELDEN.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4418) for the relief of Julia Moore Selden, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 4418) entitled "A bill for the relief of Julia Moore Selden," now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1857. And the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act, and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

ESTATE OF DANIEL LAKE.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4393) for the relief of the estate of Daniel Lake, deceased, reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 4393) entitled "A bill for the relief of the estate of Daniel Lake, deceased," now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1857. And the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act, and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 4845) granting an increase of pension to George H. Lamport; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. ROACH introduced a bill (S. 4846) to increase the pension of Derrick F. Hamlink; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PRINTING OF WAR REVENUE ACT.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 18,000 copies of the war-revenue law of 1898, with paper covers and index.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business appears to be closed.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House joint resolution 259.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota, that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business? The Chair hears no objection, and the joint resolution is before the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole.

WASHINGTON AND UNIVERSITY RAILROAD.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, while the Senators are gathering, as they doubtless will very soon, and with the consent of the Senator from Minnesota, very graciously granted, I ask unanimous consent to consider House bill 9203, it being a bill that our Methodist friends are especially interested in, for the construction of an electric railroad through the university property. It is a very important matter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unanimous consent is asked for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 9203) to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, page 1, line 11, after the word "passengers," to strike out "parcels, and milk;" and on page 2, line 1, after the word "street," to insert "as at present laid out;" so as to read:

That the company is authorized to construct and operate a street railway for carrying passengers along the following-named route: Beginning at the intersection of Connecticut avenue extended and Milwaukee street; thence westerly on Milwaukee street as at present laid out to the intersection of Tennallytown road (or Wisconsin avenue), etc.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move an amendment to the amendment of the committee. In line 12, page 1, after the word "at," I move to insert the words "or near;" in line 13, after the word "of," I move to strike out the words "Connecticut avenue extended and Milwaukee street; thence westerly on Milwaukee street as at present laid out to the intersection of Tennallytown road (or Wisconsin avenue); thence northerly over the tracks of the Georgetown;" in line 4, page 2, to strike out "and" before "Tennallytown" and insert "the;" and in the same line to strike out "to" and insert "and" before "Quincy;" so as to read:

Sec. 2. That the company is authorized to construct and operate a street railway for carrying passengers along the following-named route: Beginning at or near the intersection of the Tennallytown road and Quincy street; thence westerly on Quincy street to Forty-fourth street, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 6, page 3, line 14, after the word "shall," to insert "at all times;" so as to make the section read:

Sec. 6. That the railway and its appurtenances shall be constructed in a substantial and durable manner. Such construction shall at all times be subject to District inspection. All changes to existing structures in public space shall be made at the expense of the company.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 4741) to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Tombigbee River, in the State of Mississippi.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10805) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HULL, Mr. MARSH, and Mr. COX managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print 75,000 copies of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States;" in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I call for the regular order.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HALE. I think the Senator from Massachusetts should speak to a fuller Senate than there is present. I do not think there is a quorum in attendance.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum is suggested by the Senator from Maine. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think the absentees should be called.

The Secretary called the names of absent Senators.

The following Senators having answered to their names:

Allison,	Elkins,	Lindsay,	Roach,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Shoup,
Baker,	Faulkner,	McEnery,	Stewart,
Berry,	Foraker,	McLaurin,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Frye,	Mason,	Teller,
Caffery,	Gallinger,	Mitchell,	Turley,
Cannon,	Hale,	Morgan,	Turpie,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Pasco,	Warren,
Cockrell,	Harris,	Penrose,	Wilson,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Wolcott,
Daniel,	Hoar,	Pottus,
Davis,	Jones, Ark.	Pritchard,
Deboe,	Jones, Nev.	Proctor,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Massachusetts is entitled to the floor.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, as I observed last night, it seems to me that I ought to state my views and what I believe to be the views of my constituents before this debate is over. The people of Massachusetts now almost equal in number that of the entire people of the United States when our liberties were won. A question so vital to their interest and to the interest of the whole country ought not to be decided without their voice being heard. But I shall not at this time undertake to go over the whole field or to restate the arguments on either side which here or in executive session heretofore have been so fully and admirably stated.

I believe it is well known—if it be not I am willing to make it known—that I have entertained grave doubts in regard to this measure. I have approached the subject with greater anxiety and hesitation, I believe, than I have ever felt in regard to any other matter during the whole of my public life. I think my friends who do me the honor to listen to me will agree with me that it has not been my habit to hesitate in this way. I have commonly, I believe, formed my opinions pretty early, held to them with a pretty strong confidence, and been ready to express them at all times and anywhere with whatever of clearness and vigor I can command. But I have hesitated and doubted and considered and reconsidered more than once in this matter. Some of my friends, connected with what is called the independent press, I understand, are inclined to attribute this hesitation to cowardice, to a fear of public opinion, or party opinion, or the dread of displeasing somebody, or of offending somebody. I do not observe that these gentlemen ever attribute an honest or patriotic or generous motive to anybody, or at any rate to anybody in public life, who does not happen to agree with them. I must bear their disapproval with such comfort as I can get from the excellent company, including nearly the whole of the American people, of all parties, to whom they are in the habit of applying like criticisms.

Why, Mr. President, if there be any man on the face of the earth who can utter his opinion and cast his vote without fear of anybody it is a Senator from the State of Massachusetts. Her people do not demand of her Senators anything except that they shall form their opinions honestly and conscientiously and act upon them fearlessly. Our constituency expect of me and my colleague not that on all occasions we shall agree with them, not that on all occasions we shall even study to find out what they think; they will not be found on all occasions agreeing among themselves; all that they ask is that we shall do our best to find out what is right and for the public interest, and do it.

This is not a party question. Eminent Senators, eminent leaders of both parties in this country, are found upon different sides. I believe no party in the country has in any important convention approved and no party in the country has in any important convention condemned this measure. President Harrison, who has been credited alike by friend and by opponent with wisdom, caution, conservatism, negotiated a treaty for the annexation of these islands long before the present war was ever thought of. President Cleveland withdrew the treaty. But his eminent Secretary of State, Mr. Bayard, declared his opinion that the islands inevitably in the course of events must sooner or later belong to us.

Of the two great political leaders between whom the Republicans of the United States made their choice at the time of the last nomination, the present Executive favors the measure, which his able and powerful competitor is understood to disapprove. Mr. Bryan, the defeated Democratic and Populist candidate, is understood passionately to denounce the whole scheme, while some gentlemen who are quite likely to succeed him in the leadership and confidence of his following are quite as passionately and eagerly and eloquently arguing the other side.

But, Mr. President, the trouble I have found with this Hawaiian business is this: Not in the character of the population of the Sandwich Islands, not in their distance from our shores, not in the doubt that we have an honest right to deal with the existing government there in such a matter. I have found my trouble in the nature and character of the arguments by which, in the beginning and ever since, a great many friends of annexation have sought to support it. Some very good friends of mine, with whom I have been accustomed to agree all my life, look with an unconquerable apprehension upon this measure, and their judgment of itself would be enough to make me distrust my own opinion.

I can not remember whenever in my life before, during thirty years of my public life, I have ever differed, either in principle or in policy, on an important public question from my honorable friend, the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. At the age of four score and eight years, with his intellectual vision undimmed and his natural mental forces unabated, he has contributed to this great argument the most powerful statement which has been made on either side of the question. I should wait, and wait, and wait certainly until I had heard him before helping to commit the country to an important step which my venerable friend thinks would be fraught with danger.

But, as I have said, the most important argument to my mind against this measure has been the character of the arguments with which it was brought forward and by which it has been supported. If it be true that the passage of these resolves is to commit the United States to such a policy as we have heard advocated on this floor, and as has been advocated in many parts of the country in the press, then the people of the United States are confronted at this moment with the most serious danger they have encountered in all their history, unless we except the danger that slavery would be extended over the whole country or the danger that the rebellion would succeed.

If this be the first step in the acquisition of dominion over barbarous archipelagoes in distant seas; if we are to enter into competition with the great powers of Europe in the plundering of China, in the division of Africa; if we are to quit our own to stand on foreign lands; if our commerce is hereafter to be forced upon unwilling peoples at the cannon's mouth; if we are ourselves to be governed in part by peoples to whom the Declaration of Independence is a stranger; or, worse still, if we are to govern subject and vassal states, trampling as we do it on our own great charter which recognizes alike the liberty and the dignity of individual manhood, then let us resist this thing in the beginning, and let us resist it to the death.

I do not agree with those gentlemen who think we should wrest the Philippine Islands from Spain and take charge of them ourselves. I do not think we should acquire Cuba, as the result of the existing war, to be annexed to the United States.

I do not think we should undertake to rule, as I just said, over barbarous archipelagoes in distant seas. I do not think we should force our commerce upon unwilling nations at the cannon's mouth. I do not think we should enter into a struggle, lawless and barbarous, for the plunder of dismembered China. I do not think that a navy, on the whole, is the best instrumentality of a friendly intercourse with mankind. I do not think drums and trumpets and shouting and the clapping of hands and stamping of feet are the only arguments to be addressed to the statesmanship of a sane and Christian people.

Now, I do not mean to say that the men who propose to us this measure of Hawaiian annexation put their case exclusively or chiefly on such grounds. Certainly nothing of the sort can be found in the state papers of President Harrison or President McKinley. But there has been enough of it to make sober and righteous men who have read history pause, hesitate, and consider. But, Mr. President, I am satisfied, after hearing and weighing all arguments and much meditating on this thing, that all this is needless alarm.

What is the precise proposal which has so excited this dream of empire on the one hand and this dread of national dissolution and destruction on the other? It is proposed to bring under the control of the United States a group of islands containing, according to the Statesman's Year-Book, which I suppose is the best authority, 6,640 square miles and a population, in round numbers, of 100,000. This is to add to the territory of the United States a little less than one five hundred and forty-third part of its gross area—about eighty-four thousandths of 1 per cent. It is proposed to add to the population of the United States about thirteen hundredths of 1 per cent. We are to get a territory a fortieth part of the size of the State of Texas and a population not equal to that of a third-rate city.

But this does not quite state the case. The opponents of annexation, with scarce an exception, say we should hold on to Pearl Harbor for all purposes of war or peace—a harbor of refuge, a coaling station, a naval station, to be ours completely and altogether for all the needs of commerce or of war. So that the question is not whether we are to advance our flag into the Pacific for the first time, but whether it is, on the whole, best that the little scrap of territory and the little handful of people that dwell under the walls and at the gates of our great fortified place shall be under our lawful control or shall be under the control of some foreign country, perhaps a powerful country, perhaps a hostile country.

It is not a question of empire in the Pacific, small or great. It is a question of how far in that little group of islands the boundaries of that empire shall reach—whether we shall be there forever in a strait-waistcoat and within stone walls, or whether we shall have about our walls a little breathing room and a little elbow room. And that, Mr. President, is the whole of it.

No; that is not quite the whole of it. There is a substantially unanimous concert of opinion in this country among all classes of people, I think having not an exception in the Senate, agreed to by all our statesmen of all parties from the beginning, that we have a relation to this group of islands which we can permit no other power to hold or to share. They are to this extent under our dominion now, that they can not be permitted to annex themselves or to attach themselves to any foreign country whatever. We exercise already, and we have exercised for two generations, a dominion over Hawaii which makes it impossible for her to contract not only a marriage alliance, but any other special treaty granting favors or exclusive privileges to any other nation on earth.

Whatever Mr. Webster may have thought, whatever Mr. Bayard may have thought, of annexing Hawaii as a part of this country has been disputed. But there is no dispute about what I have said. There is no dispute that both of them agreed with every predecessor and with every successor in this opinion. When we are considering the question of taking this maiden into our family we can not overlook the fact that she is our dependent and our ward already. Gentlemen doubt whether we are not putting a constraint upon this maiden queen of the Pacific when, with the assent of her existing lawful guardians, at least, we propose to take her hand in marriage. But they have no scruple to tell her that although we will not have her she never shall marry anybody else. She shall dwell forever under the walls of our city and under the guns of our fortress, only half a nation, half a people, possessing half manhood and half womanhood only, in the condition of perpetual childhood and tutelage.

So, Mr. President, what we have to think about and to talk about is whether we shall add thirteen hundredths of 1 per cent to our population and eighty-four one-thousandths of 1 per cent to our domain, when the land and the people are nothing but the outskirts and the suburbs of a place that is ours already, and are, at any rate, to abide for all time, in all the great objects and transactions of national life, under our dominion and under our tutelage.

Why, Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETERIGREW], who has studied and argued this question with great thoroughness, tells us that the entire value of the ships engaged in the Hawaiian trade, which are to be such a corrupting influence on us, will not exceed one-fourth of the value of the wheat crop of a single year in one single county of South Dakota. There are thirty-five fair cities in my own State, every one of which for effective political strength is more powerful than all the Sandwich Islands put together. There are wards in Chicago, nay the ward where I dwell in Worcester, could furnish in everything which makes a great people's strength in war and in peace—art, literature, science, education, invention—more of real value and of real power than the whole Hawaiian population.

Neither do I think, Mr. President, we need to concern ourselves much with the argument of distance. It is true that it is 2,000 miles, or a little more, from San Francisco to Honolulu, but we have learned long ago to annihilate such space. The center of the territory of this Republic, if I am rightly informed, is already in the Pacific Ocean. The water line of Alaska equals the circumference of the globe if it were straightened out. It is 600 miles farther from San Francisco to Kiska—which gentlemen on the other side tell us ought to answer our purposes as a way station on the road to the east—than it is from San Francisco to Honolulu.

My late colleague and friend, and the friend of all of you, Senator Dawes, is, as I think we all know, a man not much given to flights of fancy. But he uttered in my hearing at a little gathering of twenty or thirty men a few years ago a sentence worthy of being handed down in literature by the side of Mr. Webster's famous passage in his speech on the President's protest. Mr. Davies said: "If we can not say of our country, as Mr. Webster said of Great Britain, that her morning drum beat, following the sun, keeping company with the hours, circles the earth in a continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England, we can say that before the sun sets upon Alaska it has risen upon Maine."

The utterances of the fathers of the Republic, even the utterances of Mr. Webster and his contemporaries of a later time, so far as they speak of dealing with remote regions, have been rendered irrelevant by steam and electricity. When this Constitution of ours was inaugurated it was a nine days' journey from New York to Boston; it frequently took three weeks to go from Philadelphia to New Haven; in Jefferson's time, when Louisiana was acquired, it took three months to go from St. Louis to Washington and six months from the mouth of the Colorado River.

I remember very well myself when my father was a member of the House of Representatives that it was a four days' journey from Washington to his home in Concord, Mass. The steamboat voyage between New York and Norwich, on Long Island Sound, took then as long as it takes now to go from Washington to Boston. It is to-day four days of pleasant passage in a first-class hotel over the smooth waters of the Pacific from San Francisco to the Sandwich Islands, and it will, I hope and believe—and I hope and believe the life of my honorable friend from Vermont [Mr. Morrill] will be prolonged to see it—soon be reduced to three days, or probably to two days. The ocean telegraph, and perhaps the telephone, will have that effect upon distance that the enterprising newspapers of Honolulu under our rule will tell their readers of events in Washington six hours before they happen. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I think it will be presumptuous to disregard the opinions of our great military and naval experts, including the known opinion of two Presidents of the United States, both admirable soldiers, that the possession in the Sandwich Islands of a harbor, of a coaling station, of a station for the repair and refuge of vessels, is essential to the safety of our Pacific coast in time of war. I think it would be presumptuous to disregard the lessons of the present war, that such a possession will be a great advantage to us both for defense and for attack, and that such possession by any powerful foreign government will be a great military and naval danger to our Western coast.

I am not qualified to discuss it. Without derogating from the authority of the eminent civilians who discuss these questions either in the press or in the Senate, I do not think they are qualified to discuss it. I do not complain of them. We are committed, however, to that doctrine already, and we have settled that question already in the minds of all of us without exciting any alarm and without any considerable dissent.

We made a treaty years ago for the possession of Pearl Harbor at a cost, direct and indirect, of many millions of dollars. I understand the gentlemen who have spoken on the other side are substantially unanimous in saying that we ought to occupy, improve, and fortify Pearl Harbor. So the question is simply, as I have said, whether, in occupying and fortifying and improving Pearl Harbor and establishing there a naval station and a fortified place, a place of deposit for coal, for the materials to repair our shipping, a place like those which the experience and wisdom of England has led her to establish all around the globe, we are adhering to the established, settled, and almost wholly unquestioned policy of the United States.

If that be true, we have only left the simple question whether, when occupying and holding and controlling Pearl Harbor, it is better we should command the islands also, or leave them to be in the command of a foreign and perhaps a hostile power.

But it is said that until present conditions change very much the population of these islands must be governed under arrangements established by Congress, and not in the ordinary way of an American State. That is true. But that is in entire accord with the constitutional policy established by our fathers and maintained without any considerable complaint from their day to ours. The Constitution says:

The Congress shall have power to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such district (not exceeding 10 miles square) as may, by cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings.

And it adds:

The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.

Mr. President, we are governing here by Congress now a population in this District of 300,000, I suppose, or thereabouts—larger than all but three or four of the States that formed the Union—simply because we do not deem it wise that the Congress of the United States shall sit where their protection against mobs and public disorders shall depend in times of political excitement upon the authority of any State, and we govern without complaint and as a matter of political necessity, for the sake simply of having the Capitol safe and keeping its windows from being broken by mobs, 275,000 or 300,000 people here at the will of Congress and without their being represented, and nobody complains of it, and nobody thinks that it is a violation of American principles. And so in a less degree of every smaller place where a fort or a dockyard or an arsenal is established.

We govern Alaska also and we govern the Territories at the will of Congress, and I find no departure from our American principles in saying that this little population living near Pearl Harbor shall be governed as Territories are governed and as the District of Columbia is governed until they are fitted to come in as a State.

Gentlemen tell us that the possession of the Sandwich Islands will not add to our security, but to our danger in a foreign war. They say that we must maintain a powerful fleet to defend them besides what we already have on our Pacific coast. But I have already suggested an answer to that argument. We settled that question when we acquired by treaty our rights in Pearl Harbor, and it will remain settled until Congress is ready to cede back Pearl Harbor to the Sandwich Islands. If we are to give up Pearl Harbor then there may be room for that argument. If we are to hold on to Pearl Harbor—as nearly every man who has spoken in this debate on the other side says we are—we must fortify it, we must defend it in case of war, and we do not want to run any risk that the power that tries to take it shall be already lawfully intrenched next door.

But I do not put this case upon any such ground. I think the acquisition of Hawaii by the United States is an extension of the domain of peace upon the habitable globe. I hope and expect that we shall come out of the present war, unless we indulge in the folly, as I think it, of entering upon a policy of acquisition and of aggression, after such fashion that no nation, small or great, powerful or weak, will desire to attack us for a hundred years.

Mr. President, we must, of course, have no doubt about the question whether we have an honest right to do this. If we have not, we are not going to steal Naboth's vineyard or to commit under any temptation an act of international dishonor. That is clear. But we have, in the first place, the assent of the Hawaiian Government. We can not in matters of international dealing commonly go behind that. We would never permit any nation, small or great, who undertook to deal with us, to make the inquiry whether the President and the Senate of the United States did not represent the will of the American people, and there is no possibility for any dealing under public law between nations on public questions which undertakes to go on any other theory.

I agree that in annexing a nation and merging its life with our own we would not take the act of a temporary usurpation in violation of the will of the people. We have heard repeated the charge that the present Government in Hawaii was the result of a usurpation countenanced and fostered by the presence of the American forces. I think that argument is refuted by the fact that ever since and during four years when the President of the United States was notoriously in sympathy with the exiled Queen there was neither overthrow nor attempt to overthrow the existing Government in Hawaii.

There was nothing to stand in their way if a few thousand men were governing a hundred thousand during those four years, with President Cleveland ready to acknowledge a new Government. If the Government did not represent the people there was no difficulty in its overthrow. This question is settled. We met and debated and overthrew and overthrew again this pretense that the American people committed an act of dishonor and of oppression and of fraud when about a hundred marines went ashore after the revolution was fairly accomplished in order to protect the lives and property of American citizens. Very few gentlemen, except those who through thick and thin stand by the political policy of the Democratic party adopted at that time, will be heard to make that argument now. Certainly it will not be heard from my honorable friend from Vermont.

Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Davies], in a charming and delightful passage, described that old Government of the Queen with a humor and felicity which are alike the admiration and the despair of all who heard him when he referred to it as a little spectacle or puppet show—this dusky Queen, with her tinsel crown and her stage mask and her gilded dresses and trimmings, making an exhibition in a summer's day in that tropical island, and then, when it was over, going out, like an ordinary stage queen, at the back door to take her place again in the ranks of the common people, and Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Commissioner Blount happening to be present and looking on and taking it all seriously, as Don Quixote and Sancho Panza took seriously the exhibition on the stage in the immortal story.

Mr. President, the attempt to frighten us here with the old masks and the old dresses of that poor old stage play, which have not now even the reality of an actor inside of them, will fail in the present serious mood of the American people. The Queen and the Hawaiian monarchy are just as surely things of the past, a nightmare of the past, as are Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Blount and their mugwump followers.

Mr. President, our Quaker fellow-citizens, from whom we can learn a great deal in the ways of peace and of self-government, have a habit of taking a vote, which I think is perhaps sometimes rather better than the mere counting of noses. As I understand, there are some parts of the country where the counting of noses always prevails, where those having white noses are counted as Republicans and those having red noses as belonging to some other party [laughter], and they declare the result by the actual numerical majority. But the Quakers ascertain what they call the solid sense of the meeting, and they determine through the instrumentality of the clerk on what side of any given question the permanent weight and strength, considering character as well as numbers, is to be found, and I suppose no man will doubt that everything that gives character, that gives industry, that gives sobriety, that gives strength, that gives either honor in the past or hope for the future to the Sandwich Islands is on the side of this measure of annexation.

The Americans want it, the Government there wants it, the Portuguese want it, and the Hawaiians, to the best of my knowledge, neither know nor care whether they want it or not. They are a perishing people. They were 300,000 a century ago; they were 150,000 half a century ago; they were 50,000 ten or twenty years ago; they are 30,000 to-day, and their only hope and desire and expectation is that, in the providence of God, they may lead a quiet and undisturbed life, fishing, bathing, supplied with tropical fruits, and be let alone.

They will fall, Mr. President, if we do not prevent it, a prey to Japan, not by conquest, but by immigration. This result all parties agree that we must prevent. Japan is not, according to the opponents of annexation of this body and in the press, to be allowed to get the Sandwich Islands, either by force or by absorption. If that be true, is it better, is it safer, is it more in accordance with the policy of a wise and well-considered peace, to prevent that by annexation than to have hereafter a war of force based on the doubtful principle of international law and the doubtful claim of right to which we must resort if we find that thing going on?

I had the statistics of the different classes of the population here, but I have mislaid them for a moment, and I shall not go into that.

We did not consult the Indians in Texas or in California or in New Mexico or in Alaska when those Territories were taken into the Union. We did not consult the Indians when we declared our own independence.

Mr. President, I believe that this is a contest to be settled now peacefully or to be settled hereafter by force between America and Asia for the possession of this group of islands; that it is a contest between the domain of peace, which is America, and the domain of war, which is Asia. The danger is, as I have said, that there will be an infusion of Japanese and then an attempted annexation to Japan; and there is a more serious danger in undertaking to resist this hereafter by war than there is in preventing it now by the methods and instrumentality of peace.

Mr. President, of the population in 1896 there were 53,726 persons, one-half the entire number, without any regular occupation. This was after counting laborers, after counting fishermen, after counting all persons engaged in trade, agriculture, and the mechanic arts. There were 53,726 persons without any regular occupation.

Now, when we are speaking of a great national choice, I prefer to take the opinion as to national destiny of the Government and the men who carry on the schools and the men who rescued the nation from barbarism and cannibalism, and the tradesmen and the fishermen and the laborers and the farmers and the mechanics, rather than the men who are without any occupation at all. Of the population in 1896—another significant fact showing the general character of a large portion of this population who are relied on as agreeing and sympathizing with the opponents of annexation—there were 72,517 males against 30,503 females, the males outnumbering the females in the proportion of two to one. Half the males in those islands are men without family, without any occupation which they can give to a census taker as an occupation in life, and undoubtedly persons who will depart from those islands and go back to their Asiatic homes when they get ready.

The native population, which was 200,000 when Captain Cook discovered the islands a century ago, has gone down to 31,000. So the Chinese and Japanese, who will get out when we get proper American labor laws, who are there not for any purpose of permanent citizenship, already exceed the entire native population by one-half and are increasing as the natives diminish.

Now, it is idle to suppose that the will of this simple native population, the will of these transitory Asiatics, will be or can be exerted for any rational choice to determine their destiny. Their only hope is that the power which rescued them from barbarism may hereafter, under the benignant influence of the United States and under the protection of our flag, rescue them from decay and death. It would be as reasonable to take the vote of the children in an orphan asylum or an idiot school as to what should be done if a conflagration were raging in the street or if a flood were about to sweep away their building as to consult these simple and helpless people about how to deliver them from this oriental menace.

It is said they will come in as a State some time. But they will not come in as a State unless they are fit to be a State. If they have got hereafter a population of a million or fifteen hundred thousand of American lineage and American character and American ideals, a population like that of Washington or like that of Colorado, they will come in and we shall welcome them. But if they are unfit, they will not come in; we never have been in a hurry about this thing. They said that about New Mexico when they made the treaty by which we acquired her, and I remember that thirty years ago, when I first came into public life, the great-grandfather of my honorable friend the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS], a slender, graceful, elegant Delegate from New Mexico in the other House, a man who could have crept through any alderman's thumb ring, was there beseeching and beseeching and besetting us to admit New Mexico as a State. I think my friend the Senator from Maine will remember it. He has gone and his great-grandson is here, a Senator from the State of West Virginia, and New Mexico is not any nearer admission as a State in the United States than she was in the year 1869. We have not admitted Alaska; we have not admitted the District of Columbia; we have not admitted Arizona. If they get a people there likely to select such men as Mr. Dole or Mr. Thurston or Mr. Damon for Senators and Representatives, they will be a very good people for statehood and for American citizenship and American sovereignty.

Mr. President, I have regretted to hear in this debate some sneers at the missionaries and the sons of missionaries who have redeemed Hawaii and who are now presenting her at the gates to the people of the United States. I know something about that quality. I know something of the New England missionaries and of the like missionaries from other parts of the country who, wherever, either in a foreign land or within our own borders on the frontiers, there has been a contest for civilization and Christianity and peace, have been in the front rank. I knew the fathers of these men in my youth, and I have watched their character and career ever since.

All over the West, all over the South after the civil war, almost before the first settler arrived with his measuring chain or his rifle on the frontier, the Methodist or the Congregationalist or the Presbyterian missionary is found in advance. The corner stone of the church precedes the corner stone of the cabin. There is not a story of true heroism or true glory in human annals which can surpass the story of missionaries in this or in foreign lands whom America has sent forth as the servants of civilization and piety. They have taken their lives in their hands. They have sacrificed ambition, family ties, hope, health, and wealth. No danger that stood in their way, no obloquy, deterred them.

Forth went the heralds of the cross,
No dangers made them pause;
They counted all the world but dross,
For their great Master's cause.

Through looks of fire, and words of scorn,
Serene their path they trod;
And to the dreary dungeon borne,
Sang praises unto God.

In all his dark and dread array,
Death rose upon their sight;
But calmly still they kept their way,
And shrank not from the fight.

They knew to whom their trust was given,
They could not doubt His word;
Before them beamed the light of heaven,
The presence of their Lord.

In this day of our pride and exultation at the deeds of our young heroes in Manila and in Cuba, let us not forget that the American missionary in the paths of peace belongs to the same heroic stock and is an example of the same heroic temper.

Mr. President, I said a little while ago that the telegraph and the railroad, electricity and steam, had rendered obsolete the prophecies even of our wisest statesmen in regard to the value to us of distant properties and dependencies. Mr. Webster, the most prudent, wise, and sane intelligence that ever represented an American State on this floor, declared, when the question of the struggle for our Northwest Territory was up, that the land of Oregon and of Washington never would be worth a quarter of a dollar an acre. Just think of it! Suppose we had Vancouver's Island to-day alone, which we should have had but for that prevalent feeling among the statesmen of forty or fifty years ago, what an addition to the strength and glory of the people of the United States!

Mr. President, there are two dreams and conceptions of empire. Of one I shall have something to say presently. But the other, although in every generation good men and wise men have been alarmed by it and conservative men have resisted it, has no terror for me. The empire which consists in the slow, sure, steady growth of American ideas, of the principles of equality, of the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence, of the right of every man to an equal share in the government under which he lives—I have no fear of such an idea of empire if it shall travel, as some day it will travel, the whole continent over, from the North to the South, or the whole round world over, from the East to the West.

I do not undervalue the quality of the noble Southern stock who have contributed so much of strength, of heroism, of the sense of honor, or courage, of the love of home to the character of this people. I have stated my opinion of it more than once. But I also take some pride in the character of the Pilgrim stock, a people whose one quality is the desire to carry to other people and to other lands the blessings and the principles to which they owe their own greatness and strength.

We have taken this step, which these sons of the New England missionaries ask us to take now to the islands of the sea, again and again and again, in spite of misgiving and hesitation and timidity in every generation. We settled Ohio and the four great States which were made from Ohio; we went on to the great States of the Middle West and to the far West. We planted on the shore of the Pacific those great States whose people in the near future on a larger scale and with greater success are to repeat the great deeds of civilization—

The world's great age begins anew,
The golden years return,
The earth doth like a snake renew
Her winter weeds outworn:—
Heaven smiles, and faiths and empires gleam
Like wrecks of a dissolving dream.

A brighter Hellas rears its mountains
From waves serenest far;
A new Peneus rolls its fountains
Against the morning star.
Where fairer Tempes bloom, there sleep
Young Cyclops on a sunnier deep.

Our brethren and our children have done in the West what our fathers did in the East. Under new conditions, in a later age, on the shores of a more pacific sea, in a more genial clime, they are to repeat in the near future the old and wondrous story. The world shall see in that far clime the streets of a wealthier New York; the homes of a more cultured Boston; the halls of a more learned Harvard; the workshops of a busier Worcester. The time has come for another step and another advance until halfway between America and Asia, in the very center of the Pacific, the United States is to plant her flag, the emblem not of empire, not of tyranny, not of force, but of freedom, of equality, of self-government, of peace.

Mr. PETTUS. If the Senator from Massachusetts will allow me, I desire to ask his opinion, as an authority, on a very important matter connected with this debate. He has expressed some alarm at the idea of extending the empire of this country by conquest. I wish to know from the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts whether he thinks it is possible for the United States to take and hold as its own the Island of Cuba in this war, or whether the United States is not in all honor bound not to do it?

Mr. HOAR. I was just approaching that subject. I do not think it is possible for the United States, without ceasing to be the United States, to do the thing of which the Senator from Alabama inquires. I said the other day a few sentences when the resolutions the result of which was the declaration of the present war were about to be voted upon in the Senate, and I should like to repeat what I said then.

I am one of those persons who believe the war in which we are engaged to be a holy and just war. I said, when the resolutions which made it inevitable were before Congress:

It will lead to the most honorable single war in all history, unless we except wars entered upon by brave people in the assertion of their own liberty. It is a war in which there does not enter the slightest thought or desire of foreign conquest or of national gain or advantage. I have not heard throughout this whole discussion, in the Senate or in the House, an expression of a desire to subjugate and occupy Cuba for the purpose of our own country. There is nothing of that kind suggested. It is disclaimed by the President. It is disclaimed by the committee. It is disclaimed by everybody, so far as I am aware. It is entered into for the single and sole reason that three or four hundred thousand human beings within 90 miles of our shores have been subjected to the policy intended, or at any rate having the effect, deliberately to starve them to death—men, women, and children; old men, mothers, and infants.

When I said that, Mr. President, I had, of course, no right to speak for anybody but myself. But the resolutions which followed thereafter, passed by both Houses of Congress and approved by the President, spoke the sense and plighted the faith of the American people. They declared, "That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people."

Mr. President, this was no idle utterance. It was no mere declaration of a present purpose, a policy we might change, affecting the people of the United States alone, concerning which we were at liberty to change our mind under new conditions or under new views of old conditions. We had no reason to know at that time what, in accordance with their custom in all European wars, the great powers would consider they had the right to do, either in interfering with the war or undertaking to influence either by force or diplomacy the terms of peace. It is utterly idle to say that we meant when we made that declaration to confine it to the case of Cuba, and that we reserved the right to strip Spain by armed force for our own selfish purposes as the price of peace of every other possession she held on the face of the earth. We meant to declare in the face of the people of the earth, as a just and wise policy, to which the time had come for committing ourselves, that neither the object nor the result of this war was to be the acquisition of territory or the pride of empire. By that policy I expect for one to stand. Unless I misunderstand the temper of the people of Massachusetts and of the people of these United States, they mean to stand by it also.

To go further than the acquisition of the Sandwich Islands, a matter substantially determined upon by the people of the country long before this war broke out and considered by them with reference as much to the interests of peace as to the interests of war, would be, in my judgment, a serious mistake, and under the present circumstances a serious breach of faith.

Mr. President, we must change all our constitutional methods of procedure before we can undertake the government of millions of people at a distance who can not be admitted to our self-government.

Just look at one matter—the utter inadequacy of our diplomacy to deal with the delicate and difficult problems we must encounter. If we are to govern an oriental empire, we shall have a deep and immediate interest in the balance of power in Europe and the yet unadjusted balance of power in Asia and in the islands of the sea. We must have our alliances, struggles, rivalries, jealousies, strifes, bargains. We must jostle and scheme and plan and thrust.

The American flag must be kept flying the whole world over on powerful and numerous ships of war. We must have a navy equal to the strongest and costly as the most expensive. We must have a standing army ready at an instant's or a week's notice to be poured out against any foreign competitor.

We must be ready to move among the mighty chess players in the game where little delay or pause for reflection can be tolerated. Eastern diplomacy of late years is a game of alliances, offensive and defensive, of threats, of cajolements, of exchanges, sometimes of swagger and bluster, of professed friendships, and of secret enmities. Its alliances and its antagonisms are never long lived. The friend of to-day is the enemy of to-morrow. It requires the hand of iron under the glove of silk; the open countenance and the close counsel; if not the diplomacy that lies but never deceives, at least the diplomacy that deceives but never lies.

Now, how impossible is all this to the simple-hearted, open, frank, impressionable American people, governed always more by emotions and sympathies than by interest; tolerating no secrecy, impatient, unwilling to wait, fed by its press with predictions rather than narratives of the past; in its eagerness to know what is to happen in the next hour, careless as to what has happened in the last hour. The great countries with whom we must deal are served by a body of trained diplomatists, circumspect, secret, grave, prudent, prepared for their function by the training of large part of a lifetime and expecting nothing but its honorable exercise for the rest of a lifetime.

England or Germany can wait. If you will not come to her terms this year, she will wait five years or ten years, until the time be propitious. An American Secretary of State or plenipotentiary is ambitious to sign his name to a treaty. If he fail, his official life, which at best must end in a few years, is a failure. The Englishman knows that if England does not carry her point this year, she can make the effort again in five or ten years and that he will doubtless be there to make it.

The other great powers of the world can keep their secrets.

Upon our diplomacy the enterprise of the press turns constantly its powerful Drummond light. Under this it is hard for the Department of State to keep its secrets. It is absolutely impossible for the Senate, with its ninety members and its six or eight executive officers admitted to all its sessions, to do so. If in a proposed treaty there be any advantage to the United States which a far-sighted sagacity has perceived, that is pointed out to the other party to the bargain before the bargain is accomplished. Not only that, but in all grave matters our diplomacy is accompanied by the impassioned and excited utterances of the press and the pulpit, sometimes inspired by partisanship, sometimes inspired by sincere, zealous, patriotic, enthusiastic but most ill-informed, excited, and foolish counsels.

Foreign nations who deal with us or make alliances against us can act promptly. Their foreign relations are conducted by a single will. We require the concurrence by a two-thirds vote of a Senate representing forty-five States, where unlimited debate is often used as a weapon to prevent action altogether. It is rare that any Administration will have a two-thirds majority in the Senate. It is rare that important treaties committing the country to new policies will not be the subject of difference between political parties. So the party in opposition is not unlikely to muster all its strength to defeat the policy of its antagonist. For a country at peace with all the world, confined within a single continent, such an arrangement may work well. But if we are to pursue a career of empire in oriental archipelagoes, into China, perhaps into Africa, our Constitution must be amended and larger diplomatic authority conferred on the Executive.

Mr. President, our constitutional arrangements, State and national, are founded upon the principle of the equality of States and the equality of citizens. We have no training, no principles, no historic precedents, that fit us for any other but self-government. We are as little fitted to govern barbarous archipelagoes as their people are to govern us. Any thoughtful person who will read the memoirs of any of the great diplomatists of Europe—Metternich, Talleyrand, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, Lord Malmesbury, Sir Henry Bulwer—will see how impossible would have been the conduct of their negotiations under our system.

Diplomatic secrets shared with ninety Senators, the power to declare war in one place and the treaty-making power in another, no bargain with a foreign country to have any binding force unless the political opponents as well as the political friends of the Administration concur in it. Add to this the dominant power of public sentiment which, though always wise when it is deliberate, yet so often invades the atmosphere of American diplomacy with passionate, ignorant clamor from press and from pulpit. Do not let it be supposed that in stating this as one reason against the acquisition of an Eastern empire it is stated as the strongest. As I said in the beginning, the temptation constitutes, in my opinion, a danger to the Republic greater than that of war or of rebellion.

If this country, tempted by the desire to extend the market for its manufactures or to extend its foreign commerce, undertakes to enter upon the competition with the great powers of Europe for empire in the Eastern Hemisphere, it will require very soon a reconstruction of our Constitution and an abandonment of our great principles of equality and constitutional liberty which lie at its foundation. It will change the sentiments and aspirations of the people. The controlling passions, the controlling motives, of our public and private conduct will be ambition, avarice, glory, power, wealth. The teacher of the people will no longer be found speaking of justice, freedom, kindness, love of country, love of home, public spirit, education, humanity, charity. We shall go what is alike the common way of the great empires and the great republics of the past.

There is the moral of all human tales;
'Tis but the same rehearsal of the past,
First Freedom, and then Glory—when that falls,
Wealth, vice, corruption—barbarism at last.
And History, with all her volumes vast,
Hath but one page.

I repeat what I have lately said elsewhere. The starry flag is no symbol of dominion or of empire. Let it never fly in time of peace over conquered islands or vassal states. It is the emblem of freedom, of self-government, of law, of equality, of justice, of peace on earth and good will to men, or, at least, as the older version hath it, of peace to good-willing men on earth—pax in terris hominibus bonæ voluntatis.

President McKinley has won the love and the admiration of his countrymen by his hesitation to enter upon war even in a holy cause except as a last extremity. He will, I believe, show the same quality of courage and of large patriotism in refusing to permit a result to that war which will transform the character of his countrymen and, sooner or later, the Constitution of his country.

We do not want the large army; we do not want the great navy; we do not want the mighty debt; we do not want the putting up of taxes; we do not want every vocation and every property and every interest in life to be pursued constantly and all the year round by the taxgatherer; we do not want the American when he is born to be like the European when he is born, with an armed soldier riding upon his back and a mortgage of $400 about his neck; we do not want the proconsul and prætor. We do not want the story of Verres or of Marius to be repeated in American history. We do not want what will follow—the temptation to get rid of public obligation by tampering with public honor, debasing our currency, and breaking our faith. We do not want the people of other countries feeling an interest in our policies and our people feeling an interest in the policies of other countries.

Mr. President, there are two dreams of empire, two conceptions of destiny, two avenues of power presented to the gaze of the American people to-day. One is held out to us in the far East and in the West Indies as the result of military conquest; the other is held out to us in Hawaii by the children of the Puritans, who have redeemed those beautiful islands from barbarism and cannibalism, and show them as the harvest of seventy years of Christian and peaceful labor. The first is that which has been the ruin of the empires and republics of former times. It is that which has brought Spain to her wretched condition to-day. The second allures us in the path we have followed since liberty entered this hemisphere by the gates of Jamestown and of Plymouth, and the little handful of Puritans and Cavaliers came in, who have grown and multiplied until our temple covers a continent and its portals are upon both the seas. One is the dominion over subject people, and the rule over vassal states. It is forbidden to us by our Constitution, by our political principles, by every lesson of our own history and of all history.

The other is the invitation to willing and capable people to share with us our freedom, our self-government, our equality, our education, and the transcendent sweets of civil and religious liberty. In that path we have never yet known failure. Let us tread it, if need be, without fear and without flinching. Let us, if need be, take some risks in the holy cause of liberty. Let the light which illumines the continent shine also upon the sea.

Mr. President, the wise man in that sublimest of poems, the Book of Ecclesiastes, describes to us the decay of human strength and hope in old age. He tells us that "the keepers of the house shall tremble;" that "the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail;" "they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way." This applies also with a still more terrible and emphatic significance to the disease and decline of states. The country that hath no growth in it hath no hope in it. That people that loses its courage loses with it everything else that is worth having.

We have made in the past acquisitions and additions into our empire to which that of the Hawaiian Islands is but as a drop in a bucket—is but as the dust that hangs upon the scales. We have never been afraid to venture our ship of state upon any voyage or in any sea.

We sailed wherever ship could sail;
We founded many a mighty state;
Pray God our greatness may not fail
Through craven fears of being great.

I think we can find no safer guide than the chart of our own experience. What has been good for us in the past will be good for us again in the future.

Some of our passengers will always be seasick. There will never to them be blue in the sky, or freshness in the gale, or light in the horizon, or hope in the heart. Our brave young country, especially in this Fourth of July season, will not look for its leadership to such counselors. We have never from the beginning looked to such counselors. Our New England prophet and poet has struck for every American heart the note which belongs to the season and the opportunity:

O tenderly the haughty day
Fills his blue urn with fire;
One morn is in the mighty heaven,
And one in our desire.

Mr. President, it is not distance; it is not numbers; it is not vast space by sea or land; it is not hostile or rival nations that we have at this time to dread. It is a departure from American principles. It is the temptation to substitute for our fundamental law of political equality and our fundamental rule of political justice the dream of empire, the greed of gain, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. I would solve this problem which is upon us to-day. I would solve the greater and more dangerous problem which is upon us in the near future by this simple rule:

We will acquire no territory; we will annex no people; we will aspire to no empire or dominion, except where we can reasonably expect that the people we acquire will, in due time and on suitable conditions, be annexed to the United States as an equal part of a self-governing Republic.

Mr. LINDSAY obtained the floor.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator from Kentucky kindly promised to yield to me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. LINDSAY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I wish only to recite very briefly one or two historical incidents that will illustrate some things the Senator from Massachusetts has just been saying. We are not altogether without instruction in precedents in some of these matters.

I was interested to read the other day a joint resolution passed by Congress January 15, 1811, to this effect:

Taking into view the peculiar situation of Spain, and of her American provinces; and considering the influence which the destiny of the territory adjoining the southern border of the United States may have upon their security, tranquillity, and commerce—

That is, of the territory—

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the United States, under the peculiar circumstances of the existing crisis, can not, without serious inquietude, see any part of the said territory pass into the hands of any foreign power; and that a due regard to their own safety compels them to provide, under certain contingencies, for the temporary occupation of the said territory—

Meaning Florida—

They at the same time declare that the said territory shall, in their hands, remain subject to future negotiation.

Nobody must take Florida. And here is a more significant statute:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to take possession of and occupy all or any part of the territory lying east of the River Perdido and south of the State of Georgia and the Mississippi Territory, in case an arrangement has been or shall be made with the local authority of the said territory for delivering up the possession of the same or any part thereof to the United States, or in the event of an attempt to occupy the said territory or any part thereof by any foreign government; and he may, for the purpose of taking possession and occupying the territory aforesaid and in order to maintain therein the authority of the United States, employ any part of the Army and Navy, etc.

And it is further enacted that the President may establish some form of government for the territory east of the River Perdido.

In the act of February 12, 1812, Congress proceeded to authorize him "to occupy and hold all that tract of country called West Florida, which lies west of the River Perdido, not now in possession of the United States." Thus by two successive acts the President was also authorized in his discretion to take possession of this territory, the whole of Florida, for which he had made no treaty.

The territory was acquired by treaty in 1819. Between that and 1823 the President governed it pretty much as he pleased. But here is a significant act, the act of March 30, 1823, declaring that the executive power of all this territory which we had acquired should be vested in a governor holding for the term of three years, commanding the militia, ex officio superintendent of Indian affairs, with power to grant pardons for local offenses and reprieves for those against the United States; and that a secretary should be appointed for four years. Here is the way in which we governed this territory:

That the legislative power shall be vested in the governor and in thirteen of the most fit and discreet persons of the territory, to be called the legislative council, who shall be appointed annually by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate.

There was no popular election there.

And it was further provided the governor, "by and with the advice of the legislative council, or a majority of them, shall have power to alter, modify, or repeal the laws which may be in force at the commencement of this act. Their legislative powers shall also extend to all the rightful subjects of legislation." It was, of course, provided that such legislation must be in harmony with the Constitution and laws of the United States. The right to govern a land acquired by seizure, upon which were persons of various races and religions, by a central power, without the consent of the people, was demonstrated. Of course it was only for temporary purposes. That is clearly set forth in these acts concerning Florida.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President—

Mr. BACON. If the Senator from Kentucky will pardon me a moment—

Mr. LINDSAY. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. When the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] took the floor, the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] said he thought he was entitled to a better audience than was then present among the Senators, and for that reason he suggested the want of a quorum. I think I can bear testimony to the fact that on our side the Senator from Massachusetts had a full and a patient hearing. We desire that the Senator from Kentucky shall have an equally full and patient hearing from the other side of the Chamber. I think it is nothing but fair that they should give it. I therefore suggest the want of a quorum.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Davis,	Hoar,	Pettus,
Allison,	Deboe,	Jones, Ark.	Pritchard,
Bacon,	Elkins,	Kyle,	Shoup,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Lindsay,	Spooner,
Bate,	Faulkner,	McBride,	Stewart,
Berry,	Frye,	McEnery,	Sullivan,
Barrows,	Gallinger,	Mills,	Teller,
Clark,	Gerr,	Morgan,	Turley,
Clay,	Hale,	Morrill,	White.
Cockrell,	Hansbrough,	Nelson,
Cullom,	Harris,	Pasco,
Daniel,	Heitfeld,	Perkins,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Kentucky will proceed.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, if the protraction of this debate had resulted in no other good, the country has been more than compensated by the patriotic speech which has just been delivered by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. In some respects it is a most remarkable speech. It is in the nature of a poetical apology for an act about to be committed, which, if it be not unconstitutional, is at least extraconstitutional, and a patriotic protest against an un-American policy intended to be inaugurated by the adoption of this joint resolution.

I agree with the Senator from Massachusetts that the annexation of Hawaii of itself does not import imperialism. I go further than the Senator from Massachusetts. The annexation of Cuba, the annexation of Puerto Rico, the rounding out of our possessions on the south, and the securing of a strategic position in the Pacific, would be in consonance with the destiny of this country and perfectly consistent with confining our domain to the continent of North America, if the proposition came under different circumstances, at a different time, and was being advocated in a different spirit.

It was said by John Quincy Adams seventy-five years ago, speaking of Cuba and Puerto Rico:

These islands, from their local position, are natural appendages to the North American continent, and one of them (Cuba), almost in sight of our shores, from a multitude of considerations has become an object of transcendent importance to the commercial and political interests of our Union. Its commanding position with reference to the Gulf of Mexico and the West India seas; the character of its population; its situation midway between our southern coast and the island of San Domingo; its safe and capacious harbor of the Havana, fronting a long line of our shores destitute of the same advantage; the nature of its productions and of its wants, furnishing the supplies and needing the returns of a commerce immensely profitable and mutually beneficial, give it an importance in the sum of our national interests with which that of no other foreign territory can be compared, and little inferior to that which binds the different members of this Union together.

Such, indeed, are, between the interests of that island and of this country, the geographical, commercial, moral, and political relations formed by nature, gathering, in the process of time, and even now verging to maturity, that, in looking forward to the probable course of events for the short period of half a century, it is scarcely possible to resist the conviction that the annexation of Cuba to our Federal Republic will be indispensable to the continuance and integrity of the Union itself.

Mr. President, with all these considerations in favor of the annexation of Cuba, no Senator can say, no right-thinking man can believe, that it would be either proper or generous or honest for us to conduct this war with Spain for the purpose of securing the annexation of this most desirable island.

As was said by the Senator from Massachusetts, we declared on the 20th of April—

That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

I would have more confidence in the faithful carrying out of that declaration if the resolutions had been adopted as they stood before that declaration was incorporated. The resolutions, as they stood when the amendment to that effect was offered and accepted, recognized the fact that the people of Cuba, in an organized revolutionary capacity, were then struggling to secure their independence, and that declaration with such recognition was absolutely consistent; but when the Congress of the United States turned its back upon the organized struggle of the Cuban people and entered upon the work of first freeing the Island of Cuba and then pacifying the Cubans, we entered upon the work of erecting a government which will owe its existence to American force and American influence, a government which, when erected, will be ready to do that which is being done to-day by a government similarly created in Hawaii.

The Senator from Massachusetts has heard no suggestion since this debate commenced of an intention to annex the Island of Cuba. The argument thus far has been made by those who oppose the annexation of Hawaii under existing conditions and by the processes being resorted to. But a Senator on the other side of the Chamber since this discussion commenced has boldly avowed that he is in favor not only of the annexation of Hawaii, but, in the face of the declaration of the 20th of April, of the annexation of Cuba also.

Mr. HOAR. It is very important that the sentence to which the Senator alludes should not be misunderstood. It was uttered by myself before the war resolutions passed.

Mr. LINDSAY. The fact nevertheless remains that since this debate has been going on and since this declaration has been solemnly made by both Houses of Congress the friends of Hawaiian annexation do not hesitate to express themselves in favor of the speedy annexation of Cuba.

I do not oppose the annexation of Cuba. I believe the island would be a desirable acquisition. I believe in the fullness of time Cuba will become a part of the United States, but I do most solemnly protest against any policy which, during the progress of this war, or until after its results shall have been fully accomplished, looks to a violation of the declaration that Cuba, being freed and pacified, its people will be left to work out their own destiny.

Is it a fact that absolute silence up to this time has prevailed on the other side of the Chamber because Senators are not willing to disclaim, as the Senator from Massachusetts has disclaimed, any idea of looking beyond the islands of Hawaii to the greater islands of the Asiatic seas and of appropriating permanently territory which never can be Americanized? Is it a fact that, in order to conceal from or to keep the people in doubt as to the purpose of this most unusual proceeding we are considering to-day, silence prevails with those who owe it to the American people to speak?

Arguments have been made to prove that the Government of the United States has power under the Constitution to acquire additional territory, and that the acquisition of the islands of Hawaii is not beyond the constitutional power of the American Republic. No one has disputed the existence of that power—no one has argued against the right of the Government to exercise that power. The objections made to the joint resolution rest upon an entirely different basis, and that basis the other side thus far has declined to discuss, and the eminent Senator from Massachusetts utterly failed to allude to it.

Where does the power reside in the American Republic to annex outlying territory? Is it in the President? Is it in the Congress of the United States, or is it in the President acting in conjunction with the Senate in the exercise of the treaty-making power?

We have heard much about the inherent powers of the Federal Government. I have never been able to give my assent to the doctrine of inherent Federal powers. Powerful as this Government may be, unlimited as may be its authority within the grants of the Constitution, it has no power independent of the Constitution—no power self-existent, to be exercised independently of a constitutional grant, express or implied.

Up to the time the address was made by the Senator from Massachusetts, I supposed we were to be allowed to treat the report of the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations as the only argument deemed necessary to be submitted to this Senate. That report is an extraordinary document. Deductions are drawn which the facts by no means warrant. Quoting the act under which Texas was admitted—the preliminary act, I mean—this report says:

This joint resolution clearly establishes the precedent that Congress has the power to annex a foreign state to the territory of the United States, either by assenting to a treaty of annexation or by agreeing to articles of annexation or by act of Congress based upon the consent of such foreign Government obtained in any authentic way.

The last of these propositions covers the whole scope of the precedent made by the annexation of Texas. There is nothing in that precedent which can be construed to support the doctrine that the Congress of the United States is a treaty-making body. The admission of Texas rested upon the idea that the people of Texas, having indicated their desire that the Republic of Texas should be admitted into the Union as a sovereign State, the Congress of the United States, under the express grant of power to admit new States into the Union, had the power by a joint resolution to admit Texas. It was the exercise of a doubtful power.

Many of the most distinguished constitutional lawyers in the country believed that the joint resolution was beyond the constitutional grant, but with all the moral inducements to the admission of Texas into the Union, Congress admitted it not as mere territory, but as a sovereign State, upon terms of equality with the States then in the Union. This much this precedent establishes. It does not go a single step beyond the admission of an organized Republic as a State under the express grant of power by the Constitution to the Congress to admit new States.

We may acquire foreign territory, but we must acquire it in accordance with the limitations of our own Constitution; and if we do not deem it necessary to consult the people of that foreign territory, if we intend to treat the government of that foreign territory as authorized to speak for the people, then we must see that that government keeps within the constitutional limitations upon its own powers.

What do we propose to do? We do not propose to annex Hawaii. The term "annexation" has no proper or legitimate application to the proposition contained in this joint resolution. What we are about to do is not authorized by the constitution of Hawaii. It is in conflict with that constitution; and if we accept the proposed cession we will accept a title which, if not void upon its face, is of such doubtful validity that no lawyer would advise its acceptance in a mere business transaction.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] said the other day, that we can enter upon the possession of territory; we can assume the right to govern the people of Hawaii, and no power on earth can successfully question our right to maintain our possession and authority. That is true; but that is the logic of force; it is the ethics of the strong as against the weak.

We have had the constitution of Hawaii pointed out to us as a shining example of the justice and wisdom and statesmanship of those who control the affairs of that Government. Let us see what that constitution provides:

TREATIES.

The President, with the approval of the cabinet, shall have the power to make treaties with foreign governments, subject to the ratification of the Senate.

That is the general treaty-making power.

The President, with the approval of the cabinet, is hereby expressly authorized and empowered to make a treaty of political or commercial union between the Republic of Hawaii and the United States of America, subject to the ratification of the Senate.

The President shall not be bound to follow the advice of the cabinet, except in the instances where, by this constitution, the approval of the cabinet is required as a prerequisite for his action.

In the exercise of this special and extraordinary power the constitution provides that the President of Hawaii, with the advice of his cabinet, may negotiate a treaty of commercial or political union between the Republic of Hawaii and the United States, subject to the ratification of the Hawaiian Senate. I have read every paper submitted by the Committee on Foreign Relations; I have examined the messages of the Presidents; I have examined the arguments made by the agent of the Hawaiian Government, printed in full in this report, and there is not an intimation anywhere that this treaty was negotiated by and with the approval of the Hawaiian cabinet.

So anxious have been the annexationists to bring about this absorption—and I use the term advisedly—of the territory of the Hawaiian Islands that they have not felt called to say to the Senate of the United States that the cabinet of Hawaii, whose approval was indispensable, has ever given its advice or consent to this treaty. I take it as a matter of course it has, because the cabinet is the mere creature of a government that was created in order to force the islands into the American Republic; but it does seem that a decent respect for the rules of common procedure would have indicated to these gentlemen that they should somewhere say that it is a fact that when the President of Hawaii entered upon this negotiation he had the approval of the cabinet, without which he had no authority to act.

What sort of a union, with the advice and consent of his cabinet, had the President the power to negotiate and the Senate the right to confirm or approve? A commercial union or a political union between two republics. If it had been a commercial union which was negotiated, Hawaii as a republic would have continued to exist notwithstanding its complete consummation.

Mr. ALLEN. With the consent of the Senator from Kentucky, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILSON in the chair). The Senator from Nebraska suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Deboe,	Jones, Ark.	Perkins,
Allison,	Elkins,	Lindsay,	Pritchard,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Proctor,
Baker,	Faulkner,	McBride,	Shoup,
Bate,	Foraker,	McEnery,	Spooner,
Burrows,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Stewart,
Caffery,	Gallinger,	Mallory,	Sullivan,
Cannon,	Gear,	Mason,	Teller,
Clark,	Hale,	Mitchell,	Thurston,
Clay,	Hanna,	Money,	Turley,
Cockrell,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Turpie,
Cullom,	Harris,	Morrill,	Warren,
Daniel,	Heitfeld,	Nelson,	Wilson.
Davis,	Hoar,	Penrose,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. LINDSAY. I hope that my friend will not again suggest the absence of a quorum. Senators having made up their minds that this great wrong shall be done, neither care to listen nor expect to act upon anything that may be said in contravention of their preconceived judgments.

I will go back to the proposition I had under consideration—the power of the President and Senate of the Republic of Hawaii to consent to the incorporation of the territory of those islands into the domain of the United States.

The President, with the approval of the cabinet, is hereby expressly authorized and empowered to make a treaty of political or commercial union between the Republic of Hawaii and the United States of America, subject to the ratification of the Senate.

Is it proposed that there shall be a union between the two Republics, either a commercial union or a political union, or is it proposed that one of the Republics shall be literally and absolutely destroyed from the face of the earth? The President of the United States, when he submitted the pending treaty last June, did not misunderstand its character.

He then said that the treaty had been unanimously ratified without amendment by the Senate and President of the Republic of Hawaii on the 10th of September last, and that it only awaited the favorable action of the American Senate to effect—what? A political union between the two Republics? A commercial union between the two Republics? No.

It only awaits the favorable action of the American Senate to effect the complete absorption of the Hawaiian Islands into the domain of the United States.

Not a union with this Republic, but "the complete absorption of the islands into the domain of the United States."

The preamble to the joint resolutions shows that no attention was intended to be paid to the provision of the Hawaiian constitution authorizing the negotiation of a political union between the two countries. It reads:

Whereas the Government of the Republic of Hawaii, in due form, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its constitution, to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatever kind in and over the Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies, and also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, Government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining.

I call upon Senators who favor the joint resolution to show where in the Hawaiian constitution, by direction or indirection, the Government of the Hawaiian Republic is authorized to cede the sovereignty of that Republic to the United States. There is not a line in that constitution, there is not a word in that constitution, there is not an intimation in that constitution which looks to any such cession as that. Negotiate a union. "Union" as applied to the American Government has a well-known significance. Whatever country negotiates a union with the United States negotiates the union of another State to those which already constitute the confederated Republic of the United States.

That is what the term "union" means primarily, politically, and necessarily, when applied to a treaty of union with the United States. The President of Hawaii has the right to negotiate a commercial union. In negotiating that commercial union he has no right to cede away the sovereignty of the Republic. He has the right to negotiate a political union upon precisely the same terms and under precisely the same grant authorizing the treaty for the commercial union. The treaty attempted, goes far beyond the power of the Government of Hawaii, just as the attempt here to accept that treaty by joint resolution goes beyond the power of the Congress of the United States.

When this joint resolution shall be passed and approved by the President, it will not operate in the islands of Hawaii of its own force or vigor. A law of the Congress of the United States can have no extraterritorial effect. Therefore, when the joint resolution shall have been passed and approved, it will amount to more than an offer by the Congress of the United States to accept Hawaii and its sovereignty, its territory, and its property, upon the terms indicated.

It is said by a journal supposed to speak by authority, the Evening Mail and Express, that—

Recent developments in the Senate show that annexation can be effected either by adopting the Newlands resolution or by ratifying the treaty as was first proposed. The friends of Hawaii have enough votes to carry either of those measures. It must, therefore, be clear to the opponents as well as to the supporters of the project that it should be consummated by the regular, formal, and dignified process specifically prescribed by the Constitution.

Omitting the sentimental argument in favor of annexation, the editor continues:

The treaty now in the hands of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs has already been ratified by the Legislature of Hawaii, and its ratification by the Senate would make annexation a reality. There would be nothing more to do aside from taking formal possession of the islands. On the other hand, if the Newlands resolution is adopted by our Senate, it will have to be approved by the Hawaiian Legislature before it can acquire the force of law. This course would involve a delay.

Mr. CAFFERY. From what paper is the Senator reading?

Mr. LINDSAY. The Mail and Express, a paper which is generally understood to come as near speaking by authority as any other of the great metropolitan journals of the country. When the joint resolution shall be adopted and approved, annexation will not be consummated. The proposition will have to be submitted to the Hawaiian Legislature and accepted by the Hawaiian Legislature.

Now, where does the Hawaiian Legislature get the right, where does the Hawaiian Legislature obtain authority, to cede to another power the territory and property of the Hawaiian Republic, with its sovereignty and every attribute of its nationality? The Hawaiian constitution will be searched in vain to find any shadow of authority in the Hawaiian Legislature to extinguish the sovereignty of the Hawaiian Republic. It has no such right outside of the Hawaiian constitution. No such authority can be found anywhere in the constitution.

This editor of the Mail and Express says further:

It must, therefore, be clear to the opponents as well as to the supporters of the project that it should be consummated by the regular, formal, and dignified process specifically prescribed by the Constitution.

That is, the treaty, negotiated by the treaty-making power, which a year ago the President submitted to the Senate for its ratification or rejection, should be taken up and ratified, and, with the dignity becoming the gravity of the proposition, Hawaii should be brought into the United States through this regular, dignified, and constitutional method. Now, if by treaty is the regular way, if through treaty is the dignified course, if by treaty is the constitutional method, it follows that to substitute joint resolutions for the treaty is not dignified, usual, regular, or constitutional.

In conclusion, the Mail and Express says:

In view of these conditions we submit that the wise and patriotic thing for the Senate to do is to abandon the Newlands resolution and substitute the treaty in place of it. Annexation is a certainty. The sooner it is effected the better. The needs of the nation demand that it shall be accomplished with the least possible delay, and we believe we have demonstrated that the speediest way is fortunately also the more orderly and dignified.

It is a peculiar fact that the Committee on Foreign Relations has never given the Senate an opportunity to ratify the treaty. In the face of the statement made by this newspaper that there is a constitutional majority in favor of the ratification of the treaty, the Committee on Foreign Relations turns its back upon the treaty, disregards the recommendation of the President, and insists that Hawaii shall be annexed, if at all, by this unusual, this irregular, this undignified method of joint resolution, which many believe to be beyond the constitutional power of Congress.

These joint resolutions look to the abandonment of American precedents and American traditions and indicate a disposition to substitute the unauthorized exercise of power for regular obedience to constitutional grants.

The great paper read in the hearing of the Senate on yesterday by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] contains this language:

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

I read, in connection with this extract from that great American paper, an extract from the report of the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations and ask the public to compare the two from an American standpoint:

The objection to annexation that is based upon the civil rights of the Kanakas divides itself into two repugnant parts—the first being that annexation forces upon them a new government without their consent, the second being that they are not fit for citizenship in the United States. If the latter proposition is true, we will give them a better government than they can create or conduct for themselves. The injury falls upon us, and not upon them, if we force them into the body of our citizenship and compel them to accept that blessing.

To secure the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; but if looking around the universe we find a people who are not capable of administering government upon the high plane we have reached, it is legitimate that we shall force those people into the American Republic and compel them to accept the blessings we choose to thrust upon them.

This is a clear departure from American traditions. This is the open abandonment of American precedents. This is in keeping with the attempt to do in an irregular, unusual, undignified, and unconstitutional way that which, if done at all, should be done with the strictest regard to enlightened public opinion and in strict obedience to constitutional limitation.

Defending this avowed intention to force the blessings of citizenship upon the unwilling Kanakas, and in answer to the argument that they are not fit persons of whom to make American citizens, this paper proceeds to say:

We have more than 12,000,000 of negroes and Indians in the United States who are not unfit for citizenship; yet, if every office in the Federal Government, including the executive, legislative, and judicial departments, was filled with the best men from those races, they could not conduct the Government for a year in a proper, constitutional way.

We have 12,000,000 people of African and Indian descent who are not unfit for citizenship, but who, in the opinion of the committee, could not furnish good men enough to administer this Government successfully during the short period of one year. Having these 12,000,000, the argument is that we can not be much worsted by bringing in 100,000 more.

Mr. President, at the beginning of this century we probably did not have more than 6,000,000 people entitled to the right of citizenship in this great Republic. Those 6,000,000 furnished men enough to fill all the offices of the Government and to administer it with dignity and success. We are now told that we have double that population which can not furnish good men and intelligent men enough to administer the Government for the period of one year. Whether this statement was intended to be an argument in favor of increasing the number by bringing in the Hawaiian people, or whether it was intended to justify or excuse the resort to extraordinary processes for controlling elections in some of the States during the last thirty years, I am unable to say.

If we have 12,000,000 people confined to one section of our country and outnumbering the whites in two or three States, who exercise the right of citizenship but are unfit to hold office, is it any wonder that methods have been resorted to to prevent those people from obtaining control of State governments, which can not be defended, but which may be condoned upon the idea that those people are not fit to exercise the powers and functions of public officers?

Did this committee mean to say that all of the lawlessness of the South looking toward the preservation of the State governments from negro domination was to be excused because these people are unfit to govern? Or did they mean to say that the more of this class of people we have the better our Government is likely to be?

Who make this attack upon 12,000,000 of the people of the United States? Who signed this remarkable arraignment of 12,000,000 of the people of the United States? C. K. DAVIS, a Senator from Minnesota; WILLIAM P. FRYE, a Senator from Maine; S. M. CULLOM, a Senator from Illinois; H. C. LODGE, a Senator from Massachusetts; J. B. FORAKER, of Ohio; CLARENCE G. CLARK, of Wyoming. One Southern Senator alone joins in this arraignment, the senior Senator from the State of Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

I ask my friend from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] what he thinks of these 12,000,000 people, ninety-nine out of a hundred of whom belong to his party, who have not intelligence enough according to this report, or patriotism enough according to this report, or morality enough according to this report to furnish officers to run this Government during the short period of one year?

If six Southern Senators had gone to the country on such a paper as this, if six Southern Senators had made this attack upon 12,000,000 of our people, a cry of indignation would have gone up from the other side of the Chamber, and the statement would have been denounced as a slander upon a race of people who, whatever may have been their misfortunes and disadvantages in the past, now claim to have raised themselves to the level of the average American citizen.

My friend the senior Senator from Massachusetts said that his objection to the pending proposition was the line of argument by which it was maintained. I ask my friend if this particular argument commends itself to him more than those to which he took special exception? The report of the federal relations committee says that—

The constitution of Hawaii provides a plan for annexation to the United States by the Government without a referendum to the people. That purpose, according to that plan, has been executed on the part of Hawaii. It can not be within the constitutional power of the Government of Hawaii to undo that lawful act, and refer the decision of the question of annexation to the people, whose vote upon it under any circumstances is not provided for in the constitution.

To all that I agree; but is it any less objectionable that we shall turn aside from the treaty proposed by the Hawaiian Government and by an adoption of these joint resolutions send the proposition back to be accepted by the Legislature of Hawaii, which has no more authority under the constitution of that Republic to vote upon such a proposition than have the people of Hawaii?

Says our committee:

If a requirement should be made by the United States of a plebiscite to determine the question of annexation, it would work a revolution in Hawaii which would abolish its constitution.

To submit the question of annexation to the Legislature of Hawaii will just as much work a revolution and just as much abolish the constitution of Hawaii. Our committee looks with abhorrence upon a suggestion to consult the people, but with sentimental admiration upon a proposition to abolish the constitution of Hawaii by submitting the question to the Legislature of that country.

When a special power is created and the manner of its execution is prescribed, all the law books teach that the manner of the execution is equally important with the scope of the power. The grant of power to the President and the Senate of Hawaii to negotiate a permanent political union with the Republic of the United States was the grant of a special and extraordinary power. The prescription of the manner in which that power should be executed is equivalent to the declaration that any other manner of its execution shall be deemed unauthorized by that constitution.

Ours is a Government of enumerated powers. The enumeration of the granted powers excludes the idea that powers not granted exist. We may talk about implied powers, we may talk about incidental powers, but every power that is implied and every power that is treated as an incidental power grows out of a power expressly granted.

The Government of the United States is one of enumerated powers, the National Constitution being the instrument which specifies them, and in which authority should be found for the exercise of any power which the National Government assumes to possess. In this respect it differs from the constitutions of the several States, which are not grants of powers to the States, but which apportion and impose restrictions upon the powers which the States inherently possess.—Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, page 9.

In the case of Marin vs. Hunter's Lessee (1 Wheaton, 326), Chief Justice Marshall laid down the rule as follows:

The Government of the United States can claim no powers which are not granted to it by the Constitution; and the powers actually granted must be such as are expressly given, or given by necessary implication.

The right to acquire territory is not expressly granted. Great constitutional lawyers like Jefferson doubted, and other great constitutional lawyers denied, its existence. The practice of the Government has decided the question in favor of the existence of the power, as an incident to powers expressly granted. It is not an inherent power. When we came to form the more perfect union, when we came to declare the bond of union, and to set out the grants of power, we fixed, bounded, prescribed, and granted all the powers the Federal Government was intended to possess. It exercises no power inherently; it exercises no power because it is an incident to government; but it exercises each power because the Constitution authorizes its exercise.

The Constitution nowhere expressly declares that we shall have the right to annex outlying territory, but great statesmen, great constitutional lawyers, have deduced the power from powers that are expressly granted. The power to make treaties is a general power to make treaties, and it is argued that we may make anything the subject of treaty which is not prohibited by some provision of the Constitution. The power to make war is expressly granted, and the power to make war carries with it the power to prosecute war to its legitimate conclusion. War involves the power of conquest, and at the end of the war the effect of a conquest is to be determined by the victorious nation.

Up to this time the extent and the character of our conquests have been determined by the exercise of the treaty-making power in the restoration of peace.

Except in one instance, every foot of outlying territory we now hold was acquired through the exercise of the treaty-making power. Texas was admitted as a State by act of Congress, but Texas was not annexed in the sense of absorption by act of Congress. Nobody then supposed that it could be.

There seems to be a modern idea that the power of conquest is not only unlimited, but that our modern policy of conquest is, that whatever we forcibly take from our enemy we are under all circumstances to keep after it has been taken. If it has not been said upon the floor of the Senate, it is one of the favorite arguments of those who look for indefinite territorial expansion, that wherever the flag of this country is once put afloat through our power of aggression, it is never to be taken down.

One of the favorite attacks upon Commissioner Blount was that under authority from the President he ordered our flag to be taken down from the public buildings in Hawaii. Mr. President, the highest honor we can do the flag of our country is to see that it always represents justice, morality, and generosity as well as power, and that it be kept nowhere that it does not float consistently with national honor and international integrity. The flag of the United States once waved over the halls of the Montezumas, but when Mexico and the United States terminated hostilities by treaty, the emblem of the American power was withdrawn from the soil of our sister Republic.

When this unhappy war with Spain shall end, it will be by a treaty; and we will not enter upon that treaty with the idea that everything that we may have seized is to be kept without regard to any interest except our own. We will treat with Spain upon the basis of national honor; we will consult the public conscience as well as the public interest, and when we shall strike hands again with Spain as a friendly power that country will have no ground to say that we have dealt with her as the ungenerous giant deals with the helpless pigmy who can not resist.

There are two ways of acquiring territory under the Constitution. One by treaty, the other by conquest; and a treaty always follows a conquest unless the conquered power be utterly overthrown.

For a hundred years we have construed the Constitution to mean that we may acquire territory by conquest as an incident to the war-making power, and that we may acquire territory by treaty as an incident to the treaty-making power, but to-day we are setting up the new theory that where we can not conquer because we have no ground for war, and where we can not treat because the constitutional majority of the Senate will not consent to a treaty, we may substitute a joint resolution of Congress for a constitutional treaty or for a lawful conquest.

A year or two ago we were discussing the great question whether we would enter into a treaty with Great Britain, providing that hereafter when disputes arose between us, and negotiation and diplomacy had been exhausted, we would submit the matter in dispute to a board of arbitration, for which permanent provision was to be made. All the Senators said they favored arbitration, all said they were opposed to war and loved peace and were willing to take any constitutional steps in the direction of peace, but Senators who are now anxious and willing to abdicate the Senatorial power of participating in the treaty-making power were then opposed to the proposition under consideration because it involved, in their opinion, the surrender of the treaty-making power by the Senate.

If the right of the Senate to participate in making treaties was a sacred right a year ago, it is none the less sacred to-day; and while Senators may have to submit to seeing this body shorn of one of its dignified and most important attributes in obedience to the supposed will of the majority, it is none the less the duty of Senators who do not agree with the majority to protest against any such surrender. Since the formation of the Government the Senate has exercised its right to determine what shall or shall not be a treaty, and it does not speak well for our progress that at the end of more than one hundred years the Senate is now proposing to abdicate that power and to share its exercise with a body to which the Constitution did not intrust it.

The editor of the Mail and Express says that the Senate can ratify the treaty; that when the treaty is ratified and notices are exchanged, the Constitution, by virtue of the treaty, will at once extend its beneficent provisions over the Islands of Hawaii; but if we pass this joint resolution upon the false assumption that a cession has been made or offered, then that the Legislature of Hawaii must usurp a like power with that the American Congress has usurped, and accept and approve the act of Congress, and in doing so, in the language of the report of the Committee on Foreign Relations, overturn the constitution of the Hawaiian Republic.

Mr. President, if we can acquire foreign territory; if we can acquire possession of and dominion over the Hawaiian Islands by an unauthorized exercise of legislative power, and if we are ready to extend our possessions and our dominion whenever we choose by irresistible force, then we have become a nation which not only has ceased to be governed by international law, but has ceased to regard its own organic law.

We are making war to free Cuba, yet Senators are avowing their expectation that Cuba will be annexed to the United States. We are avowing our intention to annex the Hawaiian Islands by an extraconstitutional expedient. We do not seem to realize that we may create the belief in other nations that we have lost all idea of self-restraint, are controlled only by our own interest, and can only be kept in check by forces we can not overcome.

What will be the effect of this? We talk about the Monroe doctrine, and say that European nations shall not establish their institutions on the continent of the Americas; but, Mr. President, if we shall excite the belief that we intend to substitute ourselves for the European powers, against whom we propose to protect this continent, and to absorb territory according to our interest and in defiance of our past policies and traditions, how long will it be before our sister American Republics will look upon us with more of fear, and with juster grounds for fear, than they look upon the monarchical governments on the other side of the Atlantic? Why shall we protect unless we propose also to restrain our own ambition? How long will it be before we shall have no friends among the American Republics, whom we have been so assiduously cultivating during the past thirty years? In what direction are we tending?

The Associated Press sent out this telegram on the 2d day of July:

BREITEN, July 2, 1898.

On the best authority the correspondent of the Associated Press here is informed that Germany, France, and Russia have reached an understanding relative to the Philippine Islands. It is said that these three powers do not intend to interfere actively until hostilities cease, after which they will combine to prevent the United States or Great Britain gaining possession of the whole of the Philippine Islands. When the war is over an international congress will be proposed, similar to the Berlin congress of 1878, to settle all questions connected with the war. All the great powers will be invited to join, including the United States and Spain. It appears certain that Germany will then demand a share of the Philippine Islands or other compensation in the far East.

We are to be invited to a congress of nations, and we are to be expected to sit down and calmly discuss how the territory taken from Spain shall be partitioned out among the great powers. No such invitation has ever been accepted by the American Republic, and so long as we confine our ambition to being the dominant power on the American continent and acknowledge the right of no other power to intervene with us in the settlement of American affairs or of our foreign quarrels no such invitation ever will be accepted.

Whenever such an invitation may be extended, the United States will, as they ought to do, decline to recognize it, decline to sit down with the great powers to consult over any such question and, if need be, use all the forces with which we have been blessed by God and nature to assert our right to stand as the dominant power of the American Continent, not willing to consult with foreign powers as to our American policy and strong enough to resist any attempt to coerce us into any such consultation.

If we intend to do this, then do not let it go out to the world that we have ceased to be an American Republic pure and simple and have entered upon a career of conquest and expansion, to be limited only by the complete gratification of the newly awakened spirit, which is to-day chafing under the feeling that American isolation is inconsistent with national dignity and national power.

On the American Continent we are invincible. We can reasonably annex Hawaii, and we shall annex Hawaii in good time, but we ought to annex it in an orderly, a constitutional, a regular, and a dignified way. The time will come when Puerto Rico and Cuba will be part of the great American Republic, but they, too, ought to come at the proper time and in the proper way, in accordance with our fundamental law, and in obedience to American precedents.

The objection is not that we might not have those countries when we can take them consistently with public honor, but that those who advocate the immediate absorption of Hawaii show themselves willing to disregard constitutional limitations upon the Government of Hawaii and constitutional limitations upon the Government of the United States and do not disclaim the idea that wherever the American flag shall be planted there it is to remain until the end of time, regardless of consequences and regardless of propriety, of justice, or of magnanimity.

If the speech of the senior Senator from Massachusetts could go out as the accepted interpretation of the annexation of Hawaii, as the authorized statement of the views and intentions of those who desire the annexation of Hawaii, a very grave objection would be removed; but no other advocate of annexation has given out any such patriotic or conservative utterances, and I shall be agreeably disappointed if anyone else during the progress of this debate shall plant himself side by side with the Senator from Massachusetts and declare that he, too, loves and venerates American precedents and that he, too, expects to adhere to them, no matter what the consequences may be and in the face of any public opinion, however aggressive or proscriptive.

A good deal has been said about the delay incident to this debate. Complaint has been made that discussion answers no good purpose. We are to have the rules of the Senate amended so that filibustering can be put down. Mr. President, there has not been a day in the last three weeks when the friends of annexation had a quorum in this Chamber, and the quorum has been made up on each roll call by Senators who are opposed to this joint resolution answering to their names. We come here each day an hour before the usual time of meeting in order that a quorum may be present; and five times out of six the want of a quorum is owing to the absence of those who insist upon an early vote upon this resolution.

Mr. MALLORY. And we did so yesterday, on the Fourth of July.

Mr. LINDSAY. Yes; and it is the same way every day.

It is said that we obstruct public business, that it is an indefensible act upon the part of Senators by debating in extenso a question like this to obstruct public business, and that, in order that public business may be carried on with due dispatch, the rules of the Senate ought to be changed and closure ought to be adopted.

During my five years' service as a Senator public business has not been obstructed, although full debate has been had. The Wilson bill could have been defeated if the opponents of that bill had chosen to defeat it, but they did not; the Dingley bill could have been defeated if the opponents of the Dingley bill had chosen to defeat it; any of the great appropriation bills might be defeated if a minority were to choose to defeat them; the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act in 1893 could have been defeated if its opponents had chosen to defeat it.

But these were questions of business; they involved matters in which the public had interests; and after they had been fairly and fully discussed, the minority yielded, as it always yields in such cases. The annexation of Hawaii by joint resolution is not public business according to the opinion of those who are opposing it. It is the contrary of public business. It is an attempt to do that which the Constitution prescribes shall be done in one of two ways, by a method wholly different from either and in conflict with the constitutional delegation of power.

Those who so believe conceive that when they oppose by any legitimate means the passage of this joint resolution they are not opposing public business at all, but are defending, maintaining, and supporting the Constitution.

Suppose a bill should come over from the other House in the nature of a bill of attainder, providing that some public offender should, upon the passage of that bill, have his estates forfeited and his life taken.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLAY in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. LINDSAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BACON. I think there are present very much less than a quorum; by actual count, not a fourth of a quorum. I therefore suggest the fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The want of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll and ascertain if a quorum is present.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Elkins,	Lodge,	Shoup,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	McBride,	Spocner,
Bate,	Faulkner,	McEnery,	Sullivan,
Berry,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Teller,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Mallory,	Thurston,
Caffery,	Gear,	Martin,	Turley,
Chilton,	Hale,	Money,	Turpie,
Clark,	Hanna,	Morgan,	Warren,
Clay,	Hawley,	Morrill,	Wellington,
Cockrell,	Heitfeld,	Pasco,	Wilson,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Penrose,	Wolcott,
Daniel,	Jones, Ark.	Pettigrew,
Davis,	Kyle,	Roach,
Deboe,	Lindsay,	Sowell,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have responded to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, when I was interrupted by the call for a quorum I was discussing the question whether or not in opposing a resolution like this by all reasonable and legitimate means those who are opposing it are obstructing public business. I was about to say that, suppose a bill should come over from the House of Representatives in the nature of a bill of attainder, providing that some offender, and a guilty offender at that, should forfeit both his life and property without a trial by a court, and we were unfortunate enough to have a President who believed that a bill of that character might be passed by the two Houses of Congress and executed by the Executive, and a majority of the Senate were in favor of exercising that extraordinary power, and a minority, under the right of free speech, should stand here day after day protesting against such an open violation of the Constitution, how would it appear to have the press and the majority clamoring for a change of the rules of the Senate in order that the minority, who were standing by the Constitution, might be prevented from obstructing the orderly progress of public business?

Suppose an objectionable judge should be brought before the Senate by articles of impeachment, and after a trial, or, as in this case, after an investigation, it was ascertained that the necessary two-thirds majority for his conviction could not be obtained, and a bill should come over from the House of Representatives removing that judge from office, and the minority of the Senate, who defeated the conviction, should stand here protesting against such an open violation of the Constitution, I suppose the clamor might be raised that the minority were obstructing public business.

Now, then, if the treaty-making power is about to be abrogated by the joint resolution which came over from the House of Representatives, and against which more than one-third of the Senate stands opposed, can their persistent defense of the Constitution, of American precedents, of obedience to American traditions, justify the charge that by this faithful adherence they render themselves open to the complaint that they are obstructing the orderly progress of public business?

My friend sitting here at my right [Mr. ELKINS], who was spoken of by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] as his own grandfather—and who seemed pleased with the relationship—says that this joint resolution is a higher execution of legislative power than would be a treaty. Yes, it is a higher execution of legislative power than would be the induction of Hawaii into the United States by and through a treaty.

A treaty annexing Hawaii to the United States in accordance with the constitution of Hawaii and by and through the methods prescribed by the Constitution of the United States would be the exercise of a most important governmental power, but it would not be the exercise of the highest power that may be conceived of, because it would be a power consonant with and created by the Constitution of the United States. But to induct the territory of Hawaii into the domain of the United States by and through a joint resolution is the exercise of the very highest conceivable legislative power, because it is the exercise of a power not granted by the Constitution of the United States, and which, if it exists at all, exists in virtue of that higher law about which we heard so much thirty-five or forty years ago, the discussion of which resulted in a civil war which will never be forgotten so long as this country shall survive.

Whenever you get above the Constitution you execute the highest possible power, and whenever you do that which the Congress has no power to do you execute a legislative power high in the fact that its exercise is as dangerous as it is unauthorized. Where does Congress get its power to legislate at all?

Mr. CAFFERY. I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky whether the Legislature can negotiate a treaty without being enabled in the organic law to make contracts of a treaty character?

Mr. LINDSAY. The answer to that question involves more than a mere categorical reply. Article I of the Constitution declares that—

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"All legislative powers herein granted." The Senator who says this power to acquire territory by joint resolution exists takes the burden of finding the grant. Else he holds to the inherent existence of a power which has not been granted in express terms or by reasonable intentment. "All legislative power herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States." Is there any other legislative power vested in the Congress? If so, by whom, and when and where was the grant made?

Borrowing our ideas of government from the Kingdom of Great Britain, the treaty-making power was held to be an executive power, and we vested it in the President because it was an executive power, but we limited the exercise of that executive power by making it subject, not to the Congress of the United States, but to the Senate of the United States, and we provided that this executive power should not be exercised if in any particular case more than one-third of the Senate should be opposed to its exercise.

The Congress of the United States has the war-making power, and we may acquire territory by the exercise of the war power; but we have not made war against the Republic of Hawaii, and the report of the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations shows that we not only have no ground of war, but that we are the best friends that Hawaii has in the world and that Hawaii is rather our adopted child than our enemy. So we can not take this territory under the exercise of the war power and we can not take it under the exercise of the Executive power, unless two-thirds of the Senators present and voting approve it, and you can not take it under the legislative power at all, because it is not a subject of legislation and was not made so by the Constitution of the United States.

We have heard much about the necessity for haste in this matter. This treaty was submitted a year ago, and the friends of annexation have never attempted to have a vote taken upon it; and when the supposed necessity, about which we hear so much, arose, the beginning of the war with Spain, the Senate was not then asked to take up the treaty for consideration, and it has never been asked since that day.

The President asked the Senate to consider the treaty. The President has never suggested to either branch of Congress in any communication, by direction or indirection, that he desired to abandon the treaty and to substitute a joint resolution for it. If he desired to abandon the treaty, he would have withdrawn it. If he believed the necessity for speedy action was so great that a joint resolution would be justifiable and constitutional, he would, by a message to the Congress, have advised the abandonment of the treaty and the annexation of Hawaii by and through the joint resolution pending here to-day.

There has been absolute silence upon this great question by the Chief Executive since his message sent to Congress in December last, and then he called attention to the treaty, which he said if adopted would result in the absorption of the Hawaiian Islands by the United States, an absorption which I claim is not authorized by the Hawaiian constitution, not contemplated by the Hawaiian constitution, and which can not come about until we shall have overturned the Hawaiian Government and trampled upon the Hawaiian constitution. The President did not misunderstand the effect of this treaty when he said that it—

Only awaits the favorable action of the American Senate to effect the complete absorption of the islands into the domain of the United States.

If the Mail and Express knows whereof it speaks when it claims that a majority equal to two-thirds of all the members of the Senate are in favor of the treaty, why do the friends of annexation persist in pushing to the front the joint resolution rather than resort to the regular, usual, dignified, and constitutional method by which foreign territory has been acquired in the past?

The immediate annexation of Hawaii is not necessary as a war measure, and if it was we could not consistently violate our own Constitution in order to annex it. The great naval battle which took place in front of Santiago day before yesterday obviated all the supposed necessity for our owning a coaling station in the Pacific Ocean as an incident to the successful prosecution of the war. As against Spain, we are the monarch of the seas to-day. No Spanish war ship will ever be seen in the Pacific Ocean so long as this war continues, and no Spanish war ship will be seen in the Atlantic Ocean after Commodore Watson goes with his battle ships to look after the interests of the United States along the coasts of Spain.

So, then, as a war measure it is not necessary that we shall proceed with undignified haste to do an unconstitutional act. If Hawaii wishes to be annexed and we wish Hawaii, we will annex it, and it will serve all our purposes next winter as well as it will this summer; and, so far as that is concerned, it will answer all our purposes next year as well as it will answer our purposes this year.

If there was anything necessary to show that there is no real foundation for the claim that we want a coaling station in the Hawaiian Islands, it was an incident which happened during the last two or three days in the halls of Congress. The general deficiency appropriation bill was pending here, and upon motion of the Senator from Maine we provided an appropriation of $145,000 to begin the work of converting Pearl Harbor, which we now own, into a coaling station. When the bill got into conference the Republican majority of the House conferees, with the consent of the Republican majority of the conferees of the Senate, took the appropriation out as wholly unnecessary.

We do not need to improve Pearl Harbor, if it costs us $145,000 to improve it, even as a war measure, but it is claimed we do need the Hawaiian Islands at once as a war measure, and the necessity is so great that we are to set aside the dignified, orderly, regular, and constitutional methods by which in the past we have annexed foreign territory that we may have immediate annexation.

No, it is not a compliment to the intelligence of the American

Senate to gravely insist that this measure is being pressed at this particular time in the interest of the more successful prosecution of the war against Spain. Nobody on this side believes the claim is sincere and nobody on the other side can repress a smile when he attempts gravely to assert that we ought not to stand in the way of the progress of public business, because we need to annex Hawaii in order that we may more successfully fight Spain.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] treated this as a sentimental question. Occasionally he dealt in satire and humor. He drew the usual picture of the dusky Queen and her mimic kingdom and the play of royalty, and it was a lifelike and an accurate picture. He seemed to forget, however, that that mimic kingdom, this card-basket royalty, had been kept alive so many years by the direct intervention of the American Government. He had forgotten, when the predecessor of the dusky Queen visited the United States in royal state, that he was entertained as a royal visitor at public expense, that his coming was treated as a gala occasion, and that we were as swift to do this dusky monarch honor as we have ever been to do honor to the legitimate royal personages who come across occasionally from the other side of the Atlantic. He forgets, too, that even in advance of Mr. Cleveland a Republican President, when my friend the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] was a Cabinet officer, addressed this Queen as his good friend.

Mr. ELKINS. His good and great friend.

Mr. LINDSAY. His good and great friend. If it was ridiculous in Mr. Cleveland to do so, he could at least have pleaded the illustrious example of Benjamin Harrison.

Mr. ELKINS. Who does all things well.

Mr. LINDSAY. Hawaiian royalty is a joke, but the Queen and the King who preceded her have not made more of a joke of the Hawaiian kingdom than has been made of the Hawaiian Republic by its illustrious founders. It has been scarcely six months since the President of the Hawaiian Republic left the theater of his greatness and came over to the United States to visit his great and good friend at the other end of the Avenue to beg that he might be allowed to abdicate the sovereignty of the Hawaiian Republic, and to cause himself and his people and his country and its sovereignty to be absorbed into the domain of the United States. Whatever may have been the follies of the Queen, she never sought to dispose of her country, sovereignty and all.

There is another remarkable feature in this most remarkable cession—I believe they call it a cession. I have heard of a great many things being ceded, but the cession of the sovereignty of a republic is something new under the sun. But that is what is pretended to be ceded in this particular case. We say we will pay the debts of Hawaii, having taken everything the Republic has, not exceeding $4,000,000, and this remarkable paper which accompanies the joint resolution says that in consideration for that agreement to pay the debts of Hawaii, not exceeding $4,000,000, we get $9,000,000 worth of property. If these debts exceed $4,000,000, it seems the excess is not to be paid at all.

This is a business transaction. It has been a business transaction from the outset. When the monarchy was overturned and the Republic was established it was in the furtherance of a business scheme.

The Senator from Massachusetts alluded to the fact that the revolution of 1893 had been practically accomplished when the American blue jackets were landed. I was reading the other day a very interesting book, written by a naval officer who distinguished himself the other day off Santiago, which book purports to have been published by authority of the Navy Department, in which he claims that although the blue jackets did land before the revolution commenced, they did not intervene at all, and that the people overturned the government without the assistance of the American forces.

As a matter of fact, there was no revolution until the American blue jackets landed under an order from the commander of the Boston, directed to the lieutenant in charge, not only to protect American life and property, but to preserve public order. Now, anybody can overturn a government if somebody else is going to be there to preserve public order whilst the government is being overturned.

That government was overturned in the interest of the sugar planters. All you have to do to reach that conclusion is to read the letters of Mr. Stevens to the Secretary of State. The McKinley Act took the tariff off of crude sugar and put the protection on the refined, and therefore the sugar planter in Hawaii was no longer benefited by the American tariff, whereby he had theretofore got his sugar in free whilst everybody had to pay 50 or 60 per cent in the way of tariff taxation.

The American sugar planter got 2 cents bounty. Therefore if Hawaii could break into the American Union, so that the laws of the United States would operate in Hawaii as well as over Louisiana and the beet-sugar country of the Northwest, the Hawaiians would get 2 cents bounty, too. In this view a monarchical government became intolerable and a republic had to be established in the interest of the sugar planter.

Mr. CAFFERY. I will remind the Senator from Kentucky that Minister Stevens suggested a modified bounty for the Hawaiian Islands of $12 a ton.

Mr. LINDSAY. Stevens said they would be willing to take a cent a pound if we would let them in. I believe that was it, was it not?

Mr. CAFFERY. It was $12 a ton for a long ton, and they made about 250,000 tons. That would be $3,000,000 bounty.

Mr. LINDSAY. At any rate he did not ask for as large a bounty as Louisiana was getting.

Mr. CAFFERY. No; he said they would be satisfied with less.

Mr. LINDSAY. He said they would be satisfied with one-half, and they looked at it purely from a business standpoint.

When the Wilson bill was passed and we put 45 per cent tax on sugar and continued the treaty, annexation faded out of sight because the sugar planter in Hawaii got the benefit of the protection under the Wilson Act.

When we passed the Dingley bill, a good many people here said that we had paid Hawaii as much in the way of a bonus for a harbor we did not need and never expected to use as we ought to pay, and that therefore the treaty ought to be annulled; and it was insisted that notice be given to terminate the treaty. Then the treaty of annexation comes again, and the Hawaiian Republic, not satisfied with its regular minister, has all the while had an authorized agent here to look after the treaty, and the Hawaiian President came here and honored us with a visit to see how this business transaction was getting on.

There are some things about this transaction which tend to provoke a smile. I have before me the report of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs upon the joint resolution. After many arguments such as I had heard before in favor of the annexation of Hawaii and after pointing out with pathetic eloquence the benefits to result to the American people from annexation, and after calling attention to the fact that pretty much everybody was in favor of annexation, the report makes this statement:

There would be one difference after annexation as to the restriction upon Hawaiian sugar. At present, under the reciprocity treaty, all unrefined Hawaiian sugar is admitted free of duty, but not refined sugar.

Then the author innocently says:

After annexation both refined and unrefined would be admitted free, and sugar-refining interests in this country may object to annexation.

In this unsophisticated, innocent, and undesigned way the foundation was laid for raising a great hue and cry that the sugar trust was opposed to the annexation of Hawaii because after Hawaii should be annexed refined sugar would come in free and would compete with the sugar refined by the American sugar refiners. I have examined the statistics pretty carefully, and I can not find anywhere that anybody has ever refined sugar in the Hawaiian Islands. They send their crude sugar over to us and it comes in duty free, and we refine it, and we send the refined sugar back to the two or three thousand republicans who have established the oligarchy known as the Hawaiian Republic for use in their tea and coffee and other like beverages.

Yes, it was supposed that probably the sugar refiners would object to this treaty because it would let refined sugar in to compete with their sugar, and that the differential allowed them by the Dingley Act would be to some extent neutralized by the refined sugar coming over from the Hawaiian Islands. This matter troubled me greatly, but finally it dawned upon me, as it seems never to have dawned upon the Foreign Relations Committee at the other end of the Capitol, that probably Havemeyer and Claus Spreckels would remove their refineries to Hawaii and refine their sugar there, and that it would be their refined sugar that would come to the American sugar consumers free after annexation, and that they would not lose so much after all.

I do not know whether the sugar trust is for or against this treaty. I do not know whether its interest is one way or the other. I take it for granted that if there was a very great interest one way or the other, we would hear of the sugar trust and see it also.

When we were determining what the differential duty should be a year or two ago, when the Dingley bill was pending, we did not have any difficulty in finding the sugar trust, and we did not have any difficulty in finding out which side it was on. The only difficulty we had was that its friends who are now advocating annexation could make up sugar schedules with so much diabolical skill that no one but an expert could tell how much the sugar trust was to get.

The sugar-trust people never fail to put in their appearance when they have an interest in pending legislation. It is only a question now whether the sugar trust will refine in California or remove their establishments over and refine in Hawaii after we absorb the Islands of Hawaii.

It is not worth while to pursue this branch of the question further. This hue was raised to intimidate those who were inclined to vote against the business transaction represented by President Dole and his agents.

The people of the United States should have an opportunity to be heard before we amend the Constitution by creating a precedent that we may follow in the future whenever a treaty can not be successfully gotten through the Senate. The people ought to have an opportunity to consider this question, too, after it has been discussed on both sides. Sometimes the most convincing argument against a proposition is the argument made by the friends of the proposition.

As long as they maintain absolute silence and treat every objection with studious contempt the people may conclude they could answer if they would, but when they march up to a proposition like this and say, "We defend the joint resolution upon the ground, not that the Constitution grants the power to Congress to act through joint resolutions, but because those who are so clamorous about the want of the grant fail to show anything in the Constitution which prohibits Congress from so acting," the illusion is gone. When that argument goes out in defense of the resolution the plain people of the country will conclude that a better argument than that ought to be made to support a departure from the precedents of a hundred years and the traditions which up to this time have been cherished and followed.

I am curious to know whether the friends of the joint resolution would accept an amendment in line with the speech of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Hoar], and declare affirmatively that the annexation of Hawaii is not to be taken as an indication that the policy of the American Republic has in any wise been changed so far as the question of expansion is concerned. If the argument is unjust that this is intended to be a step in the direction of the permanent occupation of the Philippine Islands, then I ask, Will the friends of the joint resolution accept an amendment negating that idea and declaring that this is but the rounding out of the great American continental Republic, the mere securing of an outpost to defend it against aggression?

I read the other day from an English paper the following:

One thing is very curious in all this matter, and that is the scanty evidence of American opinion which reaches Europe. What do all those quiet millions of working freeholders and industrious citizens, who live away from the newspaper correspondents, think about the progress of the war? Are they aware that their country stand at the parting of the ways, that her external policy must be radically modified, and that she is engaged in a war which may so develop that it will occupy years, create a national debt, and leave the United States with a powerful army and the second fleet in the world?

There are others who are curious to know what the silent millions of Americans think about this appetite for expansion, which within the last sixty days has been developed and which is evidenced by the abandonment of the treaty negotiated by the President and submitted to us a year ago, the taking up of this joint resolution, and the persistent attempt to secure its adoption without explanation or discussion by those who advocate it. It is not to be concealed that the proposed so-called legislation is ominous of a declining respect for constitutional safeguards and for American policies and traditions.

Mr. WHITE obtained the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from California yield to me a moment?

Mr. WHITE. Certainly.

HENRIETTA FOWLER.

Mr. GALLINGER. From the Committee on Pensions I report back without amendment the bill (H. R. 3598) granting a pension to Henrietta Fowler. Inasmuch as the report on this bill was mislaid some ten days ago, and the Senator who now occupies the chair is interested in it, I ask that it be put upon its passage. It will take but a moment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place upon the pension roll the name of Henrietta Fowler, widow of Jesse Fowler, late of the Georgia Volunteers in the Indian war of 1836, and to pay her a pension rated at $8 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," 75,000 copies, 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate; that such print be of the act with index, etc., as prepared by the Clerk.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. WHITE addressed the Senate in continuation of the speech begun by him on the 21st of June. After having spoken fifty minutes,

Mr. DAVIS. If entirely convenient to the Senator from California, I will move an executive session.

Mr. WHITE. Very well.

Mr. DAVIS. I make that motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seventeen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, July 6, 1898, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 5, 1898.

REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICES.

Peter Campbell, of Wray, Colo., to be register of the land office at Akron, Colo., vice August Muntzing, whose term will expire August 3, 1898.

Elmer E. Hershey, of Missoula, Mont., to be register of the land office at Missoula, Mont., vice John M. Evans, whose term will expire July 17, 1898.

George E. French, of North Platte, Nebr., to be register of the land office at North Platte, Nebr., vice John F. Hinman, whose term will expire August 7, 1898.

Fred M. Dorrington, of Alliance, Nebr., to be register of the land office at Alliance, Nebr., vice John W. Wehn, jr., whose term will expire July 19, 1898.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Frank Bacon, of Gothenburg, Nebr., to be receiver of public moneys at North Platte, Nebr., vice William H. McDonald, whose term will expire August 7, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Charles T. Pollard, of Alabama.

The nomination of Charles P. Pollard, of Alabama, for the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate June 29, 1898, is hereby withdrawn.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

Sidney R. Wiley, of Georgia.

Mr. Wiley was nominated to the Senate June 17, 1898, and confirmed June 23, 1898, under the name of Sidney R. Wylie. This message is to correct error in the name of the nominee.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Hugh C. Preston, of Virginia.

The nomination of Henry C. Preston, of Virginia, for the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate June 29, 1898, is hereby withdrawn.

SECOND REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be chaplain.

Charles B. Carlisle, of Iowa.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Charles K. Maddox, of Georgia.

William Y. Carter, of Georgia.

Jefferson Wilcox, of Georgia.

To be first lieutenants.

Lee C. Hoyle, of Georgia.

Thad H. Parker, of Georgia.

To be second lieutenant.

James H. Blount, jr., of Georgia.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

William B. Preston, of Virginia.

To be second lieutenant.

John Mackey Baldwin, of Virginia.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be chaplain.

Robert D. Wear, of Alabama.

To be captain.

James K. Vardaman, of Mississippi.

To be first lieutenant.

William E. Darby, of Mississippi.

To be second lieutenant.

Samuel K. Mayers, of Mississippi.

EIGHTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Reuben B. Baskette, of Tennessee.

To be first lieutenant.

Richard E. Toomey, private, Company C, Eighth United States Volunteer Infantry.

NINTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be chaplain.

Charles T. Walker, of Georgia.

TENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

James A. Roston, of the District of Columbia.

SECOND REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

Thomas W. M. Draper, of Colorado.

To be first lieutenants.

E. Storer Tice, of Colorado.

Frederick J. Mills, of Idaho.

Frederick C. Turner, of California.

Frank L. Brittain, of California.

Lawrence P. Butler, sergeant, Company I, Fourth Missouri Volunteers.

To be second lieutenant.

Thomas Cooney, of Montana.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenant.

Charles G. Post, quartermaster-sergeant, Battalion of Engineers, United States Army.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY.

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

To be military storekeeper with the rank of captain.

Charles D. A. Loeffler, of the District of Columbia.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 4, 1898.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Henry Whiting, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of Frenchmans Bay, in the State of Maine.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 5, 1898.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY—INFANTRY ARM.

To be captains, to date from April 26, 1898.

First Lieut. Frank B. McCoy, Third Infantry.

First Lieut. Elias Chandler, Sixteenth Infantry.

First Lieut. Frank L. Dodds, Ninth Infantry.

First Lieut. Charles R. Noyes, Ninth Infantry.

First Lieut. Charles W. Abbot, jr., Twelfth Infantry.

First Lieut. Richard M. Blatchford, Eleventh Infantry.

First Lieut. James E. Brett, Twenty-fourth Infantry.

First Lieut. John H. Beacom, Third Infantry.

First Lieut. Will T. May, Fifteenth Infantry.

First Lieut. Henry W. Hovey, Twenty-fourth Infantry.

First Lieut. Lawrence J. Hearn, Twenty-first Infantry.

First Lieut. John H. Shollenberger, Tenth Infantry.

First Lieut. Walter K. Wright, Sixteenth Infantry.

First Lieut. Charles B. Hardin, Eighteenth Infantry.

First Lieut. Edwin P. Pendleton, Twenty-third Infantry.

First Lieut. Harry A. Leonhaeuser, Twenty-fifth Infantry.

First Lieut. Charles B. Vogdes, First Infantry.

First Lieut. Charles W. Penrose, Eleventh Infantry.

First Lieut. Daniel L. Howell, Seventh Infantry.

To be first lieutenant, to date from April 26, 1898.

Second Lieut. Thomas F. Schley, Twenty-third Infantry.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

SECOND REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

Barton F. Dickson, of Indiana.

To be first lieutenant.

Arthur T. Balentine, of Ohio.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be second lieutenant.

Edward Harralson, of Georgia.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Hugh C. Preston, of Virginia.

UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Charles E. Kilbourne, jr., United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

ASSISTANT UNITED STATES TREASURER.

Charles A. Bosworth, of Ohio, to be assistant treasurer of the United States at Cincinnati, Ohio.

ASSISTANT APPRAISER OF MERCHANDISE.

James Campbell, of Maryland, to be assistant appraiser of merchandise in the district of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Thomas C. Walker, of Virginia, to be collector of customs for the district of Tappahannock, in the State of Virginia.

POSTMASTERS.

J. F. Nicholson, to be postmaster at Monongahela, in the county of Washington and State of Pennsylvania.

Allen P. Dickey, to be postmaster at Waynesburg, in the county of Greene and State of Pennsylvania.

John C. McKean, to be postmaster at Charleroi, in the county of Washington and State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, July 5, 1898.

The House was called to order by Mr. BROWNING, Chief Clerk, at 12 o'clock m.

Mr. BROWNING. The Speaker has made the following designation:

I hereby designate Hon. SERRIO E. PAYNE, of New York, to preside over the House during the day.

T. B. REED, Speaker.

JULY 5, 1898.

Accordingly Mr. PAYNE took the chair as Speaker pro tempore. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday last was read.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I find that in the Journal there is a repetition of an appointment of Mr. LOVERING on a committee, and one sentence ought to be erased. And I find in the RECORD, on page 7332, it would appear that Mr. LOVERING was appointed on both the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures and the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, when in point of fact he was relieved from service as to the first of those committees and transferred to the second. I ask that the correction be made both in the Journal and RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The correction will be made. Is there further objection to the approval of the Journal? [After a pause.] The Chair hears no further objection.

SAIL VESSELS OF OVER 700 TONS.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill S. 822, reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. LOVE. Without knowing what the bill is, I reserve the right to object until the bill shall have been read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4436 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4436. The boards of local inspectors shall license and classify the masters, chief mates, engineers, and pilots of all steam vessels, and the masters and chief mates of sail vessels of over 700 tons. It shall be unlawful to employ any person, or for any person to serve, as a master, chief mate, engineer, or pilot of any steamer, or as master or chief mate of any sail vessel of over 700 tons, who is not licensed by the inspectors; and anyone violating this section shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each offense."

SEC. 2. That section 4439 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4439. Whenever any person applies to be licensed as master of any steam vessel, or of a sail vessel of over 700 tons, the inspectors shall make diligent inquiry as to his character, and shall carefully examine the applicant as well as the proofs which he presents in support of his claim, and if they are satisfied that his capacity, experience, habits of life, and character are such as warrant the belief that he can safely be intrusted with the duties and responsibilities of the station for which he makes application, they shall grant him a license authorizing him to discharge such duties on any such vessel for the term of five years; but such license shall be suspended or revoked upon satisfactory proof of bad conduct, intemperate habits, incapacity, inattention to his duties, or the willful violation of any provision of this title applicable to him."

SEC. 3. That section 4440 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4440. Whenever any person applies for authority to be employed as chief mate of steam vessels, or of sail vessels of over 700 tons, the inspectors shall require satisfactory evidence of the knowledge, experience, and skill of the applicant in lading cargo, and in the handling and stowage of freight, and shall examine him as to his knowledge and ability in navigation and managing such vessels, and all other duties pertaining to his station; and if satisfied of his qualifications and good character they shall grant him a license authorizing him to perform such duties for the term of five years; but such license shall be suspended or revoked upon satisfactory proof of bad conduct, intemperate habits, unskillfulness, or want of knowledge of the duties of his station, or the willful violation of any provision of this title applicable to him."

SEC. 4. That section 4417 of the Revised Statutes be, and is hereby, amended by adding thereto the words: "The local inspectors shall, once in every year, at least, upon application in writing of the master or owner, carefully inspect the hull of each sail vessel of over 700 tons within their respective districts, and shall satisfy themselves that every such vessel so submitted to their inspection is of a structure suitable for the service in which she is to be employed, has suitable accommodations for the crew, and is in a condition to warrant the belief that she may be used in navigation with safety to life."

Sec. 5. That this act shall take effect on July 1, 1898.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 10, page 1, after the word "or" and before the word "as," insert "on and after July 1, 1898;" so that the paragraph shall read:

"It shall be unlawful to employ any person, or for any person to serve, as a master, chief mate, engineer, or pilot of any steamer, or on or after July 1, 1898, as master or chief mate of any sail vessel of over 700 tons, who is not licensed by the inspectors; and anyone violating this section shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each offense."

Strike out all of line 4, in section 3, and the following lines, including the words "to him," in line 18, page 3, and insert:

"Sec. 4440. Whenever any person applies for authority to be employed as chief mate of ocean or coastwise steam vessels or of sail vessels of over 700 tons or as second or third mate of ocean or coastwise steam vessels, who shall have charge of a watch, or whenever any person applies for authority to be employed as mate of river steamers, the inspectors shall require satisfactory evidence of the knowledge, experience, and skill of the applicant in lading cargo and in handling and stowage of freight, and if for license as chief mate on ocean or coastwise steamers or of sail vessels of over 700 tons or as second or third mate of ocean or coastwise steamers, who shall have charge of a watch, shall also examine him as to his knowledge and ability in navigation and managing such vessels and all other duties pertaining to his station, and if satisfied of his qualifications and good character they shall grant him a license authorizing him to perform such duties for the term of five years upon the waters upon which he is found qualified to act; but such license shall be suspended or revoked upon satisfactory proof of bad conduct, intemperate habits, unskillfulness, or want of knowledge of the duties of his station or the willful violation of any provision of this title."

Section 5, strike out "nine" in line 2 and insert "eight;" so that it will read: "That this act shall take effect on July 1, 1898."

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman in charge of this bill what it means by the language "inspector." Does it mean inspector appointed by State authority or by Federal authority?

Mr. PERKINS. Why, by Federal authority.

Mr. BAILEY. Does this deal entirely with officers who are now appointed by Federal authority?

Mr. PERKINS. The object of the bill is simply to put these sailing vessels above 700 tons upon the same footing as steam vessels.

Mr. BAILEY. And it makes no change in the law except that?

Mr. PERKINS. That is the only purpose of the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. And it does not require the performance of any duties by any of these officers which are now appointed by the States themselves?

Mr. PERKINS. Oh, no.

Mr. SIMPSON. Do I understand that this bill is to apply the law as to steam vessels to sail vessels above 700 tons?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is, officers of sailing vessels shall pass the same examination and shall have a certificate given them as pilots the same as on steam vessels?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. LOVE. Then it is for the protection of the traveling public?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. MINOR. Does this apply to the lakes as well as coastwise trade?

Mr. PERKINS. It is applicable to sail vessels of over 700 tons.

Mr. MINOR. All sail vessels?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. MINOR. Let me ask you this question: What do you propose to do with tow barges? How do you class them—as sailing vessels?

Mr. PERKINS. I do not suppose they are affected by this bill.

Mr. MINOR. Let me say to the gentleman that a part of the time some of these barges are sailing vessels.

Mr. LOUD. A barge can not be a sailing vessel.

Mr. MINOR. They are sailing vessels sometimes.

Mr. LOUD. The term "sailing vessel" must mean that the motive power is sail power.

Mr. MINOR. Let me suggest to the gentleman from California that one trip may be made under sail power by one of these barges from Chicago to Buffalo loaded on her way down with grain, and she may return in tow of a steam vessel. Now, tell me whether it is a tow barge or a sailing vessel?

Mr. LOUD. That would have to be determined by the inspection as to what that vessel's motive power is. Your barges, as a rule—there may be a few exceptions—have not sufficient sailing power to make that the motive power. They have enough, perhaps, in case of a storm, to assist them.

Mr. MINOR. I want to say to the gentleman from California that nearly one-half of all the barges being towed on the Great Lakes are supplied with a sufficient amount of canvas to care for themselves in case the towline parts.

Mr. LOUD. Yes.

Mr. MINOR. They are provided with ground tackle, consisting of two anchors; they have a donkey engine, and generally three spars, and sometimes four, and more or less canvas, so that in case of a storm, where the towline parts, they can make a port or come to anchor in safety.

Mr. LOUD. Very true.

Mr. MINOR. Now, you see this matter is somewhat mixed. If a vessel makes a trip this week in tow of a steam barge, and the same vessel next week makes the trip with her own motive power—canvas—I want to know where she is going to be classed under this bill?

Mr. LOUD. I do not think barges are adapted for making trips under their own power. They have not steam power, as a rule, sufficient to propel them, with a fair wind, over 2 or 3 knots an hour.

Mr. MINOR. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken. There are hundreds of barges being towed on the lakes capable, in a fairly good leading breeze, of making 8 or 10 knots an hour.

Mr. PERKINS. Would not they be classed as barges and not as sailing vessels?

Mr. MINOR. When in tow of steam barges they would be classed as barges.

Mr. PERKINS. They would not be inspected as sailing vessels, but as barges.

Mr. MINOR. While I am a believer in the bill, having believed for years that pilots who take charge of sailing vessels having a carrying capacity of 700 tons or over should bear the same investigation and be examined and have the same qualifications as steam vessels, I want the thing settled so that every barge in tow of a steamboat shall have her officers properly examined, just the same as though they sailed continually.

Mr. SIMPSON. I think the gentleman is entirely right. I know of several disasters that have happened on the lakes where the owners of barges have put incompetent men in charge, and when they have broken loose they were sunk and the crew lost by the ignorance of the commanding officers. I think this law ought to be extended so that the commanders of barges shall be examined.

Mr. LOUD. Let me say to both gentlemen that unless you get this bill before the House you can not get that provision in. If it is before the House, you can offer an amendment of that kind if you want it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MINOR. Not if we can have a chance to debate it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the committee.

The amendments proposed by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, on page 1, in line 6, after the word "chief," I move to insert the words "second and third."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 1, line 6, after the word "chief," insert the words "second and third;" so that it shall read: "and classify the masters, chief, second and third mates, engineers and pilots," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 4, line 15, after the word "tons," insert the words "and also all sail vessels carrying passengers."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. MINOR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present an amendment to the bill. My chief objection to the bill is that it is not definite enough. I want the bill made specific. I want the same rule to apply to barges that applies to sailing vessels, because, as I stated a moment ago, perhaps one trip a barge is a vessel, depending on her canvas for motive power, and the next trip she is in tow of a steamboat, and I want the men in charge and who are responsible to be just as well qualified, whether she is in tow of other vessels as a barge or a vessel under sail; because they sail one trip and are towed the next trip. Now, in line 7, on the first page, I desire to insert the following after the word vessels: "and all barges in tow of steam vessels."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 1, line 7, after the word "vessel," insert "and all barges in tow of steam vessels."

Mr. PERKINS. I think there is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. Now, Mr. Speaker, in the last section of the bill I move to amend the date when this act shall take effect by striking out, in line 21, the word "first" and inserting "fifteenth."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In section 3, line 21, after the word "July," strike out the word "first" and insert "fifteenth."

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to take advantage of this opportunity to ask the gentleman from Iowa, the chairman of the Committee on Printing [Mr. PERKINS], if there is any resolution before his committee looking to the printing of an increased number of copies of the bankruptcy bill? We are now entitled to and credited with 55 copies, and I venture to say that every member has received a request for a greater number than that.

Mr. PERKINS. There is no resolution pending before the committee. The only action taken was the other day on the motion of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to print that number.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to ask whether under the rules of the House it will be permissible later on to repeat the request and print as many as we may under the rule of the House? I ask that question because if it is not permissible to repeat that request, I desire to introduce a resolution in regard to obtaining at least as many more copies to our credit.

Mr. RAY of New York. Does the gentleman understand how many copies have been printed for the use of the House?

Mr. BAILEY. There are 55 copies to the credit of each member now.

Mr. RAY of New York. I saw the statement of a Senator that $500, which, I think, is the limit of expense under the rules, is it not—

Mr. PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. RAY of New York. Would print 25,000 copies.

Mr. PERKINS. About 30,000.

Mr. BAILEY. There are 380 Members and Delegates and 89 Senators. As I have stated, the number of copies now to the credit of each member is 55. My colleague on my left [Mr. BURKE], from the Dallas district of Texas, tells me that he has already requests for 67 copies.

Mr. RAY of New York. I concede that every member of the House ought to have at least double that number. Why can not the matter be provided for by unanimous consent?

Mr. BAILEY. I interrupted the consideration of this bill to make my inquiry, so that if the object can not be accomplished by unanimous consent (as I hope it can be), a resolution on the subject may be introduced. I beg pardon for interrupting the consideration of the present bill.

Mr. PERKINS. I have some doubt upon this matter. The point with me is whether we have not exhausted our right under the rule in printing the whole number of this document that the House is authorized to print independently of concurrent action on the part of the Senate.

Mr. BAILEY. I am inclined to think that is true; otherwise we might evade and defeat the rule by repeating these requests every day. I think it would be fairer, perhaps, to draw a resolution and refer it. I ask the gentleman from New York, a member of the committee, whether he will not draw such a resolution?

Mr. PERKINS. I think we could pass a concurrent resolution for unanimous consent without any reference to a committee.

Mr. RAY of New York. It certainly ought to be done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LOUD. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "least," in line 13, page 4, insert "or;" so as to read "at least or upon application," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. After examining the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MINOR], I am satisfied that it includes barges on our navigable rivers. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he has any objection to adding to the bill a proviso exempting barges on navigable rivers. If the provisions of this bill should be extended to barges towed from place to place on the rivers of the country, it would practically amount to a prohibition of such traffic. I do not think any such effect was intended; and that construction will be obviated if an exemption such as I have suggested be inserted.

Mr. LOUD. If the gentleman from Wisconsin modifies his amendment so as to make it applicable only to the Great Lakes, that will accomplish the object.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. There will be no objection to that.

Mr. MINOR. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I proposed some time ago be so modified as to apply only to barges and sailing vessels on the Great Lakes. That will remove the objection suggested by the gentleman from Kentucky.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Wisconsin send up his proposition in writing?

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. I suggest that the difficulty can be obviated by adding to the last section a provision that the bill shall not apply to the navigable rivers of the United States.

Mr. LOUD. That will not do, because in order to reach steamers the provisions of the bill must, of course, extend to rivers.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. I have no interest in this matter further than to limit the operation of the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin so that it will not apply to barges on navigable rivers.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman from Wisconsin submitted a modification?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman did not state the exact terms of the modification he proposes.

Mr. LOUD. Let us have the amendment read from the desk, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the words of the amendment just added, as follows: "and all barges in tow of steam vessels," insert the words "on the Great Lakes."

Mr. MINOR. That is the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, it was passed.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, it does not seem now that the title of the bill is correct. It ought to be amended to conform with the action taken by the House.

Mr. CANNON. If the words "and for other purposes" were added, it would make it all right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, the words suggested by the gentleman from Illinois, "and for other purposes," will be added.

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolution of the following titles; in which it requested the concurrence of the House of Representatives:

S. R. 104. Joint resolution preventing discrimination against graduates of legally chartered medical colleges in appointments to the medical corps in the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States;

S. 95. An act to amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce;

S. 4728. An act to change the time of holding the United States courts in the eastern district of North Carolina;

S. 4806. An act for the relief of Winslow Warren;

S. 4534. An act granting a pension to Ovid G. Sparks;

S. 4982. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller;

S. 3471. An act for the relief of George H. White, late captain Company H. Nineteenth Michigan Infantry Volunteers;

S. 2681. An act granting an increase of pension to Dwight D. Wilber; and

S. 4823. An act granting an increase of pension to Phineas L. Squires.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 7363. An act to grant a pension to Junius Alexander;

H. R. 9874. An act for the relief of John C. Coleman;

H. R. 9195. An act granting a pension to Foster C. Carl;

H. R. 377. An act granting a pension to Susan I. Barrows;

H. R. 3565. An act to grant a pension to Thresa Bonnaveau;

H. R. 4918. An act for the relief of J. Henry Rives, of Virginia;

H. R. 6064. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Watts;

H. R. 2276. An act granting an increase of pension to Almon Stuart;

H. R. 4620. An act for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles;

H. R. 5102. An act granting an increase of pension to Edson Sullivan;

H. R. 9739. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker;

H. R. 8090. An act granting a pension to Belle Peter;

H. R. 6160. An act to amend section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States;

H. R. 6098. An act granting a pension to Ellen E. Nash;

H. R. 4283. An act granting an increase of pension to William B. Murray;

H. R. 3081. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Fogarty;

H. R. 2267. An act to increase the pension of Jeremiah Hackett;

H. R. 10477. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build, or authorize the building of, a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in said State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896;

H. R. 10693. An act directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States;
 H. R. 10117. An act granting a pension to Martha Jennie Freer;
 H. R. 4977. An act granting a pension to Mary Hannah Clark;
 H. R. 6790. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren W. Morgan;
 H. R. 7260. An act granting a pension to James E. Jones;
 H. R. 8236. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo O. Drake;
 H. R. 7306. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Beckwith;
 H. R. 6841. An act granting an increase of pension to James C. Hervey;
 H. R. 9755. An act granting a pension to Matilda Waedel;
 H. R. 1858. An act granting an increase of pension to William Manley, late private of Company L, Seventeenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry;
 H. R. 4315. An act to increase the pension of George D. Phinney;
 H. R. 3634. An act granting a pension to Pauline Robbins;
 H. R. 8266. An act to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons; and
 H. R. 4180. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton W. Cooper.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10280) to require the Brightwood Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 10561. An act to increase the force of the Ordnance Department;
 H. R. 10805. An act to amend the act relating to the pay of volunteer soldiers;
 H. R. 4274. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman; and
 H. R. 5883. An act to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 8925) to amend sections 1693 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, asked a conference with the House of Representatives on the said bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. PASCO, and Mr. BERRY as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had further insisted upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, numbered 30, disagreed to by the House of Representatives.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. R. 164. Joint resolution preventing discrimination against graduates of legally chartered medical colleges in appointments to the medical corps in the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 95. An act to amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 4738. An act to change the time of holding the United States courts in the eastern district of North Carolina—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 4806. An act for the relief of Winslow Warren—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 4534. An act granting a pension to Ovid G. Sparks—to the Committee on Pensions.

S. 4332. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Miller—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4545. An act to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses—to the Select Committee on the Twelfth Census.

S. 2691. An act granting an increase of pension to Dwight D. Wilber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3471. An act for the relief of George H. White, late captain Company H, Nineteenth Michigan Infantry Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 4833. An act granting an increase of pension to Phineas L. Squires—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PAY OF SESSION EMPLOYEES.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to pass the following appropriation bill, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10685) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, as follows: A sufficient sum, not exceeding $5,000, to pay the following session employees of the House of Representatives from and including the 1st day of July, 1898, until the close of the present session of Congress, at the rates of compensation specified in the act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year 1898, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1897, namely, 1 assistant index clerk in the office of the Clerk; 33 pages, 2 messengers, 3 folders, and 10 laborers, under the Doorkeeper; 7 messengers, under the Postmaster, and 18 clerks to committees during the session.

To pay Henry C. Brewster, for expenses in contested-election case of Ryan against Brewster, $1,969.70.

COLLECTING INTERNAL REVENUE.

For salaries and expenses of collectors and deputy collectors, surveyors, and clerks, including transportation of public funds, and also including expenses of enforcing the act of August 3, 1890, taxing oleomargarine, and the act of August 4, 1890, imposing upon the Government the expense of the inspection of tobacco exported; also the act of June 6, 1896, imposing a tax on filled cheese, fiscal year 1898, $30,000.

Mr. SAYERS. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill if the four employees that were authorized by the House to represent the Democratic side of the House are embraced in this proposition?

Mr. CANNON. They are paid from the contingent fund until the 4th of next March, the end of this Congress, as I am informed on inquiry.

Mr. SAYERS. Their payment is not covered by this bill?

Mr. CANNON. No.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered and was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE OVER TOMBIGBEE RIVER, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to pass the following bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the county of Monroe, in the State of Mississippi, is hereby authorized to construct and maintain a bridge and approaches thereto over the Tombigbee River, at or near a point 300 yards north of where the railroad bridge of the main line of the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroad crosses said river. Said bridge shall be constructed to provide for the passage of wagons and vehicles of all kinds, for the transit of animals, and for foot passengers.

Sec. 2. That any bridge built under the provisions of this act shall be built and constructed without material interference with the security and convenience of navigation, such as is had or practicable to be had on said river, and in order to secure a compliance with this condition the board of supervisors of the said county and State shall submit to the Secretary of War a plan of the bridge provided for in this act, with such other information as may be required by the Secretary of War for a full and satisfactory understanding of the subject; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed, upon receiving such plan and other information, and being satisfied that the bridge built upon such plan will conform to prescribed conditions of this act, to immediately notify the board of supervisors for said county, in said State, that he approves the same, and upon receiving such notification the said county may proceed to the erection of said bridge: Provided, That until the Secretary of War shall approve the location and plan of the said bridge the same shall not be commenced or built, and any change in the location or plan before or after completion of the bridge shall be subject to his approval: Provided further, That the said bridge shall be so kept and managed as to offer reasonable and proper means for the passage of boats through or under said structure, and for the safety of vessels passing at night there shall be displayed on said bridge, at the expense of the owners thereof, from sunset to sunrise, such lights or other signals as the Light-House Board may prescribe.

Sec. 3. That any bridge constructed under this act and according to these provisions and conditions shall be a lawful structure, over which may be transmitted the mails, troops, and munitions of war of the United States free of charge, and the United States shall have the right of way for postal telegraph purposes across said bridge.

Sec. 4. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Sec. 5. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date hereof.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, and ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, it was passed.

On motion of Mr. ALLEN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INCREASE OF ORDNANCE BUREAU.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, the Senate has sent over two bills this morning with certain amendments, one of them relating to the Ordnance Department, and I ask consent to take these bills up now with a view to moving to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Has the Committee on Military Affairs unanimously agreed on these bills?

Mr. HULL. I will say to the gentleman that that committee reported a House bill relating to the Ordnance Department which passed the House. It went to the Senate and was there amended, and it is now a mere question if the House does not want to concur with the Senate on these amendments the matter can go to conference at once.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY], as the gentleman from Alabama will remember, opposed all additional officers in this department except those appointments temporary in their character.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that the gentleman desires to take them up in order to get them into conference?

Mr. HULL. My intention was to move to concur. If the gentleman objects to that, then I will move for a conference.

Mr. STEELE. Does this give them increased rank?

Mr. HULL. It gives them additional rank.

Mr. STEELE. I am not surprised at that.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman from Alabama objects to the motion to concur, I will move that we agree to the request of the Senate for a committee of conference.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask the gentleman to let it go over until the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HAY] is present.

Mr. HULL. Why not let it go to conference? We can meet to-day and report it back in a day or two. The Ordnance Department are overwhelmed with work, and it is important that this bill should become a law. Mr. Speaker, I move to nonconcur in the Senate amendments to the bill H. R. 10561, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate amendments to the bill H. R. 10561?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no objection to it going to conference, but I do not see other gentlemen here who are interested in the matter.

Mr. HULL. I do not think there is any objection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If it goes to conference, there will be an opportunity for the members of the committee on this side to have a vote on it afterwards, will there?

Mr. HULL. Oh, certainly; they would have to have a vote on it.

Mr. COX. What is the bill?

Mr. HULL. To increase the Ordnance Department.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL. I move to nonconcur and agree to the conference asked for.

The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. HULL, Mr. MARSH, and Mr. COX.

PAY OF VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, now I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill (H. R. 10895) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers, with a view to moving to concur in the Senate amendments. It is a bill in regard to the pay of the Army from the time of the enrollment of soldiers to their muster in. It puts officers and soldiers on the same basis. As it is now, nobody but the enlisted men would get any pay.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the amendments to a bill the title of which the Clerk will report.

Mr. COX. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee for a little fuller explanation of the bill than he has made. As I understand it, it is to settle the pay of the volunteers from the time they start into the service.

Mr. HULL. Yes; from the date of enrollment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10895) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the amendments?

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Let the amendments be reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendments, subject to objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 9, strike out "such" and insert: "all officers and enlisted men."

Page 1, line 10, strike out "as are."

Page 2, line 1, after "President," insert: "and all officers and enlisted men who have not been so paid shall be so paid by the Pay Department of the Army out of any moneys appropriated for the maintenance of the Army."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer officers and soldiers."

Mr. HULL. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that this is the bill introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY]. The former bill as it passed both Houses provided for pay only from the date when these men were received into battalion or regimental rendezvous. In a good many cases they were put in company rendezvous and kept there for some time before they were ordered to regimental or battalion rendezvous. The bill in its main provisions is a law now. This simply enlarges the scope of it so that men and officers are paid from the date of their enrollment and reporting for duty. That is all there is to the amendments, and I move that the House concur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the amendments?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the conference report and let the statement of the House conferees be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the conference report and that the statement of the conferees on the part of the House be read instead. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 5, 6, 9, 47, 49, 50, 60, 62, 71, 73, 74, 105, 124, 141, 147, 175, 176, 177, 184, 195, 202, 203, 206, and 215.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 29, 32, 33, 34, 35, 40, 41, 42, 45, 46, 48, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 61, 63, 64, 65, 67, 68, 69, 72, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 116, 117, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 143, 144, 145, 146, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 204, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 218, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, and 234; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "To make the salaries of the Second and Third Assistant Secretaries of State $4,000 each for the fiscal year 1899, $1,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "delegates" and insert in lieu thereof the words "a delegate;" and in line 4 of said amendment, after the word "year," insert the words "not exceeding;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment, after the word "Relations," insert the following: "At a compensation in full not exceeding $1,500, which sum is hereby appropriated;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment, insert the following: "To make the salary of the Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue $4,000 for the fiscal year 1899, $800;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of said amendment insert the following: "Provided, That no payment shall be made hereunder until the sureties on said contract shall consent in writing to the same;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment and add at the end thereof the following: "Provided, That no part of this sum shall be expended for pneumatic-tube service connected outside of said building;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendments numbered 36, 37, and 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 36, 37, and 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Transpose the matter inserted by said amendments to come in after line 12 on page 120 of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The salaries of the officers and clerks of the mint at New Orleans, La., shall be the same in number and amount for the fiscal year 1899 as for the fiscal year 1898, and for this purpose the sum of $3,750 is hereby appropriated in addition to the amount appropriated in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1899."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 43: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment, after the word "Dakota," insert the words "fiscal year 1899;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "same," insert the words "fiscal year 1899;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 59: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 59, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment and add thereto the following: "Provided, That during such time as jurors are not in attendance upon said criminal courts the marshal may in such cases impanel the jurors in attendance upon the police court, who shall perform such duties in addition to and as part of their duties in said police court;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 66: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 66, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Transpose the matter inserted by said amendment to come in after line 16 on page 117 of the bill; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by said amendment insert the following:

"That the jurisdiction over the places purchased for the location of the Branches of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, under and by authority of an act of Congress approved July 23, 1888, in Grant County, State of Indiana, and upon which said Branch Home is located, and by authority of an act of Congress approved June 4, 1897, 'at the town of Danville, in the county of Vermillion, State of Illinois,' and upon which said Branch is now located, is hereby ceded to the respective States in which said Branches are located and relinquished by the United States; and the United States shall claim or exercise no jurisdiction over said places after the passage of this act: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall be construed to impair the powers and rights heretofore conferred upon the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in and over said places."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 100: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out of said amendment, in lines 5, 6, and 7, the following: "and as far as practicable from the residents of the respective States where forest reservations exist or may hereafter be set apart;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 103: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 103, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Add at the end of the matter inserted by said amendment the following: "And so much of the trust vested in said boards and heretofore initiated as shall remain unexecuted on said date shall be vested in the Commissioner of the General Land Office, who is hereby authorized and empowered to complete the same;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 118: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 118, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For additional pay of physician employed by contract for the Indians of the Walker River Indian Reservation in Nevada, fiscal year 1899, $300;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 133: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 133, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out of said amendment, in lines 9 and 10, the following: "and no such sum shall be barred by the statute of limitations;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 142: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$90,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 201: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 201, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "110;" and on page 100 of the bill, after line 24, insert, as a separate paragraph, the following:

"Total amount of pay to increased force of Regular Army under this act, $4,017,804."

And on page 103 of the bill, in line 16, after the word "surgeons," insert the words "at 7 cents per mile."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 205: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 205, and agree to the same with amendments as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,968,475;" and after said amendment insert as a separate paragraph the following:

"For pay of 42,000 enlisted men to complete regiments already organized, $5,950,718.32."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 213: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 213, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$17,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 214: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 214, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$28,400;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendment of the Senate numbered 30 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

J. G. CANNON,
JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
Managers on the part of the House.
EUGENE HALE,
W. B. ALLISON,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, submit the following written statement in explanation of the accompanying conference report, namely:

The Senate made 224 amendments and added $10,220,903.87 to the bill.

Of the whole sum added, $9,401,510 is for expenses of the war with Spain, submitted in estimates since the bill was passed by the House, and is recommended to be agreed to by the conference committee.

The appropriations proposed by the House of $50,000, respectively for a Canadian commission and to complete the appraisers' warehouse in New York, stricken out by the Senate, are recommended to be restored by the conference committee.

Of the remaining sum added by the Senate, $1,809,393.87 is substantially all to meet deficiencies, including the payment of judgments and audited accounts, submitted in estimates since the bill was passed by the House, and is recommended to be agreed to by the conference committee.

The conference committee recommend that the Senate recede from amendments appropriating $250,087.24.

The conference committee have been unable to agree on the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, to provide for the settlement of the claims of the United States against the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and appropriating $30,000 therefor.

J. G. CANNON,
JOSEPH D. SAYERS,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON, Mr. Speaker, I desire unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a telegram and letter from the Secretary of the Navy, which explains an item of $320,000 for dredging Elizabeth River at or near Norfolk Navy-Yard, for the purpose of getting a deeper channel, as a war measure. Ordinarily, it would be considered as a river and harbor item, but it appeared to the conferees on the part of the House as well as the Senate that it was absolutely necessary for this appropriation to be made from a war standpoint. I will not take the time to read it, but ask that it be inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the matter which he has presented.

There was no objection.

The letter and telegram are as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, July 1, 1898.

To Hon. W. B. HOOKER:

As the amendment states, the object is to admit largest vessels in the Navy to the Norfolk Navy-Yard. I presume it was made at the request of the Secretary of the Navy. I suggest that you ask him if he deems it necessary as a war measure.

JOHN M. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Chief of Engineers.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, July 1, 1898.

To Hon. W. B. HOOKER:

Will send you copy of letter to chairman Naval Affairs Committee of Senate of 23d ultimo regarding improvements to Elizabeth River. Messenger is on his way.

JOHN D. LONG.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, June 23, 1898.

SIR: Referring to the committee's communication of the 21st instant, inclosing copy of bill S. 4447, "to widen, deepen, and improve the channel of Elizabeth River, Virginia, from Hampton Roads to the Norfolk Navy-Yard," and requesting the views of the Department in regard to the same, I have the honor to inform you that the matter having been referred to the Bureau of Yards and Docks, the Chief of said Bureau has reported thereon as follows:

"It is considered of the highest importance by the Bureau that a channel of sufficient depth and width to admit the passage of the largest vessels of the Navy at all stages of the tide between Hampton Roads and the Norfolk Navy-Yard be dredged immediately. The largest vessels draw 27 feet 3 inches of water, and a minimum depth of 23 feet at low water should be attained at once in order to make the plant at the Norfolk Navy-Yard available for all the naval vessels for repairs in case of emergency.

"Any disaster to a large number of our ships in the South would render it of the utmost importance that the southernmost navy-yard, possessing facilities for repairs and renovation, be accessible to all classes of vessels at all times, and I have the honor to state that I consider the measure embodied in the bill S. 4447 one of great urgency, and particularly so at this juncture when the fortunes of war might render the failure to make a provision of this character a public misfortune."

Concurring with the views expressed in the foregoing report, the Department commends the bill to the prompt and favorable consideration of the committee.

Very respectfully,

JOHN D. LONG,
Secretary.

Hon. EUGENE HALE,
Chairman Committee on Naval Affairs, United States Senate.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I have no objection to this request, but I want it understood that the Pacific railroad proposition is to come up unembarrassed by any other proposition.

Mr. CANNON. One moment. I first want to adopt the conference report.

Mr. MAGUIRE. What effect will that have?

Mr. SAYERS. None whatever. It will not have the slightest effect.

Mr. CANNON. Then we can agree about that item.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Very well.

Mr. CANNON. Now, all the items in this bill in difference between the House and the Senate are agreed to except one, and there is a disagreement as to the item touching the Central Pacific and Western Pacific railroads. I move the adoption of the conference report.

The report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, as there is one item not agreed to, and the only item upon the bill—namely, that just indicated—and as the gentleman from California expressed a desire to be heard touching the same when this matter went to conference, I will ask the gentleman if we can agree at this time upon the length of debate upon the matter?

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, this amendment to the general deficiency bill is a proposition to refund the indebtedness of the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific railroads to the Government. It involves all the questions that were involved in the discussion of the refunding bills in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses. In each of those Congresses three days were allowed for debate on the funding bill, and in each case the House, after full debate, by overwhelming majorities, voted down the measure. It seems to me we ought to have the same time for debate on this measure.

Mr. CANNON. Well, now, I say to the gentleman three days, so far as I am concerned, is absolutely impossible, unless a majority of the House should so determine, at this stage of the session. The Pacific railroads and all matters in connection therewith have been matter of public history for many, many years and, I think, are fully understood by the House. The provision is short and exceedingly easily understood. I will ask the gentleman if that is the best indication he can give as to the time?

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is the best indication I can give. It seems to me that, notwithstanding it is a short measure, committing the power of Congress to a commission to do a thing that Congress twice by an overwhelming majority refused to do, involves in the discussion all that was involved in the attempt to do the same through Congressional action.

Mr. MAHANY. In other words, it is a plan to delegate to a commission powers which Congress has refused to exercise itself.

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is the practical purpose.

Mr. HOPKINS. I will ask the gentleman, in view of the fact that the subject has been discussed, as he has stated, if it will not now take much less time to consider it?

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman has no other proposition to make, I will, Mr. Speaker, retain the floor for the balance of my hour. The gentleman is entitled to be heard, I have no doubt, and if the gentleman will take his hour, well and good, and then I will have to pursue my own course as to the time. I will ask the House to sustain me in a motion for the previous question.

Mr. MAGUIRE. An hour's debate on this question would be simply absurd; simply absurd.

Mr. CANNON. I am saying, as the gentleman will not, from my standpoint, submit any reasonable request, that I will not move the previous question now. If the gentleman desires time, he can take it now.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I desire time for a great many people, and particularly for the members of the minority of the Committee on Pacific Railroads, to which this measure has never been submitted, and it has never been before any committee of the House or Senate, except perfunctorily before the Senate committee, with a seven-line report on it.

Mr. CANNON. I will say to the gentleman I will submit now, not to be bound by it, this request as to the time when I will move the previous question and have it ordered, if the majority is with me—I will submit to the gentleman, however, again a request for unanimous consent that we vote upon the motion, a parliamentary motion to be made, to-morrow at 1 o'clock, to concur in this amendment. That I believe is the motion of highest privilege.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from Illinois permit me to inquire if this is the only matter in difference between the conferees of the two Houses, and with the disposal of this the whole bill is disposed of?

Mr. CANNON. If this amendment were disposed of, the whole bill would be disposed of.

Mr. BAILEY. Then it does seem to me that if we get through with it to-morrow, it is just as little time as you could ask the gentleman from California and his friends to agree to.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Several gentlemen here who are as much interested in the measure as I am have suggested 4 o'clock to-morrow. Even with a vote at that time I expect many gentlemen who wish to speak will be shut out.

Mr. CANNON. Well, there are other matters of importance to come up, too.

Mr. SAYERS. I will suggest to the gentleman from Illinois that he had better put it at 4 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That will only give four hours on a side.

Mr. CANNON. Well, there are other matters that are liable to come up, possibly very important matters; make it 2 o'clock.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I hope the chairman of the committee will agree to 4 o'clock.

Mr. CANNON. Well, Mr. Speaker, I will ask unanimous consent that a vote may be taken at 4 o'clock to-morrow on a motion to concur, which is the one of highest parliamentary privilege upon this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that a vote be taken at 4 o'clock to-morrow on a motion to concur.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I desire, in connection with that motion, to submit a motion to instruct the House conferees to nonconcur.

Mr. CANNON. Well, if we refuse to concur, that of itself is nonconcurrency.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That would be in order after the other motion is disposed of.

Mr. CANNON. The motion in order—the highest parliamentary privilege—is the motion to concur; and if the House refuses to concur, that of itself is equivalent to a vote to nonconcur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none; and it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF BANKRUPTCY BILL.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," 75,000 copies; 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. RAY of New York, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. BAILEY. It is understood that under this resolution the copies will be apportioned to the members?

Mr. RAY of New York. Certainly.

Mr. HOPKINS. Well, you had better have it in the resolution.

Mr. RAY of New York. The chairman of the committee told me it was unnecessary.

Subsequently,

Mr. RAY of New York said: Mr. Speaker, in asking the adoption of the resolution for printing extra copies of the bankruptcy bill I supposed that these additional copies would be printed with the index as prepared by the Clerk. He tells me that the index will not be included unless provision is made to that effect. In order that such an amendment may be inserted, I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was adopted.

There was no objection.

Mr. RAY of New York. I now offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend resolution so as to read: "Resolved, etc., That there be printed of public act 171, 'An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States,' 75,000 copies; 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate; that such print be of the act with the index as prepared by the Clerk."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was adopted.

On motion of Mr. RAY of New York, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

- S. 3232. An act granting a pension to Edward Madden;
- S. 4231. An act granting an increase of pension to Millie A. Berry;
- S. 3777. An act granting an increase of pension to Curtis B. McIntosh;
- S. 4630. An act to increase the pension of Chauncey A. Bradley;
- S. 1918. An act to increase the pension of William Sharrock;
- S. 2965. An act granting a pension to Lewis E. Humpton;
- S. 4207. An act granting a pension to Louisa Hale;
- S. 3276. An act granting a pension to Mary Ellen Lauriat;
- S. 409. An act to increase the pension of Sarah Gresham, widow of Col. Benjamin Q. A. Gresham;
- S. 2618. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Wendell;
- S. 605. An act granting pension to Vinton Massie; and
- S. 539. An act granting an increase of pension to Clarinda S. Hillman.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

- H. R. 9140. An act granting an increase of pension to Felix Tait;
- H. R. 8870. An act granting a pension to Pryor Perkins;
- H. R. 6525. An act granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan;
- H. R. 8950. An act increasing the pension of Mrs. Sarah Fry;
- H. R. 4916. An act granting a pension to Virginia C. Fleanor;
- H. R. 4484. An act granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenny;
- H. R. 737. An act granting a pension to Olive H. South;
- H. R. 8724. An act granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou;
- H. R. 7841. An act granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton;
- H. R. 6483. An act granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach;
- H. R. 8243. An act granting a pension to John Connolly;
- H. R. 8551. An act to increase the pension of Armenias H. Evans;
- H. R. 9765. An act to increase the pension of John N. Wiley;
- H. R. 8679. An act granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw;
- H. R. 7980. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett;
- H. R. 3164. An act granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson;
- H. R. 5069. An act to pension Jacob N. Atherton;
- H. R. 4811. An act granting a pension to Jane E. Zink;

H. R. 9295. An act granting an increase of pension to Justin O. Hottenstein;

H. R. 3001. An act granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin;

H. R. 2673. An act granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark;

H. R. 8501. An act for the relief of Corydon G. Crafts;

H. R. 6437. An act for the relief of Clarissa A. Dunham;

H. R. 2497. An act to increase the pension of James E. Eaton; and

H. R. 9206. An act to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 3598) granting a pension to Henrietta Fowler.

BEAUTIFYING POST-OFFICE PROPERTY IN SAGINAW, MICH.

Mr. BRUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10700) to authorize the city of Saginaw, Mich., to beautify and use as a public park the United States post-office property in said city, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered to grant to the city of Saginaw, Mich., the privilege of beautifying and using for a public park such part of the United States post-office property situated in said city of Saginaw, Mich., as he may deem unnecessary to hold for the purpose of which it was purchased: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may terminate such grant or privilege at any time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BRUCKER, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

The House resumed the consideration of the conference report on the general deficiency bill.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I presume the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] will desire to control the time in favor of a motion to concur. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] be permitted to control the time in opposition to the motion to concur.

Mr. CANNON. I have no desire about it one way or the other. I supposed the Speaker would control the time.

Mr. BAILEY. I make the request because I know there have been applications to the gentleman from California for time, and he is more familiar with it than anybody else on this side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas, that the time be equally divided and that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] control the time on that side and the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] control the time against the motion?

Mr. BABCOCK. I ask for the regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin calls for the regular order, which is equivalent to an objection. Mr. SAYERS. I hope the gentleman from Wisconsin will not do that.

Mr. BABCOCK. I do not object to the division of time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin withdraws his objection. Is there further objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BABCOCK. Now, Mr. Speaker, I renew my request for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the consideration of the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to concur in the amendment to the deficiency bill.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I should be pleased to hear a statement from the chairman of the committee on the reason for tacking this Pacific bill onto the general deficiency bill before we proceed on our side.

Mr. CANNON. No applications have been made to me for time in debate up to this time. Fixing the vote at 4 o'clock to-morrow was purely a concession to the gentleman from California and those who agree with him. Until applications are made to me, I can not tell who will desire to talk on this side.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Are there no statements to be made as to the reason why this amendment should be added to the general deficiency bill?

Mr. CANNON. I understand in a general way, I will say to the gentleman, in justice to him, that this is a Senate amendment put on by unanimous action by the Senate, touching the Central and Western Pacific railways. I understand that on the 1st day of next January the Central and Western Pacific railways will be indebted to the United States in the sum of $59,000,000 in round numbers; that this $59,000,000 is a second lien upon these two railways; that the first lien upon the railways, a prior lien, is in round numbers $28,000,000 or a little less, making the total indebtedness to the Central and Western Pacific railways $87,000,000 in round numbers. And this is after deducting the sinking fund and various legal claims that the Central Pacific Railway has against the United States for transportation, etc.

Mr. LOVE. Are both these roads owned and operated by the same company or by different companies?

Mr. CANNON. For information on that subject I will refer the gentleman to the Pacific Railroad Committee. I do not care to go into a discussion of that subject, nor does it make any difference who owns and operates these roads. I am trying to get a statement of the indebtedness of these two companies to the Government.

Mr. LOVE. I wanted to find out whether these two roads are owned and operated by one company or by two. I think this a question of some importance in arriving at the best solution.

Mr. CANNON. I suppose they are owned by one company; yet I do not know nor do I care whether they are owned by one, two, or more companies. I am trying to get at the fact of what the indebtedness is to the Government, what is the amount of indebtedness prior to the Government lien, what is the total amount, and what is the prospect of our getting our money. That is the question to which I am trying to address myself. As to whether these roads are leased by other companies, as to who operates them, that is a matter of no importance, at least for the purposes of this discussion.

These roads are 860 miles in length, the two together carrying an indebtedness of something over $100,000 to the mile. The Central Pacific road commences, as I understand, 5 miles west of Ogden and runs to Sacramento; the Western Pacific commences at or about Sacramento and runs to San Jose.

Now, all this money is now due except in round numbers about $10,000,000, which (having in the meantime been paid out of the Treasury under a former law to redeem the subsidiary bonds) will be due the 1st day of next January, so that the whole $60,000,000, or, to be accurate, $59,000,000, will then be due and owing, subject to the lien of $37,000,000 or $28,000,000, which is a first mortgage prior to the Government lien.

Now, in this condition the question arises, What is it best for the United States to do in order to secure this great sum of money? One remedy might be to foreclose. If there should be a foreclosure and no purchaser then the United States, to get possession of the roads, must pay the first mortgage—$37,000,000 or $28,000,000. I hope the United States will not be forced to do that, for various reasons. One is, I do not want the United States to own this railway or any other. I am opposed to the ownership of railways by the United States. I would rather that this debt should never be collected than that we should enter upon the policy of Government ownership of railways.

Now let me read the amendment which the Senate has put upon this bill:

That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Attorney-General, and their successors in office, be, and they are hereby, appointed a commission with full power to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads, upon such terms and in such manner as may be agreed upon by them, or by a majority of them, and the owners of said railroads: Provided, That any and all settlements thus made shall be submitted in writing to the President for his approval or disapproval, and unless approved by him shall not be binding.

That said commission shall not agree to accept a less sum in settlement of the amount due the United States than the full amount of the principal and interest and all amounts necessary to reimburse the United States for moneys paid for interest or otherwise: And also provided, That said commission are hereby empowered to grant such time or times of payment by installment, and at such rates of interest, to be not less than 3 per cent per annum, payable semiannually, and with such security as to said commission may seem expedient: Provided, however, That in any settlement that may be made the final payment and full discharge of said indebtedness shall not be postponed to exceed ten years, and the whole amount, principal and interest, shall be paid in equal semiannual installments within the period so limited, and in any settlement made it shall be provided that if default shall be made in any payment of either principal or interest or any part thereof then the whole sum and all installments, principal and interest, shall immediately become due and payable, notwithstanding any other stipulation of said settlement.

That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $20,000 to defray the expenses of said commission in making the said settlement.

Mr. BARHAM. Allow me to ask when is the settlement under this bill to be perfected and to take effect?

Mr. CANNON. Within such reasonable time as it is practicable to perfect it; and if not perfected to suit the discretion of Congress, the whole matter is subject to future legislation.

Mr. BARHAM. Then will the question have to come back to Congress for future legislation in the event of a failure to perfect a settlement within a reasonable time?

Mr. CANNON. Not necessarily, I apprehend. But if the gentleman thinks that this provision will not lead to a settlement, then he does not agree with the best experts with whom I have been able to get in touch.

Mr. BARHAM. Why should we not make this matter specific? If it is the purpose not to have this settlement hung up indefinitely in the event that the railroad company should continue to make propositions which the Government would not accept, why should there be any objection to putting upon this measure a proviso limiting the time in which a settlement shall be made—five months, six months, ten months, one year—any reasonable time?

Mr. CANNON. This provision anticipates that a settlement will be made within a reasonable time. And if, when Congress comes together again on the first Monday of December, satisfactory headway has not been made to secure this great amount that is due to the Government—$80,000,000—we shall then be within a month of the time when the last installment will be due; and it will then be quite competent for Congress, if necessary, to take action.

Mr. BARHAM. Further action?

Mr. CANNON. Further action.

Mr. BARHAM. Then the gentleman thinks that under this measure, before the President could proceed to enforce payment, Congress, in the event of the passage of this bill, would have to take further action?

Mr. CANNON. I do not say so. I say it is quite within the power of Congress at any time to take further action.

Mr. BARHAM. But has not Congress already taken action?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman knows better than I do the legislation already upon the statute books touching the Pacific Railway—

Mr. BARHAM. Yes; I know a good deal about it.

Mr. CANNON. And this provision in no way repeals that legislation, as I understand.

Mr. BARHAM. In the event that this bill should pass, can the President proceed to foreclose this mortgage?

Mr. CANNON. In my judgment, yes.

Mr. BARHAM. I hope that is so.

Mr. BELFORD. Now, the bonds that are to be foreclosed, will they be foreclosed by the Pacific Railway Company?

Mr. CANNON. What bonds does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. BELFORD. Why, all of the bonds—the mortgage bonds outstanding or authorized.

Mr. CANNON. The railroad companies in question, I will state to the gentleman, do not hold any bonds.

Mr. BARHAM. They have all been disposed of.

Mr. POWERS. All of them.

Mr. CANNON. Then the companies owe $87,000,000, in round numbers.

Mr. BELFORD. I only wanted to get at the facts and to be satisfied as to the proposition pending.

Mr. CANNON. I will try to satisfy the gentleman, if I can possibly do so. There are better experts than I, who could give the information much more assuredly than I can. But I will give the gentleman such information as I have. I have given to the matter the best attention I could, as a member of Congress, for some twenty years, and have a general knowledge of the subject, without that close technical information which others possess.

There are, as I have said, about $87,000,000, in round numbers, due by these roads. That is to say, the United States is the creditor of the Central and Western Pacific railroad companies to the extent of $59,000,000. Then these railroads owe other parties $27,000,000 and upward, which is a security prior—or, in other words, a prior lien—to that of the United States.

Mr. DE VRIES. In the statement the gentleman is now making as to the outstanding liabilities to other parties of $27,000,000, does he take into consideration the moneys in the Treasury which are applicable under the sinking fund?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; I have taken into consideration all of the amounts due from the sinking fund and other sources.

Mr. DE VRIES. I think the gentleman has not included that.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I think the gentleman is mistaken; but I will refer him to the public-debt statement, which gives the exact figures. I have given the figures from the best information I have been able to secure. I have given it from the reports, as I gather them, and from the best examination that has been accessible to me.

Now, then, this amount is over $100,000 a mile of indebtedness upon each mile of the Central and Western Pacific railroads, 860 miles in all, in round numbers, commencing at a point 5 miles west of Ogden and running to Sacramento through the desert and over the mountains, and commencing at or near Sacramento and running the rest of the distance to San Jose.

Mr. POWERS. If the gentleman will permit an interruption, from 5 miles west of Ogden it runs through an absolute desert for 569 miles, with no local business whatever upon it.

Mr. CANNON. I understand that to be a fact from the reports, and in truth I may say that I know it to be a fact from personal observation, having gone over the road.

Now, the question comes up, What shall we do to secure the payment of this large sum of money to the United States? The Senate of the United States under its rules or not under its rules, I do not care which, in an emergency has put the amendment which has just been read on the deficiency bill. In the House such an amendment would have been subject to the point of order. But it was deemed of such great importance that something should be done that the Senate put it on, the Populists, Democrats, and Republicans all uniting by unanimous consent in so placing it; and that unanimous consent included, of course, the two Senators from California, the two Senators from Nevada, the two Senators from Utah, and all the Senators, and we find it now on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, after the best inquiry I have been able to make, my judgment is that it is wise on the part of the House under all of the conditions to concur in the Senate amendment and let us see what can be done to secure this settlement.

Mr. CASTLE. If the gentleman will permit me, he speaks of certain securities. Will he be kind enough to state just what they are?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, I do not know exactly, nor, in fact, do I care. That is to say, I mean I do not know correctly just what they are.

Mr. CASTLE. Are they any better than the Government now holds under the original charter?

Mr. CANNON. I suppose so; and still I could not speak with certain knowledge. Certainly we could have none worse than the Government now holds under existing conditions.

Mr. CASTLE. One further question. If these roads have not paid anything in thirty years, by what parity of reasoning does the chairman of this committee expect them to pay the entire debt in ten years?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, the roads have not failed to pay anything in thirty years. The roads have transported the supplies of the Government, and that has gone as a credit upon this indebtedness. Then there is the 5 per cent sinking fund and the sinking fund under the Thurman Act. I thought I had the figures here showing the amount which has been paid. It is quite a large amount.

Now, much can be said to muddy the water, and I have no doubt much will be said in this discussion to muddy the water, but I trust the House will keep down to the business proposition. There has been declamation year in and year out ever since the Pacific railroads were constructed; declamation about the plutocrats, about the great fortunes that have been made. How just or unjust that declamation has been it is not for me to say, nor for the purposes of this amendment is it necessary for me to inquire. That country was an untracked desert; a wilderness, when those roads were built. Most of the way it is now a settled country, with many Commonwealths. You recollect the old story of Columbus and the egg. He stood it on end, and after he showed them how, any fool could stand it upon end.

Now, whether one man is wise or another unwise, whether anybody has been oppressed or anybody has been favored, whether there might have been better legislation to develop that great country west of the Missouri River than was had I do not know, and it is not profitable to inquire. That is of the past. Let us act wisely in the present and wisely in the future. It is useless to inquire whether mistakes were made or whether they were not made. Nor is it necessary to inquire whether there has been oppression, as I have heard talked by the hour upon the floor of this House.

I have heard men get up and seemingly start their mouths to going and go away and leave them "calamityizing" and talking about oppression. There may have been oppression. It is not necessary for me to inquire. If there was, I am not responsible for it. We are not responsible for it. But we find here to-day this great indebtedness of $59,000,000 to the Government; with $27,000,000 ahead of it as a first lien upon this property, covering a railroad that is without terminal facilities, and that might as well run the most of the way through a tunnel or over a bridge. The question is, What can we do, if anything, to collect this great sum and get it into the Treasury?

The Senate in its wisdom unanimously proposes to create this commission of three Cabinet officers to make the best agreement they can touching securities, upon the basis of full payment, with 3 per cent interest, twenty semiannual payments, in not longer than ten years; if there is default in any one payment, the whole to come due. Otherwise the hands of this commission are left untied, and when the agreement is made it is to be submitted to the President of the United States, to be ratified by him, an agreement to be made under the white light of public criticism. It is hoped and believed by those familiar with such matters that this agreement will result in securing to the Government this great sum of money. I hope it will so turn out, and for that reason I believe the Senate acted wisely and that it is the part of wisdom for the House to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. BELFORD. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

Mr. BELFORD. Do I understand that the Senate's proposal is to accept the House proposition with an amendment?

Mr. CANNON. No; the Senate proposition I have just read.

The vote is to be taken at 4 o'clock to-morrow on concurring in the Senate amendment. If the House votes to concur, that passes the bill.

Mr. FARIS. They ask us to concur in their amendment.

Mr. CANNON. They ask us to concur in their amendment.

Mr. HILBORN. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

Mr. HILBORN. What exigency has arisen to make it necessary to legislate in this unusual way? Why put it upon an appropriation bill at the very close of the session?

Mr. CANNON. The Representative from California had better make that inquiry of his Senators, Senator WHITE and Senator PERKINS, and of a unanimous Senate, than to make it of me. The Senate put on the amendment.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman permit me to read Senator WHITE's answer to that question?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, in the gentleman's own time he can discuss it. I am now answering the gentleman's colleague [Mr. HILBORN]. The gentleman says why put it upon this bill? In my years of service in this House I have heard this matter discussed a number of times, standing by itself, when bills have been reported from the appropriate committees. I have heard gentlemen discuss the proposition with wisdom and, as it seems to me, I have heard other gentlemen discuss it with unwisdom. I have heard the vials of wrath uncorked upon the heads of individuals. I have heard efforts made to touch the public sentiment of the State or States in which the Pacific railroads are situated in whole or in part.

I have seen times when it was perfectly patent to me that, instead of talking to the merits of the question, gentlemen were talking to their constituents, playing, as I thought, upon prejudice. I have seen every kind of economist—I will not say crank—I have seen every kind of economist exploit his notions in the discussion of bills touching this indebtedness in the years that have passed by. Some wanted Government ownership, some wanted confiscation, somebody wanted to take them by the nape of the neck and the scruff of the breeches and throw them over the fence, and others say "Let us wait until the debt has matured."

Mr. BELFORD. It has matured now.

Mr. CANNON. For one reason or another the committee has decided the time has come; the day is here—

Mr. BELFORD. Right now.

Mr. CANNON (continuing). When action is called for; and with the highest respect to every member of this House, I do not choose, and would not criticize anybody, because I represent my constituency and the great public sentiment of the country according to the best of my ability, and it lies not in my mouth to criticize somebody else who does the same thing. Situated as I am, representing a constituency, trying to speak from a business, sensible standpoint, in my judgment the time has now come to concur in this Senate amendment. I hope, aye, more, upon the best information I can get, I believe, from my best judgment, after inquiry, that it will result in the coming into the Treasury of the whole amount of our debt. If so, I am ready to cry "Hallelujah," that is what we want, without regard to anybody's politics, to anybody's interests, to anybody's prejudices, hopes, or fears.

Mr. BARHAM. Now, will the gentleman answer me this question? The gentleman is a lawyer, and a good one. Will you say that the President of the United States next January, when the full amount matures, can then proceed, if settlement has not been had, to the foreclosure of this mortgage?

Mr. CANNON. In my judgment, this does not repeal the other law.

Mr. BARHAM. The existing law.

Mr. CANNON. But I will say to my friend that he does me too much honor.

Mr. BARHAM. No, no.

Mr. CANNON. I have been away from the bar for a quarter of a century, and never was more than a good hustling circuit-court attorney. There is the gentleman from Vermont, the gentleman from Iowa, and the gentleman from Indiana, upon the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

Mr. BELFORD. And "the gentleman from New York."

Mr. CANNON. And the gentleman from New York—who have given this matter special attention, and are more competent to answer the question than I am.

Mr. BARHAM. Who is the gentleman from New York?

Mr. BELFORD. The gentleman representing the First district.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Permit me to ask the gentleman from Illinois who has asked for this legislation?

Mr. CANNON. I will say to the gentleman, I know not. I find it by way of a Senate amendment touching a matter that I am compelled to have knowledge of as a Representative acting for the people. I find it here, and I ask for it by my voice and by my vote for the people of the United States, for the benefit of the Treasury.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Has any member of the Administration asked for this legislation?

Mr. CANNON. I do not know, I will say to my friend. I will refer him to the appropriate committees for fuller information.

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is what I would like to get—the information. Is there any report of any committee in favor of this measure?

Mr. CANNON. I do not know.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I will say to the gentleman there is not, except a four-line statement made as the report of a committee.

Mr. CANNON. Nor is it necessary for the purpose of this discussion for me to inquire. I do know from examination of public reports, open to everybody, that this great amount of indebtedness is now due to the Treasury, and that it is our duty to do the best we can to make the collection. It does not require the report of a committee. The individual has got a responsibility—each and every Representative has got a responsibility touching this matter, and it is a matter of such notoriety that an examination by any man of good practical sense, it seems to me, will enable such a one to readily understand what is involved in the proposition.

How much time have I left? I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has consumed thirty minutes.

[Mr. MAGUIRE addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. BARHAM. That is all. I ask the Clerk to read the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the amendment for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert in line 13, page 22, after the word "settlement," the following: "Provided further, That unless the settlement herein authorized be perfected within one year after the passage of this act the President of the United States shall at once proceed to foreclose all the liens and securities now held by the United States against said railroad companies and to collect the indebtedness herein sought to be settled, and nothing in this act contained shall be held to waive or in any way modify the lien already held by the United States."

[Mr. MAGUIRE addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, how is the time? What amount have I used and what amount has the gentleman from California used?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois has used thirty-five minutes of his time, and the gentleman from California two hours and ten minutes.

Mr. CANNON. I yield such time to the gentleman from Vermont as he may desire.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Speaker, I regret that this question has come before the House at this time when I am so poorly prepared to consider it as I am, not having given any attention whatever to the subject-matter for more than twelve months. But I have a general recollection of substantial facts relating to this long drawn out controversy which leads me to the conclusion that out of the various suggestions that have been made for the settlement of the Government's indebtedness against these roads this plan probably presents the only thing available to Congress at this time. It is a well-known fact, Mr. Speaker, that for the last five or six years efforts have been made in Congress repeatedly to bring about some sort of settlement with the various Pacific railroad companies that are indebted to the Government.

There was a large indebtedness from the Union Pacific system. There is now a large indebtedness from the Central Pacific system. There is a considerable indebtedness from the Sioux City and Pacific Company, and an indebtedness from the Central Branch Union Pacific Railroad Company, so called. Of these companies that have failed heretofore to adjust their differences with the Government, the claims against the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific are the only ones involving any very considerable sum of money. The indebtedness of these two roads, which we are now considering, amounts, in round numbers, to $60,000,000 in money. That indebtedness has all matured with the exception of the last installment, which will fall due on January 1, 1899.

Now, this question presents itself to the House as a simple business question. I desire to consider it and discuss it without any reference whatever to any political feeling that it may have in any locality, without reference to any criminality that may be charged against the original projectors of this road. I desire to consider it as a question that is for present consideration, under present conditions, to be determined by the best judgment which the House can apply to the subject. I am aware that the people in the State of California have, or imagine they have, a grievance against the managers of these roads.

Mr. MAGUIRE. That I have?

Mr. POWERS. No; I said the people of California.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I thought you said I had. I have no grievance against any of them.

Mr. POWERS. I am aware that it has entered into the politics of that State and that the fate of many men depends on their attitude on this question. But with the other forty-four States in this Union it is a question unhampered by any considerations of that character, and it should be settled irrespective of the feeling of the people of California or the wrong that has been done by anybody toward the people of California.

Here is substantially the question we have: Here, on the one hand, is the Government of the United States standing in the attitude of a creditor; on the other hand is this railroad company standing in the attitude of a debtor, a debtor that is poor confessedly, a debtor that can not, presently, at least, pay this debt to its creditor. Now, what is the creditor to do? Is the creditor to spend his time scolding and swearing about the iniquities of his debtor in years gone by, or is he, as a practical, prudent, business man, to look over the assets of his debtor and see how much he can get by way of satisfaction of the claim he has got against him?

Why, Mr. Speaker, if my creditors would be content to take their pay in swearing about me and my misdeeds in the past, I could settle every debt I owe in the world in sixty minutes; but if they want to get their pay out of my property, then whatever abuse they pour out on my poor head will not help them very much toward realizing the 100 cents on the dollar they hope to get. That is very much the attitude of my friend from California. He has spent much of his time this afternoon and on former occasions in hurling anathemas against the managers of these railroads instead of pointing out to us some practical way by which the Government could realize 100 cents on the dollar of its indebtedness against the company. He has overleaped that question and devoted himself to an abuse, or, if not abuse, to criticism, of the management of our debtors thirty or forty years ago.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am very well aware how dangerous prejudice is in determining the action of men upon important questions. I know that if you can fire up their indignation and induce them to hate somebody, or hate some proposition that is favored by the other side, you are quite as apt to carry their conclusions in many cases as you are by the stern force of sound logic. But that does not affect my action on this question. I care nothing about what these men may have done forty years ago, so far as I am called on to determine how this Government can best get its pay on this debt. It makes no difference whether they got rich or poor. The question now is, How can we best collect our debts?

Why, my friend from California himself, if he had a debt against me, much as he might criticize my conduct in the past, would not be silly enough, if he found me unwilling to pay, to waste his breath on that subject and let my assets be depleted in the meantime so as to be beyond his reach. That is not the way men do. Any gentleman who wants to collect his debt against his debtor will husband the assets rather than be overlooking them and abusing the debtor himself.

Now, then, there is another consideration. My friend from California is a frank man; everybody knows him to be an honest man. I have heard him proclaim on this floor that he favored Government ownership of railroads. I have heard him proclaim on this floor that he did not believe in the forcible collection of debts by suits of law; and I have thought to myself that some time I would try to borrow a little money of him and put that last doctrine of his to a test.

He is in favor of the Government ownership of railroads; and I think I do him no injustice when I say that his attitude on this question to-day and heretofore has been taken very largely because he thought he saw an opportunity to put his favorite theory into practical operation; for that undoubtedly is the inevitable result if you adopt the plan that he suggests. What is that plan? It is to ignore any terms of settlement with these companies and compel the Government to foreclose its mortgage—treating these parties, as he says, just as you would treat any debtor that does not pay his debts, by foreclosing on the security that you hold. We, on the other hand, say, rather than do that we will make some settlement with the debtor by which we can save our debt and save the expense of a lawsuit.

Suppose you adopt the theory of the gentleman from California and foreclose your mortgage. You foreclose it in the courts. Under the procedure established in the courts, after obtaining a decree fixing the amount of your debt the property is exposed to public sale; the whole world is admitted to bid upon it; and it has to go to the highest bidder. Now, is this a property which if exposed to public auction would be likely to bring the full amount of the Government debt? If it would, then very clearly the remedy suggested by the gentleman from California is not a precarious but a safe one. But what are the facts about that? In the first place, here is a railroad nearly 800 miles in length, encumbered by a first mortgage amounting in round numbers to $28,000,000. That is the first incumbrance resting upon the property. It is next encumbered by a second mortgage running to the United States Government and amounting in round numbers to $60,000,000.

Following out the procedure which the gentleman from California proposes, the very first step which the Government must take after it has obtained its decree and when it exposes the property to public sale, is to clear off this underlying mortgage at $28,000,000. Everybody understands that. That is to be wiped out. How is it to be wiped out? By putting your hands into the United States Treasury and taking $28,000,000 and paying off those first-mortgage bondholders.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Was that done in the case of the Union Pacific road when it was sold under foreclosure?

Mr. POWERS. It was, practically.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Not a dollar was paid in that way—

Mr. POWERS. I ask my friend from California if I have misstated the legal status of this matter on a foreclosure—

Mr. MAGUIRE. I say that the Union Pacific—

Mr. POWERS. I beg my friend's pardon. I hope he will answer my question.

Mr. MAGUIRE. There was a first mortgage on the road; and the purchasers took the road subject to that mortgage.

Mr. POWERS. If they dicker about it, that is another thing. Am I not right in saying that the Government, in case of a sale, in order to give a clear title, must first wipe out the $28,000,000 mortgage?

Mr. MAGUIRE. That would depend upon whether the purchaser wanted the first mortgage paid off. If he did, of course arrangements would have to be made to have it cleared off.

Mr. POWERS. Did you ever know of a man foreclosing a second mortgage on a farm without being obliged to wipe out the first mortgage?

Mr. MAGUIRE. As a rule, the purchaser is ready to take the property subject to the first mortgage.

Mr. POWERS. But in that case you give him only the rights of a second mortgagee. I see the gentleman does not dispute my proposition, so I assume he agrees to it.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The money must be paid in some way, of course.

Mr. LOVE. I know very little about the financial condition of these roads, and therefore I wish to ask the gentleman from Vermont whether he considers that in this claim the Government has as good security as it had in the case of the Union Pacific, which has been settled. I would like to hear the gentleman on that point, because it seems to me that it is one of a good deal of importance. If the security is equally as good, as was stated by the gentleman from California, then we had better follow the course pursued in the Union Pacific case.

Mr. POWERS. But the Government would get in the one case—

Mr. MORRIS (interrupting). Before the gentleman from Vermont proceeds to answer that question, following out the line of his argument before the inquiry of the gentleman from Mississippi was submitted, I would like for him to state the legitimate conclusion, in his judgment, of the foreclosure proceedings. Unless the road, as I understand it, shall be bid in at $60,000,000 and $28,000,000, the Government would have to take the property and operate it for itself?

Mr. POWERS. That is precisely the result, unless some other bidder should offer more.

Mr. LOVE. Oh, well; we all understand that.

Mr. POWERS. And before answering the inquiry of my friend from Mississippi, I wish to follow this thought a little further. If we foreclose the mortgage proceedings under the plan suggested by the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE], we get a railroad on our hands. There is no doubt of that. And that is precisely what my friend from California desires to bring about. He smiles, and I can see by the twinkle of his eye that I have him on that point. [Laughter.]

Not only that, but in a leading paper of the city of San Francisco—the San Francisco Examiner—an editorial article appeared a couple of years ago, when this matter was under consideration in the House on a former occasion, in which the editor of that paper, who was the leader of that faction in the State, boldly proclaimed that the interests of the people of California and their desire was that there should be Government ownership of the railroad in question; and not only that, but he went a good deal further.

He wanted to have this railroad operated for the people of the State of California alone! Not to be operated for the people of the country at large, but a great business line of railroad running into that State was to be operated exclusively for their benefit!

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have followed out the theory to its legitimate results which my friend from California advances as a proper remedy to be pursued in this case.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Let me ask the gentleman from Vermont if the Government ownership and operation of railroads resulted from the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad?

Mr. POWERS. Not at all; for that road, the gentleman must remember, is worth ten times as much as the Central Pacific, and the relations existing, as a comparison between them, are entirely dissimilar.

Now I will answer the question of my friend from Mississippi as to the real value of the securities which the Government would receive in either case. I need not say—because all gentlemen on the floor are conversant with the fact—that the Union Pacific Company is a great system of railroad. It passes through vast and thriving and populous cities in the growing State of Oregon to its connections down to the Mississippi River; it passes through a great and rapidly growing country; it passes through cities that are big and steadily increasing—you might say strung together like beads.

Mr. KELLEY. Did not the gentleman insist and predict that the Government ownership of railroads was inevitable when the Union Pacific Railroad was sold under mortgage-foreclosure proceedings, just the same as he now predicts?

Mr. POWERS. Possibly I may have done so.

Mr. KELLEY (proceeding). And does not the gentleman think he is just as liable to error now as he was then?

Mr. POWERS. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not one of those fortunate gentlemen who can expect to proceed with all of the affairs of life without some kind of an error. I do not feel that I am always correct, and I know that I may be mistaken at times. If my friend is so fortunate as to be correct always, I congratulate him.

Now, the Union Pacific Railroad—the entire road—is valuable simply from the income it commands. That is true of all railroads. If it runs through a rich and growing, a populous country, the earnings will correspondingly increase as the country builds up. If it runs through a barren desert, of course it can make nothing, for the earnings of railroads are largely due—mainly due, in fact—to local railroad traffic. From Council Bluffs westward this road runs through a rich, highly cultivated, and rapidly growing region—the very heart of the agricultural portion of the country. That road, therefore, has and had a promising future. But how is it with the Central Pacific? Let us examine the difference.

Why, as stated here by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], that road starts out at a point 5 miles west of the city of Ogden and runs for 560 miles through a barren desert. I speak advisedly of this. The local business on two-thirds of the entire length of the Central Pacific Railroad will not pay for the oil used on the cars. It runs through a sage-bush country. Many of you gentlemen have been over that line and know the character of the country to which I refer. Now, it is the local business, I repeat, that makes the railroad earn profits for its stockholders and measures its earning capacity. The through business, by reason of the competition between rival roads, amounts to nothing in the way of traffic earnings.

Mr. LOVE. Is that true of the other line, too—the Western Pacific?

Mr. POWERS. No; that runs through a good country. But my friend will remember that there are two distinct corporations. One is the Central Pacific, which owes a particular debt. The other is the Western Pacific, which owes another particular debt. The Western Pacific, therefore, might pay its debt, and the other company not be able to pay it.

Mr. FARIS. The Western line is very short, and the debt is small.

Mr. POWERS. Yes; as suggested by my friend from Indiana, the line of the Western is short and its debt is small, about $6,000,000. Now, the future of the Central Pacific, running as it does for two-thirds of its entire length through an unpopulous and neglected country, is very different from the future of a railroad running through a good country. So that I say upon a foreclosure of the road and the exposure of it to public sale we could not presume that it would be likely to sell for enough to pay the debt of the Government. But when we come to the proposition contained in this amendment to the deficiency bill, have we not just as good an assurance of ultimate payment without the danger of any litigation whatever? My friend from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] talks about a great amount of litigation that might be instituted against the projectors and builders of these roads. Does the Government of the United States want to go into that? Is it not better, is it not more businesslike, to make a peaceable settlement with your debtor and get your money than it is to involve the Government in a long-drawn-out litigation?

Mr. LOVE. If my friend will permit me, I would like to suggest that unless this property is perfectly good for the debt and is now on a paying basis, it will be difficult to obtain security for the payment of the indebtedness at the end of ten years. In other words, if it is not a paying investment, how will it be possible for this company to pay at the expiration of ten years if it can not pay now; and why should the Government wait ten years, unless better security can be given?

Mr. POWERS. Well, that is for the commission to determine. You will notice, if you look at this amendment, that it creates a commission with authority to settle in a particular way, authority to settle upon the basis that the Government shall get its full pay, with 8 per cent interest, on an extended period of not exceeding ten years, and upon such security as the commission in its judgment may see fit to accept. Now, whether that will be gilt-edge security or not I can not say, nor can my friend. We know this much, that we refer the matter to three competent public officials and they are to act under the sanction of the President. Presumably they will act for the best interests of the people of this country.

Mr. FLEMING. I should like to ask the gentleman a question for information also. In what does this debt which is past due consist? Does it consist entirely of principal, or are there not some interest coupons past due and unpaid?

Mr. POWERS. The debt that is past due consists of principal. You might call it all principal, because under a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States it was determined that no interest was payable by these railroad companies upon their subsidy bonds to the Government until the principal itself matured. So that during all these thirty years they have been saved the necessity of paying any interest, and that has been sanctioned by the highest court in the nation.

Mr. FLEMING. Did not some of the principal mature several years ago?

Mr. POWERS. Yes.

Mr. FLEMING. What I want to get at is this: Does this bill provide that there shall be interest paid on the interest which they owe the Government?

Mr. POWERS. This amendment provides that the commission shall exact from the companies the full amount of their indebtedness to the Government. Now, if there is a right to charge interest upon deferred interest payments, of course this covers it. If there is not that right, then it does not cover it.

Mr. FLEMING. I want to ask your opinion about that. Do you consider that under the terms of this amendment to the bill now pending the railroads will be obliged to pay the Government only the principal and the interest that may be due, or will they be obliged to pay interest on the defaulted interest which has been due for some time?

Mr. POWERS. Well, Mr. Speaker, I shall have to decline to run off on a tangent.

Mr. FLEMING. That is a very important question in the case. What is the gentleman's opinion?

Mr. POWERS. My opinion, if the gentleman is asking that, is that whenever the principal of any installment falls due, the interest applicable to that installment falls due and no other interest, so that, as these installments of principal fall due consecutively, January 1, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, and 1899, the interest upon those several installments will also be due at the same time. That is my opinion. Whether it is right or wrong I can not say, but I have answered my friend's question.

Mr. FLEMING. Do you understand the language of the amendment to be broad enough to cover the interest on interest, if it is legally due?

Mr. POWERS. I consider it broad enough to do that if it is legally due, because it requires the commission to see that the company indemnifies the Government for its full claim. If the gentleman differs with me about that, of course he may be right. That is my judgment. But no matter about that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here are two methods available to the Government as a creditor of these railroads: One to proceed in a way that leads necessarily, or in all human probability, to say the least, to an ownership of this railroad by the Government; the other leading to a settlement of this debt in the brief period of ten years, principal and interest, without any danger of Government ownership.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. POWERS. Certainly.

Mr. RIDGELY. I do not understand from anything in this bill, as it is now before us, that this settlement provided for here shall be made within any limited time.

Mr. POWERS. My friend from California [Mr. BARHAM] proposes an amendment, as I understand him, to compel this settlement to be effected within twelve months. I think that is a very proper amendment.

Mr. RIDGELY. Does the committee accept that?

Mr. POWERS. I am not on the committee.

Mr. FLEMING. Is the gentleman from Vermont in favor of that amendment?

Mr. POWERS. Yes, sir.

Mr. FLEMING. Will you explain in some way how that amendment parliamentarily can be put on?

Mr. POWERS. It can not be done except as the conference committee shall do it.

Mr. SAYERS. The amendment can be concurred in with an amendment.

Mr. POWERS. The amendment, it occurs to me, is a very proper one, I will state to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. FLEMING. The gentleman from Illinois, chairman of the committee, has stated that he was going to make a motion to concur. Now, this amendment will have no parliamentary standing at all unless this motion to concur is voted down.

Mr. DALZELL. Oh, yes, it will. A motion to concur with an amendment is in order.

Mr. POWERS. As to whether the parliamentary status is such as will permit it to be offered, better parliamentarians than I must answer.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman permit me to address a question to the chairman of the committee?

Mr. POWERS. Yes, sir.

Mr. RIDGELY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois if it will be agreeable to the committee to accept that amendment?

Mr. CANNON. What amendment does the gentleman refer to?

Mr. POWERS. Requiring the settlement to be agreed upon in a year.

Mr. RIDGELY. There is nothing requiring that this settlement shall be made within a limited time?

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman understands this is a motion to concur in a Senate amendment. If the House concurs, the House passes the bill; if the House refuses to concur, that is equivalent to nonconcurrence, and sends it back for future action between the House and the Senate. And if I had power as an individual to accept the gentleman's amendment, I do not think it should be done. This takes the action of three Cabinet officers, when they make a settlement, subject to the approval of the President, and, I will say to the gentleman, it does not change the law that permits foreclosure.

Mr. HOPKINS. It is simply an additional remedy.

Mr. CANNON. Simply an additional remedy; but the gentleman from Vermont is a better authority and a better lawyer than I am, and I refer the matter to him. Practically there can be no amendment of the proposition. It is simply a question of concurring in the Senate amendment and passing the bill or of rejecting it.

Mr. POWERS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to this amendment, and I am compelled to differ with my friend from California, and I do so with great misgivings, because I recognize the fact of his very high professional attainments. I understood him to say that, in his judgment, this amendment wiped out and suspended all existing law relating to the collection of these debts. I can not read it that way. This amendment simply proposes that the commission should be appointed—

With full power to settle the indebtedness to the Government growing out of the issue of bonds in aid of the construction of the Central Pacific and Western Pacific bond-aided railroads upon such terms and in such manner as may be agreed upon by them.

Now, then, I have a debt against an individual. The law before the creation of that debt provided that I might bring suit against him, sequester his property, obtain judgment, and satisfy my debt. Suppose the legislature of my State should, in addition to that, provide that as to my particular debtor a commission should be appointed to settle with him. What does that settlement mean? Liquidate the debt, arrange for security, fix the time of payment and rate of interest, etc. If they fix upon such an agreement, of course if both parties have agreed to it, that ends the matter; but until they have agreed to it, until the settlement is effected and security put up and all the contracts in the matter are made, then the old right of proceeding against my debtor is just as perfect as before. Now, what are the rights? Under the act of 1886 or 1887—I will ask the gentleman what is the date of the act?

Mr. MAGUIRE. Seventy-eight was the date of the foreclosure act. The act of 1887 gave an additional remedy and perfected the foreclosure act.

Mr. POWERS. In the year 1887 Congress passed a law authorizing the President, whenever, in his judgment, it became necessary to protect the rights of the Government, to clear off all preliminary liens which antedate the Government lien upon the bond-aided railroads, so as to enforce the rights of the Government. Now, that was adding nothing, in my judgment, to the rights as they existed before, because the Supreme Court has decided repeatedly that the Government in dealing with these railroad companies sustained a double relation. It sustained the relation of creditor and also the relation of sovereign; and so far as the relation of creditor was concerned, it had just the same right, no more, no less, than any creditor has against his debtor.

Upon general principles a creditor would have the right to hold the mortgage and foreclose it in the absence of any special legislation, and so this act of 1877 added nothing in respect to the remedy the Government had against its debtor. It simply added this feature, that the President should be authorized to clear off and pay the underlying lien on the property; that he might not have, perhaps, on general principles requiring a special appropriation.

Now, then, to come back to the point where I started. This is a pure business question. You may scold about the conduct of the builders of this road all you please, but, sir, it is a pretty safe doctrine in morals as well as in practical life to say that the devil, even, is entitled to his due. These men have done something for the United States. If they stole anything out of these railroads—and I am not here to say they did not; I am here to say that that does not touch this question—if they stole anything out of these railroads, they certainly built the railroads. Away back in 1862, when this nation was in the very throes of civil strife, when it was a matter of great doubt whether we were to maintain our existence as a united people, the Congress of the United States came forward to answer a long call that had come to them from the Pacific slope, and it brought into being the means whereby this great transcontinental line of railroad could be built.

The people of California at that time were enthusiastically in favor of the proposition. There they were, barred out from the whole country pretty much. The only mode of access to them was around by Cape Horn, or over the Isthmus, or overland by stage across the plains. They wanted the line built; the people in the East wanted the line built. It required an immense sum of money to build it. The projectors of the scheme came to Congress and said, "We have not money enough to build the line; we must have national aid." In 1863 Congress passed the charter for the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

The Central Pacific Railroad Company was chartered the year before by the State of California and had built a few miles of railroad to the east of Sacramento. Congress legislated in a liberal manner to aid these men in building this line of railroad. Nineteenth of the members of the House looked upon it as a chimerical scheme, impossible of completion, but these men were enthusiastic and hopeful. They said "We will undertake the work if you will give us aid." Congress, not supposing that they would ever be called upon to furnish a dollar, because the scheme was so chimerical, granted to these men whatever they might ask for. They asked for a right of way through the public domain, and it was granted to them—a wide sweep of territory, giving them almost an empire; each alternate section for a distance of 20 miles was granted, with a subsidy of so much per mile if they would go forward and undertake what was then looked upon as an almost hopeless undertaking. The subsidy was mammoth; I agree to that. It was $16,000 per mile where the building of the line was on easy ground, $32,000 a mile in the intervening sections between the two mountain ranges, and $48,000 a mile where it went over the mountains themselves.

The two companies—the Union Pacific building west from Omaha and the Central Pacific building east from Sacramento—were rivals; for every mile of road that was built the company got so much subsidy and so much land grant. It was, therefore, a race of diligence between the two companies. There never has been exhibited on this planet such an instance of heroic courage, earnest endeavor, and solid Yankee pluck as was shown by the builders of these lines. They went forward; they were permitted under the charter to complete their roads by the 4th of July, 1876, and save all the land grants and subsidies. Instead of waiting for that time to elapse, the two lines of road were united at Promontory Point, a few miles west of Ogden, on the 10th of May, 1869. That is the enterprise, that is the diligence, that these men showed to the country at large and which gave the country this great transcontinental line.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if these men made money out of that transaction, I say they ought to. Any man who would undertake a work of that kind, looked upon with so great doubt and uncertainty, a work which has afforded to this country such a wealth of return, is entitled to get rich. I do not lament the fact. What was the result to the Government? Why, we had this great central tract of country, almost limitless, almost unexplored, west of the Mississippi River and east of the Pacific Ocean, millions upon millions of acres worth absolutely nothing to the Government until they were opened up to settlement and civilization, as they never could have been until the iron horse had plowed its way out there, bringing in the tide of immigration, and thus bringing those public lands into market, so that the Government could realize upon its own assets from which before it was completely shut out.

I undertake to say, Mr. Speaker, that if the Government should cancel every dollar of this indebtedness against these roads which it has aided, it would have put into its Treasury ten times the millions that it took out in order to build these lines of road. So that upon the principle with which I started out—that I must give the devil his due—I say the devil in this case has done a great public service to the people of this country; so much so that the Congress of the United States can not afford to forget itself so far as to throw away this debt, which is within their reach, because of a mere prejudice against some of these people.

I am not going to follow my friend from California in his devils windings through the law to ascertain whether we could possibly collect something out of the estate of Mrs. Stanford, or Mr. Crocker, or Mr. Hopkins, or Mr. Huntington. If that could be done, my friend knows as well as anybody that it would involve litigation that would cost the Government quite as much as it would ever realize from it. But suppose you did resort to litigation. Here is a claim more than thirty years old. How long, I inquire of my friend, must a debt run before it reaches a point where the law says you shall not enforce it? He says he will resort to a court of equity.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I think a debt ought to run for at least a few months after the right of action accrues. The right of action has not yet accrued in this case; and let me say that some of these diversions of assets are only eleven years old, according to the report of the Pacific Railway Commission.

Mr. POWERS. My friend says he proposes to enforce the liability of these men for their stock subscriptions. Those subscriptions were made in 1862. Did they not mature then? Were they not due then? That was thirty-six years ago. Now, how long must they run before they are outlawed? In a proceeding at law the statute, of course, would bar them at the end of six years. But my friend is sharp enough to avoid the operation of that rule of law. He says that this is a quasi trust relation.

Mr. MAGUIRE. As to the stock subscriptions, I conceded that the statute had run against them.

Mr. POWERS. I am very much obliged to my friend for that concession.

Mr. BARHAM. I challenge the statement of my colleague [Mr. MAGUIRE]. The statute of limitations never runs against the Government except by virtue of some express statutory provision.

Mr. POWERS. Those subscriptions were not in favor of the Government, but of the railroad.

Mr. BARHAM. But if the Government has a lien upon the subscription, whether paid in or not, it is a perfectly elementary principle that that lien is not lost by lapse of time.

Mr. POWERS. When a man subscribed for ten shares of the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad, he did not create a debt due to the Government of the United States; he created a debt to the railroad company. As against him the railroad company is the only party that can enforce it, and such a debt would be outlawed in six years.

Now, if the Government steps in and, by virtue of some right of subrogation or otherwise, undertakes to enforce a stock subscription, will my friend contend that the statute of limitations which bars the railroad company as against the subscriber does not also bar the Government?

Mr. BARHAM. Beyond doubt it does not bar the Government at all. I can produce authorities which establish that position beyond question.

Mr. POWERS. If the Government undertakes to enforce a stock subscription, it does so by virtue of the right of the railroad company to enforce it.

Mr. BARHAM. Not at all. I challenge that statement.

Mr. POWERS. The subscriber to the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad, when he affixed his signature to the subscription and agreed to take ten shares, became a stockholder of the Central Pacific Railroad.

Mr. BARHAM. That does not state the whole case.

Mr. POWERS. Wait a moment till I finish my statement. Now, if the Government of the United States undertakes to enforce that subscription, it must take it, in the language of the law, cum onere—with all the burdens that it carries; and as between the company and the original subscriber the debt is outlawed in six years. If the Government undertakes to enforce it, it is barred after the same lapse of time.

A MEMBER. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. POWERS. Well, the Supreme Court of the United States has so decided.

Mr. BARHAM. But does not the gentleman find in the Chattanooga bond case an exception that where this statute would apply upon bonds in the hands of the original subscriber, and that would be a bar, that there would be, on the other hand, no bar against the Government, or after they had passed into the hands of the Government? The Supreme Court so held, and it has held a similar doctrine in a hundred different cases.

Mr. POWERS. The Supreme Court of the United States has held repeatedly that the Government of the United States relies as a creditor in a suit exactly on the rights of the creditor in any other capacity, neither more nor less.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to exhaust the patience of the House any longer. There have been various attempts made to secure the payment of this indebtedness to the Government for years past. For more than twenty years the subject has disturbed the deliberations of Congress. Away back in 1878, when it was found that these companies were not making the payments that their original charters required them to make, Congress took hold of the matter and passed what was known as the Thurman Act. It was then believed by both Houses of Congress that the provisions of that act would insure the prompt payment of the debt at its maturity, but subsequent events showed that to be a misjudgment of facts. It did not have that effect.

For the last five or six years bills have been pending here and put on their passage in the two Houses of Congress which have endeavored to refund this indebtedness and secure, ultimately, the return of the Government claim when the debt matured in 1899. All of these failed for the same reason that is apparent here to-day. Instead of having the members of this House present and learning something of the case—those who are not familiar with it—you find that nine-tenths of the members' seats are vacated. Men acting on their prejudices say that they care nothing whatever for the question and have given no attention to it. But, gentlemen, let me say to you that something must be done, and done quickly. The time has come when you will either throw this debt away or secure its payment. As earnest, practical business men, what is the thing to do? That is the question.

In my judgment, though I doubt very much whether the companies can comply with the Government demand, whether, in short, within the space of ten years they can pay up, nevertheless this seems to be the very best possible thing that can be done at the present time. If they do not comply with it, then they will have to proceed in some other manner.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman permit me to ask if the Central Railroad Company has ever made any such proposition, or any similar proposition to the Government?

Mr. POWERS. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Is there not, then, in this proceeding some ulterior purpose?

Mr. POWERS. Well, Mr. Speaker, I can not say as to that. I do not know of any.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Does the Senate proposition really contain sufficient power to carry it through successfully?

Mr. POWERS. Well, if the gentleman will permit me to answer his other question, I generally look at the parentage of a proposition, when it is subjected to my attention, to find out if there be any ulterior purposes. Now, in the present instance, if I am not mistaken, this proposition was suggested by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN].

Mr. MAGUIRE. Well, Mr. Speaker, unless I am permitted to make allusion to the proceedings of the Senate, I do not think the gentleman from Vermont ought to be permitted to do so.

Mr. POWERS. I am not going to discuss what was done in the Senate. I am merely stating the facts. I understand it to be a fact that that was the origin of the proposition; and that it passed the Senate unanimously. And the gentleman knows what bitter opposition existed in that body to the preceding attempts in this direction.

Mr. MAGUIRE. If the gentleman had read Senator MORGAN's speech, and the following proceedings in the Senate, he would have discovered that he is entirely in error.

Mr. POWERS. The gentleman from California may be entirely correct, but I think I have kept track of this proposition from the first.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The gentleman is mistaken, then, for this is not Senator MORGAN's proposition at all. It was and is known as the Gear amendment.

Mr. POWERS. And that may be entirely true. I do not care who is the father of the proposition. I am speaking of it as a proposition emanating from the Senate. It commended itself to that body, where the gentleman knows there has been more bitter opposition to a settlement of this character than there has been shown in the House.

A MEMBER. And it passed the Senate by unanimous consent.

Mr. POWERS. Yes, by unanimous consent; and I am content to take it up and adopt it here for the same reason. It has the indorsement of the Senator from Alabama and the unanimous indorsement of all the other members of that body. The matter is presented now for our consideration, coming from the Senate, and the belief expressed in that body is that these companies can pay the indebtedness of the Government within the time specified by the bill.

That is a proper question for our consideration. There is an underlying mortgage of some $28,000,000 to be paid, and a sum of $30,000,000 or over in the aggregate is to be raised. Now, how can it be raised except by a new mortgage? That can not be floated at less than 4 per cent, and I do not think anybody would take it even at that rate of interest. So that I do not believe any railroad company will ever be able to float a mortgage large enough to wipe out the indebtedness of these two mortgages.

Mr. MAGUIRE. If we are going to meet this railroad company and enable it to settle, would it not be a good idea to wait until the company makes a proposition stating what it can and will do rather than to take a plunge in the dark and require the taking of steps that you and others who have considered the matter have repeatedly said it is utterly impossible for the company to carry out?

Mr. POWERS. I do not think it is best to wait. I think if we wait for the debtor to offer to pay his debt we shall wait in vain.

Mr. MAGUIRE. We can foreclose.

Mr. POWERS. The only thing the Government can do in looking after its own interest is to take steps for the collection of its debt, and this is a step looking toward the collection of the debt, and if the company can not comply, that is one of its misfortunes; and certainly we do our duty if we open the way for the payment.

Mr. LOUD. Will the adoption of this proposition stop foreclosure?

Mr. POWERS. The adoption of this would stop foreclosure, if this settlement is effected.

Mr. LOUD. Of course, if it is effected; but if it is not effected, would it stop foreclosure?

Mr. POWERS. Certainly not.

Mr. LOUD. Then can the Government lose anything?

Mr. POWERS. Certainly not. If this settlement goes for nothing, all the rights which the Government at present has it will still have.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I understand the Attorney-General has now prepared or is about to prepare to file his papers for the purpose of foreclosing. If the gentleman were Attorney-General and this bill were passed, would he proceed with the foreclosure suit as if no such measure had passed?

Mr. POWERS. I should not proceed until I had exhausted all means of effecting a settlement without litigation.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Under this bill?

Mr. POWERS. Under this bill.

Mr. MAGUIRE. You would consider that the passage of this bill justified or required you to stop foreclosure proceedings until—

Mr. POWERS. I should regard it as a hint from the legislative branch of the Government that they wanted to avoid litigation, and had presented a plan whereby it could be avoided, and I, as a public official, would suspend foreclosure proceedings long enough to make an attempt to bring about the settlement.

Mr. MAGUIRE. How long would foreclosure proceedings be suspended?

Mr. POWERS. Not exceeding twelve months if the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. BARHAM] is adopted.

Mr. MAGUIRE. And if it is not adopted?

Mr. POWERS. Then they would be suspended simply a reasonable time. Of course we are to assume that the Government is going to look out for the interests of the people—that it is going to work to bring about this settlement at an early day. If that results in failure, then the proper officials will proceed with the foreclosure.

Now, Mr. Speaker, without taking up any further time, I wish to close as I began, with the declaration that there are but two lines of procedure open to this House. One is a line that leads us directly to Government ownership of this railroad. The other leads to the security of the debt by extending the time of payment only ten years at a fair rate of interest.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 3232. An act granting a pension to Edward Madden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4231. An act granting an increase of pension to Millie A. Berry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4630. An act to increase the pension of Chauncey A. Bradley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 1918. An act to increase the pension of William Sharrock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2965. An act granting a pension to Lewis E. Humpton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 4207. An act granting a pension to Louisa Hale—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3276. An act granting a pension to Mary Ellen Lauriat—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 409. An act to increase the pension of Sarah Gresham, widow of Col. Benjamin Q. A. Gresham—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 605. An act granting pension to Vinton Massie—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 3777. An act granting an increase of pension to Curtis B. McIntosh—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 2618. An act to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 569. An act granting an increase of pension to Clarinda S. Hillman—to the Committee on Pensions.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. GILLET of New York, for five days, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. SHANNON, indefinitely, on account of illness.

And then, on motion of Mr. CANNON (at 4 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army, together with the draft of a bill for an increase of officers in his department—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of Samuel J. Moore against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of William D. Rogers, administrator of Eliza Miller, against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for making surveys and estimates of Wallabout Channel, New York—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill for the raising of 25,000 colored troops from the nation at large for service in tropical climates—to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue submitting an estimate of deficiency in the appropriation for salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. McDONALD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9936) to correct the military record of Henry Finnegass, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1644); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BROWNLOW, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2274) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Daniel Straw, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1645); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7092) for the relief of George Gregg, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1646); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. McDONALD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1217) for the relief of Thomas G. Tiernon, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1647); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BROMWELL: A bill (H. R. 10886) to amend an act entitled "An act to allow the bottling of distilled spirits in bond," approved March 3, 1897—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 10887) to extend the franking privilege to soldiers and sailors during the present war—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10888) to authorize the raising of 40,000 colored troops—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ALDRICH: A bill (H. R. 10889) to punish offenses against the elective franchise—to the Committee on Election of President, Vice-President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. SKINNER: A bill (H. R. 10903) to provide for the authorization of a regiment of volunteer mounted infantry—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BERRY: A joint resolution (H. Res. 293) tendering the thanks of Congress to Commodore Schley, United States Navy, and the officers and men under his command—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana: A memorial of the legislature of the State of Louisiana, concerning the improvement of Bayou Courtableau, in that State—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ARNOLD: A bill (H. R. 10890) granting a pension to Mrs. Susan Sidenbender, of Medix Run, Pa.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRUMM: A bill (H. R. 10891) granting a pension to Anna C. Morgan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EVANS: A bill (H. R. 10892) to increase the pension of Andrew J. Taylor—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GAINES: A bill (H. R. 10893) to remove the charge of desertion against Robert C. Hoggins and to grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HANDY: A bill (H. R. 10894) for the correction of the military record of Capt. William H. Fairlamb, late of the Eighty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HICKS: A bill (H. R. 10895) to correct the military record of Harrison Deftbaugh—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KETCHAM: A bill (H. R. 10896) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds to Albert V. Conway, substituted trustee, for certain registered United States bonds redeemed or assigned by the Government upon forged assignments—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MARSH: A bill (H. R. 10897) to grant an honorable discharge to Thomas Ward—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: A bill (H. R. 10898) to pension David Miller—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10899) to pension Joseph J. Colomey—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WARNER: A bill (H. R. 10900) to increase the pension of James Cooper—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10901) for the relief of William H. Dotson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. DAVIDSON of Wisconsin: Resolutions of the Wisconsin State Homeopathic Medical Society, in support of Senate bill No. 164, for nondiscrimination in the appointment of surgeons to the Army and Navy of the United States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the dairy boards of trade of Plymouth, Berlin, Reedsville, Chilton, and Fond du Lac, State of Wisconsin, in favor of the bill to make cheese part of army rations—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: Resolutions of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of Wisconsin, in favor of Senate bill No. 164, to prevent discrimination against homeopathic physicians and surgeons in the military and naval service of the United States—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OTJEN: Resolutions of the Wisconsin State Homeopathic Medical Society, favoring the passage of Senate bill No. 164, to prevent unjust discrimination in the appointment of surgeons in the Army and Navy—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH: Resolutions of Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen, Railroad Trainmen, Orders of Railway Conductors and Railway Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WEAVER: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Troy, Ohio, favoring legislation providing that cigarettes imported in original packages on entering any State shall become subject to its laws—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, July 6, 1898.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by Rev. E. L. WATSON, of the city of Washington.

On motion of Mr. WOLCOTT, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. FAIRBANKS, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1613) for the relief of the heirs of Henry Leef, deceased, owner of the bark Mary Teresa, illegally seized by Alexander H. Tyler, consul of the United States at Bahia, Brazil, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. CHILTON, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10510) providing for the transfer from the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit to the Supreme Court of certain appeals from the district court for Alaska, reported it without amendment.

Mr. HOAR, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2030) for the relief of the administrators of William B. Moses, deceased, and of Lebbeus H. Rogers, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

STEAMER TITANIA.

Mr. FRYE. From the Committee on Commerce I report an original bill, and I am compelled to ask for its present consideration.

The bill (S. 4847) to provide an American register for the steamer Titania was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamer Titania, owned by John Rosenfield & Sons, of San Francisco, Cal., citizens of the United States, to be registered as a vessel of the United States: Provided, That said steamer shall not hereafter engage in the coastwise trade of the Republic.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELECTRIC-LIGHT WIRES BEYOND THE FIRE LIMITS.

Mr. GALLINGER. From the Committee on the District of Columbia I report a joint resolution, and as it is a matter of public concern to which there can be no objection, I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The joint resolution (S. R. 182) relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to issue permits to existing electric-light companies in the District of Columbia for the extension of existing overhead electric wires outside the fire limits and west of Rock Creek to be used for lighting purposes only.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HARRIS introduced a bill (S. 4848) granting a pension to Louisiana H. Delahay; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BURROWS introduced a bill (S. 4849) for the erection of a public building at Alpena, Mich.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. FORAKER introduced a bill (S. 4850) to quiet title to lot 11, block 12, South Brookland, D. C.; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SEWELL introduced a bill (S. 4851) for the relief of Commander Bowman H. McCalla, United States Navy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

THANKS TO COMMODORE SCHLEY.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I introduce a joint resolution which I ask may be read at length and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The joint resolution (S. R. 181) tendering the thanks of Congress to Commodore Winfield S. Schley, United States Navy, and to the officers and men of the squadron under his command, was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thanks of Congress and the American people are hereby tendered to Commodore Winfield S. Schley, of the United States naval force operating against the Spanish forces in Cuban waters, for highly distinguished conduct in conflict with the enemy, as displayed by him in the destruction of the Spanish fleet off the harbor of Santiago, Cuba, July 3, 1898.

SEC. 2. That the thanks of Congress and the American people are hereby extended through Commodore Schley to the officers and men under his command for the gallantry and skill exhibited by them on that occasion.

SEC. 3. Be it further resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to cause this resolution to be communicated to Commodore Schley, and through him to the officers and men under his command.

Mr. HALE. What course does the Senator propose that the joint resolution shall take?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask to have the joint resolution printed and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. HALE. That, of course, I have no objection to. It is at the present time impossible for anyone here or elsewhere to know the exact condition off Santiago. That great credit is due to officers and men for the remarkable victory and the destruction of the Spanish fleet there can be no doubt. The Department will undoubtedly have full information that will help to guide Congress in apportioning the honor. I do not think that anyone today, either the Senator from South Dakota or I, or any other Senator, or anyone else, can form any sound opinion as to whom the credit is due primarily in the case. But the committee in conference with the Department will investigate the matter thoroughly.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It seems a little surprising that there should be any doubt upon this subject, and yet the American people have been led to believe that some one else commanded the forces that destroyed the Spanish fleet. I hope we shall be able, and I know we shall soon be able, to remove that impression. All the accounts this morning and yesterday afternoon point conclusively to the fact that the vessels of our Navy that destroyed the Spanish fleet were commanded by Commodore Schley; that with the Brooklyn he pursued for 60 miles and fought the most remarkable naval duel perhaps ever fought in the world, and sank a ship far superior to his own.

For the purpose of calling attention to these facts, for the purpose of seeing justice done, and for the purpose of correcting as promptly as possible the misapprehension on the part of the newspapers and in the minds of the American people with regard to this matter, I have introduced the joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, in connection with the joint resolution, I have only to say that the dispatch of Commodore Sampson was very unfortunate in not mentioning the fact that Commodore Schley had taken any conspicuous part in the engagement, and it misled the American people. It has created a very unpleasant impression. There is no man who needs an exposé of the exact facts more than Commodore Sampson, because, turning out as it does from all the newspaper accounts this morning, his reputation is very much damaged by the facts that are now before the public; and really he needs an investigation in order to set him right, whatever may be the facts.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, the matter will go to the Naval Committee, and that, of course, is the proper reference. I do not think it is a good time now to stimulate any jealousy or hard feeling between gallant officers in the Navy. That Commodore Schley's conduct was most admirable, brave, and gallant there is no question. Admiral Sampson's report to the Department in detail has not been received. I have no doubt that when that report comes, he will, with that justness, calmness, and deliberation that characterize him, give credit to all of the officers and men who are entitled to it. I think the little agitation which is now urged in the public press and elsewhere tending to a feeling between these officers will all disappear. There is credit enough and glory enough to care for everybody.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I am inclined to believe that this matter ought to pass over a few days for careful investigation. I have no doubt myself as to the competency and bravery of both these men. If Admiral Sampson, or Commodore Sampson, as I suppose is his real title, was in the line of duty called away from the scene of action in conference with General Shafter at the time the engagement began, he was at the proper place for him to be, and he would have been blameworthy if he had failed in that respect. It does not follow, therefore, that because he was absent from the scene of action at the time it started he was unnecessarily absent or neglectful of his duty. On the other hand, I understand from the facts, as I gather them from the press, that he was there in the line of his duty.

Mr. HALE. He was. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. ALLEN. If he had been present, if his duty had called him to remain with the fleet at the time, I have no doubt in my own mind that he would have sustained a gallant part in the battle that was waged with the Spanish ships.

Mr. HALE. He was in consultation with the commanding general about important movements, in concert with each other.

Mr. ALLEN. That is as I understand it.

I have no doubt, Mr. President, as to the competency of both these men. I will state frankly, however, that I have been somewhat prejudiced against Sampson on account of the constant newspaper puffing he has received since the war began. It has been my observation, having passed through one war, that the man who received the newspaper puffing at the start usually failed in the end. I have been deeply impressed with the strong character and sailorlike qualities of Commodore Schley; and the fact that he has not received much attention from the press has been a strong argument in his favor in my mind, and it is yet.

But, Mr. President, it does not follow that one man is entitled to greater credit than the other if both were discharging their duties at the time. Sometimes it is unfortunate that the man who is in chief command is absent at the time a battle began, and it is fortunate for the subordinate commander that he is upon the immediate scene of action. The commander in chief very frequently is absent and is absent in the discharge of his duty at a place where his duty requires him to be. I do not believe that under such circumstances he should be blamed either in official or in private circles.

I do not doubt but that either Sampson or Schley would prove themselves amply competent to destroy the Spanish fleet, as it was destroyed, either being in chief command. Nor do I believe that there was a commander or a lieutenant-commander or a captain, whatever the titles may be, down to the humblest seaman in all that fleet, who could not and would not have performed the work equally well if the duty had devolved on him.

Mr. President, there is a good deal in my nature of the democratic order, not in politics, but in habits of thought and manner. I believe every man in the world is entitled to credit for what he does regardless of his rank and regardless of the person he may be. If we are to name any man in resolutions, we should name every man who performed his part in bringing about the result of July 3. Every sailor, every soldier, who performs his duty in the interest of the Government and who sacrifices for it is entitled to as much credit and as much public notice in the resolutions of Congress and in the press, regardless of his station, as the most exalted. I have no sympathy whatever with the namby-pambyism that was expressed here in Congress a few days ago to the effect that the commissioned officers alone should be named, while the private soldiers and sailors should be unnamed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution is referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

FRANKING PRIVILEGES TO SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

On motion of Mr. WOLCOTT, it was Ordered, That $1,4704, extending franking privileges through the mails to officers and enlisted men in the Army and Navy of the United States, be recommended to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

INVESTIGATION OF GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be directed to consider and report whether any further security is practicable and necessary for the protection of the United States against fraud and extravagance in contracts, and especially such contracts as are necessary for the prosecution of the existing war, and against the dealing in such contracts by persons not engaged in the business of producing the articles which they supply; and

Whether it be expedient to require each of the Executive Departments, whenever it has entered in behalf of the United States into any contract for an amount of more than $1,000, to communicate immediately to Congress, if in session, or if not in session, then to make public in some other way to be prescribed, the names of the persons entering into the contract, the character of the contract, whether the same was given upon competition to the lowest bidder, or if not, for what reason any other bid was accepted, and the names of all persons known to the Department who have urged or promoted the acceptance thereof by the Government; and

Whether the parties entering into the contract or interested therein are lawfully and regularly engaged in producing the article or articles by them to be furnished; and if not, what is the lawful occupation of such persons; and whether they have contracts with other persons to furnish the same.

ADDITIONAL CLERK FOR COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Mr. DAVIS submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to continue until the end of this Congress the employment of the additional clerk authorized by the resolution of the Senate of May 9, 1898, and that said clerk be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, at the rate of $1,440 per annum.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed with amendments the bill (S. 632) concerning sail vessels of over 700 tons in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 10709) to authorize the city of Saginaw, Mich., to beautify and use as a public park the United States post-office property in said city, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and

A bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print 100,000 copies of public act No. 193, "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," with marginal notes and index, etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent to call up for present consideration House bill 7399.

Mr. DAVIS. What is the title of the bill? Let it be read for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah asks for present consideration, by unanimous consent, of the bill (H. R. 7399) limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of or work done for the United States or any Territory or the District of Columbia.

Mr. DAVIS. I feel compelled to object to that request.

Mr. CANNON. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the morning business closed? The morning business appears to be closed. The Senator from Utah moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7399.

Mr. HOAR. I ask leave to make one observation. If there be anything to displace or take the place which has been occupied so far by the Hawaiian resolution, which I do not expect—but if there be a purpose on the part of the Senate to proceed to the consideration of any other business, I desire an opportunity to test the sense of the Senate in regard to proceeding to consider the bill providing for voting by volunteer soldiers, a matter growing out of the exigencies of the war. It seems to me that measure ought to take precedence of the measure which is now suggested. I do not make a motion to proceed to its consideration, and I shall not make it under present circumstances; but I say if this measure is to be considered I should think that ought to be considered first.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, both the bills which are named, the one advocated by the Senator from Utah and that to which the Senator from Massachusetts refers, are very important measures, and very meritorious no doubt. But it is perfectly manifest that if the motion of the Senator from Utah prevails it will bring up in competition with it the bill referred to by the Senator from Massachusetts, and the effect would be the displacement for a time, indefinite perhaps, of that which by common consent for days has been proceeded with as the preferred business of the Senate. I move to amend the motion of the Senator from Utah by moving that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 239) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

Mr. CANNON. I make the point that my motion is not subject to amendment.

Mr. DAVIS. I am informed that the motion to amend is not in order, and I withdraw it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. CANNON. I desire to say that there is no wish on my part to displace the joint resolution for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. I think that I am one among many Senators here who have given attention to this subject, who have been devoted to it, who have been willing to set aside every other business in order that it might have constancy of attention. But I submit that it is unfair to other pending legislation that this measure, which has consumed so many hours and days, shall also consume the hour devoted to morning business. I would not have attempted to bring up the bill under other circumstances, but I think the debate on the Hawaiian question has reached a point when the patience of Senators who have waited here in attendance upon the action of the Senate on the Hawaiian question could well be rewarded by permitting them to bring up other subjects of paramount importance. I therefore insist on my motion.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I know the motion is not debatable, but I ask leave to say a single word. This bill was reported only on the 30th of June from the Committee on Education and Labor. It was reported without recommendation, signifying at least that there was a division in the committee as to the advisability of the proposed legislation. It is a bill which can not pass without considerable discussion. If the Senate desires to lay aside in the morning hour the Hawaiian business and proceed to the consideration of this bill, so be it; but it will certainly excite a good deal of discussion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah [Mr. CANNON], that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7399) limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of or work done for the United States, or any Territory, or the District of Columbia.

Mr. CANNON. On that motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. CHANDLER's name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] is at his home in ill health, and that accounts for his absence from the Senate Chamber.

Mr. CLAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. I do not see him present, and therefore I can not vote.

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. McBRIDE (when his name was called). I have a general pair on political questions with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. I have an understanding with him, however, relating to my vote on all questions affecting the consideration of the joint resolution for the annexation of Hawaii, and considering the pending motion as antagonistic to the consideration of the Hawaiian resolution, I feel at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORRILL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] on the Hawaiian question. Thinking we might vote differently on this question, I will withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PERKINS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. ROACH]. He is absent and I withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PROCTOR (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. MALLORY], and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. WETMORE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut (to Mr. WETMORE). Transfer your pair to your colleague.

Mr. WETMORE. I will transfer my pair to my colleague [Mr. ALDRICH], and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DANIEL (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. I voted inadvertently, assuming that he was here. I beg leave to withdraw my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], who is not present in the Chamber. I would suggest to the Senator from Virginia that we transfer our pairs, so that both of us may vote.

Mr. DANIEL. That is entirely agreeable.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. DANIEL. And I mine, Mr. President. I voted "yea."

Mr. BUTLER (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON]. I suggest to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] that we transfer our pairs. He is paired, I understand, with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. We can then both vote. I have already voted "yea."

Mr. NELSON. Yes; let that transfer be made. I vote "nay."

Mr. CULLOM (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. He not being present, I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] to the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. I have already voted.

Mr. CLAY. I am paired with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. GEAR] is paired with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. We transfer our pairs. I vote "yea."

Mr. GEAR. On the statement made by the Senator from Georgia, which is perfectly satisfactory, I vote "nay."

Mr. MORRILL. I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], and vote "nay."

Mr. BURBOWS (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY], but I am permitted to vote if my vote is necessary to make a quorum. I am advised that a quorum has not voted, and I will therefore allow my vote to remain.

Mr. WELLINGTON. I vote "nay."

Mr. NELSON (after having voted in the negative). I withdraw my vote and announce my pair with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST].

Mr. TURLEY (after having voted in the affirmative). I voted without observing that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] with whom I am paired is not present. I therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. LODGE. I vote "nay."

Mr. ROACH. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 18, nays 29; as follows:

YEAS—18.
Allen, Berry, Butler, Cannon, Clay,	Daniel, Faulkner, Harris, Heitfeld, McInery,	McLaurin, Mitchell, Pasco, Pettigrew, Roach,	Teller, Turpie, White.
NAYS—29.
Allison, Baker, Burrows, Carter, Clark, Cullom, Davis, Deboe,	Elkins, Fairbanks, Frye, Gallinger, Gear, Hale, Hawley, Hoar,	Lodge, McBride, Morgan, Morrill, Pettus, Platt, Conn., Pritchard, Sewell,	Shoup, Wellington, Wetmore, Wilson, Wolcott.
NOT VOTING—42.
Aldrich, Bacon, Bate, Caffery, Chandler, Chilton, Cockrell, Foraker, Gorman, Gray, Hanna,	Hansbrough, Jones, Ark., Jones, Nev., Kenney, Kyle, Lindsay, McMillan, Mallory, Mantle, Martin, Mason,	Mills, Money, Murphy, Nelson, Penrose, Perkins, Platt, N. Y., Proctor, Quay, Rawlins, Smith,	Spooner, Stewart, Sullivan, Thurston, Tillman, Turley, Turner, Vest, Warren.

So Mr. CANNON'S motion was not agreed to.

INSPECTION OF SAIL VESSELS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 623) concerning sail vessels of over 700 tons.

Mr. FRYE. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the House amendments and ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. FRYE, Mr. GALLINGER, and Mr. WHITE were appointed.

PRINTING OF WAR REVENUE ACT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed of public act No. 133, "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," with marginal notes and index prepared by the Clerk, and bound in paper, 100,000 copies, 67,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 33,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 2d instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 3144) for the relief of Finetta Nalle;

An act (S. 4439) to relieve owners of mining claims who enlist in the military or naval service of the United States for duty in the war with Spain from performing assessment work during such term of service; and

An act (S. 4756) for the relief of Michael McNulty.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had on the 5th instant approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 2785) for the relief of Blanche T. Hunton; and

An act (S. 4713) relative to the Corps of Engineers of the Army.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the motion of the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator from Minnesota allow me to call up a bill?

Mr. DAVIS. Let the Hawaiian joint resolution be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection to the motion of the Senator from Minnesota, and the joint resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask the Senator from New Jersey if the bill which he desires to take up is a war measure?

Mr. SEWELL. It is a war measure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. DAVIS. I yield to the Senator.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 4831) fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, in line 3, before the word "Adjutant-General," to insert "present;" and in the same line, after the word "shall," to strike out "hereafter" and insert "during his term of office."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read as it will be when amended.

The SECRETARY. As amended the bill will read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the present Adjutant-General of the Army shall during his term of office have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major-general in the Army of the United States.

Mr. SEWELL. Mr. President, I do not think it is necessary to make any remarks on this occasion. The bill is reported with the unanimous recommendation of the Committee on Military Affairs. I think every Senator here knows that without any disparagement to any other officer in the Government service, the present Adjutant-General of the Army has had the hardest worked position that there has been in the service and that he is entitled to the promotion the bill will give him during his term of office. The committee thought they would leave the question open as to his successor, but they are unanimously of the opinion that the bill ought to pass as amended.

Mr. PETTUS. I object to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the present consideration of the bill. The bill lies over.

STAFF SIGNAL OFFICERS.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask the Senate to take up the resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. PETTUS. I ask that the joint resolution be read for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that the joint resolution has not come from the Printer.

Mr. SEWELL. It will go over, then.

Mr. DAVIS. I suggest that the consideration of the joint resolution be postponed until later in the day.

Mr. SEWELL. It will have to be postponed if it is not at the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] is entitled to the floor on the unfinished business.

POSTAL MATTERS—PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, before proceeding to the consideration of the matter before the Senate, there is an affair which I feel it my duty to call to the attention of the Senate. It will take but an instant.

My attention has been called to Senate Document No. 217, present session, presented by the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW]. It purports to be a statement with reference to the Post-Office, and was presented, no doubt, by way of information and argument. I make the following extract:

This is the issue involved in the proposition of Mr. LOUD to cut down the free-delivery service of the country unless Senators and Representatives will vote for his bill to cut down the service of the Post-Office in the hauling of second-class matter. It is part and parcel of the conspiracy to emasculate the service of the Post-Office and to turn it over to Mr. LOUD's friends, who, he told the Fifty-fourth Congress, could easily make a profit of thirty or forty millions a year out of it.

Mr. LOUD is a Representative of the State of California in the Congress of the United States and has been four times elected by his constituents. He does not belong to the party of which I am a member, but I have long known him personally and am very familiar with his character and reputation. While he is a man of positive convictions and does not hesitate to express himself unequivocally, I have never heard the purity of his motives assailed; and I am here to say that his history, personal and political, demonstrates his honesty of purpose and entire integrity. I know that the distinguished Senator from South Dakota, in presenting the paper referred to, had no intention of casting any reflection upon Mr. LOUD, but merely desired to contribute certain arguments to a question pending in this body. Any intimation that Mr. LOUD had aught to do with any conspiracy here or elsewhere or has been seeking to or promoting pecuniarily the interests of his friends by his course in Congress is wholly without foundation. I feel it my duty to make these comments because of the manifest injustice and unfairness of the language which I have cited. I trust that the document will not be further circulated with the objectionable language.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I presented the document referred to by the Senator from California. I did not at the time of submitting it notice the objectionable language with regard to Mr. LOUD. I have known Mr. LOUD for many years. I consider him to be a man of the highest character and of strict integrity, and I would not knowingly place any slight upon his reputation or upon his standing as a man.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. DAVIS. I call for the regular order.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

[Mr. WHITE resumed and concluded the speech begun by him on the 21st of June. See Appendix.]

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I shall prove to the Senate that the Government which now exists in Hawaii, with which we are treating for a title to that country, is a Government existing without the consent of the people of those islands, set up by the armed forces of the United States, maintained by the presence of our battle ships from the day of its existence to the present time. I shall show that this Government was brought into being because of the passage of the McKinley law, which repealed the duty on sugar; that the effort to annex the islands resulted from the fact that we repealed the duty upon sugar and placed a bounty upon domestic sugar.

Therefore the Hawaiian planters desired to be admitted into the Union in order to secure the bounty; that our minister, Stevens, going to a friendly Government, began conniving, plotting, and planning to overthrow and destroy the Government to which he was sent the very day of his arrival; that through his efforts, without any armed force on the part of those people, without a gun or an armed man on their part, backed by the cannon and the armed marines of this Government, thirteen men were made the rulers of that country, and even then, when our marines returned to their vessel, President Dole, as he called himself and as the thirteen called him, sent a letter to our minister, saying, "We can not maintain this Government which you have set up; we have not the power to perpetuate its existence," and asking to have the flag of the United States raised over their building; and it was raised, and remained there for two months, until they were able to gather together and confiscate all the arms upon the islands, to import foreign mercenaries whom they armed, thus collecting an armed force of 400 men.

Every revolution which has occurred in Hawaii has occurred in the town of Honolulu, the capital of the islands, the largest center of population. Every disturbance has occurred there. Every time there has been an overthrow of the Government or riot or dispute it has occurred within that city. All the rest of the islands have always had peace. There was never any disturbance, there was no danger to life or property, and no pretense of danger to life or property. This revolution occurred in Honolulu, and yet peace reigned in all the other towns, and I will show that these same conspirators were the cause of all the trouble and all the difficulty which has heretofore existed.

George W. Merrill, who was our minister to Hawaii, wrote Mr. Secretary Blaine, September 7, 1890, as follows:

It is also noticeable that among the American residents here there are several who, from personal motives, contemplate with satisfaction periodical disquietude in this Kingdom, hoping that frequent revolutionary epochs will force the United States Government to make this group a part of its territory and to absorb into its body politic this heterogeneous population of 80,000, consisting of Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, native Hawaiians, half-castes, and only about 5,000 of those who may be properly denominated the white race.

In order to keep affairs in as much turmoil as possible baseless rumors are constantly put in circulation, many of which find publication in other countries.

I have, etc.,

GEORGE W. MERRILL.

This was our minister. It is an official document found in the archives of the State Department, written on the 7th of September, 1890.

He was superseded shortly afterwards by Mr. Stevens. Mr. Stevens was appointed minister in October, 1890. Harrison had been elected President. One of the issues of the campaign was free sugar. The McKinley Act became a law August 27, 1890. On August 20, 1891, Mr. Stevens writes to Mr. Blaine as follows:

The probabilities strongly favor the presumption that a United States war ship will not be pressingly necessary in the two or three immediate months.

But as early as the 1st of December, without fail, the month preceding the election, and for some time thereafter, there should be a United States vessel here to render things secure. I have strong reluctance to being regarded an alarmist, but with due regard to my responsibility I am impelled to express the opinion that a proper regard for American interests will require one ship here most of the time in 1892. There are increasing indications that the annexation sentiment is growing among the business men. The present political situation is feverish, and I see no prospect of its being permanently otherwise until these islands become a part of the American Union or a possession of Great Britain.

The intelligent and responsible men here, unaided by outside support, are too few in numbers to control in political affairs and secure good government. There are indications that the liberals are about to declare for annexation. At a future time I shall deem it my official duty to give a more elaborate statement of facts and reasons why a "new departure" by the United States as to Hawaii is rapidly becoming a necessity, that a "protectorate" is impracticable, and that annexation must be the future remedy, or else Great Britain will be furnished with circumstances and opportunity to get a hold on these islands, which will cause future serious embarrassment to the United States.

At this time there seems to be no immediate prospect of its being safe to have the harbor of Honolulu left without an American vessel of war. Last week a British gunboat arrived here, and it is said will remain here for an indefinite period.

I am, etc.,

JOHN L. STEVENS.

Here, then, is our minister, accredited to a friendly Government, contemplating the destruction of that Government and the annexation of the territory. There was no negotiation.

Further on, in his next dispatch, he asked the State Department to keep secret his plot, to keep secret his statement in regard to the overthrow of that Government; and he says in the dispatch that it would be uncomfortable for him if the facts were known in Hawaii. Here was a minister to a friendly Government planning its overthrow, evidently planning with its enemies to cause its overthrow and annex it to this country, carrying on a correspondence which he did not dare to have disclosed because of the treasonable conduct in which he was engaged.

On November 20, 1892, Stevens again writes:

THE EXISTING BUSINESS STATUS.

It is well to consider the existing state of things here resulting from the change in the United States sugar tariff. Only personal observation and a careful investigation of the facts can give one an adequate idea of the severe blow sugar raising here has received. The production of sugar being the main business of the islands, the great reduction of the market price has affected powerfully the entire affairs and condition of the islands. I think it understating the truth to express the opinion that the loss to the owners of the sugar plantations and mills, etc., and the consequent depreciation of other property by the passage of the McKinley bill, wise and beneficial as that measure is proving to be for the vast interests of the United States, has not been less than $12,000,000, a large portion of this loss falling on Americans residing here and in California.

Unless some positive measures of relief be granted, the depreciation of sugar property here will continue to go on. Wise, bold action by the United States will rescue the property holders from great losses, give the islands a government which will put an end to a worse than useless expenditure of a large proportion of the revenues of the country, using them for the building of roads and bridges, thus helping to develop the natural resources of the islands, aiding to diversify the industries and to increase the number of the responsible citizens.

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE?

One of two courses seems to me absolutely necessary to be followed, either bold and vigorous measures for annexation or a "customs union," an ocean cable from the Californian coast to Honolulu, Pearl Harbor perpetually ceded to the United States, with an implied but not necessarily stipulated American protectorate over the islands. I believe the former to be the better, that which will prove much the more advantageous to the islands, and the cheapest and least embarrassing in the end for the United States.

Here, then, Mr. President, in 1893, two months before the final revolution, our minister outlines the reason for it—that the sugar interests of the islands are declining because we took the tariff off of sugar, because they can no longer get out of the pockets of the people of the United States, by remitting duties, 2 cents a pound.

But there is other evidence, Mr. President, which shows conclusively that this revolution was brought about purely and simply by the sugar planters in the interest of the sugar raisers. On the 8th of March, 1892, our minister, Mr. Stevens, writes the following letter:

Mr. Stevens to Mr. Blaine.

HONOLULU, March 8, 1892.

SIR: In view of possible contingencies in these islands I ask for the instructions of the Department of State on the following, viz:

If the Government here should be surprised and overturned by an orderly and peaceful revolutionary movement, largely of native Hawaiians, and a provisional or republican government organized and proclaimed, would the United States minister and naval commander here be justified in responding affirmatively to the call of the members of the removed Government to restore them to power or replace them in possession of the Government buildings?

Or should the United States minister and naval commander confine themselves exclusively to the preservation of American property, the protection of American citizens, and the prevention of anarchy? Should a revolutionary attempt of the character indicated be made, there are strong reasons to presume that it would begin by the seizure of the police station, with its arms and ammunition, and this accomplished, the royal palace and the Government buildings containing the cabinet officers and archives would very soon be captured, the latter buildings being situated about one-third of a mile from the police station.

In such contingencies would it be justifiable to use the United States forces here to restore the Government buildings to the possession of the displaced officials? Ordinarily in like circumstances the rule seems to be to limit the landing and movement of the United States force in foreign waters and dominion exclusively to the protection of the United States legation and of the lives and property of American citizens. But, as the relations of the United States to Hawaii are exceptional, and in former years the United States officials here took somewhat exceptional action in circumstances of disorder, I desire to know how far the present minister and naval commander here may deviate from established international rules and precedents in the contingencies indicated on the first part of this dispatch.

I have information, which I deem reliable, that there is an organized revolutionary party in the islands, composed largely of native Hawaiians and a considerable number of whites and half whites, led chiefly by individuals of the latter two classes.

Here our minister, on the 8th of March, 1893, almost a year before the revolution, is in possession of the whole plan, clearly indicating that he was in a conspiracy with these people to overturn a government.

Again, November 20, 1892, Mr. Stevens writes:

UNITED STATES LEGATION, Honolulu, November 20, 1892.

SIR: Fidelity to the trust imposed on me by the President, the Department of State, and the Senate requires that I should make a careful and full statement of the financial, agricultural, social, and political condition of these islands. An intelligent and impartial examination of the facts can hardly fail to lead to the conclusion that the relations and policy of the United States toward Hawaii will soon demand some change, if not the adoption of decisive measures, with the aim to secure American interests and future supremacy by encouraging Hawaiian development and aiding to promote responsible government in these islands.

I find in the evidence taken by Mr. Blount the following. This is the testimony of Mr. Fred. H. Hayselden, a sugar planter on the Island of Lanai:

Q. What do you think were the causes of the revolution?

A. Simply 2 cents a pound on sugar—to get some treaty or some arrangement with America. They did not see their way clear to get it in the face of the McKinley bill. They thought Harrison would be reelected and the Republican policy would be continued.

Q. But at the time of the revolution Harrison had been defeated?

A. Yes; but this thing was marked up long before that. They wanted to force it upon the Harrison Administration, if they could, before the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland.

I have carefully read the foregoing and pronounce it an accurate report of my interview with Colonel Blount.

I read also the testimony of Samuel Parker:

Mr. BLOUNT. Is it your opinion that this movement would have occurred if there had been no effort to proclaim a new constitution?

Mr. PARKER. I think it would.

Mr. BLOUNT. Why do you think so?

Mr. PARKER. A majority of the capitalists of the town had no confidence in our ministry. I think it would have come about anyway.

Mr. BLOUNT. Come about soon?

Mr. PARKER. It would have come about, because even when this attempt of promulgation of the new constitution was made, we were told that they would support us for what we had done—for holding out against the Queen in requesting us to sign the new constitution. This was said to us at that time—at the time when the Queen was asking us to sign it. During the day they had a meeting of the citizens. I mean such men as Thurston, Hartwell, and leaders of the provisional government. They told us they would back us up. They admired us for our pluck in holding out against the Queen's wish.

Mr. BLOUNT. Would this imply a disposition to take action toward dethronement?

Mr. PARKER. I think it came from the McKinley bill—the first action was on account of the McKinley bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. What do you mean by action?

Mr. PARKER. They said that unless something is done—closer relations with the United States—we are bankrupt. That was long before the Legislature came in session; when I first went into the cabinet.

Mr. BLOUNT. Who do you mean said this?

Mr. PARKER. A majority of the sugar men; those now at the head of the provisional government—capitalists and planters. They said that something must be done to get closer relations with the United States to hold us up. With sugar down to $45 and $50 a ton, something ought to be done. A commercial treaty or something ought to be negotiated with the American people.

Mr. Blount in his report makes the following statement:

The controlling element in the white population is connected with the sugar industry. In its interests the Government here has negotiated treaties from time to time for the purpose of securing contract laborers for terms of years for the plantations, and paid out large sums for their transportation and for building plantation wharves, etc.

These contracts provide for compelling the laborer to work faithfully by fines and damage suits brought by the planters against them, with the right on the part of the planter to deduct the damages and costs of suit out of the laborer's wages.

They also provide for compelling the laborer to remain with the planter during the contract term. They are sanctioned by law and enforced by civil remedies and penal laws. The general belief amongst the planters at the so-called revolution was that, notwithstanding the laws against importing labor into the United States, in the event of their annexation to that Government, these laws would not be made operative in the Hawaiian Islands on account of their peculiar conditions. Their faith in the building of a cable between Honolulu and San Francisco and large expenditures at Pearl Harbor in the event of annexation has also as much to do with the desire for it.

In addition to these was the hope of escape from duties on rice and fruits and receiving the sugar bounty, either by general or special law.

The repeal of the duty on sugar in the McKinley Act was regarded a severe blow to their interests, and the great idea of statesmanship has been to do something in the shape of treaties with the United States, reducing their duties on agricultural products of the Hawaiian Islands, out of which profit might be derived. Annexation has for its charm the complete abolition of all duties on their exports to the United States.

The annexationists expect the United States to govern the islands by so abridging the right of suffrage as to place them in control of the whites.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me a moment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I think there ought to be a quorum present to listen to the Senator's speech.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TURPIE in the chair). It being suggested by the Senator from Nebraska that no quorum of the Senate is present, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Davis,	Lodge,	Pritchard,
Allison,	Elkins,	McBride,	Roach,
Bacon,	Fairbanks,	McLaurin,	Sewell,
Bate,	Foraker,	Mallory,	Spooner,
Berry,	Frye,	Martin,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Mills,	Teller,
Caffery,	Gorman,	Money,	Turley,
Chilton,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Warren,
Clark,	Harris,	Morrill,	Wellington,
Clay,	Hawley,	Pasco,	Wetmore,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Pettigrew,	Wilson.
Cullom,	Jones, Ark.	Pettus,
Daniel,	Kyle,	Platt, Conn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty Senators have answered to their names on the roll call. A quorum is present. The Senator from South Dakota will proceed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. So, Mr. President, this revolution was organized by a conspiracy of the American minister in the interest of the sugar planters of Hawaii, which the minister says was the chief industry of the island and the basis of their prosperity.

So the American minister had been secured as an advocate of the overthrow of the friendly Government to whom he was sent; and then what was done by these conspirators, few in number, having vast wealth, fortunes made absolutely out of the people of the United States in the profit upon sugar, which is admitted free of duty, while we charged 2 cents a pound on sugar from every other country? The American minister having been secured, the next step was to find an excuse for overthrowing the existing Government.

On the 14th of January, 1893, being Saturday, the Queen took steps to promulgate a new constitution. Petitions had been received by her signed by two-thirds of all the voters of the island protesting against the constitution of 1887 and asking that a new one be promulgated. The constitution of 1887 deprived a large per cent of her people of the right to vote for members of the Senate or any voice in the Government. This was done by a property qualification which excluded them from the right of suffrage. A few of her own people were permitted to serve in the cabinet. The constitution of 1887 had been forced out of the King, her predecessor, by a threat by these same people to assassinate him and overturn his Government.

Mr. ALLEN. What is the number of voters in the Hawaiian Islands now?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Under the new constitution, twenty-six hundred.

Mr. ALLEN. All are male adults, I suppose.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Of course there are a very large number of male adults who have never taken any steps to be citizens or voters; that is, they are the contract laborers, the slave labor from Japan and China.

Mr. ALLEN. Are they by circumstances disqualified from citizenship?

Mr. PETTIGREW. They are not qualified for citizenship because they have taken no steps to secure it, and do not desire it. There are about 13,000 people who have a right to vote for the members of the lower House of the Legislature if they would take the oath of allegiance to this sugar Government, which provides for annexation to the United States, but they refuse to do it. So there are only 2,600 people who are really voters under that Government.

Mr. ALLEN. A property qualification is required for voting in the Hawaiian Islands?

Mr. PETTIGREW. For voting for senators a very high property qualification is required.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask the Senator if that does not disqualify the vast body of male adults in the island?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Oh, certainly, it disqualifies nearly every one to vote for a senator. There are only a few thus qualified. I think there are not over 1,200 people in the islands who can vote for a senator under the property qualification required. But the Queen, in pursuance of this address, proposed to modify the constitution so that her own people would have something to say about the proposition to modify the property qualification and make the Government more nearly democratic, and bring it closer to the people.

Immediately on the proposition being made to adopt a new constitution, these people, nine of them, had a meeting in Smith's office. He was a lawyer in Honolulu. He is now the attorney-general of the so-called republic. There they began to plan and plot for the overthrow of the Queen. But finding that there was opposition to her movement, the Queen abandoned the idea of issuing a new constitution and sent forth on Monday, January 16, 1893, the following letter:

BY AUTHORITY.

Her Majesty's ministers desire to express their appreciation for the quiet and order which has prevailed in this community since the events of Saturday, and are authorized to say that the position taken by Her Majesty in regard to the promulgation of a new constitution was under stress of her native subjects.

Authority is given for the assurance that any changes desired in the fundamental law of the land will be sought only by methods provided in the constitution itself.

Her Majesty's ministers request all citizens to accept the assurance of Her Majesty in the same spirit which it is given.

LILIUOKALANI,
SAMUEL PARKER,
Minister of Foreign Affairs.
W. H. CORNWELL,
Minister of Finance.
JOHN F. COLBUEN,
Minister of the Interior.
A. P. PETERSON,
Attorney-General.

IOLANI PALACE, January 16, 1893.

On Saturday, the 14th, there was a meeting at W. O. Smith's office, and a committee of safety was organized, composed of thirteen members. I propose now to show what this meeting was called for, and I will show it by reading the testimony of Mr. Bolte. Mr. Bolte was one of the conspirators. In answer to a question by Mr. Blount he said:

The answers which I have given to Mr. Blount's questions, "When was for the first time anything said about deposing or dethroning the Queen?" might lead to misunderstanding in reading this report. I desire, therefore, to hereby declare as follows: Words to the effect that the Queen must be deposed or dethroned were not uttered to my knowledge at any meeting of the committee of safety until Monday evening, January 16, 1893; but at the very first meeting of citizens at W. O. Smith's office, on Saturday, January 14, at about 2 p. m., or even before this meeting had come to order, Paul Neumann informed the arriving people that the Queen was about to promulgate a new constitution.

The answer then given him by Mr. W. C. Wilder, by me, and by others was: That is a very good thing and a splendid opportunity to get rid of the whole old rotten Government concern and now to get annexation to the United States. Paul Neumann thought that that might be going a little too far.

At the second meeting at W. O. Smith's, between 3 and 4 p. m. on Saturday afternoon, January 14, 1893, when the committee of safety was appointed, sentiments of the same nature, that this is a splendid opportunity to get rid of the old régime, and strong demands for annexation, or any kind of stable government under the supervision of the United States, were expressed.

Therefore, even if the words that the Queen must be deposed or dethroned were not spoken, surely the sentiment that this must be done prevailed at or even before the very first meeting, on January 14, 1893.

C. BOLTE.

HONOLULU, June —, 1893.

There was no fear of disorder, no thought that life and property was in danger, only a satisfaction that the excuse for revolution had been offered and the time had come to give a new impetus to the sugar industry.

Mr. Smith states that the committee at his office debated whether they would ask the United States to establish a protectorate. They concluded that as the Queen had an armed force it was best to appoint a committee to see the United States minister and ascertain what he would do, and Thurston was selected as chairman of said committee. Thereupon this committee visited the minister. They had met, passed no resolutions whatever with regard to danger to life and property, but had congratulated each other on the fact that an opportunity had arisen for an excuse to overthrow the government and secure annexation to the United States, purely in the interest of their sugar plantations. Thurston was therefore appointed as chairman of the committee to see the American minister. Smith says:

I went home about dark or a little after, and just had dinner when Mr. Thurston called at my house on his way home, asking me to meet the committee and one or two others at his house at 8 o'clock. I went there and found Mr. Thurston, W. R. Castle, F. W. Wundenberg, A. S. Hartwell, S. B. Dole, and C. L. Carter. Mr. Thurston stated that the committee had waited upon the American minister, and that he had said that the United States troops on board the Boston would be ready to land any moment to prevent the destruction of American life and property, and in regard to the matter of establishing a provisional government, they of course would recognize the existing government, whatever it might be.

Mr. Thurston stated to Mr. Stevens the proposition that was under consideration, of establishing a provisional government, and in case those steps were taken, he asked Mr. Stevens what his attitude would be, and Mr. Stevens had told him whatever government was established, and was actually in possession of the Government building, the executive departments, and archives, and in possession of the city, that was a de facto government proclaiming itself as a government, would necessarily have to be recognized. Everything had culminated in a few hours; we were laboring under intense feeling, and it was arranged that different ones of those present should begin drafting papers.

Mr. W. R. Castle undertook to draft something in the nature of a brief historical statement, which would be for a preamble to the declaration. Mr. Thurston was to work upon the matter of the form of the provisional government. Judge Dole quietly stated that he was not prepared to take part in the movement, but that he would assist, at Mr. Thurston's request, in drafting the declaration. I was requested to draft papers to be submitted to the American minister requesting the landing of the troops, in case it became necessary. At a late hour we retired, and the next morning at 9 o'clock the committee of thirteen met at W. R. Castle's residence.

Not one word in all this testimony indicates that these men had any fear of bodily harm or of damage or injury to their property, but it was simply a plan preconcerted to overthrow a friendly government. They met in Smith's office. They sent a committee to see the American minister and ask him what he would do, and finally they sent to ask him to land troops. After the meeting at Castle's, Smith went to see the American minister and arranged with him as to what should be done if Smith and his coconspirators were arrested. He secured the required assurances and the call for troops was issued. I read further from Mr. Smith's statement:

Before the meeting broke up the form of the request to the American minister in regard to the landing of the troops was adopted and signed by the committee of thirteen, requesting the American minister to land troops, and this request was signed by the committee of thirteen, and decided to be delivered to the minister to be held by him but not to be acted upon until a further request was received from the committee.

Here, then, they had decided to call on the American minister to order the landing of American troops, and then they put the request in his hands to be used by him whenever they notified him they wanted it used. Certainly there was no very imminent danger to the life and property of Americans if he was to delay the landing of troops. Why this delay? To give the conspirators who were in league with our minister a chance to formulate their plans. These conspirators then held a public meeting and Thurston made some lurid remarks, talked about freedom, etc., and about liberty and tyrannical government; and after his lurid speech they passed the tamest sort of resolutions that they protest against the new constitution, but said not a word about overthrowing the Queen or establishing a new government. After this public meeting the conspirators again met in Smith's office in Honolulu, and at that meeting in Smith's office Mr. Smith says:

There was a short and earnest discussion of what was to be done; it was then nearly 4; our plans had not been perfected, papers had not been completed, and, after a hasty discussion, the time being very short, it was decided that it was impossible for us to take the necessary steps, and we should request that the troops be not landed until next morning, the hour in the morning being immaterial, whether it was 9 or 8 or 8 o'clock in the morning, but we must have further time to prevent bloodshed, and Mr. Thurston and I were appointed to proceed at once to the American minister and inform him of our decision. We proceeded at once to Mr. Stevens's house, the United States legation, stated the case to him, and he said that as a precautionary measure, and to protect American life and property, he had ordered the troops to be landed at 8 o'clock, and that they would come. It was then decided to adjourn to meet at the house of Henry Waterhouse at 8 o'clock in the evening. The meeting broke up, and some of us went down to see the troops landed. Thurston gave up—sick. He had to go to bed.

The hour of action had arrived, and the lurid Thurston was sick. Troops were going to be landed. How like conspirators these men acted! They went down to the wharf and mingled with the crowd and asked the troops to land. To protect life and property? No, Mr. President, but for the purpose of overturning a friendly Government, and for no other purpose, were those troops landed. At every step in the proceeding great care was taken to consult the American minister and to know just what he would do in case they were arrested. There was a great sense of fear and apprehension of danger on the part of these thirteen men, only. All honest citizens felt safe and secure in life and property.

The request for troops reads as follows:

The committee of safety to Mr. Stevens.

No. 7.] HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, Honolulu, January 16, 1893.

SIR: We, the undersigned citizens and residents of Honolulu, respectfully represent that, in view of recent public events in this Kingdom, culminating in the revolutionary acts of Queen Liliuokalani on Saturday last, the public safety is menaced and lives and property are in peril, and we appeal to you and the United States forces at your command for assistance.

The Queen, with the aid of armed forces, and accompanied by threats of violence and bloodshed from those with whom she was acting, attempted to proclaim a new constitution and, while prevented for the time from accomplishing her object, declared publicly that she would only defer her action.

This conduct and action was upon an occasion and under circumstances which have created general alarm and terror.

We are unable to protect ourselves without aid, and therefore pray for the protection of the United States forces.

HENRY E. COOPER,
F. W. MCCHESNEY,
W. C. WILDER,
C. BOLTE,
A. BROWN,
WILLIAM O. SMITH,
HENRY WATERHOUSE,
THEO. F. LANSING,
ED. SUHR,
L. A. THURSTON,
JOHN EMMELUTH,
WM. R. CASTLE,
J. A. MCCANDLESS,
Citizens' Committee of Safety.

His Excellency JOHN L. STEVENS,
American Minister Resident.

They were unable to protect themselves. No wonder; without armies, without an armed force, these thirteen men conspiring with the United States minister, proposing to commit treason against their own Government, appealed to the United States to protect them in their treasonable and unlawful act.

If there was great danger, general alarm, and terror among the people of Honolulu, why was a committee sent to Mr. Stevens to delay the landing of the troops until the next day? Why was it, if a reign of terror existed and the lives and property of Americans and others were in danger, that a committee was sent to tell him that they did not want the troops landed until the next morning? It was because there was no danger to American lives and property, because Honolulu was peaceful, and because the people were about their usual vocations; and the troops were to be landed for the purpose of carrying on a conspiracy, being the only armed forces employed to overthrow a friendly Government.

What excuse could these conspirators make, if there was actual danger to the women and children of Honolulu, for requesting that the troops be not landed until the next morning? The fact of the matter is that they had not their proclamations and other papers ready. Mr. Smith says the mass meeting broke up sooner than they expected, and they were not ready to take the final step just yet; besides, things were getting so hot that Thurston was getting permanently sick, for he entirely disappears from the scene until all danger is over. Thurston undoubtedly is a physical coward.

However, the troops were landed and distributed, not for the purpose of protecting Americans or American property, but to guard the Government building and show the Queen that they were assisting the revolutionists. This was Monday evening. On Tuesday morning the committee of thirteen met again and signed the proclamation, and about 2 o'clock started in two parties on different streets to go to the Government buildings, now guarded by United States troops, to read the proclamation according to this previously arranged plan with our minister. I will read Smith's account of this transaction. He says:

The committee of thirteen signed the proclamation—

They were down in Smith's office, in the heart of the city of Honolulu—and the executive council then signed the commission of J. H. Soper as commander in chief of the forces, and three copies of the proclamation were completed. The final signing of the papers was completed about twenty minutes past 2, and after a little delay the committee of thirteen, with the executive and advisory councils, started to proceed to the Government building. They had hardly reached the corner of Merchant street before a shot was heard, and it was reported that a policeman had been shot at E. O. Hall & Son's store, and people were seen running from the direction of the Government building toward the spot, and there was considerable commotion. The committee and councils proceeded to the Government building and the proclamation was read. Previous to starting, leaving my office, Mr. Dole requested Mr. A. S. Wilcox to go up to the Government building and come back and report whether there was any armed force at the Government building. He went up and looked through and went through to Queen street, and came back and reported that he did not see any armed men.

These conspirators then met at a law office in the town, and, without a single armed man, proceeded to the Government building, and in front of it, and within 75 yards of the 150 marines landed from the United States vessel, they proceeded to read the proclamation declaring that they were the Government. They, however, took the precaution to go in two parties, one party going up one street and the other party another street, so as not to attract attention. They took the precaution to send Wilcox up to see if there were any armed men likely to interfere, and Damon says that when they arrived they saw that, besides the marines of the United States, there was but one man with a gun, and he asked him if he was not afraid to be alone with a gun assisting the revolution.

If it were true that the necessity for the landing of troops was to protect life and property, why is it that none of the foreign consuls or the representatives of foreign governments have ever been called upon to testify in this regard? There is not one word anywhere which indicates that they had any fear that necessitated the landing of troops. Everything goes to show, and their statements all go to show, they fully understood the conspiracy by which the Government was overthrown, and that the landing of the troops was for the purpose of overturning a friendly government.

I will ask the Secretary to read a letter from Rear-Admiral Skerrett, of the United States Navy, commanding, which will throw considerable light on this subject.

The Secretary read as follows:

Admiral Skerrett to Mr. Blount.

No. 107.] U. S. S. BOSTON, FLAGSHIP OF THE PACIFIC STATION,
Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, May 30, 1893.

Sir: I have examined with a view of inspection the premises first occupied by the force landed from the U. S. S. Boston, and known as Arion Hall, situated on the west side of the Government building. The position of this location is in the rear of a large brick building known as Music Hall. The street it faces is comparatively a narrow one, the building itself facing the Government building. In my opinion it was unadvisable to locate the troops there, if they were landed for the protection of the United States citizens, being distinctly removed from the business portion of the town, and generally far away from the United States legation and consulate-general, as well as being distant from the houses and residences of United States citizens. It will be seen from the accompanying sketch that had the provisional government troops been attacked from the east such attack would have placed them in the line of fire.

Had Music Hall been seized by the Queen's troops, they would have been under their fire, had such been their desire. It is for these reasons that I consider the position occupied as ill selected. Naturally, if they were landed with a view to support the provisional government troops then occupying the Government building, it was a wise choice, as they could enfilade any troops attacking them from the palace grounds in front. There is nothing further for me to state with reference to this matter, and as has been called by you to my attention—all of which is submitted for your consideration.

Very respectfully,

J. S. SKERRETT,
Rear-Admiral United States Navy,
Commanding United States Naval Force, Pacific Station.

Col. J. H. BLOUNT,
United States Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I see but one Senator on the other side of the Chamber, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is suggested by the honorable Senator from Tennessee that there is less than a quorum of Senators present in the Chamber. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Elkins,	McBride,	Sewell,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Martin,	Shoup,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Mills,	Spooner,
Berry,	Foraker,	Morgan,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Frye,	Nelson,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Gallinger,	Pasco,	Warren,
Cannon,	Gear,	Penrose,	Wellington,
Carter,	Hanna,	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Pettigrew,	White,
Clay,	Harris,	Pettus,	Wolcott,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Platt, Conn.
Cullom,	Jones, Ark.	Pritchard,
Davis,	Lodge,	Proctor,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-nine Senators have answered to their names upon the call. A quorum of the Senate is present. The Senator from South Dakota will proceed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It will appear from this letter of Admiral Skerrett that these troops were, in his opinion, located for the purpose of guarding the conspirators and helping out the conspiracy. I call the especial attention of the Senate to this fact. Of course I know, Mr. President, that anything I may say upon this subject will not influence the action of this body; that they are going to pass this resolution and annex the Hawaiian Islands; but I propose to make this record, and show conclusively that the United States in doing it is engaged in an act of piracy—it is not conquest. We overturned a friendly government by the force of our arms, and now we treat with the government thus created by us and maintained by us for title to a country without consulting its inhabitants.

The proclamation having been read at the Government building, guarded by United States troops, the United States minister proceeded at once to recognize the new Government. They had not an armed man. They had proceeded to the Government building, where they were clerks and officers of the Hawaiian Government, with not even a policeman present. They stood up in front of that building, within 75 yards of the gatling guns of the marines from an American battle ship, and had read a paper declaring that they were the Government. Three-quarters of a mile away the Queen had 500 men under arms; and without waiting an instant, the moment they read the proclamation our minister recognized those thirteen men as the Government of Hawaii, without any armed forces whatever, knowing that he had violated international law and violated the precedents followed by all civilized nations, and he undertook to falsify the facts.

He claimed that he recognized the Government after the Queen had surrendered, after the old Government had given up, after she had abdicated and said she would submit her case to Washington. An investigation of the facts proves that this statement is false. I will show by the official records that the statement was absolutely false and that he recognized that Government the very moment these men read their proclamation. I will not stop to read it, because it is useless, but I will print in the RECORD, if there is no objection, the testimony of Mr. Damon, the present minister of finance of the Hawaiian Government, which shows conclusively that this surrender on the part of the Queen was made after the United States had recognized this so-called Government which we had set up.

The testimony referred to is as follows:

Interview between Mr. Damon and Mr. Blount.

HONOLULU, April 29, 1893.

Mr. BLOUNT. How long have you lived here?

Mr. DAMON. I was born here in 1845. I have been away several times—perhaps to the extent of three or four years in that time.

Q. Where were you on the 17th of January, 1893, at the time the proclamation deposing the Queen and establishing the provisional government was read?

A. I was at Honolulu. I was one of the members of that body who went up.

Q. The paper was read by Mr. Cooper?

A. By Judge Cooper.

Q. How many of you were there in that body which went up—about?

A. The whole body. There would be four of the executive and fourteen of the advisory.

Q. Please look at this paper and see if they are the persons (Senate Executive Document No. 76, Fifty-second Congress, second session).

A. Thurston was not present, and I do not think Wilhelm was there.

Q. Where did you start from?

A. From W. O. Smith's office on Fort street.

Q. And what street did you take going from there?

A. We walked up directly to the Government house on Merchant street. It was suggested that a part should go by the way of Queen street, but a majority of us went by way of Merchant street.

Q. What was the idea for dividing the committee?
 A. So that it should not attract so much attention; and it would be safer, perhaps, to have it divided than going in mass.
 Q. Was it because it occurred to them that it might invite attack if they went in mass?
 A. That was partly the idea—that it was more prudent. I think we, most of us, walked together—not compactly, but together.
 Q. Any crowd following you?
 A. No; the crowd was attracted to the corner of Fort and King streets, owing to the shot that was fired by Mr. Good at a policeman. In fact, the crowd cleared from the Government house and was attracted there. From all directions they centered at the corner of Hall's store.
 Q. You found, then, scarcely anyone at the Government house when the committee arrived?
 A. Scarcely anyone there except porters. After Mr. Cooper began to read the proclamation, then different ones came out of the offices—clerks and officials—while the proclamation was being read.
 Q. Some of the provisional government troops, or rather troops raised at the direction of the committee of safety, came on the ground before the reading of the proclamation was finished?
 A. When we arrived there was but one man with a rifle on the premises, Mr. Oscar White; but some little time later they commenced to come in from the armory, troops that were under the supervision of Colonel Soper.
 Q. Was that before or during the reading of the proclamation?
 A. During the reading—toward the end of it.
 Q. How many troops came in? Do you have any knowledge of the number you had enlisted?
 A. There were enough came in to make us feel more decidedly at ease than before they arrived.
 Q. You could not say how many there were?
 A. No; they kept coming in right along. They got to be quite a body.
 Q. After the reading of the proclamation the late ministers were sent for?
 A. After the reading of the proclamation we adjourned to the office of the minister of the interior, and then we commenced to formulate our plans and get ourselves into working order. Mr. Dole was at the head. While we were there in consultation Mr. Cornwell and Mr. Parker came up there from the station house and held a conference with us.
 Q. What was the purport of that conference?
 A. The result of that conference was that Mr. Bolte and myself were requested to return with Mr. Cornwell and Mr. Parker to the station house and recommend and urge upon the parties in power at the police station to surrender to the provisional government. We had a conference with the ministers in the room occupied generally by the deputy marshal. There were present Messrs. Peterson, Colburn, Parker, Cornwell, Bolte, and later Mr. Neumann, who was asked to come in. After consultation of the matter of their yielding up their power to the provisional government they asked to be let alone for a few moments, and I went into one of the rear cells in the corridor with Marshal Wilson and urged him very strongly to give up any hope or any thought of making any attack, or resistance, more properly.
 Q. What reason did you give him?
 A. I can not remember at the present moment giving him a reason, but I remember distinctly saying to him: "Now, if you will cooperate with us, if in future I can be of service to you I will do so."
 Q. Was there any suggestion of sympathy on the part of the United States minister in your movement?
 A. While I was in the station house a man by the name of Bowler said to me: "We are all prepared, but I will never fight against the American flag."
 Q. Was there anything in the conversation between you and him in which any intimation direct or indirect that the United States minister was in sympathy with you or the United States troops and officers?
 A. I can not remember any definite thing, but from Mr. Bowler's remark they must have thought that the United States troops were here for some purpose.
 Q. Was Mr. Bowler with the Queen's party?
 A. He was. He was part of the force in the station house.
 Q. Did you say anything at all indicating an opinion that there was any sympathy on the part of Mr. Stevens or Captain Wiltes with the movement for the new government?
 A. I can not remember. I may possibly have said so.
 Q. Did you think so at that time?
 A. I may have had an impression, but I know nothing about it.
 Q. What was your impression?
 A. My impression was, seeing the troops landed here in this time of excitement and turmoil, that—well, I suppose I might say that they could not stand it any longer—the Americans could not stand it any longer.
 Q. Your impression, then, was that the American minister and Captain Wiltes and the troops were in sympathy with the movement of the white residents here in the pending controversy between them and the Queen?
 A. While we were in the Government building and during the reading of the proclamation, and while we were all extremely nervous as to our personal safety, I asked one of the men with me there, "Will not the American troops support us?" Finally I asked one of the men to go over and ask Lieutenant Swinburne if he was not going to send some one over to protect us? The man returned and said to me, "Captain Wiltes's orders are 'I remain passive.'" That is all I know of what passed between us.
 Q. You speak of your impression. That relates to a particular conversation between two or three persons; but what was your impression as to the matter of whether or not the American minister and the American naval officers were in sympathy with the movement?
 A. I was perfectly nonplussed by not receiving any support. I could not imagine why we were there without being supported by American troops, prior to the troops coming from the armory. We were not supported in any way.
 Q. You had not been in council with the committee of public safety up to that time?
 A. No.
 Q. Well, the troops were—how far off from the reading of the proclamation?
 A. They were over in that yard known as Gilson yard, in the rear of the music hall. They were quartered there.
 Q. Any artillery?
 A. I think they had a small gun—Gatling gun and howitzer.
 Q. Where were they pointed—in what direction?
 A. I can not tell you?
 Q. You were surprised that they did not come into the grounds while the proclamation was being read. Is that what you mean by not supporting you?
 A. I had no definite information what the movement was, as I told you before in a private interview, but knowing that they were on shore I supposed that they would support us, and when they did not support us, and we were there for fifteen or twenty minutes, I was perfectly astonished that we were in that position without any support.
 Q. How far would you say, in yards, it was from where the proclamation was being read to where the nearest troops were?
 A. I think about 75 yards.

Q. Was there a piece of artillery in the street between the building the troops were stationed in and the Government building?
 A. The only piece of firearms of any kind in that street was Oscar White's rifle. We met him as we came around the corner.
 Q. Did you have occasion to look there to see?
 A. We stopped before turning into the side gate to converse with Oscar White, before proceeding into the Government building.
 Q. Are you sure there was not a piece of artillery in that street before the reading of the proclamation?
 A. I can not tell you; but the only gun I could see was Oscar White's. I remarked: "Oscar, this is not so very prudent for you to be here with only one rifle in this street."
 Q. Where did you see the troops first?
 A. I came up from Monolalua by a back street and turned into Nuunana street, one house above Mr. Stevens's, and as I turned the corner I saw the American troops marching up toward Mr. Stevens's house, and directly in front of his house.
 Q. Did you meet Mr. Henry Waterhouse?
 A. I met him there at that time.
 Q. What conversation passed between you?
 A. I think I said: "Henry, what does all this mean?" If I remember rightly now, he said: "It is all up."
 Q. And what did you understand by the expression, "It is all up?"
 A. I understand from that that the American troops had taken possession of the island. That was my impression.
 Q. And was that favorable to the Queen or favorable to the other side, as you understood it?
 A. That was distinctly favorable to the foreign element here.
 Q. You mean the movement for a provisional government?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you see Mr. Stevens that day?
 A. No; I did not see him that day.
 Q. What is Mr. Waterhouse doing now?
 A. Henry? He is a member of the council.
 Q. Was he a member of the committee of public safety?
 A. If I remember right, he was.
 Q. Is that his signature [exhibiting letter of committee of public safety to Mr. Stevens]?
 The letter is as follows:
 HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, Honolulu, January 16, 1893.
 SIR: We, the undersigned, citizens and residents of Honolulu, respectfully represent that in view of recent public events in this Kingdom, culminating in the revolutionary acts of Queen Liliuokalani on Saturday last, the public safety is menaced, and lives and property are in peril, and we appeal to you and to the United States forces at your command for assistance.
 The Queen, with the aid of armed force and accompanied by threats of violence and bloodshed from those with whom she was acting, attempted to proclaim a new constitution, and, while prevented for the time from accomplishing her object, declared publicly that she would only defer her action.
 This conduct and action was upon an occasion and under circumstances which have created general alarm and terror.
 We are unable to protect ourselves without aid, and therefore pray for the protection of the United States forces.
 HENRY E. COOPER,
 F. W. MCCHESENEY,
 W. C. WILDER,
 C. BOLTE,
 A. BROWN,
 WILLIAM O. SMITH,
 HENRY WATERHOUSE,
 THEO. F. LANSING,
 ED. SUHR,
 L. A. THURSTON,
 JOHN EMMELUTH,
 WM. R. CASTLE,
 J. A. MCCANDLESS,
 Citizens' Committee of Safety.
 His Excellency JOHN L. STEVENS,
 American Minister Resident.
 A. Yes, it is.
 Q. Did he seem then pleased or alarmed?
 A. He was very much strained and excited. There was no pleasure in it, but still there was a feeling of security. That was it. He evinced a feeling of security. He was not smiling or joking.
 Q. It was not a joking time. Well, you say there was nothing in the first visit of yours to the station house to indicate any impression on your part that you believed the United States minister or the United States troops, or both, were in sympathy with the movement of the committee of safety?
 A. I was nonplussed. I did suppose they were going to support us.
 Q. You did not say anything to the people in the station house to lead them to suppose you were hopeful of aid?
 A. I can not remember saying it now; I might have done so.
 Q. Did you say it at any place?
 A. I do not remember; I may have said it.
 Q. Was there an effort on the part of those who were moving for a change of government to make that impression?
 A. I think there was.
 Q. Was that impression among the whites generally?
 A. That I can not say. I know there was that impression. Some of the members tried to convey that impression.
 Q. On what occasion?
 A. Many occasions. One particular occasion was while we were in the Government building the day the proclamation was read.
 Q. What was said, and who said it?
 A. Charles Carter said to me, "After you are in possession of the Government building the troops will support you." I think that was his remark.
 Q. Was he on the committee of public safety?
 A. I think so.
 Q. Was he in the party that went up to read the proclamation?
 A. He was present there during the time it was read. Whether he went up with us or not I do not remember.
 Q. It was during that time he made that remark?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Was he an active promoter of the movement?
 A. I think he was.
 Q. Has he any connection with the Government to-day?
 A. No; except he is one of the commissioners in Washington.
 Q. You have been in previous revolutions here?
 A. I have been in the Wilcox revolution. I took quite a prominent part in its suppression. I was one of the ministers at the time.
 Q. You had a conversation with Mr. Carter about the time the proclamation was being read?
 A. Yes.

Q. You were somewhat anxious as to whether or not you would be supported by United States troops?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you express any fear in the presence of Mr. Carter?

A. Well, no man likes to tell he was afraid.

Q. I do not mean in a cowardly sense.

A. Well, with others, I was convinced that we were in a position of danger.

Q. What did Mr. Carter say?

A. He gave me to understand that we would be protected.

Q. By United States troops?

A. Yes; and when we were not protected by them, I wanted to know the reason why.

Q. Do you mean by that that you expected them to march over?

A. I was under the impression that they would.

Q. What did you accomplish by that first visit to the station house—any agreement?

A. We accomplished this—that it was a virtual giving up.

Q. What was said? What did the ministers say?

A. This is my impression of it to-day: That if they had only to contend with the provisional government and the forces of the provisional government, that they would not give up. That was the impression that I gathered from them; that they felt themselves equal to the occasion so far as the provisional government went.

Q. Then having that sort of feeling, what did they propose to do?

A. They proposed to immediately deliver up. Then they went up, four of them, and had a parley with Mr. Dole and the provisional government. They agreed to do so, but said they must go to the Queen and get her to concur with them.

Q. So far as they were concerned they were willing to yield, provided the Queen was?

A. Yes. Then I went along with them to the palace. We all met in the blue room. There were present the Queen, two young princes, the four ministers, Judge Widdeman, Paul Neumann, J. O. Carter, E. O. McFarland, and myself. We went over between 4 and 5 and remained until 6 discussing the situation.

Q. In that conversation you asked for a surrender of the forces; and the ministers advised it?

A. The different ones spoke, and they all recommended it. Each one spoke. At first Judge Widdeman was opposed to it, but he finally changed his mind on the advice of Mr. Neumann. Mr. Neumann advised yielding. Each one advised it.

Q. Was this advice of Neumann and the cabinet based on the idea that the forces of the provisional government?

A. It was the Queen's idea that she could surrender pending a settlement at Washington, and it was on that condition that she gave up. If I remember right, I spoke to her also. I said she could surrender or abdicate under protest.

Q. And that the protest would be considered at a later period at Washington?

A. At a later period.

Q. Did the cabinet, in recommending her to yield to the provisional government, give her to understand that they supposed that the American minister and the United States troops were in sympathy with the provisional government or with the committee of public safety?

A. I know it was the Queen's idea that Mr. Stevens was in sympathy with this movement.

Q. But I am asking now as to what reasons the ministers gave for her acquiescence.

A. It was their idea that it was useless to carry on—that it would be provocative of bloodshed and trouble if she persisted in this matter longer; that it was wiser for her to abdicate under protest and have a hearing at a later time; that the forces against her were too strong.

Q. Did they indicate the United States forces at all in any way?

A. I do not remember their doing so.

Q. Do you know whether or not at that time they were under the impression that the United States forces were in sympathy with the revolution?

A. Beyond an impression, I know nothing definite.

Q. What was the result of this conference with the Queen? What was agreed on?

A. She signed a document surrendering her rights to the provisional government under protest.

Q. Is this protest on page 22, Executive Document No. 76, Fifty-second Congress, second session?

A. Yes. This was written out by Mr. Neumann and J. O. Carter while we were present. She was reluctant to agree to this, but was advised that the whole subject would come up for final consideration at Washington.

Q. Did you at the time consent to recommend this proposition or not?

A. I was there as a member of the provisional government, but I did not advise as to the wording of it. I did tell her that she would have a perfect right to be heard at a later period.

Q. By the United States Government?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself, at that time, before consulting with your colleagues, were favorably impressed with that settlement?

A. Well, it was the only settlement that could be brought about. Personally I was satisfied with it.

Q. And you took that back to the provisional government?

A. Yes.

Q. And they rejected it?

A. It was received and indorsed by Mr. Dole.

Q. Now, was there any message sent to the Queen after that?

A. No.

Q. No message declaring that they would not accept it?

A. No.

Q. The surrender was then made on that proposition?

A. Yes; well, then, she sent down word through Mr. Peterson to Mr. Wilson to deliver up the station house. That wound up the whole affair. We immediately took possession of it. It was not delivered up until after this conference.

Q. Now, how long after that was it before the provisional government was recognized?

A. Mr. Stevens sent Cadet Fringle, his aid, and Captain Wiltsie sent one of his officers to personally examine the building and report if the provisional government was in actual possession of the Government building. That was done that afternoon.

Q. What time?

A. Between 4 and 5.

Q. What time was the interview with the Queen?

A. After 4, and ended at 6.

Q. You took reply?

A. Mr. Neumann took the reply to Mr. Dole.

Q. Now, when this interview was going on between you, the cabinet ministers, and the Queen, it was known then that the Government had been recognized?

A. That the Queen knew it? I do not think she was told. I do not remember of it being spoken of.

Q. Didn't you know it?

A. I think I knew it.

Q. Didn't these ministers know it then?

A. They may have been present. I can not say. The provisional government were all present when Mr. Stevens recognized it as the de facto government.

Q. What I mean is this: Before you took the message of the Queen back—this protest—the provisional government had been recognized?

A. Yes; that is my impression.

Q. Had that been done at the time you left the Government house to go with the cabinet ministers to talk with the Queen?

A. If my memory serves me right, it had.

Q. Did not the cabinet officers know of it at this time?

A. I can not say.

Q. What do you know about the contents of the constitution she wanted to proclaim?

A. It is too long to write down. I can tell you my connection with it.

Q. Have you seen it?

A. No.

TUESDAY, May 2, 1893.

Q. Mr. Damon, at the time of the writing of the protest of the Queen on the 17th day of January, 1893, signed by herself and ministers, had the provisional government been recognized by the American minister, Mr. Stevens?

A. It is my impression that it had been, but I can not say positively.

Q. Would the conversation you had with the Queen on that day aid you in determining that fact?

A. I do not think it would.

Q. In referring to Mrs. Wilson living with the Queen, in a previous part of this statement, did you mean to say that she stayed with her at night?

A. I meant to say that she was with the Queen a great deal of the time—both day and night.

Q. As a companion?

A. Yes; as a personal friend and companion.

Q. But where do you suppose she slept—at the bungalow or palace?

A. My impression is that her quarters were with her husband in the bungalow.

I have carefully read through the foregoing and pronounce it an accurate report of the two interviews between Mr. Blount and myself.

S. M. DAMON.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will ask to have read by the Secretary a letter from Joseph O. Carter with regard to this transaction. He was at that time one of the Queen's privy council. The letter shows conclusively the conspiracy entered into by our minister and the Hawaiian sugar planters.

The Secretary read as follows:

EBBETT HOUSE, Washington, D. C., February 5, 1893.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Concerning the reasons which led Queen Liliuokalani, of Hawaii, to surrender to the revolutionists of January 17, 1893, I can say of my own knowledge that I was sent for to meet the members of the provisional government on that date, between 5 and 6 o'clock p. m.; that upon entering the room where the revolutionists were and asking why I had been sent for, Mr. Dole or some one standing near him replied that a committee was to wait upon the Queen and notify her that she had been deposed, and that it was thought desirable that I should accompany the committee.

Mr. S. M. Damon, later the vice-president of the provisional government, was appointed to bear the message from the said government to the Queen, and I walked over to the palace with him. The Queen was in the blue room with her ministers and other friends. Mr. Damon delivered the message and assured the Queen that she could note a protest, and that her protest would be sent to Washington for consideration and final action.

Because of Mr. Damon's assurance, Judge Widdeman and I advised the Queen to yield. I should state that Judge Widdeman and I were members of the Queen's privy council. The Queen was not disposed to surrender her throne, but after further consulting with her ministers and other friends she decided to do so, feeling confident that the United States Government would not approve of the action of Minister Stevens and Captain Wiltsie, of the U. S. S. Boston.

To influence the Queen Judge Widdeman recalled the action of the British Admiral Thomas, who restored the flag and sovereignty of Hawaii to Kamehameha III, after the outrage committed by Lord George Paulet in 1843; and I assured the Queen that the Government of the United States would, in my opinion, act in the same way. The Queen then signed the following protest:

"I, Liliuokalani, by the grace of God and under the constitution of the Hawaiian Kingdom, Queen, do hereby solemnly protest against any and all acts done against myself and the constitutional Government of the Hawaiian Kingdom by certain persons claiming to have established a provisional government of and for this Kingdom.

"That I yield to the superior force of the United States of America, whose minister plenipotentiary, His Excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the said provisional government.

"Now, to avoid any collision of armed forces and perhaps the loss of life, I do, under this protest and impelled by said force, yield my authority until such time as the Government of the United States shall, upon the facts being presented to it, undo the action of its representatives and reinstate me in the authority which I claim as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.

"Done at Honolulu this 17th day of January, A. D. 1893.

"LILIUOKALANI, R.

"SAMUEL PARKER,

"Minister of Foreign Affairs.

"WM. H. CORNWELL,

"Minister of Finance.

"JOHN F. COLBURN,

"Minister of the Interior.

"A. P. PETERSON,

"Attorney-General."

To support what I have said about Mr. Damon's action, I refer you to his statement to Mr. Blount, included in the President's message to Congress dated December 18, 1893, which reads as follows:

Q. What was the result of this conference with the Queen? What was agreed on?

A. She signed a document surrendering her rights to the provisional government under protest.

Q. Is this the protest on page 22, Executive Document No. 76, Fifty-second Congress, second session?

A. Yes. This was written out by Mr. Neumann and J. O. Carter while we were present. She was reluctant to agree to this, but was advised that the whole subject would come up for final consideration at Washington.

Q. Did you at the time consent to recommend this proposition or not?
A. I was there as a member of the provisional government, but I did not advise as to the wording of it. I did tell her that she would have a perfect right to be heard at a later period.

Q. By the United States Government?

A. Yes.

Q. You yourself at that time, before consulting with your colleagues, were favorably impressed with that settlement?

A. Well, it was the only settlement that could be brought about. Personally I was satisfied with it.

Q. And you took that back to the provisional government?

A. Yes.

Q. And they rejected it?

A. It was received and indorsed by Mr. Dole.

Q. Now, was there any message sent to the Queen after that?

A. No.

Q. No message declaring that they would not accept it?

A. No.

Q. The surrender was then made on that proposition?

A. Yes. Well, then she sent down word through Mr. Peterson to Mr. Wilson to deliver up the station house. That wound up the whole affair. We immediately took possession of it. It was not delivered up until after this conference.

I have the honor to remain, very truly, yours,

J. O. CARTER.

Hon. B. F. PETTIGREW,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It appears, then, Mr. President, that after the recognition of this so-called government, before the surrender of the Queen or the armed forces which she had, a delegation was sent to her and she surrendered to the armed forces of the United States, saying:

I yield to the superior force of the United States of America, whose minister plenipotentiary, His Excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the said provisional government.

To avoid collision and bloodshed, she submitted the question to the Government at Washington, surrendering to the armed forces of the United States, surrendering after Stevens had recognized this so-called government, surrendering because she was told that the Government of the United States, the Government, those people, she had always been taught to reverence and respect, would do justice and restore her to the throne, and they cited a precedent in Hawaiian history as a justification for this claim:

On the 10th of February, 1843, the British frigate Carysfort, commanded by Lord George Paulet, arrived at Honolulu and showed displeasure by withholding the usual salutes.

He proceeded at once to take the King prisoner and make such demands upon him that he surrendered his crown on condition that the question should be submitted to the British Government. This History of the Hawaiian People says:

Under these circumstances, the King resolved to bear it no longer. "I will not die piecemeal," said he: "they may cut off my head at once. Let them take what they please; I will give no more."

Dr. Judd—

He was an American—advised him to forestall the intended seizure of the islands by a temporary cession to Lord Paulet, pending an appeal to the British Government. The event proved the wisdom of this advice.

On the next day the subject was discussed by the King and his council, and preliminaries were arranged with Lord Paulet for the cession. On the morning of the 25th the King and premier signed a provisional cession of the islands to Lord George Paulet, "subject to the decision of the British Government after the receipt of full information from both parties."

At 3 o'clock p. m., February 25, the King, standing on the ramparts of the fort, read a brief and eloquent address to his people.

Then they submitted the question to Great Britain, and the English Government promptly restored the King to his throne, refusing to accept a usurpation of that sort. So in this case the Queen, having this incident of history referred to, said:

I, Liliuokalani, by the grace of God and under the constitution of the Hawaiian Kingdom, Queen, do hereby solemnly protest against any and all acts done against myself and the constitutional Government of the Hawaiian Kingdom by certain persons claiming to have established a provisional government of and for this Kingdom.

That I yield to the superior force of the United States of America, whose minister plenipotentiary, His Excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the said provisional government.

Now, to avoid any collision of armed forces and perhaps the loss of life, I do, under this protest, and impelled by said force, yield my authority until such time as the Government of the United States shall, upon the facts being presented to it, undo the action of its representatives and reinstate me in the authority which I claim as the constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian Islands.

Done at Honolulu this 17th day of January, A. D. 1893.

LILIUOKALANI, R.
SAMUEL PARKER,
Minister of Foreign Affairs.
WM. H. CORNWELL,
Minister of Finance.
JNO. F. COLBURN,
Minister of the Interior.
A. P. PETERSON,
Attorney-General.

This woman Liliuokalani is now in this city and has been for months, waiting for this Government to do justice. She has watched the disgraceful drama and been subjected to the sarcasm of the Senator from Massachusetts. She has been slandered and abused, and all this to justify robbing her of the throne and her people of their country.

Are we worse than Great Britain? When Kamehameha in 1843 surrendered and ceded the islands to the British admiral because he could not resist the force of an armed ship of war, the English Government promptly repudiated the act and restored him to the throne; and when Queen Liliuokalani, deprived of her authority by the armed forces of the United States, proposed to submit the question to this Government, she had good reason to suppose that the great Republic would preserve its honor and its dignity among the nations of the world and restore her to her throne. Yet, Mr. President, refusing to examine these facts, Senators propose to ratify this infamy by taking title, against the will of the inhabitants of that country, and to annex it as a part of the United States. This history proceeds:

A proclamation was issued by Admiral Thomas, in which he declared, in the name of his sovereign, that he did not accept of the provisional cession of the Hawaiian Islands, and that "Her Majesty sincerely desires King Kamehameha III to be treated as an independent sovereign, leaving the administration of justice in his own hands."

Then a new treaty was made, and the King was again placed upon the throne. Liliuokalani had reason to suppose that this Government would be as honorable as was Great Britain. For my part, it seems to me that we pay an awful price, independent of all other questions, independent of the sugar duty, independent of the defense of these islands, which must cost vast sums of money; independent of the assumption of debt, independent of the assumption of vast governmental responsibilities—it seems to me we pay a terrible price for this violation of national honor, in establishing a precedent in our history which must be a black page forever, a blot upon our memory as a people; and this is sufficient in itself to make us refuse to annex these islands, at least without submitting the question to a vote of the people of that country.

It is quite important to us to ascertain the date when Mr. Stevens recognized this new government. The chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, excellent international lawyer that he is, well knew that no precedent could be found for recognizing the revolutionary government until they were in possession and control of the Government, commanding and having charge of its affairs; and if Mr. Stevens recognized the government while the Queen yet had a large armed force and was in possession of all the arms, before the revolutionists had taken possession of anything or performed any of the functions of government, his recognition was a violation of the rights of the Government to which he was sent and ought to be repudiated by this Government. Stevens's own statement with regard to it is sufficient to condemn him, but I will pass that over, as the official record is sufficient. The documents themselves show conclusively that the new government was recognized when it did not exist.

It is important to know whether it was before or after the protest which I have read by the Queen was signed. If it was before, then the United States overthrew the Hawaiian Government. The importance of this question was recognized by our diplomats. Mr. Foster, then Secretary of State, in a letter to President Harrison, said:

At the time the provisional government took possession of the Government buildings no troops or officers of the United States were present or took any part whatever in the proceedings. No public recognition was accorded to the provisional government by the United States minister until after the Queen's abdication and when they were in effective possession of the Government buildings, the archives, the treasury, the barracks, the police station, and all the potential machinery of the Government.

That is absolutely untrue.

No public recognition was accorded to the provisional government by the United States minister until after the Queen's abdication.

We will see whether or not that is true. The record is sufficient, and I will reach it shortly.

The provisional government of the Hawaiian Islands is, by all usual and proper tests, in the sole and supreme possession of power and in control of all the resources of the Hawaiian nation, not only through the Queen's formal submission, but through its possession of all the armed forces, arms and ammunition, public offices, and administration of law, unopposed by any adherents of the late government.

The commission which was sent here to urge annexation, on February 11, 1893, in reply to the Queen's protest, said:

At the time the provisional government took possession of the Government buildings, no American troops or officers were present or took part in such proceedings in any manner whatever.

They were 75 yards in the street, simply commanding the Government building and the place where these conspirators read their proclamation.

No public recognition was accorded the provisional government by the American minister until they were in possession of the Government buildings, the archives, and the treasury, supported by several hundred armed men, and after the abdication by the Queen and the surrender to the provisional government of her forces.

That was signed by Thurston, Wilder, Castle, and Carter. They knew, every one of them, when they signed it, that they were signing their names to an unqualified falsehood. They knew the Queen had not surrendered when the Government was recognized. They knew that she made the protest after their Government, so called, was recognized, and yet they thought to rush through annexation in the last days of Harrison's Administration, and do it upon that bold falsehood. They stand convicted of willful and intentional lying for the purpose of deceiving the President of the United States and the Senate of the United States. Yet these are the men who are being extolled as models of virtue, integrity, and honesty, and that is the character of the men who overthrew that Government and who now are trying to annex the islands to the United States.

We will go back to the afternoon of January 17, 1893. The conspirators had read their proclamation in front of the Government building, within 75 yards of the line of marines armed with rifles and gating guns, and they at once sent the following communication to Minister Stevens, which I will read:

HONOLULU, HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, January 17, 1893.

SIR: The undersigned, members of the executive and advisory councils of the provisional government—

I hope Senators have noticed who elected this advisory council—self-constituted. They got together in Smith's office and they called themselves the advisory council of the provisional government—this day established in Hawaii, hereby state to you that for the reasons set forth in the proclamation this day issued, a copy of which is herewith inclosed for your consideration, the Hawaiian monarchy has been abrogated and a provisional government established in accordance with the said above-mentioned proclamation.

Such provisional government has been proclaimed, is now in possession of the Government departmental buildings, the archives, and the treasury, and is in control of the city. We hereby request that you will, on behalf of the United States of America, recognize it as the existing de facto Government of the Hawaiian Islands, and afford to it the moral support of your Government, and, if necessary, the support of American troops to assist in preserving the public peace.

We have the honor to remain your obedient servants,

SANFORD B. DOLE.	J. A. McCANDLESS.
J. A. KING.	ANDREW BROWN.
P. C. JONES.	JAS. F. MORGAN.
WILLIAM O. SMITH.	HENRY WATERHOUSE.
S. M. DAWSON.	E. D. TENNEY.
JOHN EMMELUTH.	F. J. WILHELM.
F. W. McCHESNEY.	W. G. ASHLEY.
W. C. WILDER.	C. BOLTE.

His Excellency JOHN L. STEVENS,
United States Minister Resident.

Let us see. Mr. Stevens sent the following reply:

UNITED STATES LEGATION,
Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, January 17, 1893.

A provisional government having been duly constituted in place of the recent government of Queen Liliuokalani, and said provisional government being in full possession of the Government buildings, the archives, and the treasury, and in full control of the capital of the Hawaiian Islands, I hereby recognize said provisional government as the de facto Government of the Hawaiian Islands.

JOHN L. STEVENS, Envoy, etc.

I have read now the notice of this so-called government to the American minister that they had read their proclamation and were in possession of the city and the Government buildings, but there was no statement that they were in possession of the arms, the police station, or the armory, or the armed forces. I have read the reply of the American minister, in which he indicated nothing of the sort. The Queen had not surrendered. Now I will read Dole's letter, dated on the same day.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from South Dakota what I regard as a very important question at this point. It has been repeatedly asserted, and I have never heard it denied, that the overturning of the native government in the Hawaiian Islands was due to a conspiracy existing among Dole and his followers and certain American interests, and that Stevens was the instrument chosen to assist in that overthrow. I should like to ask the Senator if he finds, or has found, in his reading or in any other way, anything bearing out that conclusion?

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is exactly what I am showing. It is all I have attempted to show to-day, and I have followed step by step this conspiracy by which the Government was overthrown. The Senator has been unfortunate in not listening to me.

Mr. ALLEN. I admit it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. There is not a scintilla of evidence to prove or show anything else but that. Certain American sugar planters, certain sons of missionaries who were residents and citizens of the Hawaiian Islands, conspired together to overthrow that Government, and that they did it solely and alone, with the assistance of the marines of the United States, and that the Queen surrendered to the armed forces of the United States has been proved. Then I showed what took place from the moment they read the proclamation, not having an armed man, and I put Mr. Damon's testimony in the RECORD. Mr. Damon testified that when they had nearly finished reading the proclamation a few armed men appeared, fifteen, I think, and that shortly after they had finished reading sixty appeared. Those were the revolutionary soldiers who were to sustain and support the Government.

The proclamation was read in front of the Government building, within 75 yards of United States marines, and the only armed force in sight were the armed men landed from our own ship in the harbor of Honolulu. The minute they read the proclamation Stevens recognized the new Government, and then their emissaries came here and told the Senate and told the President that he did not recognize this new Government until the Queen had surrendered her armed forces and abdicated and given up her Government. I say that he recognized that Government as soon as the proclamation was read, before the Queen had surrendered at all, and I will prove it by Dole's own letter. What are the facts?

GOVERNMENT BUILDING, Honolulu, January 17, 1893.

His Excellency JOHN L. STEVENS.

United States Minister Resident.

SIR: I acknowledge receipt of your valued communication of this day, recognizing the Hawaiian provisional government, and express deep appreciation of the same.

Now notice what follows:

We have conferred with the ministers of the late government, and have made demand upon the marshal to surrender the station house. We are not actually yet in possession of the station house; but as night is approaching and our forces may be insufficient to maintain order, we request the immediate support of the United States forces, and would request that the commander of the United States forces take command of our military forces, so that they may act together for the protection of the city.

Respectfully, yours,

SANFORD B. DOLE,
Chairman Executive Council.

I will also read a document signed by the cabinet of the Queen—

Mr. CAFFERY. Before the Senator leaves this part of the subject, I desire to ask him whether there is not evidence in the record that Minister Stevens himself stated the period at which he received the protest of the Queen's Government against the recognition of the Provisional Government?

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is just what I am going to read. The Queen's cabinet, before she surrendered her forces, sent the following communication to Mr. Stevens:

DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Honolulu, January 17, 1893.

SIR: Her Hawaiian Majesty's Government, having been informed that certain persons to them unknown have issued proclamation declaring a provisional government to exist in opposition to Her Majesty's Government, and having pretended to depose the Queen, her cabinet and marshal, and that certain treasonable persons at present occupy the Government building in Honolulu with an armed force, and pretending that your excellency, on behalf of the United States of America, has recognized such provisional government. Her Majesty's cabinet asks respectfully: Has your excellency recognized said provisional government? And if not, Her Majesty's Government under the above existing circumstances respectfully requests the assistance of your Government in preserving the peace of the country.

We have the honor to be your excellency's obedient servants,

SAMUEL PARKER,
Minister Foreign Affairs.
WM. H. CORNWELL,
Minister of Finance.
JOHN F. COLBURN,
Minister of the Interior.
A. P. PETERSON,
Attorney-General.

His Excellency JOHN L. STEVENS,
Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, etc.

And yet they say to us that the Queen had surrendered before Stevens recognized this government. I also read Mr. Stevens's reply:

UNITED STATES LEGATION,
Honolulu, January 17, 1893.

About 4 to 5 p. m. of this date—I am not certain of the precise time—the note on file from the four ministers of the deposed Queen, inquiring if I had recognized the provisional government, came to my hands while I was lying sick on the couch. Not far from 5 p. m.—I did not think to look at my watch—I addressed a short note to Hon. Samuel Parker, Hon. William H. Cornwell, Hon. John F. Colburn, and Hon. A. P. Peterson, no longer regarding them as ministers, informing them that I had recognized the provisional government.

JOHN L. STEVENS,
United States Minister.

What more conclusive proof can be had? Senators say this record has been answered. It has not been answered. There has never been any answer or defense to this irregular, dishonest, treasonable act, this overthrow of the Government by the American minister and the American marines.

This communication was received at the station house and read by all of the ministers and by a number of other persons.

After this, Mr. Samuel M. Damon, the vice-president of the provisional government, and Mr. Bolte, a member of the advisory council, came to the station house and gave information of the proclamation and asked for the delivery up of the station house, the former urging that the government had been recognized by the American minister, and that any struggle would cause useless bloodshed.

The marshal declared that he was able to cope with the forces of the provisional government and those of the United States successfully, if the latter interfered, and that he would not surrender except by the written order of the Queen.

Then the Queen made her protest, surrendered to the superior force of the United States, and submitted the question to our Government at Washington. Now, I submit, in the face of that undisputed record, we tarnish the honor of this nation if we take title to that country without submitting the question to a vote of the people.

The Queen had when she surrendered about 450 troops, and she was induced to surrender by the fact that an English admiral had overturned the Government of the islands once before, and it had been submitted to the English Government, and even piratical England had too much honor to take title to a country under such a proceeding. Yet it is proposed that the greatest, freest, grandest Government in the world shall take title to a land against the will of its inhabitants from the puppets we have set up. You can not get away from the record, and you can not answer it. Nobody has tried to answer it in this debate or in secret session, and until you do answer it you indorse dishonor.

On January 31, thirteen days after the revolution, Dole wrote Mr. Stevens that his government could not maintain itself, and asked for the protection of the United States troops. Stevens complied, and our flag was put up over the public buildings, and remained up until April 1, 1893, when Mr. Blount ordered it taken down. If there was a government that had been able to create and establish itself and to maintain itself with an armed force, why is it that thirteen days afterwards they begged of Mr. Stevens, admitting their impotency to maintain their government, to again land the troops of the United States and put the United States flag upon the buildings? That was done on the 31st of January, and it remained there sixty days. The flag went up in dishonor. When it was raised under these circumstances, it was a disgrace to the Republic.

During the sixty days while our flag remained upon this building the provisional government brought in foreign mercenaries, brought in men from San Francisco, collected together an armed force, gathered together every gun upon all the islands, passed the strictest penal laws against the importation of guns, made it a criminal and penal offense to have a gun. When I was in Honolulu last summer, no person could buy a gun in those islands without a license and no man could deal in guns without a license. Every gun was registered. The so-called republic was surrounded by armed men. Back and forth in front of the public buildings and the public offices marched men armed with Winchester rifles.

They proceeded rapidly to enact laws, this provisional government, not a legislative body, but nineteen men, self-constituted, supported by our armed forces, for they had added a few more to their number and now had nineteen. They enacted that no one should be eligible to be a senator, or representative, or a juror until he should have taken and subscribed to the following oath or affirmation:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm), in the presence of Almighty God, that I will support the constitution, laws, and Government of the Republic of Hawaii; and will not, either directly or indirectly, encourage or assist in the restoration or establishment of a monarchical form of government in the Hawaiian Islands.

On the 31st an act concerning seditious offenses was published. This law made it an offense to speak, write, or print anything which might bring hatred or contempt against the Government. On the same day was published a law prohibiting the importation of firearms and ammunition without first obtaining the permission of the Government. On the same day an act relating to contempts became law: "Any person who shall publish any false report of the proceedings of said council, or insulting comment upon the same," etc., was liable to imprisonment for thirty days. On the 30th an order from military headquarters requiring all citizens to report within three days all arms in their possession was published.

The new government found it necessary to keep a strong guard at the Government building, at the palace, the barracks, and the police station. They had pickets stationed in the neighborhood of the Government building.

So they succeeded in getting possession of the arms, preventing the importation of arms, and with the assistance of the United States battle ship, which has remained in that harbor ever since—for the moment one leaves another takes its place—these men have been able to maintain themselves in power, possessing the only guns, the only cannon, and the only means of resistance.

What have they done? They have set up a republic, so we are told. For nearly a year after this government was created they had no constitution. They proceeded themselves—these nineteen men—to enact laws—the most stringent, the most oppressive laws. But after a year they concluded to organize the Republic of Hawaii, and that is the Government with which we are dealing to-day. Such a republic was never known before in the history of the world. They called an election for a constitutional convention, and they provided that the people who would take an oath to support their Government might elect 18 delegates to a constitutional convention, and they constituted themselves members of it without any election—19 of them—making the election of delegates absolutely a farce.

That is the constitution under which they claim the right to cede their country to the United States. At that election, although there were 13,593 registered voters in 1890, 4,477 were registered to vote for the 18 members of the constitutional convention, who were to sit with the 19 members of the existing, self-constituted government and frame a constitution for the Republic of Hawaii. Yes, one-third of the voters, as the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] says, voted to elect 18 members to sit with 19 members of the self-constituted government. Of course it was a farce. Of course the people had no voice in the constitution and no power or chance to say anything about it whatever.

Now, what kind of a constitution did they adopt? It provides for an oligarchy. It provides that the Government shall consist of Mr. Dole as President—he is named in the constitution—who shall hold his office until the year 1900, a Senate of 15 members and a House of Representatives of 15 members, and the Senate and House sitting together shall elect Mr. Dole's successor President after the year 1900, but that no successor can be elected unless he gets a majority of the Senate; and if no successor is elected, Dole continues to hold.

ARTICLE 23.—First President.

Sanford Ballard Dole is hereby declared to be the President of the Republic of Hawaii, to hold office until and including the 31st day of December, 1900, and thereafter until a successor shall have been duly elected and qualified.

ARTICLE 24.—Election of President.

SEC. 1. On the third Wednesday of September, 1900, and on the third Wednesday of September in every sixth year thereafter, the Legislature shall meet to elect a President for a term of six years, to begin with the 1st day of January of the year following.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of such election the Senate and House of Representatives shall sit together.

The election shall be by ballot, and the person receiving a majority vote of all the elective members to which the Legislature is entitled, which majority shall include a majority of all the senators, shall be President for the ensuing term, or for the unexpired portion of such term in case no person shall have been elected prior to the first day of such term.

SEC. 3. If the Legislature shall fail to elect a President before the 1st day of January following the date when the Legislature is required to meet for such election, the President whose term has then expired or the minister who is acting as President shall continue to be or act as President until his successor is elected and qualified; but such failure to elect shall in no case discharge the Legislature from their duty to immediately proceed with such election.

Then they provide that no one can be a senator without the most rigid property qualification, possessing property worth several thousand dollars.

ARTICLE 50.—Qualifications of senators.

In order to be eligible to election as a senator, a person shall—
Be a male citizen of the Republic;
Have attained the age of thirty years;
Be able understandingly to speak, read, and write the English or Hawaiian language;

Have resided in the Hawaiian Islands not less than three years;
Be the owner, in his own right, of property in the Republic of the value of not less than $3,000 over and above all incumbrances; or have been in the receipt of a money income of not less than $1,200 during the year immediately preceding the date of the election, for the proof of which he may be required to produce original accounts of the receipt of such income.

And no person can vote for a senator unless he is worth $3,000 in personal property or $1,500 of real estate, according to the last assessment for taxation, or has an income of $600 a year.

ARTICLE 70.—Qualifications of voters for senators.

In order to be eligible to vote for senators a person must possess all the qualifications and be subject to all the conditions required by this constitution of voters for representatives, and, in addition thereto, he shall own and be possessed in his own right of real property in the Republic of the value of not less than $1,500 over and above all incumbrances, and upon which legal taxes shall have been paid on that valuation for the year next preceding the one in which such person offers to register; or personal property of the value of not less than $3,000 over and above all incumbrances; or shall have actually received a money income of not less than $600 during the year next preceding the 1st day of April next preceding the date of each registration; for the proof of which he may be required to produce original accounts of the receipt of such income.

They shut out, then, everybody in the Hawaiian Islands from the right of suffrage except the sugar planters. They made a qualification of voting for senators that would disfranchise 12,000,000 of the voters of the United States. I think many more. I think it would disfranchise 13,000,000 out of our 14,000,000 voters if we had the same provision.

They have a property qualification which leaves no one to vote for senators unless he is engaged in the chief industry of the island which has been built up by remitted duties. See how ingenious it all was. They had a council of state, five of whom were to be selected by the President, five by the Senate, and five by the House of Representatives; and this very constitution provides that a majority of the council can do business. Then it provides that they can sit and make laws and make appropriations when the Legislature is not in session, and that their laws and their acts and their appropriations shall hold good until the last day of the session of the Legislature.

Then we have what? A Senate and a President, who are the Government, and anybody can vote for a member of the House of Representatives who was born in Hawaii, or is a naturalized citizen and has taken an oath to favor annexation to the United States. But the House of Representatives amounts to nothing. It cuts no figure whatsoever, because the Government council, one-third of whom are appointed by the President and one-third by the Senate, can do business when the Legislature is not in session, and the House has no voice in the selection of a President, because nobody can be elected unless he gets 8 votes in the Senate. So the Senate elected by the sugar planters could elect Dole's successor, or Dole could continue on forever, and the people of Hawaii have no voice in the Government whatever.

They put into the constitution a provision for a union, commercial or political, with the United States. Did that come from the people? They had no voice in it. As I have shown, the constitution was not indorsed by the people or submitted to the people. After this self-constituted convention had adopted that constitution, they declared it the constitution of the Republic of Hawaii, and never submitted it to a vote at all, and it never has been submitted. And yet from this gang of sugar-raising conspirators we propose to take title to those islands. There is no black page on the history of England in the robbery and plunder of the nations of the world as infamous as our own will be if we take title to those islands under these circumstances.

We must submit this question to a vote of the people of those islands if we would escape dishonor. Although there were 13,583 registered voters in 1890, and in 1894 4,477, in 1896, under the Republic of Hawaii, at the first election under this constitution, there were but 3,195 actual voters, and in 1897, under the same Republic, there were but 2,687 voters for representatives. The fact of the matter is that the people have gradually become disgusted with that Government. They have found that they have no voice in it, and they have ceased to take an interest in it. They know it is maintained by the armed force of the United States, and they are uneasy.

If you would submit the question whether those islands should be annexed to the United States to the people of that country—to the 13,000 voters—it is very doubtful if you could get 2,687 votes in favor of it. After a careful investigation of the subject, I do not believe a majority of the white residents of those islands are in favor of annexation. I know that there are none of the natives in favor of it. While we have heard the missionaries eulogize, certainly we can eulogize them but little, unless we can eulogize their work. The natives of Hawaii can read and write the English language. A greater percentage of the people can read and write than in nearly a majority of the American States.

Mr. CAFFERY. Will the Senator from South Dakota allow me to ask him if it is not stated by Mr. Thurston that there is no illiteracy among the Hawaiians; that they can all read and write?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Very nearly. The percentage is very large indeed. I found no native—and I talked with every one I could get a chance to talk to—who was in favor of annexation. At a meeting at Hilo, where 600 natives gathered in a church, I asked those who signed the protest against the annexation of the islands to the United States—the protest which was sent on here and which we have in the archives of the Committee on Foreign Relations, a protest signed by 20,000 of those people—I asked those who had signed that protest themselves to rise to their feet, and every person in that church at once rose to his feet, knowing exactly what they had done.

I talked with officers of the Government who have been given places that these conspirators told me were in favor of annexation. When I reached them alone they would say, "We are holding an official position; we have to say publicly that we are in favor of annexation; but we are not. We love our country and we love our flag; and while we respect and regard the United States with the highest consideration, we are as desirous of maintaining our national existence, as desirous that our flag shall remain in the sky, as you are that the United States shall continue a government and maintain its flag."

I say under these circumstances, Mr. President, owing to the protest which the Queen sent here, owing to the fact that we overthrew the Government by the armed forces of the United States, owing to the fact that the people with whom we are treating for the sovereignty of that country are but our puppets maintained by us, owing to the fact that these facts have never been disputed or denied with any show of proof, the least we can do is to submit this question to a vote of the people of Hawaii.

Will Senators vote to take this title tainted by fraud? Will Senators vote to ratify this robber revolution brought about by us and refuse to consult the people most interested? If they will, it is an astonishing thing. If they will, then you can well suppose that we will go on with our career of conquest regardless of the honor of our flag and the honor of our name. We will go on to acquire other lands. There will be no stopping with this acquisition.

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] says that this is wrong; that it is a sin; that it is wicked; but the islands are so little that if we will forgive him for taking that country, he will sin no more; he will be virtuous and resist a like crime if it involves a larger acquisition of territory. But, Mr. President, the first step in wrongdoing is the dangerous step. If we set the example, regardless of honor, of acquiring title to a territory from puppets that we have set up, what will we not do? The Philippines next, with its 7,000,000 Asiatics; Puerto Rico and Cuba must come in, and then the conquest of South America.

Tramp the course that has caused the death of every republic in the past, and see our flag go down in misery and in shame. The glory of this Republic has been that we have offered an asylum to the oppressed and a hope to mankind which has been followed wherever freedom has burst into bloom throughout the world. Shall we stain that record? Shall we abandon that history? Shall we be one of the robber nations of the world, and have it said of our flag, as Labouchere, in the London Truth, said of the flag of England?—

WHERE IS THE FLAG OF ENGLAND?

Let the winds of the world make answer!

North, south, east, west—

Where'er there is wealth to covet

Or land to be possessed;

Where'er are savage nations

To coddle, coerce, or scare,

You may look for the vaunted emblem—

The flag of England is there.

Aye, it waves o'er the blazing hovel

Whence its African victims fly,

To be shot by explosive bullets

Or wretchedly starve and die,

Or where the beachcomber hammers

The isles of the southern sea,

From the peak of his hellish vessel

The English flag flies free.

The Maori, full of hate, cursed it

With his fleeting, dying breath,

And the Arab hath hissed his curses

As he spat at its folds in death.

The hapless fellah hath feared it

On Tel el Kibir's parched plain,

And the blood of the Zulu hath stained it

With a deep, indelible stain.

It has floated o'er scenes of pillage

And flaunted o'er deeds of shame;

It has waved o'er the fell marauder,

As he ravished with sword and flame;

It has looked on ruthless slaughter

And assassination, dire and grim,

And has heard the shrieks of its victims

Drown even the jingo hymn.

Where is the flag of England?

Seek the land where the natives rot,

And decay and assured extinction

Must soon be the people's lot.

Go to the once fair islands

Where disease and death are rife,

And the greed of a colossal commerce

Now fattens on human life.

Where is the flag of England?

Go sail where rich galleons come

With their shoddy and loaded cotton,

And beer and Bibles and rum.

Seek the land where brute force hath triumphed

And hypocrisy hath its lair,

And your question will thus be answered—

For the flag of England is there.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I take it for granted that no man who may cast his vote for the joint resolution now before the Senate will ever be permitted by the American people to say that he is not in favor of imperialism and a policy of colonial acquisition, for I think it will be well understood in all circles that the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands is the first act in the drama of colonization that is to go on until we have made a portion of our country the Philippine Islands, amounting to 1,400 in number, Cuba, Puerto Rico, and every little dimple in either the Atlantic or Pacific Ocean that may force its head above the surface of the water.

I was very much interested yesterday in the remarks of the venerable Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] when he portrayed the consequences of a colonial policy. I fully agreed with him when he said that he regarded this as the greatest question that has ever been presented to the American people during the existence of this Republic. Slavery, a very important and a very dangerous question, was never fraught with as much danger to the institutions of this country as the proposed policy of colonization.

We have two courses open to us. We have the plain, open, and beaten pathway of a purely domestic policy, in which we have developed from a little over 3,000,000 scattered along the Eastern seaboard to 75,000,000 people extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, a nation whose commerce and whose wealth stagger the world. We can pursue that policy in the future, if we will, with absolute safety; and in doing so we would obey the teachings of the founders of the Republic, for there is not one statesman in all the history of our country, from the time of Washington to the present moment, who has not studiously and sedulously inculcated the thought that national prosperity and national safety are alone to be found in the pursuit of a domestic policy. Under such a policy we can grow to be the greatest nation on earth, and grow in peace and in safety. We can reach the time before many years when this nation can stand defiantly in the face of the combined power of Europe.

But if we are so unwise as to abandon that course and to decline to pursue that policy and enter upon a period or a policy of imperialism we shall be cast upon seas of uncertainty and danger to the Republic that may, and will, in my judgment, seriously impair our usefulness to our own people if not eventually destroy the Government itself.

Why are we asked to pursue this dangerous course? Not that anything is to be gained to the United States by it, for I have listened patiently hoping and expecting that in the multiplicity of what has been said or would be said in favor of the joint resolution some reason of this kind would be offered for annexation. What is to be gained to the American people by entering upon this dangerous policy of annexation? If the lips of Senators in favor of annexation are not hermetically sealed, I ask any one of them to suggest even the slightest gain to the people of the United States by such a course.

It has been said, it is true, that the Hawaiian Islands are necessary to us for defensive purposes. But, Mr. President, a child capable of locating the Hawaiian Islands on the maps would be convinced at a glance that the statement is untrue. They have no significance whatever and not the slightest value for defensive purposes. They will only add to the burden of our country in defending its coast, as I shall show further along.

We have at this time a main coast line as follows: The Atlantic coast, from Quoddy Head to Cape Florida, 2,043 miles; the Gulf coast, 1,852 miles; the Pacific coast, 1,537 miles; the Alaskan coast, 4,750 miles, or a total coast line of 10,202 miles.

What tremendous sums of money have been spent by the United States in fortifying this coast line! There is not a government in existence to-day, and there never was one in ancient times, possessing the coast line that the United States possesses. We have spent hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars, money wrung from the taxpayers of the country, in preparing adequate coast defenses. And yet it is of daily occurrence that we hear in this Chamber some gentleman suggesting that our coast is not adequately defended and we must appropriate more money for that purpose. A Senator from Washington who was with us a year or so ago secured a favorable report on a bill to appropriate $100,000,000 of additional money for coast defenses, and, mark you, Mr. President, that was but a step in a system of coast defenses that would eventuate in hundreds of millions to follow.

Yet, Mr. President, we are about to engage in a policy that will increase the coast line of the nation from 10,202 miles to 25,045 miles, for I assume, as I said, that the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands is to be followed by the annexation of the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and Cuba at least; and that any man who advocates or votes for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands will be estopped from denying the applicability of his reasoning or doctrine to the other islands. So when that is done we shall find that we have a coast line of islands amounting to 13,843 miles, or 3,641 miles more than the coast line of the United States proper.

Will any gentleman, under such circumstances, pretend that it will not cost this Government at least $170,000,000 to construct adequate coast defenses upon those islands and fortify seventeen different ports to be found in them? That is a low estimate, and that money must come not from the inhabitants of the islands themselves, but from the people of the United States.

Then, Mr. President, what follows? Our standing army must be increased from its present small number to at least 200,000 men to occupy the islands and to keep the natives in subjection. According to accurate estimates, every one of the soldiers will cost the Government a thousand dollars annually. There are $370,000,000 of additional money to be wrung from the people of this country by taxation.

Then, sir, it is well known that to annex those islands will cause an increase of the Navy. Our Navy under such circumstances will have to be equal in fighting power to the navy of the most powerful nation on earth and its allies. No man can tell how much that will cost. I put it at a minimum when I say it will cost $100,000,000. There will be $470,000,000 of money to be wrung from the farmers and the industrial classes of this country without the slightest thing in return to them for this enormous outlay.

Then, Mr. President, come the hundreds of thousands of dollars, or I should say the millions of dollars, we are to expend in arming and equipping this additional navy and these fortifications, and the transportation of soldiers, the cost of repairing the vessels, and all of the millions of incidental charges for the maintenance of such a navy and such an army. And that is not to come to-day alone, but, sir, it is to come next year and the next and the next throughout all the ages or the years this Government may stand.

Is this a light matter, to be treated in silent contempt by the other side, who are urging it along and complaining because some of us see fit to debate it? Are we willing to saddle this tremendous debt and burden on the people of the United States, not now alone, but for all time, without a thorough and a candid analysis before casting our votes? It is a very easy thing when a skillful man desires to seize something as an excuse for his vote to do so; and I regret to say that it is sometimes a very easy thing for a man to satisfy his conscience and reconcile his preconceived position with consistency and duty. We declared less than two months ago in speaking of one of these islands:

That the United States hereby disclaims any disposition or intention to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island—

Speaking of Cuba—

except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination, when that is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people.

Do the Islands of Hawaii occupy any different position than does Cuba? Does not the same doctrine apply to the Islands of Hawaii, to the Philippine Islands, to Puerto Rico, and to all the islands of the sea that is here applied to Cuba? We wanted to declare, and did declare, to the world by those resolutions that the policy of the founders of this Republic was to be pursued, and that, recognizing that the people of Cuba were being starved to death by their brothers; recognizing that extreme cruelty and barbarity were being carried on within less than a hundred miles of our shores, it was our duty as a Christian people and an enlightened nation to relieve them; but that the world might not mistake our Christian deeds and our humane acts and be led to believe that we were actuated by greed of power and the desire to acquire additional territory, we not only disclaimed any such desire, but, Mr. President, we said that when the island was pacified we would furl our flag in Cuba and return to this country. Yet the author of that precise language is to-day found in the ranks of the annexationists.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], who I regret is not now in his seat, a few days ago undertook to draw a distinction between a constitutional treaty and the joint resolution under consideration. He said a treaty was a contract; that statement is correct; that it was an agreement; that is true; that it could be anything else than a contract or an agreement or the assent of parties to it to certain things would be impossible. So there was nothing novel in that statement. He further said that a contract had to be continuing. That statement is not true. It never was the law of contracts and is not to be found in any work on contracts.

A contract, Mr. President, is the meeting of the minds of the parties to it, where they agree upon a specific thing at the same time and in the same sentence, and a private contract must have a consideration and must not be in violation of any statute or of constitutional law or of public morals, but when we speak of the law of contracts, to be found in the form of treaties, the treaty may be tentative, it may be temporary, it may be for a specific time, or its existence may end on the consummation of its purpose and the dissolution of one of the parties to it, and I challenge the distinguished Senator from Ohio, or any of his confreres, to find an instance in which a treaty must continue a specific length of time.

All treaties and all contracts must continue until they are consummated or the purpose is accomplished. Otherwise they would be abortive. If a treaty be entered into between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands by which the territory and the sovereignty of the latter should be transferred to the former, that treaty would be binding and would have two parties to it until that sovereignty was ceded and the territory turned over, and then it would be a matter of indifference whether it ceased to exist or not.

But, Mr. President, look at the fault of the logic of the Senator from Ohio. By the resolution the Senate is now considering the same consequences follow. It is declared:

Whereas the Government of the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its constitution, to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies, and also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, Government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed, and that the said Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies be, and they are hereby, annexed as a part of the territory of the United States and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America.

And yet, Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio calls this a continuing contract, and he distinguishes between this language and the ordinary language of a treaty. If by the adoption or ratification of a treaty of annexation, by which the property and sovereignty of the Hawaiian Islands were ceded to the United States, Hawaii would cease to be a government and would pass out of existence, and therefore the objection of the Senator from Ohio that that contract was not continuing would obtain, I ask him, what is the force of this resolution, and especially of the language I have read?

When the Government of the United States takes possession of all the property of all the Islands of Hawaii and assumes sovereignty over those islands and they become annexed, does not the Government of the Hawaiian Islands pass from existence as completely and as effectually as it would if the islands were annexed by treaty? Yet the Senator from Ohio has offered this shadowy and unsubstantial distinction as a reason why we should adopt this resolution. I do not regard that as very important myself, Mr. President; I simply cite it for the purpose of showing the desperation to which even able men are driven in supporting a poor cause.

I said in my remarks on Monday that I would undertake to prove to the satisfaction of any reasonable man that this whole scheme of annexation and territorial extension is inspired by the sugar trust. I know some of the newspapers are full of statements to the contrary, but any man who looks at the situation as it actually exists, and who remembers that nothing is to be gained by annexation by the Government of the United States, can not reach any other conclusion than that the whole scheme is one of territorial acquisition on the part of the American sugar trust, the tobacco trust, and a few other monopolies, which control not only the markets of the United States in these staples, but the markets of the Hawaiian Islands and the other islands to which I have referred.

Every Senator and Representative in Congress who has heretofore been considered as occupying anything like close or friendly relations with the sugar trust, upon whom that gigantic organization could depend for advocacy and for votes on measures affecting their interests, is found arrayed in solid phalanx in favor of annexation. There is not a single exception—not one—and, Mr. President, where you find the trusted agents of an organization entertaining certain views and pursuing a certain course, you can safely rely upon the fact that they are carrying out the wishes of their retainers.

Has the sugar trust anything to gain by annexation? The Philippines, Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Hawaiian Islands produce in round numbers 4,000,000,000 pounds of sugar annually, seven-tenths of which, or 2,800,000,000 pounds, are imported into this country in a raw state and here refined. Bear in mind, Mr. President, that none of these islands has a sugar refinery. There is no refinery in Hawaii, none in the Philippines, none in Puerto Rico, and none in Cuba; but all the sugar produced in those countries, or seven-tenths of the sugar produced in those countries, is brought here by the American sugar trust and here refined in their factories.

The tax on sugar, in round numbers, is about a cent and a half a pound. By its importation under annexation the sugar trust would save a tax of 1½ cents per pound, or $42,000,000 annually. The value of the use of that money at 4 per cent per annum would be $1,680,000, making a total of $43,680,000 annually saved to the trust by annexation. Under those circumstances, why should the sugar trust be opposed to annexation? It is not. It is a new application of the old cry of "Stop thief!" Every one of the agents of the sugar trust, every one of the Hawaiian commercial companies, whose stock is scattered all through this country, is in favor of this scheme of annexation; and do we not all recall that within the last ten days, when what was regarded as a test vote was taken in this Chamber, plantation sugar stocks in Hawaii jumped in value 400 per cent within a few hours? Yet we are told by grave Senators and by great journals, educators of the public mind, that the sugar trust is doing all possible to prevent this patriotic step of annexation.

Mr. President, when you find that organization can make pretty nearly $44,000,000 annually by annexation, and that all its agents and advocates stand for annexation, is it an illogical conclusion to say that it is in favor of annexation?

What more can it do by annexation? It can spend one-half of the $44,000,000 a year made by annexation in corrupting the corruptible portion of the public press, in silencing Senators and Representatives, and in molding public opinion in favor of this infamous scheme; and as one I may add, parenthetically, I believe it is none too good to do so.

Mr. President, there are other influences behind this question. The tobacco trust is behind it. All these islands are producers of millions of pounds of tobacco. If the tobacco of these islands can escape taxation, as it will by annexation, it will be a saving of at least fifteen or twenty million dollars annually to the tobacco trust. Their influence is arrayed in favor of annexation. Oh, Mr. President, they do not say they want it because of the pecuniary benefits to them; they know that would appear to the American people to be too mercenary; but they are appealing to the patriotism of the people, their love of power and territorial extension, while they are seeking this tremendous financial advantage for themselves.

Every organization or every institution that is making armor plate is in favor of annexation; every company or individual engaged in the construction of naval vessels is in favor of annexation; all those engaged in furnishing supplies to the Army and Navy, and making tremendous profits out of it, are in favor of annexation; and I have not the slightest doubt that the parties who sold the Merrimac to this Government a few weeks ago are in favor of annexation. There was an old vessel that had been repeatedly inspected and condemned, which originally did not cost over $100,000, which was sold to this Government for $343,000, I think, and I have it on pretty good authority that a commission of $100,000 was paid to secure the sale. I have no doubt these men are in favor of annexation. I have no doubt every pecuniary interest in this country, every selfish and greedy interest that could make a dollar by this scheme, is in favor of it.

But, Mr. President, how should it be with the masses of the people, those who produce the honest wealth of the country and those who do the labor? They should be arrayed against it.

How are these tremendous sums of money I have mentioned to be met? How is the $500,000,000 of which I have spoken to be raised? We can not impose an income tax because that rests upon the rich, and the Supreme Court has declared that the rich shall not be taxed. I do not know exactly where it draws the line, but the richer a man is the more immunity he has from taxation.

The Supreme Court, overruling one hundred years of its own judicial history and overruling five unanimous decisions of its own, has held within the last two or three years that the rich of the United States shall not be taxed—that the poor alone shall bear the burdens of taxation. We can not, therefore, secure any portion of the money by an income tax; we can not secure forty-odd millions of it by a tax on sugar; we can not secure $30,000,000 more of it on tobacco; we can not secure any portion of it on rice and other products of these islands, amounting, all told, to probably $50,000,000 a year; but all that, Mr. President, must be paid by the farmers and laborers and industrial classes of this country.

It may be said the islands will be self-supporting. They never have been. Here is this little, tottering, fraudulent Government now in existence in Hawaii, which came into existence in 1893—I think the conspiracy first appeared in January, 1893—yet it has a national debt of almost $5,000,000, after having taxed the people and the property of that country to the utmost limit—a million a year. We can not get much revenue out of a government of that kind. We can not get it from the government that will be established in the Philippine Islands, in Cuba, or in Puerto Rico.

We can not under our system of equal taxation—if it is not a sarcasm to speak of equal taxation—take from those people the sums of money they have been paying to the Spanish Government, for the system of taxation imposed upon those people has been onerous, has been fraudulent; it has been spoliation in many cases, and in others absolute confiscation; and yet, with those extreme means of securing money, those governments have not, according to Señor Sagasta, been self-supporting. I do not know but that this would be a good place to call attention to what he says on this subject. Although this man is to-day the premier of a country with which we are at war, a country that from my childhood to the present time I have learned to detest, it can not be doubted that he is a man of intelligence and that he speaks with some degree of truth in giving utterance to the following:

Our colonies have cost us dear. Within the last twenty-five years we have spent in them 3,000,000,000 francs in defensive works. Only the most important cities and points have been fortified, as we could not erect works everywhere. The cost would have been 7,000,000,000 or 8,000,000,000 francs.

So the expenditure, reduced to our money, has been $600,000,000, and the cost would have been $1,600,000,000 if all the fortifications had been made. Is it to be supposed, then, that we can procure by lawful means of taxation a sufficient amount of money from the people of those islands to pay the expenses of administering governments there? That can not be done in the light of the facts.

Then, Mr. President, where must the money come from? It must come from every man who produces anything and every man who labors. It must come from the farmers and planters of the United States, the men who toil for day wages and weekly and monthly wages. All this tremendous burden must pass to them without the slightest corresponding benefit. So much, then, for the sugar trust and the tobacco trust and these other interests that are at the bottom of and are inspiring this scheme of annexation.

This is one step, and an important step, in the interest of the perpetuation of a national debt. I have no doubt in my own mind that every man who has the money and desires to own Government bonds and draw interest from the people in the form of taxation is in favor of this scheme of annexation. We have increased our national debt in the last five years from a little over five hundred million to over thirteen hundred million dollars, many million dollars more than half the total bonded debt at the close of the late civil war.

If this money can not be secured immediately by taxation, we will hear the sugar trust and all these interest-eating patriots calling for the issuance of bonds, the borrowing of money; and our bonded debt in a few years, instead of being reduced, will be increased until it will reach $3,000,000,000, and our people will be in the condition of the English people, meeting interest obligations by the hundreds of millions annually, and never expecting and never hoping to pay the principal. Under such circumstances there can be but one end. Government will pass from the masses of the people, from the debtor class to the creditor class, and the Republic, if it exists, will exist in name only. It has almost reached that point now. Every one of these men is in favor of annexation.

Mr. President, it is said that the inhabitants of the Philippines number 10,400,000; that they are mostly Malays, with an intermixture of other savage tribes, and that the aboriginal inhabitants are of a repulsive and extremely savage character. I believe out of the 10,400,000 inhabitants not to exceed one-third can be said to be in the slightest degree civilized. Spain has never been able to conquer many millions of those people. Of the people who inhabit the Hawaiian Islands we know more. We know there are not to exceed about ten or twelve thousand of the white races represented there.

The Americans, English, Germans, French, Russians, and all other classes of what may be regarded as belonging to the white race do not number to exceed ten or twelve thousand. The balance of them are Japanese, coolies, pure-blood and mixed Polynesians, a race of people who are afflicted in their entirety as a race with leprosy, one of the islands being set apart and dedicated to the treating of leprosy. Will any man be kind enough to tell the country how we are to be improved by the annexation of that class of people to our country? We often say, and with more truth than poetry, that this country is now gorged with foreign population, that we are receiving them more rapidly than we can assimilate and convert them into American citizens. Yet to carry out the infamous scheme of these monopolies I have mentioned and the interests I have named we propose to annex these islands with 115,000 people, not exceeding 12,000 of whom are white people, and incorporate them into our population.

Mr. President, I come to a proposition of law, and I see present my good friend the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], one of the best lawyers in this body and one of the most conservative men. I wish to make in his presence a statement and see if he will contradict it. When we have incorporated these islands as a part of the United States, the right of the Polynesians to travel from Hawaii to New York, Nebraska, or Connecticut will be as absolute and free from restriction as my right to go to California. I pause for the Senator or any other Senator to deny it. This Government has no power by legislation to restrict me to the inhabitancy of one State. Congress can not pass a law requiring me to spend my life in Nebraska. I am a citizen of the United States and may visit in safety any portion of its territory whenever I see fit; and whenever you incorporate those Japanese and Chinese coolies and Polynesians, with their leprosy, into the inhabitants of the United States, their right to come to your State and to mine and to engage in business there and dwell there and intermarry with the population, if they see fit, is as absolute as the right to life and liberty, and can not be restrained.

Mr. President, what will this country do with 15,000,000 people such as are to be found in the Hawaiian Islands, in the Philippines, in Puerto Rico, and in Cuba, every one of them of an alien race; none of them used to the forms and solemnities of self-government; turbulent, vicious, savage? If they are to be precipitated into the body of our people by this act of legislation, where is the power to restrain them from being brought here or from coming here as competitors of your neighbors and mine? They will swarm the workshops of this country. They will be found on every quarter section of land in this nation. They will debase the price of every bushel and every pound of farm products. They will by deadly competition reduce the wages of the American laboring man, and in the course of ages a civilization akin to their own will be erected in this land of the free. That their influence will be detrimental no one can dispute. Our civilization, instead of taking an upward tendency, as we all desire, until this nation shall occupy the highest conceivable pinnacle of civilization, will go down in consequence of this great weight thrown on it.

Do you not suppose, Mr. President, that there are interests in this country which want to bring about exactly that result? A short time ago a New York capitalist, well known in this country, was reported to have said, "What the United States needs most now is an importation of foreign muscle. We have got enough brains." That man no doubt was speaking by the card. So by the pending scheme of annexation a vast horde of savages, 15,000,000 of them, is to be thrown among our people in deadly competition in all departments of industry and production in the fulfillment of the desire for more muscle and less brain, that the man who has the money can get more labor and more of labor's products for less expenditure, and that all the millions of our people, our native and our naturalized people, may be reduced in their standard of civilization and in their power to produce.

Sir, I am not prepared to put the American father and the American son, in the field or in the shop, in deadly conflict and competition with Chinese, who live upon a bowl of rice and a rat a day; nor am I prepared to vote that the civilization and standard of living of the American mother and the American daughter shall be brought down to the standard of the civilization of the wife of such a man. Yet that is exactly what this whole iniquitous scheme of annexation means.

The labor question, or the condition of the laboring people, ought to excite some active interest in the minds of Republicans. Ever since I have been old enough to remember anything about tariff theories and tariff legislation I have heard the pros and cons of protection, free trade, and revenue tariff discussed. Those questions have been full of interest to the American people from the formation of the Government to this time. Ever since I have had the honor to occupy a seat in this Chamber I have heard the beauties of protection proclaimed, I think, almost every session of Congress. I remember a particular speech, all of which has not yet appeared in the RECORD, on the subject of the beauty and soundness of protection; and the chief argument in all those discussions was that a tariff was essential to protect the American laboring man.

I will be frank enough to say that I never had much faith in the sincerity of gentlemen who urged such argument. It was made for the purpose of inducing the laboring men in the United States to support that party at the polls, because the laboring men, when united, constitute the majority of the voters of this country. Stripped of all its gauze and everything that is inclined to hide it from observation, that is what it means and that is what it has meant. How do these gentlemen reconcile their position on the question of annexation of the Hawaiian Islands with their deep and constant solicitude for the American laborer to be protected in his wages against the pauper labor of Europe?

Mr. President, we have heard it from the hustings, it has been published in the press, that the ne plus ultra of taxation was the tariff, because it protected the American laboring man against the European pauper laborer and his handiwork, and because it built up in our own country a home market for the consumption of all his products. Yet, in the light of that fact and in the light of the further fact that these gentlemen have deceived the American people on this question, they propose to put into our population, at one stroke of the pen, 15,000,000 pauper laborers. To subserve what interest, sir? Because the demands of humanity call for it? No. Because the interests of the American people demand it? Not at all. Because the interests of our country and our civilization will be strengthened or advanced by it? Not at all. It is simply because the fellows who pay the campaign expenses want it, and the debt must be met and discharged. All the glory of our country is to perish. We are to be cast upon the dangerous sea of competition with Europe for supremacy and to be engulfed in wars, no doubt, not of our own choice or of our own making, to carry out this purpose.

Then, sir, what becomes of that further argument of our friends on the other side that we do not want to extend our commerce to other lands; that we want the home market, with its doors closed to Europe and to all outside powers, a portion of our people producing and a portion manufacturing and then trading amongst themselves and living among themselves? That argument vanishes into thin air, too. Here they are undertaking to extend our territorial dominion, under the specious plea that it will give us an enlarged market for our surplus products. Oh, Mr. President, those arguments will not deceive the American people any longer. You have by a policy of your own, which I believe the majority of the American people condemn, depopulated almost the mountain States. You tell me you want this territory for the surplus population of the United States. We have no surplus population. We have scarcely 15 or 16 inhabitants to the square mile in this country. Fifty years from now would see by natural growth 200,000,000 people in the United States without any annexation, numerically one of the most powerful, and in point of wealth, if well conducted, the most powerful nation of ancient or modern times.

So it can not be that we have a surplus population which we want to get rid of. We have no class of people who will go to the Philippines, or to Hawaii, or to Cuba, or to Puerto Rico, or to any of those islands, except for mere trading purposes, and then probably only one inhabitant out of a hundred thousand. Those islands are not to catch any surplus population from here, because we have none to give them. We, upon the other hand, are to be the recipients of their population as competitors in the labor market against our laborers and our producers; and you never will be able to deceive the American people, when they come to analyze this question, into the belief that there is anything lofty or patriotic in the scheme of annexation.

Mr. President, let us look for a moment at the conditions prevailing in the Hawaiian Islands. It is said they have a republic there. That statement is not true. They do not have and never have had a republic. They have a revolutionary government which has some of the features of a republic, but there is an absolute absence of all the substance of a republic. Out of a total adult male population numbering, I think, thirty-seven or thirty-eight thousand, possibly more, they have not 3,000 voters. All the others are disqualified by property qualifications, to be found in their constitution; and so weak and uncertain and vacillating and so absolutely uncontrollable are the people of that country that their constitution authorizes their enslavement and the enforcement of personal contracts to labor.

Can such a people be a desirable acquisition to the United States? Are we to take them with all the restraints of their constitution and statutes, and are we to incorporate into the United States slavery, an institution against which we declared by constitutional amendment? Yet I submit to the lawyers on the other side that if we take the institutions of the Hawaiian Islands as they are, with their contracts and their constitution, and statutes in the nature of contracts, we have not the power under our form of government to abrogate those contracts, statutes, and constitution. Slavery will exist in the future as it existed in the past in our country.

Mr. President, the significance of the pending joint resolution for the acquisition or "annexation" of Hawaii no longer rests upon the theories originally advanced to support it as set forth in the message of the President and as presented by the advocates of the proposition. They were measurably sordid in so far as they appealed to commercialism, or semipatriotic in that they pretended that "annexation" was necessary for our defense, and humane to the extent of the intimation conveyed that the Hawaiians needed protection from external foes. But all these arguments have each in turn been overthrown and shown to be either valueless or groundless.

The result is that "annexation" now stands forth as a war measure, with nothing, however, in the committee's report to sustain it as such, while an educated silence on this floor by its supporters leaves us to grapple with so important a question as this in the dark. Why is this?

The truth is, the annexation of Hawaii has come to be an incident of an imperial policy that was not dreamed of when the treaty was presented or the report made on the annexation resolutions. That policy cast its shadow across the sky when Admiral Dewey sunk the Spanish fleet in the Bay of Manila on May 1, 1898.

On the 20th of April, 1898, Congress passed the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas the abhorrent conditions which have existed for more than three years in the Island of Cuba, so near our own borders, have shocked the moral sense of the people of the United States, have been a disgrace to Christian civilization, culminating, as they have, in the destruction of a United States battleship, with 286 of its officers and crew, while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana, and can no longer be endured, as has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message to Congress of April 11, 1898, upon which the action of Congress was invited: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, First. That the people of the Island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

Mr. President, it is quite evident that the scheme of colonization had not completely unfolded at that time, as is made still more evident by the amendment to the resolutions offered by the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. The people of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent. We had something of a controversy over the question whether they are free, but we agreed that the people of that country ought to be free and independent. How, sir, could we do otherwise in the light of our history and our traditions?

We based our Government on the doctrine promulgated in the Declaration of Independence that all men are born free and equal and are by nature entitled to certain inalienable rights, which are mentioned in the declaration. We did not say that all men in the United States were born free and equal, but we said all men wherever they are born stand upon terms of equality and they are entitled to certain rights, among which we enumerated life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. We assumed and waged our Revolutionary struggle on the theory that every man who dwelt upon this territory during that struggle would be a citizen of the Government to be formed here and an equal participant in it.

There is a republic to-day declared to exist in Hawaii. A republican form of government has been proclaimed in the Philippine Islands and in Cuba, and I do not know but in Puerto Rico. There is at least some form of revolutionary government in Puerto Rico. Less than two months ago we declared that those people had a right to their independence. Are we now to stultify our action? Are we now to retrace our steps in the eyes of the civilized world and say that we were guilty of falsehood at that time; that we really meant that it was our purpose to annex them and make them a portion of the population and Government of the United States?

But since then imperialism has constantly pushed itself to the front. The time has come when the scheme must be unfolded and pushed here. While we are engaged in the excitement and struggle of a war this great question is thrust forward, in my judgment, so that many of us can not contest it for fear that we shall be misunderstood by our constituents. It is not a wise course to pursue. Why should not this question go over to the conclusion of the war and until the next session of Congress, when we can come together and consider it with that candor, intelligence, and deliberation its great magnitude requires? No, Mr. President, answering the party lash, this scheme of annexation is to be put through under whip and spur, regardless of its consequences to the American people, now and hereafter. It is to be regretted that more moral backbone can not be found in Congress to stop this hasty legislation.

Mr. President, we were not content at that time with simply disclaiming any right to exercise jurisdiction or sovereignty or control over Cuba, but we went further so that the people there and the world might understand our position, and we asserted it as our determination, when the pacification of the island is accomplished, to leave the government and control of the island to its people. There can be no mistake as to the meaning of that language. We said to Cuba and to the world, "When we shall have released the starving reconcentrados in Cuba, when we shall have driven Spain from that island in consequence of her barbarity and as a penalty for sinking our battle ship and destroying our sailors, we will return to our own country and leave the government of Cuba to her own people." That was honorable, and that was the proper thing to do.

Mr. President, we held it up as something new in the history of the world, for there has never been an instance thus far of a great nation taking up the cause of a weak and poor people and, on purely Christian and humane grounds, waging a war against a foreign enemy to protect people from their oppressors. We would have stood forth in the history of the world as the proudest nation in this respect that had ever appeared upon the political horizon; and yet, sir, in less than two months from the time of that patriotic and lofty declaration we find ourselves precipitated into a discussion in Congress as to how much puff we can get out of the war, and as to how rapidly and successfully we can confiscate the property of the people of these islands and destroy their right of self-government.

No nation can afford to be guilty of dishonor or of perfidy. The man who gains a reputation in the neighborhood in which he lives for being uncertain in his promises is always the loser. Honesty is the best policy not only in individual life, but in national life. The nation that makes and declares one thing and then seeks to accomplish the reverse of it will stand condemned in the eyes of the nations of the world as the individual would stand condemned in the eyes of the community.

Mr. President, I had prepared notes enough to consume much more time than I intend to consume. I shall not hesitate to perform my part in this drama, and I shall have no hesitancy whatever in leaving it to my constituents and to the future to demonstrate the correctness of my position.

I must not be understood in what I have said as opposing the acquisition of proper harbors in all these islands. We have, as the honorable chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations and other Senators have told us, an indefeasible fee-simple title to Pearl Harbor, the only harbor of any consequence in the Hawaiian Islands. We have appropriated money for its improvement and will doubtless appropriate much more in the future. Let us hold it. Let it be a harbor of refuge for American ships where they can coal and water and repair. Let us retain proper harbors in the Philippine Islands, the most important of which I think is Manila. There are seven or eight harbors there, but that seems to be the most important one. Let us retain that harbor if necessary, or some other for the same purpose. Let us retain Havana and Santiago de Cuba, and possibly another harbor in Cuba, that our vessels may have a place to go to coal, to secure water, to make repairs, and to do whatever may be necessary in the ordinary course of navigation. Let us retain San Juan, in Puerto Rico. Let us fortify all those places if necessary, and secure all the facilities proper to be secured, and then let us quit.

Mr. President, what should become of the islands which must be lost to Spain as a consequence of this war? Some Senator may say to me, "Do you want to return them to Spain?" No, Mr. President, a thousand times no. If I had it in my power, I would dismember the Spanish dynasty and wipe it off the face of the earth. I believe I am the first man in Congress, if not the only man, who ever made that declaration. I introduced the first resolution that was ever introduced in either branch of Congress to recognize the independence of the Cuban people.

I have occupied the time of the Senate in advocating their liberation when many of the subsequent enthusiasts on the other side were elevating their noses at an angle of 45 degrees in scorn and contempt at me for consuming the time of the Senate. And yet, Mr. President, times change and men change just as the thimble-rigging game changes. Those who a few months ago were characterizing me and those of us who advocated Cuban freedom and Cuban recognition in this Chamber as jingoes, holding us up to scorn and ridicule, are now at the head of the procession. They have gone from the foot of the column to its head, and they are making the music. The balance of us are following along.

We can not return these islands to Spain. I believe Spain is a doomed nation. Mr. President, I believe that these things are worked out in the providence of God. I believe that Spain will be succeeded by a higher and a better form of government. We may be the instruments chosen for that purpose. Let us drive Spain from the Philippine Islands, from Cuba, from Puerto Rico, from every island or possession she has in either the East or the West Indies or elsewhere. Let our war vessels go to the Spanish coast and lay waste her commercial cities unless she yields to our reasonable demands, and never let one foot of territory lost to her be returned.

Mr. President, I would go further. I would require Spain to pay every dollar of the expenses of this war. I would make a statement of what it costs this Government to subdue her and to carry out the purposes of the resolution we passed here, and every dollar of that money should be paid to this Government before the war would be declared at an end.

I would do more than that. I would make her pay the value of the Maine and her armament that was sunk in Havana Harbor on the 15th of February last. I would make her pay, as far as money could do it, for every one of our 266 seamen who were blown into eternity at that time and every one who was injured or maimed. After she had relinquished her power or her jurisdiction over the islands, after she had paid the war debt and paid for the destruction of the Maine and of our sailors, after she had apologized to the Christian world for her barbarity and furled her dirty flag and left this continent forever, I would declare peace, and not before that time.

Well, what is to become of the islands, some gentleman asks? Mr. President, I would erect every one of those islands into a republican form of government. We declared that the people of Cuba were entitled to their independence. The same reasoning that we applied to Cuba will apply to the Hawaiian Islands, to the Philippines, and to Puerto Rico. The argument that applies to one applies to all. On all those islands that dot the sea I would erect and sustain an independent republican form of government, giving them moral aid and support, as we have other islands in the past, and I would demonstrate to the world in time that all the Western Hemisphere was dedicated in different sections and in different republics to the cause of a government by the people and for the people. There is the true solution.

If you incorporate them into our population you will impair our civilization and weaken our Government. We can not permit them to go back to Spain, nor can we permit them to go under the influences of other European powers. But, Mr. President, following out the high destiny of this Republic and its own teachings, we can erect them, and we will erect them, into republics to add to the grand galaxy of republics, which must eventually control the world.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a document the pamphlet which I hold in my hand, entitled Analysis of the Functions of Money, by WILLIAM M. STEWART, United States Senator from Nevada.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and the order is made.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not wish it to be understood that I am not cognizant of the fact that this is the pamphlet to the printing of which I objected the other day, but I do not feel like insisting upon that objection in view of the fact that it is the product of the brain of a noted United States Senator.

Mr. WHITE. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk to the pending joint resolution, and ask that a vote may be taken on the same.

Mr. TELLER. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out from the preamble the words "in due form" and insert in lieu thereof "by a treaty which has never been ratified, but is now pending in the Senate of the United States."

Mr. DAVIS. I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota moves to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask the Senator from Minnesota whether he will not withdraw the motion? There will be no debate on the amendment, I think. Let us vote directly on it.

Mr. WHITE. What was the motion of the Senator from Minnesota?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. To lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. WHITE. I hope the Senator from Minnesota will not insist upon that motion. Such amendments as may be offered will probably be briefly explained, and it will only lead to the necessity of debating other matters and to procrastination. I ask for a direct vote on the amendment.

Mr. DAVIS. It is entirely immaterial to me, and I withdraw the motion, but I shall make that motion as to all other amendments, and do not wish my action now to be drawn into precedent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion to lay the amendment on the table is withdrawn.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Senators who have amendments to offer and wish to discuss them had better discuss them in advance of their being offered, in view of the notice given by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS], that he will move to lay all amendments on the table without regard to their merit.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It seems to me if we can have a direct vote on the amendments to be offered we can arrange to dispose of the matter to-night.

Mr. DAVIS. That may develop as we go along. I am not strenuous about it, but my present impression is in relation to this particular case that the motion should be made.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the amendment will be again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out from the preamble of the joint resolution, in the first line, the words "in due form" and insert "by a treaty which has never been ratified, but is now pending in the Senate of the United States;" so that, if amended, the preamble would read:

Whereas the Government of the Republic of Hawaii having, by a treaty which has never been ratified, but is now pending in the Senate of the United States, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its constitution, etc.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President—

Mr. WHITE. If the Senator from Colorado will excuse me for just a second, the point of this amendment is simply this: The joint resolution recites that "the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form, signified its consent," this amendment recites what was done, to wit, the making of a treaty, so far as they could make it, and the fact that such treaty is now pending in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not intend to detain the Senate more than a moment or two.

I take it from the statement made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], that the debate on the part of those who have been opposing this joint resolution is practically concluded.

I have refrained from debating this resolution, not because I supposed we who favor annexation could not hold our own in the debate, but because I was anxious to get to a vote.

I think, however, I ought to say, as one of those who have been very much interested in this question and in the final result, that in consideration of very many things which have been said in the public press, as one of those in favor of the joint resolution, I want to acquit our opponents of any unfair treatment of this subject. I do not mean by that remark that I think they have presented sound and cogent arguments, but I mean to say, holding the views they do, I do not think there has been any unnecessary delay in this debate.

I do not think there is any call for the complaint which has been made in certain quarters—not here—of an intentional purpose on the part of those who do not favor the joint resolution to unduly procrastinate action upon it.

I confess, Mr. President, if I entertained the opinion which certain Senators do who have addressed the Senate, whose honesty I can not question, I should not myself have been willing to have seen this resolution go through without extended debate.

I have not felt that there was any great threat by the passage of this resolution, but I know Senators whose judgment is as good as mine, whose patriotism is equal to mine, whose intelligence is equal to mine, entertain very different views on that question.

I wish to repeat—and I have risen only for that purpose—in justice to those Senators that I think they have been moved by patriotic motives to avoid what they think to be a great evil, or a possible evil, and that they have not abused the privileges of the Senate, nor in any way unnecessarily prolonged this discussion.

Mr. President, I want to say one other word, and then I will take my seat. Fortunately, this has not been a political question. It has been advocated here by an Administration with which I am in no wise in accord except, perhaps, upon this question and the other question which is before us now, the conduct of the war.

Senators who are in close relations with the Administration, who stand near to it, have been against this resolution—men who have had such relations with the Executive that it is fair to presume that the Executive has been impartial and has not attempted to press his views, whatever they may be, upon the Senate or the country with reference to this resolution. In the House of Representatives the great body of that House were for this resolution, Democrats, Republicans, and Populists alike, and the most conspicuous member of the Republican party in that body has been notoriously against the resolution.

So it can not be said, Mr. President, that this has been a political question, and I congratulate the Senate and I congratulate the country that we have debated it in good temper, and that we have apparently now reached a time when we are to have a vote.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I have been connected with the question of the annexation of the Republic of Hawaii ever since January, 1894. My own views upon the various questions to which the change of government in that island during that month gave rise have been well known, have been frequently expressed, and they have remained unchanged after the debate to which, from time to time, they have been subjected.

The question is one upon which men of equal capacity for judgment, equal learning, and equal integrity may well differ, and upon which they have differed. In all the time which has passed since the matter became one for discussion in this body I have never had occasion to feel that there was anything but an honest conviction moving every person who brought his mind to deliberate upon the subject, whether for or against the territorial and sovereign acquisition of those islands.

I wish to say here, Mr. President, that during the time in which I have been in charge of the present measure, for the last two weeks and more, it has never occurred to me that any portion of the debate has been other than the expression of an honest conviction of opinion; and it has never been indulged in beyond the fair and necessary exigencies of a full and fair discussion.

It is just, Mr. President, in reference to some things which have been said, that I should say one word more, and perhaps I trench somewhat upon the proprieties and rules of this body in saying it—but what I wish to observe is this, that while it has been commented upon, sometimes with a little touch of asperity, that those, or at least many of those, and especially the Committee on Foreign Relations, who have been in charge of and who have favored this measure have not participated in this particular debate, yet I beg leave to say that, so far as we are concerned, in 1894 we covered much of the entire ground which has been traversed so ably by the opponents of the resolution within the last two weeks, and that on another occasion, concerning which it will not be proper for me to say anything more definite, our views were fully expressed to our fellows upon other questions which have been urged by the opposition.

Now, Mr. President, that we are approaching the final determination of this great question, upon which Senators have differed so widely and which has been discussed by all the organs of public opinion in its various aspects for many years, I take occasion to repeat my assurance and conviction that the entire debate—the earnest and able debate on the part of those who have opposed this measure—has not transcended the proper and legitimate limits of a fair parliamentary opposition.

I can not forbear mentioning that this great measure has been supported and opposed and will be decided not upon the lines of political division, but upon convictions of duty and patriotism, with which the dictates of party have not interfered. This feature of the debate has been manifest throughout its entire course.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I have never had for years any doubt in my mind that the Hawaiian Islands were destined to a complete union with the United States. To all intents and purposes, except sovereignty, these islands for years have been an appanage of the United States. Their business is ours; their property is largely owned and controlled by men who have gone there from the United States. There are sections of the United States, especially the one which I represent, where the intercourse has been near.

Fifty years ago, from the State of Maine, an eminent man in political life, a member of Congress, a distinguished man in the old Whig party, in whose teachings I was brought up, left the State of Maine, emigrated to the Hawaiian Islands, became a leading lawyer and chief justice of that kingdom, and was afterwards for years its minister here. With him many from the State of Maine went to Hawaii, casting their fortunes with him, returned to Maine and married. Their associations have all been continued, and the tendency of New England, especially in Maine, has been in thought that these islands belong to us. Long before they were captivated by any dream, any fancy, by the dangerous and illusory phantom of foreign conquest, our people felt that Hawaii should belong to the United States.

I vote for the acquisition of Hawaii now not in any way as a war measure, not associated with the progress of the war, not marked in any way as a stepping-stone to anything else, but because of reasons that had matured and become convincing to my mind long before war was agreed upon.

We have to-day a moral protectorate over the Hawaiian Islands, and it is the sense, I believe, of the American people that the union should be made complete. To me it does not involve statehood, but only a union, to be settled hereafter upon territorial grounds, limits, and precedents. Therefore I have no hesitation in voting for the resolution.

I have never had any doubt that we should come in due season to a vote upon this most important question. I have, as has the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, appreciated the doubt and hesitation and fears Senators have entertained upon this matter. I do not think the debate has been unduly prolonged or with any purpose of resorting to undue tactics; but the importance of the subject has been such that it should have been, as it has been, thoroughly ventilated and thoroughly discussed here.

I do not think that any great question coming before the Senate of the United States, where the majority is in favor of action, positive action, will ever be turned "awry and lose the name of action" under the present rules. Out of them at last we come to final results, in which the majority has its way, as we are nigh to coming now upon the Hawaiian question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE].

Mr. WHITE. I call for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. CHANDLER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] has a general pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY]. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. An arrangement has been made whereby my colleague will stand paired with the Senator from Missouri on all questions relating to Hawaiian annexation; so that the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Minnesota will be permitted to vote.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I take the liberty of transferring that pair to the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], and will cast my vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. GORMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRELL] on all questions relating to this joint resolution and the amendments to it, but in view of the absence of the senior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY] I transfer that pair to him, and will make this announcement now for all the votes on this question. I vote "nay."

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS] who is absent. If he were present, he would vote "yea" on this proposition, and I should vote "nay."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] who is absent, but I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], and announce the pair between those Senators for the day. I vote "yea."

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN]. If he were here, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BURROWS (when Mr. McMILLAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. McMILLAN] is necessarily absent. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MANTLE]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CARTER. My colleague [Mr. MANTLE] is absent because of conditions which he could not possibly control. If present, he would vote "nay" on this question.

Mr. SULLIVAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON]. He does not appear to have voted, and so I withhold my vote.

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I am paired on the pending question with the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. McLAURIN (when Mr. TILLMAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. TILLMAN] is necessarily absent. He is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] on this question. If present, my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN. I ask the attention of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. McLAURIN]. I desire to announce that before the departure of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] he arranged that I should stand paired with him; but on the announcement lately made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. McLAURIN], I take it now that I am at liberty to vote.

Mr. McLAURIN. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. Then I vote "nay."

Mr. WELLINGTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. The Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] has a pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. WETMORE]. We have mutually agreed to transfer our pairs and both vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. I voted—

Mr. FRYE. I suggest to the Senator that he transfer his pair to the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not observe that the Senator from Texas is in the Chamber, and I will transfer my pair to the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. SULLIVAN. I am informed since the announcement I made a moment ago that the pair of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON] has been transferred to another Senator. Therefore I am free to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I am requested to announce that the junior

Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT] is unavoidably absent. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. PENROSE. I am paired with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. KENNEY], who is absent. Were he present, I should vote "nay."

I also desire to state on behalf of my colleague [Mr. QUAY], who is necessarily absent, that he is paired with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. Were my colleague present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. LINDSAY. I call the attention of the Senator from Pennsylvania to the fact that I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN], who is absent. If the Senator from Pennsylvania will agree to transfer the pair of the Senator from Delaware to the Senator from Michigan, we can both vote.

Mr. PENROSE. That is satisfactory to me.

Mr. WHITE. I do not understand the statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] with reference to the vote of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. KENNEY]. Do I understand the statement to be that the Senator from Delaware with whom the Senator from Pennsylvania is paired would vote "yea" upon this proposition?

Mr. PENROSE. Yes, I so understood; and I therefore withheld my vote.

Mr. WHITE. Very well.

Mr. PENROSE. I will, however, make the transfer of pairs suggested by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], and that will enable us both to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. LINDSAY. Under that arrangement I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "yea."

Mr. BACON (after having voted in the affirmative). The junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. WETMORE], with whom I am paired, is absent; but under the announcement made by the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. WELLINGTON], I will permit my vote to stand, the pairs having been transferred as stated by him.

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], and did not note that he was not in the Senate Chamber at the time I voted. He would doubtless vote "nay," and I did vote "yea," but, observing my pair, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I should have announced that if the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] were present, he would have voted "yea" on this proposition.

The result was announced—yeas 20, nays 40; as follows:

YEAS—20.
Allen,	Chilton,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,
Bacon,	Clay,	McEnery,	Roach,
Bate,	Daniel,	Mallory,	Turley,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Jones, Ark.	Pasco,	White.
NAYS—40.
Baker,	Foraker,	McBride,	Proctor,
Burrows,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Sewell,
Cannon,	Gallinger,	Money,	Shoup,
Carter,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Spooner,
Clark,	Hale,	Nelson,	Sullivan,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Penrose,	Teller,
Davis,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Warren,
Deboe,	Hoar,	Pettus,	Wellington,
Elkins,	Kyle,	Platt, Conn.	Wilson,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Pritchard,	Wolcott.
NOT VOTING—22.
Aldrich,	Harris,	Mills,	Thurston,
Allison,	Heitfeld,	Morrill,	Tillman,
Butler,	Jones, Nev.	Murphy,	Turner,
Chandler,	Kenney,	Platt, N. Y.	Vest,
Cockrell,	McMillan,	Quay,	Wetmore.
Gear,	Mantle,	Rawlins,
Gray,	Martin,	Smith,
Hanna,	Mason,	Stewart,

So Mr. WHITE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert at the proper place the following:

That the contract-labor laws and all laws, civil or criminal, now in force in said islands by which men are held for service for a definite term, except in punishment for crime whereof the party has been duly convicted, are hereby repealed.

Mr. DAVIS. Let us have a direct vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. PETTIGREW. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. CHANDLER's name was called). I will again announce that my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] has a general pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY], which has been transferred to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. If my colleague were here, he would vote against all amendments to the pending joint resolution, and would vote for the joint resolution. I will make no further announcement concerning the matter during the roll call.

Mr. COCKRELL. If my colleague [Mr. VEST] were present, he would vote just the other way, exactly.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I will announce once more that I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. I have transferred my pair, by consent, to the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. I am not aware how the senior Senator from Delaware would vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). Again I announce my pair with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] on all questions relating to the joint resolution. I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas (when the name of Mr. JONES of Nevada was called). The Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. If the Senator from Nevada were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). I again announce my general pair with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN]. With the consent of the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], I will continue the arrangement and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). Upon these questions I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT]. I understand he would vote with the committee on this question. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. GALLINGER. Upon the statement made by the Senator from Wisconsin it seems to me it is proper that I should annul the pair I announced between the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS] and the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT]. I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], who is my regular pair, to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). On these questions I am paired with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. If he were present and I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). Inasmuch as my pair with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER] has been transferred to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. THURSTON], and as the special pair I had with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILMAN] has been transferred to the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON], I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WELLINGTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair, as I formerly announced, with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. I understand the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS] is absent unpaired, and that if he were present he would vote with the majority on this question. I therefore transfer my pair to him, and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MARTIN. I am paired with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MANTLE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 41; as follows:

YEAS—22.
Allen,	Chilton,	Lindsay,	Roach,
Bacon,	Clay,	McEnery,	Turley,
Bate,	Cockrell,	Mallory,	Turpie,
Berry,	Daniel,	Mitchell,	White.
Caffery,	Faulkner,	Pasco,
Cannon,	Jones, Ark.	Pettigrew,
NAYS—41.
Allison,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Shoup,
Baker,	Gallinger,	Money,	Sullivan,
Burrows,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Teller,
Carter,	Hale,	Nelson,	Warren,
Clark,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Wellington,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Davis,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wilson,
Deboe,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Elkins,	Kyle,	Pritchard,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Proctor,
Foraker,	McBride,	Sewell,
NOT VOTING—22.
Aldrich,	Jones, Nev.	Morrill,	Stewart,
Butler,	Kenney,	Murphy,	Thurston,
Chandler,	McMillan,	Platt, N. Y.	Tillman,
Gear,	Mantle,	Quay,	Turner,
Gray,	Martin,	Rawlins,	Vest.
Hanna,	Mason,	Smith,
Heitfeld,	Mills,	Spooner,

So Mr. PETTIGREW's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BACON. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

That this resolution shall not be operative and of binding effect upon either the United States of America or the Republic of Hawaii until the same shall have been consented to and approved by the majority of the voters voting at an election to be held in the Hawaiian Islands, at which election all male natives of said islands of the age of 21 years, and all naturalized male persons in said islands of the age of 21 years, shall be duly qualified voters. The said election shall be held at a time and in the manner and under regulations to be prescribed by the President of the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CLARK (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. HARRIS], but under a special arrangement in regard to questions arising under the joint resolution, I will vote in his absence. I vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I will again announce my pair with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], and state that my pair has been transferred to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART]. I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). Continuing the arrangement with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. PENROSE (when his name was called). Under the explanation of pairs made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], who is absent. I understand that if he were present, he would vote "nay," and if I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I am paired on the pending question with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. WELLINGTON (when his name was called). Under the arrangement previously announced I will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 20, nays 42; as follows:

Allen,	Chilton,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,
Bacon,	Clay,	McEnery,	Roach,
Bate,	Cockrell,	Mallory,	Turley,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Jones, Ark.	Pasco,	White.

Allison,	Foraker,	McBride,	Sowell,
Baker,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Shoup,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Money,	Sullivan,
Cannon,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Teller,
Carter,	Hale,	Nelson,	Warren,
Clark,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Wellington,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Davis,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wilson,
Deboe,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Elkins,	Kyle,	Pritchard,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Proctor,

Aldrich,	Heitfeld,	Mills,	Spooner,
Butler,	Jones, Nev.	Morrill,	Stewart,
Chandler,	Kenney,	Murphy,	Thurston,
Daniel,	McMillan,	Platt, N. Y.	Tillman,
Gear,	Mantlo,	Quay,	Turner,
Gray,	Martin,	Rawlins,	Vest.
Harris,	Mason,	Smith,

So Mr. BACON'S amendment was rejected.

Mr. FAULKNER. On page 2, commencing in line 18, after the word "exercised," I move to strike out the word "in" and all of line 19 and substitute what I send to the desk. That portion of the bill which I move to strike out confers upon the President the power and directs him to provide the manner and mode of exercising judicial and civil offices in the Island of Hawaii.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from West Virginia will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 18, page 2, it is proposed to strike out the following:

In such manner as the President of the United States shall direct.

And insert in lieu thereof:

Under and by authority of the existing laws of said islands not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the text be read as it would read if amended.

The Secretary read as follows:

Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government in said islands shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised under and by authority of the existing laws of said islands not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the President shall have power to remove said officers and fill the vacancies so occasioned.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER].

Mr. FAULKNER. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). Under the arrangement made, whereby the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS] stands paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], and withhold my vote.

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT]. If he were present, he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I am paired on the pending question with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. I am satisfied, however, that his vote would be the same as my own on this particular amendment. I will, therefore, vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 20, nays 43; as follows:

Allen,	Chilton,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,
Bacon,	Clay,	McEnery,	Roach,
Bate,	Cockrell,	Mallory,	Turley,
Berry,	Faulkner,	Mitchell,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Jones, Ark.	Pasco,	White.

Allison,	Foraker,	McBride,	Sowell,
Baker,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Shoup,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Money,	Sullivan,
Cannon,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Teller,
Carter,	Hale,	Nelson,	Thurston,
Clark,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Warren,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Wellington,
Davis,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wetmore,
Deboe,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Wilson,
Elkins,	Kyle,	Pritchard,	Wolcott.
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Proctor,

Aldrich,	Heitfeld,	Mills,	Spooner,
Butler,	Jones, Nev.	Morrill,	Stewart,
Chandler,	Kenney,	Murphy,	Tillman,
Daniel,	McMillan,	Platt, N. Y.	Turner,
Gear,	Mantlo,	Quay,	Vest.
Gray,	Martin,	Rawlins,
Harris,	Mason,	Smith,

So Mr. FAULKNER'S amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALLEN. I offer the following amendment, on which I should like a yeas-and-nays vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. Add the following proviso:

Provided, That it is hereby made a condition hereof that upon all sugars hereafter imported or coming into the United States from the Hawaiian Islands there shall be imposed an excise or internal-revenue tax of 1 cent per pound for the period of ten years from and after the passage and acceptance by the Hawaiian Legislature of this joint resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays are demanded on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. MCENERY (when his name was called). Under the arrangement heretofore announced, by which the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] stands paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I understand that if the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], with whom I am paired, were present, he would vote "nay" upon this amendment. I shall therefore vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I am paired on the pending question with the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCCLAURIN (when Mr. TILLMAN'S name was called). I again announce that my colleague [Mr. TILLMAN] is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 4, nays 57; as follows:

Allen,	McEnery,	Morrill,	Pettigrew,

Allison,	Deboe,	McBride,	Shoup,
Bacon,	Elkins,	McLaurin,	Spooner,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	Mallory,	Sullivan,
Bate,	Foraker,	Mitchell,	Teller,
Berry,	Frye,	Money,	Turley,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Morgan,	Turpie,
Cannon,	Gorman,	Nelson,	Warren,
Carter,	Hale,	Pasco,	Wellington,
Chilton,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Wetmore,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	White,
Clay,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wilson,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Daniel,	Kyle,	Pritchard,
Davis,	Lindsay,	Proctor,
	Lodge,	Sewell,

NOT VOTING—23.

Aldrich,
Butler,
Chandler,
Cockrell,
Faulkner,
Gear,
Gray,

Harris,
Heitfeld,
Jones, Ark.
Jones, Nev.
Kenney,
McMillan,
Mantle,

Martin,
Mason,
Mills,
Murphy,
Platt, N. Y.
Quay,
Rawlins,

Roach,
Smith,
Stewart,
Thurston,
Tillman,
Turner,
Vest.

So Mr. ALLEN's amendment was rejected.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following:

That all male persons over 21 years of age who were born on said islands and are citizens thereof, and all male persons over 21 years of age who have been naturalized according to the laws of Hawaii, shall be entitled to vote at all elections hereafter held in said islands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. PETTIGREW. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. JONES of Arkansas (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I am informed that if the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], with whom I am paired, were present, he would vote "nay." I will therefore vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). Upon the pending question I am paired with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER], but I am satisfied that our votes would be the same on this particular amendment. I will therefore vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the senior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY]. I do not know how he would vote on this question, and therefore I will refrain from voting.

The result was announced—yeas 16, nays 48; as follows:

YEAS—16.

Allen,
Bacon,
Bate,
Berry,

Caffery,
Cannon,
Daniel,
Faulkner,

Lindsay,
McEnery,
Mallory,
Mitchell,

Pasco,
Pettigrew,
Turley,
White.

NAYS—48.

Allison,
Baker,
Burrows,
Carter,
Chilton,
Clark,
Clay,
Cullom,
Davis,
Deboe,
Elkins,
Fairbanks,

Foraker,
Frye,
Gallinger,
Gorman,
Hale,
Hanna,
Hansbrough,
Hawley,
Hoar,
Jones, Nev.
Kyle,
Lodge,

McBride,
McLaurin,
Money,
Morgan,
Morrill,
Nelson,
Penrose,
Perkins,
Pettus,
Platt, Conn.
Pritchard,
Proctor,

Roach,
Sewell,
Shoup,
Spoonor,
Sullivan,
Teller,
Thurston,
Warren,
Wellington,
Wetmore,
Wilson,
Wolcott.

NOT VOTING—25.

Aldrich,
Butler,
Chandler,
Cockrell,
Gear,
Gray,
Harris,

Heitfeld,
Jones, Ark.
Kenney,
McMillan,
Mantle,
Martin,
Mason,

Mills,
Murphy,
Platt, N. Y.
Quay,
Rawlins,
Smith,
Stewart,

Tillman,
Turner,
Turpie,
Vest.

So Mr. PETTIGREW's amendment was rejected.

Mr. LINDSAY. I desire to offer by way of a substitute the printed matter in the pamphlet which I send to the desk, commencing on page 96, with article 1, and ending on page 97, with article 7, to come in after the resolving clause.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all after the resolving clause, on page 1, and insert the following:

1. The Republic of Hawaii hereby cedes absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies; and it is agreed that all territory of and appertaining to the Republic of Hawaii is hereby annexed to the United States of America under the name of the Territory of Hawaii.

2. The Republic of Hawaii also cedes and hereby transfers to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, Government, or crown lands, public buildings, or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipments, and all other public property of every kind and description, belonging to the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining.

The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian Islands, but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for their management and disposition: Provided, That all revenues from or proceeds of the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for the use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands for educational and other public purposes.

3. Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing Government in said islands shall be vested in such person or persons and shall be exercised in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct; and the President shall have power to remove said officers and fill the vacancies so occasioned.

The existing treaties of the Hawaiian Islands with foreign nations shall forthwith cease and determine, being replaced by such treaties as may exist or as may be hereafter concluded between the United States and such foreign nations. The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian Islands, not enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this treaty nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian Islands, the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian Islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged.

4. The public debt of the Republic of Hawaii, lawfully existing at the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty, including the amounts due to depositors in the Hawaiian Postal Savings Bank, is hereby assumed by the Government of the United States, but the liability of the United States in this regard shall in no case exceed $4,000,000. So long, however, as the existing Government and the present commercial relations of the Hawaiian Islands are continued, as hereinbefore provided, said Government shall continue to pay the interest on said debt.

5. There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian Islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States, and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian Islands.

6. The President shall appoint five commissioners, at least two of whom shall be residents of the Hawaiian Islands, who shall, as soon as reasonable and practicable, recommend to Congress such legislation for the Territory of Hawaii as they shall deem necessary or proper.

7. This treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, on the one part; and by the President of the Republic of Hawaii, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, in accordance with the constitution of said Republic, on the other; and the ratifications hereof shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. LINDSAY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], who, I am informed, if present, would vote "nay." I therefore am at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). On the pending question I am paired with the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. I am, however, satisfied that on this particular amendment our votes would be the same, and I therefore shall vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. COCKRELL. I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY].

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 47; as follows:

YEAS—17.

Bacon,
Bate,
Berry,
Chilton,

Clay,
Daniel,
Faulkner,
Jones, Nev.
Lindsay,

McEnery,
Mallory,
Mitchell,
Pasco,
Turley,

Turpie,
White.

NAYS—47.

Allen,
Allison,
Baker,
Burrows,
Cannon,
Carter,
Clark,
Cullom,
Davis,
Deboe,
Elkins,
Fairbanks,

Foraker,
Frye,
Gallinger,
Gorman,
Hale,
Hanna,
Hansbrough,
Hawley,
Hoar,
Kyle,
Lodge,
McBride,

McLaurin,
Money,
Morgan,
Morrill,
Nelson,
Penrose,
Perkins,
Pettus,
Platt, Conn.
Pritchard,
Proctor,
Roach,

Sewell,
Shoup,
Spoonor,
Sullivan,
Teller,
Thurston,
Warren,
Wellington,
Wetmore,
Wilson,
Wolcott.

NOT VOTING—25.

Aldrich,
Butler,
Chandler,
Cockrell,
Gear,
Gray,
Harris,

Heitfeld,
Jones, Ark.
Kenney,
McMillan,
Mantle,
Martin,
Mason,

Mills,
Murphy,
Pettigrew,
Platt, N. Y.
Quay,
Rawlins,
Smith,

Stewart,
Tillman,
Turner,
Vest.

So Mr. LINDSAY's amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, have had under consideration the joint resolution entitled—

Mr. GEAR. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that I offered an amendment some days ago which has not been read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator gave notice of an amendment intended to be proposed by him. Does he now offer it?

Mr. GEAR. I do.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The SECRETARY. At the end of line 20, on page 3, it is proposed to insert:

And it is hereby agreed that the silver money coined by the Government of Hawaii shall be maintained at parity with gold the same as the silver coined in the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GEAR].

The amendment was rejected.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution having been read three times, the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. ALLEN, Mr. FAULKNER, and others called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when Mr. CHANDLER's name was called). I desire to announce that on this vote my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea" and the Senator from Missouri would vote "nay."

Mr. COCKRELL (when his name was called). The senior Senator from New York [Mr. MURPHY] is necessarily detained from the Chamber, and I agreed to pair with him on this vote. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY], and those two Senators have been paired upon all the votes taken touching this joint resolution. I vote "yea."

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], but that pair has been transferred to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART], and I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. BAKER (when Mr. HARRIS's name was called). I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. HARRIS] is necessarily absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SHOUP (when Mr. HEITFELD's name was called). My colleague [Mr. HEITFELD] is temporarily absent from the Chamber. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). Under the arrangement with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. BURROWS (when Mr. McMILLAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. McMILLAN] is necessarily absent and paired. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. CARTER (when Mr. MANTLE's name was called). My colleague [Mr. MANTLE] is unavoidably absent. He would, if present, vote "yea." He is paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MANTLE]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PENROSE (when Mr. QUAY's name was called). My colleague [Mr. QUAY] is necessarily absent. He is paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. Were he present my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], who is unavoidably absent. If he were present, I understand he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). On the pending question, I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER]. If he were present, he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. McLAURIN (when Mr. TILLMAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. TILLMAN] is unavoidably absent. He is paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON]. If present, my colleague would vote "nay."

Mr. WELLINGTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. In this case, however, I have transferred that pair to the Senator from Utah [Mr. RAWLINS], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WETMORE. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. ALDRICH] is unavoidably absent. He is paired with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 42, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—42
Allison,	Foraker,	McBride,	Sewell,
Baker,	Frye,	McLaurin,	Shoup,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Money,	Sullivan,
Cannon,	Gorman,	Morgan,	Teller,
Carter,	Hale,	Nelson,	Warren,
Clark,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Wellington,
Cullom,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Wetmore,
Davis,	Hawley,	Pettus,	Wilson,
Deboe,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott,
Elkins,	Kyle,	Pritchard,
Fairbanks,	Lodge,	Proctor,
NAYS—21
Allen,	Clay,	Mallory,	Turley,
Bacon,	Daniel,	Mitchell,	Turpie,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Morrill,	White,
Berry,	Jones, Nev.	Pasco,
Caffery,	Lindsay,	Pettigrew,
Chilton,	McEnery,	Roach,
NOT VOTING—20
Aldrich,	Heitfeld,	Mills,	Stewart,
Butler,	Jones, Ark.	Murphy,	Thurston,
Chandler,	Kenney,	Platt, N. Y.	Tillman,
Cockrell,	McMillan,	Quay,	Turner,
Gear,	Mantle,	Rawlins,	Vest,
Gray,	Martin,	Smith,
Harris,	Mason,	Spooner,

So the joint resolution was passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 4710) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River, between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 29, 1898; and

A bill (S. 4847) to provide an American register for the steamer Titania.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agrees to the same with an amendment in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the general deficiency bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives receding from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30 to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes, and agreeing to the same with an amendment as follows:

Add, at the end of said amendment, the following:

"Provided further, That unless the settlement herein authorized be perfected within one year after the passage of this act the President shall at once proceed to foreclose all liens now held by the United States against said railroad companies and to collect the indebtedness herein sought to be settled, and nothing in this act contained shall be held to waive or release any right, lien, or cause of action already held by the United States."

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate. The motion was agreed to.

HOOR OF MEETING.

Mr. HALE. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock, as the order now is continuing for meeting at 11 o'clock, and this will give Senators more time.

Mr. COCKRELL. And hereafter.

Mr. MORGAN. That means hereafter.

Mr. HALE. I will change the form of the motion. I move that hereafter and until otherwise ordered the hour of meeting shall be 12 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 1401) to enable volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections.

Several SENATORS. Oh, no.

Mr. CARTER. Pending that motion, I wish to present a conference report.

Mr. HALE. Let us have an executive session.

Mr. HOAR. I do not propose to ask the Senate to go on with the bill to-night.

Mr. GORMAN. Pending the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HAWLEY. I hope the Senator from Maryland will not move an executive session. I have a conference report to present.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator from Massachusetts withdraws his motion, I shall have no objection. A conference report presents a privileged question. I withdraw the motion for an executive session in order that the conference report may be presented.

Mr. HAWLEY. I rise to present a conference report.

Mr. MALLORY. There is so much confusion in the Chamber that Senators can not hear.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will Senators be good enough to take their seats?

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator from Connecticut will allow the question to be put on my motion.

Mr. HAWLEY. I yield.

Mr. GORMAN. Then I renew the motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the motion will be voted down. I desire to have the bill taken up—

Mr. HAWLEY. So do I.

Mr. HOAR. And have it made the order for the morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HAWLEY. I hope the motion will be voted down.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is not debatable.

Mr. COCKRELL. The motion is not debatable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maryland, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GORMAN, Mr. JONES of Arkansas, and Mr. COCKRELL demanded the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. GEAR (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. HANNA (when his name was called). Being paired, I withhold my vote.

Mr. THURSTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. TURPIE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].

Mr. WELLINGTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. In his absence, I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GALLINGER. In behalf of my colleague [Mr. CHANDLER], I will announce that on this vote and on all subsequent votes during the day he stands paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST].

Mr. CLARK. I am paired with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. HARRIS]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. SEWELL. I desire to inquire if the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. SEWELL. Being paired with that Senator, I withhold my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 23, nays 29; as follows:

YEAS—23
Bacon,	Daniel,	McLaurin,	Pettus,
Bate,	Faulkner,	Mallory,	Roach,
Berry,	Gorman,	Money,	Sullivan,
Chilton,	Jones, Ark.	Morgan,	Turley,
Clay,	Lindsay,	Pasco,	White,
Cockrell,	McEnery,	Pettigrow,
NAYS—29
Allison,	Elkins,	Lodge,	Shoup,
Baker,	Fairbanks,	McBride,	Spooner,
Burrows,	Foraker,	Nelson,	Teller,
Cannon,	Frye,	Penrose,	Wetmore,
Carter,	Hansbrough,	Perkins,	Wolcott,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Platt, Conn.
Davis,	Hoar,	Pritchard,
Deboe,	Kyle,	Proctor,
NOT VOTING—37
Aldrich,	Hanna,	Mitchell,	Tillman,
Allen,	Harris,	Morrill,	Turner,
Butler,	Heitfeld,	Murphy,	Turpie,
Caffery,	Jones, Nev.	Platt, N. Y.	Vest,
Chandler,	Keeney,	Quay,	Warren,
Clark,	McMillan,	Rawlins,	Wellington,
Gallinger,	Mantle,	Sewell,	Wilson,
Gear,	Martin,	Smith,
Gray,	Mason,	Stewart,
Hale,	Mills,	Thurston,

So the Senate refused to proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me for one moment?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. There seems to be a disposition to filibuster against the motion I have made, and I withdraw it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. That is a gratuitous fling on the part of the Senator from Massachusetts, which is not justified. It is 6 o'clock, and I think a motion to adjourn can be made without any such characterization. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will withdraw his motion. There are a number of post-office and other nominations about which Senators are extremely anxious; the session is drawing to a close, and it is somewhat important that they be acted upon.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I will withdraw the motion.

Mr. HOAR. Does the Senator insist upon my withdrawing my motion?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I do not. The Senator from Massachusetts can do as he pleases.

Mr. HOAR. Then I will adhere to my motion.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HOAR. Then I withdraw the motion. Now, is there filibustering or not?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The motion will stand this time.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I believe I have the floor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. HAWLEY. I desire to present a conference report.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have moved that the Senate adjourn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understood the motion to be withdrawn three times. Is it renewed?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I renewed the motion when the Senator from Massachusetts renewed his motion.

Mr. HAWLEY. I present a conference report.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I thought a motion to adjourn could be made at any time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It can be, but it should not be withdrawn at the same moment.

Mr. HAWLEY. It can not be made when I have the floor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas can renew his motion at any time.

HARBOR DEFENSES AND FORTIFICATIONS.

Mr. HAWLEY submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 4714) to protect harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

1. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same.
2. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House in page 1, line 10, of the bill, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the words "has been," in said amendment of the House, strike out the words "or shall be."
3. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House in page 2, line 6, of the bill, and agree to the same.

JOS. R. HAWLEY,
W. J. SEWELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. A. T. HULL,
M. GRIFFIN,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. CARTER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10581) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

JOS. R. HAWLEY,
THOS. H. CARTER,
S. PASCO,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. A. T. HULL,
N. N. COX,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Certainly. I withdraw the motion.

Mr. LODGE. From the Committee on Printing I report favorably with an amendment a House concurrent resolution to print the bankruptcy act, for which I ask immediate consideration. It is very important to supply us with copies of the act.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

The amendment of the Committee on Printing was, to insert in line 9, after the word "with," the words "paper cover and;" so as to make the concurrent resolution read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," 25,000 copies, 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate; that such print be of the act with paper cover and index, etc., as prepared by the Clerk.

The amendment was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution as amended was agreed to.

PRINTING OF WAR REVENUE LAW.

Mr. LODGE. From the Committee on Printing I report a concurrent resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution, which is as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House concurring), That there be printed 20,000 copies of the war-revenue law of 1893, with paper covers and index, 13,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 6,500 copies for the use of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is this a Senate resolution?

Mr. LODGE. No; it is not a Senate resolution. The Senate passed a resolution to print 18,000 copies for the use of the Senate alone, which is the largest number we can secure under the statutory limit of cost. This is a concurrent resolution to print 20,000 copies more, of which we get 6,500.

Mr. COCKRELL. We have already passed a resolution to print it for the use of the Senate?

Mr. LODGE. Yes; 18,000 copies.

Mr. COCKRELL. The same ought to be done as to the bankruptcy act.

Mr. LODGE. Of the bankruptcy act 75,000 copies are to be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF THE MINT.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 6,000 copies of the Report of the Director of the Mint for the fiscal year 1897, 2,000 for the use of the House, 1,000 for the use of the Senate, and 3,000 for the use of the Bureau of the Mint.

STAFF SIGNAL OFFICERS.

Mr. SEWELL. I attempted to call up this morning the joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, but there was not a copy of the bill on the desk. I ask that it may be taken up now.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, in line 4, after the word "April," to strike out "twenty-fifth" and insert "twenty-second;" and in line 8, after the word "officer," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That so much of the act of Congress approved August 6, 1894, as reduces the grade of the Chief Signal Officer of the Army is hereby repealed, and the colonel therein provided for shall be Assistant Chief Signal Officer and appointed, by regular promotion, upon the approval of this resolution: Provided further, That the laws authorizing the detail and assignment of the officers of the Army to duty in the Weather Bureau be, and are hereby, repealed.

So as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That so much of section 10 of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1893, as provides that the staff of the general commanding an Army corps shall consist of certain officers with the rank of lieutenant-colonel shall be held to include among such officers a chief signal officer: Provided, That so much of the act of Congress approved August 6, 1894, etc.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A joint resolution to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, and for other purposes."

EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 7399) limiting the hours of daily services of laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed upon the public works of or work done for the United States or any Territory or the District of Columbia be made the unfinished business.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to say that that can not be done. The unfinished business after the Hawaiian joint resolution has passed becomes the bill (S. 3698) for the restoration of annuities to the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Dakota or Sioux Indians.

Mr. CANNON. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by me after the morning hour to-morrow.

Mr. MORGAN. That can not be done.

Mr. CANNON. I meant to ask that it be made the special order at the conclusion of the morning business to-morrow.

Mr. MORGAN. That is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Utah is in order.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Pending that motion, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CANNON. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After fifteen minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 6 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, July 7, 1898, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 6, 1898.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Timothy F. Burke, of Wyoming, to be attorney of the United States for the district of Wyoming, vice Gibson Clark, whose term will expire September 23, 1898.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Frank A. Hadsell, of Wyoming, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming, vice John A. McDermott, whose term will expire September 23, 1898.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

P. A. Surg. Frederick A. Hesler, to be a surgeon in the Navy, from the 7th day of May, 1898, vice Surg. Charles A. Siegfried, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

FIRST REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

First Lieut. Edmund M. Sawtelle, First United States Volunteer Engineers, vice Parsons, declined.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Heber R. Bishop, jr., First United States Volunteer Engineers.

To be second lieutenant.

William G. Mitchell, of New York.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenant.

John W. Daniel, jr., of Virginia.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

John E. Davis, of Mississippi.

SEVENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Robert C. Welles, of Missouri.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Maj. A. W. Shockley, of Missouri, vice Landry, declined.

TO BE INSPECTOR-GENERAL WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Perry Belmont, of New York.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY—ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

First Lieut. Edwin B. Babbitt, to be captain, June 15, 1898.

First Lieut. Ormond M. Lissak, to be captain, June 15, 1898.

First Lieut. Beverly W. Dunn, to be captain, June 15, 1898.

First Lieut. John T. Thompson, to be captain, June 15, 1898.

TRANSFERS IN THE ARMY.

Second Lieut. Rodmond V. Beach, Second Regiment, to the First Regiment, to date from June 21, 1898.

Second Lieut. Louis B. Hamilton, First Regiment, to the Second Regiment, to date from June 21, 1898.

POSTMASTERS.

J. D. Fowler, to be postmaster at San Luis Obispo, in the county of San Luis Obispo and State of California, in the place of G. M. Payne, whose commission expired May 29, 1898.

Henry Dryhurst, to be postmaster at Meriden, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut, in the place of J. J. Anderson, whose commission expires July 10, 1898.

James F. Boughton, to be postmaster at Madison, in the county of Morgan and State of Georgia, in the place of C. M. Furlow, jr., whose commission expires July 18, 1898.

Joseph J. Hamilton, to be postmaster at Rome, in the county of Floyd and State of Georgia, in the place of John M. Vandiver, removed.

E. E. Stone, to be postmaster at Dublin, in the county of Laurens and State of Georgia, in the place of V. L. Stanley, removed.

A. T. Jenkins, to be postmaster at Sullivan, in the county of Moultrie and State of Illinois, in the place of J. T. Eden, removed.

Frank E. Fritcher, to be postmaster at Nashua, in the county of Chickasaw and State of Iowa, in the place of Frank E. Fritcher, whose commission expired June 16, 1898. (Reappointment.)

George S. Harris, to be postmaster at Gas City, in the county of Grant and State of Indiana, in the place of W. H. Lightle, whose commission expires July 19, 1898.

Thomas Rudd, to be postmaster at Butler, in the county of DeKalb and State of Indiana, in the place of J. J. Oberlin, whose commission expires August 2, 1898.

Archibald Shaw, to be postmaster at Lawrenceburg, in the county of Dearborn and State of Indiana, in the place of G. C. Columbia, whose commission expires August 3, 1898.

Benjamin A. Allison, to be postmaster at McPherson, in the county of McPherson and State of Kansas, in the place of Warren Knaus, whose commission expired June 7, 1898.

James Froy, to be postmaster at Enterprise, in the county of Dickinson and State of Kansas, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President from and after July 1, 1898.

Sidney H. Brigham, to be postmaster at Lawrence, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts, in the place of J. P. Sweeney, whose commission expires August 27, 1898.

John A. Thayer, to be postmaster at Attleboro, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts, in the place of G. A. Sweeney, whose commission expires August 8, 1898.

David E. Cross, to be postmaster at Amboy, in the county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President from and after July 1, 1898.

John F. Wrabek, to be postmaster at New Prague, in the county of Scott and State of Minnesota, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after July 1, 1898.

John W. Lockhart, to be postmaster at Durant, in the county of Holmes and State of Mississippi, in the place of Adeline Edwards, whose commission expired April 11, 1898.

Thomas Richardson, to be postmaster at Port Gibson, in the county of Claiborne and State of Mississippi, in the place of Harriet L. Hastings, removed.

E. H. Babcock, to be postmaster at La Plata, in the county of Macon and State of Missouri, in the place of J. W. Overstreet, removed.

Isaac N. Strawn, to be postmaster at Hopkins, in the county of Nodaway and State of Missouri, in the place of S. E. Wible, removed.

John A. Spalding, to be postmaster at Nashua, in the county of Hillsboro and State of New Hampshire, in the place of A. N. Flinn, whose commission expired June 7, 1898.

William O. Armbruster, to be postmaster at Weehawken, in the county of Hudson and State of New Jersey, in the place of R. F. Krieger, whose commission expired June 16, 1898.

Louis T. Derousse, to be postmaster at Camden, in the county of Camden and State of New Jersey, in the place of H. B. Paul, whose commission expired June 1, 1898.

William S. Jackson, to be postmaster at Belmar, in the county of Monmouth and State of New Jersey, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President from and after July 1, 1898.

George L. Hitchcock, to be postmaster at Ozone Park, in the county of Queens and State of New York, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after July 1, 1898.

John McNally, to be postmaster at Sing Sing, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in the place of J. I. Kane, whose commission expired January 12, 1898.

Emiel Rebell, to be postmaster at Fort Plain, in the county of Montgomery and State of New York, in the place of J. J. Witter, whose commission expired May 9, 1898.

Isaac Requa, to be postmaster at Tarrytown, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in the place of N. H. Odell, whose commission expires July 18, 1898.

Alexander M. Long, to be postmaster at Rockingham, in the county of Richmond and State of North Carolina, in the place of W. E. Harrison, whose commission expired April 5, 1898.

John B. Respass, to be postmaster at Washington, in the county of Beaufort and State of North Carolina, in the place of C. W. Tayloe, whose commission expired February 5, 1898.

David W. Gray, to be postmaster at Harrison, in the county of Hamilton and State of Ohio, in the place of A. H. Frost, whose commission expires July 10, 1898.

George A. Hubbard, to be postmaster at Beren, in the county of Cuyahoga and State of Ohio, in the place of Frank M. Root, whose commission expired May 9, 1898.

John H. Shankland, to be postmaster at Caldwell, in the county of Noble and State of Ohio, in the place of Lebbeus Belford, whose commission expired May 16, 1898.

William McKinley, to be postmaster at Kingfisher, in the county of Kingfisher and Territory of Oklahoma, in the place of C. J. Nesbitt, whose commission expired June 23, 1898.

Elbert W. Hoyt, to be postmaster at Ponca (late New Ponca), in the county of Kay and Territory of Oklahoma, in the place of W. S. Thomas, removed.

Samuel Murphy, to be postmaster at Oklahoma, in the county of Oklahoma and Territory of Oklahoma, in the place of John A. Flattery, removed.

William M. Cochran, to be postmaster at Dubois, in the county of Clearfield and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of W. F. Daley, whose commission expired March 29, 1898.

Edgar J. Graff, to be postmaster at Blairsville, in the county of Indiana and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of R. B. Evans, whose commission expires August 8, 1898.

William D. Hamilton, to be postmaster at Freedom, in the county of Beaver and State of Pennsylvania, the appointment of a postmaster for the said office having, by law, become vested in the President on and after July 1, 1898.

Robert J. Henderson, to be postmaster at Phoenixville, in the county of Chester and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of John Haviland, whose commission expired March 19, 1898.

R. M. Hunt, to be postmaster at Houtzdale, in the county of Clearfield and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of Joseph Delehunt, whose commission expired March 5, 1898.

Samuel Keat, to be postmaster at Pen Argyl, in the county of Northampton and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of W. P. Messenger, resigned.

George G. Alexander, to be postmaster at Camden, in the county of Kershaw and State of South Carolina, in the place of C. J. Shannon, whose commission expired May 11, 1898.

Walter L. Darby, to be postmaster at Pomeroy, in the county of Garfield and State of Washington, in the place of J. D. Tyrrel, removed.

D. Jay Olds, to be postmaster at South Bend, in the county of Pacific and State of Washington, in the place of J. J. Brown, whose commission expired April 5, 1898.

Ida A. Hewes, to be postmaster at Casper, in the county of Natrona and State of Wyoming, in the place of M. L. Bishop, removed.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 6, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Charles K. Maddox, of Georgia.

William Y. Carter, of Georgia.

Jefferson Wilcox, of Georgia.

To be first lieutenants.

Lee C. Hoyl, of Georgia.

Thad H. Parker, of Georgia.

To be second lieutenant.

James H. Blount, jr., of Georgia.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Charles T. Pollard, of Alabama.

To be chaplain.

Robert D. Wear, of Alabama.

To be captain.

James K. Vardaman, of Mississippi.

To be first lieutenant.

William E. Darby, of Mississippi.

To be second lieutenant.

Samuel K. Mayers, of Mississippi.

POSTMASTERS.

E. W. Scott, to be postmaster at Winchester, in the county of Randolph and State of Indiana.

John A. Spalding, to be postmaster at Nashua, in the county of Hillsboro and State of New Hampshire.

Henry Dryhurst, to be postmaster at Meriden, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, July 6, 1898.

The House was called to order at 12 o'clock m. by Hon. ALEXANDER McDOWELL, who read the following communication:

I hereby designate Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE of New York to preside over the House this day.

T. B. REED, Speaker.

JULY 6, 1898.

Mr. PAYNE accordingly took the chair as Speaker pro tempore. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit the following resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, I am constrained to demand the regular order.

Mr. PERKINS. This is to print some copies of the war revenue act.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Very well.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 133, "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," with marginal notes and index prepared by the Clerk and bound in paper, 100,000 copies; 67,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 33,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10991) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes. Amendment numbered 30.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, to recede and concur.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman from Illinois use a part of his time?

Mr. CANNON. I am not prepared to go on at this moment. I wish the gentleman would go on, if he is prepared. The gentleman who expects to talk is not in his place.

Mr. MAGUIRE. We have used so much more of our time than you have thus far, that I would like you to go on, if possible.

Mr. CANNON. I am not prepared to do so.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HILBORN].

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. Speaker, this is not the first effort to secure legislation by Congress to provide a plan for the settlement of the debts owed by the railroads to the Government.

But all previous efforts have been made on the ordinary lines of Congressional legislation.

In each case a bill has been introduced in the House and referred to the Committee on Pacific Railroads, a committee especially created to deal with matters relating to these railroads.

That committee has had exhaustive hearings and has made reports to the House for our information.

This House has been in session for months, but no funding bill has been introduced.

Our Committee on Pacific Railroads has made no report recommending the passage of this or any bill for funding the debts of the railroads. No officer of the Government whose duty it is to advise us in regard to these matters has recommended this amendment.

But now, in the closing days of the session, a funding bill is attached to the last great appropriation bill.

I object to this method of legislation. It is a dangerous method of legislation and should not be encouraged.

The Government has an interest amounting to about $60,000,000 in those railroads, and this matter should be carefully considered in the ordinary way.

There can be no exigency which requires this unseemly haste.

Congress will be in session again in a few months.

A bill covering the provisions of this amendment can be introduced in the House and considered in committee; and if it is deemed a proper bill, will pass the House.

I confess that I am one of those who do not believe any further legislation in regard to railroads is profitable.

Our previous experience in this kind of legislation has not been reassuring.

The Pattison Commission use the following language in their report:

Nearly every obligation which these corporations assumed under the laws of the United States or as common carriers has been violated. Their management had been a national disgrace.

The Wilson committee spoke as follows:

Every precaution that Congress had taken for the proper management of these great properties had failed of its purpose.

By further legislation you will only complicate matters.

Let there be a foreclosure and sale. At the sale let anybody bid who wants to buy the roads, and then we shall be sure of getting the full value of the property. Then the Government will have no further interest in railroads. Then the railroads will be out of politics.

Adopt this scheme and the country will have railroad politics as long as the debt lasts. They will be here again asking for a modification of the plan. Let us end the matter and get rid of it, as we are forever rid of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific.

I want to deny in the most emphatic manner that the people of California are for the Government ownership of these railroads. Some newspapers and some individuals may favor the ownership of these railroads by the Government. But the people of the State do not ask or expect that the Government should own these roads and run them for the benefit of California. What they are striving for is a competing line of railroad.

One company now controls all the railroads which cross the continent and reach the middle and northern part of the State.

Our people believe that competition would be beneficial to them and they have been waiting and praying for a rival railroad.

If this amendment is adopted, their hopes will be blasted forever.

For that reason I am opposed to the amendment.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire a change of reference of two bills. The bill S. 4812 and the bill H. R. 10935 have been sent to the Committee on Ways and Means, and they ought to go to the Committee on Claims. I ask that the change of reference be made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks a change of reference of bills the title of which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4812) to pay J. and W. Seligman and Co. the sum of $1,794.56 for certain coupons detached from United States bonds, which said coupons were lost on the Cunard steamship Oregon, sunk at sea March 14, 1886.

A bill (H. R. 10935) to pay J. and W. Seligman & Co. the sum of $1,794.56 for certain coupons detached from United States bonds, which said coupons were lost on the Cunard steamship Oregon, sunk at sea March 14, 1886.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the change of reference will be made.

There was no objection.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. McRAE].

Mr. CANNON. I will say to the gentleman that I have had two applications for time, and neither one of the gentlemen is upon the floor. I am not purposely detaining the House.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I have so often discussed the question of funding or extending the debts due from the bond-aided railroads that I dislike to do so again; but I shall ask the House to give me attention for a few moments while I state the proposition now pending and some of my reasons for opposing it. I hope no Representative will be influenced or scared by the statements that have been made to the effect that the Government security for the debt due from the Central Pacific and the Western Pacific railroads is not good.

We have heard many times prophecies like those made here yesterday and by some of the same gentlemen. We have been told repeatedly by those who want time for these companies that nothing could be collected out of any of them if we proceeded in a regular legal way, and for that reason Congress should fund the 6 per cent debts at 3 per cent interest. In the Fifty-third Congress the friends of these roads came with a proposition to fund them for fifty years at 3 per cent interest. We were able to defeat that bill, when all the arrangements seemed to be made for its passage. It was a hard fight.

I hope I will be pardoned for saying that I am proud of the part I took in that contest for the people. I showed that the bill then pending, like this proposition, funded a just debt, due and well secured, at 3 per cent, and at the same time allowed the payment of not exceeding 4 per cent to the unfaithful stockholders. I moved an amendment, which was adopted, prohibiting the payment of any dividends until the debt of the United States had been fully paid. After the House adopted that amendment it was easy to defeat the funding bill, for those interested in the scheme knew that if all the earnings were applied to the Government debt it would be paid. The roads came to the next Congress and wanted more time.

Such a fight was made under the leadership of the California delegation that the bill again failed to pass. The debts of the Union Pacific and some of the other roads became due. Actions were commenced, and in every case where the executive department bid enough to cover the first-mortgage debt and the debt due the United States we recovered dollar for dollar for every bond and coupon paid or indorsed by the Government.

It took a tremendous effort on the part of the friends of the people and the press of the country to arouse the Administration, but at last the Attorney-General and the President, be it said to their credit, were brought to the point of pressing the fight against the railroad companies. In the face of this splendid result in connection with those roads, is it right for us now to consent to delay payment of so large a sum when we are now borrowing to meet expenses?

Is it necessary for us to surrender the control of so important a matter to a commission and give them the power and discretion to make a settlement of a debt about the justness and legality of which there is no doubt or question? Is it necessary for Congress, when the time has come when we can compel payment of this debt, to pass a law that will surrender the legal rights we have? It seems to me it would be the most reckless kind of legislation for us to do so.

Why should such a proposition be placed upon an appropriation bill that carries millions of dollars for the support of the Army? Why is it not presented on its own merits? We ought to indignantly reject the amendment and to say to this Central Pacific Railroad, dominated by Mr. Huntington, president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, that it must pay up or take the consequences of foreclosure. The Government had better lose a part of its debt than to condone the frauds of the promoters of these roads or to surrender any legal right it has under the circumstances. The people want a vigorous and prompt action by the courts. There is nothing in the proposition for the benefit of the Government.

As I have said before, the record of the transaction connected with the incorporation, subsidizing, and building of these Pacific railroads constitutes one of the blackest pages in the legislative history of our country. It is marked by more corruption and more rascality and more fraud than all other legislation since the birth of the Government. The people expect these companies to pay every dollar they owe and to pay it when it is due. I hope we will adhere to the policy already commenced and hold every advantage we now have.

The principal and interest of the bonds indorsed for the Central Pacific Railroad by the Government amounted to $71,671,574, and those for the Western Railroad to $5,433,029. There is still unpaid between fifty-nine and sixty million dollars, which will soon be due. The Central Pacific has been leased to and is now operated by the Southern Pacific.

That company does not want to lose control of it, and through its president, Mr. Huntington, has asked for this legislation. It is for the benefit of the Southern Pacific and no one else. Shall we give it to that company and thereby defeat or delay the Government in the collection of the debt; continue the monopoly the Southern Pacific now has and assist it in robbing the stockholders of the Central Pacific?

It will be time enough to appoint commissioners and seek to compromise when we have secured a judgment and order of sale and ascertain that the railroads owned by these two companies are not worth as much as the first mortgage and the Government debt. Until that time I insist that we proceed in a legal and proper way to collect the whole of the debt. This policy has won in the past, and there should be no deviation from it in this case unless gentlemen are opposed to it because it will win.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. MAGUIRE. If it is possible that anything can be said in support of this proposition, I would like to hear from some gentleman on that side.

Mr. CANNON. How much time is there remaining, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] has two hours and thirteen minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] one hour and twenty-two minutes remaining.

Mr. CANNON. I yield, Mr. Speaker, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] twenty-five minutes.

Mr. GROW. Mr. Speaker, when this question is divested of all extraneous circumstances thrown around it, it is narrowed down simply to this: The Government is the junior creditor of these railroads, and if it can receive back the money that it advanced, that is all the Government can get and all it has a right to ask. The reason that it is a junior creditor is this: In 1862 Congress passed a law for the construction of a railroad across the continent. It had been a subject of discussion in the country for some years before, but the trouble was, there were three interests that wanted a railroad—one a southern road, another a northern road, and the third a central road. So that no plan was ever matured by Congress for the construction of any railroad until 1862.

Then the plan was to build one railroad, and the necessities of the country imperatively demanded that Congress should devise a plan and invite the capital of the country to engage in this enterprise. And yet on the plan Congress devised in 1862 no work was done for about a year and a half. No capitalist sought it as a desirable investment. We hear much about whispers of a lobby that get in the brain of some men and, like wheels, run there; like the intimation thrown out by the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] that some lobby influence had whispered this measure into existence. I never heard from any human being that this proposition was to come up until it was reported by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in his report from the committee to the House.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GROW. Yes; if it is not too long.

Mr. MAGUIRE. From what source did any recommendation or request for this measure come?

Mr. GROW. I have just stated that I never heard a word from any human being about it before this amendment was presented to us. And yet we hear this clamor from those who are opposing the measure that a lobby is hanging round this Hall. I have heard that cry from the beginning of my Congressional service. It is generally the resort of men who have not arguments to support their case and who appeal to some prejudice in their opposition to a measure.

Mr. Speaker, the beginning of this scheme for a Pacific railroad was by Congress itself. When this scheme was originated in this House, 2,000,000 men confronted each other on the battlefield upon which hung the life of the Republic. The bands of the Union were being sundered on this side of the Rocky Mountains by a local feeling; and similar ideas, engendered by the two systems of labor in this country, making two antagonistic systems of civilization, had spread to the Pacific coast to determine whether California should be a slave or a free State; and public opinion being fomented there, when the outbreak came for the destruction of the Union of our fathers, the question was, Will the people of California attempt a secession so as to make a great empire west of the Rocky Mountains?

The Republican party in 1860 passed a resolution in favor of a Pacific railroad. Acting in accordance therewith, Congress devised a measure for securing a railroad and enacted it into law. No lobby was here. It was a proposition emanating entirely in the halls of legislation to the capital of the world: "Come, build this road; help us bind this Union together with iron and steel bands, while patriotism on the battlefield is maintaining it with the blood of our sons."

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. GROW. Do not interrupt me, if you please.

Mr. SIMPSON. Permit me to ask—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. GROW. Well, yes; but I hope the gentleman will be very brief.

Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman has had long experience in Congress and was at one time the Speaker of the House. Does he think that this is a proper way to bring in a measure of this kind—as an amendment on an appropriation bill, a bill embracing largely appropriations to carry on the war?

Mr. GROW. Mr. Speaker, I answer the gentleman by saying I do not care how a proposition comes before the House; I am ready to act on it—supporting it if it is right and opposing it if it is wrong. This measure has come to us in the regular course of legislation. The Senate had the right under their rules or usage to put it on; and they have sent it to us. Now, it is boy's play to say that it does not come here in the right way. I have seen too much of such attempts to defeat what is right in itself by saying that it is not here in the right time or the right way.

Mr. SIMPSON. Well—

Mr. GROW. No; I can not yield any more. I never have any trouble in meeting any question presented for legislation, I do not care in what way it comes before me. My judgment of its rightfulness or wrongfulness controls my action. I do not make any boy's excuse or plead the baby act by saying that it is not here in the right way or proper time.

Now to return to a brief history of this question, and I will thank gentlemen to permit me to finish it without interruption.

Congress provided a plan which they thought would secure the building of this railroad. But no capitalists proposed to invest money under that plan; and for a year and a half or thereabouts no work was done; no organization made; nobody proposed to engage in this enterprise. At last Oakes Ames, a man of great business capacity, a man who with his brother developed great manufacturing industries on the Connecticut River in Massachusetts, enlisted some capitalists in Boston to undertake this enterprise provided Congress would make one change in the law it had passed.

And this change was asked for a good reason. They said: "This is a great national enterprise for the benefit of this whole country, for the benefit of the commerce of the world. We doubt whether it is a good investment for individual capital. We are not willing to take the risk of this great enterprise upon ourselves. Let Congress take a second lien on this road for what it proposes to advance and we will raise the rest of the money and build the road."

If I had possessed all the money of all the plutocrats of the world, I would not have put a dollar in this enterprise with the Government holding a first mortgage on it. These capitalists asked a change of the plan in that respect; and it was made, for the claim was a reasonable one.

We hear a great clamor from gentlemen whose great anxiety seems to be to force these railroads into bankruptcy. It has been said that the Crédit Mobilier was the grand scheme that secured this legislation. The Crédit Mobilier had no existence when this legislation took place changing the mortgage of the United States from a first to a second mortgage. It was a year or a year and a half after the bill passed Congress before the act incorporating the Crédit Mobilier passed the legislature of Pennsylvania.

That act was passed, like other acts in aid of great enterprises, to enable men to invest their money in public enterprises and save themselves from individual liability for all the expenditures of a corporation. This company was like the construction company of the Central Pacific Railroad. These construction companies took the contracts from the railroad company and built the roads. The construction company was like the Crédit Mobilier that took contracts to build the road. And let it be remembered that the men who put their money in the construction of these railroads staked all they put in and took the risk. But they were not individually liable for all the debts of the company in which they might invest their money.

The Crédit Mobilier did nothing more than that. It was an act of the Pennsylvania legislature under which men could contract to build railways or enter into other enterprises. These gentlemen did exactly what any prudent man having money to invest would do under similar circumstances; that is to say, he would endeavor to secure himself against individual liabilities for the debts of the association in which he had invested his money.

How many miles of railroad, Mr. Speaker, would have been built in the United States without corporations with which to build them? Not a single railroad would ever have been built by individual enterprise and private subscription alone. It is only by the aggregation of capital through corporations that you can secure the construction of these important and expensive improvements, for the reason that no man, if he be a prudent man, will risk his fortune in a great enterprise involving large sums of money and be individually liable. But he might be ready to invest a certain portion of his means and take the chance of its being a profitable investment, risking only the amount of money he puts in.

This was all that was done by the Crédit Mobilier, of which we have heard so much. It had nothing to do with the legislation of Congress—nothing whatever. In making the mortgage, giving a second mortgage on the road, it was proper that the Government of the United States should take the risk and not the individual citizen, who was willing to take responsibility only to a certain extent, but not to the full liability of a great national enterprise like this. And yet it has been repeated here over and over again that the Crédit Mobilier used corrupt influences in Congress to secure this change.

I avail myself, Mr. Speaker, of this opportunity, to use the phrase of Colonel Benton, to vindicate the truth of history and repel an aspersion on the honesty of the American Congress of those times.

The men who undertook this enterprise performed everything that was exacted of them under the law. They built the road and completed it seven or eight years before the time fixed in the act. They never received a dollar of money or an acre of land more than the law provided for. They committed no fraud whatever upon the Government; they have, to use a favorite phrase, stolen no assets of the Government; they took only what the law in specific terms gave them. They were entitled to a certain sum for doing a certain thing; they did the certain thing and received what the law permitted them to receive, and if they made money it was their good fortune. There is not a man on the floor of this House who, if he had known of the enterprise at the time and could have foreseen the future, would not have invested his money if he had an opportunity as a fair business transaction in the Crédit Mobilier Association.

Of the 280,000 miles of railroad in this country I venture more than two-thirds have been reorganized within the last five or six years. Every State in the Union—or, at least, every one that I know of—has a law on its statute books that any railroad company can reorganize itself without going to a legislative body for a recharter. This may be done if it be in danger of going into a receiver's hands or into bankruptcy. They can reorganize and begin anew without applying for any legislative authority. There is no such law of Congress, and hence it is necessary that these companies chartered by Congress must come here for the privilege of doing it. And I wish to say right here that if I had all the money of all the capitalists of the world I would not put a dollar of it into any business enterprise that Congress had control over or the power of determining how it should be managed.

There being no law on our statute books for reorganization of companies chartered by Congress, they have to apply to Congress for such authority or allow the road to be sold for what it would bring on foreclosure. And yet the lawmaking power, instead of aiding them, is forcing them into bankruptcy. If, for instance, I as an individual should associate with three others in an enterprise of building a railroad, and three other men had taken $3,000,000 of bonds on the road, which constituted a first mortgage on it, and I had taken three million of the second mortgage, and the first-mortgage holders were receiving 5 per cent, while I was receiving 6 per cent, and after building the road we should find that the road could not keep itself in repair and pay fixed charges, and we sit down for the purpose of reorganizing, what is to be done? Somebody must release something, necessarily. The railroad is not worth more than it earns. A railroad is not necessarily worth what it costs to build it. A mile of railroad that cost $1,000,000 is worth no more than a mile of railroad which costs $80,000. The value of the road is measured by its earning capacity. It is the net receipts of the road which measure its value. If it does not earn enough to keep it in repair and pay the fixed charges, it must be sold or else the men having the money invested in it must reorganize on some basis in which it may earn enough to do this. That is usually done by the creditors reducing their rate of interest. But if that is not enough, then they must lose some part of their principal.

Now, if these three parties with whom I am associated, they having $3,000,000 in the first mortgage and receiving 5 per cent interest and I holding $3,000,000 of the second mortgage and receiving 6 per cent interest, and they are willing to reduce their interest from 5 to 4 per cent provided that I reduce my interest from 6 to 4 per cent, and extend the time for payment, I, being the junior creditor, in business fairness must make the greater loss necessary to secure the reorganization. I would consider that I was a mean man if I refused to do it especially if I had received greater advantages from this investment than the others. And, sir, so long as I act for the Government, I will not permit the Government, so far as I have the power, to do a mean act to anybody any more than I would allow myself to do a mean act in any of my transactions with my fellow-men. The Government of the United States has received greater advantages by the construction of these Pacific railroads than has accrued to all the individuals who have had anything to do with them.

The Government has saved in the transportation of army supplies during the last thirty years in the quelling of Indian uprisings and wars more than all the money it ever invested in aid of building these railroads. Tell me how much of the land between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean would to-day be settled without this railroad across the continent? Most of it would be a howling wilderness over which wild Indians and wild beasts would still roam. The last thirty years have seen these great empires of free States reared on the ruins of savage life. The hope that those great States would be built was a reason for building the railroad in addition to linking the two oceans together in one indissoluble union.

The Government has received greater advantages than all the people connected with these roads. The construction of this road resulted in the founding of these great States. It prevented surely the formation of a geographical division bounded by the Sierra Nevada on the east at a time when it was uncertain what might be the result of the irrepressible conflict between two antagonistic civilizations on the east of this mountain range, and whether in the end a hostile frontier line would be established across the continent lined with frowning battlements and bristling cannon, entailing upon coming generations the countless woes of endless border conflict.

It is proposed in this amendment that three officials of the Government, who I take it for granted every man in the House will admit would take as good care of the interests of the Government as any three of its members, shall have authority to arrange this matter. I am aware of the fact that we are in the habit of thinking because we have the power of a vote in making laws that we are wiser and more patriotic than anybody else in our efforts to take care of the Government.

These three officials, under the approval of the President, are authorized to make an arrangement by which the Government shall secure all the money it advanced to this enterprise, to be paid within ten years, with 3 per cent interest. The Government can borrow all the money it wants for 3 per cent, and I say it would be a mean thing for the Government to-day to seek a greater rate of interest from its citizens in a great national enterprise than it is obliged to pay when it borrows money.

These officials are among those who have been intrusted by the people of the country with the administration of their Government. Why not allow them to settle this question according to their best wisdom and make such an arrangement with these people who have invested their money for the public welfare as will allow this great enterprise to go on without subjecting it to the expense and loss of reorganization under a forced sale?

If this amendment results in no settlement, if no agreement can be arrived at which shall be satisfactory to these Cabinet officers and the President of the United States, then we lose nothing. We shall be just where we are now. By the passage of this amendment the deficiency bill becomes a law, and that is ended, the question with these railroads is ended, and the Government will receive all it is entitled to. The interest charged on the money loaned by the Government to this corporation has been at the rate of 6 per cent when money could be borrowed by corporations similar to this at any time within the last twenty years for less than that.

The Government has received all the great benefits which it expected to receive in the first place. Junior creditors, as I have said before, must provide for paying off a first mortgage or they are not sure of receiving anything on their own. That was done in the case of the Union Pacific. I do not count it a wise business transaction for us to authorize the President to take from the Treasury and use, if necessary, $28,000,000 to secure our second lien, when it can be secured by negotiation under the arrangement proposed in this amendment.

Something is due from the Government to its citizens who invest their money in great public enterprises. If the law gives them anything, I care not what, they are entitled to it. If they make money out of the enterprise, it is their good fortune. They took all the risk, and there is no reason for claiming that the Government gives them too much money. They never took a dollar except what the law authorized. They completed their part of the contract in less time than was provided, and the country to-day is indebted to Huntington, Hopkins, Stanford, Crocker, and Oakes Ames and the Chinese laborers for the completion of this great enterprise at the time it was completed.

Without the Chinese labor that was then used this road could not have been built in the time it was. No man connected with the road has received from the Government a cent more than the law gave him. I grant if the lawmakers at the time had understood fully the geography of the country, they would probably have fixed the rate per mile in different proportions over different parts of the line. They fixed a rate of $15,000 a mile for a certain distance from the Missouri River to a certain meridian of longitude, and then increased the amount for certain other distances until it equaled $47,000 a mile.

The figures were put in by my then colleague, George W. Scranton, who had been engaged in railroad enterprises and had opened a large part of the Wyoming coal fields to market. He was a man of great business capacity and was put on the Pacific Railroad Committee because of his intimate personal knowledge of this kind of business. He reasoned, as anyone would reason who was familiar with railroad building in the old States, that as they advanced from the river toward the mountains, which were supposed to be precipitous and rock bound, it would cost far more per mile to build the road, when in fact the topography of the country shows that from the Missouri River to somewhere about the summit at Sherman it is no more difficult to build a railroad than through any other portion of this country. The heavy work began when they struck the Sierra Nevadas, on the line of the Central Pacific.

This increase did give to the company that had this easier line of road to build a large amount for the building of the road, but the law provided that the men who invested their money should have that amount, and they only took what they were entitled to by law. These men complied with all the requirements of the law of Congress and in less time than the law provided, and now, when they propose a reorganization, which in any State of this Union a company in like condition could perform without an act of the legislature, but because there is no law of Congress authorizing such action, each member of the House feels that he can use his vote to compel just such an organization as he sees proper.

It is not treating men who invested their money in these great enterprises fairly. The Government has only the rights of a junior creditor in any railroad enterprise, and that is all it is entitled to. If an arrangement can be made that will secure the payment to the Government of the money it advanced, that is all it can in fairness ask. This plan will give the Government its money; but if it does not, no right is lost to the Government. But there is a class of men, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], who are anxious to saddle a bankrupt railroad on the United States to be run by the Government.

Pennsylvania had an experience in internal improvements. She built railroads and canals until her public debt amounted to over $42,000,000, increasing every year. She sold all the improvements for which her debt had been created for some $8,000,000 or $9,000,000 and commenced paying her debt, which has been reduced until to-day it is some $3,000,000 or $4,000,000. If she had kept her internal improvements, her debt would have constantly increased.

In Germany the Government operates its railroads. Why? Because it is a Government of officials, a class Government, a Government that has class rule. The men who are employed by that Government in that business make it their life business; but in this country to have the President of the United States a President to run the railroads and to be responsible for their management, appointing all agents on a recommendation of a member of Congress, the engineers, firemen, conductors, and master mechanics for their efficient services at political caucuses, would be a great calamity. I have no doubt my friend from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] would complain of the civil service after we had undertaken the operation of the railroads for one year; and if in that time half the passengers did not get their necks broken, they would be very fortunate.

I am opposed to any Government ownership of railroads, even if it were possible for the Government to pay ten thousand million dollars for the railroads already constructed in this country. If the Government receives ample security for the money it has invested, that is enough.

The Government has received more advantages from the construction of these railroads than the men who have put their money into it. As I have said before on this question, if the legislators who passed the law providing for the building of a Pacific railroad could have had a guaranty at that time that within six years the road would be built from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, by spending $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 as a donation, even it would have been given as readily as the $500,000,000 that was appropriated for arming the first 500,000 soldiers, for at that time both were thought to be necessary for preserving the Union, for its future and for the welfare of all coming time.

Mr. FLEMING. I should like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania a question in reference to this amendment, if he will yield to me.

Mr. GROW. Certainly.

Mr. FLEMING. The question I wish to ask the gentleman is this. I notice that on page 22 of the bill it is provided:

That said commission are hereby empowered to grant such time or times of payment by installment and at such rates of interest, to be not less than 3 per cent per annum, payable semiannually, and with such security as to said commission may seem expedient.

Is it the understanding of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that that commission is to require additional security for the Government beyond what it now is, or is that commission empowered simply to refund this debt, drawing 6 per cent, at 3 per cent interest, with no additional security at all?

Mr. GROW. I take it that these gentlemen, who are officials of the Government, have quite as much business capacity to settle a question between the Government and its debtor as the gentleman from Georgia or I have; and I would trust them to make such arrangement as in their judgment would secure payment of the amount due the Government. And if the old securities shall be canceled and new securities taken, I take it for granted they will take a first lien upon the roads and secure thereby entire payment, the ultimate payment of this money to the Government; and I raise no question as to 3 per cent, for it is an injustice by the Government to charge any of its citizens 6 per cent interest for any great public enterprise they are carrying on for the benefit of the whole country when the Government can borrow at 3 per cent or less.

Mr. FLEMING. I do not think the gentleman has answered my question exactly; perhaps I did not make it plain. Let me state it in this way: As I understand the argument in favor of the passage of this amendment, it is that the road itself is not worth the Government debt. If that be so, how is the Government going to be benefited by simply extending the debt at 8 per cent interest?

Mr. GROW. I do not understand that the commissioners are simply going to extend the debt in that shape.

Mr. FLEMING. That is what I am asking.

Mr. GROW. I am willing to trust to their business capacity. I would trust them to settle any business of my own.

Mr. FLEMING. The language of the amendment is that they can take such security as may seem to them expedient.

Mr. GROW. Exactly; expedient for what? Why, to secure the debt to the Government of the United States in ten years.

Mr. FLEMING. If you will insert one word, the word "necessary," it will remedy that.

Mr. GROW. We have no power to put in a word. We have to take this amendment just as it is. So the criticism of the gentleman upon the measure has nothing to do with it. It is either to be accepted or rejected. I would be willing to let the gentlemen named in this bill settle any business of my own or to make them trustees of any interest of mine, and if so, why not trust them to act for the Government?

INCREASING FORCE OF ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent of the House that we may consider two conference reports. It will not take any time, and I will say that if either of them does take any time I will withdraw it.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I do not object to that.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the present consideration of conference report on H. R. 10561, to increase the force of the Ordnance Department, and I ask that the statements be read and that the reports be omitted.

There was no objection.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same.

J. A. T. HULL,
NICHOLAS N. COX,
Managers on the part of the House.
JOS. B. HAWLEY,
THOS. H. CARTER,
S. PASCO,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The conferees have agreed on H. R. 10561, as follows:

The House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment provides for the same officers in the permanent establishment as was provided for in the House bill, and adds the power of the President to assign to the staff of an army, corps, or division commander an officer already in the service. And while so serving, an officer so assigned to the staff of a commander of the Army or of an army corps shall have the rank of a lieutenant-colonel, and while so assigned to the staff of a division commander shall have the rank of a major.

J. A. T. HULL,
N. N. COX,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

PROTECTION OF HARBOR DEFENSES AND FORTIFICATIONS.

Mr. HULL. I now ask for the consideration of the conference report on the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes.

The report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

First. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House in page 1, line 10, of the bill, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the words "has been" in said amendment of the House strike out the words "or shall be."

Second. That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House in page 2, line 6, of the bill, and agree to the same.

J. A. T. HULL,
M. GRIFFIN,
Managers on the part of the House.
JOS. B. HAWLEY,
WM. J. SEWELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

The conferees have agreed on S. 4714, as follows:

1. The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the House amendment on page 1, and agrees to the same with an amendment striking out the words "or shall be." This makes a penalty for violating the regulations of the War Department now in force, but eliminates penalty for violations of regulations not yet made.

2. The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the House amendment striking out all that part of the bill which gives jurisdiction on written consent of private owners of land.

J. A. T. HULL,
M. GRIFFIN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I want the House to distinctly understand what this bill is. It is proper and right that our fortifications and our connections with them by wire, and so forth, should be protected by proper legislation of Congress. The point I made on the bill when it was here before was whether the United States had jurisdiction through the act of an individual in ceding jurisdiction to the United States. That is eliminated from the bill, and all I have to say now is that I most heartily indorse the measure for the protection of the property of the United States. We all acknowledge that a citizen can not cede jurisdiction to the United States without the action of the State.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, on both conference reports I move to reconsider, and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the bill (S. 4847) to provide an American register for the steamer Titanic; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

The consideration of the amendment to the general deficiency bill was then resumed.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Is the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] prepared to go on with his side?

Mr. CANNON. I am not prepared at this moment.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I yield twenty-five minutes to the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS].

[Mr. NEWLANDS addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. CANNON. There is nobody ready on this side just now.

Mr. HOPKINS. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that as there seems to be no one to speak now, that we take a vote.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Oh, there is ample material for argument on this side. I wanted to know if anything could be said on the other side. I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CASTLE].

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman from California need not worry; we will take care of this side.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I was called away from the Chamber before the close of the session, but this morning, in looking over the RECORD, I find that the honorable gentleman from Vermont [Mr. POWERS] has come to the defense of the directors of the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific railways in a very elaborate speech. I wish to read a few extracts from this speech. The gentleman from Vermont says, near the opening of his remarks:

It is a well-known fact, Mr. Speaker, that for the last five or six years efforts have been made in Congress repeatedly to bring about some sort of settlement with the various Pacific railroad companies that are indebted to the Government.

This is a fair sample of the sophistry used by the able gentleman throughout his entire remarks. Literally it may be true, but the idea intended to be conveyed is absolutely untrue. The impression intended to be left upon the members of this House by this statement was that Congress was attempting to bring about some means of settling these debts; whereas the truth of the matter is that Congress had nothing whatever to do with it further than that it was urged on by the lobby of the Central Pacific Railroad, headed by Collis P. Huntington. It is true that in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses bills were introduced having for their intention the settlement of the Southern Pacific Railroad debt, but these bills were not introduced in the interest of the Government; they were introduced in the interest and at the dictation of Collis P. Huntington and the directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company.

The honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] has said there was no lobby, and he has called upon the members of this House to say whether there was a lobby urging the introduction of this amendment. I suppose it is impossible to prove that Collis P. Huntington has a lobby at work here in this Congress; but if we prove that he had one here in the Fifty-fourth and Fifty-third Congresses, if we can show that Collis P. Huntington himself was here, that he openly boasted years ago of the bribery of members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, it is fair to conclude that this amendment was instigated at least by the president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

It is passing strange, Mr. Speaker, that in the closing days of this session, without any warning whatever to the Congress of the United States, this old refunding bill is revamped in a new form and comes here tacked onto a deficiency bill, after nearly one-half the members of this House have left their seats and gone home, not expecting this important legislation would come up.

Since the Government holds a statutory lien against all the assets of the Central and Western Pacific railroad companies, and since the Attorney-General is now getting ready to begin foreclosure proceedings against them to collect the Government debt, it is evident that the amendment was not introduced by any friend of the Government to safeguard its interests. It must, then, have been introduced by some one working in the interest of the railroad corporation; and it is not reasonable to believe that the author of this funding amendment acted without full consultation with the president of the Southern Pacific Company or his accredited agent.

If this supposition is correct—and all signs indicate that it is—there must be a lobby working secretly in favor of this scheme. During the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses Collis P. Huntington was present in Washington in person, ably assisted in his nefarious occupation by his creature Boyd.

A lobby! Well, I will try to prove that there has been a lobby in the past, and if there has been in the past a lobby in the interest of the Central Pacific Railroad, then it is reasonable to believe that there is a lobby at work now. To further satisfy the gentleman from Pennsylvania on this subject I read from letters of Collis P. Huntington to his friend Colton, who was at that time a member of the firm, but now long since dead. Under date of November 20, 1874, Mr. Huntington writes:

FRIEND COLTON: Yours of the 12th is received, and I am glad to learn that you have Luttrell under your charge—

Luttrell was then serving a term as Congressman from California—but you must be careful and not let him get anything to strike back with, as he is a cuss. And I do not think it safe for Stanford to talk with him on our matters, as it would be just like him to get up in Congress and lie about what S. said to him. He must have solid reasons or he will go back on you.

Under date of November 10, 1875, Mr. Huntington writes thus to Mr. Colton:

FRIEND COLTON: Yours of October 23, 1875, No. 85, is before me; Dr. Gwinn is also here. I think the doctor can do us some good if he can work under cover; but if he is to come to the surface as our man, I think it would be better that he should not come, as he is very obnoxious to very many on the Republican side of the House.

On January 20, 1876, Mr. Huntington writes:

Scott is working most among the commercial men. He switched Senator Spence, of Alabama, and Walker, of Virginia, this week, but you know they can be switched back with the proper arguments when they are wanted; but Scott is asking for so much that he can promise largely to pay when he wins, and you know I keep on high ground.

Under date of March 7, 1877, Mr. Huntington writes thus:

I stayed in Washington two days to fix up Railroad Committee in the Senate.

Listen to that, gentlemen. The present president of the Southern Pacific Railroad, Collis P. Huntington, said that he controlled the make-up of the Senate Committee on Pacific Railroads; and if he controlled the make-up of the Committee on Pacific Railroads in the Senate, it is reasonable to suppose that he controlled also its make-up in the House of Representatives.

Mr. POWERS. Does the gentleman refer to the make-up of the present committee in the House of Representatives?

Mr. CASTLE. No, sir; this was in 1877.

Mr. POWERS. I wished to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] is on the present committee. [Laughter.]

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Huntington continues:

Scott was there working for the same thing, but I beat him for once, certain, as the committee is just as we want it, which is a very important thing for us.

In a letter of March 24, 1877, Mr. Huntington writes:

After the Senate Railroad Committee was made up, Scott went to Washington on special train and got one of our men off and one of his put on.

It seems that not only had Mr. Huntington the power to control the make-up of the Senate Committee on Pacific Railroads, but that Tom Scott also had the power.

But they did not give him the committee. Gordon, of Georgia, was taken off and Boggy, of Missouri, put on.

Under date of May 15, 1877, Mr. Huntington writes:

I think I have written you before about Senator Conover. He may want to borrow some money, but we are so short this summer I do not see how we can let him have any in California.

The writer of these infamous letters, disgraceful alike to himself and the nation, is the man who comes here to-day asking for the passage of this amendment.

Again he writes:

Scott is working every where for his open highway, but I think we can beat him; but it will cost money and harder work to beat him with money under the plan of some of my associates, viz, having it understood that the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific are, as it were, one property.

Mr. Huntington, under date of January 12, 1878, says:

Matters do not look well in Washington, but I think we shall not be much hurt, although the boys are very hungry and it will cost considerably to be saved.

Under date of January 28, 1878, Mr. Huntington writes:

If we pass the sinking-fund bill and beat Scott and the Union Pacific, it will hurt us not less than half a million. Have no time to write more to-day.

May 7, 1877, he says:

I notice what you say of Conover, the Florida Senator. He is a clever fellow, but do not go any money on him.

We must have friends in Congress from the west coast, as it is very important, I think, that we kill the open highway and get a fair sinking-fund bill, by which we can get time beyond the maturity of the bonds that the Government loaned us to pay the indebtedness; and I think if any Republican is elected in Sargent's place, he (Sargent) is worth to us, if he comes back as our friend, as much as any six new men, and he should be returned.

Not content with such easy game as Congressmen and Senators, he essayed to blacken the reputation and debauch the conscience of the Cabinet and President of the United States.

Under date of October 10, 1877, he writes:

I then saw three others of the Cabinet; then went and saw the President. He was a little cross at first; said we had defied the Government, etc.; but I soon got him out of that belief.

Mr. LOVE. From what is the gentleman reading?

Mr. CASTLE. From letters of Collis P. Huntington to his friend Colton, who was a stockholder and director of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. Mr. Huntington and his associates, after the death of Colton, attempted to rob his widow, and in the trial before the court these letters came out.

Mr. YOST. In what volume are those letters incorporated?

Mr. CASTLE. The volume is entitled "Government Debt of the Pacific Railroads."

Mr. YOST. A Government document?

Mr. CASTLE. Yes, sir.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Published in 1897?

Mr. CASTLE. Yes; published last year.

This modern Machiavelli and his collaborators in the destruction of free government, this self-confessed corruptionist and his sycophants, are the men concerning whom their able apologist from Vermont says:

I am aware that the people in the State of California have or imagine they have a grievance against the managers of these roads.

I am aware—

Says the gentleman from Vermont—

that it has entered into the politics of that State, and that the fate of many men depends upon their attitude on this question.

But with the other forty-four States in this Union it is a question unhampered by any consideration of that character, and it should be settled irrespective of the feeling of the people of California or the wrong that has been done by anybody toward the people of California.

In plain language, this means that the self-confessed scoundrel Huntington should receive greater consideration than all the people of California. Well, the people of California do have a prejudice against these men; and it has rightly become a political question. I am proud that the moral sense of California recoiled from such venality as is practiced by Huntington and his coadjutors. Can it be possible that the conscience of my friend from Vermont no longer revolts against such conduct? If such be the case, then is "Ephraim joined to idols; let him alone."

The surpassing innocence of the honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] on the action of lobbyists is "childlike and bland." I trust that the few excerpts taken at random from the all too voluminous correspondence of the hero heroes, which I have read for his enlightenment on the subject of lobbies, may be taken to his heart and be a guide to his understanding and a lamp to his feet. I fear that the knowledge comes too late to benefit the illustrious gentleman, for surely a man has passed the period of redemption who, in the sere and yellow leaf of life, still worships that triumvirate of infamy, "Oakes Ames, Huntington, and the Chinese."

Mr. Chairman, so much for the lobby. I wish now to show what the assets of the Central Pacific Railroad Company are, how much that road has received from the Government of the United States, and how it has been wrecked by the action of its directors, how the stockholders and officers of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Dismissing for the present the malodorous personality of the man who unquestionably has requested this legislation, let us examine into the merits of the transaction from a purely business standpoint. Let us eliminate the question of morals; let us separate morals from business, as the honorable gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] has done, and as the gentleman from Vermont does in these words. Speaking of my colleague [Mr. MAGUIRE], he says:

He has spent much of his time this afternoon and on former occasions in hurling anathemas against the managers of these railroads, instead of pointing out to us some practical way by which the Government could realize 100 cents on the dollar of its indebtedness against the company.

Mr. Speaker, I propose first to show the original assets of the company and demonstrate to a mathematical certainty that this debt of the company and all its other debts could have been paid twenty-five years ago without in the least inconveniencing the company or impairing its earning capacity. Second, I shall show how, since 1870, the directors of the Central Pacific Company, instead of building up the property, have pursued the policy of destruction, swindling the Government and swindling the stockholders in all conceivable ways, actually wrecking this magnificent property in order to build a competing line owned by themselves.

These financial pirates have diverted the earnings of the road into their own coffers. They have borrowed millions upon the credit of the Central Pacific, which was never used, nor intended to be used, for the benefit of that corporation, and now, when the time has almost come when they must surrender their grip upon the throat of the Central Pacific, they come here and ask ten years longer in which to destroy the assets of that company. The directors of the Central Pacific received from the Government a subsidy of $16,000 per mile for level ground, $32,000 for the sections of country between the mountain ranges, and $48,000 per mile through the mountains. The total subsidy amounts to $27,237,000, or an average of over $33,000 per mile.

Supplementing this enormous bond subsidy, the Government granted right of way and town sites together with every alternate section of land 40 miles wide. Why, if these men had asked a deed to the entire territory west of the Missouri River, the Congress would probably have granted it. Concerning this alienation of the public domain even my friend from Vermont says:

Congress, not supposing that they would ever be called upon to furnish a dollar, because the scheme was so chimerical, granted to these men whatever they might ask for. They asked for a right of way through the public domain, and it was granted to them—a wide sweep of territory, giving them almost an empire.

The land grant to the Central Pacific aggregates 12,500,000 acres, an area so vast that the mere statement of the figures conveys no real idea of its magnitude. Estimating the value of this land at $2.50 per acre, we find the value to be $31,250,000. The company was authorized to issue stock to the amount of $100,000,000 more. That they did not issue the whole amount was no fault of theirs, for they issued all they could sell, about $37,200,000. The Government then permitted the company to issue its own bonds to an amount equal to the Government subsidy bonds, viz, $37,237,000. Add together the Government bonds, the railroad bonds, the stock issued, and the value of the land grant, and we find the total cash value of the assets of this company to have been $152,924,000.

According to the reports of the company, the total cost of construction was $40,000,000. That this is a gross overestimate no one acquainted with the topography of the country and the poor construction of the road doubts, especially when it is remembered that the work was done by 15,000 Chinese contract laborers imported especially for the purpose. These are the fellows whose very memory is sufficient to cause the venerable member from Pennsylvania to lapse into ecstatic raptures, and who constitute one leg of the triumvirate, before whose shrine he still burns incense and still prostrates his manly form in his mighty effort to deify 15,000 pigtailed. [Applause.]

If we estimate $20,000 per mile for cost of construction, the total is $17,440,000. Allow $20,000 per mile for rolling stock, and the total cost of construction and equipment amounts to only $34,880,000, a discrepancy of only $5,120,000 pocket money for these captains of industry—a mere bagatelle to men who were accustomed to exploit a whole nation.

For the sake of argument, admit the cost to be $40,000,000, as they claim. Now, deduct the total cost, $40,000,000, from the total assets, $152,924,000, and we have remaining the sum of $112,924,000.

Deduct now the entire bonded indebtedness of $34,880,000 and we have the enormous sum of $78,044,000 remaining.

Without a dollar of investment these men now have a completed railroad 872 miles in length, thoroughly equipped for business, without a dollar's indebtedness, and $78,044,000 to encourage them to operate it.

It may be urged that the land grant could not be immediately converted into cash. This I admit. Let us leave it, then, as a reserve asset, to be realized upon gradually in the future. Deduct its value, $31,250,000, from $78,044,000 and we have remaining $46,794,000 cash assets and 12,500,000 acres of land worth $31,250,000.

Any other set of men on earth would have paid these debts. You must bear in mind that these men had not invested their own capital, but had used wholly the credit of the Government, and since the credit of the Government not only built and equipped the road, but left them a surplus of $46,794,000 in cash and 12,500,000 acres of land, they should at least have paid back the money advanced.

This Government has never asked a return of the land or the money received for its sale. All it asks or has asked is a return of the money actually paid out in payment of these bonds and the interest upon them. Having the ability to pay, they did not pay, and their whole course of action for twenty-five years shows that they never intended to return a dollar. They, like the serpent warmed in the bosom of their benefactor, have in like manner fastened their poisonous fangs in the Government which cherished them. Ingrates as they are, I wonder how men who claim to be honorable, and who have sworn to uphold the honor and dignity of their country, can so prostitute their talents as to give utterance to fulsome eulogies upon men who have boasted of having debauched justice at its fountain head; who have boasted of having muddied its pure waters ere they flowed from the nation's Capitol!

The idea of an honorable business career seems never to have entered the minds of these men. The hog nature was aroused in them, and they started their career of dishonorable plunder. With thirty years to run before the day of accounting they formed the plan to retain all their surplus assets and finally refuse payment of the debt when it came due, believing that with the all-powerful weapon of bribery they would be able to secure a release from Congress, or, failing in that, relinquish the road bankrupted, its assets depreciated, or their value gone—in short, abandon it, as a squeezed lemon, to the Government.

To do this without injury to themselves, they conceived the scheme to build the Southern Pacific and indirectly shut out a competing road which Tom Scott, of the Texas Pacific, had projected.

Under the false plea that the Southern Pacific was an independent, competing road, and by other and stronger arguments, Huntington and his lobbyists induced Congress to donate a land grant of 10,000,000 acres of the best land in California to the directors of this supposedly competing line of road. Now, these directors were the directors of the Central Pacific. They made a contract with themselves to construct the Southern Pacific for all its bonds, land grants, etc. There were no stockholders but themselves.

In order to find a market for the bonds some sort of a showing had to be made; so they, as directors of the Central Pacific, leased of themselves all that portion of the Southern Pacific completed at that time, or thereafter to be completed, paying out of the assets of the Central Pacific $8,000 per mile rental. Now, at this time, 1878, the road south of Goshen, upon which they were paying, ran through an uninhabited region and furnished scarcely any traffic whatever. By this means the bonds were sold. But this did not end their attacks upon the credit of the Central Pacific. The directors borrowed money wherever it could be obtained upon Central Pacific security, until they succeeded in loading it with a floating debt of $115,000,000, not a dollar of which was ever used for the benefit of that company. It either was used for the Southern Pacific or became a part of the colossal private fortunes which were built up from nothing in 1869 to such heights in 1899 that it is impossible to conceive of the amount.

Mr. Speaker, if the chronological records are correct, and Adam had lived on until the present moment, and if through all these sixty centuries the patriarch of the race had earned $25 per day, working every day in the year, not even resting on the Sabbath day, and if during all these years he had never expended a single penny for food and clothing or any other thing, he would still be short $12,000,000 of the amount accumulated by Huntington alone in thirty years. And now when we demand that a part of these stolen millions, stolen by and through the instrumentality of purchased legislation, be used in paying just debts, we are met by gentlemen on this floor with the astounding statement that these men should retain their stolen plunder and that they honestly earned their fortunes.

After completing the Southern Pacific these directors canceled the lease of the Southern Pacific to the Central Pacific and leased the Central Pacific to the Southern Pacific for ninety-nine years. Owning the Southern Pacific, which they had built out of the credit of the Central Pacific, they are now ready to absolutely destroy the earning capacity of the Central Pacific. To this end shippers over the Central Pacific were annoyed by every device possible to conceive of and, when they complained, were told to ship over the Southern Pacific. When neither line was specified, all shipments went over the Southern Pacific. It is not essential that I should detail all of the great and petty annoyances of shippers over the Central Pacific. Suffice it to say that after the completion of the Southern Pacific the receipts of the old road fell away until dividends became a thing of the past. What hope would there be for a ship in the hands of pirates whose interest lay in the destruction of the vessel? Well, just as much hope for that ship as there was for the prosperity of the Central Pacific. [Applause.]

After enumerating the great fraud of building a road out of the earnings and credits of the first road and then using this road to depreciate and destroy the value of the assets of the first road, it seems little worth while recounting the smaller frauds which cluster around their devious paths as grapes around the stem. After you prove cold-blooded, deliberate murder against a prisoner at the bar it would seem to be superfluous to charge him with arson, theft, and assault. If this court will not convict these men upon the major charge, it would be waste of time for me to go over the long list of crimes, perjuries, murders, and frauds which have blackened their career for thirty years and have, in the minds of all right-thinking men, made the names of the authors of these crimes synonymous with all that is hostile to free government and all that is vile and corrupting in human life and morals. [Applause.]

What, Mr. Speaker, does this amendment do? What is its object? Why, it does no good and much evil, and its object is to relieve these men of their debt and to give them ten years more of time to complete the ruin of the Central Pacific. We have now in the organic law which called this corporation into being a mode of settlement of their debts. It provides a statutory lien against all the assets of this company—roadbed, rolling stock, land, buildings, everything owned by the company. The Attorney-General is now getting ready to foreclose the lien. Let him foreclose. In the name of justice, why should these men, who have thrown honor and honesty to the winds, have an extension of time which is denied to the poor debtor?

Has it come to this, that corporations are above law when it is to their interest to be above it, but can evoke its pains and penalties against the poor and friendless when to their interest to do so? We have all the security we will ever have for this debt. The company has no new security to offer. Gentlemen say they will offer the Southern Pacific as security. Why, Mr. Speaker, the Southern Pacific is mortgaged for all it is worth in order to prevent these debts from being paid. This amendment gives them a year to agree to the settlement. Then if they do not accept the proposition offered by the commission, we, having given up our lien fixed in the charter, will have to begin an ordinary suit in the United States courts. Mr. Speaker, we can not even sue until a bill has been forced through Congress providing that course. What would an ordinary suit at law amount to against these owners of courts and bribers of juries?

Why, Mr. Speaker, out in California these very men in 1879 had incorporated into the State constitution a provision excepting railroad mortgage bonds from the general rule for taxing moneys invested on mortgage. It was done to enable them to sell the Southern Pacific bonds. They then refused to pay their taxes levied under this provision, and furnished money to the supervisors of one of the counties to institute suit on a case made up by themselves. Then, on the plea that the State constitution was in opposition to the fourteenth amendment, had the case transferred to the United States courts, and by their unparalleled powers of bribery and intimidation held the case in court for thirteen years.

During all this time they paid no taxes, until finally the State legislature passed an act reassessing the roads. The back taxes were compromised, and the matter dropped.

Now, we will have this history repeated if this amendment refunding the debt of this corporation is extended for ten years, until the people of the United States, worn out by fruitless litigation, surrender their case, and these wreckers of law and equity are finally recognized to be creatures above the law, and not subject to its penalties or limitations.

Let well enough alone; if these companies have not paid the debt in thirty years, they will not pay it in ten years. Let this question be settled on a sensible business basis. Foreclose on January 1, 1899, and close forever the most disgraceful chapter in American commercial history. Gentlemen to-day have paraded the old stalking horse of Government ownership, hoping with this ancient "bugaboo" to rally support to this measure, urging that refunding will forever lay the ghost of Government ownership.

Gentlemen, I wish to tell you now that Government ownership of railroads is to-day the most fearful ghost that has ever risen to plague the private corporations. Every day it grows and expands and assumes a more aggressive attitude toward the mother of all trusts—private ownership of the means of transportation. Every effort to destroy it seems only to add renewed life and vigor to its motions.

Let this amendment prevail here to-day, and I venture the prediction that before the fateful ten years have expired this ghost which now you see in the future and in dreams will be a living, active, controlling agency. Your poor, narrow, sordid, selfish system of greed—a system that surfeits the few and starves the many; which fosters class distinctions, promotes bribery, fraud, and murder; which condemns to a life of want, wretchedness, and toil the best portion of the race, and piles up Huntington's colossal fortune, erects this arch briber of the century upon a pedestal and prostrates in worshipful adoration before it the honorable gentlemen from Vermont and Pennsylvania—will have vanished with its attendant crime, and will have been consigned to the rubbish heap with other worn-out and discredited commercial and social systems. If Government ownership results from refusing this measure, then welcome Government ownership. For me it holds no terrors, but the promise of much good.

The system which condones fraud, robs the people, compounds felony, and apotheosizes bribery should die, and the system which destroys these crimes and promotes justice, virtue, and fraternity should be ushered in.

All hail, Government ownership of public utilities! [Applause.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. I ask unanimous consent that all gentlemen who have spoken or may speak on this subject have leave to extend their remarks in the Record.

There being no objection, leave was granted accordingly.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman from Illinois now use some portion of his time?

Mr. CANNON. I do not see either of the gentlemen to whom I promised to yield in their places at this time. I think, in fact, we are perhaps rich in time.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The gentleman seems to have more time than argument.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; that is very easily said. And still there is very much water rushing over the dam that turns no machinery. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON.]

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, it will be a good day and a happy day for the country and for Congress when we finally get rid of the Union Pacific Railroad scandal. For twenty-five years you can trace its slimy path through the House of Representatives and the Senate, and I hope the time is approaching when we will be relieved of this incubus and the fund of corruption that always seems to hang around it.

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, to hear the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gnow] put his sign of approval on the way this amendment came into the House from the Senate, tacked on as it was, coming in "through the back door," so to speak, of the Senate in some manner and tacked onto an appropriation bill, a bill providing means to carry on the war in which we are now engaged. I am sorry, I say, that he approves that method of legislation, because he is a gentleman of long experience, and as an ex-Speaker his course is presumed to carry with it some weight.

Mr. Speaker, this is a proposition to refund or extend the time for the payment of a debt that the Central and Western Pacific railroads have long owed the Government and is now nearly all due, or will be, if I am correctly informed, by next January. The sum due to the Government of the United States by these roads amounts to about $59,000,000. As I said before, the greater part of it has been due for a long time. It is a debt that the Government incurred by issuing bonds, or indorsing bonds, in support of the construction of the road, guaranteeing both the principal and the interest of the bonds. The railroad, since 1881, has failed to pay even the interest on the money advanced to pay the interest then due; and the Government has received nothing except in those instances where the railroad transported the troops, mails, or munitions of war of the Government.

It is shown here that the history of the management of this road, or this branch of it, in connection with the Union Pacific road has been a failure. They have entered into an organization of fraud so as to keep down the assets of the road for the purpose of keeping from paying the interest and other obligations due to the United States Government.

Now, I ask gentlemen what assurance we have in the future that the management of this road will be any better than it has been in the past, if we should adopt such a proposition as that now presented? What advantage will we gain if they proceed to carry out the same tactics; that is, that the managers of the road will steal its income and its earnings and leave the Government to hold the sack?

The debt is due; the property is well worth the sum; it is worth the entire debt of the Government. Now, I say, let the law take its course and the Government get its own; let us clean up the whole matter and free the House of Representatives and the Senate of this piece of infamy that has been known in the legislation of this country for the past twenty-five years.

Speaking of the Crédit Mobilier scandal, it may be said that this infamy began at that time and has continued down to the last scandal we had a short time ago, when the Kansas Pacific Railroad was knocked off at one-half of its value, whereby the Treasury of the United States sustained a loss of $7,000,000. Now, let us put an end to this business and sell the property, and sell it and get the money for ourselves and not for others.

We have recently passed bills taxing the people in every direction. We are engaged in a struggle with Spain for supremacy on land and sea. You passed extraordinary measures reaching out in every direction to tax the people to supply the Government with funds to carry on the war. Let us now replenish its Treasury to the amount of $59,000,000 at least by selling this road. Let us do the same thing for the Government now that we did a little while ago in order to meet the deficiency that came about by the failure of the so-called "Dingley revenue" bill, and put money in the Treasury to carry on the Government just as we did a short time ago when we sold or compromised our interest in these railroads to the amount of $50,000,000.

Can any gentleman now say in the House that the urgency of the Government for additional funds was greater when you compromised with the Pacific railroads to get a certain sum of money to carry through the Government, months ago, than it is now? If it had not been for that there would have been a deficit long ago in the Treasury, for the so-called Dingley bill showed that it was not a measure calculated to raise revenue, and they were glad to avail themselves of this source of revenue to meet those deficiencies. The occasion is more urgent now than then, for the expenditures of the Government run up to more than $3,000,000 a day; and yet we hesitate and bring in here a bill to refund and extend this debt for ten years, thereby losing the opportunity to replenish the Treasury by $59,000,000.

You need not be afraid, gentlemen, that the debt will not be paid. Everybody who knows anything about the Central and Western Pacific knows that it is a part of that great thoroughfare that spans the continent; that it is one of the best paying properties in the country if rightly managed. There will be abundant and ample capital to buy in the road when it is put up for sale, and there is no doubt in my mind but that the Union Pacific Railroad people themselves will be glad to pay the debt before they will lose that important link in the line of their railroad, because it can not be duplicated. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the law taking its course. I am in favor of the foreclosure of this mortgage and a sale of the property, once for all getting rid of this fund of corruption that has come here every session of Congress since I can remember almost.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Grow] scouted the idea that there were any lobbyists here. That is another thing that surprised me, that a gentleman of his long experience should not know that every great, important personal interest always has a lobby here. There is no exception, and he knows it, or ought to know it. If he does not know it, I marvel at the opportunities he has lost to inform himself. He had but to go to the main entrance of the House, where the lobbyists sit, buttonholing Congressmen as to how they will vote, influence being brought to bear in every direction every time the Union Pacific or Central Pacific question comes up.

It is well known to members here that this is the fact. They talk it among themselves, but when they get up on the floor they are a little scared about mentioning the fact, for fear somebody will be hurt. They even go to the extent of bulldozing members and threatening to defeat them if they do not favor the measure. So, I say, I shall welcome the day when we can rid ourselves of this scandal. The opportunity is here now, and I hope when the vote is taken that everybody who loves good government and who desires to rid the halls of Congress of these corrupt influences will vote against this amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. I understand that one of the speakers to whom the gentleman from Illinois is to yield time is on the floor. I ask that some time be occupied on the other side.

Mr. CANNON. I shall yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] to close the debate, and I have nobody to yield to now.

Mr. HEPBURN. Does that meet with the approval of the gentleman from California?

Mr. MAGUIRE. It does not. I understand the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] is expected to make substantially the only argument on that side, and is to make that as a closing argument.

Mr. CANNON. Well, the gentleman can have it as he chooses. I could not convince him by any statement that he would make to the contrary, because he calls the—I will not say the screeds that we have been hearing, arguments.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Then I understand the gentleman does not desire to use any time at present?

Mr. CANNON. No.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I yield twenty minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DE VRIES].

Mr. DE VRIES. I yield two minutes to my colleague [Mr. BARLOW].

Mr. BARLOW. Mr. Speaker, I simply want to reply to one remark made by one gentleman over there that this is a political question in California. He is decidedly right. It is a political question, and ever since it has been a political question there has not been an honest Representative from California, who represented the people of that State, and thoroughly understood the question, who has not been on this side of it.

Mr. MAGUIRE. No matter what party he belonged to.

Mr. BARLOW. As the gentleman says, no matter what party he belonged to.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. BARLOW. Yes.

Mr. HEPBURN. Does the gentleman understand that Senator WHITE of California approves of this measure?

Mr. BARLOW. I understand that Senator WHITE does not, and from his own mouth.

Mr. MAGUIRE. And from his statement in the Senate.

Mr. HEPBURN. Does the gentleman know that when that proposition was made in the Senate it was stated that if there was an objection to putting this upon the appropriation bill, it would be withdrawn, and not an objection was made.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The RECORD of the Senate shows that Senator WHITE was not in his seat at that time, but came in later.

Mr. BARLOW. I do not care. I have the statement of Senator WHITE himself.

Mr. MAGUIRE. And from his own statement in the RECORD.

Mr. BARLOW. And from his own statement in the RECORD, the gentleman says. I do not care for that anyhow, because I make the statement that the proposition is so absurd that no man who understood it could support it, and the people of California do understand it.

There is no reason here for the extension of this time of payment of this debt. Nobody interested in this proposition is asking an extension of the time. The law is in process of collecting this debt, and if the lien should be foreclosed, as the Union Pacific lien was, and the road sold to the highest bidder, there is no doubt in the mind of any man who has investigated this question but that the properties are of value enough to pay the debt and interest.

Yes, more than pay it; and all who have looked into the question know that the claim of the Government is fully protected by the mortgage. The Central Pacific road is one of the most valuable of the transcontinental lines. It is the most direct road to San Francisco, the greatest shipping point on the coast. It is known to be valuable to all the different lines in the East and middle West that are seeking an outlet to the Pacific coast.

In reality I do not think that there is a man on this floor who will for one moment question that the property is a valuable one. I can safely say that no man who knows anything about it will do so. Now, why should the time of the payment of this debt be extended? What reason can there be for asking for the extension? And who is asking for it? To the first inquiry it must be said that there is no reason why the time of payment should be extended. The Government has dealt very leniently with the men who built these roads.

It has given them millions of acres of the best lands of the country. It has paid them enormous bounties for every mile of the road built (in many instances more than the road cost). It has paid the interest on the bonds that it guaranteed. It has allowed the builders of these roads to enrich themselves at the expense of the people of the entire West for the past thirty years. In fact these railroad barons have, through a system of freights and fares, absorbed the entire profit of almost all of the productive energy of that section. The practical results of this railroad monopoly has been the enslavement of the people.

The people are opposed to the extension of the payment of this debt one minute beyond the time named in the law. They have reasons, and good reasons, for demanding that the Government proceed in this matter and put an end to a system that has become intolerable and is destructive of the best interests of the entire West. Now, as to the second inquiry, What reason can be given that will justify an extension of time? The answer is, "not one."

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, not one. Many men say that the country owes much to the men who built these railroads at the time when it meant so much to this country. I say that if we owe them anything at all it is to compel them, in so far as we may be able, to restore to the whole people some of their ill-gotten gains that they have exploited from the producers and consumers of the West in exorbitant freights and fares.

Owe these men anything for the manner they have preyed on the entire community for thirty years! The thought is preposterous, and can only find lodgment in the mind of one who knows nothing of the true condition of affairs. These parties are at present among the most wealthy citizens of the nation and, instead of extending the time of payment, should be compelled to fulfill the full letter and spirit of the law. That is what a poor man would be compelled to do. Why should these men, because they are rich, be treated differently? Let the law take its course.

Now, as to the third inquiry. Who is asking for the extension? Not the stockholders of the Central Pacific. Not the people who travel on these roads or do business with them. No; it comes from men who own another system—the Southern Pacific—and to whose interest it is that the present condition of affairs shall prevail as long as they can control the legislation on this matter. For the past thirty years all Pacific railroad legislation has been in the interest of the men who wanted to maintain the monopoly that has cursed the whole West for years.

Never have the people been able to overcome the strong lobby of railroad attorneys who are in Congress and act for these corporations. I say it without fear of comment that it is one of the most disgraceful features of our national history. Men who have all their lives been in the employ of corporations are elected as members of Congress and then serve their masters as faithfully as they did when in their employ before election to the high position and intrusted with the care of the interests of the people. It is but natural that men of this kind should be found serving the corporations, and they are true to nature and prove to be the most obedient timeservers.

The people of California are a unit in their demands that the Government shall proceed and enforce the law. The Californian who fails to respond to this demand of his constituents will meet their disapproval when he returns to his home. He will misrepresent his people if he fails to record himself against any sort of a refunding bill. The voice of the people is loud and strong in its demand against any system of refunding. They do not ask it and, on the contrary, they are strongly opposed to any and all measures of this character.

But above and beyond the expressed will of the people is the knowledge of every Californian that the State has been pillaged and plundered by these legalized highwaymen until patience has ceased to become a virtue. Public sentiment is aroused, and every man knows that it is his duty as an individual to do his part in overthrowing the giant monopoly that has hung on the State like a leech for a generation and a half. The man who does not measure up at this time and fails to record his opposition to this measure will be in time served with the following notice by an indignant people: "Tried, and found wanting."

My personal views on railroads are well known. I believe the only solution of the transportation question is the absolute Government ownership and operation of the railroads. And in this connection I am pleased to insert an editorial from the New York Journal of July 9:

In Switzerland railroad fares have been enormously reduced within the last few months. The rates are so low as to astonish all travelers. This is one of the disgusting results of national ownership of railroads, which has very recently been brought about in Switzerland.

At this point I will also insert an extract from Direct Legislation, published by Eltwed Pomeroy:

THE SWISS RAILROADS.

Consul General Du Bois reports from St. Gall that by 8.30 p. m. of Sunday, February 20, the news of the referendum on the purchase of the railroads was made known in every town and city in the country. This news was given to the people by the Government absolutely free of charge, which demonstrates that Switzerland has one of the finest telephone systems in the world. It is owned by the Government and operated in the interest of all the people.

The roads to be purchased are as follows: Jura Simplon, Swiss Northeast, Swiss Central, United Swiss, and Gotthard. Never before in the history of the Republic has such a bitter contest been waged, and never before has the Government received such a large majority.

The amounts estimated as being the cost of construction and equipment of the five main lines are as follows:

Jura Simplon, $54,494,000; Swiss Northeast, $44,250,000; Swiss Central, $28,300,000; United Swiss, $15,255,000; Gotthard, $48,794,000; total, $190,998,000. The total length is 1,700 miles, and the amount that the Government will have to pay for these roads is estimated at about $200,000,000. The total receipts in 1897 were $30,722,600. An average of 5 per cent dividends has been declared during the past five years. The number of persons employed is about 25,000.

I insert these clippings here to show to those who are honestly of the opinion that the Government can not handle the railroads of the country how it was accomplished in Switzerland, its beneficent effects, and their recognition by the greatest metropolitan journal in the country.

Let all men who believe in the public ownership of public utilities be of good cheer. Never were the people aroused on any question as they are to-day on this one. It will soon become apparent to all men that we have in our midst an enemy to the public weal that is greater than any foreign enemy we have ever come in contact with. When the time is ripe for the change it will come, and with as little opposition as was manifested when in the name of humanity the American people arose in their might and declared that Cuba should be free.

All party lines were obliterated. With one voice the means necessary were voted by Congress. As one man the people rushed forward to enroll themselves. And who could have stayed the onward movement of an awakened and enlightened people? So it will be again when with one voice the enlightened masses of the grandest civilization of this generation arise and with unanimity and concert of action, acting in accord with that grand Swiss motto, "One for all and all for one," declare that private ownership of public utilities must be a thing of the past. And all men of all political parties will be animated with a spirit of patriotism, and will be found standing hand in hand ready with their ballots to free a nation from the bondage of plutocracy.

[Mr. DE VRIES addressed the House. See Appendix.]

AMERICAN REGISTER FOR STEAMER TITANIA.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask the gentleman from Illinois to yield to me in order that I may bring up by unanimous consent from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 4847) to provide an American register for the steamer Titania.

Mr. CANNON. I will yield not exceeding three minutes.

Mr. PERKINS. In order to explain the necessity for the action which I desire, I would like to have read a letter from the Secretary of War.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 5, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to request that American registry be granted to the steamer Titania, which the Department is anxious to charter for use as a transport to Manila. The vessel is owned by John Rosenfield & Sons, of San Francisco. This vessel has been reported on favorably by the Quartermaster's Department, and a telegram has just been received from Major-General Otis, commanding United States Volunteers, Department of the Pacific, as follows:

"The difficulty of obtaining transports makes it important that this ship be secured."

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

HON. SERENO E. PAYNE,
Chairman Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries,
House of Representatives.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamer Titania, owned by John Rosenfield & Sons, of San Francisco, Cal., citizens of the United States, to be registered as a vessel of the United States: Provided, That said steamer shall not hereafter engage in the coastwise trade of the Republic.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill, which was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. FLEMING].

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Speaker, in five minutes it will be impossible to go into any detailed discussion of this amendment. I wish especially to enter my protest again on this floor, as I have done on one or two previous occasions, against the practice which the House is permitting the Senate to follow, of ingrafting new legislation upon nearly all our important appropriation bills. The Senate could not commit this outrage unless the House allowed itself to be forced into it.

Now, think of it, Mr. Speaker. Here is a debt due to the Government of the United States aggregating nearly $60,000,000. This House represents the people of this country in a sense in which the Senate does not represent them. We are closer in touch with the people. It is our duty not to lay down the responsibilities put upon us or to give them over into the hands of the Senate, but to discharge our own duty as it devolves upon us under the law. This House acts through regularly appointed committees, or ought to do so.

There is a committee specially appointed to take charge of all matters relating to these Pacific railroads that were aided by the Government. And yet here is a proposition affecting the $60,000,000 which the Government of the United States is interested in in these roads, and that measure has never had a single moment of consideration by the committee especially appointed by the House to examine and report upon such matters. If any man has ever knocked at the doors of that committee, he has done it in some unofficial way. There never, so far as I know—and I am a member of the committee—there never has been one single word uttered in any meeting, regular or irregular, of that committee indicating that this measure was to be thrust on the Congress at the closing hours of the session.

I say, then, that we are getting into a most unfortunate method of legislation when we permit a matter of this importance and of this character to come before the House from the Senate in this manner. Here is a deficiency bill carrying appropriations for war purposes, and yet we find tacked upon it the proposition that is now under discussion.

Why, Mr. Speaker, does anyone believe that the Senators, or I may say that some single Senator, has taken on himself the personal responsibility of putting this measure on this bill? Does anyone suppose that the interests of the road, or the officers interested in the control of the Pacific railroads, have not been in any way consulted?

Does anyone believe that there was no cooperation between the members of the House and gentlemen in the Senate who seek to put the bill into the unfortunate attitude we now find it? I do not believe so. I think it was done after consultation with somebody. I do not believe that every member of this House is ignorant of the facts of the case. And I repeat again, that it is a breach of our parliamentary rules, it is an unfortunate method of legislation, that the committee, appointed by the House to investigate the question at issue, has never for an instant had an opportunity to give it any consideration whatever.

Now, why should that be done? What reason can be given for it? We can have no better illustration against such a practice, Mr. Speaker, than we have had during the discussion yesterday and this afternoon. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. POWERS] the chairman of the Committee on Pacific Railroads, rises in his place, and, as I understand his language, says that the road in question is not worth the amount of the debt due to the Government. He gives us no basis of fact or figures except his mere verbal statement. Of course, I understand his statement to be made in perfect good faith. The gentleman from California [Mr. DE VRIES], on the other hand, a few moments ago made a statement on the floor of the House to the effect that the road is worth every dollar of the Government debt, and he presents facts and figures in support of the statement.

Now, what is the House to do under these circumstances? Here is the chairman of the committee on the one side making a broad, unsupported statement, as I have suggested, and here is the gentleman from California making a specific statement directly to the contrary and supporting it by facts and figures. If the matter had gone before the Committee on the Pacific Railroads, there are men on that committee who would have investigated it and gotten at the truth and put that truth before the House, so that we could act with some knowledge of the facts.

But, Mr. Speaker, what does the proposition before us amount to? Does anyone imagine that the Government of the United States under the bill is to get additional security for the debt? Not at all. You are simply providing means here for extending the payment of this debt over a period of ten years. The language of the proposition says that these commissioners may "take such security as they may deem expedient." Well, when the owners of the railroads come before them and say, "We have no other or no better security," why, the commissioners are expected to say that it is not expedient for us to get anything that we can not get.

If the Government were to be given some additional security for the debt, which the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. POWERS] says is not properly secured, there would be some basis for the proposition. But this gives us no additional security. You will not get it, and this is simply an extension of the time.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, if the language of the amendment is carefully read it will be found that it does not cover even the debt of the Government. This Government since 1881, I think, has been paying the defaulted interest which the railroad company failed to pay. Am I correct in that?

Mr. MAGUIRE. That is correct. The Government has been paying it.

Mr. FLEMING. Now, while the language here appears to cover that, and appears to include the interest on these payments by the Government, it does not by any means accomplish that purpose. The money the Government has paid out for the last eighteen or twenty years in this manner will not draw a single solitary dollar of interest.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to yield any time now?

Mr. CANNON. Not now.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, it appears that if any substantial argument is to be made on the other side in favor of this refunding proposition it is to be made by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN], who is to speak after our time is exhausted. We shall therefore have no opportunity to reply. This is a method of procedure quite in keeping with the whole plan adopted to secure the passage of this measure. No argument can be made in favor of it that will not be specious or that would not be easily answered if opportunity for answer were given. It is the purpose of those in charge of the amendment to give no such opportunity for answer.

This measure, sir, is not required by the interests of the country. It is not required by any interest that deserves a moment's consideration at the hands of the House. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] presented the only real ground upon which the passage of the measure is sought or urged, namely, as a favor to Mr. Huntington and his associates. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] thinks the favor ought to be granted them and frankly places his support of the measure on that ground. How is this favor asked of Congress? Is it asked openly, upon a proposition or a statement made to us? No; it is asked secretly, privately, whispered into the ears of men who are expected to urge Congress to grant it, without disclosing why it is sought or why it should be passed.

All the arguments that have been urged in favor of granting this extension, this refunding arrangement, to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, were urged in favor of the Union Pacific scheme—in favor of both the Union and the Central—and were repudiated by this House twice in two successive Congresses.

Every public officer who has officially investigated the matter, every public officer charged with acquiring knowledge and communicating it to the Government, has recommended that foreclosure, and not refunding, should be the method adopted.

I am aware that Messrs. Anderson and Littler, of the Pacific Railway Commission, originally recommended refunding, while Governor Pattison, chairman of that commission, opposed it. But Mr. Anderson, upon further and fuller consideration and study of the subject as a Government director of the Union Pacific Railroad, and after a larger experience in railroad matters, came before the Committees on Pacific Railroads of both Houses in the Fifty-fourth Congress and recommended foreclosure as against refunding.

The Secretary of the Interior under the last Administration, Mr. Smith, himself a great railroad lawyer, a man of experience in dealing with railroad properties, originally predisposed toward refunding, investigated the matter, and in his testimony before the House committee in the Fifty-fourth Congress and in his annual report recommended foreclosure as against refunding.

Stuyvesant Fish, the president of the Illinois Central Railroad, was called as a witness before the House committee in the Fifty-fourth Congress, and when asked for his opinion as to the proper method of dealing with these roads, said in substance: The business method of dealing with them is to foreclose the Government mortgages, clear the titles, reduce the property, if necessary, to possession, and offer it for sale with a clear title. You will then have no trouble.

That method was pursued in the case of the Union Pacific Railroad. It was in that case pursued against all the predictions, all the bugaboo warnings, that are here presented against the pursuit of that course with the Central Pacific. In the Union Pacific case it was highly successful. It realized all the expectations and assurances of those who knew that that great trunk railway would not go begging for purchasers if it were offered at foreclosure sale.

Why are you not satisfied to pursue with the Central Pacific and Western Pacific railroads the course that you pursued with the Union Pacific? The interests of the Government do not forbid it. The interests of the Government are not opposed to it. Why should you permit the interests of C. P. Huntington and a few other great railroad political agencies to swerve you from the purpose maintained by the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses and which brought success and satisfaction to the Government in dealing with the Union Pacific road? Let us continue to enforce the obligations of these great corporate debtors according to the laws under which they were contracted. Let us treat them as the Government treats all her ordinary debtors.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I trust the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] may now find somebody to speak on his side. Our time is exhausted.

Mr. CANNON. Is your time all gone?

Mr. MAGUIRE. All gone.

Mr. CANNON. I am absolutely grief stricken, heartbroken, and foot-sore.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The gentleman might relieve his mind by yielding us some more time.

Mr. CANNON. I have yielded to you ten minutes. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] such time as he wants, not to exceed twenty or twenty-five minutes.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I shall not attempt to go over the vast field of discussion involved in the proposition to accept the terms of the Senate amendment. I feel bound to state only my own position upon this subject, and I do it with entire respect for the arguments that have been presented upon the other side.

I differ with one gentleman who has addressed the House this afternoon in his understanding that this is a matter of California interest. I have no doubt that certain phases of this question do more largely interest certain gentlemen from California, and, indeed, many of the people of California, more directly and perhaps, I might say, more acutely than they interest any equal number of citizens of the country at large.

But my proposition is that this is a question for the people of the United States. It was the people of the United States who contributed the money that built these Pacific railroads. They were built, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROW] very ably said this afternoon, for the benefit of the country at large. It was not done to open up a channel of communication or traffic with the people of California; and while there is due to the people of California the largest care of administrative wisdom in the Congress of the United States, there is also due from Congress the duty to look well to the condition and interests of the whole country.

I long ago ceased to have the slightest respect for the carping criticism against the manner in which these roads were built, the cost of the roads, and the individual misappropriations of resources about which we have heard so much for the last twenty-five years. They are matters that have ceased to be important to the people of the United States; they are matters that justly have been relegated to the past. There never was any considerable amount of justice in the complaints that were made. There never was 10 per cent of justice in the abuse that was heaped upon the men who constructed these roads. I know that the position that I will suggest for a moment has not a very great amount of weight, but it is a fair contrast with the attacks that are constantly made upon the men who went forth as pioneers in this mighty enterprise and builded these railroads.

I do not believe that there is a man living to-day who does believe that there would have been any great continental railroad to the Pacific Ocean but for the men who builded these railroads under a system that enabled them to build these roads at the time, and that California, with its mighty possibilities, with the other States that we call the Pacific slope, would have been as completely cut off from intercourse that they enjoy to-day with the people of the United States, and thus with the people of the world, as though they had been at Honolulu or any other place in the Pacific Ocean.

I know the answer will come to me, and it will be at once suggested, "Then how does it happen that since that time other roads have been constructed without being aided by the United States Government?" It has come simply from the fact that we always see, everywhere, that the construction of one great line of railroad brings about the construction of another great line of railroad. But the men who went forth and pierced these mountains and carried not only the steel and the cars, but carried civilization and political connection with the United States to the Pacific Ocean, did for those Western slopes that which posterity, some time when the passions of the sand lot shall have passed away, will do justice to the memory of these men in regard to these transactions.

Why, Mr. Speaker, it sounds like a tale of Arabian Nights to hear truthful stories of the enterprise with which the work was put forward in those days; and now when we are discussing a mere matter of business here, a matter in which the people of the whole United States are deeply interested, we are always confused, and our councils are always confused, by assaults made upon somebody. A gentleman on the other side has reread the oft-told story of the corrupting of the House of Representatives and of the Senate; that old threadbare, worm-eaten report that has ceased to have a shadow of respect in the estimation of the American people is brought forth to do duty again, its old hulk rescraped of its barnacles, a new coat of paint put upon it, and it is worked over again. They came to us during the Fifty-fourth Congress; they came to us until I thought the Post-Office Department ought to have protected the Congress of the United States against the constant iteration of the old threadbare falsehoods.

That stream of pollution suddenly ceased. I have no disposition now to say anything connected with anybody individually concerned about it. But I was sure it would terminate either in a penal or a benevolent institution, and it did terminate in a benevolent institution. I thought the author of it was certainly insane or criminal, or both, and it turned out that way. Sympathy is due to him rather than animosity, for I understand he is an inmate of an insane asylum, and I should not wonder if there are others who are constantly harping on calumny who may some time or other meet the same fate. It is a great risk for a man to constantly say the same thing right through. A parrot can do it, but human nature is affected unfavorably by it. [Laughter.]

When I first came to Congress I came with the impression that of all the men on earth the greatest of all the sinners, even greater than those "on whom the tower in Siloam fell," were the four great contractors who largely built the Pacific railroad. Three of them are dead and gone to their accounts. One of them is left. I do not know him well; I only know him by sight. I have studied his career and character, and, Mr. Speaker, I am not afraid to stand in the American Congress and repeat, as well as I can, the sentiment, if not the words, of one of the most distinguished Senators of the United States, who challenged the American people to produce the equal in all that makes up greatness of character in the direction in which that man has made his way.

Coming from the humblest source in New England, he has fought his way through to a position of distinguished eminence in this country and formed such a character for commercial enterprise and, in my humble judgment, in financial integrity, that the shafts of envy fall at his feet without the power to penetrate the armor that has grown up about him. Employing more men to-day than any other man in the United States, paying more money on the pay roll of laborers than any other man in the United States, not content with the mighty enterprises he has put through to the Pacific Ocean, in the storm that howls around him, based, as I think, from the misconception of conditions which will pass away in the future, he stands to-day the foremost man of all the great leaders of that mighty industry that to-day is making and has made the United States of America the proudest nation on earth since the dawn of the sun on the 4th of July, 1776. [Applause.]

Not content with his own country, notwithstanding his advanced age, he is devising mighty enterprises in the sister Republic of Mexico, and to-day I challenge the man, great or small, that will say that Collis P. Huntington ever forfeited his word of honor or ever failed to comply with his contract with the men with whom he has dealt, from the humblest individual up to the mightiest. His railroad has never been in default until now. Through storms that have swept over this country he has stood like a Gibraltar of financial protection to the mighty enterprises with which his name has been associated.

This much because I am not willing that a question in which my country is interested to the extent it is in this question shall be turned aside and blinded and confused by the assaults upon men, whether they come from prejudice, justly perhaps originally, or whether they come from suggestions that have grown up out of political consideration, or whether they are the marshaling of the false cohorts of political ambition in the great contest which the country is engaged, while the individuals attacked ought to become insignificant.

Year after year this controversy comes; year after year we have the opinions offered on the other side; year after year we are seeking a settlement. Now, the wisdom of this committee of ours, that I honor, that I respect, have come to a conclusion; and the conclusion, if carried out, will take out of the domain of controversy here on this floor this whole question.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Will the gentleman from Ohio allow me a question at this point?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes.

Mr. MAGUIRE. What committee has recommended this measure?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of this House has moved to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Well, then, give him the credit of it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I am authorized to state that your representative in the Senate consented to the distinct compromise that is involved in this proposition.

Mr. MAGUIRE. The RECORD shows that he was absent from the Senate at the time it was called up, and that when he entered the Senate Chamber, while the matter was under consideration, he stated on the floor of the Senate that he was opposed to it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. But there was a unanimous report of the committee.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Oh, he was not on the committee.

Mr. GROSVENOR. There was a unanimous vote in the Senate.

Mr. MAGUIRE. I think there was no roll call, but he stated on the floor that he was opposed to it.

Mr. HEPBURN. Will the gentleman from Ohio permit me a moment to ask a question of the gentleman from California?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Certainly.

Mr. HEPBURN. I want to ask the gentleman from California if he was not present at a conference, and did he not fix the time which is mentioned as the limitation in this amendment?

Mr. MAGUIRE. I was present when the question was raised as to whether there should be any limit of time in the case of the passage of this measure in the Senate, and twenty years was suggested, my opinion was asked, and I said if such a measure should pass ten years would be ample; but I repudiated then, as I now repudiate, the passing of this measure or of any refunding measure whatever.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Well, Mr. Speaker, I feel that I am trespassing on the time of the gentleman from Iowa, and I will close in a moment. I have examined the parliamentary conditions that environ this amendment in the Senate, and I state to the House of Representatives that upon that investigation I find that a single objection in the Senate would have defeated this proposition.

So I am authorized to say that it comes here clothed with the entire and unanimous voice of the Senate of the United States, and this after all the long controversy which we have had! Is there no patriotism in the Senate? Is there no wisdom in these committees? Are we afraid to trust our interests in matters of such complication as this to the men who have carefully and studiously considered these questions during all these years? Are we always to keep open these causes of irritation? Are we always to seize upon certain propositions to make of them stalking horses for the purpose of influencing political action?

I have said nothing unjust or unfair of any man. If the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] who has so persistently opposed this compromise desires to keep the question open, he has a perfect right to do so; but the people of the United States and the House of Representatives are called upon to say whether or not under all the circumstances the adoption of the pending provision is not the best thing that we can do. I quite agree with the very emphatic declaration of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of this House, who, after giving this measure every possible consideration, comes here with a full knowledge of all the circumstances to say to the representatives of the American people, this is the best that can be done. I agree with him in asking that without further amendment we get rid of the last appropriation bill of the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress and prepare ourselves for that which is before us.

Mr. CANNON. I yield fifty minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN].

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, many things have been injected into this debate which in my judgment do not legitimately belong to it. The proposition before the House is a very simple one, and, notwithstanding the complaints made by the gentleman from California, it is one that in its essence and substance has received very much of the attention of the House. Probably no one question of all those which have been before the House during the last three Congresses has been more fully discussed or is better understood than this. The proposition is a simple one. We have to-day a delinquent debtor, one who owes, or will shortly owe, the Government $59,000,000. To secure that sum we have a very inadequate security. In order to avail ourselves of that security it will be necessary that the Government should make an expenditure of nearly or quite $27,000,000 additional.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Let me correct the gentleman. He should be aware that under the law there is a large sinking fund against the first mortgage bonds as well as the Government bonds—some $6,000,000.

Mr. HEPBURN. The sinking fund has been subtracted in the computation that I have made.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Oh, no; that is an entire mistake.

Mr. HEPBURN. I prefer not to get into a controversy with the gentleman. This road owes the Government $59,000,000.

There is a sinking fund of some $7,000,000, and there is a judgment, or a series of judgments, in favor of the Southern Pacific Company against the Government amounting to perhaps two millions or two millions and a half more. Now, Mr. Speaker, we can not acquire this property without an expenditure and a loss of $36,000,000. That is the situation now. As security for this immense sum we have a lien upon 860 miles of railway—not what is commonly known as the Central Pacific Railway connecting the city of Ogden on the east with the city of San Francisco on the west. We have not that, because we have not a lien upon the 5 miles of road leading into the city of Ogden, and we have no lien upon that portion of the Central Pacific road that extends from Sacramento to San Francisco or Oakland.

We have as our security a road that starts from no place and runs to no place—starting 5 miles west of Ogden and reaching the little town of San Jose. Five hundred miles of that road run through the wilderness of Nevada. Remember, there are less than 45,000 people, men, women, and children, in the whole State of Nevada. Those 500 miles do not furnish local traffic enough to this road to pay for the oil and the waste with which the axles are greased. That is the character of our security. The debt, I claim, will be more than $100,000 a mile upon the whole length of the road. The gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS] has had the frankness to say that in his judgment the road could be duplicated for a vastly less sum than $100,000 a mile.

Now we find the gentleman from California reproducing against this proposition the arguments of Dennis Kearney of twenty years ago. The gentleman in all his three hours of assault upon this proposition has said nothing that Dennis Kearney had not long ago said—perhaps said quite as well. He has simply reproduced the arguments of that celebrated California statesman. The gentleman is undoubtedly familiar with all of them. Three times in this Congress we have heard the gentleman make the same argument on this subject. He ought to make it. He is indebted to this road more than any other man in California. Four times he has ridden the road into Congress; and many say that it is within the limits of the gentleman's expectation to ride it into the gubernatorial office of California.

I do not know how that is, but I believe as firmly as I believe in my existence that if this company should come here to-day and offer to lay down at the Treasury the $59,000,000 of its indebtedness, the gentleman from California would find some reason why the offer should not be accepted until after the election of next November. [Laughter and applause.] He knows a good horse when he sees it. He knows a well-gaited animal after he has ridden it, and he is too familiar with all the gaits and paces of this animal, and all of the abilities that it possesses, to surrender it without a "kick." [Laughter and applause.]

Now, the selfishness of the gentleman's argument is apparent to everybody, and must be. First, the gentleman asserts, I am told somewhere, mildly, that he is "a Democrat." [Laughter.] I undertake to say, and think I can prove the assertion, that the gentleman is a Populist. I undertake to say that there is no proposition in the creed of Populism that the gentleman does not subscribe to, without it is possibly the subtreasury scheme, and whether or not he subscribes to both branches of that I do not know.

Let me read from the Populist platform:

Transportation being a means of exchange and a public necessity, the Government should own and operate the railroads.

That is the gentleman's position on that question.

Mr. MAGUIRE. It is not.

Mr. HEPBURN. Well, with a slight modification.

Mr. MAGUIRE. With a very great modification.

Mr. HEPBURN. The gentleman wants to give the power to the Government to own the roads and keep them in repair, but to let the people of California themselves operate in their own interest this particular road. That is his position and platform.

The gentleman from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS], while perhaps not being a Populist, has confessed that he has been looking to the selfish interest of his own State of Nevada. He wants something done so that there will be a rival road to the Southern Pacific. And I have a right to assume from his argument that he is in the same position as the gentleman from California. He would not be willing for the Central Pacific people to come in and pay the whole of this debt. He would not be willing to allow them to be relieved from the status of debtors to the United States Government. That would not meet his purposes, because the same want of rivalry would still exist and the same lack of competition would exist, and there would be no advantage to his people. There would be no change in these onerous charges, wharfage dues and harbor charges now existing, that he says the people of California have put upon their own commerce, driving it away from their great port, and making it necessary for the Government of the United States to come to their aid and rescue.

Mr. Speaker, I have not yet heard a man in whose judgment I would place any reliance say that in his opinion he believes that if these roads were sold out by auction there would be a bidder that would or could discharge the indebtedness of the Government. The gentleman tells us in a mazy and unsubstantial way that the stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad stand ready to pay this debt. Do you believe it? Has one of them been named? Has he suggested any of them? What one of them is now solvent, whose obligations would be worth the paper on which it has been written, who would charge himself with a promise of that kind? Not one.

The gentleman told the House here that the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad was a "paying stock;" and he intended, apparently, to stop at that point and create the impression on the part of the House that it was a valuable stock. And yet when the statement is challenged he blandly says, Why, it paid one-fourth of 1 per cent last January and one-fourth of 1 per cent recently! That is to say, one-half per cent in all; indicating a stock that would be worth 8 cents on the dollar.

There are $80,000,000 of this stock, and while that to-day could be bought for $7,000,000, if there were anyone so crazy as to take advantage of the offer and become a purchaser, would any man or set of men, having an interest of that kind and having the means to do it, put into such a purchase $59,000,000, aye, $86,000,000, of money in order to save the $7,000,000? And yet that is the kind of argument that gentlemen are making to the House in connection with their opposition to this matter.

Why, Mr. Speaker, for the last thirteen years the earnings of this road have been less than one and one-half million of dollars annually. I repeat, for thirteen years past.

Mr. LOVE. You mean the net earnings?

Mr. HEPBURN. The net earnings. They have fallen in a single year to $1,010,000, and yet the gentleman tells us blandly that the stockholders of the road stand ready to do this tremendous work, and pay this money!

Mr. Speaker, if the people of California are groaning so much under the burdens and exactions of this road, if they are so monopolized as they are said to be, are there no enterprising men in that vast State to relieve them by securing a new outlet?

If the burdens were what the gentlemen tell us they are, if they were speaking the sentiments of the people of California, if they were declaiming for the business and commercial interests of that great empire State, a dozen of the men of wealth of that State would at once relieve them from this incubus. When have the men of California ever held back when the interests of that State were in jeopardy? Where have they ever failed to pour out their capital in order to accomplish great results of vast beneficence to the State? Never. It is an assault upon the patriotism, the wisdom, the business sense of all of that great community when gentlemen make the charge that they do, that they have supinely laid down under all the crimes and exactions that they charge against this company. That is not the kind of men who live in California.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Let me say that the people of California have paralleled one of the roads of the Southern Pacific Company, and will probably parallel another if necessary.

Mr. HEPBURN. "I thank thee, Jew, for that word." [Laughter.] It demolishes the only argument the gentleman has made. They have relief within their own hands. They themselves are capable of relieving the Government from the necessity of again coming to the aid of California.

Ah, Mr. Speaker, I can remember something of the controversies of the old days about this road. In 1853 the agitation first began. In my own State, in the city of Dubuque, the home of my colleague [Mr. HENDERSON], the first public meeting ever held in the United States for the agitation of this question was held years and years ago; but in the old time before the war the rivalries of the sections, the desire to have the road located in territory that might be slave territory or territory that might be free, balked all the efforts of the friends of the measure. It was only after the Republican party became dominant that it was seriously considered with the hope of bringing it to a successful issue. It was then that the act of 1863 passed, giving an immense grant of land, but I remember that no man would put money into it. For two years it languished.

The organization was made, I think, at Cleveland, with a gentleman from my own State, General Curtis, at its head, in September, 1862. No one would subscribe to the stock. It was thought to be a gigantic enterprise. Yet California and Californians were clamoring night and day that the Government should come to their rescue. They were talking then as the same class of gentlemen are talking now with regard to the Nicaragua Canal. If that is built, if thirty years from now you gentlemen from California want to ride that as a political issue, will you then begin your denunciations of the projectors of it as you now do of those men who projected and carried to a splendid success this enterprise of which we are talking, which you then wanted infinitely more than you want the Nicaragua Canal now?

Ah, Mr. Speaker, in such assaults and diatribes as the gentleman from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] has indulged in with regard to this measure there is little to commend the other measure to the attention of thoughtful men. He now is the assailant of all those who made this a splendid success. If a political emergency arises after a while, will not those men who are now urging upon the attention of Congress the necessity of the Nicaragua Canal, so that the wheat of California and the Pacific coast may find a ready market—will they not be the objects of assault, vituperation, and vindictive abuse?

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California was somewhat inconsistent in a remark which he frequently repeated. I think he said four times that no argument had yet been made upon this side of the question, and yet the gentleman consumed two hours and three-quarters of his time himself in repelling arguments in favor of this bill, either the arguments advanced or the arguments written in the bill itself. And, Mr. Speaker, I think that if politics could be eliminated from this matter in this Chamber, as it was in the other, we should hear little objection here. And I make the averment here that there was no dissent in the other body.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I present the RECORD to the gentleman to show that Senator WHITE was present and did consent to every amendment, and did not vote against the bill.

Mr. HEPBURN. Such was the parliamentary status of this measure that a single objection would have prevented it from going upon the bill, and no objection was made. And I make the further statement—I can not go further, however, than to say that the gentleman from California was present, and that he aided in the preparation of the language of the amendment.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. TERRY. I suggest to the Speaker that a gentleman over here was called down yesterday for referring to what took place in the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not understand that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] quoted any part of the speeches in the Senate.

Mr. TERRY. I wish to say that if it is in order to refer to those things, I desire—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not in order.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I apologize to my friend from Arkansas.

Gentlemen tell us in effect that they are unwilling to vote for this proposition, because they are unwilling to trust the three men who will be the servants of Congress in effecting this settlement. Who are they? The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, the Attorney-General, all their action to be supervised and approved by the President of the United States.

They will not, they say in effect, trust these men. Yet suppose we adopt the method the gentleman wants? Suppose we resort to the precarious plan of a foreclosure suit? In the ordinary way no man can tell until the day of sale what the price offered will be, so that in all human probability some one representing the President of the United States would do as they did in the settlement of the case of the Union Pacific. What was done there? Under President Cleveland's authority an agreement was made that a certain bidder should bid a certain sum. Now, these same men that the gentleman will not trust raised that bid, secured it being raised, so that the whole sum due from the Union Pacific road was secured to the Government. Is that not an earnest of their good faith and their trustworthy character?

But again, Mr. Speaker, the bill that we are considering is better than that method, because they might under foreclosure agree to accept a less bid, as they did in the case of the Kansas Pacific, that the gentleman has been eloquent about. There they had all the power, and with all the power and duty imposed upon them that now exists they consented to accept a sum $6,000,000 or some millions less than the amount due the United States.

But under the provisions of this bill they can not do that. This measure provides that they must secure the full sum of indebtedness. Is it not a better proposition? Oh, but the gentlemen say we will have no additional security! How do you know? Who is authorized to say that? These commissioners of ours will be armed with all the power of the United States in its negotiations. They are as much interested in the interest of the United States as the gentleman from California, envied as he is just now by personal and by State interests. I would rather trust them even than him, and I would trust him with any matter that was not a political one. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. Our confidence is mutual.

Mr. HEPBURN. We fix the sum that they shall receive. We give them no opportunity to say that we will accept a bid of $5,000,000 less or $10,000,000 less or $40,000,000 less, but the whole sum, principal and interest—the whole sum, and not deferred ten years. One payment of nearly $3,000,000 and interest, if this settlement should be made to-day, would probably be made on the 1st day of next January, and another $3,000,000 on the 1st day of July; and so it would go on adding $6,000,000 more in the Treasury of the United States every year for the ten years. But gentlemen, as I have suggested, say, "We will have no better security."

I do not know whether we will or not; but I do know when the funding bill was before this House parties in interest—parties stating what they would proffer to do—proposed to give to the Government a mortgage upon 9,000 miles of railway when they have got to-day a second mortgage on 860 miles. They proposed to give us then a mortgage on 9,000 miles. Is not that better? Oh, but they say, "This is not a first mortgage." True, it is not; that is admitted. But is that we have a first mortgage? That we would get, while perhaps not equal mile for mile with the amount we have, yet in the grand aggregate of it all, in my judgment—and I speak by the authority of some who are conversant with the subject—our grand aggregate of security would be more than quadrupled. Is not that an advantage? But, Mr. Speaker, mind you, this measure that I am advocating now is an additional remedy.

Mr. CANNON. Just a moment; before the gentleman leaves that branch of the subject let me make a suggestion to him and see if I am right. In addition to this authority that is given to the President and three Cabinet officers, they are not restricted to security from the Southern Pacific road. They may negotiate under this grant of power with the Rock Island road, with the Northwestern road, with the Union Pacific Railroad, with anybody upon the round earth that will come and seek to make a negotiation by and through the stockholders of the Central Pacific.

Mr. MAGUIRE. A reading of the bill will show that that is a mistake.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; a reading of the bill does not show that is a mistake.

Mr. HEPBURN. Certainly it is true, Mr. Speaker, that any connecting line that wants to establish a connection with this road can be permitted to furnish that security that with the other securities may by the commission be regarded as amply sufficient.

Mr. STURTEVANT. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. HEPBURN. Yes.

Mr. STURTEVANT. I would like to ask a question for information. Is there anything to prevent these companies from making the arrangement with the United States now?

Mr. HEPBURN. The commissioners have no power in the world to do it. We are limited now to the right of foreclosure only. Now, by this bill we do not lose the right of foreclosure, but we gain the other possible means of settlement through the commissioners.

Mr. STURTEVANT. Does the gentleman believe that after the company has run for thirty years and run behind they can pay the debt in ten years and pay $6,000,000 a year besides?

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not know. I know we do not put ourselves in any worse position than we now are. Remember, under the methods we now have of foreclosure, it is the President of the United States that must act; remember that under the method that is proposed in this bill it is the President of the United States that must finally approve and act.

In either instance it is the President that is the high contracting party, and if this measure fails, if they fail to secure such a settlement next week, or next month, or in that time that the President regards as ample for trial, he will terminate the negotiations, and then we have all of the rights of foreclosure, and before it is possible to foreclose. You can not foreclose now. The debt is not due now, and you have to wait until the 1st of January before you can foreclose. Everything that can be done under this bill may be and ought to be done before the last day of this year. So we are losing nothing and we are gaining this possibility.

Mr. STURTEVANT. I should like to ask one more question. Is it the railroad companies that are asking this extension?

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not know. I never heard any human being speak on the subject of this bill.

Mr. STURTEVANT. How can you expect men to vote for a proposition of this kind when the men who owe the debt are not themselves asking for the extension?

Mr. HEPBURN. The great trouble heretofore, my friend, is that these gentlemen who have tried to get some proposition have said, "Ah, the railroad company is lobbying this matter; they are at your ears all the time; they are pulling your coat tails all the time." Now that no one is here, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, in his superior wisdom, makes that as a final and fatal objection. [Laughter.] My friend from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] says the railroad lobbyists are here, my friend on the other side says, "There are no railroad lobbyists here, and hence I will not support this measure." [Laughter.]

Mr. STURTEVANT. Mr. Speaker, my judgment is that it is—
Mr. HEPBURN. Now, I do not want you to make a speech; I have got the time.

Mr. STURTEVANT. Yes, you have got the time.

Mr. HEPBURN. I mean to say that I ought to have it. [Laughter.]

Mr. STURTEVANT. I want some reason why I should vote for this measure.

Mr. HEPBURN. Well, listen to me. I have been trying to give you some.

Mr. HENDERSON. I would like to suggest to my colleague, for the information of my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. STURTEVANT], that if the Government has this vast amount of money to look after, it has the right to look after it in this way. We are the ones interested for the Government.

Mr. HEPBURN. Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a party in this country that is looking to the ownership and operation of railroads. I have read from the platform of the Populist party the last utterance they have indulged in. They say they want the Government not only to own, but to operate all the railways in United States. My friend from California [Mr. MAGUIRE] adopts their theory with a modification of his own. Of course he can not adopt the theory of anybody without a modification of his own. [Laughter.] He is so constituted that he only finds excellence in thought where it emanates from his own brain—I mean superior, sublimated excellence. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, what does that proposition involve? This step of foreclosure advocated by the opponents of the pending measure is the first step to secure operation and ownership of roads by the Government. The Populist party would rather, in my judgment, lose every dollar of this claim of the Government than to fail in initiating the experiment of the ownership and operation by the Government of the Central Pacific road. I think I am safe in saying that they would regard it as a wise and beneficent thing if they could secure the ownership and operation of this road by the Government as an experiment, even if it was at the cost and loss of the entire debt due the United States of $59,000,000 and of the overlying mortgage of $27,000,000.

Mr. CASTLE. Will the gentleman from Iowa yield for a question?

Mr. HEPBURN. I would rather not; I have but little time. Now, Mr. Speaker, what does that involve? There are 185,000 miles of railway in the United States, capitalized at eleven and one-half billion dollars. Suppose, for the sake of argument, that they are worth one-half of that sum. There are five and three-quarters billion dollars. How are we to become the owners of that vast property? Certainly, by purchase. I can not believe that even with the advanced ideas of my friend from California he would be willing that the Government should steal these roads from their owners. [Laughter.] He would not do that; he desires that compensation should be made. How? By bonds? Oh, no; the gentleman is not in favor of "mortgaging future generations."

Mr. SIMPSON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HEPBURN. I would rather not.

Mr. SIMPSON. A little short question?

Mr. HEPBURN. Well, I will yield for a "little short" one.

Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman spoke of the Populists being in favor of Government ownership of railroads.

Mr. HEPBURN. Ownership and operation.

Mr. SIMPSON. Now, would the gentleman prefer that the railroads should run the Government rather than the Government run the railroads? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. HEPBURN. That is a very old "chestnut" from my nautical friend.

Mr. SIMPSON. You have given us a lot of "chestnuts."

Mr. HEPBURN. No; I have given you no "chestnut," except where I have quoted from your platform. [Laughter.]

Mr. SIMPSON. The gentleman has quoted from what he called our platform.

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not know whether it is your platform or not. The copy from which I read I borrowed from the gentleman from Kansas a little while ago. I asked him for the latest, and I understood that he gave it to me.

Mr. SIMPSON. The platform is all right; those "chestnuts" are not worm-eaten like those of the Republican platform.

Mr. HEPBURN. Now, Mr. Speaker, this money must be raised in some way. How? Undoubtedly the gentleman would say by taxation, because he is not in favor of bond issues. But in some way we have to get the roads. Then what? Those roads are operated by an army of employees numbering 700,000 men. Connected with them are the telegraphers—75,000 more. Here is an army of 775,000 more officeholders that the gentleman wants to have authorized. We have now in the United States 150,000 official positions that perplex a great many worthy gentlemen wonderfully. The gentleman from California wants to call into existence 775,000 more. How shall we get along with a civil service of that kind?

Mr. Speaker, think of the other infinite difficulties that would arise. Gentlemen say that these railroads must be managed in a nonpartisan way. But how can you accomplish that? Is it possible? In a republic where party government prevails, where parties do govern, where parties must govern, where they always will govern as long as we have our form of government, how will you remove the management of this great interest from political affairs? Every man who has given thought to the subject knows that there is an impossibility in the way of accomplishing this object.

But how would you operate roads without giving political preference to political friends? The men who would be at the head would have their political affiliations. They would direct and color the operations and movements of all below them. Even the station agent would have his political friends and his methods of discrimination. Suppose there is a car famine. The station agent, a Republican, has a Republican friend who wants to crowd his wheat into the market. That Republican friend would have a preference; or if the station agent and his friends were Populists, the Populist would have the preference.

There are different characters of cars for the shipment of stock—some more desirable, some less. Preferences would be given in this respect. Then, again, how long would it be before discriminations of another character would be made? I can remember the time when the postage charges of the United States were fixed in a rational way, when a man sending a letter paid for the service that he got. If his letter was to be carried 100 miles, he paid so much; if the Government was at the expense of carrying it 1,000 miles, he paid an additional compensating sum. But it was said, "This is not fair; we must adjust postage rates upon a different basis. The remote sections must have discrimination in their favor."

And so, with the stress of politics and with the exigencies pressing upon politicians, there came the present system. Now, if the Government operated the railroads, as the gentleman from California and the gentleman from Kansas propose, how long would it be before those gentlemen would be insisting that the Government must treat all its citizens alike; that the man living a thousand miles away from the center of trade should not be discriminated against, but should have the same facilities and should get his product to market at the same charge as the favored one living within a stone's throw of the metropolis?

We know, Mr. Speaker, that there is liability, possibility, probability, of all these questions coming up, and it is upon that route, it is in that direction, that the gentleman from California is urging us to proceed at the present time. He wants to force the Government into such a position as to "avoid criticism" and "avoid charges of scandal," and for that end that it shall bid in these roads; and when we do that, what facilities would we have for their use? I ask, what facilities? What is the Government to do, for instance, with regard to State traffic that is under the control of the State itself? That belongs to the State and is a State function. The gentleman from California would have the Government take from the State the instrumentalities by which that traffic is now being conducted and governed. Certainly, Mr. Speaker, we are being advised to enter upon an exceedingly unwise course.

Now we have the opportunity to close out this vexed question for all time. We have the opportunity to strip the gentleman from California of much of his political—

A MEMBER. Capital.

Mr. HEPBURN (continuing). I was going to say thunder. [Laughter.] But I do not think he has clothed himself with thunder. [Laughter and applause.] But it will take from him one of his best political methods. I want to do that much. I do not want harm to come to my friend in any way. I do not want to place any impediment in his way, nor do I want him now or again to use this means for political ends. Let us wipe out the whole vexed question and take it out of politics for all time. I believe we can do it by the wise provision of this bill.

Gentlemen say that the provision is not aptly drawn. To my mind that is not correct. It gives the commissioners every needed power, and it gives them no power that is not needed. It carefully reserves and guards every power that we now possess. It is simply an auxiliary measure to that which has heretofore been adopted. It simply puts the machinery in motion. It adopts the machinery of to-day. It does nothing else and takes nothing from that machinery. It simply suspends the power of foreclosure for a reasonable period. I say "suspends," but I ought not to say that, for the power of foreclosure does not now exist. While it is true that under all circumstances as they exist we might begin foreclosure proceedings, yet as a matter of fact we could not make such proceedings effective for many months to come; and before that time we will, under the provisions of this amendment, affect a settlement of the vexed question.

Suppose we can get the money, the whole of it, with 3 per cent interest, in ten years. Can anyone claim that that is a loss to the Government? Do we lose anything by that transaction? We are paying interest now at 3 per cent, and the interest to be received on these delayed payments will pay the interest on a portion of the debt we are now contracting. We lose nothing, therefore, but gain another possible means of closing out the whole vexed question and of securing a vast sum of money, while at the same time we wipe out of existence this pernicious and dangerous doctrine of the Government ownership and control of railways by the United States.

A MEMBER. That is a goat that will not down.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether it is a goat that will not down or not. It is true it is much of a goat. But we can settle it in this way.

This proposition varies from every one we have heretofore had, in the shortening of the time at which the final payment must be made, and we have an assurance with reference to the rate of interest, with regard to the security, as well as a certainty that we will secure every dollar of our indebtedness. It will not do to say that because other methods have been discussed and been discarded this should be. There are too many differences between the propositions which have been considered and this one. There is so much more that may be said in favor of this than any other that was ever yet before the House, at least since I have been a member of it.

I earnestly hope that we will adopt this proposition as it stands. I do not think the amendment suggested by the gentleman from California [Mr. BARHAM] is necessary, and I would not put a limitation of a year on the settlement. I want the matter closed up before the end of the year. If we say that it shall be done within a year, then it is altogether possible that these gentlemen who have the matter in charge will argue with themselves that that is the time fixed by the Congress. I would not give that time. It is not necessary. Three months is as good as one year, or three years, or five years. If it can not be done in one year, it can not be done in ten. Three months is ample, and believing that what we all desire is to be accomplished by the proposition, I hope the House will vote in its favor. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, the time is about here when this vote is to be taken. As I understand, the pending motion is to recede from the disagreement to the Senate amendment and concur in the same.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is the pending motion; yes.

Mr. BARHAM. Now, in that connection, Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARHAM. Is a motion in order to concur with an amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to recede and concur would take precedence of a motion to concur with an amendment, for the reason that the motion to recede and concur, if agreed to, would bring the two Houses together, and at once dispose of the bill.

Mr. BARHAM. I hope the gentleman in charge of this bill—

Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman will send the amendment to the Clerk's desk and have it read, we will see whether any arrangement can be made about it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert in line 12, page 22, after the word "settlement," the following:

"Provided further, That unless the settlement herein authorized be perfected within one year after the passage of this act the President of the United States shall at once proceed to foreclose all liens now held by the United States against said railroad companies and to collect the indebtedness herein sought to be settled, and nothing in this act contained shall be held to waive or release any right, lien, or cause of action already held by the United States."

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, in my judgment, that amendment enlarges the Senate provision instead of limiting it; but the gentleman from California thinks it would be a valuable amendment. We can not vote upon it at this stage unless there is consent. Now, I have no objection, if such is the unanimous wish of the House, to modify my motion, and move that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and concur with the amendment which has just been read.

Mr. BARHAM. I hope the House will do that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] asks unanimous consent to withdraw his motion to recede and concur, and to make the motion to concur with the amendment which has just been read from the Clerk's desk. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON. Now, Mr. Speaker, in the remaining two minutes that I have I want to say that the right to foreclose remains when this provision is adopted, if it shall be adopted, and it leaves the three Cabinet officers, with the approval of the President, to agree with the Central Pacific Railroad on the payment of the full amount in twenty semiannual payments, giving them discretion as to the best security they can get. They can make that arrangement with the Southern Pacific, or with the Union Pacific, or with the Rock Island, or with the Northwestern, or with anybody under God's green canopy that they choose. [Laughter.] Well, it is a question of eyesight whether the canopy is green or blue.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the hour of 4 o'clock has come, and I trust that this amendment will be adopted, and this additional means taken to secure $60,000,000 to the Treasury of the United States without one danger of loss. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with the amendment which has been read.

The question being taken,

Mr. MAGUIRE demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 97, nays 86, answered "present" 19, not voting 153; as follows:

YEAS—97.

Acheson,	Curtis, Kans.	Hill,	Perkins,
Adams,	Dalzell,	Hopkins,	Powers,
Aldrich,	Davison, Ky.	Howell,	Ray,
Arnold,	Dovener,	Hull,	Reeves,
Babcock,	Ellis,	Hurley,	Russell,
Baker, Md.	Evans,	Joy,	Shannon,
Bankhead,	Faris,	Kerr,	Shattuc,
Barham,	Fischer,	Ketcham,	Sherman,
Barrows,	Fletcher,	Knox,	Smith, Ill.
Beach,	Foss,	Kulp,	Southard,
Berry,	Fowler, N. J.	Lacey,	Spoerry,
Bingham,	Gardner,	Landis,	Steele,
Bishop,	Gibson,	Linney,	Stewart, N. J.
Brown,	Gillett, Mass.	Loudenslager,	Sulloway,
Burleigh,	Graft,	Low,	Tongue,
Burton,	Greene, Mass.	Lybrand,	Van Voorhis,
Cannon,	Griffin,	McCall,	Walker, Va.
Capron,	Grosvonor,	McCleary,	Warner,
Clark, Iowa	Grout,	McDonald,	Weaver,
Coddling,	Hager,	Marsh,	Weymouth,
Connell,	Hawley,	Mills,	Yost,
Connolly,	Heatwole,	Minor,	Young.
Cousins,	Henderson,	Payne,
Crump,	Hepburn,	Pearce, Mo.
Curtis, Iowa	Hicks,	Pearson,

NAYS—86.

Alexander,	Davidson, Wis.	Lewis, Wash.	Rhea,
Allen,	Davis,	Livingston,	Ridgely,
Bailey,	De Armond,	Lloyd,	Rixey,
Baird,	De Graffenreid,	Love,	Robinson, Ind.
Baker, Ill.	De Vries,	McCulloch,	Sayers,
Ball,	Dinsmore,	McDowell,	Shafroth,
Barlow,	Elliott,	McEwan,	Simpson,
Bartholdt,	Fleming,	McRae,	Sims,
Bartlett,	Fox,	Maddox,	Skinner,
Bell,	Handy,	Maguire,	Slayden,
Bodine,	Henry, Miss.	Mahany,	Stark,
Brantley,	Hilborn,	Meekison,	Stephens, Tex.
Broderick,	Howard, Ga.	Moon,	Strait,
Brucker,	Howe,	Mudd,	Sturtevant,
Brumm,	Kelley,	Newlands,	Tate,
Brundidge,	King,	Ohmsted,	Terry,
Burke,	Kirkpatrick,	Osborne,	Underwood,
Castle,	Kitchin,	Otjen,	Updegraff,
Cochran, Mo.	Kleberg,	Packer, Pa.	White, Ill.
Cox,	Lamb,	Parker, N. J.	Williams, Miss.
Davenport,	Lawrence,	Peters,
Davey,	Lester,	Pierce, Tenn.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—19.

Adamson,	Hemenway,	Miers, Ind.	Taylor, Ohio
Boutell, Ill.	Jenkins,	Pitney,	Thorp,
Clarke, N. H.	Loud,	Smith, S. W.	Wanger,
Gaines,	Mercer,	Stone, C. W.	Wiss.
Grow,	Meyer, La.	Stone, W. A.

NOT VOTING—153.

Barber,	Cummings,	Latimer,	Shelden,
Barney,	Danford,	Lantz,	Showalter,
Barrett,	Dayton,	Lewis, Ga.	Shuford,
Belden,	Dingley,	Littauer,	Smith, Ky.
Belford,	Dockery,	Little,	Smith, Wm. Alden,
Belnap,	Dolliver,	Lorimer,	Snover,
Bennet, Pa.	Dorr,	Lovering,	Southwick,
Bennett,	Driggs,	McAleer,	Spalding,
Benton,	Eddy,	McClellan,	Sparkman,
Bland,	Ermentrout,	McCormick,	Sprague,
Booze,	Fenton,	McIntire,	Stallings,
Botkin,	Fitzgerald,	McMillin,	Stevens, Minn.
Bontelle, Me.	Fitzpatrick,	Mahon,	Stewart, Wis.
Bradley,	Footo,	Mann,	Stokes,
Brenner, Ohio	Fowler, N. C.	Marshall,	Strode, Nebr.
Brewer,	Gillet, N. Y.	Martin,	Strowd, N. C.
Brewster,	Greene, Nebr.	Maxwell,	Sulzer,
Bromwell,	Griffith,	Mesick,	Sutherland,
Brosius,	Griggs,	Miller,	Swanson,
Broussard,	Gunn,	Mitchell,	Talbert,
Brownlow,	Hamilton,	Moody,	Tawney,
Bull,	Harmer,	Morris,	Taylor, Ala.
Butler,	Hartman,	Northway,	Todd,
Campbell,	Hay,	Norton, Ohio	Vandiver,
Carmack,	Henry, Conn.	Norton, S. C.	Vehslage,
Catchings,	Henry, Ind.	Odell,	Vincent,
Chickering,	Henry, Tex.	Ogden,	Wadsworth,
Clardy,	Hinrichsen,	Otoy,	Walker, Mass.
Clark, Mo.	Hitt,	Overstreet,	Ward,
Clayton,	Hooker,	Prince,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cochrane, N. Y.	Howard, Ala.	Pugh,	Wheeler, Ky.
Colson,	Hunter,	Quigg,	White, N. C.
Cooney,	Jett,	Richardson,	Wilber,
Cooper, Tex.	Johnson, Ind.	Robb,	Williams, Pa.
Cooper, Wis.	Johnson, N. Dak.	Robbins,	Wilson,
Corliss,	Jones, Va.	Robertson, La.	Zenor.
Cowherd,	Jones, Wash.	Royce,
Cranford,	Knowles,	Sauerhoring,
Crumacker,	Lanham,	Settle,

So the motion to recede from the disagreement and concur with an amendment was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced:
Until further notice:

Mr. ODELL with Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.
Mr. GROW with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.
Mr. BROWNLOW with Mr. HAY.
Mr. HOOKER with Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky.
Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana with Mr. LENTZ.
Mr. SHOWALTER with Mr. BENTON.
Mr. MORRIS with Mr. SPARKMAN.
Mr. BARNEY with Mr. CLAYTON.
Mr. LORIMER with Mr. COOPER of Texas.
Mr. BARRETT with Mr. CAMPBELL.
Mr. CHARLES W. STONE with Mr. BLAND.
Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire with Mr. CARMACK.
Mr. SPALDING with Mr. BRUCKER.
Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON.
Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. SWANSON.
Mr. PITNEY with Mr. DOCKERY.
Mr. ROBBINS with Mr. BROUSSARD.
Mr. COCHRANE of New York with Mr. FOWLER of North Carolina.
Mr. DORR with Mr. DRIGGS.
Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. COONEY.
Mr. LOUD with Mr. RICHARDSON.
Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois with Mr. GRIGGS.
Mr. JENKINS with Mr. STOKES.
Mr. BEACH with Mr. BRENNER of Ohio.
Mr. CORLISS with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.
Mr. OVERSTREET with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.
Mr. SHELLEN with Mr. TODD.
Mr. SNOVER with Mr. HARTMAN.
Mr. DINGLEY with Mr. McMILLIN.
Mr. MILLER with Mr. CLARDY.
Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. ERMENROUT.
Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. STROWD of North Carolina.
Mr. HARMER with Mr. VANDIVER.
Mr. SPRAGUE with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.
Mr. SAUERHERING with Mr. HUNTER.
Mr. ROYSE with Mr. ZENOR.
Mr. COLSON with Mr. FITZPATRICK.
Mr. BENNETT with Mr. GAINES.
Mr. HENRY of Connecticut with Mr. BOTKIN.
Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts with Mr. OGDEN.
Mr. HENRY of Indiana with Mr. GRIFFITH.
Mr. BREWSTER with Mr. SUTHERLAND.
Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin with Mr. LITTLE.
Mr. QUIGG with Mr. CRANFORD.
Mr. WALKER of Virginia with Mr. OTEY.
Mr. TAWNEY with Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania.
Mr. MANN with Mr. JETT.
Mr. LOVERING with Mr. VINCENT.
Mr. BELDEN with Mr. SULZER.
Mr. TAYLER of Ohio with Mr. CATCHINGS.
Mr. THORP with Mr. TALBERT.
Mr. PRINCE with Mr. HINRICHSSEN.
Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE with Mr. MCCLELLAN.
Mr. STRODE of Nebraska with Mr. LATIMER.
Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin with Mr. MAXWELL.
For this day:
Mr. WILBER with Mr. VESLAGE.
Mr. BUTLER with Mr. MEYER of Louisiana.
Mr. WARD with Mr. WILSON.
Mr. CHICKERING with Mr. DAVEY.
Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH with Mr. JONES of Virginia.
Mr. BELKNAP with Mr. SMITH of Kentucky.
Mr. EDDY with Mr. COWHERD.
Mr. MESICK with Mr. LANHAM.
Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. HENRY of Texas.
Mr. CRUMPACKER with Mr. FITZGERALD.
Mr. PUGH with Mr. NORTON of Ohio.
Mr. BELFORD with Mr. SETTLE.
Mr. MERCER with Mr. BRADLEY.
Mr. HEMENWAY with Mr. ROBB.
Mr. WISE with Mr. NORTON of South Carolina.
Mr. FOWLER of New Jersey with Mr. STALLINGS.
Mr. SOUTHWICK with Mr. MARSHALL.
Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I overlooked the fact that I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. BRADLEY. I desire to withdraw my vote and to be marked "present."
Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, I have a general pair with the gentleman from New York, Mr. BENNETT. I voted in the negative, and desire to withdraw my vote and be marked "present."
Mr. GROW. Mr. Speaker, I have a pair with the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. CLARK. If he were present, I should vote "yea."
Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague, Mr. JONES, who instructed me to say that, if present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that my colleague, Mr. LANHAM, is absent on account of death in his family.

Mr. MCRAE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to announce that my colleague, Mr. LITTLE, is absent. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. BRUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a general pair with the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. SPALDING. I do not know how he would vote, and therefore I withdraw my negative vote and desire to be marked "present."

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I am paired with the gentleman from South Carolina, Mr. NORTON. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. CARMACK. I therefore withdraw my vote and desire to be marked "present."

Mr. WANGER. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. ADAMSON, and I therefore ask to withdraw my vote and to be marked "present."

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to inquire if the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. ROBB, voted?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman did not vote.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I am paired with the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. ROBB, and I desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state that I have received a telegram from the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. COOPER, who desires me to announce that if present he would vote against the amendment.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded. On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House receded from its disagreement and agreed with an amendment was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS YALOBUSHA RIVER, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. FOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4710) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River, between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 29, 1898.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. FOX, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

INVESTIGATION OF GAS AND TELEPHONES.

Mr. PITNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the committee of five members appointed under the resolution of the House, adopted February 14, 1898, to investigate and report as to charges for gas and telephones in the District of Columbia, is hereby continued with all the powers and duties conferred under the said resolution, and also with authority to sit during the recess and to report their conclusions to the House during the last session of the present Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. I object.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn.
Mr. CUMMINGS. I hope that the gentleman from Illinois will withdraw that motion.

Mr. BRUMM. So do I. I want to ask for a conference report.

Mr. CANNON. Well, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania says that he has a conference report, and that would interrupt the motion to adjourn if he insists upon it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Has the gentleman from Pennsylvania a conference report?

Mr. BRUMM. No; I want to ask that the House agree to a conference.

Mr. CANNON. Then I renew my motion that the House adjourn.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BRUMM. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 24, noes 48.

So the House refused to adjourn.

VERONA E. POLLOCK.

Mr. BRUMM. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask to call up the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock, and I move that the House insist on its amendment and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. BRUMM, Mr. GRAFF, and Mr. RIXEY.

THE HUBBARD COLLECTION OF ENGRAVINGS.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on the Library to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate joint resolution 139, authorizing the Librarian of Congress to accept the collection of engravings proposed to be donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Librarian of Congress is hereby empowered and directed to accept the offer of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, widow of the late Gardiner Greene Hubbard, communicated to him by the following letter, on the terms and conditions therein stated, except that instead of naming the gallery in the Library as therein proposed, the collection shall be known and styled as the Gardiner Greene Hubbard collection, it not being, in the opinion of Congress, desirable to call parts of the public buildings after the names of individual citizens, and that the bust therein named be accepted and kept in a suitable place, to be designated by the Joint Committee on the Library; and to communicate to Mrs. Hubbard the grateful appreciation of Congress of the public spirit and munificence manifested by said gift:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21, 1898.

MY DEAR SIR: I hereby offer to the Congressional Library, for the benefit of the people of the United States, the collection of engravings made by my husband, the late Gardiner Greene Hubbard, and, in addition thereto, the art books, to be treated as part of the collection.

This disposition of the collection, the gathering of which was to him the pleasure of many years chiefly devoted to the welfare of his fellow-men, is in accordance with his wishes, and is that which would give him the greatest satisfaction.

I desire that a suitable gallery in the Library be devoted to this collection, and such additions as may from time to time be made to it, to be known as the "Gardiner Greene Hubbard Gallery," where it can be accessible to the public, to be studied and enjoyed under such reasonable regulations as may be made by Congress, or by the authority to whom Congress may delegate the control of the Congressional Library.

Accompanying the collection is a bust of Mr. Hubbard by Gaetano Trentanove, which I desire may be kept in a suitable place in the gallery.

I propose during my lifetime to add to the collection from time to time, and in my will to make provision for increasing the collection by creating a fund of $20,000, to be placed in the hands of trustees, the interest of which is to be used by the Librarian of Congress in the purchase of additional engravings, it being my understanding that the expenses incident to the proper care of this collection will be borne by the Congressional Library and not be a charge against this fund.

I am, very sincerely, yours,

GERTRUDE M. HUBBARD.

Hon. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG,

Librarian of the Congressional Library, Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was ordered to be read a third time; and being read the third time, it was passed.

On motion of Mr. CUMMINGS, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was passed was laid on the table.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION, 1901.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate joint resolution 141, regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition in the year 1901 upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas there has been duly incorporated, under the laws of the State of New York, by citizens of said State, a company organized for the purpose and with the object of preparing and holding a pan-American exposition on Cayuga Island, near Niagara Falls, N. Y., in the year 1901, to fittingly illustrate the marvelous development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century and to appropriately celebrate the opening of the twentieth century by a demonstration of the reciprocal relations existing between the American republics and colonies; and

Whereas the legislature of the State of New York has, by unanimous vote, memorialized Congress to encourage the holding of said pan-American exposition; and

Whereas the proposed exposition, being confined in its scope to the Western Hemisphere, would unquestionably be of vast benefit to the commercial interests of the countries of North, South, and Central America: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proposed pan-American exposition to be held on Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, in the year 1901, merits the encouragement and approval of Congress and of the people of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the President of the United States, upon receiving from the directors of said exposition company a statement showing to his satisfaction that the financial resources of said company are assured and ample to carry out the objects of said exposition, is hereby authorized to cause the attention of all Governments in the Western Hemisphere to be called to the intent and purpose of the proposed pan-American exposition in such manner as he may deem most appropriate to secure their cooperation and participation therein.

SEC. 3. That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at said exposition shall be admitted free of duty, customs fees, or charges, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful during said exposition to sell for delivery at the close thereof any goods or property imported and actually on exhibition therein, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe: Provided, That all such articles when sold or withdrawn for consumption shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at that time: And provided further, That all necessary expenses incurred, including salaries of customs officials in charge of imported articles, shall be paid to the Treasury of the United States by the Pan-American Exposition Company, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 4. That in the passage of this joint resolution the United States does not assume any liability of any kind whatever, and does not become responsible in any manner for any bond, debt, contract, expenditure, expense, or liability of the said exposition company, its officers, agents, servants, or employees, or incident to or growing out of said exposition.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment—

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important measure; a little too important to pass by unanimous consent. Reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman explain it, and what and who are behind it.

Mr. ALEXANDER. If the gentleman from Kansas will hear the amendment read which I am going to offer, perhaps he will understand it better.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York ask that the amendment be read to the House for information, before consent is given for consideration?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Yes.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Strike out all of section 2, and make "Sec. 3" read "Sec. 2" and make "Sec. 4" read "Sec. 3."

Mr. ALEXANDER. There is no appropriation asked for in this bill. It simply announces the fact that in 1901 there will be an exposition held at a point between Niagara Falls and Buffalo. This bill with section 2 stricken out does not ask the President to notify the South American countries that such an exposition will be held. It simply asks that exhibits from the countries of this hemisphere may be admitted free of duty for exhibition purposes. If sold in this country, then the duties must be paid the same as if they came in not for exhibition purposes. That is all there is to this bill. At the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] who objected to it previously, section 2 has been stricken out.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to have a distinct understanding with the gentleman from New York on that point. I shall not object to the bill with that section stricken out, although I shall vote against it; but I want a distinct understanding that that section is not to be reinserted in the Senate, and that if they should attempt to reinsert it, the gentleman from New York will oppose it. I have been unfairly treated once this session by agreeing to unanimous consent for the consideration of a bill with an amendment which was adopted in the House; but the Senate, ignoring the action of the House, sent the bill back and insisted on passing it without the amendment, and the conferees yielded.

Now, while I am opposed to this bill and shall vote against it, because I believe that holding expositions is no part of the Government's business, yet I am perfectly willing, so far as I am concerned, that a majority of the House should pass the bill, but with the distinct understanding—

Mr. ALEXANDER. Let me say that, acting upon the suggestion made by the gentleman when the bill was up before, we called upon the Secretary of State—

Mr. BAILEY. I understand that. I only want the gentleman's assurance that if the Senate should insert this provision, he will help me to oppose it.

Mr. ALEXANDER. You have that assurance.

Mr. BAILEY. With that I am content.

Mr. ALEXANDER. The Senate will not be asked to reinsert section 2, because it is not necessary; and it is understood by the Senator from New York who has charge of the bill that the section is to be stricken out and to remain stricken out.

Mr. SIMPSON. I should like to understand what corporation or organization is behind this bill and desiring this exposition.

Mr. ALEXANDER. There is a very large company of leading men of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, and some from other parts of our State, though a majority are from Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Mr. SIMPSON. Then it is not the municipal government of the city?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Oh, no.

Mr. SIMPSON. Not the city of Buffalo, but a private corporation?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Simply a corporation of leading gentlemen, some of them capitalists and some not, who desire to hold what is to be called the Pan-American Exposition of 1901 and to invite exhibits there from all the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. SIMPSON. Then, as I understand, the gentleman is now seeking the aid of Congress to notify the world through the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that this exposition is to be held in the city of Buffalo. He says that he does not desire the President to notify foreign nations. Then what benefit is this bill?

Mr. ALEXANDER. It allows all exhibits from foreign countries to come in duty free.

Mr. SIMPSON. That is what the bill is for?

Mr. ALEXANDER. It is what the bill is for, and all it is for—to allow exhibits from foreign countries to come in duty free for exhibition purposes.

Mr. SIMPSON. Being a free trader myself and in favor of all things coming in free, I do not object to that part of it. [Laughter.] If the gentleman can assure me that this is a step in the direction of free trade, I am with him.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I can assure the gentleman that this is a step toward advertising to the Western Hemisphere that we shall gladly exchange products with them; that we desire to show them what we have and to see what they have.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am glad that my protectionist friend is willing to go even that little way. I am in hopes that later on he may see his way clear to go the whole distance in favor of free trade, so as to benefit all the people of the country and not merely this corporation in Buffalo.

Mr. RIDGELY. I understand that the gentleman's bill allows foreign goods to come in free, simply to be looked at.

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is all.

Mr. RIDGELY. But if we want to use them, we must pay the tariff. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAGUIRE. Is there any real necessity for remitting these tariff duties, because it is understood on the other side that the foreigner pays the tariff tax?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Well, we would like to have the bill go through as amended.

Mr. MAGUIRE. Then this bill is for the relief of the foreigner, and not the American corporation which has been referred to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Why not amend the bill by stating specifically that the foreigner is relieved from this tax?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I think the bill practically states that.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I now offer the amendment which was read for information a few moments ago.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. ALEXANDER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. DALZELL. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman withhold that motion for a moment in order that I may make a personal statement.

Mr. DALZELL. I withdraw the motion for the present.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, several days ago, in a colloquy with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], I insisted that he should divulge the name of the Democrat who had represented himself as the author of a certain editorial in a newspaper published in the city of Washington. Since that time I have investigated the matter, and I find that the gentleman from Ohio had reason for saying what he did, though there is not a perfect agreement between him and the gentleman to whom he referred as to what occurred. I take occasion, however, in justice to the gentleman from Ohio, to say that we dismiss all question about the statement he made.

I am satisfied that the Democrat who is supposed to have told him that he wrote that editorial did not write it, and is free from all blame. Having called upon the gentleman from Ohio for the name, I simply desire to say that I am satisfied, and all on this side who are familiar with the circumstances are entirely satisfied, to let the matter stand where it is.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. RAY of New York. Well, Mr. Speaker, before the motion to adjourn is submitted, since there has been a great deal of talk about this matter, will the gentleman from Texas allow me a moment?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. RAY of New York. There has been so much said in reference to this "Democrat" that I think the country is entitled to the name, whoever he is; and inasmuch as the gentleman has ascertained that it was written by a Democrat—

Mr. BAILEY. It was not written by a Democratic Congressman.

Mr. RAY of New York. Oh, I beg pardon; I misunderstood you.

Mr. BAILEY. I think it was not written by a Democrat at all.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I renew the motion that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the announcement on the motion to adjourn, the Chair will lay before the House certain personal requests of members.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. GAINES, on account of illness, during the day.

To Mr. BROWNLOW, for four days, on account of sickness.

The result of the vote on the motion of Mr. DALZELL was then announced; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for the survey of Ship Island Pass, etc., Mississippi, was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. CUMMINGS, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3628) providing for a monument to mark the site of the Fort Phil Kearny massacre, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1648); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. FENTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2400) providing for the recognition of the military service of the officers and enlisted men of the First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1649); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, MEMORIALS, AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HULL: A bill (H. R. 10903) to increase the Judge-Advocate-General's Department of the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10904) to raise 25,000 colored troops from the nation at large—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BRODERICK: A resolution (House Res. No. 333) that the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, directed to supply a United States flag containing the full number of stars for the Speaker's desk before the opening of the next session of Congress—to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BRUCKER: A bill (H. R. 10905) for the relief of Henry Howe, private Company H, Second Regiment Michigan Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 10906) granting an increase of pension to Hiram Janes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also (by request), a bill (H. R. 10907) for the relief of the devisees of Casper Barber from the operation of the act restricting the ownership of real estate in the Territories and the District of Columbia to American citizens—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LLOYD: A bill (H. R. 10908) granting a pension to Levi N. Ballenger—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAHON: A bill (H. R. 10909) granting a pension to Edwin S. Willis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUSSELL: A bill (H. R. 10910) to remove the charge of desertion against Thomas Mahoney—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. YOST: A bill (H. R. 10911) for the relief of the estate of John Wissler, deceased, formerly of Shenandoah County, Va.—to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. CURTIS of Iowa (by request): Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of Casper Barber—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. ERMONTROUT: Resolutions of Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen, and Railroad Trainmen and Orders of Railway Conductors and Railway Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HURLEY: Memorial of the Irish National Club of New York, in opposition to a treaty of alliance with Great Britain—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. McALEER: Resolutions adopted by the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers, Firemen, and Trainmen and Orders of Railway Conductors and Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SHANNON: Proposal of Jules H. Baer, of New York City, to amend act of June 13, 1893, which it is claimed will have the effect of enormously increasing the annual revenues of the Government—estimated increase, $180,000,000—without incurring any objection whatever from the producer of the article to be taxed or from the purchaser of the same, while it will add much to the comfort of the people—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SULZER: Petition of citizens of New York City, protesting against the so-called Anglo-American alliance—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, July 7, 1898.

The Senate met at 12 o'clock m.

Prayer by Rev. J. F. HEISSE, of the city of Washington.

On motion of Mr. GALLINGER, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House insists upon its amendment to the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BRUMM, Mr. GRAFF, and Mr. RIXEY, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. R. 139) authorizing the Librarian of Congress to accept the collection of engravings proposed to be donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard.

The message further announced that the House had passed with amendments the joint resolution (S. R. 141) regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition in the year 1901 upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. THURSTON presented a resolution adopted at a joint meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Order of Railway Telegraphers, held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 5, 1893, favoring the passage of the so-called anti-scalping ticket bill; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PROCTOR presented a petition of the Epworth League of Irasburg, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in all Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented the petition of Dr. H. A. Roberts, of Brattleboro, Vt., and 10 other members of the Homeopathic School of Medicine in the State of Vermont, and the petition of W. E. Putnam and 7 other members of the Homeopathic School of Medicine in the State of Vermont, praying for the passage of Senate joint resolution No. 164, preventing discrimination against graduates of legally chartered medical colleges in appointments to the medical corps of the Army, Navy, and Marine-Hospital Service of the United States; which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PETTIGREW, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 4852) to ratify agreements with the Indians of the Lower Brule and Rosebud reservations, in South Dakota, and making an appropriation to carry the same into effect; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4623) to ratify agreements with the Indians of the Lower Brule and Rosebud reservations, in South Dakota, and making an appropriation to carry the same into effect, reported adversely thereon; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1055) to amend section 4706 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HANNA, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3097) increasing the pension of Alexander Hughes, of Petersburg, Pike County, Ind., submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. ROACH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8952) granting an increase of pension to John C. Knapp, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. LINDSAY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2497) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Cook, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. DAVIS, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3119) for the relief of Mary A. Swift, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

SPECIAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. HALE. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, to report it with an amendment. I ask that the bill may be considered.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 2, after line 17, to insert:

WAR DEPARTMENT.

To enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of officers and soldiers who die at military camps or who are killed in action or who die in the field at places outside of the limits of the United States, $300,000.

Mr. HALE. I submit a letter from the Secretary of War on the subject of the amendment, which I send to the desk to be printed in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 6, 1898.

SIR: There is at present no authority of law for the transportation of remains of officers and soldiers killed in action nor who die while on duty in the field or in military camps. The expense of transporting remains of officers and soldiers has heretofore been paid from the appropriation for Army transportation; but this has been limited to the transportation to the nearest military post or national cemetery for burial.

In the present emergency it is desirable that the remains of officers and soldiers who are killed in action, or who die in the field in Cuba or at other places outside of the limits of the United States, should be brought home; and the Secretary of War, in his discretion, should be in a position to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of such officers and soldiers as die in military camps.

To this end I have the honor to request that an appropriation of $300,000 be made at the earliest date practicable, and inclose draft of bill.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER, Secretary of War.

Hon. EUGENE HALE, United States Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

CHAPELS AT WEST POINT.

Mr. SEWELL. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6149) to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases, to report it without amendment. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I should like to make an inquiry concerning the bill. I heard it read casually. If I understood it correctly, it proposes to grant to the Secretary of War authority to permit the construction by any religious denomination of a chapel on the grounds of the Government at West Point. I wish to ask the Senator from New Jersey if it is contemplated that all religious denominations, if they take a notion to have a chapel or a church on the Government grounds at West Point, can have that privilege?

Mr. SEWELL. It was thought better to make it general and not confine it to any one denomination. There are five or six thousand acres of land there, and the Secretary of War could place a dozen chapels on the reservation, if he pleased, without interfering with the business of the Government.

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like further to ask the Senator what necessity there is for this legislation? The committee doubtless have given it consideration.

Mr. SEWELL. The necessity arises from the fact that denominations want to have their own churches. That is the manner in which it was presented to the committee. It was stated that a number of the soldiers, officers, and their families desire other denominational religion than that provided at the present time.

Mr. GALLINGER. According to that we ought to place a chaplain of every religious denomination in every army corps and in every command of the Navy. If we must provide religious instruction for the individual soldier at West Point, why not in the Army and why not in the Navy?

Mr. SEWELL. I will say to the Senator that while I am an Episcopalian by birth and education and by long lineage, I have never objected to any other form of religion in my vicinity. While in command of the army, when a Catholic priest came along and said, "I should like to see the boys who belong to my church," I would put up a tent for him and I gave him all the facilities necessary for those men. I would do the same at West Point or on any other Government reservation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is objection made to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not know that I shall object to the consideration of the bill, but I will suggest that I think it would have been better, if the purpose of the bill is to permit a certain denomination to erect a chapel at West Point, to have so stated it in the bill. I do not apprehend that we are going to erect a Methodist, a Congregationalist, a Baptist, a Presbyterian, an Episcopal, a Unitarian, a Universalist, and a Roman Catholic church on the Government reservation at West Point, and yet there are doubtless boys there belonging to every one of those denominations. If this is a bill for the purpose of permitting one certain denomination to erect a chapel, why not name it in the bill? Why not be frank about it?

I take it—and I have no concealment about it—that this is a bill for the purpose of permitting the Roman Catholic Church to erect a chapel on the military reservation at West Point. I do not know but that it is good policy. I am not going to assert to the contrary. I am quite as liberal in my religious views as the Senator from New Jersey possibly can be. But I think it would have been better to have been entirely frank in this matter and to have stated the purpose for which the legislation is intended.

Mr. SEWELL. The Senator will allow me to say that the Military Committee thought it best to make it general and not to confine it to any one denomination.

Mr. GALLINGER. While doubting the expediency of the legislation, I shall not object to the consideration of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I should like to say just a word upon the subject. The committee in reporting this bill endeavored to hold a steady and even consideration and recommendation of the religious organizations of whatever kind, exhibiting no partiality, doing as the Government as a whole and the various branches have done. We have a chaplain here. I declare I do not know to what particular church he belongs, and I do not remember the church to which any chaplain of the Senate belonged since I have been here, except the Lutheran chaplain, who was with us for a long time. Every regiment in the Army has a right to have a chaplain. There is occasionally an Irish regiment, almost wholly Catholic, and they have a Catholic chaplain. As the Senator from New Jersey says, those of us who had the honor to command any considerable body of troops always heartily welcomed the Catholic priest as well as any other, for he had a good influence over his men, and they had a right to have an opportunity to hear their own people preach. But we held the balance exactly equal between them.

Now, if six or eight or ten denominations should come along and make application to the Secretary of War for this privilege, I should think he would have to say "this is extravagant;" but if one or two ask it and it seemed to him that it would gratify the population, or certain men down on the reservation, as well as some of the officers, I think he might well grant one, and perhaps another. There is a chaplain there now. I do not know to what particular denomination he belongs, but I presume the Senator from New Jersey can tell me. If I recollect aright, the services are conducted after the Episcopal form. We had almost as many chaplains in the Army of different denomination as there were denominations, and the Government held a perfectly even balance with regard to all of them. That is what I am in favor of, and nothing more.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I would not have said another word had it not been for the observations of the Senator from Connecticut. I wish to repeat that we do not furnish religious instruction to the individual in the Army or to a religious sect in the Army. We appoint a Baptist, a Methodist, or an Episcopalian chaplain to a regiment and he holds services, and the soldiers are expected to attend or not to attend as they see fit. We have a chapel, I understand, at West Point adequate to the religious instruction of the cadets at the Academy. I have never heard any complaint that it was overcrowded. It is not apt to be when boys form the congregation.

The simple question is whether we are going to permit on that reservation the erection of buildings for religious instruction by the several denominations. The Senator says it would be extravagant if eight or ten denominations came and asked permission to have chapels. Why should they not under this bill? This bill gives them that right. I concede that that is manifestly not the real purpose, and that is what I found fault with a moment ago. I do not think we are frank about this thing. Nor do I agree at all to the proposition that the Government is bound to furnish any particular kind of religious instruction to the Army or the Navy any more than it should discriminate as between the schools of medicine in appointing surgeons for the Army or the Navy.

But I have said what I intended to say. I regret the bill is not in a different form, but I have no disposition whatever to obstruct its passage if the Military Committee desire to have it enacted into law.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I will say only a word more. I hope the Senate will not be impatient. Observe our treatment of the Indians. They have had any kind of a pastor who was most acceptable. Indeed, General Grant took the lead in inviting all the religious denominations in the country to come in and assist in solving the Indian problem. We never took particular pains to find out from the Department whether a Methodist or a Baptist or a Congregationalist or an Episcopalian had been appointed to a certain position, but we did give opportunity for religious instruction. It has always been considered good policy to do so.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, Mr. President, I must add another word. If the Senator from Connecticut can point me to an instance where the Government has appointed chaplains of different religious denominations to officiate on a particular reservation upon the ground that a portion of the Indians were entitled to have a teacher of their own religious faith, then the argument of the Senator from Connecticut is valid. Otherwise it is not. The citation of the action General Grant took is not very forcible, in view of the fact that Congress has reversed that action and has insisted that we shall not appropriate money for the purposes that General Grant recommended, to wit, the support of sectarian schools among the Indians. We did that for a long succession of years, but the country revolted against it and the policy has been changed by Congressional action.

Mr. SEWELL. I hope we may now have a vote.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, and was ordered to a third reading.

Mr. PETTUS. I ask that the bill may be read.

The bill was read the third time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War, in his discretion, may authorize the erection of a building for religious worship by any denomination, sect, or religion on the West Point Military Reservation: Provided, That the erection of such building will not interfere with the uses of said reservation for military purposes. Said building shall be erected without any expense whatever to the Government of the United States, and shall be removed from the reservation, or its location changed by the denomination, sect, or religious body erecting the same whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, public or military necessity shall require it, and without compensation for such building or any other expense whatever to the Government.

The bill was passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. SEWELL. I should like to call up—

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us finish the morning business.

Mr. SEWELL. This is a military bill and quite important.

Mr. BERRY. Let us get the morning business through.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order.

Mr. PROCTOR. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report favorably a bill, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not object to this bill, but I desire to suggest that we spend an hour or two this morning in the consideration of unobjected cases on the Calendar. A number of Senators have appealed to me.

Mr. COCKRELL. After the morning business?

Mr. ALLISON. Immediately after the routine morning business is concluded. I suggest that we spend, say, two hours upon the Calendar of unobjected cases. I ask unanimous consent that that order be made.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is unanimous consent given?

Mr. WHITE. I have no objection to the request save this: There is a matter involving the imprisonment of two American citizens in the Republic of Colombia to which I wish to attract the attention of the Senate in a few words, and I do not wish that interfered with.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Subject to that exception, unanimous consent is asked that two hours be taken immediately after the close of the morning business for unobjected cases on the Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I do not rise to object to that arrangement at all, but I wish to give notice to the Senate that during the morning or day I desire to call up the bill for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal.

If the Senate will indulge me a few moments in a statement, it may not be practicable to get a vote upon that measure in the Senate or in the House at this session of Congress, but it is very important that the subject should be placed under consideration by this body, and the sooner we begin in this work the sooner it will be completed.

My idea about it now is that we can build the Nicaraguan Canal sooner than we can build a fleet on the Pacific Ocean for the purpose of meeting Germany or any other power that may deem proper to attack us there, or even the Spanish power, if it should succeed in driving us out of the Bay of Manila. We can build it also at less cost than we can build and equip a navy such as we have now in the Atlantic Ocean and in the Caribbean Sea. So, in point of economy and expenditure and the necessary expense of our coast line and our ports on both oceans, it is incumbent upon us to proceed at once to the consideration of some plan, some bill, for the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal.

I flatter myself that the bill the committee have reported at this session is almost absolutely free from the objections that have been made to this measure heretofore. So I wish to say to the Senate that at some time during the course of the day I desire to call that bill up, and if Senators feel that they have not time now to pass upon the measure, or that it is a matter of too great importance for consideration in these latter days of the session, I will hope to obtain from the Senate unanimous consent, or at least a special order by a two-thirds vote, for a day in December when the bill will be made the regular order, serving thereby sufficient notice upon Senators, that they may take the subject up and consider it maturely and thoroughly before the time arrives.

I thank the Senate for its indulgence in allowing me to make this statement.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report submitted by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] is in order.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I wish to say, in the same manner as was said by the honorable Senator from Alabama, that I have always been in favor very earnestly of the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal by the Government of the United States, upon the condition that its feasibility should be first ascertained; second, that the line of actual work should be submitted to us for examination, and third, that there should be a reasonable estimate of the expenditures probable in its completion and execution. The last action of Congress on the subject was to appoint a commission having in charge these three subjects: First, the feasibility of the project. The word "feasibility" is in the act of the last Congress. Second, the expense of the work. Third, the method of its prosecution.

I think it would be very premature to call up the bill at this session of Congress or to consider it in any manner before the report of the commission, which we appointed in the last Congress upon these subjects. That report, I am told, will not be ready until about September. It is true that the commissioners have arrived here, but they are still supervising and overseeing the work which is in actual progress. Many of the divisions and subdivisions of the Nicaraguan Canal route have not been scheduled. They are under the compass—they are yet subject to the review and examination of the subparties now laboring under the order of the commission which we appointed in the last Congress. Until that report is received and published and submitted to us I think it would be very premature to enter into any consideration of the bill.

It is very true, as was remarked by the honorable Senator from Alabama, that this bill is not as obnoxious to objection as former bills have been in respect to this subject. Although some of us here have been very earnestly in favor of the construction of the canal, I for one, and I think certain of my colleagues here, have been earnestly opposed to subsidizing any private corporations to any amount for that purpose. On the contrary, we will always favor the enterprise of a direct construction by the Government.

This bill in its letter does not authorize a subsidy, but it does authorize a very singular and a very unique substitute for a subsidy. The scheme of the present bill pending is that the United States Government, instead of directly entering into the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal, shall creep into the shell of a corporation called the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, shall adopt the form, shape, and dimensions of this corporation, and under the disguise and mask of this corporation the Government shall undertake the prosecution and completion of the work.

I submit, sir, that that is a very peculiar position existing between this corporation and the United States under the bill. It seems to me at first blush it is beneath the dignity of this Government or any other great sovereign power, one of the leading nations of the earth, willing to undertake an international project of this grandeur and magnitude, to ensconce itself in the abandoned cell and in the empty space left by the destruction or abandonment of the Maritime Canal Company of its enterprise.

There is one very great advantage in the Nicaraguan scheme which I do not recollect to have heard noticed even by its most ardent advocates here, and I will make this contribution to its manifest advantage. The main feature of the Nicaraguan Canal route is the Lake of Nicaragua. As compared with other canals it has a special advantage. The Suez Canal is a maritime canal proper, built on the sea level, without locks, and filled with sea water. The Corinth Canal is a canal of the same kind. The Manchester Canal is to a large extent a canal of the same kind, although it is supplied by rivers which are tidewater.

But 70 miles of the navigation of the Nicaraguan Canal route is through the lake, a very large body of fresh water, in some parts of great depth and purity, and seated in the lowest depression of that long sierra which runs from the Frozen Sea to Cape Horn, traversing the continent. The consequence is that when a sea-going vessel has climbed the acclivity to the lake, enters the waters of the lake, and makes the usual voyage through the 70 miles of fresh water at the ordinary speed, it rids itself even then of some quantity of barnacles adhering to the keel and to the bottom of the vessel.

If the vessel was in no great hurry, and even if it was in the greatest possible haste, it would well pay it to spend a few hours in the fresh water of Lake Nicaragua in order to make its bottom clean. It would be a saving of fuel; and as far as speed is concerned, it would hasten the voyage of the vessel to make this delay, for the effect of the fresh water upon the barnacles is very marvelous. In three or four hours they become in fresh water weak and feeble, lifeless. The oldest, the most sea-worn, and the tightest-mouthed barnacle, spending four hours in fresh water, loses its hold upon the hull of a vessel and sinks innocuous to the bottom of the lake. That is one very great advantage of the line of the Nicaraguan Canal which I have not heard alluded to by any of the advocates of the Maritime Canal Company.

Mr. BACON. If the Senator from Indiana will permit me, I beg to suggest that the hum of conversation in the Chamber adds very greatly to the labor of his speaking, and I ask that we may have order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will so request.

Mr. TURPIE. I have just pointed out, Mr. President, the very manifest advantage of this great receptacle of fresh water for a long distance of the canal route proposed. If we only had such a receptacle of pure and placid fluid through which to take this scheme itself and rid it of the barnacles which have attached to it ever since it has been sent to Congress, it would be a still greater advantage not only to the enterprise, but to the country.

One of the great and chief barnacles which have attached to this scheme has been a corporation called the Maritime Canal Company. It is the behemoth of barnacles which have clung to the keel, the bottom, of this whole enterprise since its first agitation in Congress. I do not think, sir, that the name of this company ought to be mentioned in a bill which undertakes the construction on the part of the Government of the Nicaraguan Canal.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I should like to interrupt the Senator from Indiana long enough to inquire what is the business before the Senate?

Mr. TURPIE. The business before the Senate is—

Mr. CULLOM. I do not understand that the Nicaraguan Canal bill is now before the Senate.

Mr. TURPIE. No, sir; it is not.

Mr. CULLOM. I rose to inquire.

Mr. TURPIE. But let me remind the honorable Senator from Illinois that the honorable Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] spoke an hour on this subject the other day, and that this morning he occupied a part of the time of the Senate on the same subject, urging that we should take up the bill now, or we should consider it at some fixed time next session; and I think that I have at least the right to make a very brief digest of the reasons why this action should not be taken.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator from Indiana will allow me just a word. I supposed we were going to dispose of the morning business. I do not desire to interfere with the Senator's address, but it seems to me that it would come in more regularly when the Nicaraguan bill is brought before the Senate, if it should come up. I hope, however, the Senator will not understand that I want to interfere with his speech, if he desires to make one.

Mr. TURPIE. Mr. President, I am a firm adherent to regularity. I am disposed to be as regular in my examination of this bill and the special reasons for deferring present action upon it as the honorable Senator from Illinois can be.

I was going on to say that this enterprise had been greatly retarded, hindered, delayed, and stood again in danger of great hindrance, by reason of the Maritime Canal Company, by reason of the connection of that corporation with it. I regret that the bill at present introduced contains even the name of that corporation, for the name is a very unlucky one. The name of the Maritime Canal Company is odious, thoroughly odious, in every market in the world. I do not know of another name so distasteful, so odious, and so clothed with the prestige of disaster and discredit as the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, except the Panama Canal Company of the Isthmus of Darien. Par nobile fratrum!

Why, then, should the credit of this Government, or the cash of this Government, be invested in the name of the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua? That Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua is not distinguished—I withdraw the word; it is probably not a relevant word to be used in this connection—that Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua is not notorious for anything except a total failure of the enterprise which it undertook. It has made a total failure of the enterprise. It is not entitled to the praise of a pioneer, one who had undertaken a great enterprise for the first time and failed. It is not entitled to the praise of an inventor, one who had made a discovery of a new route or a method in which an old one might be practical and actually shaped and fashioned.

It is the fourth American failure of private enterprises to construct a canal upon this route. First, there was Governor De Witt Clinton; second, John Kelly, of New York, and his associates; third, there was Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, and his associates; and fourth, there was the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. Very large sums of money had been expended by all these previous associations in the survey and estimate of the work. The survey and estimate of this work made by Mr. Vanderbilt and his associates I am told cost over a quarter of a million dollars. It was a survey which complied with the most exacting demands of science. It was a survey in which every detail of engineering was carried out to the last limitation.

But, Mr. President, these previous surveys differed from that of the Maritime Canal Company in one great respect. Neither of these previous promoters of the first, second, or third enterprises came to Congress to ask Congress to refund the money which they had expended. The Maritime Canal Company has come to Congress for that purpose. I think this is about the fourth application of that corporation for a slice of the Treasury in aid of their work and in payment of the moneys which they claim have been expended.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. It is absolutely impossible to hear the Senator from Indiana, although we sit near him. I hope that order will be preserved in the Senate, and in the galleries as well, so that the Senator may be heard.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair requests Senators to take their seats. The Senator will withhold his remarks until there is order on the floor of the Senate. [After a pause.] The Senator from Indiana will proceed.

Mr. TURPIE. I have a right, Mr. President, to speak thus freely of the Maritime Canal Company. I am one of the persons responsible for its existence. I voted for its incorporation. I do not think I shall vote for another for any purpose or upon any design. But I did not vote for it, and many of us on this side did not vote for it, until it had been amended by a section offered by the then Senator from Mississippi, whom we all recollect, Mr. George, which expressly provided that this Maritime Canal Company should not receive any pecuniary aid from the United States and that this Government should not be in any way liable for the expenditures or debt of the Maritime Canal Company.

That was an express condition in the charter of incorporation. The present bill pending provides that the United States Government, to use a common phrase, shall step into the shoes of the Maritime Canal Company; that it shall appoint its directors; that it shall assume control of the work, and that it shall assume also the payment of the debts of the company, in express contravention of this condition which I have said is named in the charter.

It is possible, sir, there may be some good reasons for this departure from the original charter. Perhaps gentlemen who are in favor of this measure as at present presented may be able to show those reasons. But for the present I think it is sufficient alone to read the charter with this condition and to read the present bill to determine that when the Government undertakes to build this work it should do it in its own name and without the assumption of the debts of either the Maritime Canal Company or its tender and confederate, the Construction Company of the Nicaraguan Canal. Both companies were made up largely of the same personnel. One of the objects of the present bill is to throw into legal form a liability of the United States for the indebtedness to the amount of $4,000,000 of one of these companies, the construction or the main company, which has made a total failure in the work, to which I have formerly alluded.

There are other objections in the bill which, when it is presented for consideration, will require lengthy and careful examination. I believe, sir, that when the United States Government undertakes this work of building the Nicaraguan Canal we should undertake it just as we undertake the work of making any other river or harbor improvement; just as we undertake the work of building a ship or a fort. Supposing the United States were, in its proper person and under its sovereign right, to undertake the enterprise of building a ship, would it assume the name of Cramp & Sons for that purpose? Would there be any justification in such an assumption? Would there be any necessity for such an assumption?

Sir, it has been claimed here that we must assume the name of the Maritime Canal Company in order to get the rights of the Maritime Canal Company. What rights have the Maritime Canal Company in this enterprise? They depend upon the concessions. They depend upon concessions from Nicaragua and Costa Rica. I wish to call attention to the fact that the concession of Nicaragua expired last April by the terms of its own limitation and that Nicaragua is mostly interested in the domain of the lands traversed by the route, Costa Rica being mostly interested only in the joint navigation of the San Juan River, which is to be obstructed by the building of the Ochoa Dam, a part of this enterprise.

I point also to the fact that we have in the archives of the Senate a communication from the Government of the Greater Republic of Central America, in which Nicaragua is now a State, charging that this Maritime Canal Company have defaulted in their engagements under this contract, that they have committed breaches of it which require and demand a forfeiture, and suggesting that this canal company shall surrender a contract which it is unable to fulfill and that the three Governments shall enter into a tripartite treaty for the purpose of constructing and completing the Nicaraguan Canal.

There is something rational in this scheme; but there is nothing, if I may be allowed the expression, either rational or reasonable in the scheme of the present bill in requiring as a necessity the use of the rights of the Maritime Canal Company under these concessions. These concessions are not favorable concessions as made by one government to another. They reserve a large amount of free tonnage to Costa Rica and Nicaragua. All commerce, all ships of those nations, go through the canal free of toll or at very large reduction of tollage. The consequence would be that the coast trade of South and Central America on both sides of the continent would be conducted under the Costa Rican and Nicaraguan flags, or the flag of the Greater Republic of Central America, and that the revenues of the canal, urged so largely as a reason for its early prosecution and completion, would be depleted to that amount.

Again, these concessions are for a term of years—twenty-five years—and renewable but one term longer; renewable at the pleasure of the two Central American Republics.

Mr. President, I should like to ask any Senator here, Do you favor the construction of the Maritime Canal by the route of Nicaragua? I think every Senator here would answer "yes." I would answer "yes." Do you favor commencing it under the auspices of a private corporation, whose concessions provide that at the end of a term of years, unless renewed, the canal, with all its improvements, locks, basins, and dams, with both its harbors, the lake and ocean harbors, shall become the property of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and at the end of the second term they shall be totally vested in the two Central American Republics I have named? I do favor the construction of a Nicaraguan canal, but I do not favor the construction of the canal at an expense of $120,000,000, to be delivered over after a term of years to the two Republics of Central America or to be delivered over at any time to any other people than those of the United States.

These are some of the features of the pending bill, and they present at first view, it seems to me, considerable objection—objection worthy at least of consideration.

Besides, sir, these concessions provide that the profile adopted by the company which shall construct this canal, under its schedule and measurements, shall be filed with the two Governments and approved by the two Governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua. Such a profile has been filed by the Maritime Canal Company and has been approved and accepted; but the profile made last, the commission profile made by the present commission, so far as we can judge from the general testimony delivered by the official report, makes an entire change in the profile.

It does not change the general route, it does not change the general course, but it does abandon the La Flor Dam, one of the keystones of the whole enterprise under the plan of the Maritime Canal Company, the great arch upon which the eastern division of the work depends—the La Flor Dam, whose permanency, whose stability, whose practicability I have heard the honorable Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] for hours here assert and maintain. The La Flor Dam is, by the report of the last commission and the report of the present commission, to be totally abandoned as unsafe and impracticable. Another route is selected, perfectly feasible and practicable, it is said, but there is a total abandonment of this part of the route selected by the Maritime Canal Company.

Of course a change of profile will be necessary. Before that change is made or permitted, we ought to have the official report.

It is very hard for me to retract my opinion about the La Flor Dam. I have been very much influenced by what I have heard of its great value and importance; I have been very much influenced by what I have heard of the engineering skill and genius which developed and invented this magnificent triumph of art, the La Flor Dam. I have been very greatly and justly influenced by what I have heretofore heard hour after hour of the magnificence of this scheme of engineering.

I do not know whether I could change the profile or not; I do not know whether I should be willing, upon the recommendation of the commission which has already reported it, to make this change in the route. I should deliberate about it; I should doubt very much about it; at least, I should have to be convinced by personal inspection of the new profile, the new plan, the new way in which this canal is to be constructed and completed, before I would abandon that miraculous scheme and project—the La Flor Dam.

I hope, therefore, sir, that we shall not be in any undue haste in taking up this bill for consideration. I shall hope that we will give it the attention and care which the importance of the enterprise demands, and I shall especially hope that when the work is undertaken, it shall be undertaken not only with the concord of Nicaragua and of Costa Rica, but with the cooperation of both those powers; for I do not believe this work could be at all constructed, or even operated after it was constructed, in the midst of an unfriendly people or through an unfriendly population.

This work differs very much from the canal of Suez, very much from the canal of Corinth. The canal of Suez, as I said before, is a sea-water canal, built on the sea level, with locks. The only way of destroying that canal would be to block up the entrance or the exit or to dig another canal large enough to carry the water away to lower ground. That would be a work of great time, great labor, and great expense, not undertaken at all without notice, without knowledge, without the fullest possible information in the manner and scheme of its operation.

But this work of the Nicaraguan Canal is not only a very difficult one, but it is a very delicate one. It is accompanied by large amounts of earth embankments. I frequently made the objection here that these earth embankments were too large, that they ought to be protected, that they ought to be revetted as a river is leveed, that they ought to have some safeguards, especially against water in motion, from the waves of the wake of a vessel of the largest size, such as the Oregon. I have cited comparisons between it and the Croton Aqueduct and the Fairmount Aqueduct. One of these reservoirs upon the Nicaraguan Canal route is twice as large as the Croton Aqueduct; it is twice as large as the Fairmount Aqueduct; it is larger than both of those great reservoirs put together.

Senators who have seen these reservoirs know that they are well protected by stone reaching down to the bottom of the basin, and on the top of the embankment there is solid masonry with the best sort of cement to resist the action of the rain and the weather, and on the outside there is a solid rubble-stone covering of the most durable character for the same purpose; and yet this Croton Aqueduct and this Fairmount Aqueduct are set in the temperate zone. These two reservoirs, one on the east side and one on the west side of Lake Nicaragua, in the plan of the Maritime Canal Company, are in the torrid zone—in the tropical zone—subject to tropical rainfalls of 300 inches a year, subject to the most destructive and disastrous effects.

I do not think the embankments are very safe under any of these commissions. I do not find any single allusion to it in the official reports. I do not wish to be referred to engineers of the Maritime Canal Company on that subject.

It will be said that learned engineers made these estimates. We have had estimates of these learned engineers of this work before, and Congress has not only totally rejected the estimates made by them, but the last commission has rejected and abandoned these estimates, which used to be the subject of such laudatory eulogy on the part of the friends of this measure.

I wish to see the amount of rock excavated, the length of division, the amount of earth used, the embankments, the material for the locks and for the gates, the material for the light-house, the plan of construction, the harbors at Brito and Grey Town, the two ocean terminals, the plans for the construction of the harbors at Lajas and San Carlos, the lake terminals—I want to see all this in black and white. So we need not be troubled any further by the barnacles which have so long hindered and delayed the construction of this great international work.

After we have received the report of that commission, when we have considered it, after we have made up our minds whether we shall direct the change of profile, of plan, and the line of execution, it will be time enough to take up and consider the merits of the pending bill.

Mr. ALLEN and Mr. MORGAN addressed the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] was presenting the report of a committee—

Mr. MORGAN. I merely want to say a word in reply to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. ALLEN. I object to this Nicaraguan Canal discussion, unless there is some bill before the Senate, as irregular.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary was about to read the title of a bill reported by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], who has been standing on the floor while the discussion has been going on.

Mr. MORGAN. I would like to say, as a matter of personal privilege—and I think I have a right to say it—that I am a little surprised that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] should object to my uttering a word in reply to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. But that being so, Mr. President, I will not intrude upon the Senate or upon the ideas of propriety that any Senator on this floor entertains.

ARMY POST QUARTERMASTER-SERGEANTS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order, and the Secretary will read the title of the bill reported by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR].

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 10051) to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants in the United States Army.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont has asked for the present consideration of the bill which has been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants of the Army by the addition of twenty-five post quartermaster-sergeants, to be appointed by the Secretary of War in the manner now provided for by law.

Mr. DANIEL. I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator reporting the bill. I inquire if this is to be a permanent establishment or merely to last during the war?

Mr. PROCTOR. It is a permanent increase, and it is made necessary by the increase of the artillery posts along the borders through the country. There are now eighty post quartermaster-sergeants, and they are all on duty but two—an unusual number. The necessity for this addition is very plain. They are very useful noncommissioned officers, as the Senator very well knows, and absolutely necessary in the present condition of affairs.

Mr. DANIEL. The point of my inquiry was this—of course I do not want to impede anything that is necessary or desirable for the efficiency of our forces in the field—but the Regular Army, which has been provided for, is a Regular Army for war purposes. I do not wish to vote to add to the permanent military establishment until the war is over, and we can then see what we need. If this bill had a provision that this increase was to last only during the war I should have no objection in the world to it.

It was to suggest these thoughts that I arose, whether the supporters of the bill thought it was necessary to make this increase a part of the permanent establishment.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, other corps of the Army have received a slight permanent increase. This is not an increase of the commissioned officers of the Army, but of the enlisted men. Before the war commenced, on account of the addition to our coast defenses, we had established a great many new posts, where it was necessary, even if there is no force stationed there, to have at least a noncommissioned officer to take care of the property, which is just as necessary in time of peace as in time of war. I think the Senator will see that this proposed addition is entirely reasonable and economical.

Mr. DANIEL. I make no objection to the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPENSES INCURRED BY STATES IN EQUIPPING VOLUNTEER ARMY.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report a bill (S. 4853) to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The bill was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the governor of any State or Territory, or to his duly authorized agents, the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses that have been incurred by him in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain, by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of his State or Territory who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided, That the transportation paid for shall be only the transportation of such men from the place of their enrollment for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States to the place of their acceptance into the same by the United States mustering officer, and that the names of the men transported shall appear on the muster rolls of the Volunteer Army of the United States: And provided further, That such claims shall be settled upon proper vouchers to be filed and passed upon by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury: And provided further, That in cases where the money to pay said costs, charges, and expenses has been or may hereafter be borrowed by the governors or their respective States or Territories, and interest is paid or may hereafter be paid on the same, by the governors or their States or Territories, from the time it was or may be so borrowed to the time of its refundment by the United States, or thereafter, such interest shall not be refunded by the United States, nor shall any interest be paid the governors or their States or Territories on the amounts paid out by them, nor any other amount refunded or paid than is in this act expressly mentioned.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri if, under the terms and provisions of this bill, any payments would be called for by the governors of States for expenses incurred or money laid out prior to the call for troops?

Mr. COCKRELL. No.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think there should be some provision in the bill that would limit the time for which reimbursement should be made to the first call for troops.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think the bill clearly does that.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I did not catch in the reading any provision that seemed to include that.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think it only applies to the troops raised under the call of the governors of States.

Mr. FAULKNER. It seems to me, if I understood the reading of the bill correctly, that the limitation is as to those troops which were subsequently accepted by the United States.

Mr. COCKRELL. Absolutely.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Of course it does; but suppose prior to the call there should be included certain expenses for subsistence or equipment?

Mr. COCKRELL. The bill does not include those. There is no question about that. Of course we would not report a bill of that kind.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I accept the Senator's statement.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I now report from the Committee on Military Affairs the bill (S. 4837) to indemnify the governors of States for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain, and move that it be postponed indefinitely, it being covered by the bill which has just been passed.

The motion was agreed to.

MAJ. JOSEPH W. WHAM.

Mr. CULLOM. I wish to call up a House bill which has been lying on the table.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. President, I object to any other bills being considered until the morning business is concluded. I have waited here for an hour and a half to present morning business.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to make an explanation?

Mr. BERRY. I have been trying to get an opportunity to introduce a bill.

Mr. COCKRELL (to Mr. BERRY). Why not introduce it now?

Mr. BERRY. I withdraw the objection.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Arkansas withdraws his objection. I now ask to take from the table the bill (H. R. 4337) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank, and status in the United States Army.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have a report on the bill, if it is to be called up.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the bill may be taken from the table and considered at this time. The Senator from Missouri has a substitute for it, which I desire to have read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report a substitute for the bill referred to by the Senator from Illinois. It will only take a moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4337) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank, and status in the United States Army.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report an amendment to the bill in the nature of a substitute, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert what I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to revoke the order of the President approving the proceedings of the general court-martial which sentenced Maj. J. W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to be dismissed the service, and mitigating the sentence to suspension on half pay from rank, duty, and all privileges until January 18, 1904, his name to be placed at the foot of the lists of majors in the Pay Department, and to disapprove the sentence of dismissal of Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, and to restore him to duty, previous rank, and status in the United States Army, and full pay from and after the passage of this act.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment in the nature of a substitute, which has been read.

Mr. DANIEL. Is there any written report in this case, I beg to inquire?

Mr. COCKRELL. There is a report.

Mr. DANIEL. I ask that the report in this case may be read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I send the report to the desk, which the Senator desires to have read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred S. 2596 to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army, have considered the same and submit the following report:

This bill was referred to the Secretary of War, and the following report received, to wit:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, January 19, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to return Senate bill 2596, to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army.

Major Wham was tried by a general court-martial and sentenced to be dismissed the service, which sentence was mitigated by the President to suspension on half pay from rank, duty, and all privileges until January 18, 1904; his name to be placed at the foot of majors in the Pay Department. I inclose a copy of the report of the Judge-Advocate General, made to me on the 26th of August, 1897, in which he reviews the proceedings in the case.

The charge against Major Wham upon which he was tried grew out of a transaction in relation to a mining company which involved the payment of a note amounting to $1,000. It was entirely a private transaction between individuals, and had no relation to any matters connected with the military service except as it affected his conduct as an officer of the Army.

I have devoted considerable time to the consideration of this case, and am not convinced from the testimony that Major Wham was so culpable as to warrant his dismissal from the service or even his punishment in the degree to which it was mitigated by the President. He was careless and negligent of his own interests in not submitting a defense to the charge against him, the case going to a verdict upon the testimony of the prosecution. From papers filed by Major Wham it appears that he lost considerable money in ventures in which he engaged, especially as to two ranches which he attempted to make productive or profitable, and was without means to meet his indebtedness. His record in the Army during the war was a brilliant one.

It is true that the unexpired portion of his sentence could be remitted by the President and he could be restored to duty; but in my opinion this would not be a full measure of relief to him, and I therefore recommend legislation for his relief.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER,
Secretary of War.

Hon. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY,
Chairman Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate.

In view of this report, your committee report the bill back to the Senate with an amendment authorizing the President to revoke the order approving the proceedings and mitigating the sentence and to disapprove the sentence and restore Major Wham to his former position.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the amendment in the nature of a substitute which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COCKRELL, the title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army."

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate bill on the same subject, being the bill (S. 2596) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank, and status in the United States Army, be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

JOHN H. BOYD.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9466) granting an increase of pension to John H. Boyd, to report it favorably. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McBRIDE] is interested in the bill, and it is the only pension bill about which he has troubled the committee. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. It will take but a moment.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pension John H. Boyd, late a member of Company C, Eighth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLARK W. HARRINGTON.

Mr. GALLINGER. Some time ago the Senate passed the bill (S. 769) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington. The House amended it. The Senate asked for a committee of conference, which has been agreed to, but no meeting of the conferees has been held. I think I am in order in moving to reconsider the vote whereby the conference was asked for and then afterwards in moving to concur in the amendments of the House and that the House be requested to return the bill. I first move to reconsider the vote whereby the conference was requested.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 769) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington, which were, in line 4, to strike out the words "pay to" and insert "place on the pension rolls the name of;" in line 5, after "Infantry," to insert "and pay him;" and in line 6, to strike out the word "fifty" and insert "thirty."

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the amendments of the House of Representatives be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the House be requested to return the bill and papers to the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

CASSIUS M. CLAY, SR.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senate likewise passed the bill (S. 1119) granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr., a citizen of Kentucky and a major-general in the Army of the United States in the war of the rebellion, and similar action was taken. I move to reconsider the vote whereby the conference was requested.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1119) granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr., a citizen of Kentucky and a major-general in the Army of the United States in the war of the rebellion, which were, in line 7, after the word "pension," to insert "at the rate;" in line 7, to strike out the word "fifty" and insert "twenty-five;" and to amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr."

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the amendments of the House of Representatives be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The same motion is made in reference to the return of the bill from the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION BY COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred a resolution submitted by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] on the 30th ultimo, to report it favorably, and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, by subcommittee or otherwise, to make an investigation of internal-revenue and customs matters, and to report from time to time to the Senate the result thereof; and for this purpose they are authorized to sit, by subcommittee or otherwise, during the recess or sessions of the Senate, at such times and places as they may deem advisable, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer and such clerical and other assistance as may be necessary, the expense of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. COCKRELL. Has the resolution the approval of the Committee on Finance?

Mr. ALDRICH. It was reported from that committee.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

ADDITIONAL CLERK FOR COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Mr. JONES of Nevada. I am instructed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred a resolution submitted by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] on the 6th instant, to report it favorably, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to continue until the end of this Congress the employment of the additional clerk authorized by the resolution of the Senate of May 9, 1893, and that said clerk be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, at the rate of $1,440 per annum.

Mr. COCKRELL. Does the resolution come from the Committee on Foreign Relations?

Mr. JONES of Nevada. It came from the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. It was introduced by him and referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. COCKRELL. Was it reported by the chairman of the committee, or was it simply introduced by him?

Mr. JONES of Nevada. The resolution was introduced by the chairman of the committee, who stated that it was absolutely necessary for the business of the committee to have this clerk; and it was referred to the Committee on Contingent Expenses, from which committee I have reported it favorably.

Mr. COCKRELL. I see that the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations is present. I was inquiring whether the resolution under consideration came from the Committee on Foreign Relations?

Mr. DAVIS. It did, I will inform the Senator, and is deemed very necessary.

The resolution was agreed to.

CHAPLAINS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

Mr. PASCO. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10685) fixing the pay and allowances of chaplains for volunteer regiments, to report it favorably, and I am instructed by the committee to ask for its immediate consideration. It is a short bill, and early action is desirable.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that all chaplains in the volunteer service shall have the pay and allowances of a captain mounted.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to submit and have printed in the RECORD, as it is very short, a protest of the teachers and educators of Nebraska against the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. The protest reached me last night too late to be presented then. I should like to have it printed in full. It covers only about five lines.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The protest will be printed in the RECORD, if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

The protest is as follows:

We, members of the Nebraska Summer School and Lancaster County Teachers' Institute, hereby express our loyalty to the principles for which the present war with Spain was declared, and protest against its degeneration into a war for annexation, conquest, or colonization, and especially do we at this time ask members of the Senate to oppose the annexation of Hawaii. We believe such expansion contrary to the tried principles of state and the best interests of our Republic.

Respectfully submitted.

COMMISSIONERS OF NATIONAL MILITARY PARKS.

Mr. HAWLEY. I report from the Committee on Military Affairs a joint resolution, which is of considerable interest to some people, and I ask that it may be immediately acted upon. It is unobjectionable entirely.

The joint resolution (S. R. 183) permitting officers of the Regular or Volunteer Army to also hold office as commissioners and historians of national military parks was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, etc., That an officer of the Army, Regular or Volunteer, who is qualified under existing law, may also hold office as a commissioner or historian of any one of the national military parks, but shall be entitled to the salary of one office only.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. CARTER. I move to insert after the word "commissioner" the word "superintendent," so that it will include superintendents.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISPOSITION OF FORMER LIBRARY ROOMS.

Mr. ALDRICH. For the Committee on Rules, and also in behalf of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 71) relating to the use of the rooms lately occupied by the Congressional Library in the Capitol.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It provides that that portion of the rooms and space recently occupied by the Library of Congress in the Capitol building north of a line drawn east and west through the center of the Rotunda shall be used for such purpose as may hereafter be designated by the Senate of the United States; and that portion of such rooms and space south of said line shall be used for such purpose as may hereafter be designated by the House of Representatives.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRINTING OF WAR REVENUE ACT.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives, reported it favorably; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 123, "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," with marginal notes and index prepared by the Clerk, and bound in paper, 100,000 copies, 67,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 33,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BERRY introduced a bill (S. 4854) granting a pension to Isom Gibson; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HAWLEY introduced a bill (S. 4855) granting an increase of pension to John E. Higgins; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. QUAY introduced a bill (S. 4856) granting a pension to William H. Dunlap; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 4957) for the establishment of a homing pigeon service; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GALLINGER. In connection with the bill, I desire to present a lecture delivered at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., by Prof. H. Marion, of the United States Naval Academy, and also a report by the same gentleman of investigations made in Belgium in reference to the homing-pigeon matter, which are of great public interest. I move that the papers—they are not very lengthy—be printed as a document.

The motion was agreed to.

REFERENCE OF CLAIMS TO THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 3546) for the reference of certain claims against the Government of the United States to the Court of Claims; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AT PARIS.

Mr. THURSTON submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to print 8,000 copies of Senate Document 293, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, known as the report of Thomas W. Cridler, Third Assistant Secretary of State, who was appointed a special commissioner in relation to the acceptance by the Government of the United States of the invitation of France to participate in the International Exposition to be held at Paris from April 15 to November 5, 1900, of which 1,000 copies are to be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and the remaining 3,000 copies to be placed at the disposal of the acting commissioner for distribution to intending exhibitors and for the use of the permanent commission when it organizes.

Mr. LODGE subsequently, from the Committee on Printing, reported the foregoing resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

PRECEDENTS OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That there be printed 3,000 additional copies of Senate Miscellaneous Document 273, second session Fifty-third Congress, the same being a Digest of Decisions and Precedents of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, relating to their powers and privileges respecting their members and officers and to investigations, contempt, libels, contumacious witnesses, expulsions, etc., as revised and new matter added, together with decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and of other courts, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

THE CRIMINAL INSANE.

Mr. PERKINS submitted the following resolution; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved. That there be printed, for distribution by the Department of State, 4,000 copies of Senate Document No. 273, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, being the report of S. J. Barrows, commissioner for the United States on the International Prison Commission, on The Criminal Insane in the United States and in Foreign Countries.

NUT CULTURE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. PROCTOR submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring). That there be printed for the use of the Department of Agriculture 12,000 copies of the bulletin on Nut Culture in the United States.

Mr. LODGE subsequently, from the Committee on Printing, reported the foregoing concurrent resolution; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

HARRY K. SPRING AND CHARLES W. NELSON.

Mr. WHITE. I submit a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved. That the President is requested, if in his opinion the facts warrant such action, to take steps to procure the speedy and fair trial or prompt release of Harry K. Spring and Charles W. Nelson, citizens of the United States and residents of California, who are under arrest in the Republic of Colombia.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to make a very brief statement in reference to the resolution. These two young men, American citizens and formerly residents of California, were arrested in the Republic of Colombia and confined there in the latter part of the year 1899. Attention was drawn to the subject some time ago, and through the office of the Secretary of State communication was had with our minister at the capital of that Republic. The last communication of which any reference has been made at the State Department, on the 18th of December last, was a communication from Mr. Sherman, as Secretary of State, to Mr. Hart, as minister, dated November 8, 1897, wherein the Secretary of State wires as to the status of these parties and whether they were incarcerated. From that date to this not one word has been received from our minister regarding the matter.

I introduced a resolution on the 18th of December, 1897, calling for the documents which were printed, and on the 30th of April of the present year I was advised by the Assistant Secretary of State that no word had been had from Mr. Hart up to that time. Yesterday I again communicated with the Secretary of State and received a similar answer.

Why our minister should ignore a request made to him from the Department of State I do not know, and why these American citizens should be incarcerated so long in that country, without any reference to the character of their case further than what is contained in the documents here, is a matter beyond my knowledge. Nothing can be done beyond a request from the President of the United States himself, urging speedy action. I think that our minister deserves at least a reprimand for his remarkable delay in responding to the communications which have been had.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. There are certain papers and statements relative to the case, which I move to have printed as a document, to accompany the other documents which have already been printed.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 3707) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant to the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory."

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5069) to pension Jacob N. Atherton; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. RAY of New York, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. CASTLE managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution authorizing the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Friday, July 8, at 2 o'clock p. m.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Mr. THURSTON. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to Senate joint resolution 141.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. R. 141) regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition in the year 1901 upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century, which were, on page 2, to strike out all of section 2; to change section 3 to section 2; to change section 4 to section 3; and on page 3, line 9, after the word "time," to insert:

And provided further. That all necessary expenses incurred, including salaries of customs officials in charge of imported articles, shall be paid to the Treasury of the United States by the Pan-American Exposition Company, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. THURSTON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4831) fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PETTUS. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business? If not, morning business is closed. The unanimous-consent agreement is now in force. The Senator from New Jersey asks for the present consideration of a bill fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army, to which objection is made.

Mr. SEWELL. How long does the agreement last?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Two hours.

Mr. SEWELL. From what period?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. From now—a quarter before 2 until a quarter before 4 o'clock.

Mr. SEWELL. I do not see why it should be enforced at this moment. This bill was under consideration and amended—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to its present consideration.

Mr. SEWELL. Can I not move to take it up?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator can so move.
Mr. SEWELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BERRY. There was unanimous consent given to take up the Calendar regularly.

Mr. FAULKNER. Although I am not opposed to the bill, I suggest to the Senator from New Jersey that during the two hours in which the unanimous-consent agreement operates he can not move to take up any bill to which there is objection. After the two hours have passed he can make the motion.

Mr. SEWELL. I had no idea when the unanimous-consent agreement commenced. I supposed it had about expired now.

Mr. FAULKNER. No; it was to commence directly after morning business had closed.

Mr. SEWELL. I give notice that directly after the expiration of the two hours I shall call up the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. At a quarter before 4 o'clock.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I thought we were to take up bills in their order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I understood that the Calendar of unobjectioned cases was to be considered.

Mr. FAULKNER. I did not so understand.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the agreement; and the Calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. FAULKNER. I did not so understand it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If any further order is desired, the Chair supposes that such a course can be taken. Unless there is, the Calendar under Rule VIII is in order at the point reached when it was last under consideration.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL, UNITED STATES ARMY.

The joint resolution (S. R. 123) to revive the grade of lieutenant-general in the United States Army was announced as the first business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the joint resolution be passed over, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed over.

NAVAL COURTS-MARTIAL.

The bill (S. 3009) to enable naval courts-martial and courts of inquiry to secure the attendance and testimony of civilian witnesses was read and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COCKRELL. Ought not that to be the naval court instead of judge-advocate? Ought it not to read "that a naval court-martial or court of inquiry shall have power, etc.?"

Mr. HALE. How does the clause read?

Mr. COCKRELL. It reads:

That every judge-advocate of a naval court martial.

I do not think it was the intention to vest judicial functions in the judge-advocate.

Mr. HALE. I think the Senator's suggestion is a good one.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move then to strike out the words "every judge-advocate of."

The SECRETARY. In line 3, page 1, strike out the words "every judge-advocate of," so as to make the first section read:

That a naval court-martial or court of inquiry shall have power to issue like process to compel witnesses to appear and testify which courts of criminal jurisdiction within the State, Territory, or District where such naval court shall be ordered to sit may lawfully issue.

Mr. HALE. That is very much better. It may be that another section will have to be modified to conform to that amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. No; all the rest corresponds with it.

Mr. HALE. Is there any reference afterwards to the power of the judge-advocate? If there is, the same phraseology will have to be used.

Mr. COCKRELL. The balance is all right.

Mr. HALE. Then it is all right as it is.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANNEXATION OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The joint resolution (S. R. 127) to provide for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States was announced as the next business on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suppose we do not want to act on that measure. I call the attention of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] to it. Should it not be indefinitely postponed?

Mr. MORGAN. Let the joint resolution remain on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed over.

Mr. MORGAN. Without losing its place.

WILLIAM E. WOODBRIDGE.

The bill (S. 110) referring to the Court of Claims the claim of William E. Woodbridge for compensation for the use by the United States of his invention relating to projectiles, for which letters patent were ordered to issue to him March 25, 1853, was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator who reported the bill [Mr. PLATT of Connecticut] is not present. Let it be passed over, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut is near his place in the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I did not observe him.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The bill simply provides for referring the case to the Court of Claims. A similar bill has been passed by the Senate at former sessions two or three times.

Mr. COCKRELL. All right; I thought it was another case.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAND AT GOSPORT NAVY-YARD.

The bill (S. 3185) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Navy to contract for the purchase of a lot of land opposite the Gosport Navy-Yard, was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. HALE. That case, I think, has been provided for in one of the appropriation bills, so let the bill go over, holding its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

HENRY LANE.

The bill (S. 658) for the relief of Henry Lane, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to revoke and set aside the special orders of the War Department, dated March 30, 1863, dismissing from the service, for absence without leave, Henry Lane, late first lieutenant Company F, Thirtieth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, to date March 1, 1863, because he was then, and for weeks before had been, on duty in the field, and to grant him an honorable discharge as of date April 7, 1863.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF SAMUEL B. SPARKMAN.

The bill (S. 2950) for the relief of the heirs of Samuel B. Sparkman, of Nashville, Tenn., and to refer their claim to the Court of Claims was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims for adjudication and settlement the claim of the heirs of Samuel B. Sparkman, of Nashville, Tenn., for the sum of $1,068.80, as compensation for blacksmith and wheelwright tools, implements, and supplies taken possession of and used by the Federal authorities in 1862 and 1863.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN E. HAMILTON.

The bill (S. 1893) for the relief of the widow and children of John Hamilton, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 7, after the word "of," to strike out:

Sixteen thousand dollars and interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the 13th day of November, 1875, until paid, being the amount of the award to said John Hamilton, made by R. F. Hunter and M. Sallude, quartermaster's agents, on said 13th day of November, 1875, as compensation for the destruction and use of certain property.

And insert:

Thirteen thousand and ninety-five dollars and ten cents, in full satisfaction and settlement of the claim of the said administratrix and the heirs of the late John Hamilton for the ice house and the materials of which it was composed, situated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 8, after the name "Hamilton," to insert "taken and used;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Susan E. Hamilton, administratrix of John Hamilton, late of Baltimore City, Md., deceased, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $13,095.10, in full satisfaction and settlement of the claim of the said administratrix and the heirs of the late John Hamilton for the ice house and the materials of which it was composed, situated in Baltimore City, Md., belonging to said John Hamilton, taken and used by United States troops in the fall of the year 1863 and the winter of 1864; and the money to pay the same is hereby appropriated, out of moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BATCHELLER PNEUMATIC TUBE COMPANY.

The bill (S. 3745) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to grant permits to the Batcheller Pneumatic Tube Company of the District of Columbia was announced as next in order on the Calendar.

Mr. PROCTOR. Let that bill be passed over, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

SIOUX CITY AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

The bill (S. 120) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to effect an adjustment between the United States and the Sioux City and Pacific Railway Company in relation to certain bonds issued by the United States in aid of the construction of said railway was announced as next in order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let that go over.

Mr. CANNON. Let the bill go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

PROOF OF LOYALTY IN PENSION CLAIMS.

The bill (S. 1041) amending section 4716 of the Revised Statutes was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I ask the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD] who reported the bill if he does not think it might lie over until December? It is a pretty important bill, and there is little time for its consideration to-day.

Mr. PRITCHARD. That course will be entirely satisfactory to me, inasmuch as I propose to offer a substitute for the bill when it is taken up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

SCHOOL LANDS.

The bill (S. 4154) to amend an act approved August 30, 1890, entitled "An act to apply a portion of the proceeds of the public lands to the more complete endowment and support of the colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts, established under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 2, 1862," was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let the bill go over, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

CRIMINAL LAWS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (H. R. 8064) to amend the criminal laws of the District of Columbia was the next in order, and was read by the Secretary.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. There is so much confusion in the Chamber that it is utterly impossible to understand what bills are being passed. The bill which is now under consideration was read, and read for information. I gave all the attention to it that I could, but it was impossible to hear. It is something that relates to the criminal laws of the District of Columbia. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, is here. I should like to know whether the bill is all right.

Mr. HALE. Let the bill go over, Mr. President, retaining its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut subsequently said: I have examined the bill relating to the criminal laws of the District of Columbia which the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] objected to, and I think it is all right. It is a House bill, and I think it had better be considered. The Senator from West Virginia can explain it.

Mr. HALE. Very well.

Mr. FAULKNER. The bill has been read and is on its final passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is the objection withdrawn?

Mr. HALE. I withdraw my objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8064) to amend the criminal laws of the District of Columbia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ILLINOIS AND MISSISSIPPI CANAL.

The bill (S. 2881) to authorize the Secretary of War to acquire the right of way for the Illinois and Mississippi Canal through the bridge owned by the city of Moline, in the county of Rock Island and State of Illinois, across Rock River, in the county of Rock Island, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senator from Iowa if that has not already been provided for?

Mr. ALLISON. I think it was provided for in the sundry civil appropriation bill. I ask that the bill may be laid aside temporarily without losing its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MARIE P. EVANS.

The bill (S. 3744) for the relief of Marie P. Evans was announced as next in order.

Mr. GALLINGER. That seems to be an adverse report.

Mr. HALE. Let the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is moved that the bill be indefinitely postponed on the adverse report of the committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO subsequently said: While I was temporarily absent from the Chamber the bill (S. 3744) for the relief of Marie P. Evans was indefinitely postponed. I move that the vote by which the bill was indefinitely postponed be reconsidered and that the bill be placed on the Calendar under Rule IX.

The motion was agreed to.

AUGUSTUS G. KELLOGG.

The bill (S. 763) for the relief of Augustus G. Kellogg was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It authorizes the President to place Commander Augustus G. Kellogg upon the list of officers of the Navy who have been retired on account of incapacity resulting from long and faithful service, from wounds or injuries received in the line of duty, or from sickness and exposure therein, as provided for in section 1588 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. HALE. Let the report be read in that case.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report of the committee will be read.

The Secretary read the report submitted by Mr. McENERY March 30, 1898, as follows:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 763) for the relief of Augustus G. Kellogg, having had the same under consideration, beg leave to submit the following report:

The committee recommend the passage of the bill for the reasons set forth in the report of the committee at the last session of Congress, as follows:

"The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred Senate bill 1906, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

"This bill provides that the President is authorized and empowered to place Commander Augustus G. Kellogg upon the list of officers of the Navy who have been retired on account of incapacity resulting from long and faithful service, from wounds or injuries received in the line of duty, or from sickness and exposure therein, as provided for in section 1588 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

"Commander Augustus G. Kellogg was appointed acting midshipman September 21, 1890, at the age of 17. He graduated at the Naval Academy May 28, 1893, aged 20, finishing the four years' course in less than three years, and went at once into active service. His naval history is of the best; never in trouble, always active, alert, and efficient. In June, 1890, he was in command of the U. S. S. Ossipee at Port au Prince, and an emergency arising requiring prompt and fearless action, he showed his valor, patriotism, and good judgment in a way that called forth a vote of thanks from the legislature of his native State. His last duty was as equipment officer at League Island Navy-Yard, Philadelphia. There he performed his duties, in the language of his commanding officer, Capt. W. A. Kirkland, United States Navy, 'intelligently, energetically, and to my entire satisfaction.' He was also 'very zealous in the performance of all duties that I gave him,' as testified by same officer.

"Suddenly, on September 7, 1891, he showed marked symptoms of insanity. Captain Kirkland sent him on board the receiving ship and had a medical survey of him made. This survey was made same day, and the two physicians making it certified that Commander Kellogg was unfit for service by reason of mania, incipient cerebral softening. Origin due to long and hard service in the United States Navy (thirty years). The two surgeons who held this survey, Drs. Heyl and Brownell, say: 'There is good evidence that it (the origin of disability) was in the line of duty.' Captain Kirkland says that Commander Kellogg was not indulging at that time in intoxicants and had not been while he was under his command. Dr. O'Hara, physician at St. Agnes Hospital, where Commander Kellogg went for treatment in June, 1891, says, in reply to a direct question, that Commander Kellogg showed no symptoms of alcoholism or that he had been indulging in drink. Shortly afterwards Commander Kellogg was, by order of the Secretary of the Navy, placed in the Government Hospital for the Insane, and while there was ordered before the naval retiring board at Washington, D. C., which on November 3, 1891, decided that he was 'incapacitated for active service by reason of structural changes in the nervous system of a permanent character, caused by the toxic effect of alcohol, aggravating hereditary tendency to brain disease, and the incapacity of the said Commander Kellogg is not the result of an incident of the service.'

"On December 14, 1891, the proceedings and findings of the board were approved by the President, and Commander Kellogg was directed to be retired from active service and placed on the retired list, on furlough pay, in conformity with section 1454 of the Revised Statutes. This finding was based on the testimony of two members of the retiring board, to wit, Drs. Dean and Bradley, who testified that they had examined Commander Kellogg twice—once at the Government Hospital for the Insane, on September 24, 1891, and on October 12, 1891, at the Navy Department. They testified that—

"We could find no evidence of insanity existing at this time, either hereditary or acquired. It appears to us that the unsettled state of Commander Kellogg's mind, as described in his medical history, more resembles the condition sometimes produced by the toxic effects of alcohol, and that it is most probably due to inebriety."

"The effect of this decision was to place Commander Kellogg on the retired list with the rate of pay of $1,150 per annum.

"Commander Kellogg was then under the care of Dr. W. W. Godding, superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, and an expert on insanity of national reputation. Dr. Godding was asked on March 9, 1894, and replied March 10, 1894, as follows:

"First. How long has Commander Kellogg been under your charge?—A. Since September 16, 1891.

"Second. Is his mental condition such as to prevent him from discharging the duties of a naval officer on the active list?—A. In my opinion it is.

"Third. How does his mental condition now differ from his mental condition when placed under your charge?—A. His condition is less emotional, he has gained in self-control, exercises a sounder judgment in apparently recognizing the need of avoiding excitement in his own case; there is that degree of improvement that might be expected to result from his present quiet life.

"Fourth. What was the mental condition of Commander Kellogg on or about September 24 and October 12, 1891?—A. His mind was weak; he was depressed, suspicious, delusional. His judgment was impaired; he was at times emotional, in tears, with but little self-control, and infirm in purpose. I regarded it as a delusional insanity, melancholic in type, symptomatic of brain deterioration.

"Fifth. Was Commander Kellogg's condition in September and October, 1891, such as would lead a competent and careful pathologist to say that there was "no evidence of insanity existing at this time, either hereditary or acquired"?—A. In my opinion, an expert alienist would have been able to discriminate between nervous prostration and insanity, and would have found evidence of the latter.

"Sixth. After observation of Commander Kellogg's case, extending from September, 1891, to this date, are you able to say now that Commander Kellogg's condition is the result of the toxic effects of alcohol and not of hereditary tendencies, superinduced by long exposure in malarial climates and frequent attacks of malarial fever?—A. No.

"Seventh. Has Commander Kellogg suffered from malarial attacks since September, 1891?—A. Yes; at irregular intervals throughout the whole period of his residence here down to the present season. I should add that in the congestive stage of these attacks the evidence of the brain impairment is distinct."

"It thus appears that the medical officers of the retiring board failed to find Commander Kellogg's true condition. The opinion of Dr. Godding is fortified by daily observation since September 16, 1891, and it follows that if Commander Kellogg's true condition had been known he should have been placed on the retired list on three-fourths sea pay and not on furlough pay.

"That the disabilities which incapacitated Commander Kellogg from active service had their origin from exposure incident to the service and line of duty is shown by the testimony of Surgeons Hoyl, Jones, Assistant Surgeon Brownell, and Surgeon Rixey, all naval surgeons, supported by that of Captain Kirkland, United States Navy, and by Drs. Godding, Conrad, O'Hara, and Latimer in civil life. Dr. Stonestreet also shows that Commander Kellogg had suffered dangerous attacks of malarial fever, contracted while on duty in the West Indies, and Dr. Latimer that he has not yet fully recovered from that malaria.

"Commander Kellogg's long and faithful service to the Government, covering a period of twenty-six years and four months, five years of which were spent in the East Indies and three years in the West Indies, entitles him to what he now seeks through this bill.

"The House Committee on Naval Affairs of the Fifty-second Congress, of which the present honorable Secretary of the Navy was chairman, reported this bill favorably, but Congress adjourned before the bill was reached. (See H. R. Report No. 2599, Fifty-second Congress, second session.) The Committee on Naval Affairs of the present Congress has also reported the bill favorably, and it is now on the House Calendar. (See H. R. Report No. 688, Fifty-third Congress, second session.)"

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to add at the end of the bill:

Provided, That no pay, compensation, or allowance shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATE OF LEVIN R. MARSHALL.

The bill (S. 1000) for relief of Stephen Duncan Marshall and George M. Miller, executors of the will of Levin R. Marshall, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 7, before the word "dollars," to strike out "ten thousand two hundred and eighty-seven" and insert "five thousand six hundred and nineteen;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Treasurer of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,619 to Stephen Duncan Marshall and George M. Miller, executors of the will of Levin R. Marshall, deceased, late of Adams County, Miss., for property taken by the United States Army and used by it: Provided, That the same be accepted by them in full payment and liquidation of the claim of said executors and of said estate against the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. In line 3, after the words "That the," I move to strike out the words "Treasurer of the United States" and insert "Secretary of the Treasury."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNCOMPAHGRE INDIAN RESERVATION.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 199) to postpone the opening of the Uncompahgre Indian Reservation, in the State of Utah, was announced as next in order.

Mr. CANNON. I move that that bill be indefinitely postponed, legislation on the subject having already been had by this Congress.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah to indefinitely postpone the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

NAVAL STATION IN WEST INDIES.

The bill (S. 4303) for the purchase of a naval station in the West Indies was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let that bill be passed over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

EFFICIENCY OF THE MILITIA.

The bill (S. 892) to promote the efficiency of the militia was announced as next in order.

Mr. HAWLEY. Let that bill be passed over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MEDICAL CORPS OF THE ARMY.

The bill (S. 4304) to increase the Medical Corps of the Army was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suggest to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs that I think we have already passed a bill on that subject.

Mr. HAWLEY. At this session?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes.

Mr. HAWLEY. Then this bill ought to be taken off the Calendar. It is, however, the only one on the Calendar on that subject, and I think the only one which has been reported, so far as I know.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the bill be passed over. I am almost absolutely positive that we have passed a bill on the same subject.

Mr. HAWLEY. Let it be passed over, and if I find we have not passed such a bill, I can again call it up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. COCKRELL subsequently said: I move that the bill (S. 4304) to increase the Medical Corps of the Army be indefinitely postponed. I find we have already passed a bill upon that subject.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri to indefinitely postpone the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

READJUSTMENT OF ACCOUNTS OF ARMY OFFICERS.

The bill (S. 4306) to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of army officers who were graduates of West Point Military Academy was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury, by his accounting officers, on application being made by any person, or his legal representative, an officer or ex officer of the United States Army and a graduate of West Point, or who, being an enlisted man at the time of such commission, has been commissioned as an officer in the Regular Army, to readjust his accounts previously settled and paid under an erroneous construction of law as subsequently declared by the Supreme Court of the United States, and to pay any balance which may be found due in accordance with the law applicable thereto as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of Captains Morton and Watson against the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY J. CRANSTON.

The bill (S. 3316) for the relief of Mary J. Cranston, of Washington, D. C., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes that all real estate lying in the District of Columbia heretofore purchased and conveyed to Mary J. Cranston, wife of William M. Cranston, prior to the passage of this act, be relieved and exempted from the operation of an act entitled "An act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens," approved March 3, 1887; and remits all forfeitures incurred by force of that act in respect to such real estate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.

The bill (S. 4316) to incorporate the American Social Science Association was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

QUIETING OF TITLE.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to report favorably from the Committee on the District of Columbia the bill (S. 4850) to quiet title to lot 11, block 12, South Brookland, D. C., and I call the attention of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] to the bill.

Mr. FORAKER. I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to consider that bill now. It is simply a bill to quiet title, the cloud of title arising by reason of the fact that a predecessor in title was an alien at one time and afterwards became naturalized, and it is thought there was a cloud on the title under the act of March 3, 1887. There are quite a number of other bills exactly like this which have been passed.

Mr. FAULKNER. The only question with me is whether we can break the unanimous-consent agreement. I have a very important resolution which I am anxious to have passed, but I felt that I could not break the unanimous-consent agreement by asking for its consideration during the pendency of the present order. We have fixed twenty minutes to 4 o'clock as the time for the expiration of the pending order.

Mr. FORAKER. I was not aware that I was breaking the order. I ask that the bill may be passed over.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it lie on the table, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will lie on the table.

WIDOW OF SAMUEL F. MILLER.

The bill (S. 3028) to pay to the widow of the late Samuel F. Miller, a justice of the Supreme Court, a sum equal to the balance of his salary for the year in which he died was announced as next in order.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Has not the object of that bill been provided for in an appropriation bill?

Mr. COCKRELL. I think so; but I will send for the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] and ascertain. Let it be passed over for the present.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I have the impression that a provision similar to that contained in the bill has been passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have sent for the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations in charge of it. I am not certain as to whether or not it has been passed. It can be called up when the chairman comes in.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut subsequently said: The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. ALLISON] has come into the Chamber, and he informs me that the payment provided for in this bill was ordered to the widow of Justice Miller. Therefore, I think the bill might be indefinitely postponed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Connecticut moves to indefinitely postpone the bill (S. 3028) to pay to the widow of the late Samuel F. Miller, a justice of the Supreme Court, a sum equal to the balance of his salary for the year in which he died. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF PUBLIC PRINTING LAW.

The bill (S. 4315) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 13, 1895, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend that portion of the act of January 12, 1895, chapter 23, section 73 (29 Statutes at Large, page 615), which relates to the distribution of United States statutes to judicial officers so as to read:

* * * To the Department of Justice, including those for the use of the Chief Justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court, and the judges and officers of the United States and Territorial courts, to United States circuit courts of appeals libraries, and to State supreme court libraries, 700 copies.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE.

The bill (S. 4112) to authorize the construction of a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge across the Missouri River at or within 1 mile of the section line dividing sections 29 and 30, township 10 south, range 25 east, in Wyandotte County, Kans., by the Kansas City, Northeastern and Gulf Railway; and to authorize said railway company to construct a railroad bridge, a wagon bridge, or foot-passenger bridge, or either of them, as it may choose, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HARRIS. A bill similar to that was passed by the House of Representatives, came over here, and was passed by the Senate some time ago. I therefore move that this bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

M. D. CROW.

The bill (S. 3171) for the relief of M. D. Crow was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Postmaster-General to credit the account of M. D. Crow, late postmaster at Pueblo, in the State of Colorado, with $1,032.62, being the amount necessarily expended by that postmaster in conducting the business of the post-office at Pueblo, Colo., from the 1st of April, 1885, to June 30, 1889, in excess of the amount allowed him by the Post-Office Department, and being $884.55 for clerk hire, $86.13 for light and fuel, $36.68 for advertising, $2.76 for stationery, and $22.50 for miscellaneous items.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CHAMBERS.

The bill (S. 1100) for the relief of Thomas Chambers was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to Thomas Chambers, of Mackinac, Mich., $3,654.50, in full compensation for the additional expenses incurred by him in carrying the Canada mails, as contractor on route No. 24413, from Sault de Ste. Marie, Mich., to Mackinac, Mich., from July 1, 1875, to June 30, 1879, inclusive, he having contracted to carry United States mails only.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATE OF RAMSAY CROOKS.

The bill (S. 4121) for the relief of the estate of Ramsay Crooks was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate $9,719.62, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to examine the claims against the Pillager and Lake Winnebagoish band of Indians in the sum of $6,410.30 and the Chippewa Indians of the Minnesota band in the sum of $9,309.92, and to pay said amount, or so much thereof as he shall find to be due, to the administrator of the estate of said Ramsay Crooks from the respective bands, and charge the same to any annuities or other moneys due, or to become due, from the United States to those Indians, in such proportions as shall be found to be due therefrom.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed. The preamble was agreed to.

STREET RAILWAY TAXES IN THE DISTRICT.

The bill (H. R. 8421) to regulate taxes upon street railroads within the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

COURT AT TISHOMINGO, IND. T.

The bill (S. 3841) to establish a United States court at Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, after section 5, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 6. That the judge of said court is hereby authorized to appoint two additional United States commissioners, with like powers and jurisdiction as other United States commissioners of said Territory, one to be stationed at Stonewall, Chickasaw Nation, and one at Colbert, in said nation, Indian Territory; and to appoint such additional deputy marshals for said commissioners' courts as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ASSIGNEES OF ADDISON C. FLETCHER.

The bill (S. 4255) for the relief of Hyland C. Kirk and others, assignees of Addison C. Fletcher, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of Hyland C. Kirk, of Phelps, N. Y., and others, assignees of letters patent No. 101604, dated April 5, 1870 (antedated October 5, 1869), for an improvement in adhesive postal and revenue stamps, issued to Addison C. Fletcher and assigned to said Hyland C. Kirk and others, for compensation for the use of said letters patent and the invention therein described by the United States Government in the collection of revenue on distilled spirits and malt liquors during the years 1869, 1869, 1870, 1871, and 1872.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM C. DODGE.

The bill (S. 3061) for the relief of William C. Dodge was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay to William C. Dodge, of Washington, D. C., $10,000 for a cartridge-loading machine furnished by him to the United States upon an order from the Ordnance Department, and for the use of his invention of the same, and of the patent therefor, dated July 17, 1866, and for his improvement in cartridges, patented July 4, 1865, and for the infringement of his patents by the United States, which sum of $10,000 shall be in full satisfaction of all claims for such use and infringements and for the relinquishment of all right to claim any further compensation for the use of the same by the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF MERRICK, MERRICK & COPE.

The bill (S. 2149) for the relief of the legal representatives of Merrick, Merrick & Cope was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of the legal representatives of Merrick, Merrick & Cope for further compensation for the construction of the ironclad monitor Yazoo, within six months after the passage of this act, under and in compliance with the rules of the court; and the court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine and render judgment upon the same.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GLOBE WORKS, OF BOSTON, MASS.

The bill (S. 2456) for the relief of the Globe Works, of Boston, Mass., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that the claim of the Globe Works, of Boston, Mass., for further compensation for the construction of the ironclad monitor Suncook, may be submitted by the claimant, within six months after the passage of the proposed act, to the Court of Claims, under and in compliance with the rules and regulations of that court, which shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine and render judgment upon the same.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF SAMUEL KRAMER.

The bill (S. 3187) for the relief of the widow and heirs of Samuel Kramer was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The bill will be passed over.

EXPORTATION OF WAR MATERIAL.

The bill (S. 4419) to prohibit the export of coal and other material used in war was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think some action has already been taken on that subject.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Has not a bill for that purpose been passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that a similar measure has passed.

Mr. HAWLEY. One like it has already passed. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

ROBERT SMALLS.

The bill (S. 1813) for the relief of Robert Smalls was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BARBED-WIRE FENCES IN THE DISTRICT.

The bill (S. 9204) to regulate the construction of barbed-wire fences in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK.

The bill (S. 4191) to readjust the boundary of the National Zoological Park and preserve its seclusion between Park road on the east and Cincinnati street and Connecticut avenue on the west was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That a commission, to consist of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, the President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and the Engineer Commissioner of said board, is hereby authorized and empowered to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, in the same manner as was adopted for the acquirement of property already embraced in the National Zoological Park under the provision of the act of March 2, 1889, the tract of land lying south of the National Zoological Park owned by the Union Benevolent Association of the District of Columbia (colored) and now occupied as a cemetery, and such parcels of ground adjoining the said park and between its present boundaries and Connecticut avenue extended on the west and the nearest road shown on the recorded highway extension plans of the first section on the east and south (inclusive of such road in case the same is not yet dedicated to public use) as they shall deem necessary for preserving its safety and perpetuating its seclusion; these properties, along with Joliet street, already purchased, to be made a part of the said park, for which purpose the sum of $25,000 is hereby appropriated, to be paid half out of the District funds and half out of the United States funds. The Union Benevolent Association of the District of Columbia (colored) is hereby authorized to sell and convey any portion or all of the tract of land owned by them on the southern side of the Zoological Park now occupied as a cemetery.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESERVATION OF PEACE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (H. R. 9063) to amend "An act for the preservation of the public peace and protection of property in the District of Columbia," approved July 29, 1892, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTEREST-BEARING GOVERNMENT DEBT.

Senate resolution No. 342 (by Mr. ALLEN), that in the opinion of the Senate no circumstances can arise in the relations of the United States of America and Spain that will warrant an increase of the interest-bearing indebtedness of this Government, etc., was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. FAULKNER. Let the resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

LEVEE AT SHAWNEETOWN, ILL.

The bill (S. 4394) appropriating $25,000 for the repairs on the levee on the Ohio River at Shawneetown, Ill., was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I think that improvement has been provided for in another measure which has been passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri ask that the bill be passed over?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be passed over.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF WASHINGTON.

The bill (H. R. 8973) to amend section 3 of an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of Washington" was announced as the next business in order on the Calendar.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the bill may be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MATHILDA AKERBLOM MOLIN.

The bill (H. R. 9414) for the relief of Mathilda Akerblom Molin was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that all real estate in the District of Columbia purchased by and conveyed to Mathilda Akerblom Molin, of the District, prior to the passage of the proposed act shall be relieved and exempted from the operation of the act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens and remits all forfeitures incurred by force of that act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. HARRIET A. FERGUSON.

The bill (S. 3909) for the relief of Mrs. Harriet A. Ferguson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that all real estate in the District of Columbia heretofore purchased by and conveyed to Harriet A. Maxwell, now Harriet A. Ferguson, of Winchester, Va., prior to the passage of the proposed act, shall be relieved and exempted from the operation of the act to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens, and remits all forfeitures incurred by force of that act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BUILDINGS.

The bill (S. 4159) relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That hereafter any person or persons entering into a formal contract with the District of Columbia for the construction of any public building, or the prosecution and completion of any public work, or for repairs upon any public building or public work, shall be required, before commencing such work, to execute the usual penal bond, with good and sufficient sureties, with the additional obligations that such contractor or contractors shall promptly make payments to all persons supplying him or them labor and materials in the prosecution of the work provided for in such contract; and any person or persons making application therefor and furnishing affidavit to the department under the direction of which said work is being or has been prosecuted that labor or materials for the prosecution of such work has been supplied by him or them, and payment for which has not been made, shall be furnished with a certified copy of said contract and bond, upon which said person or persons supplying such labor and materials shall have a right of action, and shall be authorized to bring suit in the name of the District of Columbia or the United States for his or their use and benefit against said contractor and sureties and to prosecute the same to final judgment and execution: Provided, That such action and its prosecution shall not involve the District of Columbia or the United States in any expense: Provided, That in such case the court in which such action is brought is authorized to require proper security for costs in case judgment is for the defendant.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (H. R. 5370) relating to negotiable instruments within the District of Columbia was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ALLEN. Let the provision be read again about notice. Is that a notice of protest for nonpayment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 100. That notice to joint parties who are not partners must be given to each of them, unless one of them has authority to receive such notice for the others.

Mr. ALLEN. How about the case where a partnership has been dissolved?

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 99. That where the parties to be notified are partners, notice to any one partner is notice to the firm, even though there has been a dissolution.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish to ask the Senator from West Virginia if that refers to a notice of protest for nonpayment?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes; notice of dishonor of a bill of exchange.

Mr. ALLEN. Well, it is the same thing. Mr. President, that provision is absurd. To provide that notice given to a man who has been a partner, after the dissolution of the firm, shall be notice to the other man who has been a partner is just like giving notice through one man to two men who have never been partners.

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator will permit me, I will state to the Senate that this code on negotiable instruments is framed upon the basis of the English code, which has been in operation for fifteen years in England and in all the English colonies. The subject was taken up by the National Bar Association with a view of trying to get uniformity throughout the entire United States on this question. That association, after appointing a commission of thirty members from thirty different States, and after two years of the most laborious work, have Americanized this particular law. They have submitted it to all the States of the Union for their concurrence. Every State to which it has been submitted up to this time has adopted it in the exact form that it is here given without the amendment of a single provision. The States of Maryland and Virginia, lying adjacent to the District of Columbia, have indorsed and adopted it exactly in the language in which it is here presented. The members of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia have indorsed this code. The judges have indorsed it. The commercial communities, as far as I know, have indorsed it.

I will say to the Senator that there are some things in this code that I myself do not fully agree with, because they are different from what I have been accustomed to in the principles applied to negotiable instruments and mercantile paper, and yet I believe—and I think that is the concurrence of the legal mind throughout the whole country—that it is absolutely impossible to frame a code upon this subject that will meet the concurrence of every legal mind as to every provision in it. It is better for the commercial community and the legal fraternity, who have to operate under this law, that there shall be absolute uniformity and knowledge of what the law is rather than an absolute acquiescence in every particular provision. For that reason the House passed this bill unanimously, and the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia unanimously indorsed it.

I sincerely hope that my friend from Nebraska will allow this bill to pass, that the National Bar Association, who are deeply interested in it and are now in session, may be informed at once of the fact that this code has been adopted in the District of Columbia, adjoining two States that have already adopted it, besides a large number of other States.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What rule are we now operating under?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under Rule VIII.

Mr. WILSON. And Rule VIII provides for the consideration of unobjected bills?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct. No objection has been made to the consideration of the pending bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. No objection has been made to the consideration of this bill.

Mr. WILSON. I know, but if it is going to lead to a long debate, Senators will at once see that some of us who are interested in bills a page or two further along in the Calendar will secure no consideration whatever of those bills.

Mr. FAULKNER. The pending bill has been read through.

Mr. WILSON. If the reading were all of it, the bill would be soon out of the way; but the Senator from Nebraska has risen, and I have doubts.

Mr. ALLEN. I understand that I have a right to object to the consideration of the bill at any time before its final passage.

Mr. WILSON. Certainly.

Mr. FAULKNER. Of course an objection can be interposed at any time.

Mr. ALLEN. I would have objected promptly if I had been in the Senate at the time the bill was reached; but I was, unfortunately, in a committee room attending to the duties of a conferee.

Mr. President, I do not believe in this bill. I do not believe the American Bar Association or any other bar association have a right, a moral right, to prescribe to the commercial and industrial interests of the United States what shall constitute commercial paper or prescribe the law applicable to such cases. I think the men who are most deeply interested in commercial paper are the payees and payors, the indorsees and indorsors—the men who have a financial interest and not the men who are engaged simply as lawyers in applying certain rules to given cases.

It seems to me not only absurd, but absolutely unjust that a notice of dishonor given to one man who has been the partner of another man when the partnership has been dissolved should bind the second man. I can not understand a rule of that kind when you come to apply the rules of equity and justice which we try to apply in courts and I hope will apply in the enactment of laws.

The bill may have met with the approval of the American Bar Association. It may have met with the approval of the bar associations of various States. That fact may add some strength to the bill, but no bar association and no lawyer or lawyers can convert wrong into right if they amount to thousands and if they have all the qualifications of the highest order of intellect in the world.

I submit that these gentlemen in another instance (and I have just picked up the bill, although I knew of its existence) have committed another breach on the well-established doctrine of negotiable paper. This bill says, on page 3:

An instrument, to be negotiable, must conform to the following requirements:

Third. It must be payable on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time.

Importing words into the doctrine of negotiable paper that do not exist there.

Mr. SPOONER. Read that clause again.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Wisconsin asks me to read it again.

Third. It must be payable on demand or at a fixed or determinable future time.

It is well understood to every student of law that a promissory note must be an absolute and unconditional promise based upon a consideration to pay a fixed sum of money at a fixed time.

Mr. FAULKNER. That would not be a negotiable note at all in my State.

Mr. ALLEN. If it were payable to the order of bearer, it would be a negotiable paper according to the English law of negotiable paper, the common law, which is followed in all the States, I suppose, in the absence of statutes.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is fixed by statute in West Virginia.

Mr. ALLEN. West Virginia may be a State that has changed the rule. I do not know how that is.

Mr. FAULKNER. In my State, I will say to the Senator, no note is negotiable that is not payable at a bank of discount and deposit.

Mr. ALLEN. That is an unfortunate law, if I may be permitted to go outside of a legitimate discussion of the question before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Nebraska to the fact that his time has expired.

Mr. ALLEN. Are we proceeding under the five-minute rule?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; under the five-minute rule. That is Rule VIII.

Mr. ALLEN. I did not know that. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will be passed over. The next business on the Calendar will be stated.

POSTAL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The next business on the Calendar was the joint resolution (H. Res. 190) to create a commission to examine into the postal service.

Mr. COCKRELL. Has not that been practically provided for?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that such has been the action of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the joint resolution be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM H. FORE.

The bill (S. 4510) to correct the military record of William H. Fore was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of War to correct the military record of William H. Fore, a private in Battery M, in the Second Missouri Light Artillery Volunteers, by removing therefrom the charge of desertion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS.

The bill (S. 1516) to incorporate the National Association of Manufacturers was announced as next in order.

Mr. ALLEN. Let that go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

RIGHTS OF WAY THROUGH FOREST RESERVES.

The joint resolution (S. R. 153) relative to rights of way for railroads through forest reserves was announced as next in order.

Mr. ALLEN. Let that joint resolution go over. It was not sent to or reported from the proper committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska objects?

Mr. ALLEN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

Mr. WILSON. I should like to say just a word, if it is in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the Senator from Washington will proceed.

Mr. WILSON. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that it will be absolutely necessary at a very early date in the coming session to provide some legislation by which rights of way can be granted through forestry reserves.

Mr. ALLEN. Why should they not be granted the same as we grant rights of way through Indian reservations?

Mr. WILSON. For instance, the State which I have the honor in part to represent has had out of the heart of it 8,000,000 acres of land taken, and we can not get across at all.

Mr. ALLEN. But the Committee on Public Lands has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of forest reservations.

Mr. WILSON. I am not prepared to say as to that.

Mr. ALLEN. There is a Committee on Forest Reservations, a standing committee of this body, to which all bills affecting reservations should go, and by whom they should be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next bill on the Calendar will be proceeded with.

MUSKEGON HARBOR, MICHIGAN.

The bill (H. R. 7018) to provide a steam fog whistle at the entrance to Muskegon Harbor, in the State of Michigan, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WASHINGTON AND GETTYSBURG RAILWAY COMPANY.

The bill (H. R. 9428) to authorize the Washington and Gettysburg Railway Company, of Maryland, to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. Would it not be better to have the consideration of the bill continued? The Senator reporting it [Mr. McMILLAN] is not present. Let the bill be passed over without losing its place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made.

JOSEPH M'GUCKIAN.

The next business on the Calendar was Senate resolution 362, proposing to appoint Joseph McGuckian a special watchman in the Dome of the Capitol, reported by Mr. JONES of Nevada from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the resolution go over under Rule IX on my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the resolution will be passed over under Rule IX.

Mr. HALE subsequently said: What became of resolution No. 362?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator from Maine that it was objected to and goes over under Rule IX.

Mr. HALE. Was objection made?

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes; I objected to the resolution and will stick to the objection.

CHARLES THOMPSON.

The bill (S. 4395) to remove the charge of desertion standing on the record against the name of Charles Thompson was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Navy to remove the charge of desertion standing on the rolls of the U. S. S. Wissahickon against the name of Charles Thompson, of date June 21, 1865, and to issue and transmit to him a discharge as of that date.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend the bill by adding the following proviso:

Provided, That no pay, bounty, or compensation shall accrue by virtue of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. SHERRARD.

The bill (H. R. 8614) to correct the naval record of George W. Sherrard was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Navy to amend the naval record of George W. Sherrard, late an enlisted first-class boy, who served on U. S. steamships Princeton, Daylight, and Shenandoah, was transferred to the Princeton, and marked on the rolls of that vessel as having "never reported," and grant him a discharge. But Sherrard shall not be entitled to any bounty or back pay of any kind.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES GALLAGHER.

The bill (S. 1189) for the relief of Charles Gallagher, and to refer his claims to the Court of Claims, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claims of Charles Gallagher, for taxes improperly exacted of him from 1861 to 1865, inclusive.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES GRACE.

The bill (S. 3576) for the relief of James Grace was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to pay $155 to James Grace, of Washington, D. C., being the amount actually expended by Grace for expenses of physicians, nursing, and medicine on account of injuries received while in the employment of the Government.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESERVATION OF GAME.

The bill (H. R. 2524) for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. ALLEN. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will go over.

Mr. PROCTOR. I will ask the Senator from Nebraska if he will not withdraw the objection for a moment, while I say a word about the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. With pleasure.

Mr. PROCTOR. This is a reenactment of the present law. It has been very carefully considered by the scientists, by the game people, by the market men, by the hunters, and by the authorities of the adjoining States. The game season is about coming on, and I think this is a very necessary and useful measure. I trust the Senator will not object to it.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I have objected to that bill on the same ground that I objected to the bill of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] a moment ago. I do not think the District Committee has any jurisdiction over this subject. I think all things pertaining to game, preservation of birds, etc., should go to the proper committee, the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

Mr. PROCTOR. To what committee?

Mr. ALLEN. The Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game. The Senator knows there is such a committee, I suppose?

Mr. SPOONER. That means the preservation of game in the forest reservations.

Mr. ALLEN. Oh, no; the preservation of game throughout the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. I will object to it. We can get along without it for one season more.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will go over.

Mr. ALLEN subsequently said: I withdraw my objection to the bill in charge of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR], with the distinct understanding that the Senator will remember that the District Committee is not all-powerful.

Mr. PROCTOR. That is agreed. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2524) for the protection of birds, preservation of game, and for the prevention of its sale during certain closed seasons in the District of Columbia?

Mr. BERRY. I think that bill had better go over. I want to look at it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill will go over. The two hours fixed for the consideration of the Calendar have expired.

Mr. BATE. I ask to what territory the bill relates. It seems to be a regulation of some matters without giving the locality where they lie and not applying exclusively to the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has gone over.

Mr. BERRY. I objected, and the bill has gone over.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I call for the regular order.

RIGHTS OF WAY THROUGH FOREST RESERVES.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I move that the joint resolution (H. Res. 152) relative to rights of way for railroads through forest reserves be referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota—

Mr. HAWLEY. Have the two hours to be devoted to the Calendar expired, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have; but the Chair will recognize this motion, as it relates to a bill which has been under consideration.

The question is on the motion of the Senator from South Dakota, that the joint resolution named by him be referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

The motion was agreed to.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the House concurrent resolution providing for final adjournment may be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Friday, July 8, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the reference of the resolution to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be so referred, in the absence of objection.

Mr. ALLEN. I was going to suggest that that resolution lie over.

Mr. HALE. It has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations—the usual course.

Mr. ALLEN. All I wanted to say was that it strikes me we can not possibly get through with the business of this Congress by to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a very wise suggestion to make to the Committee on Appropriations, and I have no doubt they will take cognizance of the suggestion.

Mr. ALLEN. Of course I will withdraw my objection and make my appeal to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HAWLEY. With the consent of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], I wish to say a word. I think it utterly impossible to finally adjourn to-morrow without leaving undone business that ought to be done. There are many nominations yet to be taken up and acted upon, and some which can not come in to-morrow before noon. There are many officers who have been for many weeks, and in some cases perhaps months, in command of troops who have not been confirmed, and some vacancies yet to be filled, and men are at work who have not been able to draw their salaries because they have not been commissioned. Besides that, there are a great many bills upon which conferences may be necessary. Therefore, I do not think we ought to try to adjourn to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4831) fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army. The bill has been read and the amendments reported by the Committee on Military Affairs acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PETTUS. I object to the present consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. SEWELL. Then I move to take up the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is moved by the Senator from New Jersey that the bill be taken up notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Jersey to take up the bill named by him.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, the bill which has been called up and made the pending order of business provides that the present Adjutant-General of the Army shall be made a major-general. He is now a brigadier-general. The truth about the matter is that the man who occupies this place is simply a political favorite. He has been promoted twice. I will be accurate about it. He was made a colonel on the 28th day of May, 1896. Since that time he has been made a brigadier-general. I do not know when he was made a brigadier-general exactly, because the Army Register does not inform me, although it was in 1898. Here is a man promoted during the present year, who is out of the fighting part of the Army, without having done anything of which we know to distinguish himself as an officer. It is proposed to promote him twice in a year, directly to the detriment of every other officer in the Army.

Mr. President, it will not do to have a favorite in the Army. What has destroyed more governments than almost anything else is this favoritism to officers in high place and near to the ear of the king. It is contrary to all good government; it is contrary to all fair dealing with that distinguished body of men, the officers of the Regular Army of the United States. It is not fair dealing, and I invoke here that the officers of the Army of the United States shall have fair play in the Senate, that a mere favorite shall not be thrust forward and forward and forward over their heads, especially when he shares none of the dangers of the Army.

This favorite came into the Army from the volunteer forces of the United States in July, 1862. He was not educated at the Military Academy. He came into the Army from the volunteer forces; and I have no doubt he behaved himself with distinction, as he was promoted from time to time during that war. After the war he was made a second lieutenant in the Seventeenth Infantry, on May 11, 1896, and afterwards got to be a colonel.

Mr. President, there are a number of officers in the field doing the fighting for the United States who are this man's superiors in rank. Why should he be singled out and this great distinction be conferred on him if it were not pure and unadulterated favoritism on the part of the Government of the United States? That is what it is.

You can degrade your Army down and down until they will have no respect for the Government which employs them; and that is always done, sir, whenever you perpetrate such an act of injustice as this on the officers in the Army. It ought not to be done.

Not only so, Mr. President, but in this particular case an office is created that never existed before. You will have what has been unknown before this time. No major-general ever occupied the office of Adjutant-General of the United States, and here you are making a new rank for this favorite, this man who can stay safely in his office and, being a man of strong constitution and, I suppose, large brain, can discharge a great deal of work safely and quietly and in peace and luxury at home, when men his equals in every respect, with superior rank, are down in Cuba bearing the heat and burden of the day.

Mr. President, this great magnifying of officers who stay close to the ear of the king is a thing that ought not to be tolerated in any government.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama—with his permission, of course—if he does not think, if General Corbin served his country in the various capacities during the late war and showed himself to be a brave and competent man, that is long enough to demonstrate his bravery?

Mr. PETTUS. I am not questioning his bravery in the slightest degree. I admit it. I have no doubt he discharged his duties during the late war faithfully and well.

Mr. ALLEN. I understood the Senator alluded to the fact that General Corbin was not educated at West Point.

Mr. PETTUS. I make no point as to that. I have no question of this man's bravery.

Mr. ALLEN. No; but I say, does not the Senator think that thirty-four years' service in the Regular Army, three or four years of which were spent in actual warfare, ought to be a sufficient time to educate a man, if he has any capacity, to discharge the duties of Adjutant-General?

Mr. PETTUS. I have no doubt it might—none in the world.

Mr. ALLEN. Then I want to put this question to the Senator: Those things being conceded, and it being agreed upon all hands that the Adjutant-General's Office calls for a man of large executive capacity, and this man having that capacity, why should we not promote him?

Mr. PETTUS. I say that a man who stays in the Adjutant-General's Office in a place of safety has no more title to a promotion than men of equal capacity, of equal courage, and of equal service who have fought all that time in the field. I do not think that it is a peculiar distinction to a man that he has served in a safe place in the Army.

Mr. BACON. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. PETTUS. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. The Senator and I both have a very high appreciation of the Confederate army. I want to ask the Senator if he does not recall the fact that the adjutant-general of the Confederate army was the ranking general of the whole army, that Adjutant-General Cooper was the ranking officer of the Confederate army?

Mr. PETTUS. That is true.

Mr. BACON. He was a full general, not only a major-general but a full general.

Mr. PETTUS. Although I have great respect for the Confederate army, I am speaking in the United States Senate.

Mr. BACON. That is true. I was simply citing the fact I have by way of illustration.

Mr. PETTUS. And I did not care to speak of the existence of an army where they had nothing to eat and little to wear and no commissary nor quartermaster's stores, and just fought with what little gunpowder and guns they could pick up or obtain from a man who was called Stonewall Jackson's commissary and quartermaster general. No; I am speaking of the United States Government. The United States Government has never yet had in that office a man with higher rank than that of brigadier-general; and I insist that it is pure and unadulterated favoritism, and nothing else, to pass over his superiors in rank and, I have no doubt, his equals in every respect, and confer this high distinction on him. You make a place for him, and him alone; you make a place, and a high place at that, for him.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] asked me if I did not think that a man could be a soldier, and a good soldier, without being educated at West Point. Surely the Senator from Nebraska does not mean to say that an education at West Point does not do any good toward qualifying a man for being an officer in the United States Army. If it does not, we ought to abolish that institution. We have many of those men in the Army, and it is of them I am speaking. I do not want to see any of this kindly favoritism in the Army of the United States. You bring on discussions, you bring on just indignation from a class of men on whom we have to depend to fight our battles.

This man was not educated at West Point. He came into the Army during the war of the rebellion. It can not be now claimed that because he was not educated at West Point he is therefore superior to his equals in rank. That can not be claimed, and this bill ought not to be enacted into a law.

Mr. President, we are departing from a rule that has been established for a long time. You are making a new office, a new officer, with a new rank, and all for the benefit of the favorite of the king. I protest against any such action, and I protest in the name of the Army of the United States, that such degradation ought not to fall on it.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I am a member of the Committee on Military Affairs, and that committee, or a majority of it, has recommended the passage of this bill to promote the Adjutant-General of the United States Army from a brigadiership to a major-general's place.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS] seems to think that this is the result of favoritism, and of political favoritism. Mr. President, I am as much against the exercise of favoritism in army promotions as is my friend from Alabama. I believe that every man ought to stand on its own bottom; every man work out his own destiny. I believe when a man shows he has merit, that he has capacity and adaptability for any particular kind of work, he should be assigned to it and encouraged. If combined with that he has energy and force of character, success may be expected to mark his career. In this instance there is the ability and an adaptability for Adjutant-General of the Army in the person of General Corbin, and it should be recognized.

I do not think, sir, that any favoritism, so far as I know or suspect, has been exercised in this instance, for the reason that General Corbin, even from the history which has been presented of him by my friend from Alabama—for I am not familiar with his early history—but from that history given by the Senator himself, it seems that he was not educated in the Military Academy, that he was not from West Point, but was appointed, I suppose, from civil life.

It also appears that he began as a second lieutenant on the lowest round of the official ladder and has by degrees during and since the civil war worked himself up to the high rank he now holds. That certainly, sir, instead of being a drawback to his present and future promotion, should be reason for his further advance and bring forth from the generous and brave commendation and not criticism.

If, owing to the peculiar conditions by which we are now surrounded, he is found peculiarly adapted to meet the emergency, his services should be required and be encouraged. The existence of a war develops men and shows their adaptabilities; and if General Corbin was promoted recently to a brigadier-general from a colonelcy he had won in 1896, it shows that the Government has an appreciation of his capacity and of his high services.

For the short time, a few months perhaps, that he has been holding the place of Adjutant-General of the Army, first as colonel and then as brigadier, he has had more to do with the organization of the Army of the United States than any other man save the President and the Secretary of War. Indeed, sir, he has had more actual contact and more practical work with it than either of those two officials.

Then, in his conduct, while holding the high and responsible position he has, and coming in contact in organizing the Army with those who compose it as well as those who, in civil capacity, represent the Government, he has been able to command alike the confidence and respect of all. For that reason the eyes of the public are upon him as the man who has thus far organized the forces we now have in the field, and will organize under the Secretary of War those who are yet to be called out, and that is another reason why he should be recognized by advancing his rank. For these reasons, if for none other, we should pass this bill.

Besides, Mr. President, those who have come in contact with General Corbin and know him are prepared to say truthfully that he is a man of intellect, of fine military culture and bearing, with marked executive ability; that he has a cool, level, practical head on his shoulders; that he has an even, pleasant temper; that he possesses patience and philosophy, which he has been exercising to a marvelous degree in the organization of the Army in the last few months and of which many of us in this Senate are cognizant.

These things have brought him to the point where he now is. I say it is just to him, just to the Army, just to those who come in daily contact with him, that he should be promoted; and hence it is respectfully asked for in this bill. I favor this bill for the promotion of General Corbin because I believe it best for the Army and the country that it should be done, and I conclude this not only from what is said of him, but from what I have seen in official contact with him and his methods. I think the bill ought to pass as nearly unanimous as possible.

Mr. SEWELL. Mr. President, I am very glad of what the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] has said on this occasion. I wish, though, to correct an impression which may have been made by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS] as to the character and standing of General Corbin in the Army.

General Corbin entered the Army as a second lieutenant during the last war, fighting his way all through it up to a colonelcy of an Ohio regiment. He was rewarded for his gallant services by being placed in the Adjutant-General's Office as a major, and has never had any promotion since except that which came to him lineally grade by grade.

It is but a short time since he was made Adjutant-General. That position was rightfully due to him in accordance with his services. Without desiring to disparage any other man in the service of the United States, civil or military, I assert that General Corbin is the peer of any man in this country as an executive officer, and no one has demonstrated more fully than has he in the past two months his ability in largely being the instrument of the President, of the Secretary of War, and of the General of the Army in creating an army of 260,000 men out of 25,000. He has worked early and late and demonstrated his splendid ability. He has a physique which has enabled him so to work, and I know of no man who is more entitled to reward than he is at the present time. Therefore I introduced the bill, and I am very much in favor of it.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, the members of the committee who have spoken in behalf of this measure have so fully answered the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS] that it is perhaps unnecessary that I should add a word to the debate. Yet I am unwilling that the bill shall come to a vote until I have negatived the assertion of the Senator from Alabama, at least by counter assertion, that this is a case of favoritism. It is nothing of the kind.

Mr. PETTUS. I suppose there never was favoritism toward any citizen of Ohio.

Mr. FORAKER. Well, Mr. President, remarks of that kind it is not necessary for me to answer, except only to say that they are entirely out of place in the Senate of the United States.

General Corbin, instead of being an object of favoritism, instead of winning his honors in that way, has won his honors by meritorious services. Few men have equally as good records as that of General Corbin. As the Senator from New Jersey has stated, he entered the volunteer service as a second lieutenant, served all through the war, served at the front, made a gallant and heroic record there for services well done for his country. In recognition of his services so rendered he was promoted, not by favoritism, but because he earned his promotion, passing from grade to grade until, at the close of the war, he was colonel and brevet brigadier-general of United States Volunteers. After the war he entered the Regular Army, starting in again in the Regular Army as a second lieutenant, and now he is brigadier-general in the Regular Army and Adjutant-General of the Army. Every promotion he has had has come to him, grade after grade, because of his seniority. He has never yet had a promotion out of order.

Mr. President, not only did he serve, and serve heroically, throughout the war for the preservation of the Union, but since, while he has been in the Regular Army, he has served eleven full years on the plains fighting the Indians in Arizona and New Mexico and the other States and Territories where our troops have found it necessary to go. No one has any better record than General Corbin, and it was because he had made this splendid record that he was finally transferred to the Adjutant-General's Office and made Assistant Adjutant-General with the rank of major. He has risen from that rank in the Adjutant-General's Office until he is now, by regular promotion, at the head of it. It is true that we have always had only the rank of brigadier-general for the Adjutant-General. That rank was given to the office many years ago; but it has been abundantly demonstrated to the satisfaction of all military men, as I am informed, that the rank ought to be that of a major-general.

Let me suggest some reasons why. I do not wish to detain the Senate to go into this matter at any length, but the Adjutant-General of the United States Army must deal not only with all our armies, issuing orders to all our generals, but he must also deal with the military establishments of the several States, and in almost all the States of the Union the adjutant-general of the National Guard in the State is a major-general in rank. The orders to the Army in the field go through the Adjutant-General. He ought at least to have the rank of major-general; and it is in recognition of what is required to make that office as efficient as it should be that it is proposed to give to the Adjutant-General of the Army the rank of major-general. The rank is to be conferred upon General Corbin because he happens to hold that office and because he is entirely worthy to hold it and because he has a record, even if he does come from Ohio, which the Senator from Alabama has no right to sneer at.

Mr. PETTUS. I have not sneered at General Corbin's record. Mr. FORAKER. The RECORD will speak as to whether or not the Senator from Alabama has sneered at the proposition. The Senator from Alabama said this is a case of favoritism, and when we undertake respectfully to negative that proposition we are told, with a shrug of the shoulder, that not only in this instance, but in many others, people coming from Ohio have been made the objects of favoritism. Mr. President, the fact that General Corbin comes from Ohio has not anything to do with this matter, but I think none the less of him because he does come from Ohio. I trust it is not necessary that an apology should be made for anybody because he hails from that State, and none will be made, especially not to the Senator from Alabama, who has spoken in the temper which has been exhibited and manifested.

We support this measure because the office will be made the better for the increased rank which it is proposed to confer upon it, and we support it all the more cheerfully because the recipient of that honor is a soldier of whom the whole Republic is proud.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I will not prolong this discussion. I wish to say but a word. My duties as chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs have brought me, of course, into close contact with the Adjutant-General of the Army almost constantly. I only wish to say that I heartily concur in the generous words of eulogy which have been pronounced in his favor this afternoon.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I do not desire to say anything, in addition to what has been said by the Senators who have preceded me, favoring the pending bill, further than that I most heartily approve of it. I did not know from what State General Corbin hailed. It made no difference to me from what State he came, but I believed from what I had seen and heard of him that he was eminently fitted for this increased rank.

I wish to say, further, that I believe not only in the case of General Corbin, but in the case of any other fit and competent Adjutant-General he ought to have this rank. I am not so sure but that the Adjutant-General ought to be the ranking officer of the Army. He certainly at least ought to be an officer of very high rank. He has very grave and very responsible and very difficult duties to perform, and no officer ought to be charged with those duties who is not fit for the rank which we seek here to give to this officer. I shall therefore most heartily and cordially support the bill.

Mr. HALE. I was very much impressed, Mr. President, the other day by some strong and serious words which came from the Secretary of the Navy, speaking of the great and invaluable services of the men in the Navy Department who are not at the front, in the fleets, and in the battles, and entitled to the rewards that come from fighting battles, but were presiding at the heads of the bureaus in the Navy Department at Washington. These men are organizing war. They are doing what Napoleon said that Carnot did, and their work is as meritorious and as entitled to recognition as any work.

I do not suppose that of the major-generals in the United States Army to-day, whether in the field, or in the camp, or wherever they may be, there are any four, or six, or eight who have upon their shoulders the tremendous responsibilities and burdens which rest upon the Adjutant-General of the Army. His place is one in other armies recognized as of the very highest. In the great powers of Europe the adjutants-general of the armies hold the rank sometimes of major-general, sometimes of lieutenant-general, and in some cases of full field marshal, and I do not think there was a case in the Napoleonic wars where Napoleon did not have a full marshal of France as his acting and active adjutant-general. So it seems to me that this is nothing more than a fitting recognition of a gallant soldier with a great record who is to-day bent under work that would overwhelm anyone except of the strongest mental and physical cast.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, the location of my own State made it necessary for me to go to the War Department very often in the early days of the war in connection with the defense of the Florida coasts. I always found the Adjutant-General active, ready to discharge his duty, courteous and pleasant to everybody, and I cheerfully bear testimony in his favor to-day. I heard the remarks of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE]. I think this promotion is a proper and appropriate one, and I shall vote for the bill making the grade of his office that of major-general with the full knowledge and belief that it will inure to the benefit of General Corbin. I am glad to see him receive this distinguished honor.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I do not object to General Corbin. I never saw him in my life to know him. I have a very high opinion of his ability as Adjutant-General. If his name was sent to the Senate for confirmation as major-general, I should very cheerfully vote for him. But there is a method in this legislation which is not proper, in my judgment. This bill as it came to the Senate—it came from the War Department, I suppose—

Mr. FORAKER. I understand the bill was introduced by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL]. He can state its origin.

Mr. SEWELL. It was introduced by the Senator from New Jersey of his own volition, recognizing the character and standing of General Corbin, who never said a word to him about it.

Mr. MORGAN. That gives the bill a higher standing in my estimation than if it came from the War Department, because I think the Senator from New Jersey is about the best soldier we have on the floor here. But the committee seem to have amended it, and in doing that they have converted themselves and are trying to convert the Senate into a body of promoters of brigadier-generals to major-generals. That is a function which under the Constitution and under the law that exists, except in very special cases, belongs to the President of the United States, to promote anybody he sees proper to promote to any rank in the Army or any civil office. The bill as it read originally was—

That the Adjutant-General of the Army shall hereafter have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major-general in the Army of the United States.

That is a good bill. That is a bill which ought to be adopted, for the Adjutant-General of the Army ought to have the rank of a major-general and the pay and perquisites and dignity of that office. If you were to enact a law just in that form, the President of the United States would have a large field to select from, and in that field he would find many amongst the major-generals in the Army to-day who are quite as distinguished as General Corbin, men quite as meritorious, and some of them who would be delighted, no doubt, with the distinction of being Adjutant-General. They would be just as competent as he is, just as able in all particulars; and the bill ought to pass in that form. It ought to pass without either of the amendments, and leaving it, as in ordinary cases, for the President of the United States to make the promotion.

Now, in making promotions by act of Congress the Congress of the United States has uniformly adhered to this principle, that for some very extraordinary capacity, or for some very extraordinary feat of military service performed by a particular individual, his name is put in an act of Congress and he is promoted, heretofore to the lieutenant-generalcy, in consideration of his distinguished ability.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator from Alabama allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. SEWELL. The law provides that the Adjutant-General shall be taken by promotion from his own corps. The President could not, under the law, take an officer outside and make him Adjutant-General of the Army.

Mr. MORGAN. I understand that.

Mr. SEWELL. This does not create anything. It merely gives a higher grade to the present Adjutant-General.

Mr. MORGAN. But the President can take a brigadier and make him an Adjutant-General. He can pick his brigadier.

Mr. SEWELL. Not under the present law. It has to be from his own corps.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not understand that a man has to go through the Adjutant-General's Office like an oak tree has to grow, season by season, until he can get into it.

Mr. President, we ought to respect the forms of legislation here. We ought to create the office of Adjutant-General by this act with the rank of major-general in the Army. But it is personal legislation, it is favoritism, and it is promotion by Congress and not by the President, and not by seniority, when we take any man and put him up from the rank of brigadier to the rank of major general; and to do that there ought to be some act of very conspicuous valor, of conspicuous service to the United States. I have no doubt that General Corbin has rendered acts of conspicuous service to the United States, which some of our friends on this floor appreciate very highly, for we have had handed down the name of almost every distinguished man on this floor amongst the commissioned officers of the Army, and General Corbin has had a part in that. I thank him for it. I am sorry I did not have somebody to put in.

What are we doing here, except returning compliments to a gentleman who has had the opportunity, and has exercised it very graciously, of conferring titles and commissions upon our sons? That is what we are doing. It is not the proper thing for the Senate of the United States to do. Pass this bill without amendment, and then let the President of the United States send General Corbin's name here for confirmation, and I will vote for him, although I never saw him; I will vote for him on his record. He has a good record, but the part that entitles him to the rank has not been made within the last six months or eight months or year or two years. It was made during the war of the rebellion and in fighting Indians when there were hostile tribes.

If you go back amongst the brigadiers of the United States Army and promote them according to their merits as ascertained and determined by their conduct in the war of the rebellion or the Indian wars, you will find a dozen of them, doubtless, even more, perhaps, who are quite as conspicuously entitled to this honor as General Corbin.

I share fully with the feeling of my colleague—I mean by that his opinion, because I do not think he or I have any personal feeling about it—that it is not justice to the balance of the Army to promote a man merely because he has had the opportunity of conferring commissions on our children. I do not think that is right. That is favoritism. It is not the favoritism of the President. It is the favoritism of the Senate—of Congress. We are the parties engaged in it; not the President of the United States. I should think the President of the United States would neglect a great opportunity if he failed to nominate General Corbin for major-general in order that he might be Adjutant-General, because I understand he is a splendid adjutant, a man capable of an enormous amount of work, fatigue, endurance; a man of fine judgment, with a good, hard head, and a disposition to serve the public to the best of his ability.

No doubt he is very fond of certain classes of politicians in this country. But who is not? We do not get rid of that bias here or anywhere else. We vote every day on that idea, and General Corbin has a right to act upon it, if he thinks proper. I do not blame him for it. He has a right to do it, if he thinks proper; but, sir, it concerns the Senate of the United States that they shall not be carried off in a storm of sentiment or of gratitude for past favors, or expectation of favors to come, or anything of that kind. We should adhere to what is the right rule in regard to the great office of Adjutant-General; that he should be made a major-general, because that is the rightful rank of this high and important office, to which the Senator from Maine refers with so much of interest historically in regard to the army organizations of Europe.

The Adjutant-General of the Army ought to be a major-general. Let us make him a major-general. Then let the President send General Corbin's name here and the promotion will take place at once and nobody will ever be heard to say that there was any favoritism in the case. That is the proper way to treat a brave man and a good man, as I have no doubt he is.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. R. 182) relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek.

The message also announced that the House insists upon its amendment to the bill (S. 4571) to extend Rhode Island avenue, disagreed to by the Senate; agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BARCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. COWHERD managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills; asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. RAY of New York, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. CASTLE managers at the respective conferences on the part of the House:

A bill (H. R. 5069) to pension Jacob N. Atherton; and

A bill (H. R. 9295) granting an increase of pension to Justin O. Hottenstein.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution providing that during the remaining days of the present session of Congress the engrossing and enrolling of bills and joint resolutions by printing, as provided by an act of Congress approved March 2, 1895, may be suspended, and said bills and joint resolutions may be written by hand; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

A bill (H. R. 737) granting a pension to Olive H. South;

A bill (H. R. 2497) to increase the pension of James E. Eaton;

A bill (H. R. 2673) granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark;

A bill (H. R. 3001) granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin;

A bill (H. R. 3164) granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. 4274) granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman;

A bill (H. R. 4484) granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenney;

A bill (H. R. 4811) granting a pension to Jane E. Zink;

A bill (H. R. 4916) granting a pension to Virginia C. Fleanor;

A bill (H. R. 5883) to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6427) for the relief of Clarissa A. Dunham;

A bill (H. R. 6482) granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach;

A bill (H. R. 6525) granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan;

A bill (H. R. 7841) granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton;

A bill (H. R. 7989) granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett;

A bill (H. R. 8348) granting a pension to John Connolly;

A bill (H. R. 8501) for the relief of Corydon G. Crafts;

A bill (H. R. 8550) to increase the pension of Armenias H. Evans;

A bill (H. R. 8670) granting a pension to Pryor Perkins;

A bill (H. R. 8679) granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw;

A bill (H. R. 8734) granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou;

A bill (H. R. 9208) to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia; and

A bill (H. R. 9765) to increase the pension of John N. Wiley.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 4840) to provide for a force of colored troops in the Volunteer Army of the United States.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut for the present consideration of the bill indicated?

Mr. PETTUS. I object.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DANIEL. I hope the bill will not be taken up. It is a bill which will elicit a great deal of debate.

Mr. HAWLEY. I insist on my motion.

Mr. ALDRICH. Debate is out of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Connecticut, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. MORGAN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HALE. There are many matters that ought to be attended to in executive session to-day before the Senate adjourns, and I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CARTER. I trust the Senator from Maine will withdraw the motion a moment to permit the consideration of a military bill of some importance which should be passed this afternoon and which will not meet with discussion.

Mr. HAWLEY. Regular order.

Mr. HALE. I have not any right to yield, because the Senator from Connecticut is seeking to bring up another bill which will give rise to a long debate, as I know. Therefore I think the sense of the Senate is probably that we should go into executive session, because there are certainly appointments that ought to be considered and acted upon before the Senate adjourns.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maine, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and thirty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8925) to amend sections 1698 and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CONNOLLY, Mr. OTJEN, and Mr. ELLIOTT managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 623) concerning sail vessels of over 700 tons, disagreed to by the Senate, agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. PAYNE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. FITZGERALD managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message further announced that the House had passed a resolution directing the Clerk of the House to notify the Senate that the House had elected Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, a Representative from the State of New York, as Speaker pro tempore during the temporary absence of the Speaker.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker pro tempore of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 3261) for the relief of P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal.;

A bill (S. 3707) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory;"

A bill (S. 4710) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 29, 1898;

A bill (S. 4714) to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury;

A bill (S. 4741) to authorize the construction of a bridge over Tombigbee River, in the State of Mississippi;

A bill (S. 4809) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army;

A bill (S. 4910) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army;

A bill (S. 4947) to provide an American register for the steamer Titania;

A bill (H. R. 377) granting a pension to Susan I. Barrows;

A bill (H. R. 1858) granting an increase of pension to William Manley;

A bill (H. R. 2367) to increase the pension of Jeremiah Hackett;

A bill (H. R. 2276) granting an increase of pension to Almon Stuart;

A bill (H. R. 3081) granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Fogerty;

A bill (H. R. 3565) to grant a pension to Theresa Bonnavau;

A bill (H. R. 3598) granting a pension to Henrietta Fowler;

A bill (H. R. 3624) granting a pension to Pauline Robbins;

A bill (H. R. 4189) granting an increase of pension to Newton W. Cooper;

A bill (H. R. 4283) granting an increase of pension to William B. Murray;

A bill (H. R. 4915) to increase the pension of George D. Phinney;

A bill (H. R. 4629) for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles;

A bill (H. R. 4918) for the relief of J. Henry Rives;

A bill (H. R. 4977) granting a pension to Mary Hannah Clark;

A bill (H. R. 5102) granting an increase of pension to Edson Sullivan;

A bill (H. R. 6064) granting a pension to Mary A. Watts;

A bill (H. R. 6093) granting a pension to Ellen E. Nash;

A bill (H. R. 6160) to amend section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 6841) granting an increase of pension to James C. Hervey;

A bill (H. R. 6799) granting an increase of pension to Warren W. Morgan;

A bill (H. R. 7260) granting a pension to James E. Jones;

A bill (H. R. 7362) to grant a pension to Junius Alexander;

A bill (H. R. 7306) granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Beckwith;

A bill (H. R. 8090) granting a pension to Belle Peter;

A bill (H. R. 8268) to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons;

A bill (H. R. 8286) granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo O. Drake;

A bill (H. R. 9195) granting a pension to Foster C. Carl;

A bill (H. R. 9739) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker;

A bill (H. R. 9755) granting a pension to Matilda Waedel;

A bill (H. R. 9874) for the relief of John C. Coleman, of Emanuel County, Ga.;

A bill (H. R. 10117) granting a pension to Martha Jennie Freer;

A bill (H. R. 10280) to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets;

A bill (H. R. 10424) to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department of the Army;

A bill (H. R. 10477) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build, or authorize the building of, a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River, between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in said State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896;

A bill (H. R. 10361) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department;

A bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 10693) directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 10805) to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers;

A joint resolution (S. R. 139) authorizing the Librarian of Congress to accept the collections of engravings proposed to be donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard;

A joint resolution (S. R. 141) regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition in the year 1901 upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

ADDITIONAL REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4173) granting an increase of pension to Rebecca Otis, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3429) for the relief of persons who made the first payment for desert lands under the act of March 3, 1877, but who were unable to perfect entry thereof, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on the Library, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10241) to incorporate the National Congress of Mothers of the District of Columbia, reported it with an amendment.

THOMAS M. HOBBS.

Mr. CLAY, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1670) for the relief of Thomas M. Hobbs & Bro., of Limestone County, Ala., reported the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the bill (S. 1670) entitled "A bill for the relief of Thomas M. Hobbs & Bro., of Limestone County, Ala.," now pending in the Senate, together with the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," approved March 3, 1867. And the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such acts, and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

PAY OF EMPLOYEES.

Mr. ALLISON. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to report a joint resolution, and I ask that it be put on its passage.

The joint resolution (S. R. 184) to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of July, 1898, on the day of the adjournment of Congress was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, etc., That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and they are hereby, authorized and instructed to pay the officers and employees on the annual and session rolls of the Senate and House of Representatives, including the Capitol police, their respective salaries for the full month of July, 1898, on the day of the adjournment of Congress.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

APPEALS FROM DISTRICT COURT FOR ALASKA.

Mr. McBRIDE. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10510) providing for the transfer from the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit to the Supreme Court of certain appeals from the district court of Alaska.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. LATHAM.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President—

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to move an adjournment unless the Senator has some matter that will take no time. I will yield to him in that case.

Mr. HAWLEY. I think it will take time enough to read about ten lines of coarse bill type. It is a case I have very much at heart. I shall feel very sorry if this session breaks up without giving relief in the case of an estimable and excellent old soldier who committed no fault whatever. It will take one minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HALE in the chair). Does the Senator from Iowa yield?

Mr. ALLISON. I will yield if the bill does not lead to debate.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 4548) for the relief of James H. Latham.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of War to revoke the order dismissing James H. Latham from service as a captain of the Twenty-first Regiment of Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and to issue a certificate of honorable discharge for him, to date from the 14th day of June, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 13 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, July 8, 1898, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 7, 1898.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Edmund H. Zurhorst, of Ohio, to be collector of customs for the district of Sandusky, in the State of Ohio, to succeed William H. Herbert, whose term of office has expired by limitation.

CONSTRUCTOR.

James W. Lee, of Maryland, to be constructor in and for the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, with the relative rank and pay of a first lieutenant in said service. Office created by the act of Congress approved July 1, 1898.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Charles H. Garby, of Leland, Idaho, to be receiver of public moneys at Lewiston, Idaho, vice Alfred W. Krontinger, whose term will expire August 3, 1898.

A. L. Hanscom, of Towner, N. Dak., to be receiver of public moneys at Minot, N. Dak., vice John A. Ely, resigned.

William A. Hodgman, of Shoshone, Idaho, to be receiver of public moneys at Hailey, Idaho, vice William F. Horne, whose term will expire August 3, 1898.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

Neal J. Sharp, of Challis, Idaho, to be register of the land office at Hailey, Idaho, vice William H. Brodhead, whose term will expire August 3, 1898.

PENSION AGENTS.

Jesse B. Fuller, of Marysville, Cal., to be pension agent at San Francisco, Cal., vice Patrick F. Walsh, whose term will expire July 17, 1898.

Joseph W. Jones, of Glouster, Ohio, to be pension agent at Columbus, Ohio, vice Americus V. Rice, term expired.

COMMISSION TO REVISE PATENT LAWS, ETC.

Francis Forbes, of New York, to be a member of the commission to revise and amend the laws of the United States concerning patents, trade and other marks, and trade or commercial names, under the provisions of the act approved June 4, 1893.

Arthur P. Greeley, of New Hampshire, to be a member of the commission to revise and amend the laws of the United States concerning patents, trade and other marks, and trade or commercial names, under the provisions of the act approved June 4, 1893.

Peter S. Grosscup, of Illinois, to be a member of the commission to revise and amend the laws of the United States concerning patents, trade and other marks, and trade or commercial names, under the provisions of the act approved June 4, 1893.

POSTMASTERS.

Frank H. Latta, to be postmaster at Battle Creek, in the county of Calhoun and State of Michigan, in the place of C. E. Thomas, whose commission expired June 10, 1898.

David Larin, to be postmaster at Mayville, in the county of Traill and State of North Dakota, in the place of M. A. Westcott, whose commission expired May 11, 1898.

William M. Powell, to be postmaster at Hazleton, in the county of Luzerne and State of Pennsylvania, in the place of G. H. Martin, removed.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

SIXTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

William D. Henderson, of Tennessee.

The nomination of William W. Henderson, of Tennessee, for the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate June 20, 1898, is hereby withdrawn.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Lomax S. Anderson, of Mississippi.

I withdraw the nomination of John E. Davis, of Mississippi, for appointment to the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate July —, 1898.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Charles R. Warren, of Georgia.

To be first lieutenants.

John A. Sibley, of Georgia.

Mack E. Laird, of Georgia.

To be second lieutenant.

James E. Bunting, of Georgia.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

Anthony Holmead, of the District of Columbia.

To be second lieutenant.

James D. Keene, of the District of Columbia.

EIGHTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

George W. Green, of Tennessee.

Reuben M. Buckley, of Kentucky.

Charles F. Ogden, of Kentucky.

To be first lieutenant.

George A. Henderson, of Tennessee.

To be second lieutenants.

William Washington, first sergeant Troop F, Ninth Cavalry.

John C. Proctor, first sergeant Troop A, Ninth Cavalry.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenants.

James P. Barney, of Virginia.

Lawrence P. Butler, sergeant, Company I, Fourth Missouri Volunteers.

James D. Fauntleroy, of Virginia.

Thomas M. Ward, of Maryland.

To be second lieutenants.

William H. Chadbourn, jr., of North Carolina.

Samuel D. Brady, of West Virginia.

VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS.

To be captains.

Julien P. Wooten, first lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Edward W. Winfield, first lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

To be first lieutenants.

Frank P. Tate, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Henry W. Sprague, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Walter S. Volkmar, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Charles Rogan, jr., second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

To be second lieutenants.

Merchant H. Baldwin, of Indiana.

Horace C. Lansing, of Ohio.

William C. Cannon, first-class sergeant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Edwin O. Holter, private, Troop A, New York Cavalry.

Charles S. Wallace, first-class sergeant, Signal Corps, United States Army.

Charles O. Pierson, of the District of Columbia.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn July 7, 1898.

Edward B. Ives, of New York, for the office of captain, First Regiment United States Volunteer Engineers, which was delivered to the Senate June 8, 1898.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 7, 1898.

CONSUL.

Alfred A. Winslow, of Indiana, to be consul of the United States at Liege, Belgium.

APPOINTMENT IN THE ARMY—QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

To be military storekeeper with the rank of captain.

Charles D. A. Loeffler, of the District of Columbia.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Ordnance Department.

First Lieut. Edwin B. Babbitt, to be captain.

First Lieut. Ormand M. Lissak, to be captain.

First Lieut. Beverly W. Dunn, to be captain.

First Lieut. John T. Thompson, to be captain.

TRANSFERS IN THE ARMY.

Second Lieut. Rodmond V. Beach, Second Regiment, to the First Regiment.

Second Lieut. Louis B. Hamilton, First Regiment, to the Second Regiment.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

SEVENTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Robert C. Welles, of Missouri.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Maj. A. W. Shockley, of Missouri, vice Landry, declined.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

Sidney R. Wiley, of Georgia.

TO BE INSPECTOR-GENERAL WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Perry Belmont, of New York.

SECOND REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be chaplain.

Charles B. Carlisle, of Iowa.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

William B. Preston, of Virginia.

To be second lieutenant.

John Mackey Baldwin, of Virginia.

EIGHTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Reuben B. Baskette, of Tennessee.

To be first lieutenant.

Richard E. Toomey, private, Company C, Eighth United States Volunteer Infantry.

NINTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be chaplain.

Charles T. Walker, of Georgia.

SECOND REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

Thomas W. M. Draper, of Colorado.

To be first lieutenants.

E. Storer Tice, of Colorado.

Frederick J. Mills, of Idaho.

Frederick C. Turner, of California.

Frank L. Brittain, of California.

Lawrence P. Butler, sergeant, Company I, Fourth Missouri Volunteers.

To be second lieutenant.

Thomas Cooney, of Montana.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenants.

Charles G. Post, quartermaster-sergeant, Battalion of Engineers, United States Army.

John W. Daniel, jr., of Virginia.

UNITED STATES VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS.

To be second lieutenant.

Edwin O. Holter, of Troop A, New York Cavalry.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Harry A. Field, to be a lieutenant.

Ensign Albert L. Norton, to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

Lieut. Commander William S. Cowles, to be a commander.

Commodore Frederick V. McNair, to be a rear-admiral.

Capt. William T. Sampson, to be a commodore.

Commander Francis W. Dickins, to be a captain.

P. A. Surg. Louis W. Atlee, to be a surgeon.

PROMOTION IN THE MARINE CORPS.

Capt. William S. Muse, to be a major.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NAVY.

Alfred Gilbert Grunwell, a citizen of Virginia, to be an assistant surgeon.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Lieut. Commander Conway H. Arnold, to be a commander.

Surg. Remus C. Persons, to be a medical inspector.

P. A. Surg. Frederick A. Hesler, to be a surgeon.

INDIAN AGENT.

Elwood Hadley, of Arizona, Ariz., to be agent for the Indians of the Pima Agency in Arizona.

MARSHAL.

Frank A. Hadsell, of Wyoming, to be marshal of the United States for the district of Wyoming.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS.

David F. Jones, of Wisconsin, to be attorney of the United States for the western district of Wisconsin.

Timothy F. Burke, of Wyoming, to be attorney of the United States for the district of Wyoming.

REGISTERS OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Elmer E. Hershey, of Missoula, Mont., to be register of the land office at Missoula, Mont.

Peter Campbell, of Wray, Colo., to be register of the land office at Akron, Colo.

George E. French, of North Platte, Nebr., to be register of the land office at North Platte, Nebr.

Fred M. Dorrington, of Alliance, Nebr., to be register of the land office at Alliance, Nebr.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Frank Bacon, of Gothenburg, Nebr., to be receiver of public moneys at North Platte, Nebr.

COMMISSION TO REVISE LAWS OF UNITED STATES.

Francis Forbes, of New York.

Arthur P. Greeley, of New Hampshire.

Peter S. Grosscup, of Illinois.

PENSION AGENTS.

Joseph W. Jones, of Glouster, Ohio, to be pension agent at Columbus, Ohio.

Jesse B. Fuller, of Marysville, Cal., to be pension agent at San Francisco, Cal.

POSTMASTERS.

Charles W. Lewis, to be postmaster at Fernandino, in the county of Nassau and State of Florida.

David Lavin, to be postmaster at Mayville, in the State of North Dakota.

Frank H. Latta, to be postmaster at Battle Creek, in the county of Calhoun and State of Michigan.

Winthrop A. Hayes, to be postmaster at Rochester, in the county of Oakland and State of Michigan.

Daniel M. Nobles, to be postmaster at Paris, in the county of Henry and State of Tennessee.

Marshall M. Murdock, to be postmaster at Wichita, in the county of Sedgwick and State of Kansas.

Charles W. Powers, to be postmaster at Bloomfield, in the county of Essex and State of New Jersey.

Henry J. Jones, to be postmaster at Elko, in the county of Elko and State of Nevada.

A. T. Jenkins, to be postmaster at Sullivan, in the county of Moultrie and State of Illinois.

Joseph J. Hamilton, to be postmaster at Rome, in the county of Floyd and State of Georgia.

Oscar Jeffery, to be postmaster at Washington, in the county of Warren and State of New Jersey.

Frank E. Fritcher, to be postmaster at Nashua, in the county of Chickasaw and State of Iowa.

Sidney H. Brigham, to be postmaster at Lawrence, in the county of Essex and State of Massachusetts.

John A. Thayer, to be postmaster at Attleboro, in the county of Bristol and State of Massachusetts.

Samuel Murphy, to be postmaster at Oklahoma, in the county of Oklahoma and Territory of Oklahoma.

George G. Alexander, to be postmaster at Camden, in the county of Kershaw and State of South Carolina.

Abram M. Morrison, to be postmaster at Ennis, in the county of Ellis and State of Texas.

Ida A. Hewes, to be postmaster at Casper, in the county of Natrona and State of Wyoming.

Elbert W. Hoyt, to be postmaster at Ponca (late New Ponca), in the county of Kay and Territory of Oklahoma.

William McKinley, to be postmaster at Kingfisher, in the county of Kingfisher and Territory of Oklahoma.

James Frey, to be postmaster at Enterprise, in the county of Dickinson and State of Kansas.

Benjamin A. Allison, to be postmaster at McPherson, in the county of McPherson and State of Kansas.

J. D. Fowler, to be postmaster at San Luis Obispo, in the county of San Luis Obispo and State of California.

George S. Harris, to be postmaster at Gas City, in the county of Grant and State of Indiana.

Archibald Shaw, to be postmaster at Lawrenceburg, in the county of Dearborn and State of Indiana.

Thomas Rudd, to be postmaster at Butler, in the county of DeKalb and State of Indiana.

Edgar M. Rowe, to be postmaster at Charleston, in the county of Mississippi and State of Missouri.

C. L. Frost, to be postmaster at Odessa, in the county of Lafayette and State of Missouri.

Marcellus S. Storer, to be postmaster at Nelson, in the county of Nuckolls and State of Nebraska.

John B. Respass, to be postmaster at Washington, in the county of Beaufort and State of North Carolina.

Alexander M. Long, to be postmaster at Rockingham, in the county of Richmond and State of North Carolina.

Louis T. Derousse, to be postmaster at Camden, in the county of Camden and State of New Jersey.

Robert J. Henderson, to be postmaster at Phoenixville, in the county of Chester and State of Pennsylvania.

Edgar J. Graff, to be postmaster at Blairsville, in the county of Indiana and State of Pennsylvania.

William M. Cochran, to be postmaster at Dubois, in the county of Clearfield and State of Pennsylvania.

William D. Hamilton, to be postmaster at Freedom, in the county of Beaver and State of Pennsylvania.

Samuel Keat, to be postmaster at Pen Argyl, in the county of Northampton and State of Pennsylvania.

R. M. Hunt, to be postmaster at Houtzdale, in the county of Clearfield and State of Pennsylvania.

Isaac N. Strawn, to be postmaster at Hopkins, in the county of Nodaway and State of Missouri.

Fred O'Neil, to be postmaster at Malone, in the county of Franklin and State of New York.

E. H. Babcock, to be postmaster at La Plata, in the county of Macon and State of Missouri.

D. Jay Olds, to be postmaster at South Bend, in the county of Pacific and State of Washington.

Edward Bush, to be postmaster at Selma, in the county of Fresno and State of California.

A. H. Soekland, to be postmaster at Stuttgart, in the county of Arkansas and State of Arkansas.

George A. Hubbard, to be postmaster at Berea, in the county of Cuyahoga and State of Ohio.

David W. Gray, to be postmaster at Harrison, in the county of Hamilton and State of Ohio.

Walter L. Darby, to be postmaster at Pomeroy, in the county of Garfield and State of Washington.

John F. Wrabek, to be postmaster at New Prague, in the county of Scott and State of Minnesota.

David E. Cross, to be postmaster at Amboy, in the county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota.

John H. Shankland, to be postmaster at Caldwell, in the county of Noble and State of Ohio.

Isaac Regua, to be postmaster at Tarrytown, in the county of Westchester and State of New York.

George L. Hitchcock, to be postmaster at Ozone Park, in the county of Queens and State of New York.

Emiel Rebell, to be postmaster at Fort Plain, in the county of Montgomery and State of New York.

William S. Jackson, to be postmaster at Belmar, in the county of Monmouth and State of New Jersey.

William O. Armbruster, to be postmaster at Weehawken, in the county of Hudson and State of New Jersey.

John McNally, to be postmaster at Sing Sing, in the county of Westchester and State of New York.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, July 7, 1898.

The House was called to order at 12 o'clock m. by Hon. ALEXANDER McDOWELL, its Clerk, who read the following communication:

I hereby designate Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE of New York to preside over the House this day.

T. B. REED, Speaker.

JULY 7, 1898.

Mr. PAYNE took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Ways and Means to submit the following privileged resolution and ask its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Friday, July 8, at 2 o'clock p. m.

[Applause.]

Mr. DALZELL. On that, Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, under the operation of which the resolution was agreed to.

REGULATING POSTAGE ON CERTAIN LETTERS.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4304) regulating the postage on letters written by the blind.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read, subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all letters written in point print or raised characters used by the blind shall be transmitted through the mails as first-class matter at a postage charge of 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof. All acts or parts of acts conflicting with this act are hereby repealed.

The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

In line 4, after the word "blind," insert the words "when unsealed." In line 5 strike out the words "first class," and insert "third class;" and in lines 5 and 6 strike out the words "at a postage charge of 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof."

There being no objection, the bill was considered, the amendments concurred in, and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. PETERS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

REFUND OF CERTAIN DUTIES.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 2818) to refund certain import duties.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to pay to Messrs. Oelrichs & Co., the agents of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, the sum of $8,571.45, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be in full for import duties imposed, collected, and paid into the United States Treasury on a propeller shaft and appurtenances, 4 propeller blades, 1 propeller boss, 1 steam tube, and 2 boxes of iron and brass, part of the machinery of the steamship Werra, at the port of New York, owned by the North German Lloyd Steamship Company aforesaid; and that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed to pay to the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, or their duly accredited agents at the port of Baltimore, the sum of $2,422.35, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise expended, to be in full for import duties imposed, collected, and paid into the United States Treasury on a steel crank shaft, part of the machinery of the steamship Strassburg, at the port of Baltimore, owned by the North German Lloyd Steamship Company aforesaid.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, before consent is given, I would like some explanation in regard to this matter.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I desire to make a brief explanation of the bill.

The North German Lloyd Steamship Company has a line of ships running from Bremen to New York and to other ports of the United States. The steamship Werra of this line, coming from Germany to the United States in August, 1885, met with an accident in mid-ocean by the breaking of her propeller shaft, and losing at the same time a part of her propeller. In this helpless condition she was found and towed to port by the British steamship Valecia, arriving at the port of Boston. It was found impossible for her to make her voyage back to Germany because of her disabled condition and because of the impossibility of procuring the necessary repairs here.

The original parts of the machinery broken could be replaced only by the original builders. Duplicate machinery is usually kept in the offices of the steamship companies. In order to repair the damage this company imported to this country the necessary machinery to repair the ship and allow her to depart on her voyage. Of course the collector at the port had no option but to collect the duty on this imported machinery, which was collected and paid under a protest, and the Treasury can not refund it without the action of Congress.

I have here a long report made in the Fifty-fourth Congress. The bill passed both Houses in the Fifty-fourth Congress, but was not signed by the President. It got through Congress at the last moment.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I interpose no objection.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The same principle applies to the other claim.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I desire to ask the gentleman what committee has made the report on this bill?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The Committee on Claims of this House, and the Committee on Claims of the Senate of the Fifty-fourth Congress, and the Committee on Claims of the Fifty-first Congress. All have made reports in favor of the bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is on the Private Calendar, is it not?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I suppose so.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Does the gentleman think he can pass it to-morrow?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Why, this is an honest debt of refunder. The gentleman from Tennessee will at once see that the money was taken under a technical claim, and this is the only avenue to a refunder of it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Has the bill been unanimously reported to this Congress?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I find it reported, and there is no minority report.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I shall not object.

Mr. SIMPSON. If the gentleman will allow me, we could but imperfectly hear the reading of the bill. As I understand, it is a bill to pay back the duty collected on a certain propeller shaft and blades which were brought to this country to repair a steamship.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Two steamships, after two different accidents, at two different times.

Mr. SIMPSON. This is to relieve these parties in this instance, and let them bring in machinery that could be made in this country, if I understand.

Mr. GROSVENOR. No. It possibly could be made in this country by the making of all the patterns and everything of that character, but they were already made, duplicates being in possession of the company, and they simply brought their duplicates here and rehabilitated their ship and then departed. It is simply a courtesy due to a foreign shipowning company.

Mr. SIMPSON. Then I understand this particular machinery could not be made here?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not say that the art of American ship-building and machinery making could not have done it, but it would have required the making of original patterns and everything of that kind, at an enormous cost, while duplicates were lying all ready to be shipped here from abroad. The evidence shows that it would have disabled the ship for three months' time in order to have had the machinery made in the United States or any other country. And it was already made.

Mr. SIMPSON. I understand that part of the purpose of the revenue bill is to protect the American shipper against foreign competition.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes.

Mr. SIMPSON. Now, this would have brought about delay, but it would have created labor for American workmen, as the gentleman will see.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think the gentleman from Kansas has made a good point, but he is too fair-minded to object to the refunding of this money.

Mr. SIMPSON. I am not going to object, but I wanted to call the attention of the gentleman from Ohio to the fact that if we carry out the purposes of the revenue bill we ought to make what labor we can for American workmen.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman from Ohio humbly bows to the admonition of the gentleman from Kansas.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. GROSVENOR, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

CLOTHING OF DECEASED SOLDIERS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I submit the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The bill (H. R. 10912) for adjusting clothing account for deceased soldiers in certain cases was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the adjustment of the accounts of volunteers enrolled on account of the existing war with Spain who have died or may hereafter die within six months from the date of their enrollment the accounting officers of the Treasury shall make no stoppage on account of clothing overdrawn against the pay or allowances otherwise found due the widow, heirs, or legal representative of the soldier, unless the amount of clothing actually drawn by him is in excess of the clothing allowance for a soldier of his grade for the first six months of service.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I simply want to say one word. Under the law now a soldier draws his clothing when he enters the service. If he is killed or dies before the six months are up, the pay due him, that would go to his family, is stopped by the Treasury, and must be under the law. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate passage of the bill.

Mr. McRAE. Is the bill unanimously reported by the committee?

Mr. HULL. It is not reported at all by the committee. It is submitted to the House, and it ought to be passed immediately. The Committee on Appropriations bring it to me this morning and ask that it be passed at once. The members of the committee whom I have been able to see in the last three minutes are all in favor of it, as I believe every member of the House is. Every member of the House can understand what is meant by it.

Under the law there is issued to the soldier when he enlists a full line of clothing and supplies, and there is an amount deducted from his clothing allowance, and at the end of six months it adjusts itself. If he is killed or dies of disease before the six months, it leaves a balance due to the Government for the clothing issued to the man, and is taken out of the pay that goes to his family.

Mr. McRAE. Do I understand that the gentleman from Illinois, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, thinks this bill ought to pass?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. McRAE. I have no objection to the passage of the bill, but it is a dangerous practice to have bills passed that have not been considered and reported by a committee.

Mr. HULL. It would not be presented in this way except for the exceeding haste that it is necessary to have it passed.

Mr. McRAE. That is the only objection I have to it.

Mr. HULL. If it was to increase the pay or change the law as to pay, excepting as to adjusting the clothing account, I would not ask it; but it seems to me there is no member upon this floor who would be in favor of deducting from the widows of the boys fighting our battles at Santiago the little pittance charged against them for their clothing.

Mr. McRAE. I do not object to it; but it seems to me it ought to have been considered by a committee, so that there could be no question about it.

Mr. VANDIVER. May I ask the gentleman a question, only for information? I desire to ask, as there was so much confusion, is the purpose of it to remit the amount due to the soldier, if he is dead, for the clothing?

Mr. HULL. If they die during the first six months only. Under the law a volunteer soldier is given the same as the regular soldier, 28 cents a day, as a clothing account, and the allowance in six months will pay it; but if he goes to Cuba and dies from disease or dies from disease in this country, or is killed in battle during the first three, four, or five months, there is a little pittance due the Government for clothing given in advance, and this permits that amount to be paid to his widow.

Mr. VANDIVER. With that explanation, I think the bill is just.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Why not make it one year?

Mr. HULL. Because the Treasury sent the bill here asking that it apply to the first six months.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I call up the business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. PERKINS. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment? I want to agree to a conference.

Mr. RAY of New York. I withhold my demand for a moment. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York withdraws the demand for the regular order.

SAILING VESSELS OF OVER 700 TONS.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House still insist on its amendment to the bill S. 622 and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 622) concerning sailing vessels of over 700 tons.

The motion of Mr. PERKINS was agreed to.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York calls for the regular order.

The Chair lays before the House the request of the Committee on Appropriations for the reference of Executive Document 221 from the Committee on Appropriations to the Committee on Military Affairs. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

BANKRUPTCY ACT.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following House resolution with Senate amendment:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," 75,000 copies, 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate. That such print be of the act with index, etc., and as prepared by the Clerk.

With the following amendment:

After the word "with" insert "paper cover and."

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

MARY McLAUGHLIN.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 3001) granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 3 strike out "Commissioner of Pensions" and insert "Secretary of the Interior."

In line 5 strike out "the late."

In line 6, after "McLaughlin," insert "late."

In line 7 strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

JAMES E. EATON.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 2497) to increase the pension of James E. Eaton, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 5 strike out "upon the pension roll of the United States" and insert "late landsman on the Princeton and Wissahickon, United States Navy, on the pension roll."

In line 6 strike out "twenty-four" and insert "twenty."

And amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to James E. Eaton."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

OLIVE H. SOUTH.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 737) granting a pension to Olive H. South, with the following Senate amendment:

In line 5 strike out all after "South" down to and including "cavalry," lines 6 and 7, and insert "late an army nurse."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

DIANA CLARK.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 2073) granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 4 strike out "upon" and insert "on."
In lines 4 and 5 strike out "of the United States" and insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."
In line 6, after "Clark," insert "late."

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

JANE E. ZINK.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 4811) granting a pension to Jane E. Zink, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 4, after name, insert "of."
In line 6 strike out the word "to."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

VIRGINIA C. FLEANOR.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 4016) granting a pension to Virginia C. Fleanor, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 3, after the word "and," insert the word "he."
Line 4, strike out the word "upon" and insert the word "on."
Line 5, strike out the word "colonel."
Line 6, strike out the word "deceased."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

CLARISSA A. DUNHAM.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 6427) for the relief of Clarissa A. Dunham, with the following Senate amendment:

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting a pension to Clarissa A. Dunham."

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas desires a favor, and I am willing to grant it if this business can be resumed immediately afterwards.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York withdraws his demand for the regular order.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3707) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant to the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 of the act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant to the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory," approved March 4, 1896, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4. That the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company shall have the right to begin the construction of its line of road as soon as a map of definite location of the route of said road from Red River through the Indian Territory to or near South McAlester is filed with the Secretary of the Interior and approved by him: Provided, That a map of definite location of said road from South McAlester to Fort Smith shall be filed and approved before construction work shall be begun between McAlester and Fort Smith."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BAILEY, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PRINTING WAR REVENUE LAW.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, before resuming the call for the regular order, for the immediate consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 20,000 copies of the war revenue law of 1898, with paper covers and index, 13,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 6,500 copies for the use of the Senate.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Is that the resolution that was passed by the Senate yesterday?

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I hope it will pass.

Mr. RIDGELY. Does not the gentleman think that we ought to have more? I am having a call for a great many copies.

Mr. BARTLETT. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. RAY of New York. Yes; for a question.

Mr. BARTLETT. The House yesterday passed a resolution very similar to this, only for a larger number.

Mr. RAY of New York. That was not the revenue bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That was the bankruptcy bill. I hope this will be agreed to, as it is so late in the session.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

SAMUEL J. BRENT.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 9768) for the relief of Samuel J. Brent, executor of the will of Frances Brent and administrator de bonis non of the estate of Rev. J. Brent.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, instructed to issue duplicates in name of Samuel J. Brent, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Rev. J. Brent, in lieu of United States 4 per cent registered bonds issued under the acts of July 14, 1870, and January 20, 1871, Nos. 30023, 30241, for $500 each, and No. 60623, for $1,000, inscribed in name of Rev. J. Brent; also, to issue a duplicate in name of Samuel J. Brent, executor of Frances Brent, in lieu of United States 4 per cent registered bond issued under the acts of July 14, 1870, and January 20, 1871, No. 90034, for $1,000, inscribed in name of Frances Brent, said bonds, it is alleged, having been lost or destroyed: Provided, That the said Samuel J. Brent, as administrator and as executor, shall first execute and file in the Treasury bonds in the penal sum equal to the amounts, respectively, of the lost or destroyed bonds, and the interest which would accrue thereon until the principal thereof becomes due or payable, with sufficient sureties to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, with condition to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any claim because of said lost or destroyed bonds.

Mr. BRUMM. Was this bill reported by the Committee on Claims?

Mr. BROWN. The bill was considered in the regular meeting of the Committee on Claims, and the unanimous report was made in favor of it with an amendment.

Mr. KERR. The committee suggested an amendment, Mr. Speaker, that has not been read, making the amount of the bond double instead of equal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 10, page 2, strike out the words "equal to" and insert the word "double."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. KERR, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. RAY of New York. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House bills of the following titles, with amendments of the Senate, which were read, and, on motion of Mr. RAY of New York, were concurred in:

A bill (H. R. 6325) granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan;

A bill (H. R. 7989) granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett;

A bill (H. R. 8243) granting a pension to John Connolly;

A bill (H. R. 8301) for the relief of Corydon G. Crafts;

A bill (H. R. 8724) granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou;

A bill (H. R. 4274) granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman;

A bill (H. R. 8679) granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw;

A bill (H. R. 8670) granting a pension to Pryor Perkins;

A bill (H. R. 8551) to increase the pension of Armanias H. Evans;

A bill (H. R. 4494) granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenny; and

A bill (H. R. 9765) to increase the pension of John N. Wiley.

JACOB N. ATHERTON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House with amendments of the Senate the bill (H. R. 5069) to pension Jacob N. Atherton.

The amendments were read.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments and ask a conference with the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr. RAY of New York, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. CASTLE as conferees on the part of the House.

JUSTIN O. HOTTENSTEIN.

The SPEAKER pro tempore also laid before the House, with amendments of the Senate, the bill (H. R. 9295) granting an increase of pension to Justin O. Hottenstein.

The amendments were read.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate. In support of that motion, I desire to submit some remarks to the House. As I have some tables here which are somewhat lengthy and perhaps wearisome, I ask permission that I may extend my remarks and insert these tables without reading them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I wish to inquire to what subject these tables relate?

Mr. RAY of New York. They show the number of widows on the pension roll growing out of the war, the amount of money that we pay pensioners, and other details as to pensions granted to soldiers of one war and another. There is nothing partisan in these tables; and I shall not insert anything of a partisan nature in my extended remarks.

Mr. BAILEY. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he expects to print his remarks in the RECORD which will be issued to-morrow?

Mr. RAY of New York. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, of course, the gentleman will be fair enough, if there should be anything in his remarks to which we desire to reply, to obtain for us consent to do so.

Mr. RAY of New York. My remarks will appear to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? The Chair hears none.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I wish to ask the gentleman whether his speech is directed to the pending bill or is it a general speech on the subject of pensions?

Mr. RAY of New York. My remarks will apply to the pending bill and will also be somewhat general in their nature.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Then the gentleman does not propose to confine himself to the pending measure?

Mr. RAY of New York. Not absolutely.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That rule has been enforced upon some of us, but I shall not insist upon its enforcement in the present case.

WAR ACCOUNTS OF STATES.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman from New York yield a moment? There has just come to me from the Committee on Appropriations a bill which was wrongly referred, to adjust accounts between the States and the General Government for support and transportation of volunteers before they were mustered in. I have submitted this bill to both the Republicans and the Democrats on our committee; and they think it important that it should pass at once. Will the gentleman yield for its immediate consideration?

Mr. RAY of New York. I yield for that purpose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to indemnify the governors of States for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the governor of any State, or to his duly authorized agents, the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses that have been incurred by him in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of his State who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided, That the transportation paid for shall be only the transportation of such men from the place of their enrollment for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States to the place of their acceptance into the same by the United States mustering officer, and that the names of the men transported shall appear on the muster rolls of the Volunteer Army of the United States: And provided further, That such claims shall be settled upon proper vouchers to be filed and passed upon by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I want to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs [Mr. HULL] upon what basis these settlements are to be made; and in order that he may understand what I am aiming at, I want to state that a very large amount of military material, such as old tents, old clothing, defective arms and accouterments of all sorts, has been turned over by the States for the use of the volunteer regiments, some of this material having been used by the National Guard for years.

This property has been receipted for as so many muskets, so many rifles, etc. Now, I want to know upon what basis these settlements are to be made—whether there is any provision in this bill, or whether without such provision there is any power on the part of the Government, for the appointment of boards of appraisement, so that the Government may pay what these things were worth in the condition in which they were turned over, and not be obliged to pay as if new material of that character had been furnished.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, the bill itself provides that the Treasury officials shall make the settlement as between the States and the General Government.

Mr. GROSVENOR. You mean that this bill so provides?

Mr. HULL. Yes—

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman please restate that proposition?

Mr. HULL. The bill provides that the Treasury officials shall make the settlement.

But if the gentlemen want to examine the bill further—and I will state that there are one or two amendments that the gentleman on the committee from Illinois [Mr. MARSH] suggested that I think ought to be adopted—one, especially—in place of indemnifying the governors of the States and Territories, to indemnify the States and Territories themselves. But it follows the language of the act of 1861 and eliminates a feature of that act which I think is desirable. Under that old law the States claimed that the Government owes all of the interest paid by the States on the bonds so issued, even where the bonds ran for thirty years after the time that they had been paid by the General Government. This eliminates that feature of the old law and is a good provision.

I ask, however, that the matter lie over until it can be examined by gentlemen, so that they may see that there is no objection to it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. It is the experience of the Government under that very act of 1861, to which the gentleman refers, that has called my attention to this matter, and I wish to put on the bill an amendment at the proper time that the actual value of the articles themselves alone shall be paid for after the contracts have been made.

Such a State, for instance like Ohio, that appropriated hastily a million of dollars, or New York, a million dollars, and other States the same—the Government ought not to be compelled to refund any improvident expenditure of that money. I do not say that there has been any improvident expenditure, but I know that a State, rushing suddenly into the business of furnishing an army, is not in any condition to avail itself of the facilities which the General Government may possess in that direction.

Now, at the time this provision was made I thought it unwise. I did not think the appropriation a proper one, and desire now to protect the Government against paying more than is fair and just under the circumstances.

Mr. HULL. This is a protection of the General Government.

Mr. COX. In all respects?

Mr. HULL. Yes. The States paid their money in many instances for the support, transportation, and equipment of the troops. They kept them, at their own expense, until the Government took charge; and in many States where the legislature was not in session they exercised, on the part of the executive of the States, larger powers than the law allows, in many instances really violating the law. In my own State they made the appropriation; in the State of the gentleman from Ohio it was also made, and also in many other States. But if this bill passes before we adjourn, these matters can be adjusted now. If it is not adjusted this bone of contention must still hang between the United States and the various States until Congress comes together again in December next.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I want the matter settled some way or other.

Mr. HULL. I want the bill to be properly guarded.

If the gentleman will give me his attention a moment, I am perfectly willing to withdraw the bill, so that there may be a full opportunity, after the hour to which the gentleman from New York is entitled, to take it up again for consideration.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the gentleman permit an interruption just there?

Mr. HULL. I have withdrawn the bill, and the gentleman can see just what it proposes. I simply had the floor by the courtesy of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I only desired to suggest that the State of Nevada is now endeavoring to get from Congress the moneys expended for war purposes, some $400,000, expended under the various conditions to which the gentleman refers, which moneys were furnished during the late war, some thirty years ago. We have not yet been able to effect a settlement—

Mr. HULL. We ought to pass the bill now and settle these matters up.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Undoubtedly; and not allow it to go over for another thirty years.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa withdraws the bill from present consideration, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] is recognized to proceed.

JUSTIN O. HOTTENSTEIN.

Mr. BERRY. Before the gentleman from New York proceeds, I would like to ask the Chair what the motion of the gentleman from New York is?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. To nonconcur in the amendment of the Senate to a pension bill which has been read.

Mr. BERRY. I would ask the gentleman from New York if he is going to make an hour's speech on that bill?

Mr. RAY of New York. On the general subject of pensions I wish to say—

Mr. BERRY (continuing). And a partisan speech?

Mr. RAY of New York. No, sir; I am not going to introduce politics into it. There is only one single item in the speech to which partisan or personal allusion can be attached, and that is in reference to a letter by one gentleman of this House, to which I shall refer.

Mr. BERRY. And the speech, of course, is commendatory of the Republican party—

Mr. RAY of New York. I have already said that I am not going to make a political speech.

Mr. BERRY. Does the gentleman not think we could better occupy the time between now and adjournment in the interest of the members themselves and their constituents?

Mr. RAY of New York. I am devoting the time to the business of the members here from all parts of the country. It is a matter in which we are all interested, and the gentleman from Kentucky is one of the most active gentlemen on the floor of the House—

Mr. BERRY. If we were to measure your capacity by the time occupied on the floor of the House I should say that you are one of the most active members on the floor of the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. As to the propriety of pension laws little need be said. Such laws are enacted and enforced, directly or indirectly, in every civilized country of the world, and their necessity and justice are universally recognized.

OUR PENSION LAWS.

It may be said in the very beginning that the pension laws of the United States are the most beneficent, universal, and liberal written on the statute books of any nation. In times of peace we are and always have been content with a small Army and Navy, but in times of war we show a wonderful power of quick and effective expansion of these forces. What is more wonderful still is the ease and quickness with which our voluntary forces disband and reenter the walks and pursuits of civil life.

Much of all this is due to the patriotism and intelligence of our people and much to the wise and beneficent pension policy of the Government. Patriotism so actuates men that they brave death on the battlefield, wrap themselves in their country's flag and go to their eternal sleep bathed in blood, rather than that their country's honor suffer. But patriotism may be restrained and fail to respond in times of need unless the sons of our country feel assured that their wives and children and dependent fathers and mothers are to be cared for in case of their own death or disability; and the sons of our Republic may also hesitate to brave danger and risk health and limb unless assured that in case they incur serious disability a grateful country will keep them from the almshouse.

In the early history of this nation legislative provision for pensions was largely made by promissory resolves, in anticipation of the contingencies on which they were based, by way of encouraging enlistments, continued service, and personal daring in the field or upon the sea.

August 26, 1776, the month succeeding the Declaration of Independence, the old Congress passed resolutions promising pensions to those who might be disabled during the war for independence. At a later date Secretary Cass said:

Thus was the magnanimous, politic, just, and grateful system of pensions commenced by anticipation.

From time to time, as occasion has justified and demanded, the Congress of the United States has gone on, step by step, to amplify and complete this pension system until it is so expanded, except in some details, as to meet all the demands of justice, gratitude, and humanity toward those who have rendered, or who shall hereafter render, service for the Republic during times of war, either upon the land or the sea, and who come within the terms of our present broad and liberal laws. Now the widows and dependent children and dependent parents of soldiers and sailors are included.

March 2, 1833, an independent Bureau of Pensions was established and was managed by a Commissioner of Pensions under the direction of the Secretary of War. Naval pension matters were not transferred to this Bureau however until after the act of March 4, 1840.

Step by step the duty of administering the pension laws was transferred to the Bureau of Pensions under the immediate charge and direction of the Commissioner of Pensions and there it remains, subject to the appellate powers vested in the Secretary of the Interior.

To-day we have, generally speaking, "invalid pensions" and "gratuitous or service pensions." "Land-bounty" pensions are but little heard of now. Properly speaking, an "invalid pension" is granted to the soldier himself for or on account of some disability incurred in the service and in the line of duty, but by law the benefits are extended or continued to the widow or dependent children or dependent parents in case the soldier or sailor dies in the service or thereafter from causes of service origin.

By the act of June 27, 1890, a pension is granted to the soldier or sailor who served in the late war of the rebellion for a period of ninety days or more, and who has been honorably discharged from such service, and who is now or hereafter may be suffering from a mental or physical disability of a permanent character not the result of his own vicious habits, and which disability incapacitates him from the performance of manual labor in such a degree as to render him unable to earn a support. Such pension is not to exceed $12 per month or be less than $6 per month, and is to be proportioned to the degree of inability to earn a support. This is a "service" or "gratuitous" pension. It is based on service and inability to earn a support by manual labor. The question of the financial condition of the soldier is not considered.

It has sometimes been said that such a pension is due the soldier and is a contract obligation. This can not be justly said. The Government is under no contractual obligation to allow or pay such a pension. No such contract or obligation was entered into by the Government when the soldiers of the late civil war enlisted. No law authorizing inducements of that nature was passed. No law giving such a pension was then on the statute books.

It is undoubtedly true that certain irresponsible and unauthorized persons engaged in raising men and procuring enlistments stated to the recruits that they would be pensioned by the Government in any event, regardless of disability, but no such statement was ever authorized. The act of June 27, 1890, was passed long after the close of the war as a deserved recognition of devotion and valuable service rendered to the country, and to give aid to those requiring it.

So far as pensions are granted to widows, dependent parents, or dependent children under any law, they are mere gratuities. These persons did not render military service. Originally pensions were paid by the several States, but September 29, 1789, it was enacted that pensions allowed and paid by the States should be continued and paid by the United States for one year, and this provision of law was continued by the act of June 16, 1790.

In March, 1818, the "indigent" pension act was passed, which provided that every officer, noncommissioned officer, musician, marine, private soldier, etc., who served in the war of the Revolution until the end thereof, or for a term of nine months or longer at any period of the war, and who "by reason of his reduced circumstances in life was, or should be, in need of assistance of his country for support," should receive a pension from the United States; if an officer, of $20 per month; noncommissioned officer, private, etc., $8 per month, to continue during life.

It will be noticed that while this act made a distinction between officers and privates, it made no distinction between officers of different rank. That is, the captain's and the general's pension were the same. It will be noted that this law really inaugurated the pension policy of caring for the soldiers of the Republic when they became poor, regardless of whether they received disability in the service. It has been supposed by many, and repeatedly so stated, that the act of June 27, 1890, providing for pensions to soldiers unable to earn a living by manual labor was the first law in the nature of an indigent pension law.

The two acts differ materially in this: The act of March 18, 1818, was an "indigent" act pure and simple and did not extend to widows and children, while the act of June 27, 1890, so far as the soldier himself is concerned, is based on his inability to earn a support by manual labor and absolutely ignores the question of his pecuniary condition. As to the soldier, it is not in any sense an "indigent" pension law.

The result is that a soldier who served in the war of the rebellion for a period of ninety days or more and was honorably discharged, and who is absolutely helpless from disease, not contracted in the service, and poor, not worth a penny or drawing any income from any source, with a wife unable to earn a living, can only draw a pension of $12 per month, while under the same act the soldier who served ninety days and from causes not of service origin is simply unable to perform manual labor, although able to earn a good living by mental work, and is also worth thousands of dollars, and in the enjoyment of a large income, and has no wife or family dependent upon him, gets precisely the same amount of pension.

It will be seen that this act bases the right to a pension, not on the pecuniary necessities of the soldier, but on his inability to perform manual labor. The result is that hundreds of well-to-do men who incurred no disability whatever in the service and only served ninety days draw a pension of $12 per month, while thousands of the very poor, absolutely dependent on charity (aside from their small pension), and who saw much longer and more arduous and dangerous service, can only draw the same sum per month. This inequality and seeming injustice arises from the fact that the act of June 27, 1890, instead of being made an "indigent" pension law, against which there was great prejudice, was made a service-pension act, the right conditioned on a present inability to perform manual labor.

Many attempts have been made to change this law and make it more just and equitable. The House Committee on Invalid Pensions has unanimously reported a bill providing that no soldier shall draw a pension under the act of June 27, 1890, his disabilities not being due to service, so long as he has from other sources an independent net income of $1,000 or more per year. We have also a most liberal general pension law granting pensions to soldiers, sailors, and marines who have or who may hereafter incur disabilities in the service and in the line of duty.

Under this law rank is considered and given prominence, and justly so. To illustrate: For disabilities of service origin that entitle a private soldier to $8 per month, a lieutenant-colonel and all officers of higher rank draw $30 per month; a major, surgeon, or paymaster, $25 per month; a captain, provost marshal, or chaplain, $20 per month; a first lieutenant, assistant surgeon, deputy provost marshal, or quartermaster, $17 per month, and a second lieutenant or enrolling officer, $15 per month. The same distinction is maintained between privates or enlisted men and commissioned officers in the Navy.

It must be remembered, however, that there are many specific and specified disabilities where rank cuts no figure, as, for instance, in the following cases of specific disability incurred in the service and in line of duty the soldier, whether officer or private, is entitled to the following pension per month:

Loss of both hands	$100.00
Total disability in both hands	72.00
Loss of both feet	72.00
Loss of both eyes	72.00
Loss of an eye (other lost before enlistment)	72.00
Regular aid and attendance of another required	72.00
Frequent and periodical aid, etc., of another required	50.00
Amputation at shoulder or hip joint, or so near thereto as to prevent use of artificial limb	45.00
Total disability of arm or leg	36.00
Loss of one hand and one foot	36.00
Total disability of one hand and one foot	36.00
Amputation at or above elbow or knee	36.00
Loss of a hand or a foot	30.00
Total disability of one hand or one foot	30.00
Inability to perform manual labor	30.00
Total deafness	30.00
Disability equivalent to loss of hand or foot	24.00

It may be questioned whether these ratings are strictly consistent. For instance, the rating for loss of both feet and the loss of both eyes in the service are the same. The disability is not the same in its effect upon the soldier's comfort or ability to carry on business or earn a support. A man who is totally blind, and especially if he lost his sight when young, is to all intents and purposes, so far as earning anything by manual or mental labor or otherwise, totally and permanently helpless, and he requires the constant aid and attendance of another unless in bed or sitting still in a safe place, while a man who lost both feet in the service can perform mental work, clerical work, and many kinds of manual labor and earn a comfortable living. I am not asserting that the rating in either case is too high; but clearly the totally blind soldier is entitled to double the pension the other receives.

A man who entered the service blind in one eye and lost the other by reason of service disability draws by law $72 per month, while the soldier who lost one eye in the service and has lost the sight of the other since, and is consequently totally blind by reason of losing an eye in the service, precisely the same disability incurred by the first-mentioned soldier, only gets $17 per month. The service of both were equally meritorious and the disabilities of both of service origin are precisely the same, and still the one draws $72 per month and the other only $17 per month. These cases are mentioned to call attention to the inequalities in our pension laws when applied to some exceptional cases and to demonstrate the necessity for and the propriety of special legislative action in many cases.

In the cases used to illustrate, it is absolutely immaterial that the one lost an eye before entering the Army and then lost his remaining eye through no fault of his after leaving the service; the fact remains that both are totally blind from the same pensionable cause, viz, the loss of an eye in the service while in line of duty.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS.

The act of July 4, 1836, the provisions of which extended back to April 20, 1818, and extended forward without limitation, was the foundation of what is known as "pensions to widows and orphans," and under it the first pensions (except bounty-land cases) of this nature were adjudicated and allowed. The widows and orphans of the war of the rebellion were first pensioned under the act of July 14, 1862. The widows and orphans act of 1836 was extended from time to time (see acts of July 7, 1838; March 3, 1843; June 17, 1844; July 21, 1848; July 29, 1848; February 3, 1853; June 3, 1858), and finally by the acts of July 25, 1860, and July 27, 1868, these "old war" pensioners were placed upon the same footing with the widows and orphans of the war of the rebellion.

There can be no question as to the justice or wisdom of the policy that has provided and still provides pensions for the widows and dependent children and dependent parents of our soldiers, sailors, and marines. Such legislation, however, especially in the case of widows, ought to be hedged about with restrictions and limitations that will prevent fraud and imposition upon the pension laws and the soldiers themselves. The war widow—that is, the woman who was the faithful wife of a soldier during the war; who endured the cares and bore the burdens of a soldier's wife, who cheered the husband by loving messages, who maintained the home and cared for the children while he was at the front, and who cared for him after his return—is entitled to the highest consideration from the country.

Much can be said also for the woman who married the soldier soon after the close of the war. She became his companion, his nurse; and in all cases where the soldier received wounds or contracted disease in the service and in the line of duty it is eminently proper, wise, and just that the widow draw a pension. But now, thirty-six years after the close of the war, when the youngest of those who served their country in that ever memorable contest are upward of 50 years of age, it has been seriously questioned whether the woman who hereafter marries a soldier whose service long since ceased should be placed on the pension roll after his death. Clearly such action is improper where the soldier is old, broken down, and near the grave, and the woman seeks and secures the marriage for the purpose of getting on the pension roll.

In very many instances young women of unenviable reputation, and without character, hunt out a broken-down old soldier and by scheming secure a marriage ceremony and marriage certificate, and then disappear only to reappear when the funeral takes place, pose as a bereft and heartbroken widow, and then file a widow's claim for pension, and so become a burden on the Treasury of the United States. These cases are rare in certain localities, but frequent in others. I would advocate nothing that will discourage honorable marriage or patriotism, but it does seem that this system of "marrying the pension roll" should be put an end to by proper amendments to the law.

June 30, 1897, one hundred and thirteen years after the close of that war, seven widows of Revolutionary soldiers were still on the pension roll. Thirty years hence, say in 1927, an old soldier at the age of 80 years may marry a woman as yet unborn. This woman may, on the death of the soldier, be placed on the pension roll, and should she live to be 80 years of age, she will be drawing a pension one hundred and ten years hence, or in the year 2007, on account of the service of a soldier who left the Army in 1865. The law ought not to make this condition of things possible. The pension roll is increased in this way to the great injury of the worthy soldier and soldier's widow.

Only 7 soldiers of the war of 1812 are now on the pension roll, while 2,810 widows of such soldiers are now drawing pensions. This condition does not arise from the superior strength and longevity of widows, but from the fact that young women married old soldiers in thousands of cases for the purpose of getting on the pension roll. Two thousand three hundred and seventy-three soldiers who served in the Indian wars from 1832 to 1842 are now on the pension roll, while 4,288 widows of such soldiers are drawing pensions. Ten thousand nine hundred and twenty-two survivors of the Mexican war now draw pensions, while 8,072 widows of such soldiers are on the rolls.

These figures indicate that unless proper restrictions are imposed the pension rolls will be unduly and improperly swelled by the names of widows who do not have any just claim on the bounty of the Government. This is no reflection on women or womankind. It is true that the great mass of women are loyal, patriotic, industrious, honest, and above the imputation that they would marry an old soldier for the mere sake of getting on the pension roll at his death, but the unfortunate fact remains that there are some who seek this opportunity. The magnificent and valuable services of our women during the civil war will always be remembered. They bound up the wounds, cared for the sick, and made dying beds "soft as downy pillows are."

We now have on the pension rolls as pensioners—

Widows of Revolutionary soldiers.....	7
Widows of war of 1812.....	2,519
Widows of Indian wars.....	4,182
Widows of Mexican war.....	8,079
Army and navy widows and dependent children.....	219,561
Total.....	234,268

At least 200,000 widows of soldiers, sailors, and marines are on the pension rolls.

The Committee on Invalid Pensions is frequently appealed to to grant original pensions or large increase of pension to the comparatively young widows of officers who held high rank in the Army or Navy. These applicants range in age all the way from 20 to 40 years of age. The most of these younger applicants married the officer long after the war closed and long after the soldier had ceased to be connected with the Army. Many applicants are the widows of army or naval officers who have continued in the regular service.

As the war closed thirty-three years ago, it is readily seen that most of these young widows were mere children at that time and, except in the case of widows of officers who have remained in the regular service, it is seen that these pensioners and applicants knew nothing of the horrors of war and never tasted its bitterness. These younger widows, unfortunately, are the most importunate and insistent in their claims for special legislation in their behalf. They see no distinction between the claims of the old war widow, whose husband died because of disease or other disabilities incurred in the service, and those of the widows whose husbands died from causes absolutely foreign to their army or navy service. They see no distinction between the war widow and the one who married the soldier twenty years after the war.

It is unfortunately true that the great majority of army and navy officers die poor. It is undoubtedly true that more is expected of these officers by way of dress, social intercourse, entertainment, etc., than their pay will justify. They do not have opportunity to accumulate money by speculation or in a business way; and when they die, the widow, left without means of consequence or entirely without means or income, naturally appeals to Congress for special legislation by way of a large pension to enable her to live in the style and manner she has been accustomed to.

The wisdom of such special legislation may well be doubted. Still precedent seems to be established and the appeal is made, regardless of the financial condition of the applicant, that as the widow of General A or of Admiral B draws a large pension by special act of Congress, the widow of General C and of Admiral D should be equally favored. The unwisdom of large pensions by special act in such cases is thus made apparent.

If it is to be the policy of Congress to grant more than $3 per month to the widow of an officer who does not die by reason of some disability incurred in the service, and more than the rates fixed by general law for the widows of officers who die by reason of wounds received or disabilities incurred in the service, the maximum rates should be fixed by the general law and these rates should be adhered to. The officer should not live and die in the expectation that his widow will be cared for by special legislation applicable to her individual case, nor should the wives of officers be led to think that Congress will provide for them by legislation of this character.

The wives and daughters of our army and navy officers should not be compelled to become lobbyists in their own behalf the moment the grave closes over the dead. Nor should there be any favoritism in this matter. The amount of a widow's pension should depend on her actual necessities, not on the political pull of herself or of her friends, nor on the Senatorial and Congressional influence she may be able to secure. It is not infrequent that we find a law granting a pension of $50 or more to one widow and $30 to another, when the rank of the husband was the same and the necessities of the widow in the thirty-dollar case are much the more pressing.

INCONSIDERATE SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

I ought to warn members of this House against the evils of inconsiderate special pension legislation. It is not infrequent for a single member to introduce from forty to sixty special private pension bills. In this Congress an average of ten such bills for each member has been introduced. Some members spend, seemingly, most of their time pressing these claims, and sometimes the weaker the claim for special Congressional action the harder the bill is urged. One distinguished member of this House remarked:

There is no merit in getting a good bill through; it is only when a bad bill is passed that the Representative is entitled to congratulations.

Many seem to entertain this view regarding private pension bills. Thought ought to be given to the fact that only cases of special merit, where the Bureau is powerless or a plain error has been committed, ought to be presented to Congress. The pensioners to the number of nearly 1,000,000 have their eyes on Congress, and nothing is more injurious or annoying to a Representative than to have one constituent favored by a special act, not fully justified as exceptional, when hundreds of equal merit and in the same section of country are unnoticed. The pensioners, with very few exceptions, are just minded and in favor of exact and equal justice to all. They want no favoritism.

The work imposed on the Committee on Invalid Pensions and the Committee on Pensions is tremendous and most perplexing. It is safe to say that during a session each claimant in whose behalf a bill is introduced writes from one to twenty-five letters to the chairman of the committee having it in charge, and these must be answered, and if the bill fails, usually the Representative introducing it must shoulder the responsibility. Frequently, yes, usually, the gentleman introducing a bill confesses his ignorance of the merits of the case. In one case presented in behalf of a widow of 42 years who married the soldier fifteen years after the war closed, she was called on to give a sworn statement as to her property. She included in the schedule $4,500 in bank, drawing 3 per cent interest, but stated that it should not be counted by the committee, as it represented the money saved from her pension of $30 per month and drawn from the Treasury since her husband's death.

As already stated, it is my main purpose to call attention to certain conditions that make special legislation sought for, and in some cases wise and proper; also to show what Congress has done and is doing; also what the Bureau of Pensions is doing. It would be much better, in my judgment, under the present system of adjudication for Congress to provide a medical board of appeals. Under our present laws the most material and important questions are of a medical nature. The disabilities and ratings of the soldier are established by medical examinations made by medical examiners and fixed by the medical referee.

Appeals to the Department of the Interior are provided for, but, unfortunately, all medical questions raised on appeal are in effect referred back to this same medical referee, who naturally and honestly usually "adheres" to his first decision. This condition ought to be and undoubtedly will be remedied. If remedied, the reason for many appeals to Congress will fail.

From the best sources attainable it is estimated that 2,234,911 different individual soldiers, seamen, and marines served in the Union Army and Navy during the war of the rebellion.

The total number enlisted in the Army was..... 2,672,341
The total number enlisted in the Navy was..... 105,983

Total..... 2,778,324
Deducting reenlistments (largely estimated)..... 543,393

Leaves the total as above stated..... 2,234,911

Of these, 105,983 were seamen and marines.

Excluding deserters, it appears that 1,727,353 were living at termination of service, and hence at least 507,558 perished during the war. From the best obtainable sources it is estimated, with substantial accuracy, that there were 1,064,524 surviving soldiers and sailors of the late war January 1, 1898. There are at least 500,000 widows and dependent relatives who have, or at least claim, a pensionable status under existing laws. Considering what has heretofore been done by way of special legislation and the vast number of claimants from whom applicants may come, the increasing years, disabilities (both of service and other origin), and poverty of the old soldiers and of their widows, it is not very remarkable that we have such a large number of private pension bills introduced into Congress.

During the Fifty-fifth Congress 3,825 private pension bills have been introduced in the House alone and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and 629, and possibly some more, have been introduced and referred to the Committee on Pensions. The most of the 629, however, refer to service in wars other than the war of the rebellion.

March 31, 1898, the number of army and navy invalid pensioners under general law (soldiers and seamen) was 334,624
The number of army and navy invalid pensioners under act of June 27, 1890 (soldiers and seamen), was..... 409,051

Total..... 743,675
At least 20,000 of those pensioned under the general law did not serve in the war of the rebellion, therefore deduct..... 20,000

Soldier and seaman pensioners of rebellion..... 723,675

A SLANDER REFUTED.

As the survivors of that war number at least 1,064,524, it will be seen that the oft-repeated slander that more men are drawing pensions as survivors of the war of the rebellion than there are living of that class is fully answered and refuted.

About one-third, 340,840, of the surviving soldiers, sailors, and marines who served in the war of the rebellion are not on the pension rolls.

WHAT THE FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS HAS DONE.

During the present Congress the Senate has passed and sent to the House 313 private pension bills referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

During the Fifty-fifth Congress, and we now approach the close of the first regular session, during which all of our pension work has been done, the Committee on Invalid Pensions, of which I have the honor to be chairman, has reported to the House 478 private pension bills, of which 408 have passed the House, and 254 have already passed both Houses, been signed by the President, and are now laws. There has been no contention over the bills reported and no man on either side has claimed the amount reported to be excessive or undeserved except in two cases.

The Committee on Pensions of the House has reported and passed 77 private pension bills, of which 61 have passed both Houses and are now laws. The total number of private pension bills that have been reported favorably to the House during the Fifty-fifth Congress is 555, and the total number passed is 485, of which 323 have already become laws. Some 26 await the signature of the President.

As some of our Democratic friends for political effect have spread the false report that this Republican Administration and this Republican Congress are unfriendly and unfavorable to the old soldiers, it is well to compare the work of this, the Fifty-fifth Congress, in special pension legislation with the work of the Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congresses, both of which were Democratic.

The Fifty-third Congress (Democratic) passed a grand total of only 119 special pension bills during its three sessions, its entire life.

The Fifty-second Congress (also Democratic) passed a grand total of 217 private pension bills during both its sessions, its entire life. These two Democratic Congresses during their five sessions passed a grand total of 336 pension bills.

The House in the Fifty-fifth Congress (Republican) has in seven months of one session reported and passed 485 private pension bills, or 149 more than did both the two preceding Democratic Congresses during their five sessions and their entire unfortunate existence. The Fifty-fourth Congress during its entire life, both sessions, only passed a total of 378 private pension bills that became laws, 107 less than have already passed the House in the Fifty-fifth Congress.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will the gentleman tell us the number of bills introduced?

Mr. RAY of New York. I am going to give it to you. There were more introduced than now, or about the same number.

It is hardly proper or consistent or honest for our Democratic friends, in view of these facts, to claim that this Congress is unfriendly to the old soldiers and their widows and orphans or that it is a do-nothing Congress in pension legislation. No favoritism has been shown; and pension bills introduced by Democratic and Populist members have had the same attention and consideration accorded those introduced by Republicans.

PENSIONS NOW PAID.

On the 31st day of March, 1898, we had on the pension rolls the following pensioners:

Under general law:
Army invalid (soldiers)	329,787
Navy invalid (seamen, etc.)	4,837
		334,624
Under act of June 27, 1890:
Army invalid	394,702
Navy invalid	14,349
		409,051
Total soldiers, sailors, and marines		743,675
Under general law:
Army widows and dependent relatives	93,376
Navy widows and dependent relatives	2,320
		95,696
Under act of June 27, 1890:
Army widows and dependent relatives	118,053
Navy widows and dependent relatives	5,907
		123,963
Total widows and dependent relatives		219,561
Army nurses		644
Total pensioners, war of the rebellion		933,880
Revolutionary pensioners		16
War of 1812 pensioners		2,523
Indian war pensioners		6,222
Mexican war pensioners		18,293
Total pensioners March 31, 1898		990,974

In truth, about 1 person out of every 70 of our population draws a pension from the General Government.

In 1897 we paid pensions to the amount of	$139,949,717.35
Paid pension agents for disbursing	572,439.41
Paid expenses of Pension Bureau	3,415,343.66

Total expense, year ending July 1, 1897

During the fiscal year ending July 1, 1898, we have paid, in round numbers, $148,000,000 to our pensioners.

WORK OF THE PENSION BUREAU.

Much has been said importing that the present Administration in its administration of the pension laws through the present Commissioner of Pensions, Hon. H. Clay Evans, has been and is unfriendly to the pension system and to the old soldiers and their widows and orphans. A certain class of pension agents and attorneys and Democrats (called statesmen) have been exceedingly busy spreading this report. For a year or more during the last of the Administration of President Cleveland pensioners were advised to hold back their claims pending the approaching election and to present and press claims for pension and increases as soon as the new President (certain to be a Republican) should be inaugurated.

The result was that Commissioner Evans found the Bureau "swamped" under a mass of new applications. The eager and expectant applicants could brook no delay. They seemed to expect the immediate allowance of every claim filed, whether for original pension, increase, or restoration to the rolls. They did not pause to consider that such action would be impolitic, unwise, and unjust. The propriety and necessity of a thorough examination of each individual case was a consideration not to be entertained, and as a result there was considerable friction between pension attorneys and the Commissioner.

But the work of the Bureau, impeded as it is by the presence of many incompetent clerks placed there by a Democratic Administration, unfriendly to the old soldiers and to the pension system, has gone on unceasingly, laboriously, and faithfully. A comparison of work done and of results obtained under the last Administration and the present will best tell the story.

Comparison of pension claims allowed and disallowed for years 1894, 1895, and 1896, and 1897 (nine months only included).

Year.	Allowed per month.	Rejected per month.
General law—original.
1894	845	1,653
1895	662	1,582
1896	650	1,307
1897 (9 months)	a 808	1,089
Act of 1890—original.
1894	b 2,655	4,271
1895	c 2,710	3,777
1896	d 3,331	3,171
1897 (9 months)	e 4,118	2,358
General law—increase.
1894	913	1,892
1895	810	1,639
1896	1,050	1,887
1897 (9 months)	961	1,165
Act of 1890—increase.
1894	177	864
1895	288	1,431
1896	344	1,059
1897 (9 months)	742	1,071
1894, 1895, 1896	f 719	1,514
1897 (9 months)	g 808	1,089
General law—increase.
1894, 1895, 1896	924	1,806
1897 (9 months)	961	1,165
Act of 1890—original.
1894, 1895, 1896	2,899	3,740
1897 (9 months)	4,118	2,358
Act of 1890—increase.
1894, 1895, 1896	270	1,119
1897 (9 months)	742	1,071
a Or 31 per day.	d Or 123 per day.	f Or 27 per day.
b Or 102 per day.	e Or 158 per day.	g Or 31 per day.
c Or 104 per day.

It thus appears that during each of the years 1894, 1895, and 1896, up to March, 1897, when President McKinley was inaugurated, the Democratic Administration was allowing original claims under the general law at the rate of 27 per day and rejecting such claims at the rate of 58 per day. It was allowing original claims under the act of 1890 at the rate of 111 per day and rejecting them at the rate of 143 per day.

Under both laws it was allowing 138 original claims per day and rejecting 201 per day.

The Republican Administration has been allowing original claims under the general law at the rate of 31 per day and rejecting at the rate of 41 per day. It has been allowing original claims under the act of 1890 at the rate of 158 per day and rejecting at the rate of 90 per day.

Under both laws it has allowed 180 original claims per day and rejected 131 per day.

ORIGINAL CLAIMS.

	Allowed per day.	Rejected per day.
Republican Administration.....	180	131
Democratic Administration.....	138	201

The above figures relate simply to original claims adjudicated. Now, let us take claims for increase.

The Democratic Administration allowed 35 claims for increase under the general law per day and rejected 69 per day. It allowed of claims for increase, under the act of 1890, 10 per day and rejected 43 per day. In other words, it was allowing 45 increase claims per day and rejecting 112 per day.

The Republican Administration has been allowing 37 increase claims per day under the general law, and 28 per day under the act of 1890, a total of 65 per day, while it has rejected 44 increase claims under the general law per day and 41 of such claims under the act of 1890, a total of 85 per day.

INCREASE CLAIMS.

	Allowed per day.	Rejected per day.
Republican Administration.....	65	85
Democratic Administration.....	45	112

INCLUDING BOTH CLASSES.

Republican Administration.....	{ 180 65	{ 131 85
Total	254	216
Democratic Administration.....	{ 138 45	{ 201 112
Total	183	313

It is seen that while the Democratic Administration was adjudicating 496 claims per day, as against 470 per day adjudicated by the Republican Administration since the return of the Republican party to power, the Pension Office under Commissioner H. Clay Evans has allowed 71 claims per day more than were allowed under the former Administration, while it has rejected 97 less per day.

This proves beyond any controversy whatever that while the Pension Bureau has been a little slower in adjudicating pension claims since March 4, 1897, than prior to that date, the work done has inured wholly to the benefit of the old soldier and of his widow and orphan. Every day for the nine months covered by these figures in 71 cases more than under the last Administration has happiness been carried to the family of some old soldier. The rates allowed have been much larger also.

Those who complain of tardiness at the Bureau and who are inclined to suggest that the Administration is against the old soldier should study the figures well before indulging in such unwarranted and undeserved criticism.

Our Democratic friends who, now they are out of power, would pose as the soldier's friend, when in power and when they had an opportunity to do something for the needy old soldier and his widow and orphan, were slow to act in Congress and granted pensions and increases with a hesitating and niggardly hand, as we have seen.

At the Pension Bureau they struck from the rolls the names of thousands of needy and deserving pensioners. In passing on claims they were swift to adjudicate unfavorably but exceedingly slow to allow pensions. Let the old soldiers remember the few bills passed; the many vetoed; the fact that at the Bureau of Pensions in 1894 and 1895 the Democratic Administration allowed 34 per cent of the claims examined and rejected 66 per cent; that in 1896, when it did its best, trying to influence the election, it only allowed 43 per cent and rejected 58 per cent.

During the entire year since H. Clay Evans became Commissioner of Pensions, 154,445 pension claims have been finally adjudicated, and of these 79,298, or 52 per cent, have been allowed, and 75,147, or 48 per cent, have been rejected or held for further evidence. The Bureau has proceeded with great care, and in thousands of the cases not allowed the Bureau has held and is holding them for additional necessary evidence. There has been no veto of a special pension bill, and every patriotic citizen knows that President McKinley, himself an old soldier, will not tolerate an illiberal pension policy or an injustice to an old comrade in arms.

During the first nine months of the present fiscal year the pension roll was increased by the addition of 15,000 more names than were lost by death, remarriage, and the arrival of minors at the age of 16 years. During the year ending April 1, 1898, the loss to the roll was as follows:

From death	37,855
Remarriage	1,421
Minors arrived at age.....	2,284
Failure to claim pension.....	3,583
Other causes	3,194

Total..... 48,317

During the year ending June 30, 1895, 37,060 original claims were filed. For the year 1896, 33,749 such claims were filed, while for the year ending April 1, 1898, 61,613 original claims and 164,438 claims for increase—a total of 226,051—were filed. It is easy to see how impossible it has been for the Commissioner to examine and adjudicate all these claims, and when we consider the rejections and failure to reach claims, and the consequent disappointments, in connection with the misrepresentations made by politicians of the opposing political party for partisan purposes, it is not difficult to understand how undeserved is the criticism to which the Pension Bureau has been subjected.

Common prudence suggests and demands that every case be thoroughly examined. If by inadvertence or neglect an undeserved pension is allowed, the enemies of the pension system and of the old soldiers themselves seize upon the fact and herald it far and wide as an evidence of laxness and corruption in the Pension Bureau and of frauds on the part of the pensioners themselves.

A ROLL OF HONOR.

No class of citizens in our great country is more interested in a just and an honest administration of the pension laws than the old soldiers. The pension roll always has been, now is, and always must be maintained "a roll of honor." The fact that an old soldier's name appears on that roll should guarantee that he was a loyal man, that he was a brave man, that he served faithfully and honorably, and that he received wounds or incurred disabilities in the service and in the line of duty, or that he is now suffering from disabilities that prevent his earning a support by his manual labor.

The generous hand of a just Government will always be open to such as these; and our patriotic people, loving liberty and good government, determined that our institutions shall endure, proud of our past and confident of our future as a nation, admiring the defenders of the national honor and life and ever willing to give them encouragement and recognize their brave deeds and care for those who defended the flag when it needed defenders, or who shall hereafter inscribe additional glorious victories upon its broad and ample folds, will not fail to maintain and perpetuate our pension system.

But honors are for those to whom honor is due, and pensions are for the deserving. The pension laws should be so framed and so executed as to create confidence in the minds of all our citizens that the $150,000,000 annually expended under their provisions is given to those who have just claims upon the resources and generosity of a grateful Republic.

This large amount of money to meet the just claims of our pensioners will be required but a few years longer. Year by year the soldiers and sailors and marines and their widows are answering to the last roll call. In a very few years the last survivor of the Mexican and Indian wars will be in his grave, and fifty years hence the last survivor of the war of the rebellion will have passed over the river to his eternal rest under the shade of the trees on the evergreen shores.

Nearly all who incurred pensionable disabilities in the service are now on the rolls and the main additions by reason of past service will come in under the act of June 27, 1890, where the maximum allowed is $12 per month.

THE DEATH ROLL.

During the last five years pensioners have died as follows:

1893.....	25,005	1896.....	29,393
1894.....	23,070	1897.....	31,960
1895.....	27,816

As only two-thirds of the survivors are on the rolls, it is safe to say that at least 25,000 of the comrades of the war of the rebellion die each year.

By reason of deaths and other causes the decrease in pension payments in 1897 was $5,684,081. The increase in the figures before given was caused by the addition of new names and the granting of increase applications. It will be seen that when the addition of new names in considerable numbers ceases the decrease in the amount of pension payments will be very rapid.

CARE FOR OUR DEFENDERS.

In times like the present, when our standing or Regular Army is being increased, and the increase is probably permanent, and we are calling into the field a quarter of a million of volunteers for service in other climes, and in a war with a powerful nation, which must be waged under unfavorable climatic conditions, and the time of the termination of which is problematical, the patriotic impulses of our people are stirred to their very depths, and the financial ability and stability of our nation is being again tested.

Our war expenses alone will reach $1,000,000 per day, and probably there will be considerable additions to the pension rolls. Even if the bullets and shells of the enemy do little execution, disease will do its work, and in treating this subject we must consider not only present conditions but probabilities and possibilities.

But thus far there has been no flinching, and it is indeed a matter of congratulation that since the outbreak of hostilities with Spain we have seen little disposition to oppose just and meritorious pension claims. Thirty-three years ago one section of this country was arrayed in arms against the other. On both sides during the civil war more than half a million men met premature death. Bitterness was engendered, and the payment of pensions from the General Treasury to the Union soldiers has sometimes been bitterly opposed from a sectional standpoint.

But to-day the boys, all wearing the blue, are gathering from East, West, North, and South, all under one flag and with one common purpose. Generals who commanded opposing armies in the late civil war are now serving with each other. The old Union general commands or is commanded by an ex-Confederate general, and all together they move forward to maintain the supremacy of the Union and advance the cause of human liberty. The sons of veterans, Confederate and Union alike, strap on the knapsack, shoulder the musket, and march away to battle.

When the battle is on, these boys are found side by side and shoulder to shoulder, charging the enemy and vying with each other to be foremost at Santiago and first to plant the Stars and Stripes upon the battlements of Morro Castle. Their names and the names of their infant children and widows will go on the pension rolls together, and hereafter we shall rouse no sectional and, I trust, no partisan cry when pensions are mentioned. Whatever our political affiliations, we all love "Old Glory" and desire the growth and prosperity of our common country. All good citizens will be ever ready to care for those who face death on the battlefield or contend for victory on the high seas.

May 1, 1898, our brave seamen crushed a Spanish fleet at Manila, and July 4 saw the second and more formidable one in ruins on the shores of Cuba. All thanks and praise and glory to the magnificent Dewey and the splendid Schley. Heroes both, but not more heroic and brave and devoted were these commanders than were each officer and man under them. Every man did his duty, and victory glorifies the nation. Shafter and Wheeler have crowded the Spanish army within the intrenchments at Santiago, but the heroic work was done by the officers and men under them. Death was abroad and disease lurks amid the marshes and tangled thickets, but our boys and the flag are still there. Let us remember the dead and the disabled of this and of all our wars. Heroes all. All deserve and shall receive honor and praise, but something more is their due.

All such are and always will be the wards of the nation, and a grateful people will see to it that ample provision is made for those who are disabled, those who are needy, and for their widows and dependent relatives. From this day on all sections of our country are to be interested alike in wise and liberal, yet reasonable, pension legislation, whether it be general or special. Therefore, in the enactment of all laws on this subject, the Representatives in Congress should be actuated by a desire to encourage patriotism, reward merit, care for those who have just demands on the generosity of the Republic, and so promote the best interests of our great, glorious, and common country.

As a sample of plain evasion of truth and misrepresentation I insert the following letter, written by a Democratic member of this House, who, at the writing, had had three of his own bills favorably reported and one passed and then a law by the approval of the President. As the cases were meritorious, the committee is proud of its action, but must express its regret that the beneficiaries of the bills referred to are represented by a gentleman whose attainments in a certain direction indicate that he is a lineal descendant of Ananias and Sapphira, and that he is fully able and willing to maintain the reputation of the Ananias family.

[Fifty-fifth Congress. Josiah D. Hicks, Pa., chairman; Edward Sauerhering, Wis.; Winfield S. Kerr, Ohio; John M. Mitchell, N. Y.; Walter Reeves, Ill.; William C. Lovering, Mass.; James H. Davidson, Wis.; William L. Ward, N. Y.; William Sulzer, N. Y.; Champ Clark, Mo.; Thomas Y. Fitzpatrick, Ky.; James R. Campbell, Ill.; John H. Stephens, Tex. T. S. Davis, clerk.]

COMMITTEE ON PATENTS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., April 25, 1898.

DEAR MADAM: I have your letter of late date. If there is any earthly way to pass a pension claim through this Congress, I have failed to discover it. Occasionally a Republican Congressman gets one through for the rich widow of some officer, but for a Democrat to get one allowed for some worthy poor woman or man seems impossible. I do not expect to get one bill passed out of sixty-five introduced by me. The Dingley bill does not bring in enough money to run the Government, and the Republicans are trying to make the pensioners pay the balance by keeping them out of their just dues.

Yours, very truly,

Mrs. LYDIA LOLLAR, Sullivan, Mo.

CHAMP CLARK.

Remember, the gentleman from Missouri had had three of his own bills favorably reported and one passed and approved by the President.

The Dingley bill has done remarkably well in bringing in money, and this Congress has done more for the old soldiers and their widows and orphans in seven months than the Democratic party did in four years. The Dingley tariff bill will more than support the Government, aside from the expenses of the war, and even Democrats know or ought to know the fact.

It may be that the gentleman who wrote that letter had not discovered any "earthly way" to pass a private pension bill through the Fifty-fifth Congress; but the Committee on Invalid Pensions had discovered the way, and had steadfastly and patriotically pursued it.

At the time that letter was written its author knew that more than 250 private pension bills had already been reported favorably to the House, and that more than 150 had passed. He also knew, or ought to have known, that nearly every one was in aid of a private soldier, a private soldier's widow, or a dependent child or parent of some defender of the flag long since dead. He also knew, or might have known, that in every case the pension or increase of pension had been given to relieve the pressing necessities and wants of the needy and deserving claimant. He also knew, or might have known, that the Fifty-fifth Congress has reported 115 pension bills introduced by Democratic and Populist members of this House, many more than their proportion.

If the gentleman pleads ignorance of the facts, he still stands before the bar of public opinion convicted, for he who asserts as a fact something he does not know is equally guilty with the one who willfully misstates a fact within his knowledge. I regret the necessity of calling attention to this letter, but in no other way can I defend the Fifty-fifth Congress against this gross and outrageous slander. In no other way can I reach the ten hundred thousand old soldiers whose minds the gentleman would seek to poison by such misrepresentation. The baseness of the slander will the more fully appear as I proceed.

I shall be pardoned for exhibiting some considerable feeling on this subject for, as I am charged, as chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, with caring for the rights of the old soldiers, my comrades of thirty-three years ago, and with whom I marched and "drank from the same canteen," the statement is a personal reflection on me, and the Committee on Invalid Pensions, as well as the Republican party and the Fifty-fifth Congress. I regret being compelled by this letter and many more of the same false tenor now in my possession, to give any partisan tinge to these remarks, but, sir, when such charges are falsely and evidently maliciously made, my plain duty as a citizen, and as a member of this House demands that the truth be plainly and fearlessly spoken.

More than 1,500 private pension bills, with all the papers on file at the Bureau and the great mass of testimony filed with the committee, have been carefully examined and considered by the Committee on Invalid Pensions alone. But one bill allowing a pension or an increase of pension in excess of $50 per month has passed the House, and that was given to a private soldier. Only two bills granting pensions or increasing the pensions of general officers have been reported, and only twelve bills granting pension or increasing the pension of general officer's widows have been reported.

One bill has been reported and passed increasing the pension of a widow of a commander in the United States Navy, and one increasing the pension of the widow of a captain in that service.

Particular and careful attention has been given to the claims of private soldiers with good records and of their widows and dependent, helpless children, and in every case where a pension or an increase has been asked for any person, recognition has been refused unless the necessitous circumstances of the applicant justified and demanded action. It should be remembered by the old soldiers, officers and privates alike, and by the Representatives in Congress, that the Government has not undertaken, does not undertake, to fully support the old soldiers, seamen, or marines, or their widows, but only to afford a reasonable degree of aid. This is all any nation assumes to do.

Mr. FARIS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. RAY of New York. Certainly.

Mr. FARIS. I should like to ask my friend to state to the House if it is true that he has received the original of that letter which he read.

Mr. RAY of New York. I have seen the original letter. It is on file at the Pension Bureau. But I will not call the names of other gentlemen of this House. This is the wickedest letter of them all, but I have five more written by Democratic members of this House making the same charge and to the same effect.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, if it does not discommode my friend I would like to ask him just in that connection if it is not true that in the Pension Office, under the general pension laws, in the lately expired fiscal year, in the settlement of pension claims, there has not been $8,000,000 more expended than was expended during the prior year?

Mr. RAY of New York. I hope my friend will not lead me from one subject to another. I have that here and I am coming to it in just a moment.

Mr. CANNON. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. RAY of New York. I am coming to it in just a moment.

Mr. CANNON. When the gentleman comes to revise, he can just strike it out, because I did not know he was coming to that.

Mr. RAY of New York. No; it is all right. I am glad the gentleman asked me.

Mr. HANDY. Will the gentleman after a while come to the subject before the House in his discussion?

Mr. RAY of New York. I am discussing the subject now. It is a motion to give a person a pension, and I am discussing the reasons for it.

Mr. BERRY. I should like to ask the gentleman if the history he is giving of the action of the present House is for the purpose of influencing votes at the coming election?

Mr. RAY of New York. Not at all; it is for the purpose—

Mr. FARIS. The gentleman from New York does not need to apologize for his speech.

Mr. BERRY. No; I do not want any apology, and do not propose to make any.

Mr. RAY of New York. Let me state what the purpose of it is. I do not believe that the great majority of the Democrats on the floor of this House approve that letter. I do not believe that they approve of spreading broadcast any such statement as that.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. May I suggest to the gentleman—

Mr. RAY of New York. Just a moment. I do believe that the great majority of the Democratic members of this House are and intend to be honest, and I believe they would scorn such an act as that, a misrepresentation—

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Let me suggest to the gentleman—

Mr. HANDY. I make the point of order that the gentleman from New York is not discussing the subject before the House, and I make this point of order because he has made a personal attack on an absent member of the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. I have made no personal attack upon the gentleman.

Mr. HANDY. I understood him to say in reference to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] that he was not honest.

Mr. RAY of New York. I did not. I read a letter—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will hear the gentleman from New York on the point of order.

Mr. RAY of New York. I am speaking to this bill, stating the reason why we should grant the pension.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BALL. I make the point of order that the gentleman from New York stated, in order to abuse the privilege of this House, that nothing of a partisan nature should be said by him in his remarks.

Mr. RAY of New York. I said there was only one thing that could be so construed, and that related to a member of this House, and that I have given to you.

Mr. BALL. That member is absent.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Now, may I suggest to the gentleman—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is not in order.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. It is unfair to this side of the House—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion made by the gentleman from New York to nonconcur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. May I ask the gentleman a question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is not entitled to the floor.

Mr. MOODY. I move that the gentleman from New York be allowed to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts moves that the gentleman from New York be allowed to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Now, I want to ask the gentleman from New York this question: Is it not true that the majority of the Democrats on this floor have been liberal with regard to pensions?

Mr. RAY of New York. That is what I say.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. We want you to go down on the record as saying that.

Mr. RAY of New York. That is what I have said; what I have just stated. What I complain of is that any member of this House should write that letter. That is all.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. RAY of New York. Certainly.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Did you not know that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] was absent?

Mr. RAY of New York. No, I did not. I supposed he was here.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. You know it now.

Mr. RAY of New York. If you say he is.

Mr. GIBSON. He will have an opportunity to see it. It will be published in the RECORD.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID (to Mr. RAY of New York). Have you seen him to-day?

Mr. RAY of New York. That I can not say. I have repeatedly seen him about the House here.

Mr. CANNON. Tell the truth, whether he is here or not.

Mr. RAY of New York. I do not know whether I have seen him to-day. I have seen him almost always here.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Have you seen him here since the 3d of July?

Mr. RAY of New York. I have not kept track of Mr. CLARK, but I have seen him here pretty constantly.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as to the reason why we should nonconcur, I will say that an influence has been brought to bear to cut down some of the pension claims; and so I am calling attention to the further fact in this connection that during the years 1894, 1895, and 1896, up to March, 1897, the Pension Bureau was granting pensions—

Mr. HANDY. I make the point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the question before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will confine himself to the bill before the House, and the motion is to nonconcur in the amendment of the Senate—

Mr. RAY of New York. That is what I am doing.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Reducing the pension from $30 to $24.

Mr. RAY of New York. That is what I am doing.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks not. The gentleman is not in order in making a general speech on this motion.

Mr. GIBSON. Did not the gentleman from New York get unanimous consent to make some general remarks?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He had unanimous consent to print remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. GIBSON. My recollection is that his request for unanimous consent was to make some general remarks in connection with his motion, and that—

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I call for the regular order.

Mr. GIBSON. He asked unanimous consent to print remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. RAY of New York. And table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is not in order.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. He was asking unanimous consent—

Mr. RAY of New York. I have had unanimous consent.

Mr. HANDY. Regular order.

Mr. BALL. I will give notice that the gentleman can not get unanimous consent and then abuse the privilege of the House.

Mr. PERKINS. I think it will be found that the gentleman rose in response to an inquiry, and stated that he desired to discuss the bill, and further to make some general remarks, and that he made a request to that effect.

Mr. GIBSON. That was the request, that he be allowed to submit some general remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not so understand it, and certainly no such request was put to the House.

Mr. FARIS. We can stand it very well to notice the side on which the truth is attempted to be suppressed in this debate. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is not in order. The question is on the motion to nonconcur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. RAY of New York. I am trying to address the House on that amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has already transgressed the rules of the House, and under the rules will take his seat.

Mr. RAY of New York. I understood, Mr. Speaker, that a motion was just made that I be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion was made and adopted. Then the gentleman proceeded, and the point of order was made, and the Chair sustained the point of order, that the gentleman was not confining himself to the motion before the House.

Mr. MOODY. I renew my motion.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. Regular order.

Mr. MOODY. I move that the gentleman from New York be allowed to proceed in order.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent, upon the distinct ground that nothing that can possibly be said by the gentleman from New York can possibly hurt or injure anywhere or anybody, that he be permitted to say whatever he pleases.

Mr. HANDY. Because the gentleman from New York has assailed an absent member, I object.

Mr. DE GRAFFENREID. I object on the same ground.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made. The gentleman from New York will proceed to discuss the motion before the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. Well, Mr. Speaker, as I understand, I stated that an effort had been made to bring influences to bear to cut down these pension bills, and my motion was, I think, to concur.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Your motion was to nonconcur.

Mr. RAY of New York. To nonconcur. [Laughter.] The motion was to nonconcur, and the proposition was to cut down the amount of this pension bill as passed by the House. Now, am I correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment for the information of the House.

Mr. HANDY. For the information of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. The gentleman has addressed the Chair on the question, and does not know on what question he is addressing the Chair.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four."

Mr. RIDGELY. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. RAY of New York. I think I was right.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the absent member, my colleague [Mr. CLARK], I state that if present he would make no objection whatever to anything the gentleman from New York might say when it appears in the RECORD that he absolutely does not know what is before the House and what he is talking about.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York.

Mr. RIDGELY. The chairman of our Pension Committee—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. RAY of New York. I am trying to listen to his question.

Mr. RIDGELY. The question is this: You have stated repeatedly there is an influence bearing upon pensions for the purpose of reducing them. Will you please state to us from whom and where that comes that is to bring about a reduction of the pension roll?

Mr. RAY of New York. I have been trying to explain that.

Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri. I move that the gentleman be given unlimited time to explain his explanation.

Mr. RAY of New York. If the motion is granted, that is all right. Do I have that consent, Mr. Speaker? I ask that the question be put before the House. The gentleman made a request—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to proceed on the general subject of pensions.

Mr. HANDY. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Delaware objects.

Mr. HANDY. No; it was not a request for unanimous consent that was submitted by the gentleman from Missouri, it was a motion.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I have unanimous consent to print already—

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I am with the chairman of the committee, and I hope these gentlemen will give him time; but when he says he already has the consent of the House to print a speech in the RECORD, I beg leave to differ with him, and the reporter's notes will show that consent was simply given to print a table.

Mr. RAY of New York. And extend my remarks.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. And, so far as I am concerned, if you will give us a few minutes to reply, we do not care.

Mr. RAY of New York. I desire to know what the unanimous consent was.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Well, the minutes of the reporter will show. I am quite sure it was to print some tables.

Mr. RAY of New York. It was to extend my remarks as well.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. If the gentleman from New York yields the floor, I demand the regular order.

Mr. RAY of New York. I do not yield the floor.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I now have the reporter's notes of the matter, which I will read:

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House nonconcur in the amendments of the Senate. In support of that motion, I desire to submit some remarks to the House. As I have some tables here which are somewhat lengthy and perhaps wearisome, I ask permission that I may extend my remarks and insert these tables without reading them.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that it is apparent what the gentleman asked consent for, and it was to print the tables.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is no question before the House now. When the gentleman from New York prints his remarks in the RECORD, that question will come up.

Mr. PERKINS. Later on the Speaker submitted the question, "Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none."

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. And yet we have to go back to what the request of the gentleman from New York was.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not the question before the House. Does the gentleman from New York desire to occupy the floor on this motion?

Mr. RAY of New York. I do, if my Democratic friends will keep quiet and not interrupt me. I do not desire to spoil my voice in overcoming their opposition to pension legislation.

I was showing why we should nonconcur with this amendment which cuts down the pension as allowed by the House; and I desire to say now that the main reason why we ought not to cut down these pensions, when the House has once adopted them, and passed them, through influence such as I have referred to, or any influences of the opposition, when the committee has passed upon that question, and when the House has passed upon that question, is that now in this month of July, 1898, when we have a great war in progress, that is again testing the strength of the patriotism of the people of the United States, we should do all we can to encourage the boys at the front. Let them understand that there is a patriotic people and a patriotic Congress behind them. It is for that reason that I call attention to the letter to which I referred.

Mr. Speaker, during the war of the rebellion there were nearly three million of men called into the field. A half a million lost their lives and never returned. Now they are passing away and being dropped from the pension rolls, during the last year 31,000 of them and during the four years that preceded on an average of about 25,000 a year.

Mr. HANDY. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman is not discussing the question before the House; that he is engaged in the general question as to the rate at which pensioners have died.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. RAY of New York. But, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. HANDY. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to nonconcur.

Mr. RAY of New York. I insist, Mr. Speaker, that I must be in order. Here is a proposition to cut down a pension claim—

Mr. HANDY. That has already been settled by the decision of the Chair, and I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to nonconcur.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. [Cries of "Regular order!" "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HANDY. Can that be done while the House is dividing, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York was addressing the Chair while the Chair put the question, and the Chair thinks the gentleman was not too late. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RAY of New York. It is hard for me to understand, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. SHATTUC. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RAY of New York. I will try to do so. I understood I was to proceed in order. I understood the question before the House to be the reason why we should not cut down these pension claims, and I was trying to give the reasons why, and while I was doing that this question was raised. Of course I was not intending to violate the rule or wander away from the proper subject of discussion. I was trying to address myself to the question why we should not cut down the amount appropriated in this bill. Now, do I understand the Chair has ruled that the remarks I am making are not in order—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has so ruled.

Mr. RAY of New York. Wait one minute, Mr. Speaker—and that I could not proceed— [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has so ruled. Under the rule the gentleman should take his seat. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The motion to nonconcur was agreed to.

Mr. RAY of New York. Now, Mr. Speaker, as to each one of the bills where we have concurred with the Senate amendments I move to reconsider and to lay those several motions on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York did not include in his motion a request for a conference.

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House ask a conference with the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of Mr. RAY of New York, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. CASTLE as conferees on the part of the House.

PRINTING WAR REVENUE ACT.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago the House agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate providing for printing 20,000 copies of the war revenue law of 1898, with paper cover, 13,500 for the use of the House. This number is deemed to be too small, and the chairman of the Committee on Printing informs me that he has already arranged that the resolution adopted by the House providing for printing a larger number shall be adopted by the Senate. I therefore ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the resolution of the Senate was adopted, the object being to have that resolution lie over with the expectation that the Senate will concur in our resolution for printing the larger number.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution of the Senate for printing copies of the war-revenue law was adopted. Is there objection?

Mr. BAILEY. We would like some explanation of this matter.

Mr. PERKINS. This proposition was made at my suggestion. Yesterday morning the House adopted a resolution for printing 100,000 copies of the war revenue law, giving this House 67,000 copies and the Senate 33,000. About the same time the Senate passed the resolution which came over this morning, and in which we have concurred, providing for printing 20,000 copies—13,500 for the use of the House and 6,500 for the use of the Senate.

The number thus proposed for the House is entirely inadequate; and I have suggested to Senators that the Senate concur in our resolution and that we let this resolution go by. Otherwise we would have to amend the Senate resolution and send it back, or arrange the matter in some other way.

Mr. LENTZ. Why not amend the Senate resolution and send it back?

Mr. RAY of New York. We propose to let it lie on the table.

Mr. HULL. If we reconsider the Senate resolution, it will be in our power to take it up at any time if the Senate should not concur in our resolution.

Mr. LENTZ. May it not be too late?

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman, that the action of the House upon the Senate resolution be reconsidered?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAY of New York. I understand the Senate has already adopted our resolution. I therefore move that this Senate resolution lie on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This resolution will go to the table, and will be referred to the Committee on Printing in regular order.

INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. CANNON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill making an appropriation to execute certain provisions of the act of Congress for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory.

Be it enacted, etc. That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 to execute certain provisions of the "Act for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved June 23, 1893.

Mr. CANNON. Pending the request for unanimous consent, I will ask to have read a letter from the Secretary of the Interior. The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, July 7, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to state that it is made the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to execute certain provisions of the act of Congress for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, commonly known as the Curtis bill, recently passed, which will involve some considerable expense, and for the payment of which no appropriation is made.

I therefore respectfully request that a joint resolution of Congress be passed before adjournment appropriating the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to execute the provisions of the act in question.

I have just had a conversation with Mr. SHERMAN and Mr. CURTIS in reference to the necessity for this appropriation, and they understand the matter, and Mr. SHERMAN said he would see you about it immediately.

I deem the matter of the highest importance, as the Department will be seriously crippled in carrying this law into effect without the appropriation stated.

Very respectfully,

C. N. BLISS,
Secretary.

Hon. J. G. CANNON,
House of Representatives.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was read a first and second time, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ENGROSSMENT AND ENROLLMENT OF BILLS, ETC.

Mr. DALZELL. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That during the remaining days of the present session of Congress the engrossing and enrolling of bills and joint resolutions by printing, as provided by act of Congress approved March 2, 1895, may be suspended, and the said bills and joint resolutions may be written by hand.

Mr. DALZELL. I have introduced this resolution at the request of the Clerk of the House, who says that it has been customary to pass such a resolution in the closing hours of the session of Congress ever since we changed the law in 1895 with regard to the engrossment and enrollment of bills.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and adopted.

COMPILATION OF CUSTOMS-REVENUE ACTS.

Mr. DALZELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the Committee on Ways and Means be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ a clerk for the purpose of compiling the legislative history of all customs-revenue acts from the First to the Fifty-fifth Congresses, inclusive, said clerk to be paid monthly, out of the contingent fund of the House, on vouchers approved by the Committee on Accounts, the same compensation fixed by law for the clerk of the Committee on Ways and Means: Provided, That compensation shall not exceed $2,000. Such publication to be under the supervision of the subcommittee heretofore appointed.

Mr. DALZELL. This resolution was agreed upon unanimously by the Committee on Ways and Means this morning.

Mr. BARTLETT. Have we not already such a compilation as this resolution contemplates?

Mr. DALZELL. We have not; and we have suffered for want of such a compilation for a long time.

Mr. BARTLETT. I think there is a book claiming to be such a compilation from the First Congress down to 1894.

Mr. DALZELL. There is no such book. What is intended to be contained in this compilation can not be found in a hundred different volumes. This is a proposition which has been under consideration from time to time since the Fiftieth Congress, and it has been indorsed by every chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means from that Congress down to the present time.

Mr. BARTLETT. I have no objection to the resolution.

Mr. RIDGELY. Will $3,000 be sufficient to secure the performance of this work?

Mr. DALZELL. I think so.

Mr. SIMPSON. This is to be a historical document, as I understand?

Mr. DALZELL. Absolutely; and nonpartisan. A history of the proceedings with reference to tariff legislation. It is intended to give a review of the legislation had in reference to this important branch of our governmental service, and the speeches on each side on the introduction of a revenue bill by the leaders on the floor; and it contemplates also to give this information beginning with the very first Congress of the United States, and ending with the tariff legislation in the Fifty-fifth Congress.

Mr. SIMPSON. And not to exceed the cost of $3,000?

Mr. DALZELL. Not to exceed that cost.

Mr. RIDGELY. What about the printing of it?

Mr. DALZELL. That is a matter that will come up further on. After the compilation has been secured, we will make provision for the printing.

Mr. LOVE. Under the supervision of the committee itself?

Mr. DALZELL. Yes; under a subcommittee of the Committee on Ways and Means, represented by both parties. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] is one of the subcommittee appointed for this purpose.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say, in support of the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that the work in contemplation, if well done, will be, in my judgment, an invaluable publication.

Mr. GROSVENOR. In reference to those gentlemen who may object to the suggestion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, allow me to say that there is a supervision over this work to be exercised by three members of the Committee on Ways and Means, of which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] is one.

Mr. BAILEY. I think, Mr. Speaker, that if we can have the work properly and impartially done, and I believe we can, it will be a matter of great importance and of almost inestimable value.

Mr. SIMPSON. I understood the gentleman from Pennsylvania to say that the "opening speeches" of the "leaders of the minority and majority" shall be appended to this publication. But as there are some differences of opinion on the Democratic side as to free raw materials, do I understand that these "speeches" are to be printed showing exactly where the two wings of the party stand in reference to the matter? That is to say, whether we are to have one speech in favor of free trade and the other opposed to free trade or the introduction of raw material?

Mr. DALZELL. It is intended to be a nonpartisan historic work, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. Well, Mr. Speaker, if two Democrats differ and made conflicting speeches, as has been suggested, that is the misfortune of the Democratic party. One of the speeches will be mine, and I am willing to stand by that speech now and hereafter. I think that it is exactly in line with our platform.

Mr. SIMPSON. Well, I only wanted the information. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The resolution was considered, and agreed to.

[Cries of "Regular order!"]

HERBERT W. LEACH.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded, and the Chair lays before the House the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6482) granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach, with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in line 6, the words "of Brockton, Mass."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BERRY. May I be heard on the amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. BERRY. A short time ago we had the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] addressing himself to the House upon a bill for one Mr. Hottenstein. He made some lengthy remarks with reference to the matter, and yet I do not think, in the whole course of his discussion, he mentioned the name of the beneficiary of the bill. In fact, I do not think he knew the name of the man who sought the benefit, but he proceeded to argue the general question—

Mr. RAY of New York (interrupting). Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Kentucky is not addressing himself to the question before the House.

Mr. BERRY. It strikes me that it is a remarkable degree of assurance, at this time, for the gentleman from New York, after consuming three-quarters of an hour on a bill for the relief of Mr. Hottenstein, whom he did not name—

Mr. RAY of New York. I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the question pending.

Mr. BERRY. I think I am addressing myself as closely to the question as the gentleman from New York did. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAY of New York. I make the point of order.

Mr. BERRY. If the gentleman from New York made any remark pertinent to that bill, I have not discovered it. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAY of New York. I make the point of order—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky has not proceeded far enough for the Chair to determine whether he is proceeding in order or not.

Mr. BERRY. I want to talk of something pertinent to the Army of the United States. I want to talk on a matter that is connected closely, and necessarily, with its operations. I propose to comment, for a moment, on the conduct of Commodore Schley [applause], who has sunk the navy of Spain—

Mr. RAY of New York. I make the point of order that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the bill before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BERRY. Well, Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted to proceed, I will speak as closely as possible to the resolution now before the House. At all events I will make an effort to do so.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule the gentleman should take his seat.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed.

Several MEMBERS. In order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Delaware moves that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

Mr. BERRY. It is always supposed—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman wait until the Chair can put the question? The gentleman from Delaware moves that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

The question was taken; and Mr. RAY of New York demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 52, noes 1.

Mr. RAY of New York. No quorum, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BAILEY. I hope the gentleman will not make that point on a pension bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York makes the point of no quorum.

Mr. BAILEY. A parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know if this is a pension bill now pending?

Several MEMBERS. Yes.

Mr. RAY of New York. The speech is not addressed to that subject.

Mr. HANDY. I hope the gentleman from New York will not filibuster against pensions.

Mr. RAY of New York. The speech is not a pension speech. That is the trouble.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Gentlemen will be in order until the Chair can count.

Pending the count.

Mr. RAY of New York said: I will withdraw the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this question the ayes are 53, the noes 1. The ayes have it; and the gentleman from Kentucky will proceed in order.

Mr. BERRY. I shall endeavor, sir, in what I have to say, to adhere as closely to the question under consideration as the gentleman from New York, at least, in the case of Mr. Hottenstein, and I shall adhere as closely to the question at all points certainly as he did. And yet I do not expect to keep as close to the question as Commodore Schley did to the Spanish fleet on the coast of Cuba. [Applause.] And I am sure he was very much further from the question when he addressed the House than was the distinguished Commodore when he attacked the Spanish fleet beyond Santiago.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to the question before the House.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, that is trifling. Such a point ought not to be entertained.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. RAY of New York. I now insist upon the enforcement of the rule.

Mr. BERRY. Will the gentleman give me a little time—

Mr. HANDY. Can not the gentleman have an opportunity to make an introduction?

Mr. BERRY. As it is upon a naval question, I need a little leeway. [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. I move that the gentleman from Kentucky be allowed to proceed in order, and this time long enough to be permitted to get well started.

Mr. SIMPSON. No ship can go against such a wind as the gentleman from Kentucky is encountering.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Delaware moves that the gentleman from Kentucky be allowed to proceed in order.

Mr. LACEY. I make the point of order that that is not the motion. The motion submitted by the Chair is not the motion made by the gentleman from Delaware.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That was the motion stated by the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. LACEY. The motion made by the gentleman from Delaware was not as stated by the Chair.

Mr. HANDY. I move that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order, to suit the precise gentleman from Iowa.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion is not debatable. The gentleman from Delaware moves that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

The question being taken, Mr. RAY of New York demanded a division.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House is dividing.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 45, noes 1.

Mr. RAY of New York. No quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York makes the point of no quorum.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the gentleman from New York to please withdraw the point of no quorum.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Who is the gentleman from New York who makes the point?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. The gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] who is chairman of the Invalid Pensions Committee certainly does not want to put himself in the attitude of raising a question of no quorum against a worthy old soldier.

Mr. RAY of New York. I am putting myself in the attitude of raising the point of no quorum against the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY], who does not intend to address himself to the question. I raise the point of no quorum.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I ask the gentleman from New York not to make the point.

Mr. BERRY. The gentleman from New York—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This question is not debatable. All gentlemen will be seated.

Pending the count,

Mr. RAY of New York said: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this question the ayes are 45, the nays 1. The ayes have it, and the gentleman from Kentucky will proceed in order.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I thought in the closing hours of this session that it would be a proper subject of congratulation for all of us to remember that only yesterday a resolution was passed in the Senate which adds to this country the beautiful little Republic of Hawaii.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the question.

Mr. BERRY. The gentleman does not give me time. I think that the disconcerted—

Mr. RAY of New York. I raise the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I ask the gentleman from New York to withdraw the point of order—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Permission was given him to extend his remarks in the Record; he was shown the courtesy of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to concur.

Mr. BERRY. I desire to submit a few remarks on the motion to concur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana is recognized.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have the report of the committee—

Mr. BERRY. I desire to know how the gentleman is to take me off the floor?

Mr. COX. I move that the gentleman be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana has the floor.

Mr. BERRY. I have not given up the floor.

Mr. COX. He has not yielded the floor.

Mr. BERRY. I desire to incorporate as a part of my remarks—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky was compelled under the rules to yield the floor, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS] was recognized.

Mr. COX. The point of order was not—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. A point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York raised the point of order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. And the gentleman from Tennessee moved that the gentleman be allowed to proceed in order, which was the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS] has the floor.

Mr. COX. Well, before he proceeds—

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana has the floor.

Mr. COX. Well, now, I want to understand how the Speaker decides that— [Laughter.]

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I make the point of order—

Mr. COX. I have the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Kentucky was allowed by an order of the House to proceed in order—

Mr. COX. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (continuing). To discuss the question before the House. He had proceeded with the discussion, and the gentleman from New York made the point of order that he was not discussing the question.

Mr. COX. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustained the point of order—

Mr. COX. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (continuing). And, under the rule, the gentleman from Kentucky should take his seat.

Mr. COX. No; thereupon—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Thereupon the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS] rose and addressed the Chair, and the Chair recognized the gentleman from Indiana. Thereafter, when the gentleman from Indiana was trying to address the Chair, the gentleman from Tennessee rose.

Mr. COX. Now, you have got that a little wrong. No; thereupon, when the Chair decided the gentleman from Kentucky was not proceeding in order, I moved that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not recognize the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. COX. Oh, well, then it turns on a question of who was recognized.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. COX. All right; go ahead with it. [Laughter.]

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I am quite sure—

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Washington?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. For a question.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. The gentleman from Indiana yields to me for a request. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY] be permitted to proceed upon the line of his remarks for fifteen minutes, either now or at the close of the remarks of the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Washington for that purpose?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. At the close of my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana declines to yield for that purpose.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I do not understand the gentleman from Indiana to decline.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman stated that he yielded for a question.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. The Chair must have misunderstood. The gentleman yielded to me to make a request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Washington?

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. For the purpose of making a request, yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky may proceed in the line of his remarks for fifteen minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. HILL. I call for the regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. I should like to know who made the objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. The question before the House, Mr. Speaker, is, Shall this bill that proposes to give Herbert W. Leach a pension of $30 be cut down to $8? Now, it seems to me if this House appreciates and understands the services of this most worthy soldier, that purpose would not be considered for two minutes. I know sometimes we become a little obstreperous, especially when we feel that somebody has tried to make political capital out of what ought to be the highest form of patriotism and above all politics.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not confining himself to the question before the House.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Then I will be in order, Mr. Speaker. I know some gentlemen are a little touchy on some subjects—

Mr. RAY of New York. I raise the point of order that the gentleman is not confining himself to the question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will first hear the conclusion of the gentleman's sentence.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana (continuing). And I have heard that sometimes the guilty flee when no man pursueth. But to be entirely parliamentary, Mr. Speaker, for I have great respect for the chairman of the Invalid Pensions Committee that I have the honor to be a member of, and with whom I have worked this session and offered to the session before this one. There has been much time spent on this particular bill. It is true there were only fourteen meetings when there might have been over forty.

Mr. HANDY. I wish to ask the gentleman—

Mr. RAY of New York. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman is not confining himself to the question before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman be allowed to proceed in order. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Did the Chair decide that the gentleman was not in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did. The gentleman from Indiana moves that his colleague be permitted to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I desire to refer upon this subject to the report of the committee, which is No. 996, filed in this particular case; and therefore I take it it must be in order:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6482) granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach, have considered the same and report:

This is a bill enacting that Herbert W. Leach, who served under Commander George W. De Long in the ill-fated Jeannette arctic expedition, be placed on the pension roll.

The following report from the Navy Department shows the service rendered:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY, Washington, D. C., April 18, 1896.

SIR: Replying to your letter of the 17th instant, I have the honor to state that Herbert W. Leach enlisted at New York May 17, 1879, as seaman, for the cruise of the Jeannette, served on board of that vessel until she was lost, and was discharged June 1, 1893, by direction of the Secretary of the Navy.

Respectfully,

F. M. RAMSAY, Chief of Bureau.

Hon. H. C. LOUDENSLAGER,
House of Representatives.

The affidavits accompanying the bill show that the claimant's health has been practically destroyed by the terrible hardships, sufferings, and exposure endured during that memorable expedition, and that he has been rendered unable to earn a support at his usual avocation.

The facts are sworn to by the claimant and by Joseph M. Hutchins, chairman county commissioners, Hancock County, Me., and the latter states that the claimant is an honest, upright, and worthy man.

There are several precedents for pensioning the disabled survivors of the Jeannette expedition, and your committee believe that such precedents may safely be followed in this case.

The following amendment is recommended:

In line 5 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

Now, Mr. Speaker, here is the case of a man who embarked in this expedition, who stayed with it as long as life would permit. Has the time come in this House, in this American Congress, where there is no East, no West, no North, no South, where members vie with each other as to who shall do the most in the way of rendering justice to the old soldiers of the war of 1861 to 1865, when we stand here solidly in favor of the report made to the House saying that this pensioner ought to have $30, the chairman of the committee objects and speaks of this side of the House, if he will so have it, although it has been my feeling and my belief that the time has come when on these questions there should be no two sides of the House, where it was unparliamentary—not only unparliamentary, but almost unpatriotic; not only unpatriotic, but unfriendly toward the old soldier—for any gentleman, I care not from which side of the House he comes, whether he be a private on the Pension Committee or whether he be the honored chairman, to seek to inject into this discussion a matter of politics? The old soldier's cause should be above politics.

So, Mr. Speaker, I insist that the report of the committee of the House ought to be maintained. It ought to be maintained not because of the fact that there were a little over 4,000 pension bills introduced and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions—not only 4,000 pension bills referred and only 478 reported by the committee—but in the time this House was in session there were forty-eight nights set apart by resolution for the purpose of considering these meritorious—

Mr. RAY of New York. I make the point of order that the gentleman is not confining himself to the question before the House.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. If the gentleman will wait a moment, he will see that I am not out of order.

Mr. RAY of New York. I insist on the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair sustains the point of order. The question before the House is a very narrow one—

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I make the motion that my colleague [Mr. MIERS] be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question before the House is merely upon the amendment to strike out the words "of Brockton, Mass." The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROBINSON] moves that his colleague [Mr. MIERS] be allowed to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana will proceed in order. The Chair warns the gentleman that the Chair will not permit discussion under these circumstances to go beyond the question of striking out the words "of Brockton, Mass."

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. Then, Mr. Speaker, as I desire to be decorous and parliamentary, if the gentleman, after having taken the time that he has occupied, insists on his objection, I presume I can say nothing further on this question, and let him take the responsibility of closing the discussion on this occasion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on concurring in the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I ask that I may be permitted to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that he may be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. RAY of New York. To that I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. If the gentleman before making the objection—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I will say to the gentleman from New York that I will only undertake to answer the speech that he made, and show to the country that I have been a better friend to pension legislation than he has.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi rises to a parliamentary inquiry, and will state it.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. A gentleman, a member of the House, rises and makes a request, prefacing the request with the remark that he desires to discuss a particular motion then before the House. He has in his possession a long printed speech upon the general work of the session in connection with pension business. He has read sufficient of it for the Chair and the House to know what it contains. Now, my parliamentary inquiry is this: Do I understand the ruling of the Chair this morning to have been to the effect that no question can be raised as to what a gentleman can print under consent to print in the RECORD until after he shall have printed it?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks so. The Chair does not know that any person has a right to revise the gentleman's speech before it is put in print.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I wish to address myself to the parliamentary inquiry. The Speaker of this House, once since I have been a member, has instructed the stenographer not to insert in the RECORD things said upon the floor because they were not in order or not germane.

Now I make the point of order that what the gentleman from New York has uttered this morning and the balance which he proposes to put in the RECORD is not germane—has no bearing upon the question under discussion and upon which he made the request to extend his remarks. And I make the point of order that objection being made beforehand to the publication, the Chair has the right to rule now that nothing shall be published by him not consonant with the request made by him; and I make the further point that if he can proceed to insert in the RECORD, regardless of the terms of his request, what he pleases, then the gentleman from Indiana can proceed to insert matter in the RECORD and no question can arise upon what the gentleman from Indiana inserts until after it is inserted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Of course the gentleman will recognize the fact—

Mr. BAILEY (interrupting). If the Chair will indulge me for a moment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. In addition to what has been said by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], the Chair, if he will examine, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY], if he will examine, the official notes of the debate when that unanimous consent was granted, will find that I stated distinctly that it was granted with the understanding that if there was any desire on the part of this side of the House to reply, an opportunity would be given to do so.

I had the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MIERS] in mind at the time. He was on the floor, and the request of the gentleman from New York was granted by this side with the distinct and clear understanding that, if necessary, the gentleman from Indiana should have an opportunity of making a reply. The reporter's notes will show that before unanimous consent was granted that statement was made, and accepted by the gentleman from New York himself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is aware of the fact that there was some understanding by which the gentleman from New York had permission to extend his remarks to a certain extent, but did not know, of course, of any restriction such as the gentleman refers to. The Chair does not think there was enough said at that time in that direction to allow the gentleman from Indiana to proceed with a general discussion of pension matters on a measure of this kind when he is called to order. The Chair must take cognizance of the rules of the House and enforce them. There may have been some reason why a member should object or why the members generally should object—

Mr. BAILEY. If the Chair will permit me, my judgment is that the Chair will find, on examination, a distinct statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] that he would not object to any such reply to his remarks as the gentleman from Indiana had been proceeding to make.

Now, we have no objection whatever to a political speech, if the gentleman from New York saw fit to make such a speech, provided the gentleman from Indiana should be permitted an opportunity to reply. That was the only point at issue. The point of order was raised on the gentleman from New York on the ground that he was attacking an absent member of the House.

Mr. HANDY. That is it.

Mr. RAY of New York. Will the gentleman allow me a moment to say that he is entirely misinformed?

Mr. BAILEY. That is my information.

Mr. RAY of New York. The gentleman is misinformed. The gentleman from somewhere—the Lord knows where, for I do not know [laughter]—the gentleman from somewhere, while I was addressing the House, rose and made a point of order that I had made reference to a member of the House who was not present. I did not know of that fact. I simply read a letter written by him. After reading that I undertook to proceed with my remarks, and then the point of order was made that what I was saying was not in order, and no opposition was made at all on the ground that I was saying something in reference to an absent gentleman or any other gentleman on the floor.

Mr. BAILEY. But the gentleman from New York knows the fact that the attack of the gentleman upon an absent member would not be ground for a point of order. No rule of the House would be broken by any attack he might make on an absent member any more than upon one who was present; and the only way to discontinue the attack was to make the point of order that what the gentleman was saying was not germane to the question before the House. It is no offense against the rules to attack an absent member any more than it is to attack a present member, although it is different, of course, in morals and good behavior.

Mr. RAY of New York. I was not making an attack upon an absent member, but only reading a letter—

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman is incorrect in that statement, and the official notes will show that fact. They will show exactly the ground upon which the point of order was raised and what the gentleman from New York was saying at the time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state—

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the reporter's notes be read as to the question in controversy. The gentleman from New York was given a certain privilege before the House with the understanding that if he saw fit to make a political speech before the House good opportunity should be given for reply.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, speaking to the point of order made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi has not raised a point of order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I made a parliamentary inquiry in reference to the right of the gentleman from New York to make certain remarks—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair of course can not listen to a discussion on a mere parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HANDY. But the gentleman from Mississippi, I understood, Mr. Speaker, distinctly made a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There was no question before the House to make a point of order upon.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I make the point of order now, that it is the duty of the Speaker, that the request of the gentleman from New York to extend his remarks upon certain lines shall be confined to that particular subject.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point of order, on the ground that the rules do not require the Chair or enforce upon him the burden of reading every speech which is made upon the floor and put in the RECORD.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, upon that question I desire to be heard. If there is any branch of the service of the United States in which I feel an especial interest, having been once a naval soldier myself—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair feels himself compelled to call the gentleman to order.

Mr. BERRY. I am going to talk to the bill now before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This amendment simply relates to the striking out of the words "of Brockton, Mass."

Mr. BERRY. It relates to the striking out of a provision in a bill for the benefit of Edward W. Leech, who was on the ill-fated Jeannette.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Who was a sailor, and the gentleman is talking about sailors.

Mr. BERRY. He was a sailor connected with the Navy of the United States. The Chair certainly does not want simply to confine me to the two words of the amendment. I may at least be allowed a little latitude.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rules the gentleman should be confined to the question before the House, which is a very narrow one.

Mr. BERRY. I desire to do so, sir, and I desire to give the reasons why I am anxious to support this bill for the benefit of this man who rendered such distinguished service and lost his life in an effort to aid his country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not the question before the House. The gentleman from Kentucky is not in order and will take his seat, under the rule. The question is on the motion to concur in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

GEORGE S. WALTON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the bill (H. R. 7841) granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton, with Senate amendments thereto.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

WASHINGTON AND UNIVERSITY RAILROAD COMPANY.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9206) to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia, with Senate amendments thereto.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, would it be in order now for me to make a remark?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BERRY. I desire to make a few remarks upon this subject, as a very distinguished citizen of this country has rendered a great service to the United States lately and to the citizens of the District of Columbia. I mean Commodore Schley. I would like the privilege of making a few remarks upon that subject.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the question before the House.

Mr. BERRY. May I send to the desk and have read for information—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin makes the point that the gentleman from Kentucky is not addressing himself to the question before the House. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I move that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana moves that the gentleman from Kentucky be permitted to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky will proceed in order.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to send to the desk and have read as a part of my remarks a resolution which I ask the Clerk to report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 203) tendering the thanks of Congress to Commodore Schley, United States Navy, and the officers and men under his command.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thanks of Congress and of the American people are hereby tendered to Commodore Schley, United States Navy, and the officers and men under his command, for their heroic and distinguished conduct in destroying the Spanish fleet in Cuban waters on the 3d of July last.

Mr. GILLET of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts makes the point of order that the paper is not germane to the subject. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words in connection with the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not think any discussion is necessary on so plain a point as that. The question is on the motion to concur in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

WATER-MAIN TAXES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the bill (H. R. 5883) to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. BABCOCK. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

ALDEN B. THOMPSON.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 8164) granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson, of Farmvale, Hamilton County, Nebr., with the following Senate amendments:

Line 6, strike out "of Farmvale, Hamilton County, Nebr."
Line 8, strike out all after "Navy," down to and including line 9, and insert "and pay him a pension"

Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting a pension to Alden R. Thompson."

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

SARAH FRY.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 8950) increasing the pension of Mrs. Sarah Fry, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 4 strike out "upon" and insert "on."
In line 7 strike out "rated at" and insert "at the rate of."
In line 8 strike out "the pension now drawn by her" and insert "that she is now receiving."
Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Fry."

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

FELIX TAIT.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 9140) granting an increase of pension to Felix Tate, with the following Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:
"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension law, the name of Felix Tate, late a soldier in the Mexican war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month, in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

RHODE ISLAND AVENUE.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (S. 4571) to extend Rhode Island avenue, with House amendments.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin moves that the House further insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair announces as conferees on the part of the House Mr. BABCOCK, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, and Mr. COWHERD.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 6149. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases;

H. R. 9466. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Boyd;

H. R. 10051. An act to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants in the United States Army;

H. R. 10885. An act fixing pay and allowances of chaplains for volunteer regiments;

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

H. R. 10885. An act making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Senate Con. Res. No. 47. Authorizing the Public Printer to print 6,000 copies of the report of the special commissioner to the Paris Exposition.

Senate concurrent resolution No. 46.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed for the use of the Department of Agriculture 12,000 copies of the bulletin on nut culture in the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution No. 41.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed of public act No. 133, "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," with marginal notes and index prepared by the Clerk, and bound in paper, 100,000 copies, 67,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 33,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

SIGNAL OFFICERS ON THE STAFF OF CORPS COMMANDERS.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, with the following Senate amendments:

In line 4 strike out "twenty-fifth" and insert "twenty-second."
In line 8, after "officer," insert: "Provided, That so much of the act of Congress approved August 6, 1894, as reduces the grade of the Third Signal Officer of the Army is hereby repealed, and the colonel therein provided for shall be Assistant Chief Signal Officer and appointed, by regular promotion, upon the approval of this resolution: Provided further, That the laws authorizing the detail and assignment of the officers of the Army to duty in the Weather Bureau be, and are hereby, repealed."

Amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, and for other purposes."

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment to a bill passed by the House and passed by the Senate. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

SECTIONS 1698 AND 1734, REVISED STATUTES.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. 8925) to amend sections 1698 and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read at length.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I desire to inquire what committee that bill comes from?

Mr. CANNON. I think it had better be referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. There seems to be nobody in charge of it, and it is too important a matter to pass.

Mr. COX. There is no doubt about that. I do not think any committee has passed upon it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

APPROPRIATIONS TO PAY SESSION EMPLOYEES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I propose to call up an appropriation bill, just reported, for the purpose of agreeing to a Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes, with the following Senate amendment:

On page 2, after line 17, insert:

"WAR DEPARTMENT.

"To enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of officers and soldiers who die at military camps or who are killed in action or who die in the field at places outside of the limits of the United States, $200,000."

Mr. CANNON. I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to place in the RECORD a letter from the Secretary of War covering this Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a letter from the Secretary of War in reference to the bill the Senate amendment to which has just been concurred in. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 6, 1898.

SIR: There is at present no authority of law for the transportation of remains of officers and soldiers killed in action or who die while on duty in the field or in military camps. The expense of transporting remains of officers and soldiers has heretofore been paid from the appropriation for Army transportation, but this has been limited to the transportation to the nearest military post or national cemetery for burial.

In the present emergency it is desirable that the remains of officers and soldiers who are killed in action or who die in the field in Cuba or at other places outside of the limits of the United States should be brought home; and the Secretary of War, in his discretion, should be in a position to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of such officers and soldiers as die in military camps.

To this end I have the honor to request that an appropriation of $200,000 be made at the earliest date practicable and inclose draft of bill.

Very respectfully,

R. A. ALGER, Secretary of War.

Hon. EUGENE HALE,
United States Senate.

RECOGNITION OF SERVICES OF REVENUE-CUTTER OFFICERS.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the joint resolution (S. R. 178) recognizing the gallantry of Frank H. Newcomb, commanding the revenue cutter Hudson; of his officers and men; also retiring Capt. Daniel B. Hodgson, of the Revenue-Cutter Service, for efficient and meritorious services in command of the cutter Hugh McCulloch at Manila.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thanks of Congress be, and are hereby, extended to First Lieut. Frank H. Newcomb, of the Revenue-Cutter Service, commanding the revenue cutter Hudson, his officers and the men of his command, for their intrepid and heroic gallantry in the action at Cardenas, Cuba, on the 11th day of May, 1898, when the Hudson rescued the U. S. naval torpedo boat Winslow, in the face of a most galling fire from the enemy's guns, the Winslow being disabled, her captain wounded, her only other officer and half her crew killed. The commander of the Hudson kept his vessel in the very center of the hottest fire of the action, although in constant danger of going ashore on account of the shallow water, until finally he got a line made fast to the Winslow and towed that vessel out of range of the enemy's guns; that, in commemoration of this signal act of heroism, First Lieut. Frank H. Newcomb, Revenue-Cutter Service, be given a gold medal of honor, each of his officers a silver medal, and each member of his crew a bronze medal, of such appropriate design as may be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

That in recognition of the efficient and meritorious services of Capt. Daniel B. Hodgson, United States Revenue-Cutter Service, while in command of the U. S. revenue cutter Hugh McCulloch, under the orders and in cooperation with the fleet commanded by Rear-Admiral George Dewey, United States Navy, at the battle of Manila, on May 1, 1898, and said officer being now in the sixty-third year of his age, and having served continuously for thirty-seven years as an officer of the Revenue-Cutter Service, he be placed on the permanent waiting orders or retired list of the Revenue-Cutter Service, on the duty pay of his grade.

That the sum of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the medals above specified.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered that a few days ago a message from the President was received by both Houses upon this subject, recommending action such as embodied in this bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I want to inquire has consent been given to the consideration of this measure?

Mr. HEPBURN. I think it will not be necessary, if the gentleman will wait a moment.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not want discussion to be entered upon until that matter was settled.

Mr. HEPBURN. That message was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. That committee directed me to report a joint resolution substantially in the language of this one. I do not know but that it was identical. That report has been made, and there is now upon the Calendar a joint resolution similar to this authorized by that committee. Now I desire that that may be considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is it upon the House Calendar?

Mr. BAILEY. I imagine that it can not be on the House Calendar, as it involves a charge on the Treasury. It must be on the Union Calendar, and can only be taken up by unanimous consent.

Mr. HEPBURN. I ask unanimous consent, then, that this bill may be now considered.

Mr. BERRY. I will consent to that provided the Schley resolution be taken up.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BERRY. I object.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment joint resolution (H. Res. 259) to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30 to the bill (H. R. 10691) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 4714) to protect harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the following concurrent resolution in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed of public act No. 171, "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," 75,000 copies, 50,000 for the use of the House of Representatives and 25,000 for the use of the Senate; that such print be of the act with paper cover and index, etc., as prepared by the Clerk.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House concurring). That there be printed 20,000 copies of the war-revenue law of 1898, with paper covers and index, 13,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 6,500 copies for the use of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the following joint resolution in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. Res. 270. Joint resolution to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10561) to increase the force of the Ordnance Department.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That there be printed and bound in cloth 6,000 copies of the Report of the Director of the Mint for the fiscal year 1897, 2,000 for the use of the Senate and 2,000 for the use of the Bureau of the Mint.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed joint resolution (S. R. 183) relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING WIRES WEST OF ROCK CREEK.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit the Senate resolution 182, relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek. The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to issue permits to existing electric-light companies in the District of Columbia for the extension of existing overhead electric wires outside the fire limits and west of Rock Creek, to be used for lighting purposes only.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, saving the right to object, I should like to hear some explanation of it. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of this bill if it has been reported by the committee.

Mr. BABCOCK. The District Committee in the House has not had time to consider it, but in the passage of the appropriation bills the territory west of Rock Creek is absolutely cut off from electric light, and unless this resolution passes there can be no electric light west of Rock Creek until next December.

Mr. SIMPSON. Why does not the committee report on the bill?

Mr. BABCOCK. The committee has not had time. It intended to cover it in one of the appropriation bills, but it fell through. There can be no objection to it.

Mr. SIMPSON. Is time going to come to an end to-day? [Laughter.]

Mr. BABCOCK. Well, no; but to-morrow. I understand that Congress will adjourn at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. SIMPSON. What assurance has the gentleman that the House will adjourn at 2 o'clock to-morrow?

Mr. BABCOCK. I understand that the Senate has concurred in the resolution.

Mr. SIMPSON. Under those circumstances I will not object.

Mr. HANDY. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that no bill should be brought up here without being considered by the committee.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. Oh, do not put Rock Creek out in the dark.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was ordered to be read a third time; and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. BABCOCK, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

THOMAS J. HARRIS.

Mr. BRUNDIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4848) for the relief of Thomas J. Harris and others, heirs of Manning Harris, deceased.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the claim of Thomas J. Harris, Mary C. Harris, and Agnes Estes, heirs at law of Manning Harris, deceased, late of Mountain Grove, Wright County, Mo., for stores and supplies and other property alleged to have been taken by United States troops during the late war from the decedent, Manning Harris, be referred to the Secretary of War, who is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be investigated by the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army the alleged taking by United States troops during the late war of a certain lot of stores and supplies and other property alleged to have been the property of Manning Harris, deceased, late of Mountain Grove, Wright County, Mo., such investigation to extend to the title of the property, the status of the owner, whether loyal or not, and the value of the property taken and destroyed; and when such investigation shall be completed the Secretary of War shall report the result thereof, with his recommendation thereon, to Congress for action in the premises.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CANNON. I think, Mr. Speaker, that legislation touching those claims—

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman from Illinois permit me? All this bill does is to ask that the Quartermaster-General report the findings to the House.

Mr. CANNON. I know. All these claims had a status before the Quartermaster-General in early days, and in later years under the Bowman Act they have had a status in the Court of Claims. I am constrained to object.

Mr. BRUNDIDGE. One moment—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made. The gentleman from Colorado.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH PIKES PEAK TIMBER LAND RESERVE.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company, a corporation created and existing under the laws of the State of Colorado, be, and it hereby is, authorized to construct and maintain a railway over and through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve (heretofore reserved from entry or settlement and set apart as a public reservation by Executive order), said railway to enter said Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve at such a point on the eastern or northern boundary thereof in El Paso County, Colo., as may be found to be the most feasible for the route of said railway, running in a westerly direction from Colorado Springs, Colo., thence proceeding by the most practicable route through the reserve to the western boundary thereof; also, to proceed by such side tracks, extensions, switches, and spurs as may be necessary to reach any groups of mines in said forest reserve, all in said El Paso County; and the said railway company is hereby also granted right of way through the public lands to the town of Cripple Creek, in the said State of Colorado; said right of way being granted subject to the rules and restrictions and carrying all the rights and privileges of an act entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States," approved March 3, 1875, said act being hereby made applicable to the right of way hereby granted: Provided, That no timber shall be cut by said railroad company for any purpose outside of the rights of way herein granted.

Mr. DALZELL. Is this bill reported from a committee?

Mr. BELL. I will state to the gentleman that a few days ago a company proposing to build an electric road asked for right of way between Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek, Colorado Springs being the county seat. That bill was sent to the Department, which recommended that it be passed. At the same time a company is trying to build a steam road. These parties have come in contact with a small portion only of a timber reserve. The whole distance is only 30 miles. The question was brought before the committee, but they lacked one of having a majority of members in the city. Every member of the committee present, including the chairman [Mr. LACEY], signed a paper recommending the passage of the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Allow me to state what the gentleman does not know, that subsequently we obtained the signatures of eight members, constituting a majority of the committee.

Mr. BELL. And the Department recommends the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RAY of New York. This is too important a bill to go through at this time in this way. I object.

WAR ACCOUNTS OF STATES.

Mr. HULL. I again ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill which was temporarily withdrawn this morning. It has been modified since it was brought up before.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill to indemnify the governors of States for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the governor of any State, or to his duly authorized agents, the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses that have been incurred by him in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of his State who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided, That the transportation paid for shall be only the transportation of such men from the place of their enrollment for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States to the place of their acceptance into the same by the United States mustering officer, and that the names of the men transported shall appear on the muster rolls of the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided further, That such claims shall be settled upon proper vouchers to be filed and passed upon by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury: And provided further, That in the adjustment of claims under this act the said accounting officers shall not allow for any expenditure, or compensation for service, at a rate greater than was at the time and in the locality authorized by the laws of the United States and the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War in similar cases.

Mr. HANDY. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR], after this bill was presented here this morning, sent for an expert of the Treasury Department and submitted the bill to him in order to guard against what the gentleman had called attention to, the liability that the Government might be called upon to pay more than it should for supplies furnished by the States. The last proviso has been added to cover that point. The Treasury officials and the gentleman from Ohio say that now the bill is properly guarded.

I will say to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] that the Federal Government only asks the adoption of this measure because the governors of the States are urging the Government to settle the accounts of the States.

Mr. HANDY. I wish to understand the effect of that last proviso. Take the case, for instance, of a State like my own, where the soldiers, before they were mustered into the service of the United States, were paid by the State $1.50 a day—I think that was the amount. Money has thus been actually paid to the soldiers by some of the States. Would this last proviso preclude the reimbursement of such amounts?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman can answer that question just as easily as I can, if he will read the proviso. This is not intended as a pay bill. The bill which we passed with reference to the pay of the soldiers is already a law. This bill provides specifically for reimbursing to the States their expenses in feeding, clothing, taking care of, and transporting the soldiers. The bill which we passed some time ago provides that the soldiers shall be paid by the Government of the United States from the date of enrollment.

Mr. HANDY. That does not touch at all the question which is in my mind. The Government of the United States pays directly to the soldier his wages, but as a matter of fact in my State—and I understand in other States—the soldiers have already been paid out of the State treasury for a certain period of time which they spent in camp. Now, will this bill permit the States to get back money paid in that way?

Mr. HULL. No, this bill does not cover that.

Mr. HANDY. Why should not that be covered?

Mr. HULL. Before undertaking reimbursement in that respect the Government should fix some uniform price and pay all alike.

Mr. COX. In order that the House may distinctly understand what is involved in this bill, I hope the gentleman from Iowa will make a plain, distinct statement as to what the States are to get back from the Government.

Mr. HULL. My understanding is that under this bill they are to get back all that they have paid out for the maintenance and transportation of troops; but if any State should undertake to charge more than the service was worth, the officials of the Treasury would be authorized under that proviso to cut down the allowance to what would be a fair price for supplies, maintenance, etc., in the particular locality.

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is no provision made for reimbursement of the States for money paid by them to volunteers for services before they were enrolled?

Mr. HULL. Another bill was passed long ago which provides for that.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the proposition advanced by the gentleman from Delaware would be very unfair, because some States might allow their soldiers $5 a day and others only 50 cents.

Mr. HULL. This bill does not deal with that question, and I should oppose the insertion of any provision undertaking to do so.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I was opposed to the States being reimbursed in such cases. I think that the States, if they paid these men under such circumstances, should stand the brunt of it.

Mr. HULL. The States transported the men from the local company camps and the State rendezvous, fed and clothed them generally, and paid their expenses.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And this money should be paid back.

Mr. HULL. And I will say to my friend from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] that it is the governors of the States that are knocking at the doors of Congress and asking for the adoption of this proposition or a similar one. They want this money refunded which was paid out by the States for the service thus rendered.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. Do I understand the gentleman to state that this is a proposition to reimburse the States for the uniforms furnished the militia before the war?

Mr. HULL. Not at all. They would be entitled to be reimbursed for the uniforms furnished by the States when the troops were accepted and sent to the front and the uniforms were utilized, but not otherwise.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. That is what I wanted to know, whether, in the judgment of the gentleman, this will cover a request of that kind.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman will permit me, the purpose of the bill is clear and plain—

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. Allow me to continue for a moment.

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. As I understand it, the bill provides to refund the money expended for the maintenance of these men, where the men supplied their own uniforms or where they have been supplied by the various States. Does the bill seek to reimburse them, or reimburse the States, for the money expended?

Mr. HULL. Let me make this suggestion to the gentleman in answer to his inquiry: Suppose the State of Missouri had a regiment completely equipped—not with arms, for that would not have been possible for the State—but in everything they needed in the way of uniforms and other equipments; and such regiment, so equipped, was mustered into the Army of the United States. Now, I think they would be entitled to be paid for the uniforms which they had purchased when they were accepted in the Army of the United States, if they were utilized.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. That would be so provided they were purchased for this special purpose. But in other cases, and especially in the older States of the country where they maintained large militia organizations, the uniforms of the militia were purchased many years, two, three, or five years before; and those States are not, in my judgment, entitled to receive pay for the uniforms, and I shall object to the consideration of the bill unless that point is conceded. I do not see why the Government of the United States should pay for the useless uniforms which many of the militia organizations purchased many years before the war began.

Mr. HULL. I will state to the gentleman from Missouri that this is all guarded to the extent that it can be guarded, and leaves the matter to the discretion of the Department. Certainly nothing will be paid more than these equipments were worth at the time.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But the gentleman should state a little more plainly his position. When a State furnished the uniform at the time the soldier left the State, is he to be charged with the price of a new uniform, when he was furnished with an old and secondhand affair? I do not agree that the price of a new uniform should be charged against the soldier.

Mr. HULL. This bill will relieve the States, if the money was advanced for the uniforms.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman does not answer my inquiry exactly. Is the individual soldier to be protected against the charge for a new uniform when he is given an old one? As I understand it, each soldier is allowed $43 for clothing when he enters the service. This clothing should be new. A great many of the recruits have been fitted out with old and in some cases worn-out uniforms by the different States. The States may charge the United States full price for these uniforms and in turn the United States will charge the individual soldier with the price of a new uniform; as the old uniform will not last but a short length of time, the soldier will be compelled to pay for a new one out of his own pocket. This, to my mind, would be a great injustice.

Mr. HULL. Well, that is a question for the Department to determine.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Does this propose to reimburse the States for the actual amount paid by them on account of the equipment of troops during the war?

Mr. HULL. Yes, sir.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Whatever such expenditure may have been?

Mr. HULL. With certain exceptions, which the gentleman will note.

Mr. BRUCKER. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. If the gentleman will allow me a moment, the point is that this shall be passed upon by the Treasury officials before the allowance is made?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. BRUCKER. As I understand it, none of the funds so advanced are charged back to the troops themselves.

Mr. HULL. Of course not.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But the gentleman will remember that $42 annually is charged up against each soldier for his uniform. Now, the question is what effect this provision will have upon the individual soldier in the event that we enact this law.

Mr. HULL. It does not deal with the men at all.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the whole purpose of this bill is to make the States whole?

Mr. HULL. That is it exactly.

Mr. LOVE. Has this been favored by the different States?

Mr. HULL. There is not a State that has not something coming to it under this provision of law.

A MEMBER. And it is to make the State whole?

Mr. HULL. That is what we insisted on in framing the bill.

Mr. HAY. Is it not a fact that a great many of these State troops have paid for their own uniforms out of their own pockets?

Mr. HULL. That is a question I can not answer, because I do not know.

Mr. HAY. I know it is a fact in my State, and I think it is a fact in a great many of the States.

Mr. HULL. If that is true, that would not affect this bill, because this bill is only intended to cover the legitimate, necessary expenses of the State in getting the troops ready.

Mr. HAY. I agree with the gentleman and am in favor of the bill; and if these men have paid for their own uniforms, the State will reimburse the soldier when the United States pays the State.

Mr. HULL. United States soldiers, when they come in, are allowed their clothing account. I will not put an amendment in there or consent to one that would make a double payment.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the gentleman from Iowa permit a question? I wish to inquire whether unanimous consent has yet been given for the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HULL. It has not.

Mr. HANDY. I reserved the right to object.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he will permit an amendment to be put upon this bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada for expenditures made over thirty years ago in the late civil war—expenditures amounting in the State of California to $3,000,000 and over, in the State of Oregon to over $300,000, and in the State of Nevada to over $400,000, expenditures of this very class, made for the purpose of equipping troops that were accepted by the Government and who took the place in that vast domain of the regulars who were retired from the entire intermontane country and Pacific coast region to take their places in the civil war?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I would not, because that is an entirely different question. This law was passed in 1861 substantially as now. It is a little better law now, because it is intended to obviate some of the difficulties that were encountered then, but this proposition of the gentleman from Nevada is to go back, and now, in the closing days of this session, take up a batch of claims that are not yet adjusted under the law of 1861.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to state to the gentleman in that connection that these claims have been approved by the Senate committee five or six times, have passed the Senate half a dozen times at least, have been reported favorably by the committee in the House, and we never yet have been able to obtain consideration for those bills.

Mr. LOUD. They have been audited by the War Department.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I claim that the Government should pay the expenditures of thirty years ago rather than the expenditures of to-day, and that an old claim of that kind, founded upon equity and justice, should be settled at least contemporaneously with these claims. I also insist that these claims shall go through the same process of sifting that the claims of Oregon, Nevada, and California have gone through, adjustment by examiners appointed under law by the War Department, and yet claims which have been resisted by Congress thus successfully for a period of thirty-five years because the people of the Pacific coast are not represented in sufficient numbers here to secure recognition of a just claim. If the gentleman will allow the amendment to be made, I shall have no objection to the consideration of the bill, but otherwise I shall object.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I want to ask the gentleman from Nevada if there is not now a provision of law by which these claims can be paid?

Mr. NEWLANDS. None, except by appropriation by Congress.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The other States have been paid, or at least many of them have.

Mr. NEWLANDS. The State of New York has been paid in part. The State of Texas has been paid, I believe, in whole, because the State of Texas was fortunately represented upon the Appropriations Committee of the House. The State of Kansas has been paid.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. And Ohio.

Mr. HULL. Iowa has been paid.

Mr. NEWLANDS. And yet the consideration of these claims by the War Department in the case of Texas and of Kansas was authorized by the same bill which authorized the adjustment of the claims relating to California, Oregon, and Nevada.

Mr. HENDERSON. I wish to correct the gentleman in one statement he made. The Committee on Appropriations did not report the Texas claim. It was put on as an amendment in the House.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Very well. At all events, it went through on an appropriation bill.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, let me say, if the gentleman will yield—

Mr. HULL. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. The claims that the gentleman refers to do not come under the general act of 1861. There is no time here to discuss it. This is not the proper time nor the proper place.

They were referred by a Senate resolution, not a concurrent resolution, to certain accounting officers of the Treasury and reported back. There has never been joint action of the House and Senate touching that matter.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I take issue with the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I am somewhat familiar with the matter, and they have not been passed upon by the joint action of the two Houses. Now, then, what merit they have is proper for consideration; but whether they have merit or not, that was a generation ago, and they can afford to stand upon their own merits. Now, touching this matter, I am quite careless, so far as I am concerned, at least as careless as any other member of the House, whether this legislation is had or not.

The bill since it was called up before has been, as it seems to me, fairly well guarded by substantially the provision that was put in the law of 1866 reimbursing the State of Missouri, so that if reimbursement is made to the governors of the States now, being made since the commencement of the war with Spain, in which all the States are interested—if that reimbursement is made, it is made after the vouchers are furnished, and it is made at a rate equal to that which the Government of the United States was paying for similar service in the respective localities.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. HULL. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois to answer the question of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. COX. Now, upon the proposition that the troops were called out in this war by the governors and were put into the service of the United States with all the expenses, does this bill do anything more than this—will we incur a liability on the United States?

Mr. CANNON. In that case the liability is on the United States and not on the governors of the States.

Mr. COX. But does not this bill put the liability on the United States just as the governor had assumed the liability?

Mr. CANNON. The law we passed makes the governor the agent to assemble these troops.

Mr. COX. Why, I understand that.

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. I want the gentleman to answer if he will admit of an amendment to this bill here to the effect that the provisions of the bill shall apply only to the expenditures made by the States since the outbreak of this war?

Mr. HULL. I think it is absolutely limited to that now.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri. I think not. I shall object to it unless that is done.

Mr. HULL. I now yield to the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word about this bill. Reference to the Territory of New Mexico is made. In that Territory the Rough Riders, who have lately distinguished themselves in battle, had to travel from two to three hundred miles in order to join the troops, and I think it is right that the Government should pay the contingent expenses they were put to in reaching the rendezvous. I would like to pay a slight tribute to the Rough Riders, because among the Rough Riders are all the volunteers New Mexico furnishes in this war. [Applause.]

And I want to say with reference to this bill that I have no objection to it, and I think it ought to be passed, but I would like to ask the privilege of the House, now that I have the floor, to pay a tribute to the Rough Riders; in other words, a large part to the volunteer troops of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will have no objection if you will include Wyoming and other States.

Mr. FERGUSON. I will do so.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Mexico may have the privilege of extending his remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that on the subject indicated he be allowed to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FERGUSON. I took occasion on the 8th of last March to say to this honorable House that the people of New Mexico were loyal and enthusiastic American citizens in the then threatened complications with Spain, notwithstanding their exclusion from the Union by the Fifty-fifth Congress. I then used these words:

They can not vote in national affairs, as of right they ought to be entitled to do, but they can shoot in the national defense, and if war with Spain is to come, they will shoot, as they would vote, if they had a vote, in defense of American interests, and for the dignity, the honor, and the glory of the American flag.

And when war was declared and the first call for volunteers was made the quota of troops allotted to New Mexico was filled with an alacrity, a completeness, and an enthusiasm that called forth praise from the authorities and set an example to some of the States.

What character of soldiers did New Mexico furnish? Let the accounts from the war correspondents, the eyewitnesses of the valor and devotion shown by those splendid volunteers, answer. In the New York Journal of June 28, in the description of the battle of La Quasina, I find the following:

The Rough Riders suffered fearfully from thirst during the day of their baptism of fire. Their canteens gave out, and in the fight their tongues were swollen and their lips cracked.

There is a picture for you. A march of 8 miles under a blistering sun over trackless and rugged hills, when suddenly, without warning, they are fired on by an unseen enemy in ambush, behind the rocks and bushes, and many of them sink down in death and more lie bleeding on the ground, and then the order to charge. Charge what? An unseen enemy, in strength and numbers unknown. Unhesitating, indomitable, fearless of death itself, they make that charge, and take rank at once with the historic heroes of Balaklava. And when the charge is over, and Roosevelt sees the enemy, more numerous than his own men, in retreat, he proudly surveys his surviving Rough Riders, and utters this comment, "Not a man flinched." And among the men of whom this was said were the New Mexico volunteers. But that is not all. A few days later, in the same great paper, I find the following:

The Rough Riders, the Tenth and First Cavalry, were ordered to make a detour and take the hill where the Spanish battery had been planted. Then began the real battle of the day. The Spaniards were nowhere to be seen, but when the Rough Riders advanced across the gulch to the slope below the blockhouse the enemy opened a sharp fire again.

The first shell wounded Mason Mitchell, a Cuban trooper, and Surgeon Devore. At the same time the enemy's sharpshooters began peppering away at the Americans, picking off a man here and there as the line advanced.

Roosevelt, mounted, led the Tenth Cavalry, which was lined alongside the Rough Riders. The Spanish fire grew hotter and hotter. The heroic men began to drop in twos and threes by the time they came to the open, smooth hillside, which offered no protection from the enemy's deadly volleys.

A perfect storm of shot and shell swept the hillside. There was a moment's hesitation along the line. Then the order was "Forward, charge!"

Roosevelt was in the lead, waving his sword. Out into the open and up the hill where death seemed certain in the face of the continuous crackle of the Mausers came the Rough Riders, with the Tenth Cavalry alongside. Not a man flinched, all continuing to fire as they ran.

And that, too, I am proud to tell you, was written in part of the New Mexico volunteers. That was the famous charge up San Juan hill.

Such valor has not only sent a thrill of pride through the heart of every true American, but it has also called forth words of praise from far across the water. I find the following in the London Daily Graphic:

The signal gallantry and devotion displayed by both Spaniards and Americans must be recognized. The behavior of the Americans sends a thrill of pride throughout the Anglo-Saxon world. The story of the splendid manner in which the Rough Riders carried San Juan is instinct with the indomitable spirit of Balaklava.

That is the history thus far made by the volunteer soldiers of New Mexico in this war; for the whole of New Mexico's quota was assigned to the regiment known as the Rough Riders. It is a story in which I take a sincere pride as New Mexico's representative in this great body; and it is also a story which I commend to the Republican side of this House. It is of such men as these that the great States of this Union are made; and yet it is of these brave men, these loyal Americans, these valorous soldiers, that you have said, by your act in denying our petition for statehood, that such men are not fit to become full citizens of this Republic.

I believe you will change your mind. I think you regret now that decision of yours. My respect for you as men, as American citizens, makes me feel sure that you will say at no distant day in the future that New Mexico, by the valor of her soldiers in this war, by the blood of her sons freely shed in behalf of the flag of our common country, has won her right to admission to the Union.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to say, Mr. Speaker, in reply to the gentleman from Illinois, that the claims of Nevada, California, and Oregon were submitted by an act of Congress—not simply by a resolution of the Senate of the United States, but submitted by an act of Congress—to examination by a board of war examiners appointed by the War Department, and that War Department board has reported in detail. Their report covered volumes, going into the minutest details in reference to the expenditures made by these States during the late war, and yet these claims are still unsatisfied. Now, what does the gentleman's bill propose to do? To submit these claims to a board of war examiners appointed by the War Department, these examiners to make a report to Congress, and Congress to be the final judge of the justice of each claim, as was done with California, Oregon, and Nevada? No; the proposition is to submit these claims directly to the Treasury Department and let that Department make such payment as it sees fit in reference to them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill?

Mr. HILL. I call for the regular order.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent, and I do not believe any member will object.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I object.

Mr. HILL. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the call of committees.

INTERNATIONAL BANK.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 3414) to carry into effect the recommendations of the International American Conference by the incorporation of the International American Bank.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there has never been any authority given by the Committee on Banking and Currency to the gentleman from Connecticut or to anybody else to call up this bill. When it was called up, the regular occupant of the chair declared that the gentleman from Connecticut called it up by the direction of the committee, and I made no question about it, but upon examining the minutes of the committee, they disclose the fact that no such authority had ever been given and disclose the further fact that this particular bill was never authorized to be reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that this bill was called up, and the question of consideration was raised and the House voted to consider it. It seems to be rather late now to raise the question as to the authority of the committee.

Mr. BAILEY. But before the question of consideration was raised, the point would have been made that it could not be called up. The Speaker recognized the necessity for such authority, and declared that the gentleman from Connecticut, under the direction of the committee, had called it up. I, the House, and the Speaker were totally misled. The Chair can refer to the statement of the regular occupant of the chair to that effect, and I was amazed when upon examination of the minutes they disclosed the fact that no such authority was ever given and that this bill has never been authorized to be reported by the committee. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox], who is a member of that committee, has a transcript from the minutes of the committee which shows what I now say to be accurate.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I desire but one thing about this matter, and that is that the Speaker shall have the facts. Whatever may have occurred in the committee, and I hope I am entitled to the floor—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will please be in order. Gentlemen will be seated and cease conversation.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox] is recognized.

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker, what I desire to do is to present to the House the absolute, straightforward facts in regard to this bill, and whatever may be the decision of the Chair in regard to it is a matter I have no care of. But this House shall know what has been done and what are the facts in regard to the consideration of this bill. Allow me to say right here, as a member of that committee, that I have got no grudge—I have no sort of idea of taking advantage of any member of that committee. I am going to give the Speaker the facts, and then the House and the country will know how gentlemen have attempted to bring this bill under consideration here in the House without the knowledge of a Democrat on that committee. Now, you need not be uneasy, for I will be frank and be courteous, too. Now, Mr. Speaker, what is the state of facts? I am taking this from the minutes of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the gentleman can not bring the minutes of the committee into the House.

Mr. COX. Oh, yes; you are afraid of the facts. [Laughter.] We had better understand each other at once. If the Speaker rules that I can not bring the facts before the House, all right.

Mr. HILL. I would like the point of order decided, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will decide it.

Mr. COX. Oh, yes; the gentleman from Connecticut wants the point of order decided; he does not want the facts to come out; he does not want the House or the country to know about it. Now, what occurred in the Committee on Banking and Currency?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Tennessee suspend until the Chair can examine the question?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, in connection with the point of order which has been raised—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Tennessee yield to the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. COX. Of course I will.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Upon the point of order, if the Chair please, I understand the matter in dispute to be whether the Committee on Banking and Currency has or has not authorized a certain bill to be reported, and has or has not authorized a certain member of the committee to bring that bill before the House for the consideration of the House. That being the case, it must clearly be in order to prove that the committee never did authorize this, by bringing before the House the minutes of the committee, the very best possible evidence of what the committee did.

Mr. COX. The gentleman need not be uneasy; I am going to prove it so plain that a fellow running down the street can see it. [Laughter.]

Mr. KING. You mean so plain that a blind man can see it.

Mr. COX. Any way you please.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair reads from the Journal of the proceedings of December 18, 1890:

Mr. Farquhar moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill of the Senate (S. 3735) to place the American merchant marine engaged in the foreign trade upon an equality with that of other nations and the substitute therefor offered by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries under clause 5 of Rule XXIV.

Mr. Springer made the point of order that the committee had not authorized this report to be considered at this time or authorized this motion to be made.

After debate on said point of order,

Mr. Farquhar having proposed to read the minutes of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries with respect to its action on the said bill.

The Speaker held that it was not in order for the minutes of a committee to be produced in the House and made public, but further held that Mr. Farquhar, as the chairman of the authorized organ of the committee, was at liberty to make a statement of fact in regard to any action taken by said committee in regard to said bill.

Mr. Farquhar thereupon made a statement as to the action taken by said committee respecting said bill.

When

The Speaker ruled, upon the statement so made, that Mr. Farquhar had not been authorized to make the said motion.

Mr. BAILEY. Allow me to ask who was the Speaker who made that ruling?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present Speaker.

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker, let us get down to the point and state it distinctly, so that no man may misapprehend it. If this bill has the right to consideration by the House, that right must be based upon something.

Mr. HILL. Pardon me a moment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Tennessee yield to the gentleman from Connecticut?

Mr. COX. If he will just wait a moment until I state my proposition, I will yield with pleasure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. HILL. I think the gentleman desires to hear what I am going to ask him.

Mr. COX. I know what the gentleman is going to ask me before he asks it.

Mr. HILL. I should like to ask the gentleman—

Mr. COX. I hope the gentleman will take his seat and not interrupt me just now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee declines to yield.

Mr. COX. Now, Mr. Speaker, what is the proposition before you? And I am going to make it so sharply that there will be no difference of opinion with regard to it. There is no bill from the Committee on Banking and Currency authorized by that committee to be called up. I will read you the only authority there is for calling up anything. What did the committee say in regard to this bill? The committee said that the chairman of the committee, Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts, should be authorized and instructed to report this bill to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. HILL. I make the point of order that the gentleman is proceeding entirely out of order. I have no objection, except that he is out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not think the gentleman from Tennessee ought to read the minutes of the committee.

Mr. COX. The gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. Hill] states that the minutes show a certain thing. I state they do not show it. Now, what is the point of order? That I can not read the minutes of the committee? Is that the point?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order is made that the minutes of the committee can not be read in the House.

Mr. COX. Well, I say the gentleman from Connecticut states what the committee never did. Now, I make the point to the Speaker that the Committee on Banking and Currency never authorized the calling up of this bill for consideration. The gentleman from Connecticut says that they did—and he is a very truthful man. I am also a truthful man, and I say they did not. [Laughter.]

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee has the floor on the point of order.

Mr. COX. Now let me show what the committee did.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has ruled.

Mr. COX. Why, Mr. Speaker, do you mean to say that when a member states that the committee has done a certain thing, and when I, with the minutes of the committee in my hand, appeal to you and say that the committee did no such thing, I am to be silenced? If that is your point—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is the point of order raised by the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. COX. Well, then, the point of order means that what the gentleman from Connecticut says is the truth and what the gentleman from Tennessee says is not the truth.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The point of order made by the gentleman from Connecticut is that the minutes of the committee can not be brought into the House and read.

Mr. COX. I am trying my best to be fair, but when it is claimed by a member on the floor that the committee's action was so and so, and the Chair holds that I can not controvert that statement by showing what the committee actually did, what is the use of my being on that committee? [Laughter.]

Now, I will tell you, Mr. Speaker, and we had better understand it fairly and squarely at this time. I will tell you the facts in this case. I know the history of this bill from the beginning of the Fifty-second Congress, and I repeat to you now, in the presence of this House, and let it go to the country, that the Committee on Banking and Currency of this body has never authorized the gentleman from Connecticut to call up this bill.

Whether he sees fit to do so or not, all right. If he says it did give him that authority, I can not weigh my word against the word of the gentleman from Connecticut. But I do say that it is as good as his ever was in the world. That is the only point, and you have it right there, and I do not mean to question or make personal insinuation of any kind whatever against the gentleman or anybody else. But I do say that he has no more capacity for telling the truth than I have. [Laughter and applause.] I have the evidence to support my statement here, by the records of the committee, and I will read it, if the House will give me the permission. [Cries of "Read!" "Read!"]

And yet I know you do not want it done. Objection has been made to it. Oh, you need not look at your rules. [Laughter.] I know my rights on the floor.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask, for the benefit of the truth of history, in behalf of impartial truth, I ask unanimous consent that I may read now what occurred in the Committee on Banking and Currency in regard to this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to decide the question of order.

Mr. COX. I want to ask, if you are against me, that my request for unanimous consent may be submitted to the House, and be granted to me.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Of course that would require unanimous consent.

Mr. COX. That is what I ask for—unanimous consent.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Texas desire to discuss the question of order?

Mr. BAILEY. After the gentleman from Tennessee is through. I thought he had concluded.

Mr. COX. No; I want to make this point, and it must go. I ask unanimous consent to read what occurred in that committee. If the Speaker rules that I can not do so as of my own right, I submit the request to the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There will be time enough for that, the Chair will suggest, after a ruling has been made. That would be the proper time.

Mr. COX. Oh, now, do not be a lawyer with me. [Laughter.] Will you let me do that or not?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] desire to be heard?

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, before undertaking to discuss the point of order, I would like the attention of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX], who, I understand, is in charge of the opposition to this bill on the other side.

Mr. COX. Well, while my proposition is pending I ask its submission to the House that I may be permitted to proceed as suggested. If the Speaker rules that I can not read it in my own right, I ask unanimous consent of the House for permission to read it in the presence of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will have the opportunity to submit that request after the question of order is determined.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX], who I understand leads the opposition to the bill—I do not care to discuss the question pending, although I have the minutes before me at the present time, and although I find that I am sustained by four or five decisions in the Digest—but I recognize the fact that a very large number of the members present are anxious that an opportunity shall be given them to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of certain measures affecting their constituents. I also recognize the fact that the opposition to the bill is very strong, and therefore I would ask the gentleman from Georgia to give his consent to a request for unanimous consent that this whole matter, the point of order and all, shall go over until the first Wednesday after Congress shall assemble in December next, reserving the same right and position that the bill has now in all respects.

Mr. MADDOX. That is to say, that the bill shall occupy the same status that it now occupies, and as my colleague on the committee says it occupies, reserving all and every right to object that we now have?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. MADDOX. With that condition, I have no objection to the request of the gentleman.

Mr. HILL. Then, Mr. Speaker, I would ask unanimous consent that the bill may go over, becoming a special order on the first Wednesday after Congress reconvenes in December next.

Mr. BAILEY. Oh, no; the gentleman ought not make it a request for a special order, because that might be construed as superseding some of the parliamentary conditions which now exist.

Mr. HILL. Well, retaining the parliamentary condition that it now has.

Mr. BAILEY. That the House resume the consideration at this exact point on the given day.

Mr. HILL. Yes; that is it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent—

Mr. COX. I do not object to that, but I mean to be distinctly understood that this bill, when it comes up in the short session, shall occupy just precisely the position that it occupies now.

Mr. MADDOX. That is exactly it.

Mr. COX. And I will not consent to waiving any rights of a member of the committee or any rights of anybody else unless it is to stand just like it stands now.

Mr. HILL. That is what I am asking for; nothing else.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that the bill go over until the first Wednesday in December, subject to be called up by the committee, with the points of order pending as now, and all rights reserved in respect to it. Is there objection?

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. COX. I do not want to be technical, Mr. Speaker, but that all rights of order and all points of order and all defenses of the bill shall stand just as they stand now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That was stated.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, the suggestion that I want to make is this: Do I understand that the proposed agreement carried with it the idea or the order that on the first Wednesday after we meet in December this bill shall be the special order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It does not; but it is subject to be called up by the committee, with the points of order reserved against it.

Mr. EVANS. That is to say, that the committee will be privileged upon that day to call it up.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It means substantially that the call shall rest upon the Committee on Banking and Currency on the first Wednesday in December.

Mr. EVANS. That is all I wanted to understand.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until that day.

Mr. HILL. Not the first Wednesday in December, but the first Wednesday after Congress convenes.

Mr. BAILEY. The Wednesday after the first Monday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Until the Wednesday after the first Monday in December.

Mr. EVANS. I understand, then, the only effect of this agreement is that this bill shall have the preference on that day, if the Committee on Banking and Currency is called.

Mr. BAILEY. That the committee shall be called on that day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That the call of committees shall rest with the Committee on Banking and Currency, with the right to call up this bill, subject to all points of order which are reserved against it.

Mr. COX. And all points of defense. Let it stand just like where it commenced.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RAY of New York. Before that consent is given, I should like to ask what is the reason for postponing the consideration of the bill?

Mr. HILL. My reason is to gratify gentlemen like yourself, and a great many about me, who have bills which they desire to bring up by unanimous consent.

Mr. RAY of New York. Then your only reason for putting this over is to let little bills come up here by unanimous consent?

Mr. HILL. That is practically the reason.

Mr. RAY of New York. If that is your only reason, I object.

Mr. COX. I make the motion, then.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not think that motion would be in order.

Mr. FARIS. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. HILL. I think I have the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. HILL. I desire to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. BAILEY. There are two points of order pending, which, if I were inclined to raise the question, would be impossible, because there can be only one point of order pending at a time. I submitted the point of order that the bill was not properly before the House. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox] undertook to read the minutes of the committee, whereupon another point of order was made. I am not disposed to raise any question about that, although if I were I think it would be well taken. But I desire now to ask the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] whether he desires to address himself to the point of order raised against the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cox]? If he desires to discuss that, he would be entitled to the floor first. Otherwise, I desire to discuss that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will suggest that there will be no difficulty about that. The question was raised in the form of an objection against the gentleman from Tennessee reading from the minutes of the committee. Does the gentleman from Connecticut desire to be heard upon the question of reading from the minutes of the committee?

Mr. HILL. I desire to be heard on the point of order raised by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BAILEY. I ask for order. It is impossible to hear the gentleman from Connecticut.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House will be in order.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order for the following reasons: I do not know that it is in order for me to state that in a regularly called meeting a majority of the committee, with two Democrats present, instructed the chairman of the committee—I ought not to state it, because I am going to raise the point of order myself against that very proposition. I refer to pages 336 and 337 of the Digest.

It is presumed that a report made or motion submitted by a member in behalf of a committee when it is called has been authorized by such committee. The question of such authority is a question of fact, not for the Speaker but for the committee itself to decide.

I cite further:

It was held not competent to produce in the House the minutes of a committee to show whether or not authority was given to report or move a certain proposition.

Furthermore, and I make the further point of order, Mr. Speaker, that—

After debate is commenced, or after a motion to suspend the rules has been seconded, it is too late to make the point that the committee had not authorized such motion.

And finally, in confirmation of the point which I previously made:

It is not in order to allude on the floor to anything that has taken place in committee, unless by a written report sanctioned by a majority of the committee.

I am ready to submit the point of order on those citations.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, there are decisions which seem to hold that it is not permissible to read the minutes of a committee, but I will never consent to see a decision of that kind affirmed in a House of which I am a member. If that be correct, then a committee, or rather the majority of a committee, although they may be unable to procure a quorum, can take the floor and instruct any one of their number to take action which the rules only permit a committee to take, and yet no member of the committee and no member of the House can be heard to dispute it. There can not be a more conclusive and overwhelming condemnation of that doctrine than this very case affords. There is, beyond a shadow of a doubt, grounds, good grounds, for our contention that the committee has never authorized this action to be taken. With that very point in issue, how will the Chair decide it?

The gentleman from Connecticut says they did; the gentleman from Tennessee says they did not; and where can the House go for better proof for the correctness of the one or the incorrectness of the other than to the records of the committee itself? Will the House deny itself access to the records, and the only records, that speak the indisputable truth? These gentlemen are both honest, but they are both liable to error. Who is mistaken in this particular case might be a nice question with the members of the House to decide, because both are honorable and truthful men. But we can decide the question without reflection upon either simply by examining the record kept by the committee.

If the record discloses that the gentleman from Connecticut is mistaken, it would be no reflection upon him, for everybody would accept it as an honest mistake. If it shall disprove the statement of my distinguished friend from Tennessee, it would not reduce him in the estimation of his colleagues, because all would understand it to be an honest mistake. But, sir, are we to be denied the right to decide this question by an appeal to the record? I should think the gentleman from Connecticut and the gentleman from Tennessee would unite in desiring the House to examine the only record that can establish who is right and who is wrong.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. COX. That will be exceedingly agreeable to me.

Mr. BAILEY. Not only ought it to be agreeable to both the gentlemen involved in the controversy, but there is the higher consideration of the right of the House itself to examine the transaction of its own committees. The powers of committees over the legislation of this country is great enough, even when most safely guarded. We have parceled out the legislative power of the House until our action is already largely controlled by a committee.

Every gentleman knows how difficult it is to vote down a report of a committee, or even to amend it in important particulars. With the knowledge of that fact in the mind of every member of this House, will you add to the power of a committee what amounts to its absolute dictation—that, in addition to their lawful power, they may do unlawful and unauthorized things, and yet the House be powerless to prosecute an inquiry into what they have done. If the question had been before every Congress since the formation of the Constitution, and if every decision had been precisely the same way, I would not suffer those decisions to be repeated without an appeal from the decision of the Chair. I know how much time that appeal will take; I know that it must delay business of the House that would be free from objection; and now, before I proceed further in the argument, I ask the gentleman from New York if he will withdraw his objection and suffer the unanimous-consent order to be made?

Mr. RAY of New York rose.

Mr. BAILEY. Did I understand the gentleman from New York to decline?

Mr. RAY of New York. You have not understood anything yet.

Mr. BAILEY. I know I do not understand the sign language very well. [Laughter.]

Mr. RAY of New York. I hope the gentleman will not get out of patience.

Mr. BAILEY. I am not out of patience.

Mr. RAY of New York. I was conversing with and listening to the conversation of another gentleman, and when I understood the gentleman from Texas to refer to me, I rose for the purpose of asking what his desire was.

Mr. BAILEY. I thought I saw the gentleman from New York shake his head in answer to my question; probably it was in answer to his colleague.

Mr. RAY of New York. I simply desire to know what the gentleman's suggestion was.

Mr. BAILEY. In order to save the time of the House and prevent an appeal, a roll call, and a division, I ask the gentleman from New York if he will not withdraw the objection he made a moment ago and allow the request for unanimous consent preferred by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] to become the order of the House.

Mr. RAY of New York. The request for unanimous consent that was made involves this: That this whole matter, with the points of order and all other questions that have come up, is to go over until the next session of this Congress. Then it is to come up with precisely the same status it has to-day.

Mr. BAILEY. If the gentleman will permit me, the whole purpose of this is that instead of taking the precious time now, at the very end of the session, we take ample time then.

Mr. RAY of New York. You deem the time now, at the end of the session, as more precious than at any other time. I disagree with the gentleman in that expression. I do not think the time now, at the end of the session, is any more precious than it was yesterday. But I waive all that. We will not quarrel over the question as to what particular time is the most precious. If it is the desire on the part of the gentleman from Connecticut and the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Texas, and they think it will promote the great good of the country, and end in the speedy subjugation of the Spanish army and navy, and the rapid growth of the country, and the cultivation of good feeling all over this land, why, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. HILL. I renew my request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York withdraws his objection, and the gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent that this bill go over to be called up, and the call rests with the Committee on Banking and Currency, for the first Wednesday after the first Monday in December, and with all points of order reserved against the bill. Is there objection to the request? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

VERONA E. POLLOCK.

Mr. BRUMM. Mr. Speaker, I have a privileged report. I present the conference report on the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock.

The conference report is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 1.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments numbered 2 and 3, and agree to the same.

CHAS. N. BRUMM,

JOS. V. GRAFF,

JOHN F. RIXEY,

Managers on the part of the House.

WILLIAM V. ALLEN,

FRANCIS E. WARREN,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

The conference report was agreed to.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2256) in reference to the civil service and appointments thereunder.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. OTEY. I object.

Mr. STURTEVANT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4812) to pay J. and W. Seligman & Co. the sum of $1,794.56 for certain coupons detached from United States bonds, which said coupons were lost on the Cunard steamship Oregon, sunk at sea March 14, 1886.

Mr. BRUMM. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. SIMS. Is this a bill from the Committee on Claims?

Mr. STURTEVANT. Yes.

Mr. SIMS. A private bill?

Mr. STURTEVANT. Yes; and it carries no appropriation except to pay for some coupons which were lost on a steamer crossing the ocean in 1886. Here is the testimony from the American consul that the coupons were shipped. And there is a provision that there shall be an indemnity bond given to the Treasury Department. There is also a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury stating that the coupons have never been presented.

Mr. SIMS. I do not want to object to a just bill, but I have in my charge a bill making reimbursement to some of my constituents for money unjustly and illegally taken from them at the point of the bayonet thirty-five years ago, and which General Grant declared should be paid back to them. Yet I can not even get recognition to ask unanimous consent to bring up that bill.

Mr. STURTEVANT. This is an honest and just claim, too.

Mr. SIMS. Not more so than the one which I have in charge, and yet I can not even get recognition.

Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE. I understand that this bill belongs to the class of cases where money or bonds have been destroyed.

Mr. SIMS. I would not stand in the way of any just claim because I can not get justice for parties whom I represent.

Several MEMBERS. That is right.

Mr. BRUMM. Reserving the right to object, I call for the reading of the report.

Mr. STEELE (after a pause). I should like to know whether a report has been made to the House on this bill.

Mr. STURTEVANT. There has been no report from a House committee. This is a Senate bill which passed the Senate on the 28th of June.

Mr. STEELE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I think it ought to have consideration by a House committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STURTEVANT. I object.

Mr. HILBORN. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 4808) authorizing the President to appoint additional cadets at large at the United States Naval Academy.

Mr. STEELE. I object.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill and joint resolution of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

S. 4853. An act to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain; and

S. R. 71. Joint resolution relating to the use of the rooms lately occupied by the Congressional Library in the Capitol.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 7018. An act to provide a steam fog whistle at the entrance to Muskegon Harbor, in the State of Michigan;

H. R. 8063. An act to amend "An act for the preservation of the public peace and protection of property in the District of Columbia," approved July 20, 1892;

H. R. 8064. An act to amend the criminal laws of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 8614. An act to correct the naval record of George W. Sherrard;

H. R. 9204. An act to regulate the construction of barbed-wire fences in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 9414. An act for the relief of Mathilda Akerblom Molin.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 4237) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army, in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

MAJ. JOSEPH W. WHAM.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will withdraw that motion.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I withdraw it if there is any business to be presented.

Mr. CANNON. There is. I desire to call up a House bill which has just been returned from the Senate with an amendment.

The amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4237) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army, was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to revoke the order of the President approving the proceedings of the general court-martial which sentenced Maj. J. W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to be dismissed the service, and mitigating the sentence to suspension on half pay from rank, duty, and all privileges until January 18, 1904, his name to be placed at the foot of the lists of majors in the Pay Department, and to disapprove the sentence of dismissal of Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, and to restore him to duty, previous rank and status in the United States Army, and full pay from and after the passage of this act." Amend the title so as to read: "An act to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army."

Mr. BRUNDIDGE. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will allow this amendment of the Senate to be concurred in.

Mr. KING. I hope the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. BRUNDIDGE] will not press the motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. As the Chair understands, the motion to adjourn is withdrawn. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] moves to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF REVISED STATUTES.

Mr. HENDERSON. I desire to move a change of reference where a mistake has been made to-day. House bill No. 8925, to amend sections 1698 and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States—a bill which came from the Committee on the Judiciary and was passed by the House—came back to-day from the Senate with an amendment and was by an oversight referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. I ask that the reference be changed to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I want to reserve the right to object while I hear something from the gentleman from Iowa as to what is really intended by this proposed action.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will say to the gentleman that this bill has passed the Senate. It requires foreign consuls who are intrusted with money to be compelled to give bond to protect American citizens who may intrust such moneys to them. It passed the House and has passed the Senate with an amendment, and I want it to go into a conference on the Senate amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I understood that this was a request for a change of reference.

Mr. HENDERSON. Yes; and then if the change is made I will ask to discharge the committee to which it is referred, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I shall not object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. HENDERSON. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from the further consideration of the bill, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. My motion, of course, includes a motion to disagree to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. What is the motion?

Mr. JENKINS. The motion of the gentleman from Iowa is that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from its further consideration, and that the House nonconcur in the amendment of the Senate and agree to the conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the suggestion of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH PIKES PEAK TIMBER LAND RESERVE.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call up again the bill H. R. 10766, which I asked to consider a short time ago, and to which objection was made. The objection has been withdrawn. I refer to the bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

The bill was again read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. BELL. I move the adoption of the amendment recommended by the committee.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Add at the end of the bill: "And provided, That the right of way herein granted shall not interfere with the right of way on Government land through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve, granted by an act of Congress entitled 'An act granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek District Railway Company,' approved June 27, 1893."

The amendment was considered, and agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BELL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL CADETS.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. Speaker, I now renew my request for unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 4808) authorizing the President to appoint additional cadets at large at the United States Naval Academy.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that on a statement made to me by several members of the House that the President of the United States had expressed a wish that this bill should become a law, I withdraw the objection I formerly made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill will be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to appoint during the next fiscal year five cadets at large at the United States Naval Academy, to be in addition to the number heretofore authorized by law, said appointments to be subject to the conditions and requirements of existing laws and regulations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HANDY. I would like to hear the reading of that bill again.

The bill was again reported.

Mr. HANDY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether the effect of this proposition is to give the President permanently ten more appointments to the Naval Academy?

Mr. HILBORN. Oh, no; it is only for the present year, and provides for five additional appointments, and no more.

Mr. HANDY. What is the special reason?

Mr. HILBORN. Well, the gentleman knows that Captain Gridley, of the Olympia, is dead. He has a son—

Mr. HANDY. Has he five sons?

Mr. HILBORN. No; but Ensign Bagley and others are to be considered, in view of their services, in making these selections.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there further objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I desire to ask, before this bill is considered, whether the Committee on Naval Affairs has had it before it for consideration?

Mr. HILBORN. This bill has passed the Senate, and has received a favorable report from the committee of the House. I have taken up the Senate bill, as that will end the matter. This is a bill that the President is specially interested in.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I know that he is. It gives him five nice appointments.

Now, if there is any good reason for the passage of the bill, I shall not object, but I would like the gentleman from California to state some sufficient reason why we should pass it in this manner. The gentleman says the President desires it, but I would hardly think the President would care to go on record with that admission.

Mr. HILBORN. Captain Gridley, who was in command of the Olympia during the fight at Manila—

Mr. RAY of New York. I should like to know what this bill is.

Mr. HILBORN. I ask to have it read again.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. It gives to the President the power to appoint five additional cadets at Annapolis this year.

Mr. HILBORN. I will ask to have the bill read again.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will again report the bill.

The bill was again read.

Mr. BERRY. I will ask the gentleman from California if he will allow an amendment that each Congressional district shall have an additional appointment?

Mr. HILBORN. Oh, no; this is to meet a sort of emergency.

Mr. BERRY. I have had a great many demands from my district. There are about forty young fellows there who want to get in.

Mr. HILBORN. This will be for officers' sons—

A MEMBER. Senators' sons.

Mr. HILBORN. For officers' sons and the sons of men who have distinguished themselves in this war. For instance, Captain Gridley, who was in command of the Olympia during the fight at Manila and is now dead, has a son who is eligible for the appointment. The President is very desirous of appointing that boy. Now, there was Ensign Bagley, who lost his life on the Winslow the other day. He has a brother whom the President would like to appoint.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. Who are the other three?

Mr. HILBORN. This is only temporary in its effect.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Suppose you confine your bill to those two.

Mr. LACEY. I should like to ask if this does not also include young Daigman, the boy who is to-day in prison at Santiago—an Iowa boy who has no father?

Mr. HILBORN. I only speak of those that I know of.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Has the President promised all these appointments?

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. They are all peddled out.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I object to the bill.

Mr. CANNON. May I say a word to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. RICHARDSON. If there is any good reason for the passage of the bill, I will not object.

Mr. CANNON. The President, under existing law, as we all understand, has certain appointments annually. Now, we are in a period of war, with the casualties of war. I want to appeal to the gentleman from Tennessee, as we are enlarging the Academy, as the Navy is being enlarged and is to be enlarged, if it is not apt and proper that these five appointments shall be given to the President? I do not think, if the gentleman will allow me, that it is apt to say that they are "peddled out."

Mr. RICHARDSON. I did not use that language.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. I did.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman has said that Ensign Bagley has a brother. Now, if there is any other case that would meet public sentiment, a case of that kind—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Will they be appointed on their own account, or because they are kin to somebody?

Mr. CANNON. If there are other cases that would meet with public approbation, cases in which it would be, after all, broad justice and equity, why should not these nominations be made? It seems to me that leeway ought to be given to the Chief Executive at this time, and I believe we all think he would not abuse the power that might be given him.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I want to say a word in reply to the gentleman. I recognize the fact that we are in war, but the gentleman would not insist that the appointment of five cadets now, who will not graduate from that Academy under six years, could be of any service in this war?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, certainly not.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Now, that is the first reason that the gentleman gives. The next is that it will accommodate the President, or accommodate certain parties who are applying for these places. Now, if we want to increase the number, or if the President ought to be allowed an additional number of appointments, it ought to be done by an act giving him that right permanently. I do not see why he should not have the right to appoint fifteen if ten are not enough. But it looks like an emergent proposition brought here now, when we are increasing expenditures in other directions, to make a temporary increase of these five additional cadets. I can not see any use in it, and I object because I do not see any. If it is the desire of the House to consider the measure, I will not interpose my objection, but I shall vote against the proposition.

Mr. CANNON. I hope the gentleman will allow the House to consider the matter, because, after all, I do not believe we shall disagree much. I do not want to increase this branch permanently unless it is necessary.

Mr. LOVE. I do not want to object, but I want to ask this question: Suppose these young men are not qualified to stand the examination?

Mr. CANNON. Then they could not go in.

Mr. LOVE. How do you know these particular young men are qualified?

Mr. CANNON. I do not know that they will get in.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. The general principle of putting men into Annapolis because they are kin to somebody is bad.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HEPBURN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman?

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. No, Mr. Speaker, I do not object, but I desire to ask a few questions or I shall object. That is all. I understand that the gentleman who asks to have this bill considered is perfectly willing that it should be discussed.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of giving this power to the President, but I am certainly opposed to doing this for certain special people already picked out, and this House ought not to do that. I desire to say that for more than a year I have been endeavoring to get a young man appointed—the son of an officer in the Navy who served during the entire war, who gave up his life in the service of his country, and whose mother is to-day impoverished—but I can not secure his appointment. Though a Republican boy, I offered it to him.

I sought to give it to him and the President has been furnished with full information of the necessities of this case, and yet we find that the preference was made of a living officer's son, who was appointed. Now, then, if it is true we are to pass this bill and name the men whose sons are already selected for honor and preferment, I am perfectly willing to do anything that I can; but if you are to select two or three that you have named and others that are unnamed, I certainly object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. CANNON. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I want an opportunity, but the gentleman is making an inquiry.

Mr. CANNON. I do not know whether all these parties are to be chosen. I understood the gentleman from California to speak of them, possibly as some indication of the propriety of choosing them. I do not think there is any effort to pledge the President to appoint anybody.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. I understood the gentleman to name two whom the President has already indicated he will appoint.

Mr. HILBORN. I spoke of two as being boys who had been suggested to the President.

Mr. FARIS. Mr. Speaker, we would like to know what is going on in that symposium.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All gentlemen will please be seated.

Mr. HANDY. I call for the regular order.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced the appointment of the following conferees:

On the bill (H. R. 8925) to amend sections 1697, 1698, and 1734 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to consuls and vice-consul generals, consuls and vice-consuls, and commercial agents, Mr. CONNOLLY, Mr. OTJEN, and Mr. ELLIOTT.

On the bill (S. 622) concerning sail vessels over 700 tons, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. FITZGERALD.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, a Representative from the State of New York, be, and hereby is, elected Speaker pro tempore during the temporary absence of the Speaker.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say to the House that there is a great accumulation of enrolled bills which are to be signed and transmitted to the Senate and Executive; and, without knowing distinctly the purpose of the Speaker, it has been thought advisable that we put ourselves in a condition where these bills can be signed and the business of the House transacted.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

NOTIFICATION TO THE SENATE.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to notify the Senate that the House has elected the Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, a Representative from the State of New York, as Speaker pro tempore during the temporary absence of the Speaker.

The resolution was agreed to.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the election of Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, a Representative from the State of New York, as Speaker pro tempore of the House of Representatives during the temporary absence of the Speaker.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPORT OF THOMAS W. CRIDLER.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up from the Speaker's table Senate concurrent resolution 47 and ask for its present consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution authorizing the Public Printer to print 6,000 copies of the report of the special commissioner to the Paris Exposition.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Public Printer be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to print 6,000 copies of Senate Document No. 293, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, known as the report of Thomas W. Cridler, Third Assistant Secretary of State, who was appointed a special commissioner in relation to the acceptance by the Government of the United States of the invitation of France to participate in the international exposition to be held at Paris from April 15 to November 5, 1900, of which 1,000 copies are to be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and the remaining 3,000 copies to be placed at the disposal of the acting commissioner for distribution to intending exhibitors and for the use of the permanent commission when it organizes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken; and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was adopted was laid on the table.

FREE PUBLIC HIGHWAYS INTO YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK.

Mr. DE VRIES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3675) to examine, determine, and report the facts necessary to the establishment of free public highways into the Yosemite National Park, and appropriating moneys therefor.

The Clerk read the bill at length.

Mr. RAY of New York. Reserving the right to object, has this been referred to a House committee?

Mr. DE VRIES. It has, and been reported unanimously by the Committee on Public Lands of the House, and by a similar committee of the Senate and passed by the Senate.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. How long ago was it reported?

Mr. SHAFROTH. About two months ago.

Mr. DE VRIES. The chairman of the Committee on Public Lands can probably inform you; I think about two months ago.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I see the bill provides that one of the commissioners shall be a member of the Engineer Corps of the Regular Army of the United States and one shall be an officer of the Army.

Mr. LACEY. Yes; there ought to be an amendment as to one of these men, for one of them, I think, has gone to Manila.

Mr. DE VRIES. I have already prepared an amendment to that effect.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. We can not spare any officers of the Engineer Corps or of the Army now.

Mr. LACEY. No; we will not stop the war on this account.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. And then, again, it requires that it shall be done in ten days.

Mr. LACEY. No; any time prior to the first Monday in December.

Mr. LOUD. There are three engineer officers in California now doing nothing else.

Mr. RAY of New York. This bill appropriates money.

Mr. DE VRIES. A very small amount, $3,000; it is only to examine, investigate, and report the facts.

Mr. RAY of New York. And it takes the time of three engineer officers of the Army.

Mr. DE VRIES. Oh, no. I stated that objection would be obviated by an amendment which I will offer at the proper time.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I object. If the gentleman from California will amend the bill so as not to take any engineer officers or any army officers and leave off the time limit, I will withdraw the objection.

Mr. LACEY. Let the time be extended to a year from next December.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Very well. I will withdraw my objection if the time is extended to December, 1899.

Mr. DE VRIES. I will offer an amendment to that effect.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RAY of New York. I object.

DREDGING CHANNEL IN HARBOR OF NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 4127) to provide for dredging the channel in the harbor of New Bedford, Mass.

The Clerk read the bill at length.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Reserving the right to object, I want some explanation of it.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this bill has already passed the Senate and would have been presented to the House by my predecessor, the late Mr. Simpkins, had he lived. It is a bill authorizing the dredging of the harbor in New Bedford and Acushnet River. The bridge where the new draw is located, which makes the dredging provided for in this bill necessary, is being built by the county of Bristol to replace a bridge built in 1796.

The new bridge has a width of 70 feet, and the location of the draw has been changed, so that it is necessary to dredge the river. This work has been reported upon favorably by the engineers of the War Department and approved by the entire River and Harbor Committee. This new draw is 900 feet east of the location of the draw on the old bridge, which it is necessary to remove to meet the requirements of the War Department. The present depth of the water where the new draw is located is 12 feet. The War Department requires that there shall be a depth of 18 feet at low water and that before the use of the old draw is discontinued the dredging must be completed at the new location. This delays the completion of the new structure and is of great disadvantage to the contractors and to the county.

There has been over $500,000 already expended by the county of Bristol upon this bridge, and the city of Fall River, where I reside, and the city of Taunton, where my colleague [Mr. LOVERING] resides, pay more than one-third of the interest money that is being paid on account of the construction of this bridge, which when completed will cost about $1,000,000. Over $800,000 has already been appropriated. The interest money now paid on the bonds issued by the county of Bristol amounts to more money than the expense of dredging this river provided for in the bill presented. We think the county of Bristol ought to be relieved from paying interest money by reason of the delay caused through the failure to provide for the dredging which has already been ordered by the War Department. When the new structure is completed the expense is to be borne by the towns and cities especially benefited, and the county will then be relieved.

Over one-half of the area of the harbor of New Bedford lies north of the bridge. I noticed in the criticisms made when this matter was presented earlier in the year the question was asked why the location of the draw was changed. It was because the location of the draw in the old bridge was on one side, whereas the new location places it in the center of the river, where the greater width of the draw and the very much less liability of obstruction from passing vessels and those located at the wharves makes a great improvement to navigation.

Mr. RICHARDSON. What committee has reported this bill?
Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It was introduced by Senator LODGE in the Senate, and I understand that the Committee on Rivers and Harbors has unanimously reported the bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Then the bill has not been reported by any committee of the House?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I understand it has by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Mr. RICHARDSON. This is a river and harbor item?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Yes; but I ask that unanimous consent may be given in order that it be now passed by the House, as it is very necessary.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I see the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations is present. If he does not object, I am sure I do not. I ought to state, though, that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] is not here.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. This bill meets the full approval of the committee. I am so assured by members of the committee. I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CANNON. I want to say—

Mr. VANDIVER. I object.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker pro tempore signed the same:

H. R. 10280. An act to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets;

H. R. 9755. An act granting a pension to Matilda Waedel;

H. R. 4315. An act to increase the pension of George D. Phinney;

H. R. 377. An act granting a pension to Susan I. Barrows;

H. R. 7260. An act granting a pension to James E. Jones;

H. R. 4629. An act for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles;

H. R. 10691. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes;

H. R. 9874. An act for the relief of John C. Coleman, of Emanuel County, Ga.;

H. R. 3598. An act granting a pension to Henrietta Fowler;

H. R. 3081. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Fogerty;

H. R. 2267. An act to increase the pension of Jeremiah Hackett;

H. R. 6064. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Watts;

H. R. 8266. An act to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons;

H. R. 8286. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo O. Drake;

H. R. 6799. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren W. Morgan;

H. R. 7306. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Beckwith;

H. R. 6093. An act granting a pension to Ellen E. Nash;

H. R. 6941. An act granting an increase of pension to James C. Hervey;

H. R. 2276. An act granting an increase of pension to Almon Stuart;

H. R. 9195. An act granting a pension to Foster C. Carl;

H. R. 5102. An act granting an increase of pension to Edson Sullivan;

H. R. 4139. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton W. Cooper;

H. R. 3565. An act to grant a pension to Theresa Bonnavau;

H. R. 10424. An act to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department of the Army;

H. R. 10561. An act to increase the force of the Ordnance Department;

H. R. 3624. An act granting a pension to Pauline Robbins;

H. Res. 259. Joint resolution to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States;

H. R. 4283. An act granting an increase of pension to William B. Murray;

H. R. 10805. An act to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer soldiers;

H. R. 10477. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build, or authorize the building of, a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River, between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in said State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896;

H. R. 10698. An act directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States;

H. R. 8090. An act granting a pension to Belle Peter;

H. R. 6100. An act to amend section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States;

H. R. 10117. An act granting a pension to Martha Jennie Freer;

H. R. 4977. An act granting a pension to Mary Hannah Clark;

H. R. 1859. An act granting an increase of pension to William Manley;

H. R. 4918. An act for the relief of J. Henry Rives;

H. R. 7362. An act to grant a pension to Junius Alexander; and

H. R. 9732. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 4847. An act to provide an American register for the steamer Titanic;

S. 4809. An act to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army;

S. 3261. An act for the relief of P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal.;

S. 4810. An act to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army;

S. R. 141. Joint resolution regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition, in the year 1901, upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century;

S. R. 139. Joint resolution authorizing the Librarian of Congress to accept the collection of engravings proposed to be donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard;

S. 3707. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory;"

S. 4714. An act to protect the harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes;

S. 4710. An act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 29, 1898; and

S. 4741. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over Tombigbee River in the State of Mississippi.

RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate concurrent resolution No. 46, relative to printing copies of the bulletin on Nut Culture in the United States, was referred to the Committee on Printing.

ALBERT E. REDSTONE.

Mr. BARLOW. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 708) for the relief of Albert E. Redstone. The bill was read.

Mr. BRUMM. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. CANNON. I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was rejected, there being on a division—ayes 33, noes 42.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill just read.

Mr. CANNON. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is the call of committees, and the call rests with the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. BRUMM. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Can the gentleman from California [Mr. BARLOW], after recognition, be taken off the floor by a call of the regular order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A call of the regular order is equivalent to an objection.

Mr. CANNON. As the call for the regular order seems to discommode a good many gentlemen, I withdraw it, and object to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. BARLOW].

JOSEPH H. VAIL.

Mr. PACKER of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill No. 3500, authorizing the restoration of the name of Charles H. Vail, late a first lieutenant in the First United States Cavalry, to the rolls of the Army, and that he be placed on the list of retired officers.

The bill with the amendments of the committee was read.

Mr. BARTLETT. Reserving the right to object, I would like to hear the report read.

Mr. COX. I call for the regular order.

Mr. NORTON of Ohio. I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Pending the announcement of the vote on the motion to adjourn, Mr. BISHOP, by unanimous consent, obtained leave of absence on account of important business.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. CURTIS of Iowa, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3941) regulating the inspection of flour in the District of Columbia, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1654); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MINOR, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9561) for the relief of William L. Orr, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1653); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HURLEY, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5701) to remove the charge of desertion standing against James Hogan, alias James Hennessy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1653); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BROWN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9768) for the relief of Samuel J. Brent, executor of the will of Frances Brent, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1650); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BELKNAP, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7032) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Robert Flower, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1651); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MAHANY (by request): A bill (H. R. 10918) to make assistant and passed assistant surgeons of the Navy correspond in rank with assistant surgeons of the Army—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MOON: A bill (H. R. 10914) to fix the standard of gold and silver coin and the unit of value, and to make all silver coin a full legal tender for all debts, public and private—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. HULL: A bill (H. R. 10935) to indemnify the governors of States for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MAGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 10936) to provide for the collection of the sums remaining due to the United States on account of the issue of United States bonds to aid in the construction of the Kansas Pacific Railway—to the Committee on Pacific Railroads.

By Mr. CURTIS of Kansas: A resolution (House Res. No. 384) to continue the employment of the messenger in charge of the heavy mail wagon during the recess of Congress—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. JENKINS: A joint resolution (H. Res. 294) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for succession to the Presidency and Vice-Presidency—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MEYER of Louisiana: A joint resolution (H. Res. 295) tendering the thanks of Congress to Lieut. Col. R. W. Huntington and the officers and enlisted men of the First Battalion United States Marines for courage and bravery at Guantanamo—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. UPDEGRAFF: A concurrent resolution (House Con. Res. No. 43) to print 3,000 additional copies of Senate Miscellaneous Document No. 278, second session Fifty-third Congress—to the Committee on Printing.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BROWN: A bill (H. R. 10916) to pay a pension to Lucy S. Dunham—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10917) to remove the sentence of court-martial from the military record of Thomas J. Sutton and grant him an honorable discharge—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CODDING: A bill (H. R. 10918) granting a pension to Reuben W. Barney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10919) granting a pension to George Herline—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10920) granting a pension to Benton I. Houser—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10921) to increase the pension of Ella V. B. Myer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMILTON: A bill (H. R. 10922) for the relief of Alfred B. Powell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10923) for the relief of J. F. Banks—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MINOR: A bill (H. R. 10924) granting a pension to Thomas Smith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MUDD: A bill (H. R. 10925) authorizing the Court of Claims to hear and pass upon the claim of Thomas P. Gray for property taken and used by the troops of the United States during the war of the rebellion—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ODELL: A bill (H. R. 10926) for the relief of James McNamara—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 10927) granting a pension to Benjamin G. Flanders—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEAVER: A bill (H. R. 10928) to increase the pension of William Hulsizer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10929) granting an increase of pension to James Allison—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10930) granting a pension to Eliza Rosenfelt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10931) to increase the pension of John V. Sullivan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10932) to increase the pension of John Morris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10933) granting a pension to Sarah A. Kizer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10934) granting an increase of pension to John H. Crawford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FARIS: A bill (H. R. 10937) granting an increase of pension to Enoch V. McVay—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10938) for the relief of James McD. Hays—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10939) granting a pension to James F. Brann—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. HILBORN: Petition of Robert Reed, A. B. Averell, and other citizens of the State of California, relating to certain tracts of timber lands within the limits of the Yosemite National Park, in the State of California—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Papers relating to the claim of John F. Haupt, of Knoxville, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, July 8, 1898.

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian.

Prayer by Rev. B. L. WHITMAN, D. D., of the city of Washington, President of Columbia University.

On motion of Mr. TELLER, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings was dispensed with.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION AT OMAHA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following telegraphic communication from the president of the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition; which was read:

OMAHA, NEBR., July 7, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor respectfully to request that you will officially bring to the attention of the Senate of the United States the cordial invitation hereby extended by the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition to that honorable body to attend this exposition on a day to be fixed by the Senate and House of Representatives, to be known as "Government Day." I would respectfully call your attention to the fact that this exposition particularly represents the resources and products of that vast country lying west of the Mississippi River, which comprises more than two-thirds of the area of the United States, and that in magnitude and importance this exposition is second only to the Columbian World's Fair. The United States Government has recognized this exposition by an appropriation for a building and an exhibit, and it is the earnest desire of the managers to set apart one day with proper ceremonies to celebrate the attendance of the distinguished members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant.

GURDON W. WATTLES, President

Hon. GARRET A. HOBART.

Vice-President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Mr. ALLEN. I think that the communication ought to be referred to the Select Committee on International Expositions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There being no objection, the communication will be referred to the Select Committee on International Expositions.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills and joint resolutions:

A bill (H. R. 4237) to enable the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 8950) increasing the pension of Mrs. Sarah Fry;

A bill (H. R. 9140) granting an increase of pension to Felix Tait;

A bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 3818) to refund certain import duties;

A bill (H. R. 4304) regulating the postage on letters written by the blind;

A bill (H. R. 9768) for the relief of Samuel J. Brent, executor of the will of Frances Brent and administrator de bonis non of the estate of Rev. J. Brent;

A bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company;

A bill (H. R. 10912) for adjusting clothing account for deceased soldiers in certain cases; and

A bill (H. R. 10915) making an appropriation to execute certain provisions of the act of Congress for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print 6,000 copies of the report on the International Exposition at Paris, by Thomas W. Cridler.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker pro tempore of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 769) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington;

A bill (S. 1119) granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr.;

A joint resolution (S. R. 182) relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek;

A bill (H. R. 727) granting a pension to Olive H. South;

A bill (H. R. 2497) granting an increase of pension to James E. Eaton;

A bill (H. R. 3073) granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark;

A bill (H. R. 3001) granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin;

A bill (H. R. 3164) granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. 4237) to authorize the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 4274) granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman;

A bill (H. R. 4484) granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenny;

A bill (H. R. 4811) granting a pension to Jane E. Zink;

A bill (H. R. 4916) granting a pension to Virginia C. Fleanor;

A bill (H. R. 5883) to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6149) to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases;

A bill (H. R. 6427) granting a pension to Clarissa A. Dunham;

A bill (H. R. 6482) granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach;

A bill (H. R. 6525) granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan;

A bill (H. R. 7018) to provide a steam fog whistle at the entrance to Muskegon Harbor, in the State of Michigan;

A bill (H. R. 7841) granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton;

A bill (H. R. 7989) granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett;

A bill (H. R. 8063) to amend "An act for the preservation of the public peace and protection of property in the District of Columbia," approved July 29, 1892;

A bill (H. R. 8064) to amend the criminal laws of the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 8243) granting a pension to John Connolly;

A bill (H. R. 8501) granting a pension to Corydon G. Crafts;

A bill (H. R. 8551) granting an increase of pension to Armenias H. Evans;

A bill (H. R. 8614) to correct the naval record of George W. Sherrard;

A bill (H. R. 8670) granting a pension to Pryor Perkins;

A bill (H. R. 8679) granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw;

A bill (H. R. 8724) granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou;

A bill (H. R. 8950) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Fry;

A bill (H. R. 9140) granting an increase of pension to Felix Tait;

A bill (H. R. 9204) to regulate the construction of barbed-wire fences in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 9206) to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. 9414) for the relief of Mathilda Akerblom Molin;

A bill (H. R. 9466) granting an increase of pension to John H. Boyd;

A bill (H. R. 9765) to increase the pension of John N. Wiley;

A bill (H. R. 10051) to increase the number of post quarter-master-sergeants in the United States Army;

A bill (H. R. 10510) providing for the transfer from the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit to the Supreme Court of certain appeals from the district court for Alaska;

A bill (H. R. 10635) fixing pay and allowances of chaplains for volunteer regiments;

A bill (H. R. 10885) making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 270) to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, and for other purposes.

MEMORIAL.

Mr. GEAR presented a memorial of Torrence Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Iowa, of Keokuk, Iowa, remonstrating against the erection of the proposed monument to the late Gen. Albert Pike; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. CARTER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom the subject was referred, reported a bill (S. 4858) to increase the efficiency of the Judge-Advocate-General's and Pay Departments of the Army; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3669) granting a pension to Susan Buck, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. ALLISON. I report from the Committee on Appropriations the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives providing for the final adjournment of the two Houses, and I ask for its present consideration.

The concurrent resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Friday, July 8, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. LINDSAY. Before the resolution is acted upon, I should like to make an inquiry of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, who is also a member of the Committee on Finance. What, if any, disposition is proposed to be made at this session of House bill 10253? What action has the Finance Committee taken or does it propose to take in regard to that bill? It is a matter of very great interest to an industry in my State which pays, I believe, almost one-half of the internal-revenue tax on distilled spirits paid each year to the Government. The delay of that measure is likely to result in great injury to those people, and it is fair to them that we should understand what, if any, action has been or is to be taken with regard to that bill.

Mr. MORRILL rose.

Mr. LINDSAY. Very well; let the chairman of the Committee on Finance answer the question.

Mr. MORRILL. I will state to the Senator from Kentucky that a subcommittee have been appointed to sit during the recess and make a report at the next session of Congress.

Mr. LINDSAY. Do I understand that the subcommittee has had the bill under consideration?

Mr. MORRILL. They have it under consideration.

Mr. LINDSAY. I should like to hear something from the subcommittee on the subject.

Mr. MORRILL. I do not think that the subcommittee have had any meeting. They have not had time to have a meeting during the present session.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that the bill came over from the House at a pretty late day in the session. There were some meetings of a subcommittee on the subject, but we were not able to reach a conclusion respecting it. There are several matters cognate to or connected with that bill, and the committee decided that it should go over until next winter, and that in the meantime there should be a full investigation of all the questions connected with distilled spirits that were before the committee.

As respects the particular bill to which the Senator alludes, I have given it such examination as I could in connection with other duties, and I am satisfied that such a bill ought to pass. I think I can assure the Senator that the subcommittee will give the matter attention during the vacation and make an early report. But as the Senator knows, there are provisions in the bill outside of the matter in which the people of his State are interested, and when we take up the bill it will be necessary for us to consider all those questions. So the conclusion of the committee was that it could not be completed at this session.

I have no doubt that early at the next session a report will be made by the committee, dealing with this question and other questions relating to distilled spirits. I shall be exceedingly sorry if any great injury occurs because of the delay. I am myself, I will say to the Senator, in sympathy with the views of the House upon this particular bill so far as relates to the outage, so called, of distilled spirits. There are other things in it that we were not able to examine thoroughly, and I do not wish to be committed to them. What the other members of the committee may think about it I am not prepared to say.

Mr. ALDRICH subsequently said: I desire to say, in connection with the colloquy which took place between the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] this morning, that it is the intention of the subcommittee on finance to report the whisky-outage bill at the beginning of the next session of Congress.

Mr. CANNON. Pending the consideration of the resolution now before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the morning business House bill 7389 may be made the special order.

Mr. CULLOM. What is the bill?

Mr. CANNON. It is known as the eight-hour bill.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Mr. President, I feel obliged to object to any such request. That bill ought not to be pressed at this session. It is too large a bill. It affects interests all over the United States, and it comes to me as a surprise. I had expected that there would be an opportunity to enable some persons in my State, who wished to have a hearing, to be heard before the committee; and when the report of the evidence was made, I did not know that the hearing had been concluded. I expected that there would be an opportunity for parties in my State to be heard in opposition to the bill.

I inquired of the chairman whether the committee intended to report the bill at the present session, and he said the bill would probably not be reported at this session. Then I did not any longer try to secure a hearing. The bill was reported without recommendation. I then asked the chairman if it was expected that the bill would be considered at this session, and he said it was not, and other members of the committee gave me the same assurance.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President—

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Now, this bill can not pass—

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President—

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. In one moment. The bill must have discussion, and extended discussion, and it is manifest that it can not be considered as it ought to be considered at the present session. I am therefore obliged to object to the request. At the next session it can be taken up early and fully discussed, and it ought to be fully discussed, and it ought to be amended, in my judgment, if it is to pass at all. There is no opportunity to consider it now.

Mr. CANNON. I interrupted the Senator from Connecticut to ask for order in the Chamber, as I was unable to hear a portion of his remarks.

I desire to say with regard to my efforts on this and other occasions to call up the bill for action that so far as I know, as a member of the committee which reported the measure to this body, there never was any understanding in the committee that the bill would not be pressed for final action at the present session of Congress. I have the highest regard for the Senator from Connecticut, and after the statement by him would have been glad to have waived my request had it not been a matter of so much importance. I feel that this is the most imperative measure now pending before the Senate.

The hearings by the committee were much more extended than are often given to legislation widely affecting the interests of labor and capital. Hearings were had from the representatives of the great corporations of the country employing labor, and also from labor leaders. There seemed to be ample opportunity given for all sides to be heard.

The bill came to us from the House of Representatives, and while it is true that it was reported from the committee without recommendation, there was recorded in the committee a distinct understanding that any member of the committee might have the privilege to call up the bill at any time during the session. It was thoroughly understood in the committee that that effort would be made.

While I wish to cast no reflection on the chairman or any other member of the committee to whom allusion has been made by the Senator from Connecticut, it was absolutely without warrant that any such assurance should have been given to him. Every member of the committee present at the final meeting knew perfectly well that there would be an effort made to call up the bill at this session and to get action thereon.

In view of the objection, I move that at the conclusion of the morning business the Senate make a special order of House bill 7389.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Utah is not in order at this time.

Mr. ALLISON. Now I hope we shall have a vote upon the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Utah can only be entertained at the conclusion of morning business.

Mr. CANNON. I shall renew the motion at a later hour.

Mr. MORGAN. What is the business before the Senate?

Mr. ALLISON. I hope we may now have a vote upon the resolution.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to hear the resolution read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution relating to final adjournment.

The concurrent resolution was read by the Secretary.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I dislike to have any disagreement with the very wise and able and also patriotic gentlemen who are upon the Committee on Appropriations; but I can not see that there is a necessity, nor do I see that there is any reason, for the adjournment of Congress to-day. It is a hasty, imprudent, dangerous movement, in my opinion. The President of the United States has not signified, so far as I know or have heard, any wish at all to get rid of Congress, to use an expression that some of our Chief Executives have sometimes indulged in. On the contrary, I think I am justified in the assumption that the President would like to have the advice of Congress here in the very critical stages of our history through which we are passing.

It appears to me, and I think I only express the common opinion of the country, that the war with Spain is drawing to its conclusion, and that that conclusion will bring immediately to the consideration of Congress questions that we have never heretofore considered; questions as to which we have never established a precedent; questions of the very gravest importance to the country of any that have ever arisen in all the line of our history.

I know the impatience of Senators to get away from here, and personally I have some sympathy with that feeling, but I think I would despise myself if for my personal convenience or my political aspirations or hopes I should go off from Washington City and leave the Army in the field in the difficulties that they are in now, with no provision made at all, except of a very general sort, for the care of them.

We do not know in what emergencies we are to be placed. We do not know what troubles lie just in front of us. If the Army can afford to stay in the field and fight the battles of the country, the Senate and the House of Representatives can afford to sit here in comfort and in shade, enjoying their high function and their elegant ease and quietude, while we are trying to perform the duties that belong to us as a body.

Sir, it would be a reproach to this Government, after we have concluded to pass this resolution, if the President in the next thirty or forty days should find it necessary to call us back to our posts of duty. And I do not doubt at all that he will be compelled to do so, or else he will feel authorized in dealing with the great subjects that are now open and unconsidered to exercise the Executive will upon his personal responsibility in a way that he perhaps would not feel justified in doing if the Congress of the United States were here for the purpose of being consulted.

Now, sir, we can get rid of this difficulty by a substitute, which, of course, I know the committee are not going even to consider. I know these gentlemen are in a hurry to get away. It is either a question of personal convenience with them or else it is a question of avoiding responsibilities; I do not know and I do not care which. It is not because the public work has been completed. That is not true. There is much public work here of a very important character that Congress has not considered, and it is adjourning at 2 o'clock to-day for the purpose of refusing it consideration. A substitute could be very easily adopted for the resolution which would meet all the exigencies of this occasion. Agree to take a recess until 12 o'clock noon on the first Monday in September, when Congress would reassemble, and if by Wednesday of that week a quorum is not present in the two Houses, then the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives will be required to adjourn their Houses, respectively, sine die, which would carry them over until December.

Sir, we ought to make a provision of that kind in place of the resolution we are about to adopt, and the adoption of which I know is a foregone conclusion. And it is a spasmodic conclusion. It has been reached in the last few hours. On yesterday the Senate had no idea of a sine die adjournment to-day at 2 o'clock.

We have not yet the offices in the Army filled. There are men now fighting the battles of this country in the field whose commissions have not as yet been passed upon by the Senate of the United States. I am informed that a number of those nominations are coming in this morning, about which we shall have to act in a very great hurry, without any consideration.

Now, let me ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations what is the reason for the haste which drives us to an adjournment at 2 o'clock to-day? Let some reason be stated. Where is the great public emergency that requires it? Can we be sitting here with nothing to do, with our fingers in our mouths, when Senators are pressing for the consideration of bills, and when the President himself is still sending in appointments here for the purpose of getting commissions even to fill the Army, to say nothing about the civil offices that are yet unprovided for? Let me ask these Senators to answer why it is that they want to leave this Chamber and go off to amuse themselves, to entertain themselves, or to attend to their personal affairs, or their elections, if you please? Why do they wish to do this to-day?

Let us have some answer to that, when we are approaching the solemn moment of assuming recklessly the responsibilities that are being thrust upon us by this resolution. It is done in hot haste. Whether there is some political combination about it or not I do not know. I always suspect such things. I know that there is no man in the Senate to-day who is suffering in his person to such an extent that he ought to be excused from service here, or if he is, we will excuse him. We have not gone into the state of dilapidation and overwork that we fear has been reached by the army of General Shafter at Santiago de Cuba. We have not been bearing packs on our backs of 50 pounds each, toiling up the steep and rugged ascents about the San Juan Mountain and in the heat of a tropical sun, falling down by the wayside and waiting until nature shall sufficiently restore herself that we can carry our guns to the top of the hill and defend our flag against the enemy.

We are not in that condition of dilapidation. So far as I can see, we are all sound. We are all still in the possession of our faculties. We have not yet been overworked. We have not had a night session during this Congress. It has been incumbent upon me since I have been in the Senate to stay sometimes in my seat for three nights in succession. I have been here on various occasions when we had to occupy the Sabbath day for the purpose of enacting laws to provide for the public wants and necessities. Now we scatter off without consideration for anybody or anything except our personal convenience and our personal comfort.

Mr. President, I can not think of it as anything else than an unnecessary and an unpatriotic abandonment of the post of duty, and the country will so regard it. These things can not be done in times like these without responsibility. There is to be no public immunity or condonation or pardon or forgiveness for that man in the United States to-day, whether he is in public office or in private life, who abandons his post of duty and refuses to stand by his country in its extremity.

Do we know where the fleet of Camara is going? Is the fleet of Camara yet settled in its course, so that we know the point of attack? Is it Manila? Is it Hawaii? Is it San Francisco? Is it the Klondike travelers, who pass from land to land across an ocean three thousand and more miles long? What do we know about what will be revealed even in the next twenty-four hours, and why do we, while the guns are firing at Santiago de Cuba, abandon our posts and go away as if we had accomplished all of our duty to the country? Sir, we have not done it. [Applause in the galleries.]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Applause must not be repeated in the galleries.

Mr. MORGAN. We have not performed our duty, Mr. President. I might refer to some measures that are pending before Congress that ought to be acted upon; but I do not refer to any special measure. I refer to that which is in the mind of every Senator on this floor who knows perfectly well that he has measures of his own he is trying to take care of, that need to be considered.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Alabama to the fact that the press this morning indicates that possibly we may be called upon to act upon a treaty very soon.

Mr. MORGAN. Very good.

Mr. ALLEN. And we ought to be in session at that time.

Mr. MORGAN. We ought to be in session; and unless we intend to abandon the whole of this subject into the hands of the Executive and throw the responsibility upon him, we have no right to leave this Chamber and adjourn sine die.

Mr. DANIEL. Will the Senator allow me to make a suggestion? In the matter of a treaty the President and the Senate are all that will be necessary.

Mr. ALLEN. That is true. That is what I am speaking of. I say the Senate ought to be in session.

Mr. MORGAN. No, Mr. President, I beg pardon of the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Nebraska. They have not looked as far into the matter perhaps as they might have been expected to do. A treaty is a treaty of peace or else it is no treaty at all. It is not going to be a treaty of surrender on the part of the United States to Spain. It is not going to be the withdrawal of our armies and the hauling down of our flag in Cuba or anywhere else. It will be a treaty of peace; and whether that treaty is predicated upon the surrender of all the possessions of the Spanish colonies into the control of the United States or not, of course it is all conjectural. We have our individual opinions as to what we would be willing to do in regard to a matter of that kind which it would be very indiscreet at this time to announce.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator will permit me, that action does not require the presence of the House. It requires the presence of the Senate.

Mr. MORGAN. There is the very point where the Senator and I differ. The very moment a treaty of peace is signed by the President of the United States and the King of Spain and it has been ratified by the Senate of the United States, then the military power of the President of the United States ceases to exist in the captured colonies, and the legislative power can not be extended there except by act of Congress. So it has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Are we to leave the President here in this category, so that he can assemble the Senate, as he can do without calling Congress together, to act upon a treaty of peace which involves at least the liberty of Cuba, and which may involve the acquisition of Puerto Rico, and the acquisition of the Philippine Islands and the Ladrões? He may call the Senate together to act upon a treaty of peace, and when that is done, the very next thing, his power having ceased as the military commander by the restoration of peace and the ratification of that treaty, our power as the Congress of the United States comes immediately into effect and we are obliged to be here to see to it.

Now, I have presented this subject to the attention of the Senate. I have shown them and the country that they are leaving the President of the United States, as I conceive, and their post of duty in a time of extreme peril, forcing the President of the United States, if you please, to bring together the Congress of the United States in a called session.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. I was so unfortunate as not to be here when the Senator began his remarks. What is the Senator's proposition? Is it that we should remain in session until there is a treaty of peace, or until the termination of hostilities?

Mr. MORGAN. My proposition is that we should stay here until it is obviously clear that we can accomplish nothing for the good of the country by remaining. But if we go away we ought to take simply a recess and not a final adjournment. We ought to come back on the first Monday in September at noon, and if the emergency is not sufficient to induce the Houses to meet on that occasion, then we ought to authorize the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate to adjourn their respective bodies sine die. That is what we ought to do, in my judgment. The Senator asked me for my opinion, and he has it.

But we ought not to go away. There is, so far as I have heard, no excuse for it. There is no reason for it. There is no necessity for it. On the contrary, all the arguments are against it.

I shall content myself to vote "no" upon this proposition without the effort to introduce a substitute, which I am satisfied would fail, because when the leaders of the two Houses, as they are called, and that turns out to be the fact, have made up their minds that these Houses shall stand adjourned at a certain hour, that, sir, is a decree written in the book of fate that no man can reverse, unless they shall yield to the persuasions of arguments and take a different course of their own motion. But I notify the Senators who are concerned in this action that there is an accountability to the people of the United States which they will not escape by going away from their posts of duty at 3 o'clock to-day.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, the Committee on Appropriations seem to fail absolutely to give any reason why we should adjourn to-day. The resolution is simply formally presented, and we are asked to accept it and adopt it and adjourn with fully 200 important bills on the Calendar that ought to be considered before Congress adjourns.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. ALLEN. I will.

Mr. SPOONER. Did the Senator ever know the Senate to adjourn without having several hundred bills on the Calendar which Senators thought ought to be considered?

Mr. ALLEN. I never knew it to adjourn with as many important bills on the Calendar as there are now. Not only that, but there are many bills that have passed both branches of Congress and are now in process of adjustment by committees of conference that could be presented to both Houses this afternoon and no doubt would be signed by the President, and we ought not to adjourn until the conferees have had an opportunity to report.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me again?

Mr. ALLEN. I will.

Mr. SPOONER. I think if the Senator will look at the record he will find that Congress never has adjourned leaving so few important bills on the Calendar of the Senate undisposed of as there are at this moment.

Mr. ALLEN. That is mere guesswork on the part of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. It is very easy for the Senator to say that, but I think the Senator is mistaken.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator has nothing to do but to take the Calendar and count them.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me?

Mr. ALLEN. I will.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have just counted them, and there are 116 bills on the Calendar, exclusive of about 30 pension bills, making 146 bills.

Mr. ALLEN. And how many resolutions?

Mr. GALLINGER. And I venture to say, in support of the suggestion made by the Senator from Wisconsin, that in the last twenty years there never has been so small a number of bills on the Calendar at the close of the session of Congress.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from New Hampshire says there are 146 bills on the Calendar all told. He does not include the resolutions to be found on the Calendar, I think, amounting probably to a dozen.

Mr. GALLINGER. There are 16 resolutions. Some of them, however, are passed, to say the least.

Mr. ALLEN. There are one hundred and sixty-odd measures pending on the Calendar that ought to be considered. I know Senators on the other side have accomplished all they desire by the passage of the joint resolution for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, in direct violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and now they are prepared to adjourn. What will become of the bill now pending before the Senate to permit the soldiers in the field to cast their votes this fall?

Mr. SPOONER. Let us take that bill up now.

Mr. ALLEN. You have called into action 200,000 men, principally voters, whom you propose to disfranchise by a failure to pass that act.

Mr. BURROWS. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me?

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will allow me—

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to both Senators.

Mr. SPOONER. I say we will take that bill up now and pass it, if the Senators on the other side are willing.

Mr. BURROWS. Will the Senator yield to me to make a request?

Mr. ALLEN. I will.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10550) to enable volunteer soldiers during the war with Spain to vote at Congressional elections, and I ask the Senate to agree that the vote shall be taken at 1 o'clock to-day.

Mr. MORGAN and Mr. PETTUS. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to a unanimous-consent agreement. The Senator from Nebraska will proceed.

Mr. ALLEN. I yielded to the Senator from Michigan to make a request. I wish to call attention to the fact that that is what is characterized outside of this Chamber as horseplay. Everybody knows the request was insincere and that there was no purpose of taking up the bill and passing it, because you can not take up and debate and analyze and consider a great proposition of that kind in an hour in this Chamber and give everybody an opportunity to express his opinion?

Mr. BURROWS. I beg to assure the Senator that I was entirely sincere and never more in earnest in my life.

Mr. ALLEN. Oh, Mr. President—

Mr. BURROWS. And will the Senator allow me further to call attention to the fact that request for unanimous consent to consider this bill has been repeatedly asked during the last two weeks by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], and objection came in every instance from the other side of the Chamber, and at a time, too, when there was ample opportunity to have debated the measure and secured a vote upon it?

Mr. ALLEN. I am not responsible for this side of the Chamber, and, thank God, I am not responsible for the other side, either. I do not know whether the request has been made to take up the bill or not. I do not recall an instance of that kind, but I do recall the fact that the Senator from Michigan and his associates on the other side have for the last three weeks pushed us from 11 o'clock in the morning until 6 or 7 o'clock in the evening on the joint resolution for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, and they did that simply to force that measure to a successful issue over the protest of those of us who conscientiously believe that this is the introduction of imperialism in this country, which must ultimately destroy the Republic.

The Senator from Michigan would not permit the measure to come up which was designed to give authority to volunteers in the field to vote. And now, after having accomplished that infamous scheme, and when some of us believe we ought to stay here and pass the bill authorizing the volunteers to vote and other important measures, Senators on the other side suddenly conceive that the city is warm and they are personally inconvenienced and they desire to adjourn and go home.

I concur heartily in what has been said by the senior Senator from Alabama. The Congress of the United States will be untrue to itself, it will be untrue to the American people, it will be untrue to the Army and the Navy, if it shall adjourn before the conclusion of the existing war.

What do you propose to do with propositions of peace that may be made? The press dispatches this morning indicate that the Spanish dynasty now realize that the contest is hopeless and that they must sue for peace. What do you propose to do if they make a proposition of peace to the President of the United States? You understand as well as the balance of the American people that the President can not conclude a treaty with them. The treaty-making power is invested in the President and the Senate of the United States. It requires at least the presence of the Senate to concur in any treaty the President may negotiate. The Senator from Alabama well says that when peace shall have been concluded by a treaty initiated by the President and concurred in by the Senate, the President will cease to have military power over the possessions coming to us as a forfeiture of the war, and that will require the presence of the House of Representatives, too, that we may legislate for the new territory.

Yet, Mr. President, in the light of these important facts not one word is offered here in support of this resolution. Senators feel that they have the mere machine, the physical power, to pass this resolution; they propose to do it regardless of consequences, and they will not even give us the poor privilege of listening to a lame and halting excuse for doing so.

Is it wise, as respects the measures that have passed Congress and that will be before the President within a few hours for his approval, to adjourn and let them fall? Can we not remain here at least a sufficient length of time to dispose of such bills that they may become laws? Can we not at least remain here a sufficient length of time to do the executive work of the session before we finally adjourn?

Mr. President, it has been said that majorities are sometimes brutal. There is no more brutality to be found in a majority in all this country than is to be found in the majority in this Chamber, a majority that sits sullen and silent, consummating without excuse and without apology things that gentlemen ought not to tolerate.

Now, Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by striking out "Friday, July 8," and inserting "Saturday, July 9."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.
The SECRETARY. In line 5 strike out "Friday, July 8," and insert "Saturday, July 9;" so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Saturday, July 9, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

PAPER ON DIRECT LEGISLATION.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask to have published as a miscellaneous document a paper prepared by Mr. Eltweed Pomeroy, of Newark, N. J., on the subject of direct legislation.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Nebraska to have the matter referred to by him printed as a public document?

Mr. FRYE. What is the matter?

Mr. ALLEN. It is a paper prepared by Mr. Eltweed Pomeroy, of Newark, N. J., on the subject of direct legislation. It is a very compact and concise history of the science of direct legislation. I ask that the paper and accompanying documents be printed and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

METHODIST BOOK CONCERN SOUTH.

Mr. TELLER. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the resolution of the 9th ultimo, directing the Committee on Claims to inquire and report to whom the money was paid under the claim of the Methodist Book Concern South, and so forth, to submit a report together with testimony taken before that committee. I move that the report and accompanying testimony be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. By direction of the Committee on Claims I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 5,000 copies of the report and testimony accompanying it of the Committee on Claims concerning the passage of the bill for the relief of the Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION AT OMAHA.

Mr. THURSTON. From the Select Committee on International Expositions, to whom the subject was referred, I report a resolution for which I ask present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

The Senate acknowledges with due appreciation the invitation presented by G. W. Wattles, the president of the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition, to be present and participate in the exposition now being held at Omaha, Nebr. It is therefore

Resolved, That a committee of fifteen Senators be appointed by the President of the Senate to represent this body at the exposition at a time most convenient to those constituting the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed as the committee Mr. THURSTON, Mr. WARREN, Mr. GEAR, Mr. NELSON, Mr. MASON, Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. HANSBROUGH, Mr. PRITCHARD, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. VEST, Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. PETTIGREW, Mr. CANNON, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. HEITFELD.

Mr. THURSTON. I am directed by the Select Committee on International Expositions, to whom the subject was referred, to report the following resolution and to ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the necessary expenses of the committee of fifteen Senators appointed under Senate resolution of July 8, 1898, to be present at the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition now being held at Omaha, Nebr., be, and the same are hereby, authorized and directed to be paid out of the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. That resolution should go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so referred.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. THURSTON introduced a bill (S. 4859) granting a pension to Martha C. M. Fisher; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PENROSE introduced a bill (S. 4860) granting a pension to Carrie B. Selner (now Poulton); which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. QUAY (for Mr. PENROSE) introduced a joint resolution

(S. R. 185) providing that the pay of the Navy be made to conform to the pay of like grades in the Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GEAR introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 186) providing for the mounting and distribution of United States maps; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 2818) to refund certain import duties was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The bill (H. R. 4304) regulating the postage on letters written by the blind was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill (H. R. 9768) for the relief of Samuel J. Brent, executor of the will of Frances Brent, and administrator de bonis non of the estate of Rev. J. Brent, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 10912) for adjusting clothing account for deceased soldiers in certain cases was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

The bill (H. R. 10915) making an appropriation to execute certain provisions of the act of Congress for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory was read twice by its title.

Mr. FORAKER. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to appropriate $10,000 to execute certain provisions of the "Act for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved June 23, 1898.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CRIPPLE CREEK SHORT-LINE RAILWAY.

The bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company was read twice by its title.

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senate to consider the bill at this time.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VERONA E. POLLOCK.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. ALLEN. Before that is done, will the Senator permit me to have a conference report laid before the Senate?

Mr. ALLISON. I think we ought to go into executive session, and get through with matters which are pending there, but I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. ALLEN. I submit the conference report which I send to the desk, and ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the report as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 1.
That the Senate recede from its disagreement to amendments numbered 2 and 3, and agree to the same.

WM. V. ALLEN,
FRANCIS E. WARREN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
CHAS. N. BRUMM,
JOSEPH V. GRAFF,
JNO. T. RIXEY,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ALLEN. I move the adoption of the report.

The report was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and five minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a resolution appointing a committee of three members, to be appointed by the Chair, to join a similar committee appointed by the Senate, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses have completed the business of the present session and are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The message also announced that the Speaker pro tempore had appointed Mr. HENDERSON, Mr. HOPKINS, and Mr. RICHARDSON members of the committee to wait on the President.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker pro tempore had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock;

A bill (S. 4853) to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain; and

A bill (H. R. 10706) granting a right of way through Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. ALLISON submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Chair, to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The VICE-PRESIDENT in pursuance of the foregoing resolution, appointed Mr. ALLISON and Mr. MORGAN.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. KYLE, Mr. PENROSE, Mr. MANTLE, Mr. DANIEL, and Mr. MALLORY members of the industrial commission on the part of the Senate as provided in the first section of the bill authorizing the appointment of a nonpartisan commission to collate information and to consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture, and capital, approved June 1, 1898.

RAILWAY MAIL TRANSPORTATION, ETC.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. ALLISON, Mr. CHANDLER, and Mr. FAULKNER as members on the part of the Senate of the joint commission to investigate the prices charged for transportation of mails by railroad companies, as provided in section 5 of the act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, approved June 13, 1898.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 7th instant approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

An act (S. 4810) to increase the efficiency of the Subsistence Department of the Army;

An act (S. 4809) to increase the efficiency of the Quartermaster's Department of the Army;

An act (S. 2338) granting a pension to James C. Young;

An act (S. 4269) granting a pension to Margerett Ferriter;

An act (S. 3506) granting a pension to Mary E. Kline;

An act (S. 1334) granting a pension to William J. Murray;

An act (S. 3169) granting a pension to John R. Bevan;

An act (S. 4568) granting a pension to Jacob Miller;

An act (S. 2813) granting a pension to Barney Smith;

An act (S. 3110) granting a pension to Patrick Breen;

An act (S. 3111) granting a pension to Cornelia M. Mason;

An act (S. 3668) granting an increase of pension to Ephraim C. Baldwin;

An act (S. 2893) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hinckley;

An act (S. 1807) granting an increase of pension to Abraham T. Casey;

An act (S. 1363) granting an increase of pension to Alvah A. Eaton;

An act (S. 1361) granting an increase of pension to John N. Landon;

An act (S. 2117) granting an increase of pension to Fannie Kautz;

An act (S. 4400) granting an increase of pension to Joel Blackman;

An act (S. 4298) granting an increase of pension to Edward R. Young;

An act (S. 2036) to increase the pension of Mary C. Cook;

An act (S. 4714) to protect harbor defenses and fortifications constructed or used by the United States from malicious injury, and for other purposes;

An act (S. 4741) to authorize the construction of a bridge over Tombigbee River, in the State of Mississippi;

An act (S. 4710) to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the construction of a bridge across the Yalobusha River, between Leflore and Carroll counties, in the State of Mississippi," approved April 20, 1898;

An act (S. 3707) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act to grant to the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory;"

An act (S. 3261) for the relief of P. F. Dundon, of San Francisco, Cal.; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 139) authorizing the Librarian of Congress to accept the collection of engravings proposed to be donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard.

THANKS TO THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I offer a resolution which I send to the Secretary's desk, and for which I know every Senator will vote with pleasure.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are hereby tendered to Hon. WILLIAM F. FRYE, President pro tempore of the Senate, for the courteous, dignified, and able manner with which he has presided over its deliberations during the present session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

INTERNATIONAL PRISON COMMISSION.

Mr. HALE. In the absence of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], the chairman of the Committee on Printing, I report from that committee the resolution submitted yesterday by the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS], and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed, for distribution by the Department of State, 4,000 copies of Senate Document No. 273, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, being the report of S. J. Barrows, commissioner for the United States on the International Prison Commission, on The Criminal Insane in the United States and in Foreign Countries.

STATEMENT OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask leave to print in the RECORD a statement of the appropriations for this session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the request in reference to printing in the RECORD certain matter referred to by the Senator from Iowa and sent to the desk. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. COCKRELL. The statement has been prepared by the clerks of both committees?

Mr. ALLISON. It has been prepared by the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the clerk of the Committee on Appropriations of the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The statement will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair did not understand the Senator to ask to have it printed also as a document.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the request that the statement be also printed as a document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The additional request is made. The statement will be printed as a document, without objection.

The statement is as follows:

Appropriations—Fifty-fifth Congress, second session.

Regular annual appropriation acts, exclusive of deficiencies	$419,047,159.80
Deficiency acts and resolutions	349,644,611.86

Miscellaneous appropriations	768,691,771.16
Permanent annual appropriations	117,836,220.00

Total appropriations	892,527,991.16
Of this amount on account of war with Spain	361,788,095.11

Total appropriations, less war expenses	530,739,896.05
Total appropriations for 1898	628,735,079.39

Appropriations this session, exclusive of war appropriations, exceed total appropriations for 1898	2,004,816.75
--	--------------

Total appropriations this session, including war appropriations, exceed total appropriations for 1898	663,792,911.86
---	----------------

WAR APPROPRIATIONS.

Appropriations made during the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress to meet expenses incident to the war with Spain:

For the national defense, act March 9, 1898	$50,117,000.00
Army and Navy deficiencies, act May 4, 1898	34,025,725.71

Naval appropriation act, May 4, 1898—amount of increase over preceding naval appropriation act	22,005,549.40
Fortification appropriation act, May 7, 1898—amount of increase over act as passed by House	5,232,582.00

Naval auxiliary act, May 28, 1898	3,000,000.00
Additional clerical force, War Department, Auditor's Office, etc., act May 31, 1898	227,976.45

Life-Saving Service, act June 7, 1898	70,000.00
Army and Navy deficiencies, act June 8, 1898	18,015,000.00

Appropriations in act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, June 13, 1898	600,000.00
Army, Navy, and other war expenses for six months beginning July 1, 1898, in general deficiency act	226,604,261.45

Expenses of bringing home remains of soldiers	200,000.00
---	------------

Total war appropriations	861,788,095.11
--------------------------	----------------

Chronological history of appropriation bills, second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress, estimates and appropriations for the fiscal year 1898-99, and appropriations for the fiscal year 1897-98.

[Prepared by the clerks to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives.]

Title.	Estimates, 1899.	Reported to the House.		Passed the House.		Reported to the Senate.		Passed the Senate.
		Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.
Agriculture.....	a $3,835,350.00	Jan. 11 1898.	$3,323,402.00	Jan. 14 1898.	$3,360,902.00	Jan. 31 1898.	$3,512,302.00	Feb. 3 1898.	$3,527,302.00
Army.....	24,180,341.04	Jan. 14 1898.	23,185,992.00	Jan. 18 1898.	23,185,992.00	Jan. 25 1898.	23,142,692.00	Jan. 31 1898.	23,143,492.00
Diplomatic and consular.....	1,850,428.76	Jan. 12 1898.	1,729,008.76	Jan. 20 1898.	1,729,008.76	Feb. 18 1898.	1,746,408.76	Feb. 23 1898.	1,752,308.76
District of Columbia.....	6,205,015.06	Jan. 19 1898.	5,637,657.57	Feb. 2 1898.	5,006,647.57	Mar. 2 1898.	7,070,298.20	Mar. 6 1898.	7,136,118.20
Fortifications.....	13,378,571.00	Jan. 29 1898.	4,144,912.00	Feb. 5 1898.	4,144,912.00	Feb. 11 1898.	9,062,494.00	Feb. 16 1898.	9,390,494.00
Indian.....	7,575,017.08	Jan. 18 1898.	7,627,304.90	Jan. 27 1898.	7,517,454.90	Feb. 9 1898.	7,665,527.90	Feb. 11 1898.	7,725,120.90
Legislative, etc.....	22,343,286.65	Dec. 13 1897.	21,502,425.65	Jan. 11 1898.	21,746,245.65	Jan. 22 1898.	21,629,300.65	Jan. 31 1898.	21,648,406.65
Military Academy.....	640,310.45	Feb. 1 1898.	454,540.83	Feb. 7 1898.	454,240.83	Feb. 16 1898.	458,689.23	Feb. 23 1898.	458,689.23
Navy.....	31,918,626.55	Mar. 22 1898.	35,683,068.68	Apr. 1 1898.	38,014,068.68	Apr. 12 1898.	46,277,558.68	Apr. 25 1898.	55,529,383.68
Pension.....	141,257,750.00	Dec. 8 1897.	141,218,830.00	Dec. 10 1897.	141,218,830.00	Jan. 13 1898.	141,248,830.00	Jan. 25 1898.	141,248,830.00
Post-Office.....	98,922,780.00	Mar. 10 1898.	98,962,300.75	Mar. 19 1898.	99,112,300.75	May 2 1898.	99,224,300.75	May 10 1898.	98,289,300.75
River and harbor.....	d 50,630,153.00	Feb. 21 1898.	44,766,393.31	Feb. 28 1898.	45,445,273.31	Mar. 30 1898.	50,416,151.46	Apr. 21 1898.	50,872,148.72
Sundry civil.....	e 56,148,108.63
Total.....	437,086,318.22		388,195,720.45		301,265,866.45		411,450,653.63		420,730,394.89
Deficiency, 1898, Congress, etc.....		Dec. 13 1897.	210,000.00	Dec. 13 1897.	210,000.00	Dec. 15 1897.	210,000.00	Dec. 15 1897.	210,000.00
Urgent deficiency, 1898.....		Jan. 11 1898.	1,741,843.28	Jan. 12 1898.	1,741,843.28	Jan. 17 1898.	1,691,923.88	Jan. 18 1898.	1,913,770.33
Deficiency, United States courts, public printing, etc.....		Feb. 9 1898.	875,000.00	Feb. 9 1898.	875,000.00	Feb. 14 1898.	800,000.00	Feb. 14 1898.	800,000.00
Urgent deficiency, national defense, etc.....	f 350,000,000.00	Mar. 8 1898.	50,183,000.00	Mar. 8 1898.	50,183,000.00	Mar. 9 1898.	50,183,000.00	Mar. 9 1898.	50,183,000.00
Deficiency, Army, fortifications, Navy, etc.....		May 2 1898.	35,720,945.41	May 2 1898.	35,720,945.41	May 2 1898.	35,720,945.41	May 2 1898.	35,720,945.41
Deficiency, pensions, etc.....		May 18 1898.	8,437,032.25	May 18 1898.	8,437,032.25	May 25 1898.	8,498,431.91	May 25 1898.	8,498,431.91
Urgent deficiency, military and naval establishments.....		June 2 1898.	17,845,000.00	June 2 1898.	17,845,000.00	June 6 1898.	17,945,000.00	June 6 1898.	17,945,000.00
Deficiency, 1898 and prior years.....		June 15 1898.	224,065,919.58	June 20 1898.	234,197,638.58	June 24 1898.	226,140,246.28	June 29 1898.	234,418,542.45
Total.....	787,086,318.22		739,704,460.97		729,976,325.97		732,840,201.11		770,420,063.99
Miscellaneous.....	76,000,000.00
Total, regular annual appropriations.....	703,086,318.22
Permanent annual appropriations.....	117,836,220.00
Grand total, regular and permanent annual appropriations.....	911,522,538.22

Title.	Law, 1898-99.		Law, 1897-98.
	Date.	Amount.	Amount.
Agriculture.....	Mar. 22 1898.	$3,509,202.00	$3,182,902.00
Army.....	Mar. 16 1898.	23,102,892.00	23,129,344.90
Diplomatic and consular.....	Mar. 9 1898.	1,752,308.76	1,695,308.76
District of Columbia.....	June 30 1898.	6,425,880.07	6,186,991.06
Fortification.....	May 7 1898.	9,377,494.00	9,517,141.00
Indian.....	July 1 1898.	7,660,814.90	7,674,123.89
Legislative, etc.....	Mar. 15 1898.	21,625,846.65	21,690,768.90
Military Academy.....	Mar. 5 1898.	458,689.23	479,572.83
Navy.....	May 4 1898.	56,088,783.66	33,003,224.19
Pension.....	Mar. 14 1898.	141,233,830.00	141,233,830.00
Post-Office.....	June 19 1898.	99,222,300.75	95,095,338.75
River and harbor.....	(g)
Sundry civil.....		448,489,217.26	453,611,783.38
Total.....		419,047,159.30	507,100,384.06
Deficiency, 1898, Congress, etc.....	Dec. 16 1897.	210,000.00
Urgent deficiency, 1898.....	Jan. 28 1898.	1,928,779.33
Deficiency, United States courts, public printing, etc.....	Feb. 19 1898.	800,000.00
Urgent deficiency, national defense, etc.....	Mar. 9 1898.	50,183,000.00	10,567,417.34
Deficiency, Army, fortifications, Navy, etc.....	May 4 1898.	35,720,945.41
Deficiency, pensions, etc.....	May 31 1898.	8,498,431.91
Urgent deficiency, military and naval establishments.....	June 8 1898.	18,015,000.00
Deficiency, 1898 and prior years.....	July 7 1898.	234,288,455.21
Total.....		768,691,771.16	407,657,801.40
Miscellaneous.....		76,000,000.00	999,057.90
Total, regular annual appropriations.....		774,691,771.16	408,656,859.30
Permanent annual appropriations.....		117,836,220.00	1120,078,220.00
Grand total, regular and permanent annual appropriations.....		892,527,991.16	1,528,735,079.30

Amount of estimated revenues for fiscal year 1899.....

Amount of estimated postal revenues for fiscal year 1899.....

$300,000,000.00

92,874,647.37

Total estimated revenues for fiscal year 1899.....

482,874,647.37

a No amount is included in the estimates for 1899 for the Agricultural Department for agricultural experiment stations in the several States authorized by the act of March 2, 1887. The amounts appropriated for this purpose for 1898 and 1899 are $720,000, respectively.

b One-half of the amounts for the District of Columbia payable by the United States, except amounts for the water department (estimated for 1899 at $140,851.71), which are payable from the revenues of the water department.

c Includes all expenses of the postal service payable from postal revenues and out of the Treasury.

d This amount is exclusive of $18,098,007.56 to meet contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements included in the sundry civil estimates for 1899. e This amount includes $18,098,007.56 to meet contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1899.

f This amount is appropriated. g No river and harbor bill passed for 1899, but the sum of $14,031,613.56 is appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $235,836 additional, and $300,000 in the general deficiency act for river and harbor improvements for 1899—in all, $14,567,449.56.

h No river and harbor bill passed for 1898, but the sum of $18,578,412.91 is appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $543,000 additional for river and harbor improvements for 1898; in all, $19,121,412.91. The general deficiency act also appropriates $1,200,000 to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $11,000 additional for river and harbor improvements, and the joint resolution of March 31, 1897, appropriates $250,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River to carry out contracts authorized by law, and the joint resolution of February 26, 1897, appropriates $250,000 for closing the crevasses in Pass a Loutre, an outlet of the Mississippi River, making in all for river and harbor improvements in sundry civil act for 1898, in general deficiency act and in joint resolutions, $20,822,412.91.

i This amount includes $14,031,613.56 to carry out contracts authorized by law and $235,836 additional for river and harbor improvements for 1899; in all, $14,267,449.56.

k This amount includes $18,578,412.91 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1898 and $543,000 additional for river and harbor improvements for 1898; in all, $19,121,412.91.

l This is the amount submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury in the annual estimates for the fiscal year 1898, the exact amount appropriated not being ascertainable until two years after the close of the fiscal year.

m In addition to this amount, contracts are authorized to be entered into, subject to future appropriations by Congress, as follows: By the District of Columbia act, $308,000; by the naval act, $300,000; by the sundry civil act, $300,000; and by the deficiency act, $1,401,375.09; in all, $2,209,375.09.

THANKS TO THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, it gives me very great pleasure to offer the following resolution, and I ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri presents a resolution and asks its present consideration. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are hereby tendered to Hon. GARRET A. HOBART, Vice-President, for the dignified, impartial, and courteous manner with which he has presided over its deliberations during the present session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on this day approved and signed the following acts and joint resolutions:

An act (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock;

An act (S. 769) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington;

An act (S. 1119) granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr.;

An act (S. 4853) to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain;

A joint resolution (S. R. 141) regarding the holding of a Pan-American Exposition in the year 1901 upon Cayuga Island, between the cities of Buffalo and Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to illustrate the development of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century; and

A joint resolution (S. R. 182) relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. ALLISON and Mr. MORGAN, of the joint committee who were appointed to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that Congress was ready to adjourn, appeared at the bar of the Senate; and

Mr. ALLISON said: Mr. President, the committee appointed by the Senate, together with a similar committee on the part of the House, respectfully report that they visited the President and informed him that the two Houses were ready to adjourn unless he had some further communication to make. The President stated that he had no further communication to make at this time, and that he congratulated the two Houses upon their faithful and effective work of the session.

The hour of 2 o'clock p. m. having arrived,

The VICE-PRESIDENT said: Senators, the hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it only remains for the Chair to carry out the terms of the concurrent resolution as he is instructed to do, and he now declares that the session is at an end. The Senate stands adjourned without day.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 3, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

TO BE MAJOR-GENERALS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS.

Brig. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. Henry W. Lawton, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. John C. Bates, United States Volunteers.

TO BE BRIGADIER-GENERALS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS.

Col. Leonard Wood, First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry.

Lieut. Col. Chambers McKibbin, Twenty-first Infantry.

FIRST REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

To be colonel.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, vice Wood, appointed brigadier-general.

TO BE QUARTERMASTER OF VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF COLONEL.

Frank J. Hecker, of Michigan.

TO BE QUARTERMASTER OF VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

James L. Botsford, of Ohio.

TO BE CHIEF SURGEON UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

Maj. Philip F. Harvey, surgeon, United States Army.

TO BE DIVISION SURGEONS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS, WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Nelson H. Henry, of New York, assistant surgeon-general.

Victor C. Vaughan, of Michigan, surgeon, Thirty-third Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

Charles M. Robertson, of Iowa, surgeon, Fiftieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

TO BE BRIGADE SURGEONS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS, WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Royce Day Fry, of Ohio.

Elmer E. Heg, of Washington.

Charles R. Parke, of Pennsylvania, surgeon, Thirteenth Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Jabez N. Jackson, of Missouri, surgeon, Third Missouri Volunteers.

Wallace Neff, of Ohio.

George F. Shiels, of California.

William S. Bryant, assistant surgeon, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery.

William F. de Niedeman, assistant surgeon, Twenty-second Kansas Volunteers.

Francis C. Ford, of Texas.

Lawrence C. Carr, of Ohio.

SECOND REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Marshall S. Swain, of Texas.

Harry W. Miller, of Louisiana.

Stephen O. Fogua, of Louisiana.

John Ernest Morris, of Louisiana.

Edwin S. Broussard, of Louisiana.

James B. Massie, of Texas.

Irvin Mather, of Louisiana.

Elias B. Wilcox, of Texas.

Charles A. McCoy, of Louisiana.

Frank J. Looney, of Louisiana.

Anthony E. Fatjo, of Texas.

G. Floyd Smith, of Louisiana.

To be first lieutenants.

Louis A. Shallors, of Louisiana.

Edwin T. Rockwell, of Ohio.

Thomas A. Bagnal, of Texas.

Vivian Gwyn Bell, of Louisiana.

Charles E. Jones, of Texas.

George M. G. Stafford, of Louisiana.

Michael Pickard, of Louisiana.

John H. Gregory, jr., of Florida, sergeant, Company B, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

John M. Cunningham, of Louisiana.

Dudley Tobin, of Texas.

James H. Hicks, of Louisiana, first sergeant, Company I, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

Sydney Smith, of Louisiana.

To be second lieutenants.

William F. Champlin, of Mississippi.

John E. Nichols, of Texas, musician, Company G, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

John B. Lobdell, of Louisiana.

Pierre W. Woodlief, of Louisiana.

Lloyd Parkinson, of Louisiana, first sergeant Company B, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

John B. Mangum, of Louisiana.

Walker W. Hamner, of Louisiana, private, Company D, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

Jesse W. Smith, of Louisiana, sergeant, Company H, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

Joshua A. Tratti, of Louisiana.

Harry H. Gregory, of Florida, first sergeant Company L, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Corpl. John W. French, Company C, Twenty-first Infantry.

Sergt. Cromwell Stacey, Company D, Thirteenth Infantry.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

To be inspector-general with the rank of major.

Maj. Charles H. Heyl, assistant adjutant-general, by transfer, to fill an original vacancy.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

To be assistant adjutant-general with the rank of major.

Capt. William A. Simpson, Seventh Artillery, vice Heyl, assistant adjutant-general, transferred to Inspector-General's Department.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Emanuel M. Hewlett, of the District of Columbia, to be justice of the peace in the District of Columbia (assigned to the city of Washington), his present term expiring August 24, 1898.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 7, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

FIRST REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be captain.

First Lieut. Edmund M. Sawtelle, First United States Volunteer Engineers.

To be first lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Heber R. Bishop, jr., First United States Volunteer Engineers.

To be second lieutenant.

William G. Mitchell, of New York.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenant.

John W. Daniel, jr., of Virginia.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

A. L. Hanscom, of Towner, N. Dak., to be receiver of public moneys at Minot, N. Dak.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate July 8, 1898.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenants.

Wade L. Jolly, of the District of Columbia.

William H. Mollach, of the District of Columbia.

Horace M. Patton, of West Virginia.

William W. Parker, of the District of Columbia.

Lee M. Lipscomb, of Maryland.

To be second lieutenants.

John A. Thayer, of West Virginia.

William Peacock, of the District of Columbia.

Abram Houghlan, of the District of Columbia.

SECOND REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be second lieutenant.

Henry B. Allen, of Nebraska.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

Lomax S. Anderson, of Mississippi.

SIXTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

William D. Henderson, of Tennessee.

THIRD REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captain.

Charles R. Warren, of Georgia.

To be first lieutenants.

John A. Sibley, of Georgia.

Mack E. Laird, of Georgia.

To be second lieutenant.

James E. Bunting, of Georgia.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be first lieutenant.

Anthony Holmead, of the District of Columbia.

To be second lieutenant.

James D. Keene, of the District of Columbia.

EIGHTH REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

George W. Green, of Tennessee.

Reuben M. Buckley, of Kentucky.

Charles F. Ogden, of Kentucky.

To be first lieutenant.

George A. Henderson, of Tennessee.

To be second lieutenants.

William Washington, first sergeant Troop F, Ninth Cavalry.

John C. Proctor, first sergeant Troop A, Ninth Cavalry.

THIRD REGIMENT OF ENGINEERS.

To be first lieutenants.

James P. Barney, of Virginia.

Lawrence P. Butler, sergeant, Company I, Fourth Missouri Volunteers.

James D. Fauntleroy, of Virginia.

Thomas M. Ward, of Maryland.

To be second lieutenants.

William H. Chadbourn, jr., of North Carolina.

Samuel D. Brady, of West Virginia.

VOLUNTEER SIGNAL CORPS.

To be captains.

Julien P. Wooten, first lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Edward W. Winfield, first lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

To be first lieutenants.

Frank P. Tate, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Henry W. Sprague, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Walter S. Volkmar, second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Charles Rogan, jr., second lieutenant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

To be second lieutenants.

Merchant H. Baldwin, of Indiana.

Horace C. Lansing, of Ohio.

William C. Cannon, first-class sergeant, United States Volunteer Signal Corps.

Charles S. Wallace, first-class sergeant, Signal Corps, United States Army.

Charles O. Pierson, of the District of Columbia.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE VOLUNTEER ARMY.

TO BE MAJOR-GENERALS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS.

Brig. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. Henry W. Lawton, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, United States Volunteers.

Brig. Gen. John C. Bates, United States Volunteers.

TO BE BRIGADIER-GENERALS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS.

Col. Leonard Wood, First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry.

Lieut. Col. Chambers McKibbin, Twenty-first Infantry.

FIRST REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

To be colonel.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, vice Wood, appointed brigadier-general.

TO BE QUARTERMASTER OF VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF COLONEL.

Frank J. Hecker, of Michigan.

TO BE QUARTERMASTER OF VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

James L. Botsford, of Ohio.

TO BE CHIEF SURGEON UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS WITH THE RANK OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL.

Maj. Philip F. Harvey, surgeon, United States Army.

TO BE DIVISION SURGEONS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS, WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Nelson H. Henry, assistant surgeon-general of New York.

Victor C. Vaughan, of Michigan, surgeon, Thirty-third Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

Charles M. Robertson, of Iowa, surgeon, Fiftieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

TO BE BRIGADE SURGEONS, UNITED STATES VOLUNTEERS, WITH THE RANK OF MAJOR.

Royce Day Fry, of Ohio.

Elmer E. Heg, of Washington.

Charles R. Parke, of Pennsylvania, surgeon, Thirteenth Pennsylvania Volunteers.

Jabez N. Jackson, of Missouri, surgeon, Third Missouri Volunteers.

Wallace Neff, of Ohio.

George F. Shiels, of California.

William S. Bryant, assistant surgeon, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery.

William F. de Niedeman, assistant surgeon, Twenty-second Kansas Volunteers.

Francis C. Ford, of Texas.

Lawrence C. Carr, of Ohio.

SECOND REGIMENT OF INFANTRY.

To be captains.

Marshall S. Swain, of Texas.

Harry W. Miller, of Louisiana.

Stephen O. Fogna, of Louisiana.
John Ernest Morris, of Louisiana.
Edwin S. Broussard, of Louisiana.
James B. Massie, of Texas.
Irvin Mather, of Louisiana.
Elias B. Wilcox, of Texas.
Charles A. McCoy, of Louisiana.
Frank J. Looney, of Louisiana.
Anthony E. Fatjo, of Texas.
G. Floyd Smith, of Louisiana.

To be first lieutenants.

Louis A. Shallors, of Louisiana.
Edwin T. Rockwell, of Ohio.
Thomas A. Bagnal, of Texas.
Vivian Gwyn Bell, of Louisiana.
Charles E. Jones, of Texas.
George M. G. Stafford, of Louisiana.
Michael Pickard, of Louisiana.
John H. Gregory, jr., of Florida, sergeant, Company B, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
John M. Cunningham, of Louisiana.
Dudley Tobin, of Texas.
James H. Hicks, of Louisiana, first sergeant, Company I, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
Sydney Smith, of Louisiana.

To be second lieutenants.

William F. Champlin, of Mississippi.
John E. Nichols, of Texas, musician, Company G, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
John B. Lobdell, of Louisiana.
Pierre W. Woodlief, of Louisiana.
Lloyd Parkinson, of Louisiana, first sergeant, Company B, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
John B. Mangum, of Louisiana.
Walker W. Hamner, of Louisiana, private, Company D, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
Jesse W. Smith, of Louisiana, sergeant, Company H, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.
Joshua A. Tratti, of Louisiana.
Harry H. Gregory, of Florida, first sergeant, Company L, Second United States Volunteer Infantry.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

To be second lieutenants.

Corpl. John W. French, Company C, Twenty-first Infantry.
Sergt. Cromwell Stacey, Company D, Thirteenth Infantry.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

To be inspector-general with the rank of major.

Maj. Charles H. Heyl, assistant adjutant-general, by transfer, to fill an original vacancy.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

To be assistant adjutant-general with the rank of major.

Capt. William A. Simpson, Seventh Artillery, vice Heyl, assistant adjutant-general, transferred to Inspector-General's Department.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Emanuel M. Hewlett, of the District of Columbia, to be justice of the peace in the District of Columbia (assigned to the city of Washington), his present term expiring August 24, 1898.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Neal J. Sharp, of Challis, Idaho, to be register of the land office at Hailey, Idaho.

RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

William A. Hodgman, of Shoshone, Idaho, to be receiver of public moneys at Hailey, Idaho.
Charles H. Garby, of Leland, Idaho, to be receiver of public moneys at Lewiston, Idaho.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

James W. Lee, of Maryland, to be constructor in and for the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States with the relative rank and pay of a first lieutenant.

POSTMASTERS.

William M. Powell, to be postmaster at Hazleton, in the county of Luzerne and State of Pennsylvania.
William P. Carter, to be postmaster at Lewes, in the county of Sussex and State of Delaware.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, July 8, 1898.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. (being called to order by the Speaker amid applause).

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the Journal Clerk informs the Chair that in consequence of his illness the Journal will not be ready to be read to the House for some fifteen or twenty minutes. With the consent of the House, it may be read then as now.

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 4548. An act for the relief of James H. Latham;
S. 4831. An act fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army;
S. 3576. An act for the relief of James Grace;
S. 1189. An act for the relief of Charles Gallagher;
S. 4395. An act to remove the charge of desertion standing on the record against the name of Charles Thompson;
S. 4510. An act to correct the military record of William H. Fore;
S. 4150. An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings;
S. 3909. An act for the relief of Mrs. Harriet A. Ferguson;
S. 4191. An act to readjust the boundary of the National Zoological Park and preserve its seclusion between Park road on the east and Cincinnati street and Connecticut avenue on the west;
S. 2456. An act for the relief of the Globe Works, of Boston, Mass.;
S. 2148. An act for the relief of the legal representatives of Merrick, Merrick & Cope;
S. 3061. An act for the relief of William C. Dodge;
S. 4255. An act for the relief of Hyland C. Kirk and others, assignees of Addison C. Fletcher;
S. 3641. An act to establish a United States court at Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory;
S. 4121. An act for the relief of the estate of Ramsay Crooks;
S. 1100. An act for the relief of Thomas Chambers;
S. 2171. An act for the relief of M. D. Crow;
S. 4315. An act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895;
S. 4316. An act to incorporate the American Social Science Association;
S. 3816. An act for the relief of Mary J. Cranston, of Washington, D. C.;
S. 4306. An act to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of army officers;
S. 1000. An act for the relief of Stephen Duncan Marshall and George M. Miller, executors of the will of Levin R. Marshall, deceased;
S. 763. An act for the relief of Augustus G. Kellogg;
S. 1892. An act for the relief of the widow and children of John Hamilton, deceased;
S. 2350. An act for the relief of the heirs of Samuel B. Sparkman, of Nashville, Tenn.;
S. 658. An act for the relief of Henry Lane;
S. 110. An act referring to the Court of Claims the claim of William E. Woodbridge;
S. 3009. An act to enable naval courts-martial and courts of inquiry to secure the attendance and testimony of civilian witnesses;
S. R. 184. Joint resolution to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of July, 1898, on the day of the adjournment of Congress; and
S. R. 183. Joint resolution permitting officers of the Regular or Volunteer Army to also hold office as commissioners and historians of national military parks.
The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:
Resolved, That the Senate reconsider the vote disagreeing to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 709) to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington and asking a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and agree to the same.
Also:
Resolved, That the Senate reconsider its vote disagreeing to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1119) granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr., a citizen of Kentucky and a major-general in the Army of the United States in the war of the rebellion, and asking a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and agree to the same.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to close the present session by adjourning their respective Houses on Friday, July 8, at 2 o'clock p. m.

APPROPRIATIONS BY FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I desire, with the consent of the House, to occupy the floor for a period not exceeding five or six minutes, to make a statement touching the general appropriations by Congress up to the present time.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Illinois will proceed.

There was no objection.

Mr. CANNON. The sum of $392,527,991.16 has been appropriated at this session of Congress. This includes $117,836,220 of permanent appropriations to meet sinking-fund requirements of and interest on the public debt, and for other objects, and $361,788,095.11 to meet expenditures of the war with Spain.

Deducting the last two from the sum first mentioned, there remains $412,903,676.05, representing the appropriations made at the present session to meet all ordinary expenses of the Government; which sum is only $4,246,816.75 more than was appropriated at the last session of the last Congress for the same purposes (including the appropriations made during the recent extra session), which apparent excess is almost doubly offset by the increased appropriation of $8,070,872.46 for the payment of pensions on account of the fiscal year 1898, provided for in a deficiency act at this session.

No river and harbor bill has been passed at this session; but the sundry civil act carries $14,031,613.56 to meet contracts authorized by previous Congresses for river and harbor works.

No laws authorizing the construction of public buildings in any of the cities throughout the country have been enacted, and otherwise the legislation authorizing expenditures and appropriations has been confined to the actual necessities of the Government, and to meet all demands incident to the existing war.

The following tables show, by acts, the appropriations made for war expenditures, and also the history of the appropriation bills for the session.

In addition to the appropriations made specifically for expenses of the conduct of the war since its inception and for the first six months of the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1898, contracts have been authorized on the naval appropriation act for new war vessels and for their armament, for which Congress will be called upon in the future to appropriate to an amount estimated at $19,216,156.

Appropriations made during the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress to meet expenses incident to the war with Spain.

For the national defense, act March 9, 1898.....	$50,117,000.00
Army and Navy deficiencies, act May 4, 1898.....	34,623,725.71
Naval appropriation act, May 4, 1898—amount of increase over preceding naval appropriation act.....	23,095,549.49
Fortification appropriation act, May 7, 1898—amount of increase over act as passed by House.....	5,232,582.00
Naval auxiliary act, May 22, 1898.....	3,000,000.00
Additional clerical force, War Department, Auditors' Offices, etc., act May 31, 1898.....	227,976.45
Life-Saving Service, act June 7, 1898.....	70,000.00
Army and Navy deficiencies, act June 8, 1898.....	18,015,000.00
Appropriations in act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, June 13, 1898.....	600,000.00
Army, Navy, and other war expenses for six months, beginning July 1, 1898, in general deficiency act.....	230,604,201.46
Expenses of bringing home remains of soldiers.....	200,000.00
Total.....	$61,788,095.11

The tables referred to are as follows:

Chronological history of appropriation bills, second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress, estimates and appropriations for the fiscal year 1898-99, and appropriations for the fiscal year 1897-98.

[Prepared by the clerks to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives.]

Title.	Estimates, 1899.	Reported to the House.		Passed the House.		Reported to the Senate.		Passed the Senate.
		Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.
Agriculture.....	a $2,835,350.00	1898.		1898.		1898.		1898.
Army.....	24,180,341.04	Jan. 11	$3,323,402.00	Jan. 14	$3,360,902.00	Jan. 31	$3,512,202.00	Feb. 3	$3,527,202.00
Diplomatic and consular.....	1,850,428.76	Jan. 14	23,185,992.00	Jan. 18	23,185,992.00	Jan. 25	23,142,832.00	Jan. 31	23,142,832.00
District of Columbia.....	6,205,015.06	Jan. 12	1,729,008.76	Jan. 20	1,729,008.76	Feb. 19	1,746,408.76	Feb. 23	1,752,208.76
Fortification.....	13,378,571.00	Jan. 19	5,637,657.57	Feb. 2	5,606,647.57	Mar. 2	7,076,298.20	Mar. 8	7,133,118.20
Indian.....	7,375,617.08	Jan. 29	4,144,912.00	Feb. 5	4,144,912.00	Feb. 11	9,082,494.00	Feb. 16	9,390,494.00
Legislative, etc.....	22,343,286.65	Jan. 18	7,527,204.90	Jan. 27	7,517,454.90	Feb. 9	7,685,527.90	Feb. 11	7,725,120.90
Military Academy.....	640,310.45	1897.		1897.		1897.		1897.
Navy.....	81,918,626.55	Dec. 13	21,562,425.65	Jan. 11	21,476,245.65	Jan. 22	21,623,300.65	Jan. 31	21,648,400.65
Pension.....	141,257,750.00	1898.		1898.		1898.		1898.
Post-Office.....	98,922,760.00	Feb. 1	454,540.83	Feb. 7	454,240.83	Feb. 16	458,689.23	Feb. 23	458,689.23
River and harbor.....	d 30,630,153.00	Mar. 22	35,683,068.68	Apr. 1	35,014,068.68	Apr. 12	46,277,558.68	Apr. 25	55,529,383.68
Sundry civil.....	e 56,148,103.63	1897.		1897.		1897.		1897.
Total.....	437,686,313.22	Dec. 8	141,218,830.00	Dec. 10	141,218,830.00	Jan. 13	141,248,830.00	Jan. 25	141,248,830.00
Deficiency, Naval Academy, etc.....		1898.		1898.		1898.		1898.
Urgent deficiency, 1898.....		Mar. 10	98,962,300.75	Mar. 19	99,112,300.75	May 2	99,224,900.75	May 10	98,289,300.75
Deficiency, United States courts, public printing, etc.....	f 350,000,000.00	Feb. 21	44,766,393.31	Feb. 25	45,445,273.31	Mar. 30	50,416,151.46	Apr. 21	50,872,143.72
Urgent deficiency, national defense, etc.....		1897.		1897.		1897.		1897.
Deficiency, Army and Navy and printing.....		Dec. 13	210,000.00	Dec. 13	210,000.00	Dec. 15	210,000.00	Dec. 15	210,000.00
Deficiency, pensions, etc.....		1898.		1898.		1898.		1898.
Urgent deficiency, military and naval establishments.....		Jan. 11	1,741,843.28	Jan. 12	1,741,843.28	Jan. 17	1,891,923.88	Jan. 18	1,913,779.33
Deficiency, 1898 and prior years.....		Feb. 9	375,000.00	Feb. 9	375,000.00	Feb. 14	800,000.00	Feb. 14	800,000.00
Total.....	787,686,313.22	Mar. 8	50,183,000.00	Mar. 8	50,183,000.00	Mar. 9	50,183,000.00	Mar. 9	50,183,000.00
Miscellaneous.....	f 6,000,000.00	May 2	35,729,945.41	May 2	35,729,945.41	May 2	35,729,945.41	May 2	35,729,945.41
Total regular annual appropriations.....	793,686,313.22	May 18	8,437,032.25	May 18	8,437,032.25	May 25	8,498,431.91	May 25	8,498,431.91
Permanent annual appropriations.....	117,836,220.00	June 2	17,845,000.00	June 2	17,845,000.00	June 6	17,945,000.00	June 6	17,945,000.00
Grand total regular and permanent annual appropriations.....	911,522,533.22	June 15	224,055,913.58	June 20	224,197,638.58	June 24	226,140,246.23	June 29	234,418,542.45
		Law, 1898-99.		Law, 1897-98.
Title.		Date.	Amount.	Date.	Amount.
Agriculture.....		1898.		1897.
Army.....		Mar. 22	$3,500,202.00	Mar. 15	$3,182,902.00
Diplomatic and consular.....		Mar. 15	23,182,832.00	Mar. 9	23,129,344.80
District of Columbia.....		Mar. 9	1,752,208.76	Mar. 9	1,695,308.76
Fortification.....		June 30	6,425,880.07	June 30	6,186,991.06
Indian.....		May 7	9,377,494.00	May 7	9,517,141.00
Legislative, etc.....		July 1	7,690,814.90	July 1	7,674,120.89
Military Academy.....		Mar. 15	21,623,846.65	Mar. 15	21,600,766.90
Navy.....		Mar. 6	458,689.23	Mar. 6	479,572.85
Pension.....		May 4	50,098,783.68	May 4	39,063,234.19
		Mar. 14	141,233,830.00	Mar. 14	141,233,880.00

Chronological history of appropriation bills, second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress, estimates and appropriations for the fiscal year 1898-99, and appropriations for the fiscal year 1897-98—Continued.

Title.	Law, 1898-99.		Law, 1897-98.
	Date.	Amount.	Amount.
Post-Office c.....	1898.
River and harbor.....	June 13	$99,222,300.73	$95,085,328.73
Sundry civil.....	July 1	(g) $48,482,217.28	(h) $53,811,783.86
Total.....		419,047,159.30	397,109,384.06
Deficiency, Naval Academy, etc.....	1897. Dec. 16	210,000.00
Urgent deficiency, 1898.....	1898. Jan. 23	1,938,779.33
Deficiency, United States courts, public printing, etc.....	Feb. 19	800,000.00
Urgent deficiency, national defense, etc.....	Mar. 9	50,183,000.00	10,437,417.34
Deficiency, Army and Navy and printing.....	May 4	26,720,945.41
Deficiency, pensions, etc.....	May 31	8,498,431.91
Urgent deficiency, military and naval establishments.....	June 8	18,015,000.00
Deficiency, 1898 and prior years.....	July 7	234,288,455.21
Total.....		768,091,771.16	407,657,801.40
Miscellaneous.....		$6,000,000.00	999,057.90
Total, regular annual appropriations.....		774,091,771.16	408,656,859.30
Permanent annual appropriations.....		117,836,230.00	1,120,028,230.00
Grand total, regular and permanent annual appropriations.....		892,527,991.16	1,528,735,079.30
Amount of estimated revenues for fiscal year 1899.....			$390,000,000.00
Amount of estimated postal revenues for fiscal year 1899.....			92,874,647.37
Total estimated revenues for fiscal year 1899.....			482,874,647.37

a No amount is included in the estimates for 1899 for the Agricultural Department for agricultural experiment stations in the several States authorized by the act of March 2, 1887. The amounts appropriated for this purpose for 1898 and 1899 are $720,000, respectively.

b One-half of the amounts for the District of Columbia payable by the United States, except amounts for the water department (estimated for 1899 at $140,851.71), which are payable from the revenues of the water department.

c Includes all expenses of the postal service payable from postal revenues and out of the Treasury.

d This amount is exclusive of $18,008,007.56 to meet contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements included in the sundry civil estimates for 1899.

e This amount includes $18,008,007.56 to meet contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1899.

f This amount is approximated.

g No river and harbor bill passed for 1899, but the sum of $14,031,613.56 is appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $235,846 additional, and $300,000 in the general deficiency act for river and harbor improvements for 1899—in all, $14,567,459.56.

h No river and harbor bill passed for 1898, but the sum of $18,578,412.91 is appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $543,000 additional for river and harbor improvements for 1898; in all, $19,121,412.91. The general deficiency act also appropriates $1,300,000 to carry out contracts authorized by law, and $11,000 additional for river and harbor improvements, and the joint resolution of March 31, 1897, appropriates $250,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River to carry out contracts authorized by law, and the joint resolution of February 26, 1897, appropriates $250,000 for closing the crevasses in Pass a Loutre, an outlet of the Mississippi River, making in all for river and harbor improvements in sundry civil act for 1898, in general deficiency act, and in joint resolutions, $20,832,412.91.

i This amount includes $14,031,613.56 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1899.

k This amount includes $18,578,412.91 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1898 and $543,000 additional for river and harbor improvements for 1898; in all, $19,121,412.91.

l This is the amount submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury in the annual estimates for the fiscal year 1898, the exact amount appropriated not being ascertainable until two years after the close of the fiscal year.

m In addition to this amount, contracts are authorized to be entered into, subject to future appropriations by Congress, as follows: By the District of Columbia act, $335,000; by the naval act, $300,000; by the sundry civil act, $300,000; and by the deficiency act, $1,401,375.03; in all, $2,239,375.03.

Mr. CANNON. At this stage, Mr. Speaker, I do not desire further to submit remarks touching this matter, but I do desire for myself leave to submit some further remarks and have them printed in the RECORD touching the general question of appropriations and kindred subjects, say for ten days after the close of the session. And I will now yield to the gentleman from Texas, Governor SAYERS, asking unanimous consent that I may be permitted to submit the remarks to which I referred.

Mr. HENDERSON. Before the gentleman from Illinois yields the floor, I would like to ask him a question, with his consent.

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will my friend from Illinois state to the House what part of the $360,000,000 which has been appropriated for war purposes was expended before the commencement of the present fiscal year?

Mr. CANNON. I can not give the information at this time.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will the tables to which the gentleman refers show that?

Mr. CANNON. Later on that may be shown, but not now.

I will say to my friend from Iowa that it is impossible to make such a statement at the present time. It can only be made after it has been ascertained at the Treasury what the actual expenditure has been, and also what action has been taken there and what obligations have been incurred, and which must be met out of that fund.

The only thing practicable now is to make a general statement of the appropriations that have been made by this Congress and wait until a future period for the information in question. Possibly in a period covered by the next three months it may be practicable to give the information in full up to this time; and as to the remaining part of the appropriation, at the end of another three months, or longer.

I would like, Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent in behalf of myself, and also in behalf of the gentleman from Texas, Governor SAYERS, to submit the remarks to which I have referred, and have them printed in the RECORD within the time fixed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman will have that privilege.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. CANNON. I now yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS].

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, if I can have the attention of the House for a few moments only, I will endeavor to present a statement of the appropriations, as I understand them, which have been made by the present Congress.

It will be borne in mind that heretofore the statement of appropriations made at any session of Congress has not only included the actual appropriations made, but also the permanent appropriations, so as to reach the total amount of appropriations for the particular fiscal year. This has been the uniform and unbroken custom.

The table that I hold in my hand shows that the sum total of all the appropriations by this Congress aggregates $892,527,991.16. This sum includes the permanent appropriations, the appropriations for the civil and ordinary expenses of the Government, and also the appropriations to meet the expenses of the war up to January 1 next.

Segregating the several items, we find that of the $892,527,991.16, $361,788,095.11 have been appropriated for war purposes. Deducting the war appropriations from the sum total, we have left $530,739,896.05 to meet civil and ordinary expenses.

When, Mr. Speaker, it is borne in mind that no river and harbor bill has passed this Congress, it will be seen that the appropriations by the present Congress have largely exceeded those of any other Congress for a like period for many years, and that, too, without including the appropriations for war expenditures.

Mr. LOVE. The amount stated by the gentleman to have been appropriated for war expenditures is that which has been appropriated up to this time?

Mr. SAYERS. Up to this time.

Mr. LOVE. But not expended?

Mr. SAYERS. No; not expended, of course. The appropriations for war expenses are intended to cover those to be incurred for such purposes up to the 1st of January next.

Mr. LOVE. That is what I wanted to bring out.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I will attach to my remarks a table showing the appropriations at each session of the last Congress, and also by the present Congress, so that a comparison may be drawn, in making which a credit of $361,788,095.11 should be allowed the present Congress because of the war. This would still leave the appropriations by the present Congress in excess of those at either session of the last Congress, notwithstanding that we have had no river and harbor bill.

The following table shows the various appropriations:

Appropriations made during the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress and during each of the sessions of the Fifty-fourth Congress.

Title.	Fifty-fifth Congress, second session, 1898-99.	Fifty-fourth Congress.
		Second session, 1897-98.	First session, 1896-97.
Agriculture	$3,509,202.00	$3,182,902.00	$3,255,532.00
Army	23,182,802.00	23,129,344.90	23,278,422.78
Diplomatic and consular	1,782,206.76	1,695,303.76	1,642,553.76
District of Columbia	6,425,890.07	6,186,991.06	5,900,319.48
Fortification	9,377,494.00	9,517,141.00	7,877,388.00
Indian	7,660,814.90	7,674,120.89	7,390,496.79
Legislative, etc.	21,625,846.65	21,690,766.90	21,519,324.71
Military Academy	458,689.23	479,572.83	449,535.61
Navy	56,098,783.08	53,008,234.19	30,562,690.95
Pension	141,233,830.00	141,293,880.00	141,328,580.00
Post-Office	99,222,300.75	95,665,393.75	92,571,584.23
River and harbor			12,659,550.00
Sundry civil	48,489,217.26	53,611,783.88	38,096,710.19
Total	419,047,159.30	397,100,924.06	381,000,113.44
Deficiencies, including war expenses in part appropriated at second session Fifty-fifth Congress	319,644,611.56	10,557,417.34	15,841,911.07
Total	738,691,771.16	407,657,801.40	396,842,024.51
Miscellaneous	6,000,000.00	999,057.90	416,010.06
Total, regular annual appropriations	774,691,771.16	408,656,859.30	396,791,084.57
Permanent annual appropriations	117,896,290.00	130,078,230.00	119,054,100.00
Grand total, regular and permanent annual appropriations	902,587,991.16	538,735,079.30	515,845,194.57

To better illustrate the extravagance of the present Congress, I will invite, Mr. Speaker, the attention of members to the appropriations at each session of the Fifty-third Congress, when this House was under the control of a Democratic majority, as will be seen from the following table:

Appropriations made by the Fifty-third Congress.

Title.	Extra and first regular sessions, 1895.	Third session, 1896.
Agriculture	$3,229,693.00	$3,300,729.00
Army	23,592,884.68	23,252,608.00
Diplomatic and consular	1,593,918.78	1,575,073.94
District of Columbia	5,545,678.57	5,745,643.25
Fortifications	2,427,004.00	1,904,557.50
Indian	10,659,585.16	8,973,948.01
Legislative, etc.	21,805,583.29	21,993,222.48
Military Academy	406,535.08	464,261.66
Navy	25,327,126.72	29,716,077.31
Pension, including deficiencies	151,581,570.00	141,381,570.00
Post-Office	87,236,599.55	89,645,997.86
River and harbor	11,643,180.00
Sundry civil	34,253,775.55	47,138,900.40
Deficiencies, except for pensions	11,811,004.00	9,738,979.19
Total	300,573,048.48	394,034,040.69
Miscellaneous	577,966.56	400,000.00
Total regular annual appropriations	301,150,005.03	395,034,040.69
Permanent annual appropriations	101,074,680.00	113,073,956.32
Total	402,224,685.03	408,108,006.01

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege. I desire to correct the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that the gentleman wait until the Journal has been read. He will then be recognized.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Delaware rises to a question of privilege.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I yield for a moment to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TAYLER], who wishes to submit a request.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have prepared some—

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman from Ohio to withhold his request until we see what action is taken in reference to the matter now to be presented by the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY]. I will say to the gentleman frankly that if we are fairly treated about this, I shall make no objection.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio. As I have to ask unanimous consent on my proposition, I yield, of course, to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BAILEY. It will depend on the way in which we are treated on this matter.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I move to correct the RECORD by striking out all on page 7578, all on page 7579, and on the following page, 7580, to wit, all beginning with the words, "The Dingley bill has done remarkably well," down to and including the words, "This is all any nation assumes to do."

I make this motion, Mr. Speaker, because the language which I propose to strike out and expunge from the RECORD was not spoken on the floor, and because it was not and is not within the privilege to print given to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY], in whose remarks it appears in the RECORD.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the motion of the gentleman in order at this time—a motion to strike out of the RECORD?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is in order. It comes at the close of the reading of the Journal. The gentleman made his point as soon as the House met.

Mr. RAY of New York. I desire to state that, aside from the tables, there is not a word in the RECORD that was not delivered.

Mr. HANDY. I did not understand the gentleman's statement.

Mr. RAY of New York. There is not a word in the RECORD, aside from the tables and figures, that was not spoken by me on the floor of this House yesterday.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I challenge that statement of fact. I have here the notes furnished to me by the reporters of the House. I have in my hand the beginning of the gentleman's printed speech, which in cold blood he had sent down to the Public Printer to have set up in type before he began to speak in the House. He read from those remarks, turning them over as he read, and he reached this point on page 7580 of to-day's RECORD:

Remember, the gentleman from Missouri had had three of his own bills favorably reported and one passed and approved by the President.

Up to this point the reporter had taken no stenographic notes of the remarks of the gentleman from New York, because the gentleman from New York had notified the reporters that he proposed to read from the advance proofs of his printed speech. What I have asked the House to strike out appears in the printed speech beyond the point where the gentleman had read. It was not in the part of his speech that he had read.

The part of the printed speech which appears on pages 7578 and 7579 followed in the speech he had prepared, the part of the speech he actually delivered. I only have the word of the reporter, for I was not listening to the gentleman's speech. Very few people listened to the gentleman's speech. It was a dull and uninteresting speech, and but few people would listen to it or read it thereafter, and I am to be excused for not listening to it. But as to the part on page 7580, I know of personal knowledge that it was not spoken on the floor. I was listening at that part, and it was not spoken on the floor.

Mr. Speaker, those paragraphs are a continuation of the brutal assault which the gentleman was making on the absent member from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. It is a continuation, but it is not what he said. From that point on during the rest of his speech the reporter took his words down verbatim, and I have them here. The reporter's notes will be found almost verbatim in to-day's RECORD, beginning with the interruption of Mr. PARIS at this point. The notes as published took up and contain all that the gentleman said on the floor. Certainly the matter on page 7580, in the first column, beginning with "The Dingley bill has done remarkably well," down to "That is all any nation assumes to do," was not spoken on the floor.

The gentleman was attempting to read it, and at every point as he advanced I raised the point of order that it was not germane. The Chair—the Speaker pro tempore being in the chair—held that it was not germane, and the gentleman was not permitted to read it before the House, because it was not in order, and the House would not permit him to read it. Yet when he comes to publish his remarks, he put in all that he was not allowed to read on the floor. Then, after the unauthorized matter, follows the colloquy, showing where it was broken in and how the gentleman was called to order.

It seems to me that under the privilege to print a man has no right to print that which he would have no right to read or speak on the floor if a point of order were made against it.

When the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY] had permission to extend remarks in support of a motion to nonconcur, he stated, and it was a part of the contract made with the House, that there was nothing partisan in the speech; and yet page 7578 is a partisan speech, attempting to compare the administration of the Pension Bureau under the present Commissioner of Pensions with the administration of that Bureau under a Democratic Commissioner of Pensions, to the political advantage, in so many words, of the present Commissioner of Pensions. It does not take a long argument to show this, Mr. Speaker.

This language is such that members who were here yesterday will remember that it is not language spoken in debate, and it is not language to which unanimous consent to print was given. The gentleman was given unanimous consent to extend his remarks and publish certain tables, and the extension of those remarks was not to be of a partisan nature.

A point of order was made against his spoken remarks, because he had attacked in a ferocious manner an absent member, in which he went to the extent of saying:

He is a lineal descendant of Ananias and Sapphira, and that he is fully able and willing to maintain the reputation of the Ananias family.

That was the gentleman's language in regard to an absent member. He afterwards said he had not attacked the absent member, but simply read a letter. Nevertheless, he made that attack, and he was thereupon called to order on the ground that he was not speaking germane to the subject before the House.

He has included in his printed speech words the House had refused him permission to use. I make this motion to strike out, not because I object to his speech, not because I think my party friends are in any danger from his speech, not because I fancy under any circumstances that this particular gentleman would be able to—

Mr. STEELE. I submit that the gentleman's opinion of the speech has nothing to do with the matter.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman is proceeding to state why it should be stricken out of the RECORD.

Mr. STEELE. I think it is out of order.

The SPEAKER. That may be a rhetorical manner of making a statement about this correction. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. I desire at this time that the gentleman yield to me for a moment.

Mr. HANDY. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Before the consent was given to extend the remarks in the RECORD the gentleman from New York expressly stated to the House the following language:

There is nothing partisan in these tables, and I shall not insert anything of a partisan nature in my extended remarks.

Mr. HANDY. Why, certainly.

Mr. DINSMORE. If the gentleman will yield to me for a moment. I remember distinctly—and I know the gentleman wants to be correct, and I desire he should be—I think the gentleman will find that the gentleman from New York in making his statement said that there should be nothing in the speech of a partisan nature except one paragraph with reference to a publication by a Democrat.

Mr. HANDY. If the gentleman will examine the RECORD, he will find that while the gentleman made that statement, he did not make it at the time that the request for unanimous consent was submitted to the House.

Mr. DINSMORE. I understand.

Mr. HANDY. You will find that that occurred afterwards and was not a part of the unanimous consent.

Mr. DINSMORE. And I remember perfectly well that the point of order was made against him, and it was sustained by the Chair.

Mr. HANDY. Yes, sir; and the attack on Mr. CLARK is not the only partisan part of this printed speech, Mr. Speaker. All of page 7578 and part of 7579 is partisan matter that was not spoken, and yet is printed. Notwithstanding his statement to the contrary, it is there in the RECORD, and yet was not spoken on the floor. I am satisfied the reporter's notes will show that it was not spoken on the floor.

Certainly the reporter's notes as given to me show that that part of the speech was not spoken on the floor. The printed speech which the gentleman had set up before he began to speak had this part subsequent to the place where he was called down by the House. He has taken the subsequent part of the speech and put it in the first place, and put in the interruptions and the calling down by the Speaker of the House at the close of his speech. By this transposition he seems to have inserted it all.

The situation is this: The gentleman has offended against the rules of the House by printing in the RECORD what he did not say on the floor, what he did not have consent to print, and he offended against good taste by attacking ferociously one of the absent members of the House. Therefore, as we made the point of order against him yesterday, so to-day, without any feeling against him, except a regard for orderly procedure and fair dealing, we make the point now. Now, thinking the gentleman from New York may want to speak to this motion, I reserve the balance of my time and yield the floor to him.

Mr. RAY of New York. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the following proceedings were had in relation to a pension bill:

Mr. RAY of New York. I move that the House nonconcur in the amendment of the Senate. In support of that motion I desire to submit some remarks to the House. As I have some tables here which are somewhat lengthy and perhaps wearisome, I ask permission that I may extend my remarks and insert these tables without reading them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent, etc.

Mr. MIERS of Indiana. I wish to inquire to what subject these tables relate.

Mr. RAY of New York. They show the number of widows on the pension rolls growing out of the war, the amount of money that we pay pensioners, and other details as to pensions granted to soldiers of one war and another. There is nothing partisan in these tables, and I shall not insert anything of a partisan nature in my extended remarks.

Then Mr. BAILEY made an inquiry, and I stated that my remarks would appear in the RECORD this morning. Then an inquiry was made whether my remarks would be confined particularly to that bill, and I stated they would not. Later on Mr. BAILEY or some one asked if the gentleman from New York was going to make an hour's speech on that bill, to which I replied, "No, sir; I am not going to introduce politics into it. There is only one single item in the speech to which partisan or personal allusion can be attached, and that is in reference to a letter written by a gentleman of this House to which I shall refer," and so forth.

Unanimous consent was not only given that I print the tables, but that I should extend my remarks in the RECORD. The gentleman refers to the fact that I had had some remarks set up in type. That is true. I did it at the request of one of the reporters of a paper printed in New York City, who desired the statistics and figures contained in it, and I had the printed part before me when I delivered my remarks upon the floor of this House. I followed them closely from the beginning. When I reached the figures or tables I only gave a summary and proceeded rapidly, as all gentlemen know. I did not deliver that speech in the order in which it was set up and printed.

I knew that there would undoubtedly be a storm raised by Democrats who oppose pensions and soldiers when I presented the letter written by the Democratic member of this House to whom I had referred, and I therefore reserved it until the last, and I inserted in the RECORD just what I delivered on the floor of the House, and nothing more, and have also inserted in the RECORD the stenographer's notes, and all of the stenographer's notes, in the order of time and the place when they came in, and nothing more. When the gentleman from Delaware says that I inserted any portion of a printed speech or any remarks that I did not deliver on the floor of this House, he states that which is not true. He was not present until very late, and does not know and can not know what was said.

Mr. HANDY. Does the gentleman from New York mean to state that on page 7580, along down here from the words "the Dingley bill," on that column, he delivered that on the floor of the House?

Mr. RAY of New York. I delivered all of what is in the RECORD except the figures and tables.

Mr. BRUCKER. There are no figures and tables on page 7580.

Mr. RAY of New York. I did not say there were. I said I delivered it all except the figures and tables, if there were any there.

Mr. HANDY. I have the reporter's notes, which show that, beginning at the words "the Dingley bill," from that point the reporter took down verbatim what the gentleman said, and all the rest of that column does not appear in the reporter's notes. I challenge the gentleman to find a man on the floor who will say that he heard that part of the speech delivered on the floor.

Mr. RAY of New York. The gentleman refers to remarks where I started in to repeat something that I had before said in response to inquiries that were made.

Mr. HANDY. No, I do not.

Mr. RAY of New York. But I think I know, for I delivered the speech, and the gentleman must remember that he was not on the floor until very late in the proceedings.

Mr. HANDY. I was on the floor when you read the letter from Mr. CLARK, and from that time on there is a column of a speech in the RECORD that I did not hear, and the reporter's notes show that it was not delivered.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HULL. This Congress is to adjourn at 2 o'clock, and I want to ask the Chair if it will be possible to get in any public business between now and that time?

The SPEAKER. No doubt the gentleman from Delaware will bring the matter to a close as soon as both sides have been heard.

Mr. RAY of New York. I will bring my remarks to a close in a moment. I had reserved the Champ Clark letter until the last. I had delivered everything in my printed speech on the floor of the House except that. I had read that letter and commented upon it. I had referred to other matters when the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. FARIS] rose and asked me a question. Prior to that remark the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. RIDGELY] had interrupted me and I had replied to him.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. FARIS] renewed the entire subject by rising and asking a question; and his question was whether I had seen the letter or read the letter that I had reference to. That renewed the whole subject. It was while we were discussing that and after the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LIVINGSTON] had spoken, and after we had proceeded some time, that the gentleman from Delaware appeared on the floor and made his points of order. The gentleman from Indiana knows that what I state is absolutely true. Upon my own statement I rest the matter with this House.

Mr. BRUCKER. Let me ask the gentleman this question: Does he state to the House that he used the language found on page 7580, as follows:

I shall be pardoned—

Mr. RAY of New York. I used all the language in the RECORD. That is what I say.

Mr. BRUCKER. I wish to know specifically whether the gentleman uttered this language:

I shall be pardoned for exhibiting some considerable feeling on this subject, for, as I am charged, as chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, with caring for the rights of the old soldiers, my comrades of thirty-three years ago, with whom I marched and "drank from the same canteen."

Does the gentleman say that he used that language here in the House of Representatives yesterday?

Mr. RAY of New York. Almost word for word—substantially word for word.

Mr. BRUCKER. Was it "most" or "many?" [Laughter.]

Mr. RAY of New York. Oh, I can not say; in reading I may have omitted a word or changed a word, but substantially every word. I had the printed speech before me—

Mr. BRUCKER. Now, I will ask the gentleman this question—

Mr. RAY of New York. And I have inserted nothing I did not say except the figures and tables.

Mr. BRUCKER. I ask the gentleman whether he used the language found on page 7578, from the words "but the work of the Bureau" down to "faithfully?"

Mr. RAY of New York. I decline to be interrupted further.

Mr. BRUCKER. Well, if the gentleman declines to answer— [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the proposed amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

I move to correct the Record by expunging from the permanent Record all that appears in to-day's Record on pages 7578 and 7579, and all on page 7580, as follows: From the words "The Dingley bill has done" to "this is all any nation assumes to do," inclusive.

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman from New York has raised a question of veracity between him and myself in regard to what he said as it is reported on page 7580. I wish to say that I hold in my hand the stenographic notes of the reporter, furnished me last night from the reporters' room, beginning with "the Champ Clark letter" and giving word for word everything that was said on the floor thereafter by the gentleman from New York and everybody else; and I wish to say (and I have here the reporter's notes in verification of what I have to say) that there is almost a column printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as if it had been said by the gentleman from New York, which he gives his word as a Representative on this floor that he did say, but which the reporter's notes show that he did not say. And on my word and on the memory of members of the House and on the reporter's notes which I have in my hand, I ask members of the House to give their judgment.

Mr. RIDGELY. Those are the official notes?

Mr. HANDY. Yes; the notes of the official reporter.

Mr. RAY of New York. The reporter's notes were given to me, and I made but two changes in them. They went in with the printed portions of my remarks and one other matter which I did deliver on the floor of this House, without a word changed or erased, except in one instance, and only one word inserted. And the reporter's notes given to me will show the fact that nothing was left out and that nothing was added. The member from Delaware says he was not present and did not listen.

Mr. SIMPSON. Does the gentleman from Delaware think it will make a particle of difference to the country whether this goes in or out of the RECORD? Does he think it will have any effect either on parties or the country? Probably if the attention of the House had not been called to the matter it would never have attracted any notice in the country whatever. I am inclined to think this is a kind of "tempest in a teapot," anyhow.

Mr. HANDY. I think that is very probable. I made my secretary read this speech to-day, and he thought it was cruel treatment. [Laughter.] I think, from that opinion on his part, that this does not make much difference.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Delaware suspend for a moment in order that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HENDERSON] may submit a resolution?

Mr. HENDERSON. I wish to submit a resolution that will take but a moment, a purely formal resolution.

Mr. HANDY. I yield, of course. I had intended, at any rate, to ask for a vote.

Mr. HENDERSON, by unanimous consent, offered the following resolution; which was read, considered, and adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of three members be appointed by the Chair, to join a similar committee appointed by the Senate, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses have completed the business of the present session and are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of the following committee to wait upon the President under the resolution of the House just adopted: Mr. HENDERSON, Mr. HOPKINS, and Mr. RICHARDSON.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. HANDY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask a vote on my motion.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution proposed by the gentleman from Delaware to correct the RECORD as stated.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to prevail.

Mr. HANDY demanded a division.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—yeas 53, yeas 80.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for tellers.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not do that— [Cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HANDY. I demand the regular order.

Mr. CANNON. There are matters of vital importance that should be attended to in the few minutes remaining of the session—

Mr. HANDY. I demand the regular order, and ask a vote by tellers.

Mr. CANNON. There are matters in which the whole country is interested— [Renewed cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BAILEY. You will not pass any resolution, I will state to the gentleman, until the correction of the RECORD is made.

Mr. HANDY. And I want it corrected according to the facts.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, this is a matter of more importance than the mere correction of the RECORD. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. HANDY. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. HANDY and Mr. HULL as tellers.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker— [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. CANNON (continuing). Mr. Speaker, I will take the responsibility— [Cries of "Correct the RECORD first!"]

Mr. BALL. The RECORD is false, and we are going to correct it. You knew it was false when you voted for it.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, that is a lie—

Several MEMBERS (on the Democratic side). The gentleman from Illinois should be in order—

The SPEAKER. All gentlemen will be in order and take their seats.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I will take the responsibility, Mr. Speaker, in view of the existing conditions, to demand the yeas and nays. Evidently the gentleman from Delaware intends to do that; and to save time I hope that there will not be enough to order the yeas and nays. There are matters of importance here—public matters—affecting all of the States, matters involving the expenditure of millions of dollars of the public moneys that should be acted on now.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I demand the regular order.

[At this point there was a scene of great confusion on the floor, and the Speaker directed the Sergeant-at-Arms to proceed with the mace and require members to resume their seats.]

Mr. CANNON, Mr. HANDY, and others addressed the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois and other gentlemen will please take their seats.

The question is on the demand for the yeas and nays made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

The question was taken on ordering the yeas and nays, and 41 members rose in favor of the demand.

Mr. PERKINS. Let us have the other side.

The other side being counted, 87 members were announced in opposition to the demand.

So the yeas and nays were ordered, under the rule.

Mr. CANNON. Again, Mr. Speaker, I ask— [Cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HULL. Very well; let them take the responsibility.

I want to ask, however, the unanimous consent of the House now— [Renewed cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution proposed by the gentleman from Delaware.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 50, nays 104, answered "present" 80, not voting 171; as follows:

YEAS—50

Allen,	De Graffenreid,	Lamb,	Rhea,
Bailey,	Dinsmore,	Leats,	Ridgely,
Baird,	Elliot,	Livingston,	Rixey,
Bail,	Fitzgerald,	Lloyd,	Robinson, Ind.
Barlow,	Fox,	Love,	Sayers,
Bartlett,	Handy,	McCulloch,	Sinza,
Berry,	Hay,	McDowell,	Stephens, Tex.
Bodine,	Howard, Ga.	Maddox,	Strait,
Bradley,	Jones, Va.	Maguire,	Sulzer,
Brundidge,	King,	Norton, Ohio	Tate,
Castle,	Kitchin,	Osburne,	Vandiver.
Cochran, Mo.	Kleberg,	Otey,
Cox,		Pierce, Tenn.

NAYS—104

Acheson,	Davenport,	Howell,	Parker, N. J.
Adams,	Davidson, Wis.	Hull,	Payne,
Aldrich,	Davison, Ky.	Hurley,	Pearce, Mo.
Babcock,	Evans,	Kerr,	Perkins,
Baker, Ill.	Faria,	Ketcham,	Powers,
Barham,	Fischer,	Kirkpatrick,	Russell,
Bartholdt,	Fletcher,	Knox,	Shattuc,
Belford,	Foss,	Lacey,	Sherman,
Belknap,	Fowler, N. J.	Landis,	Smith, Ill.
Bingham,	Gardner,	Lawrence,	Southard,
Booze,	Gibson,	Linney,	Sperry,
Broderick,	Gillett, Mass.	Low,	Steele,
Bromwell,	Greene, Mass.	Lybrand,	Stewart, N. J.
Brown,	Griffin,	McCall,	Sturtevant,
Brumm,	Grosvenor,	McCleary,	Taylor, Ohio
Burleigh,	Grout,	McDonald,	Tongue,
Burton,	Hawley,	Mahon,	Updegraff,
Butler,	Hemenway,	Marsh,	Van Voorhis,
Cannon,	Henderson,	Mercer,	Walker, Va.
Capron,	Hepburn,	Mills,	Warner,
Coddling,	Hilborn,	Minor,	Weaver,
Connolly,	Hill,	Moody,	Weymouth,
Cousins,	Hitt,	Mudd,	White, Ill.
Crump,	Hooker,	Olsted,	White, N. C.
Curtis, Kans.	Hopkins,	Otjen,	Williams, Pa.
Dalzell,	Howe,	Packer, Pa.	Yost.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—80.

Bell,	Griffith,	Moon,	Stark,
Boutell, Ill.	Henry, Conn.	Peters,	Stone, C. W.
Brucker,	Hicks,	Pitney,	Stone, W. A.
De Armond,	Jenkins,	Ray,	Terry,
De Vries,	Lanham,	Richardson,	Wanger,
Ermentrout,	Lewis, Wash.	Simpson,	Wiss.
Fenton,	Loud,	Skinner,
Gaines,	McCormick,	Smith, S. W.

NOT VOTING—171.

Adamson,	Cowherd,	Knowles,	Sauerharing,
Alexander,	Cranford,	Kulp,	Settle,
Arnold,	Crumpacker,	Latimer,	Shafroth,
Baker, Md.	Cummings,	Lester,	Shannon,
Bankhead,	Curtis, Iowa	Lewis, Ga.	Shelden,
Barber,	Danford,	Littauer,	Showalter,
Barney,	Davey,	Little,	Shuford,
Barrett,	Davis,	Lorimer,	Slayden,
Barrows,	Dayton,	Loudenslager,	Smith, Ky.
Beach,	Dingley,	Lovering,	Smith, Wm. Alden
Belden,	Dockery,	McAleer,	Snover,
Benner, Pa.	Dolliver,	McClellan,	Southwick,
Bennett,	Dorr,	McEwan,	Spalding,
Benton,	Dovener,	McIntire,	Sparkman,
Bishop,	Driggs,	McMillin,	Sprague,
Bland,	Eddy,	McRae,	Stallings,
Botkin,	Ellis,	Mahany,	Stevens, Minn.
Boutelle, Mo.	Fitzpatrick,	Mann,	Stewart, Wis.
Brantley,	Foots,	Marshall,	Stokes,
Brenner, Ohio	Fowler, N. C.	Martin,	Strode, Nebr.
Brewer,	Gillet, N. Y.	Maxwell,	Strowd, N. C.
Brewster,	Graft,	Meekison,	Sulloway,
Brosius,	Greene, Nebr.	Mesick,	Sutherland,
Broussard,	Griggs,	Meyer, La.	Swanson,
Brownlow,	Gunn,	Miers, Ind.	Talbert,
Bull,	Hager,	Miller,	Tawney,
Burke,	Hamilton,	Mitchell,	Taylor, Ala.
Campbell,	Hartman,	Morris,	Thorp,
Carmack,	Hartman,	Newlands,	Todd,
Catchings,	Heatwole,	Northway,	Underwood,
Chickering,	Henry, Ind.	Norton, S. C.	Vehslage,
Clardy,	Henry, Miss.	Odell,	Vincent,
Clark, Iowa	Henry, Tex.	Ogden,	Wadsworth,
Clark, Mo.	Hinrichsen,	Overstreet,	Walker, Mass.
Clarke, N. H.	Howard, Ala.	Pearson,	Ward,
Clayton,	Hunter,	Prinos,	Wheeler, Ala.
Cochrane, N. Y.	Jett,	Pugh,	Wheeler, Ky.
Colson,	Johnson, Ind.	Quigg,	Wilber,
Connell,	Johnson, N. Dak.	Reeves,	Williams, Miss.
Cooney,	Jones, Wash.	Robb,	Wilson,
Cooper, Tex.	Joy,	Robbins,	Young,
Cooper, Wis.	Kelley,	Robertson, La.	Zenon.
Corliss,		Royce,

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, I am paired with the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BANKHEAD, and desire to withdraw my vote and answer "present."

The SPEAKER. The vote of the gentleman from Pennsylvania will be withdrawn.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:
 Mr. WILLIAM A. STONE with Mr. McCLELLAN.
 Mr. THORP with Mr. TALBERT.
 Mr. TAYLER of Ohio with Mr. CATCHINGS.
 Mr. BELDEN with Mr. SULZER.
 Mr. LOVERING with Mr. VINCENT.
 Mr. MANN with Mr. JETT.
 Mr. TAWNEY with Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania.
 Mr. QUIGG with Mr. CRANFORD.
 Mr. PRINCE with Mr. HINRICHSSEN.
 Mr. STEWART of Wisconsin with Mr. LITTLE.
 Mr. BREWSTER with Mr. SUTHERLAND.
 Mr. HENRY of Indiana with Mr. GRIFFITH.
 Mr. WALKER of Massachusetts with Mr. OGDEN.
 Mr. ODELL with Mr. LEWIS of Georgia.
 Mr. GROW with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.
 Mr. MORRIS with Mr. SPARKMAN.
 Mr. BARNEY with Mr. CLAYTON.
 Mr. LORIMER with Mr. COOPER of Texas.
 Mr. BARRETT with Mr. CAMPBELL.
 Mr. STRODE of Nebraska with Mr. LATIMER.
 Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin with Mr. MAXWELL.
 Mr. McEWAN with Mr. VEHSILAGE.
 Mr. MESICK with Mr. BURKE.
 Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. DE VRIES.
 Mr. ALEXANDER with Mr. ELLIOTT.
 Mr. BELFORD with Mr. DAVEY.
 Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana with Mr. BRANTLEY.
 Mr. FISCHER with Mr. SETTLE.
 Mr. YOUNG of Pennsylvania with Mr. BENTON.
 Mr. CHARLES W. STONE with Mr. BLAND.
 Mr. CLARKE of New Hampshire with Mr. CARMACK.
 Mr. SPALDING with Mr. BRUCKER.
 Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON.
 Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. SWANSON.
 Mr. PITNEY with Mr. DOCKERY.
 Mr. ROBBINS with Mr. BROUSSARD.
 Mr. COCHRANE of New York with Mr. FOWLER of North Carolina.

Mr. DORR with Mr. DRIGGS.
 Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. COONEY.
 Mr. BOUTELL of Illinois with Mr. GRIGGS.
 Mr. JENKINS with Mr. STOKES.
 Mr. BEACH with Mr. BRENNER of Ohio.
 Mr. CORLISS with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.
 Mr. OVERSTREET with Mr. MIERS of Indiana.
 Mr. SHELDEN with Mr. TODD.
 Mr. SNOVER with Mr. HARTMAN.
 Mr. DINGLEY with Mr. McMILLIN.
 Mr. MILLER with Mr. CLARDY.
 Mr. BROSIUS with Mr. ERMENTROUT.
 Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. STROWD of North Carolina.
 Mr. SPRAGUE with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.
 Mr. ROYSE with Mr. ZENOR.
 Mr. HENRY of Connecticut with Mr. BOTKIN.
 Mr. BENNETT with Mr. GAINES.
 Mr. COLSON with Mr. FITZPATRICK.
 Mr. HARMER with Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky.
 Mr. DOVENER with Mr. LESTER.
 Mr. CRUMPACKER with Mr. HENRY of Mississippi.
 Mr. LOUD with Mr. RICHARDSON.
 Mr. HICKS with Mr. BANKHEAD.
 Mr. HEATWOLE with Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi.

For this day:

Mr. BARBER with Mr. MARSHALL.
 Mr. PUGH with Mr. HENRY of Texas.
 Mr. WILBER with Mr. McRAE.
 Mr. ARNOLD with Mr. JONES of Washington.
 Mr. FOWLER of New Jersey with Mr. STALLINGS.
 Mr. WARD with Mr. WILSON.
 Mr. BURLEIGH with Mr. STRAIT.
 Mr. BISHOP with Mr. UNDERWOOD.
 Mr. BULL with Mr. LANHAM.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present when his name should have been called, and did he fail to hear it?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I am in doubt. I came in at the door and thought I heard it. I thought I would take the benefit of the doubt.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the Chair can not entertain the gentleman's request.

Mr. GAINES. I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. BENNETT. I withdraw my vote.

Mr. SULZER. I wish to inquire whether I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. BULGER?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not remember.
Mr. SULZER. Very well; then I will let my vote stand.
Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I am paired with the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. HEATWOLE, upon all political questions. From the manner in which the vote has been cast, I regarded this as one. If he had been present, I should have voted "aye."
The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved, etc., That during the remaining days of the present session of Congress the engrossing and enrolling of bills and joint resolutions by printing, as provided by act of Congress approved March 2, 1896, may be suspended, and said bills and joint resolutions may be written by hand.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through the Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

REIMBURSEMENT OF GOVERNORS OF STATES FOR WAR EXPENSES INCURRED.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following bill, and move to suspend the rules and pass it.

The bill (S. 4853) to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the governor of any State or Territory, or to his duly authorized agents, the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses that have been incurred by him in aiding the United States to raise the Volunteer Army in the existing war with Spain, by subsisting, clothing, supplying, equipping, paying, and transporting men of his State or Territory who were afterwards accepted into the Volunteer Army of the United States: Provided, That the transportation paid for shall be only the transportation of such men from the place of their enrollment for service in the Volunteer Army of the United States to the place of their acceptance into the same by the United States mustering officer, and that the names of the men transported shall appear on the muster rolls of the Volunteer Army of the United States: And provided further, That such claims shall be settled upon proper vouchers to be filed and passed upon by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury: And provided further, That, in cases where the money to pay said costs, charges, and expenses has been, or may hereafter be, borrowed by the governors or their respective States or Territories, and interest is paid, or may hereafter be paid, on the same, by the governors or their States or Territories, from the time it was or may be so borrowed to the time of its refundment by the United States, or thereafter, such interest shall not be refunded by the United States, nor shall any interest be paid the governors or their States or Territories on the amounts paid out by them, nor any other amount refunded or paid than is in this act expressly mentioned.

Mr. HAY. I hope the gentleman from Iowa will ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

Mr. HULL. If there is no objection—

Mr. BAILEY. There will be no objection to that.

Mr. HULL. The motion which I have made, if there is no objection to it, will amount to the same thing.

Mr. HAY. I hope the gentleman will make a request for unanimous consent. He has moved to suspend the rules.

Mr. HULL. It will only take a few moments, if no second is demanded.

Mr. BAILEY. But the House ought not to be put in the attitude of being compelled to suspend the rules to pass that bill.

Mr. HULL. If gentlemen are sensitive regarding my motion, I will ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. I had no idea of putting anybody in any attitude about it, except to pass the bill. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill S. 4853. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Chair, to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some other communication to make to them."

In compliance with the foregoing, the Vice-President appointed as said committee Mr. ALLISON and Mr. MORGAN.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT ON THE PRESIDENT.

The committee appointed to wait on the President, Messrs. HENDERSON, HOPKINS, and RICHARDSON, appeared at the bar of the House.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the committee of the two Houses appointed to notify the President that we were ready to adjourn at 2 o'clock, unless he had further communication to make to Congress, has performed its duty. The President says that he will have no further message to send us, and he desires, through the committee, to congratulate this Congress upon its patriotic and faithful work. [Applause.]

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 10766) granting right of way through Pikes Peak Timber Land Reserve and the public lands to the Cripple Creek Short-Line Railway Company.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the following title:

A bill (S. 153) for the relief of Verona E. Pollock.

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege. I send to the Clerk's desk the reporter's notes touching the matter that occurred a few moments ago in the House. It is very brief, and it will take but a moment of time to read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HANDY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask a vote on my motion.
The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution proposed by the gentleman from Delaware to correct the RECORD as stated.
The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to prevail.

Mr. HANDY demanded a division.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—yeas 53, yeas 80.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for tellers.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not do that—[Cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HANDY. I demand the regular order.

Mr. CANNON. There are matters of vital importance that should be attended to in the few minutes remaining of the session—

Mr. HANDY. I demand the regular order, and ask a vote by tellers.

Mr. CANNON. There are matters in which the whole country is interested. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!" on the Democratic side.]

Mr. BAILEY. You will not pass any resolution, I will state to the gentleman, until the correction of the RECORD is made.

Mr. HANDY. And I want it corrected according to the facts.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, this is a matter of more importance than the mere correction of the RECORD. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. HANDY. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The Speaker announced the appointment of Mr. HANDY and Mr. HULL as tellers.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker—[Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. CANNON (continuing). Mr. Speaker, I will take the responsibility—[Cries of "Correct the RECORD first!"]

Mr. BALL. The RECORD is false, and we are going to correct it. You know it was false when you voted for it.

Mr. CANNON. Oh, well, that is a lie—

Several MEMBERS (on the Democratic side). The gentleman from Illinois should be in order—

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, the reporter's notes speak for themselves. I understood the gentleman to make that statement to me that has just been read; and in the heat of the moment I used the language that I am reported to have used. It was unparliamentary, unjust to myself and to the House, and, I will say, to the gentleman from Texas also, as he is a part of the House; and I desire to withdraw it. I want to say further that the remark of the gentleman, he has since said to me, was not directed to me personally. I thought it was; but even if it was, my reply was not parliamentary; and therefore I withdraw it in justice to myself. If he desires, however, I will say further, to still adhere to the statement that I as an individual, or as one of this side of the House, knowingly voted to falsify the RECORD, then the gentleman is mistaken; and if he shall still insist, as I trust he will not, I will have to leave it, saying my word will have to stand against his.

LEAVE TO SIT DURING THE RECESS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I want to submit the following resolution and ask its immediate consideration.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I ask for order, as we can not hear.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs have power to sit during the adjournment of Congress, and make such investigation as to the organization and equipment of all branches of the Army as it may deem advisable, and report to the next session of Congress.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, that resolution has been submitted to members of the committee; and I will say to the House that the complaints that have come to the committee have been of such character that I think it would be well for the committee to have the right to sit during the adjournment of Congress to investigate the equipment of the Army, so that we can answer those charges made against the different departments of the Army from our own knowledge, and not be compelled to depend entirely on information furnished us by the departments involved.

Mr. RICHARDSON. What power is given the committee? I could not understand.

Mr. HULL. Simply to sit during the adjournment of Congress and make such investigations as they desire of these different departments, such as the Commissary Department, the Quartermaster's Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Hospital Corps.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Where is the committee to sit?

Mr. HULL. In Washington, with power of a subcommittee possibly to go to any place where it is necessary.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That means anywhere in the United States?

Mr. HULL. I think that that would be the construction to be put upon it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Is this resolution recommended by the Committee on Military Affairs?

Mr. HULL. Yes, only by conference with the two Democratic members and several Republican members. I will say to the gentleman that this resolution does not provide for the payment of the expenses of the committee, and they will have to pay their own expenses where they travel. I did not want it, for myself at least, to be thought that we wanted to fix up a job, but I do believe that the House should pass a resolution of this kind, so that the members of the committee, or a part of the committee, should be able to go to Fort Alger, Tampa, and Chattanooga with power to make a proper investigation of the different camps.

Mr. MOODY. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman for that purpose; but I first ask unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. HOPKINS. If there is to be an amendment, I would like to have that read, reserving the right to object to the original proposition and the amendment.

Mr. MOODY. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that I would not imperil the passage of the resolution by an amendment, but I think he will find no objection to it.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Add at the end of the resolution the following:

"The expenses actually incurred by the members of the committee, not to exceed in the aggregate $500, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the House."

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask if there was any request to the gentleman from Massachusetts that he should offer this amendment?

Mr. MOODY. I will say that having in mind the same subject-matter which the gentleman from Iowa called to my attention a short time before he introduced it, I suggested to him that it was an injustice to the members of the committee to pay their personal expenses, and it was my proposition to provide for a larger sum than is put in the amendment, but the gentleman from Iowa said that he thought that would be sufficient.

Mr. BAILEY. I simply thought the gentleman from Massachusetts was proposing it without conference with the committee.

Mr. MOODY. No; this is not in pursuance of any scheme entered into with the committee.

Mr. BAILEY. I did not suggest that, but I think the amendment had better be withdrawn.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, in justice to myself and the gentleman from Massachusetts, I want to say that he just now has returned from Chickamauga, and my colleague [Mr. LACEY] has been investigating the matter, but could only look on. The good women of Washington have been to Camp Alger and urged that something be done. I do not know whether the charges are true or false, and if we were to investigate them during the session it would take the whole session. I believe that we ought to investigate the camps where the charges come from and find the truth or falsity of them, so that the people of the United States can know it.

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. We can not hear the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen will please be in order and resume their seats.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I think I can save some time of the House if the gentleman will allow me.

Mr. MOODY. Will my friend from Kansas allow me to say a word, and then I will yield to him? I want to say to the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Kansas that I visited a brigade at Chickamauga, consisting of a regiment of New York troops, a regiment of Massachusetts troops, and a Kansas regiment, and I found the volunteer surgeons of this regiment withdrawn from their duty—withdrawn from the care of these men who had just come from civil life—and I found that officers of at least one regiment were paying for the medicine that the men needed.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, if this is to be debated for the rest of the session—

Mr. HULL. If it is going to entail any debate, I will withdraw it in justice to members.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say to the gentleman from Iowa that if there is any real necessity for this, I am not only willing to see the committee authorized to sit, but I would be willing to see the reasonable expenses of the committee incurred in travel paid, but inasmuch as the committee draw a good salary, it seems to me if the sessions are to be here the amendment is not necessary.

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my amendment; I do not want to embarrass the bill.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman from Iowa that we have within the last month passed bill after bill providing for a thorough organization of the Army, inspectors-general without number, and we have all these officers to look after the matters in connection with the Army. I do not see any good to come out of a committee of civilians to investigate it, and I want the party in power that appointed the men to assume the responsibility, and therefore I object to the consideration of this bill.

RECORDING TIME CLOCKS IN TREASURY DEPARTMENT BUILDING.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, I have a privileged resolution of inquiry which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby requested to inform the House if there have been purchased and installed in the Treasury Department building clocks for recording the time of clerks and employees; if so, how many of such clocks have been purchased, when, at what prices, and from what appropriation the same have been paid for, and under authority of what law such purchases were made.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, there is so much confusion I can not hear the reading of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The difficulty is that members will not individually refrain from conversation and from making noise. Each one contributes a little, and the result is that the gentleman from Tennessee and others can not hear.

Mr. HOPKINS. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOPKINS. By what authority does this resolution come before the House?

The SPEAKER. It can only come before the House by unanimous consent.

Mr. STEELE. I hope the gentleman will allow the resolution to be read in full.

A MEMBER. I object.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Mr. TAYLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print for ten days some statistics and observations respecting the tariff law.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I object.

Mr. BABCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I think the House will hardly adjourn without the usual leave given to print for ten days.

Mr. BAILEY. I would have no objection except for the performance this morning on the correction of the RECORD, but in view of that I do not intend that another permission to print shall be given.

PAYMENT OF SALARIES OF EMPLOYEES OF SENATE AND HOUSE.

Mr. OLMSTED. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate resolution 184, to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of July, 1898, on the day of adjournment of Congress:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and they are hereby, authorized and instructed to pay the officers and employees on the annual and session rolls of the Senate and House of Representatives, including the Capitol police, their respective salaries for the full month of July, 1898, on the day of adjournment of Congress.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, that will have to be modified before it is agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this resolution?

Mr. CANNON. We have already provided for the payment of a month's extra pay to these employees—

Mr. OLMSTED. This is the usual resolution. A similar resolution has already passed the Senate.

Mr. CANNON. The usual resolution is in the deficiency bill, and this would give another month's salary. It will have to go over till December, so that the matter may be understood.

Mr. BABCOCK. Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe I have the floor. Many of the statements and remarks made by gentlemen on the other side—

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, upon what question is the gentleman addressing the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to state.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. If it is not a subject-matter before the House, the gentleman is out of order.

Mr. BABCOCK. If the gentleman will content himself a moment, he will find out.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. BABCOCK. Then I ask consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. BAILEY and others objected.

SESSIONS OF WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE DURING RECESS.

Mr. PAYNE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Ways and Means, or a subcommittee thereof, be, and is hereby, authorized to sit during the recess for the consideration of the internal-revenue and customs laws.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

Mr. PAYNE. Allow me to say that the Finance Committee of the Senate has obtained like leave to that here proposed. There are several matters pending in regard to the bonded-whisky laws and things of that kind, and also several matters in connection with the war revenue law just passed. It may be necessary for the committee to consider these matters during the recess in order to have legislation ready at the beginning of the session next December. There will be no expense attached to the action of the committee; if they sit, it will be entirely at the expense of individual members.

Mr. BAILEY. My judgment is that some of these internal-revenue taxes will become permanent, and the law levying them ought to be perfected if it is possible to do so. I believe it desirable that this resolution should be adopted.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, and adopted.

On motion of Mr. PAYNE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I desire unanimous consent to make a personal explanation of about one moment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio desires to make a personal explanation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will not occupy more than one minute of the valuable time of the House.

Mr. Speaker, shortly after the occasion of the Republican State convention in Ohio—

Mr. HANDY. I call for the regular order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

REPRINT OF A BILL AND REPORT.

Mr. FOSS. I ask unanimous consent for the reprint of House bill 10403, with the accompanying report—Report 1375. This is a bill to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the gentleman ought to give some explanation as to why that bill has not been taken up this session.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to ordering the reprint? The Chair hears none; and the order is made.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills and joint resolutions of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 4548. An act for the relief of James H. Latham—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 4831. An act fixing the rank of the Adjutant-General of the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1189. An act for the relief of Charles Gallagher—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 4395. An act to remove the charge of desertion standing on the record against the name of Charles Thompson—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 4510. An act to correct the military record of William H. Fore—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 4159. An act relative to the payment of claims for material and labor furnished for District of Columbia buildings—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 3909. An act for the relief of Mrs. Harriet A. Ferguson—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 4191. An act to readjust the boundary of the National Zoological Park and preserve its seclusion between Park road on the east and Cincinnati street and Connecticut avenue on the west—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2456. An act for the relief of the Globe Works, of Boston, Mass.—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 2148. An act for the relief of the legal representatives of Merrick, Merrick & Cope—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 3031. An act for the relief of William C. Dodge—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 4255. An act for the relief of Hyland C. Kirk and others, assignees of Addison C. Fletcher—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 3641. An act to establish a United States court at Tishomingo, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 4121. An act for the relief of the estate of Ramsay Crooks—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 1100. An act for the relief of Thomas Chambers—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2171. An act for the relief of M. D. Crow—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 4315. An act to amend an act entitled "An act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents," approved January 12, 1895—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 4316. An act to incorporate the American Social Science Association—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 3816. An act for the relief of Mary J. Cranston, of Washington, D. C.—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 4306. An act to authorize the readjustment of the accounts of army officers—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1000. An act for the relief of Stephen Duncan Marshall and George M. Miller, executors of the will of Levin R. Marshall, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 763. An act for the relief of Augustus G. Kellogg—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1892. An act for the relief of the widow and children of John Hamilton, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 2350. An act for the relief of the heirs of Samuel B. Sparkman, of Nashville, Tenn.—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 658. An act for the relief of Henry Lane—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 110. An act referring to the Court of Claims the claim of William E. Woodbridge—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 3009. An act to enable naval courts-martial and courts of inquiry to secure the attendance and testimony of civilian witnesses—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 3576. An act for the relief of James Grace—to the Committee on Claims.

S. R. 71. Joint resolution relating to the use of the rooms lately occupied by the Congressional Library in the Capitol—to the Committee on the Library.

S. R. 178. Joint resolution recognizing the gallantry of Frank H. Newcomb, commanding the revenue cutter Hudson; of his officers and men; also retiring Capt. Daniel B. Hodgson, of the Revenue-Cutter Service, for efficient and meritorious services in command of the cutter Hugh McCulloch at Manila—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. R. 179. Joint resolution tendering the thanks of Congress to Assistant Naval Constructor Richmond Pearson Hobson and to the volunteer crew of the Merrimac, and authorizing the transfer of Assistant Naval Constructor Hobson from the Construction Corps to the line of the United States Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. R. 170. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to invite, through the proper channels, the Governments of England, France, Germany, Austria, Russia, Belgium, Switzerland, Mexico, and Venezuela to send details of troops to this country to participate in a jubilee, to be given in New York by the trustees of the Red Cross Society of New York—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

S. R. 184. Joint resolution to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of July, 1898, on the day of the adjournment of Congress—to the Committee on Accounts.

S. R. 183. Joint resolution permitting officers of the Regular or Volunteer Army to also hold office as commissioners and historians of national military parks—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 10510. An act providing for the transfer from the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit to the Supreme Court of certain appeals from the district court for Alaska;

H. R. 7980. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie J. Bassett;

H. R. 6493. An act granting a pension to Herbert W. Leach;

H. R. 4237. An act to authorize the President to restore Maj. Joseph W. Wham, paymaster, United States Army, to duty, his former rank and status in the United States Army;

H. Res. 270. Joint resolution to correct an omission relative to signal officers on the staff of corps commanders, and for other purposes;

H. R. 10885. An act making appropriations to pay session employees of the House of Representatives, and for other purposes;

H. R. 10685. An act fixing pay and allowances of chaplains for volunteer regiments;

H. R. 3164. An act granting a pension to Alden B. Thompson;

H. R. 7841. An act granting an increase of pension to George S. Walton;

H. R. 3001. An act granting a pension to Mary McLaughlin;

H. R. 2673. An act granting an increase of pension to Diana Clark;

H. R. 9466. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Boyd;

H. R. 2497. An act granting an increase of pension to James E. Eaton;

H. R. 727. An act granting a pension to Olive H. South;

H. R. 8724. An act granting a pension to Addie L. Ballou;

H. R. 8679. An act granting an increase of pension to Eugene A. Shaw;

H. R. 9140. An act granting an increase of pension to Felix Tait;

H. R. 8050. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Fry;

H. R. 6427. An act granting a pension to Clarissa A. Dunham;

H. R. 8063. An act to amend "An act for the preservation of the public peace and protection of property in the District of Columbia," approved July 29, 1892;

H. R. 9765. An act to increase the pension of John N. Wiley;

H. R. 8243. An act granting a pension to John Connolly;

H. R. 8501. An act granting a pension to Corydon G. Crafts;

H. R. 6525. An act granting a pension to Mary Ann Sullivan;

H. R. 9414. An act for the relief of Mathilda Akerblom Molin;

H. R. 8614. An act to correct the naval record of George W. Sherrard;

H. R. 8551. An act granting an increase of pension to Armenias H. Evans;

H. R. 4274. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Chapman;

H. R. 9206. An act to incorporate the Washington and University Railroad Company, of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 4611. An act granting a pension to Jane E. Zink;

H. R. 10051. An act to increase the number of post quartermaster-sergeants in the United States Army;

H. R. 6149. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to exercise a discretion in certain cases;

H. R. 4484. An act granting a pension to Miriam V. Kenny;

H. R. 7018. An act to provide a steam fog whistle at the entrance to Muskegon Harbor, in the State of Michigan;

H. R. 8064. An act to amend the criminal laws of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 9204. An act to regulate the construction of barbed-wire fences in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5893. An act to authorize the reassessment of water-main taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. R. 183. Joint resolution relative to electric lighting wires west of Rock Creek;

S. 769. An act to increase the pension of Clark W. Harrington; and

S. 1119. An act granting a pension to Cassius M. Clay, sr.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On June 27, 1898:

H. R. 6098. An act to correct the military record of N. Ward Cady, late major Second Mounted Rifles, New York Volunteers, and to grant him an honorable discharge;

H. R. 3071. An act for the relief of James A. Stoddard;

H. R. 7814. An act for the relief of John B. Tyre;

H. R. 3243. An act for the relief of Cordell B. Green, Company D, Sixteenth Michigan Infantry;

H. R. 5879. An act to amend sections 1 and 2 of the act of March 3, 1887, 24 Statutes at Large, chapter 359;

H. R. 10290. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a court of private land claims and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in certain States and Territories," approved March 3, 1891, and the act amendatory thereto, approved February 21, 1893; and

H. R. 8581. An act for the protection of the people of the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

On June 28, 1898:

H. R. 9338. An act to restore to the State of New York the flag carried by the One hundred and fourth New York Volunteer Infantry; and

H. R. 10209. An act to amend an act of Congress approved March 2, 1893, entitled "An act to provide a permanent system of highways in that part of the District of Columbia lying outside of cities," and for other purposes.

On June 29, 1898:

H. R. 1078. An act to provide for the construction of a bridge across Niagara River;

H. R. 10606. An act to amend section 10 of an act approved April 23, 1893, entitled "An act to provide for temporarily increasing the military establishment of the United States in time of war, and for other purposes;" and

H. Res. 251. Joint resolution relating to the purchase of law books, books of reference, periodicals, and newspapers for the military information division, Adjutant-General's Office.

On June 30, 1898:

H. R. 6897. An act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes.

On July 1, 1898:

H. R. 8181. An act granting a pension to John A. Bingham;

H. R. 6388. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph R. Mathers;

H. R. 8861. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Givens;

H. R. 4061. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Osborn;

H. R. 6379. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Berry, alias Joseph White;

H. R. 9729. An act granting an increase of pension to William L. Smithson;

H. R. 610. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank Rockwith;

H. R. 7606. An act granting an increase of pension to William Christenberry;

H. R. 7321. An act granting an increase of pension to Lauritz Olsen;

H. R. 7844. An act to increase the pension of Mary Brogan;

H. R. 5830. An act to vest in the Commissioners of the District of Columbia control of street parking in said District;

H. R. 8428. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes;

H. R. 6806. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, and for other purposes; and

H. Res. 221. Joint resolution for improvement of San Joaquin River and Stockton and Mormon channels, California.

On July 2, 1898:

H. R. 1004. An act for the relief of Theodore F. Swayze, administrator de bonis non of the estate of John S. P. Wheeler, deceased; and

H. R. 10585. An act designating Titusville, Crawford County, Pa., a port of delivery in the customs collection district of Erie, Pa.

On July 5, 1898:

H. R. 3697. An act for the relief of Martha E. Fleischert.

On July 7, 1898:

H. R. 10891. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

H. Res. 259. Joint resolution to provide for annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States;

H. R. 369. An act for the relief of Benjamin S. Barnes;

H. R. 10561. An act to increase the force of the Ordnance Department;

H. R. 9874. An act for the relief of John C. Coleman, of Emanuel County, Ga.;

H. R. 4918. An act for the relief of J. Henry Rives;

H. R. 4629. An act for the relief of the owners of the ship Achilles;

H. R. 10280. An act to require the Brightwood Railway Company to abandon its overhead trolley on Kenyon street, between Seventh and Fourteenth streets;

H. R. 10477. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the county of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, to build, or authorize the building of, a foot and wagon bridge across the St. Louis River, between Minnesota and Wisconsin, at a point near Fond du Lac, in the State of Minnesota," approved June 11, 1896;

H. R. 10693. An act directing the enlistment of cooks in the Regular and Volunteer Armies of the United States;

H. R. 10805. An act to amend the act relating to pay of volunteer officers and soldiers;

H. R. 10424. An act to provide for a temporary increase in the Inspector-General's Department of the Army;
 H. R. 6160. An act to amend section 4746 of the Revised Statutes of the United States;
 H. R. 377. An act granting a pension to Susan I. Barrows;
 H. R. 9195. An act granting a pension to Foster C. Carl;
 H. R. 7260. An act granting a pension to James E. Jones;
 H. R. 3624. An act granting a pension to Pauline Robbins;
 H. R. 9090. An act granting a pension to Belle Peter.
 H. R. 6093. An act granting a pension to Ellen E. Nash;
 H. R. 9755. An act granting a pension to Matilda Waedel;
 H. R. 3598. An act granting a pension to Henrietta Fowler;
 H. R. 4977. An act granting a pension to Mary Hannah Clark;
 H. R. 10117. An act granting a pension to Martha Jennie Freer;
 H. R. 6064. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Watts;
 H. R. 7362. An act to grant a pension to Junius Alexander;
 H. R. 3565. An act to grant a pension to Theresa Bonnaveau;
 H. R. 4315. An act to increase the pension of George D. Phinney;
 H. R. 4189. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton W. Cooper;
 H. R. 2270. An act granting an increase of pension to Almon Stuart;
 H. R. 6841. An act granting an increase of pension to James C. Hervey;
 H. R. 9732. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Walker;
 H. R. 7306. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Beckwith;
 H. R. 6799. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren W. Morgan;
 H. R. 8256. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphonzo O. Drake;
 H. R. 8266. An act to increase the pension of Ann Gibbons;
 H. R. 3031. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael J. Fogerty;
 H. R. 2207. An act to increase the pension of Jeremiah Hackett;
 H. R. 5109. An act granting an increase of pension to Edson Sullivan;
 H. R. 1858. An act granting an increase of pension to William Manley; and
 H. R. 4233. An act granting an increase of pension to William B. Murray.

LABOR COMMISSION.

The Speaker, pursuant to the requirements of the act of June 18, 1898, providing for a nonpartisan commission on labor, agriculture, and capital, announced the appointment of Mr. GARDNER, Mr. LORIMER, Mr. LOVERING, Mr. LIVINGSTON, and Mr. BELL as members of said commission on the part of the House.

COMMISSION ON TRANSPORTATION OF THE MAILS, ETC.

The SPEAKER, pursuant to the requirements of section 5 of the act of June 13, 1898, providing for the appointment of a joint commission to investigate the prices paid for the transportation of mails, etc., announced the appointment of Mr. MOODY, Mr. CATCHINGS, and Mr. FLEMING as members of said commission on the part of the House.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

The SPEAKER (at 2 o'clock p. m.). By virtue of the concurrent resolution of the two Houses, I now declare the second session of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-fifth Congress adjourned without day.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. HITT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution of the House (H. Res. 286) to authorize the President to invite foreign governments to send details of troops to the Red Cross jubilee in New York, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1655); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7094) providing an additional circuit judge in the Third judicial circuit, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1656); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. PAYNE, from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 95) to amend the laws relating to American seamen, for the protection of such seamen, and to promote commerce, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1657); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GROUT, from the special committee to investigate gas and telephone companies in the District of Columbia, submitted a report; which was ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, Mr. SOUTHARD, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4905) for the relief of Frank B. Case, late a midshipman in the Navy of the United States, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1658); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BELKNAP: A bill (H. R. 10940) to provide for the erection of a monument for Joseph Anthony Mower—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. COUSINS (by request): A joint resolution (H. Res. 297) to repeal House Joint Resolution No. 17—to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BARTLETT: A bill (H. R. 10941) for the relief of Mary A. Redding and Lucy A. Gibson—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: A bill (H. R. 10942) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Jordan H. Moore—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MOON (by request): A bill (H. R. 10943) granting a pension to Thomas L. Cate, of Cleveland, Bradley County, Tenn.—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10944) appropriating $248, and interest from May 10, 1864, to pay William D. Humbert as scout, guide, and so forth—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10945) granting a pension of $12 per month to Matilda Witt, widow of J. Burgess Witt—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OLMSTED: A bill (H. R. 10946) for the relief of Harry H. Sieg, permanently helpless child of Henry A. Sieg, late of Company F, Ninth United States Infantry, and Company C, Tenth United States Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REEVES: A bill (H. R. 10947) for the relief of Isaac D. Page—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10948) for the relief of George Mowry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A bill (H. R. 10949) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Allen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 10950) for the relief of John B. Nold—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEAVER: A bill (H. R. 10951) to pension George W. West—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10952) to pension Caroline Minnich—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10953) to increase the pension of Elmer W. Welsheimer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10954) to correct the military record of Jesse Brenner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10955) to pension Mrs. Amanda M. Morse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10956) to increase the pension of William Jones—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10957) to increase the pension of William W. McClain—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEYMOUTH: A joint resolution (H. Res. 296) for the relief of K. H. Beshgetour—to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BABCOCK: Papers to accompany House bill No. 10453, granting an increase of pension to Franklin Snyder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARTLETT: Resolutions of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Order of Railway Telegraphers, in favor of the passage of the anti-scalping bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GROUT: Petition of Martha L. Woodward and the Epworth League of Irasburg, Vt., against the sale of intoxicants in Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. HICKS: Petition of Sarah Burket, to accompany House bill granting her a pension as the widow of Jesse Burket and mother of Philip Burket, late of Company D, Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of Cambria County, Pa., to grant a pension to Mrs. Bell S. Stevans, widow of William A. Stevans, late of Company I, Two hundred and sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, resolutions of White Cross Lodge, No. 354, Knights of Pythias, of Altoona, Pa., in support of House bill No. 6468, granting land at Hot Springs, Ark., for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a sanitarium thereon—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MOON: Papers to accompany House bill to pay William D. Humbert $248 for services as scout and guide from January 8, 1864, to May 10, 1864—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. RICHARDSON: Papers to accompany House bill to remove the charge of desertion against Jordan H. Moore—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Paper to accompany House bill for the relief of John B. Nold—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

